State of Trade.

This week opened up affording some relief from the enormous quantity of stock thrown on the market after the hot spell. All agree no such gluts ever were known before at this season of the year. Most of the stock was disposed of at some price, often at a ridiculous one. But, then, retailers, even those on the outskirts, complain that drug stores, ice cream shops, and even bootblack parlors, to say nothing of more pretentious stores downtown pin on a boutonniere, give a bunch of flowers, and, some groceries, plants with small purchases. This would not happen but for very cheap prices.

There is also a complaint anent trade in general, supposed in part to be induced by the strikes in all building operations existing in this city for many months past. As we are nearing Decoration Day the chances are that we have seen the worst of the trouble, until after that date at any rate.

Roses have slackened up in supply very materially. Carnations are still very plentiful, and really good for the season. Paonies will interfere somewhat from now on with other stock, but so far they have moved very sluggishly. What few Drop whites are in are the only good sellers, at 75c. per dozen, other kinds bring from 50c. Sweet peas are abundant.

Hardy Ferns.

A very important factor in the flower trade to-day is hardy ferns. As the season for closing for the cold storage supply, and the first of the new crop is expected to arrive May 23, the quantity sold by the wholesale florists in this city for the past year can be figured out. My estimate, after diligent inquiry among the trade, is, that for the year ending June 1, 1900, the sales will reach between thirteen and fourteen million. This will include all that arrive in the green state and those cold storaged, also brackea from nearby. A large quantity is put in cold storage here in the Fall, the larger quantity, however, being shipped in both from the East and from Michigan. Ferns, as well as other greens, are used now by fruit men and others to a great extent, all the supplies coming from the florists. Many of the wholesale men the past month or so found it difficult to get all the ferns wanted. Two to three million was sold by each of several of the priacipal handlers. The price has lately ranged from $1.25 up to $2 per 1,000. As a rule stock has been good with an occasional mishap in the heating of shipments.

Club Meeting.

The club met on the 18th inst., President James Hartshorne in the chair, P. J. Hauswirth acting as secretary pro tem. An interesting paper was read by Walter Retzer on "The Planting of Home Grounds." It was accompanied with a number of plans illustrating his ideas, that may be considered as of the advanced order of natural arrangement, as against floral displays. In the discussion, however, the speaker said he was not averse to the use of parterres in their proper place. He also read a more lengthy paper on "Water Plant Gardening," in pretty full detail, including construction of ponds, planting and other interesting matter.

W. N. Rudd, on behalf of the Committee on Coal Purchase, asked that all growers send him the total tonnage of coal required by each, and the kind preferred. Forward a postal to Mt. Greenwood, Ill., with the information. G. L. Grant reported progress for Committee on Transportation to New York in August.

The committee is making very satisfactory progress, and an economical and enjoyable trip is assured. Florists in the West and Northwest will be invited to travel with the Chicago party and share the advantages obtained by the club.

Jottings.

J. J. Steinfield has opened up a neat retail store at Cottage Grove avenue and 31st street.

The glass men of Chicago are authority for the statement that more glass is being used in the environs of this city this year, in new greenhouses, than ever before in its history. We heard of another big addition coming, which will call for 70,000 feet more in three houses, each 30x600 feet.

Walter S. Heffron will leave E. C. Amling July 1.

Thomas J. Corbrey, on West Madison, has a fine new delivery wagon, which indicates progress. Ess.

Vitality and Purity of Seeds.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Having read with much interest Mr. Burnet Landreth's letter to A. J. Pieters, Esq., on a question of vital importance not only to the seedsmen of our country but to the consumer as well, you will, I trust, pardon me for expressing a few thoughts that Mr. Landreth's letter has suggested.

In the first place there is a principle in plant reproduction that our Washington savants have entirely lost sight of, or have failed to appreciate, viz.: the plant's value is proportionate to the quality of the flowers, fruits or the vegetables produced, and it is almost invariably the case that these good qualities are increased just in proportion as the seed's vitality is decreased or impaired. To that end our best horticulturists, our market gardeners, do not think of sowing many kinds of seeds until they have lost much of what is known as the active principle of reproduction.

To be more explicit, let us state a few instances: Take the cabbage, the higher the development the weaker the seed vitality; where the cabbage is grown to the greatest perfection, so far as regards size and solidity of head, the seed is proportionately small and apparently shrunken. Where the heads grow loose, the seed product is invariably larger and of higher vitality. Our expert growers for the market usually keep their seed until its vitality becomes impaired by age, because such seed produces the largest and best heads. Such heads produce but little seeds, but that little is proportionately valuable. The seed grower could not use such seed; that is, old seed, as the crop would not be a paying one. On the other hand the type cannot be kept up to a high, or the highest, standard if the seed saved one year is sown the next.

The same is true with vine seeds; the lower the vitality the less will be the seed production, and the thicker will be the flesh. The English frame cucumbers are esteemed more valuable because of the entire absence of seed, which is the result of continued growth under unnatural conditions. To this cause is due the excellent quantities of many of our field and garden vegetables.

Time and space will not permit our taking up the question of science of plant physiology, which would make more clear the principles as stated, and what time we have must be given to another branch of Government work.

No one can carefully read the bulletins sent out by the Department of Agriculture during the past five years without being convinced that the writers regard the seedsmen of the world as a set of unmitigated cheats—a set of men whose only mission, only object in life, is to palm off on the innocent farmer and gardener seeds of questionable vitality and character, when the facts of the case are, there cannot be found in any mercantile pursuit a more intelligent, painstaking, hard working and upright class than the world's seedsmen. The nature of the business demands earnest thought constantly applied. Other merchants deal in products which speak for themselves. The seedsman must know what he offers for sale to be just what he represents it; to that end he seeks the most reliable growers in all parts of the world, places with them his contracts, then watches the plant's growth from start to finish. He knows just where to get seeds that will give the best results. He knows, too, full well, that the best appearing seeds do not always give the best results, and he smiles when he thinks of the doings at the fountain of agricultural intelligence.

Much has been said regarding the free seed distribution; much needs be said before this wanton, wicked waste can be stopped. What an anomaly. A Department throwing all manner of safeguards around an industry, in order that the consumers may be fully protected against the loss that would invariably occur from the use of poor seeds, then buying the poorest the world affords for their own distribution, claiming their work is in the interest of agriculture. What a farce! What a travesty!

The Department for the testing of seeds may be useful in its way. It is, but not sufficient to warrant its cost. Many tree and shrub seeds, many seeds of ornamental plants, if judged by their standards, would be declared worthless, while there are many forms that the florist would be more than satisfied with if they would test 25 per cent. in germination.

The question is often asked, "Is the Seed Department in all its branches as conducted at Washington of any benefit to the country." We are compelled to say "No," and that very emphatically. The Department was founded to introduce new industries, which was highly commendable, but it soon became a part of the machine, or a machine to grind out money for those in control. Now the Department is not half as active in building up new industries as it is in destroying old ones. The number of packets of seeds sent out free would cost the consumers about $1,000,000, fully 75 per cent. of which would be paid out by the dealers scattered all over the country for labor, which would be so distributed that each merchant could keep his force steadily employed. While this would greatly benefit both the seedsman and his employes, it would also benefit those who get their seeds for nothing, inasmuch as the seed they would buy would be far more valuable, so that the small expenditure for seeds would be a profitable investment.

To the credit of the present Secretary of Agriculture, as well as to the two that preceded him, it may be said he is not in favor of this wicked waste, being powerless in the hands of those who misrepresent their constituencies.

C. L. ALLEN.

Floral Park, N. Y.

European Notes.

Western Europe is basking in bright sunshine, but the winds are keen and dry and the nights continue cold. In Eastern Europe severe frosts and heavy falls of snow are the order of the day.

On the day that we learned by cable of the excessive heat on your side the seed growers at Quedlinburg, Germany, had one-fifth of an inch of ice on their ponds. Further south, in Austria, the cold was even more severe, and the damage to vegetation of all kinds is simply enormous.

As usual, the northeasterly winds have brought myriads of destructive insects to feed upon the tender plants and the young shoots of our cabbages, so that matters with us are going from bad to worse.

In both the south and west of France the lack of rain is doing very great mischief. Much of the radish has yet to be transplanted, and the seed beds are looking almost worthless.

The oldest inhabitant does not remember such an unfavorable time, and, so far, we can see, there is no prospect of any immediate improvement. As a result, prices are rising all round, and the upward tendency is bound to continue.

This will not only affect the values of the coming harvest but also contract prices for next year's delivery.

AMERICAN HOLLY (Ilex Opaca)

This is one of America's most beautiful evergreens. Its foliage varies very little from that of the English Holly, and its rich clusters of scarlet berries make a good substitute for flowers in the Winter shrubbery. It is hardy in almost any locality. To insure safety in transplanting, the leaves should be removed from the plant at that time.

Western New York Horticultural Society.

The Western New York Horticultural Society is acknowledged to be one of the most energetic and healthy associations of its kind. Its meetings are always very largely attended, and its membership is held intact year after year. As a pointer for other similar bodies we asked Secretary John Hall to tell us how all this is accomplished. His letter follows:

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Your request for "a few remarks" on how we succeed "in maintaining the interest in the workings" of our society imposes upon me a more difficult task than you probably realize.

The Western New York Horticultural Society is in its forty-sixth year. We have a splendid ancestry. I recently read that "the best way to honor one's ancestors is to show that their descendant is worthy having been begotten." While I am free to admit that there are many men the possessors of a good ancestry, who reflect very little, if any, credit upon their progenitors, we believe our society has honored its ancestors. We are proud of the men who nearly half a century since organized "The Fruit Growers' Society of Western New York," a name which, in 1870, gave place to that which it at present bears. Most of those pioneers in horticulture have entered into rest; some few are with us still, greatly honored for their fidelity to the interests of our organization, and for the valuable help they are in the councils of the society, and their devotion to the great industry which they have heped to nurse into its present gigantic proportions.

Our executive officers are: President, W. Crawford Barry, Rochester; vice-presidents, S. D. Willard, Geneva; Albert Wood, Carlton Station; J. S. Woodward, Lockport; T. B. Wilson, Hall Corners. Any of your readers engaged in fruit growing will at once recognize these names as representing men, to be associated with whom is no small privilege. Then, our standing committees are composed of some of the formost men interested in horticulture.

One great factor in the streagth of our society lies in the popularity and value of our annual gatherings. The aim of those charged with responsibility of preparing the program is to procure as essayists men having the widest knowledge of horticulture, scientific and practical. In the selection of topics the object is to provide for the greatest good to the largest number, always having in view the maintenance of a high standard. The result is that the "Proceedings" of the Western New York Horticultural Society has come to be recognized as a publication of intrinsic value, and as authority on horticultural subjects. Copies of the publication are eagerly sought by kindred organizations and experiment stations in the United States and Canada, and also in foreign countries. I think, too, it has been a great advantage to have the president and secretary reside in the same city. The possibility of immediate consultation, either in person or by 'phone, is of the greatest value, so that questions arising from correspondence may be promptly and intelligently answered, as also many matters of detail equally promptly disposed of.

In regard to my own work as secretary I naturally feel somewhat loth to speak for fear of being charged with "blowing my own horn." It has been my aim, in all dealings with members, to come into personal touch with them, even though it be by correspondence only. There are different ways of treating letters. They may be answered in a perfunctory manner way, or so that the inquirer is made to realize the fact that his communication has received full and courteous attention, not merely an acknowledgment. Nor do I confine myself to matters relating purely to the business of the society. In any way where I think a line from me will be acceptable, whether of sympathy or congratulation, to a member, the pen is used. It doesn't cost much to be thoughtful, and a cheery word at the right time to a live man is better than the largest bouquet of the most fragrant blooms laid on his casket when he is cold in death. In short, I endeavor to make a friend of every person with whom I correspond or transact business.

In the matter of maintaining our membership "eternal vigilance" is a quality in great demand. There are so many "busy" men these days who begrudge even the time required to address an envelope, and who will everlastingly procrastinate rather than give immediate attention. Hence, I find a printed return envelope a good thing to inclose where reply is wanted. You cannot always use the same letter for every delinquent. If familiar with your "patient," you know his most susceptible point, and treat accordingly. Some you must arouse to a sense of duty or obligation, others must be coaxed. Those of our members who do not respond to the "first call" for renewal of membership can testify to the nearest they endure till the "eagle" has been let loose and permitted to fly into the society's cash box.

You would be amused could you read the letters written to me in reply to the various "reminders" regarding unpaid dues, in which the writer usually declares that it was his intention not to renew his membership, but admits that he has been "converted" and "can't refuse." It is much better to appeal to a man's sense of obligation than to pound him. If he has only a half dozen fruit trees of good varieties he owes a debt of gratitude to the organized body which has used its best efforts in the promotion of all that pertains to the elevation of horticulture, and he ought to be willing and glad to be enrolled on its membership list.

The chairman of committees are occasionally corresponded with a long time in advance of our annual meeting, reminding them of the importance of securing data for annual reports. We endeavor as far as possible, to anticipate every reasonable want of members at the annual meetings, and to make the surroundings as comfortable and attractive as the conveniences will permit.

To sum up, we are a harmonious whole, working for the extension and elevation of the most ancient and one of the most important of all industries that has claimed the attention of man since our first parents were put in possession of the Garden of Eden. JOHN HALL.

Secretary-Treasurer Western New York Horticultural Society.

407 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Rochester, N. Y.

P. S.—If any reader's curiosity should be aroused let me say that $1 pays for an annual membership, and "all are welcome."

Trade Notes.

Considering the time of year, trade has been quite brisk the past few days, a condition of things due largely to the continued demand for funeral work, which has been steady for some time. The sale of cut flowers has been fair. Roses are of good quality for the end of the season; and very good carnations are being sent in in largely increased quantities, quite sufficient for all demands. Valley just now is scarce, as the imported stock is about finished; and owing to the very backward season the outdoor flowers are not yet arriving in any quantity.

The sale of bedding plants is only fairly started, the season being at least two weeks behind the average, very heavy frosts continuing up to the middle of May, followed by wet and stormy weather. The quantity of bedding stock seems to be sufficient for all demands, but the quality is below the average in all classes. Geraniums, as usual, are the first choice, and after that there seem to be about an average demand for all of the many lines. Jos. Bennett is growing the new ageratum Stella Gurney, and from appearance it is a vast improvement on the older varieties.

The retail prices all through are about the same as in previous years. For first-class geraniums the ruling value is $1.50 per dozen; but many can be got at a lower figure. Auction sale of bedding plants in small quantities to suit retail buyers is becoming a regular custom; most of the large local growers have already held a sale this season. The prices realized are said to have been fair only.

Carnation planting is now in full swing, and a few more fine days will see most of the plants in the field. The stock is about up to the average. There are many more of the new varieties being grown locally than usual. B.

Decoration Day Trade Good.

As anticipated business for Memorial Day was very good, the best, in fact, for several years. If any plants are left over it is because they were not in bloom. Many kinds of bedding plants were sold out at wholesale two weeks ago, but flower business was also very brisk. The demand this week was mostly for the middle grades of bloom, the choice stock being only sought for in limited quantities. Roses are now of poor quality, and prices run low. Beauty are selling at $1.50 and $2 per dozen; $3 is asked for some, but is obtained only for a few selected shipping orders. Teas are bringing $4 to $6, there being but few flowers of choice grades. Carnations sell at from $1 to $1.50 per 100, $2 being obtained for a few fancy flowers. Ethel Crocker sold at $2.50 per 100 on Tuesday.

Quite a flurry was caused on Monday last by the peony growers advancing the price to $5 per 100. This figure at first could not be obtained, but it was paid without any question on Tuesday. Those handling peonies got together on Saturday and set the price; two growers were afraid to join the combination and their stock was bought by the others at $4, and all sold at $5.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting next Tuesday matters pertaining to the S. A. F. Convention will be talked over, and a large attendance is looked for. A good essay is also promised for this meeting.

Jottings.

Henry F. Michell has started work on extensive improvements at his seed store, 1018 Market street. Up till now the back part of the store has only been 2½ stories high, and no cellarage under it; now the cellar is being dug out and the building will be carried up to five stories—same as the front half. When these alterations are completed there will be a very commodious store, five stories with basement, 190 feet deep. Mr. Michell deserves great credit for his perseverance; each year since starting he has made some extension, and now increased business makes it necessary to have more room. DAVID RUST.

Trade News.

Business has improved slightly the past week, though it is yet very slow. The street car strike is still on, some of the lines are running in the daytime, and the people are getting used to the new order of things. The supply of stock from indoors has slackened up considerably. Roses are of rather poor quality, they are now selling at from 2c. to 4c. Outdoor stock, principally Jacqueminot, are plentiful, and bring $1 to $3 per 100; Paeonias are not over abundant, bringing 3c. to 4c. Indoor sweet peas are about over, and outside flowers are not of good quality yet, there is consequently a little scarcity at present. Valley from outside is abundant and has been selling at 1c. to 2c. Carnations are not so plentiful as they were, they realize 75c. to $1 per 100.

The bedding plant trade is pretty well over. It is considered about as good as last year, notwithstanding the strike, which all unite in saying cut off the sales very considerably—probably 20 per cent. Prices in some localities were very low. We hear of geraniums being planted out at 75c. per dozen, with other plants in proportion. Many at this date have some little stock left, but they are still in hopes of working it off. Lobelias and fuchsias have both sold very poorly this year; both, however, are of little value here as bedding plants. Moon vines went very well, as did the new kind of ageratums. Verbenas also sold readily. The low price of geraniums does not apply to all parts of the town. In some portions from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, and in a few instances $2 per dozen was obtained. The cheap section seems to be in the south part of the city, where the florists are numerous, and do seem to vie with each other in trying to see who can sell the cheapest—very poor policy on their part, according to our way of thinking.

Decoration Day creates little or no extra demand here. While we have a big national cemetery, and it is always decorated, people seem to get their flowers without buying them. Anyhow, the big expectations and preparations we hear of east and north of here, do not exist in this city. C. C. S.

Propagation of Ficus Elastica.

Will you please give me the best method of propagating Ficus elastica (top cuttings) that is suited to my climate? I am raising a good many of these plants, but 50 per cent. of my cuttings rot. I cut them in the night, let the wounds dry up 12 hours, and then give each cutting a 2-inch pot in a bench of a greenhouse with 70 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit, natural bottom heat. The soil is of old well-rotted manure mixed with sand and oak leaves. In propagating I employ entirely the old way of cutting and handling I did in Belgium, where I lost not more than 5 per cent. of my plants. Do you advise putting charcoal in the bottom of the pots? RUBRIQUE.

Fla.

—To propagate Ficus elastica from top cuttings the best method to employ is that usually called mossing. This is done by making an incision about an inch long at the place where it is desired to take the cutting. When making the incision, cut toward the end of the shoot and go about half way through the stem only, insert moss to keep the cut open, then tie a bunch of moss around the stem, inclosing the cut portion. Keep the moss moist by frequent syringing and it will be filled with roots in about five weeks, when it should be severed from the parent plant, the moss carefully removed and the young plants potted and placed in a gentle bottom heat. The soil for potting may consist of any fresh loam with enough sand to make it free and open. No manure whatever should be added to the soil at the first potting. The cuttings will also root easily (especially at this season of the year) if taken and put in 2-inch pots, using sandy soil only and plunging the pots in a brisk bottom heat. Instead of allowing the cuttings to dry up for 12 hours, place them in water a few minutes; that will arrest the flow of sap, then pot them right away. We think letting them wilt for 12 hours, together with using rotten manure, has been the chief cause of failure.

PRIZE COMPETITION.

SUBJECT—What Benefits Have I Received and Pointers Obtained from My Visits to Other Greenhouse Establishments and the Flower Shows?

SECOND PRIZE PAPER

By James A. Lake, Concord, N. H.

I have noticed in visiting greenhouses that it is not a very difficult matter, in the majority of cases, to tell at a glance the successful from the unsuccessful man. On entering the premises of the former one generally finds that the grounds are orderly and tidy, beds and walks well laid out, and fences, if any, intact. The houses are well built, of a fair height, with good ventilation; the woodwork white and clean, the glass bright and shining. Entering the office or shed one finds it in the same order—frames all hung up in their places, floor swept, clean oil-cloth on the counter and work benches, with here and there a palm for decoration. On going into the houses everything is found to be in a like tidy condition—the plank well fastened up, beds free from weeds, and on inspection the crops are seen to be free from scale, thrip, mealy bug and such pests. The help is obliging and courteous, and visitors as well as customers are treated respectfully, and in such places there are generally pleaty of both.

On the other hand the unsuccessful man's place presents a striking contrast. In his grounds outside there seem to be no beds or walks at all defined, the whole place being overrun with weeds. The houses are built low and poorly ventilated, and are so shabby and the glass so dirty that one could not see whether there was anything growing inside or not; while in dozens of places may be noticed pieces of board substituted for glass. On trying to enter the houses through the office or shed one has to pick his way through a maze of wirework, heaps of pots, trays, etc., while the floor is strewn with withered flowers, pieces of string, bass, moss, wire and all manner of refuse. The walks in the houses are littered up in the same manner, the wall plates and front glass green with an accumulation of dirt and stale water; while the spaces underneath the benches serve as a convenient dumping place for old, dead plants, dirty pots and such like material which it was not found convenient at the time to carry outside—the whole forming a most admirable location for the breeding of greenhouse pests. The carnation plants are lying all over the beds, the weeds pushing up through them, while here and there a stem has shot up, trying to bring forth a bloom; but its further progress has been stayed by coming in contact with the glass. The roses are weak and straggling for want of proper light and air, and the little foliage that is left on them is discolored with mildew, greenfly, etc. In such places customers are rarely, and visitors never, seen.

I have found during my visits that among florists there are a great many methods of growing and caring for crops, with equally good results. It is of great aid to a florist, on going into a new position, to visit (if he has the time) the growers in that section and obtain what ideas he can of the general plan of cultivation, according to locality and climate; and these, with his own ideas, will generally give better results than if he had simply gone to work on his own knowledge, or solely on the plans of others. I have noticed, too, especially during the Winter, the difference between a house where water has been applied judiciously and one where it has been used too freely, the crops in the former being generally tolerably free from insects, of good growth, and prosperous, while in the latter they are often weak and stunted, some with the leaves turned yellow and brown, while others have lost the greater part of their foliage; and on what remains may generally be found plenty of greenhouse pests. I have also noticed the bad effects of crowding palms, ferns, etc., this being shown by the profusion of scale, thrip, bug, etc., generally found on them.

While visiting shows I have learned much that has been of benefit to me, in the grouping and arranging of cut flowers, flowering plants, palms, ferns, shrubs, etc., for decorations, to obtain the best effects according to light and surroundings. I have also found that a great many exhibitors have sometimes been hasty in condemning the judges of partiality, as the complainants, having sent in what they thought to be perfect specimens, and on learning before visiting the show that their exhibit had not taken first honors, at once accused the judges of unfairness, but on visiting the show the difference between the perfect and the imperfect specimen, when seen side by side, was at once apparent. I have also found that others have failed to exhibit, through diffidence or lack of confidence in their own ability, when, had they done so, they would have obtained not only an award, but a good advertisement. These, in my opinion, are two things well worth knowing, viz., when one has a specimen which is worth exhibiting, and when one has one which is not worth exhibiting.

Russelias on Bench at Cottage Gardens.

New Horticultural Hall, Boston.

The architects of the new building of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society have prepared plans, together with a water color perspective, of the new structure, showing what the horticultural hall will look like.

The painting represents a red brick, limestone and terra cotta structure, two stories high, fronting on Massachusetts avenue for the whole distance between Huntington avenue and Falmouth street, Boston, a structure that in design carries a suggestion of Hampton Court, and in which, indeed, is seen a free treatment of the brick architecture of the English renaissance.

Various contractors have been invited to figure on the construction of the building. Their bids have been received and opened by the architects, but will not be submitted to the society until May 26, on the occasion of the next regular meeting, pending which particulars as to the probable cost of the new horticultural hall cannot be made public.

However, a description of the building may be given. According to the plans it will have frontage on Massachusetts avenue of 210 feet, and 94 feet on both Huntington avenue and Falmouth street. From the sidewalk it rises 56 feet to the top of the main cornice, and is surmounted by a pitch roof covered with slate.

In the center of the Massachusetts avenue front are three doors of entrance, and on Falmouth street a broad entrance way wide enough to permit the driving of wagons and carriages into the main exhibition hall, for which purpose this entrance was designed.

There are heavy rusticated piers at the four corners of the building, and along the front of a colonnade of Ionic pilasters, standing on a high base of limestone, supporting the entablature. The pilasters divide the Massachusetts avenue front into 13 bays and the Huntington avenue end into five.

The windows in the first story are arched, while the upper openings are rectangular. Of the latter each has a wrought iron balcony. Above the main entrance is a large marble panel bearing the name of the society in bronze.

In the ornamentation of the exterior colored marble is used to a considerable extent, and the limestone trimmings are suitably carved. The garlanded frieze and terra cotta cheneau give the required decorative effect and play an important part in making the building a most attractive one. So much for the exterior.

Naturally, the most important feature of the building is the main exhibition hall. This is at the rear of the Massachusetts avenue front, and opens on to Falmouth street. It measures 122x50 feet on the ground, and is 43 feet high, having a monitor-lighted roof.

"On the ground" is the fact, for the floor of the hall is gravel-covered earth. There in Winter, wagons may be driven into the apartment and flowers and plants received and delivered with few handlings, and without exposure to the weather. The advantages of this arrangement in the event of dances or other entertainments in other parts of the building are obvious. The free use of the hose will be permissible in this exhibition hall, which is no small advantage in itself.

At the inside end of the hall is a 40x25-foot platform, reached by steps, from which doors open into the vestibule and lobby connected with the main entrance from Massachusetts.

The society's lecture hall is in the Huntington avenue end of the building, an apartment measuring 48x70 feet, with an ample platform, dressing rooms and the usual lecture-hall accessories.

To the left of the main entrance, lobby and vestibule is a small exhibition hall, measuring 28x56 feet, connected with the main exhibition room.

The lecture hall is admirably adapted for use as a ball room, but where greater floor space is required, the laying of a floor, made in sections for the purpose in the main exhibition hall, will provide it.

In the second story, over the lecture hall, is the society's library, fitted in the usual manner, with two stories of stacks and capacity for 20,000 volumes. The librarian's room and the cataloguing room are connected with the library, and there is also a newspaper and periodical room and a room for special study. On this floor, in addition, are the offices of the secretary, photograph room, with dark room and other apartments that may be put to various uses.

In the basement there are three committee rooms, one large enough for use as a dining hall. There are also service rooms adjoining the lecture hall above.

With heating and ventilating systems especially adapted to the purposes of the building, and as nearly as possible perfect, the new Horticultural Hall will be all that a horticultural hall should and can be, and, in addition, will be an important acquisition to the notable semi-public buildings of the city.—The Boston Herald.

Chicago.—The time after the club meeting on Friday, May 18, was short, nevertheless some games were played, among them the finish of five games in the second ten between John Degnan and Phil Hauswirth. Wood being the contributors; and there is no doubt the finest alleys in the city will be engaged for the occasion.

Russelias.

Our illustration shows plants of Russelia growing in a bench at Cottage Gardens, Queens. Mr. Ward furnishes the following information regarding the varieties:

"Regarding the Russelias in question the two varieties, elegantissima and multiflora, are both hybrids, raised by Victor Lemoine. The plants are of the easiest culture—fully as easy to grow as the coleus or geranium. They are well adapted for hanging baskets and for vases. They grow equally well in the coleus or geranium temperature. Planted upon benches in the greenhouse they produce sprays of flowers 3 to 4 feet in length, and 12 to 18 inches in diameter. In greenhouse culture and in vases during the Summer time the plants throw a succession of new growths, each succeeding growth being stronger than the preceding one, and these growths are covered with a shower of brilliant blossoms. In my opinion these varieties are useful additions to the few vase and basket plants that succeed well in our dry climate. To get the best results strong plants from 3 or 4-inch pots should be planted in the vases or baskets, as it takes the small stock from 2½-inch pots some little time to become established and throw out the stronger growths. I should generally prefer to start with plants from 4-inch pots, even 5-inch, that had become thoroughly root bound."

Chicago.

State of Trade.

At all the wholesale houses trade is booming. Stock came in Monday and Tuesday mornings very liberally, but buyers seemed to be eager, with every indication of grand business. The cooler weather has improved the quality of roses decidedly, which is fortunate, as shipping orders are coming in very lively. Decoration Day in this city is always a big feature, and this year seems to be no exception. All classes of city retail buyers were much in evidence at the wholesale marts, and when this is the case the street men have to take a back seat, although all last week things went their way and monstrous quantities of stock were disposed of.

Carnations are in fine shape with very liberal supplies. Pæonies are brought forward only as the trade demands them, so far, but this week will see them exposed. The Kennicotts have a thousand dozen in storage. Home-grown stock is not yet in, but is arriving from points a little south and west from the lake. The last of the lilacs, from the North, are around, and what is called Kennicott's Yellow Tulip is still in, selling at from $2 to $3 per 100.

Decoration Day prices were, per dozen: Beauty, long stem, $3 to $3.50; medium, $2 to $2.50; 12 to 15-inch stock, $1 to $1.50; extra Kaiserin and Golden Gate, per 100, $8 to $10; Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteor, from $4 to $8; Perle, $3 to $5. Carnations, common grade, $1; standards, $1.50 to $2; fancies, $3 to $4. Lilies and callas, $8 to $10; pæonies, $3 to $5; dalsies, 50c. to 75c.; smilax, $10 to $15; asparagus, 40c. to 50c. per string; Cape jasmine, $1 to $1.50.

New Greenhouses.

A. H. Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, has purchased a 20-acre tract, and will erect six greenhouses, each 20½ x250 feet. G. M. Garland has the contract, and the houses will be fitted with the Garland gutter.

The Chicago Carnation Co.'s (Joliet) new additions this year will be one iron construction house by Lord & Burnham, New York, 30x300 feet, and two others of same size and style as their present range, 22x200 feet.

J. A. Budlong has his four 300-feet houses completed and planted to roses. He reports his Liberty making grand growth.

Peter Reinberg, on Saturday, had five of his new houses planted; and Wietor Bros. commence planting in their new range this week.

Around Town.

John Muir has still a fine lot of longiflorum lilies coming in, and a lot of late ones plunged out of doors.

James Hartshorne is rejoicing over the advent of a son. Jimmie expects to leave on July 1 for a trip to his old home in England, to be gone two months.

McKellar & Winterson have the past week been obliged to work nights to get off their orders of florists' supplies for Decoration Day trade.

August Jurgens has a fine lot of Hydrangea otaksa now in flower.

J. B. Deamud is handling a lot of fine carnations, and gets away daily with a stack of other flowers.

Andreas Simon, of the Staats-Zeitung, stated at the recent florists' club meeting that he intends again visiting the bulb-growing districts in Puget Sound about July 1. As he can get advantageous rates for the trip, several Chicago men expect to go with him, including Edward Kants, of Washington Park; Charles Stromback, of Lincoln Park; John Jensen, of Humboldt Park, and John Degnan, of Vaughan's Seed Store. The invitation was extended to any one who felt an interest.

Peter Reinberg and Wietor Bros. are both making improvements in their wholesale rooms ready for a big business next year.

E. H. Hunt is doing a good trade in the country with a line of high-handled willow baskets.

Hail was reported pretty generally around Chicago, Sunday. In Oak Park and Austin the papers on Monday morning reported damage to greenhouses, but no intimation of such had reached any of the wholesale houses.

Convention Month.

This city will have three conventions this month—June 5–8, Park and Outdoor Art Association at the Art Building on the Lake front; American Seed Trade Association at the Grand Pacific Hotel, June 12 to 14; the American Association of Nurserymen will hold its 24th annual convention in the Chicago Beach Hotel, June 12–14. ESS.

Buffalo.

While a few of the retail florists claim an active trade of late, others incline to consider business during the past month as averaging slow. The weather for the most part was cold and unseasonable, and decided dryness now prevails.

As regards Decoration Day matters in common or low-priced flowers, lilacs were late enough to cut an important effect. They fit many purposes as a flower, and, being very plentiful on the markets, and of good quality, they make decided inroads on the sales of better grades of bloom, and this dividing up made it seem dull. The stores did a fair trade, and that only with flowers ample for all needs. As regards efforts to create interest in Decoration Day on the part of leaders in G. A. R. matters, an apathy seems to exist compared with earlier years, and the quantities of flowers, bouquets and set pieces made use of by the organization seems to be diminishing. Plants were called for, but not largely.

The bedding plant trade is now in full swing. The demand seems good and fair prices are readily obtained.

J. McHutchison, of New York, called the first of the week. VIDI.

Rochester, N. Y.

May 27 was lilac-day in Rochester. Highland Park was comfortably filled all day with admiring crowds. Supt. Dunbar's splendid work in clothing the gravel heights with shrubery and perennials is beginning to receive popular recognition. The collection of lilacs contains more than 130 varieties, including a dozen or more distinct species. More than 100 varieties of the common lilac were in full bloom on the 26th. Several florists were seen taking notes on varieties. The finest kinds in the entire collection are the new creations of Lemoine—Emile Lemoine and Mme. Lemoine. The earliest is Ablata, being two weeks in advance of most kinds. The old Marie Legraye and Mme. Moser were especially noted among whites, Nana and Aline Mocquery in dark purple, and Dr. Regel in light lilac. The largest single florets are in Jacques Callot, a magnificent variety.

In a shaded spot on the south side of the park a bed of native cypripediums in bloom brought out many strange queries from city-bred people. G. A., JR.

Firms Who Are Building.

TORONTO, ONT.—The North Toronto Floral Company is enlarging its present rose-growing capacity by three new houses, each 150 feet in length.

NASHUA, N. H.—George E. Buxton is building a greenhouse, 125x20 feet. He will make a specialty of carnations.

WILKES-BARRE, PA.—Ira. G. Marvin has built a new greenhouse near Oaklawn and Hanover cemeteries for the convenience of his patrons.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

HARTFORD, CONN.—George G. McClunie has opened a new store at 77 Pratt street.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Messrs. Wadley & Smith have rented a store off the Casino entrance for the season.

STONINGTON, MASS.—Dennis Lamb has sold out his interest in the greenhouse business to his partner, Walter Mathews.

NEWARK, N. J.—Julius Gerlach, of the florist firm of Bergerow & Gerlach, has sold to his partner, August Bergerow, his interest in the building and business at 946 Broad street. The firm had been in business since 1872. August Begerow will continue it under the same name as heretofore, receiving all monies due to and liquidating all indebtedness of the former concern.

The Phalaenopsis at Home.

It may be of interest to growers to know under what conditions the phalænopsis grow best in their native land, so that a method of cultivation which will suit them best may be afforded. Newly imported plants are the best for cultivation. It is often the case that plants, which succeed well with one grower, will give an entirely different result if transferred to another place, and from this standpoint I prefer fresh imported stock.

In order to give the grower a proper idea of the climatic conditions of the Philippine Islands, I think it best to describe the situation of same. These islands extend from the 5th to the 18th degree northern latitude; they are bordered on the east by the North Pacific and on the west by the China Sea, being visited by northeast winds from October till May, and by southwest winds from May till October. Both winds carry rain with them, which reaches the parts of the islands nearest to them. While one side has rain, the other is absolutely dry. The limit of these rains is the mountains which traverse the islands from south to north; but it would not be right to think that the rains do not pass this limit, all depending on the force of the wind. Through these circumstances the mountains have a continuous moisture, more or less, according to the winds; and in the valleys of this region grow the phalænopsis. I do not want to say that it pours continuously in these valleys, although it happens that during a typhoon the rain will last for 14 days. Otherwise rain is about the same as in Europe, only that the rainy period is steady for a few months. There are also very hot days, oftentimes weeks, without any rain whatever.

To speak again of phalænopsis, I will say that these plants are found especially on the driest places, and only grow on the highest branches, where the winds and the sun rays can strike them best; on low branches and on the lower stems of the trees phalænopsis are rarely found. The want of air and light and too much moisture soon kill the plants in such places, and on this account few large plants are to be found. Plants which are too low, or in places overgrown with creepers, etc., soon die. Air and light are the principal conditions for the welfare of the phalænopsis. Bees and other insects carry the seed from tree to tree, and there is a constant vegetation. The period of rest seems to be only a short time after blooming. All plants are strong, the weaker plants seeming to be overgrown by stronger ones.

We will consider now the transferring of the plants from the woods to the greenhouse, the collecting and establishing before the plants come into the hands of the grower. During this period plants suffer greatly. Phalænopsis rarely, or rather never, are troubled by insects or scales in their native habitat, but if a collector does not look after the plants while they are in the hands of the natives the buyer will not get any healthy ones and experience more trouble than the whole business is worth.

There are especially two insects from which phalænopsis suffer terribly; one is a red fly that deposits her eggs in the leaves or the heart, and the other is a scale, which is on the wood to which the phalænopsis are tied.

The presence of the red fly is easily discovered. The leaves look as if punched with fine needles; they get pale, and the whole plant becomes poorer and poorer. Plants infested with these flies should be brought to the light and dipped into hot water every day till all the flies are dead. Scales must be carefully washed off.

Phalænopsis Sanderiana is often attacked with a trouble when it comes from the woods. The leaves show small holes. It seems as if a butterfly deposits its eggs into the leaves, and after a time a worm comes out. It is the best to cut off all such leaves. The plant does not suffer at all as long as there are healthy roots on it.

A grower cannot be careful enough in inspecting newly imported plants before they are potted, as it is absolutely necessary to have clean stock, if good results are expected.

The following kinds are considered the best for cut flowers: P. Schilleriana, P. Stuartiana, P. amabilis and P. Sanderiana, of which the latter variety is the most tender.—Translated for the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE from Möllers' Deutsche Gärtner-Zeitung.

The Paris Exposition.

Quite a number of the trade is visiting the Paris Exposition this year; and, as from inquiries already received at this office, there is a desire to know the locations of the principal horticultural establishments within easy access of the French capital, we asked our Paris correspondent to furnish us with a list of these. It is presented herewith, for the benefit of all concerned.

In Paris and towns adjacent thereto: Messrs. Vilmorin Andrieux et Cie., seedsmen, 4 Quai de la Mégisserie, Paris. Their trial grounds in and near Paris are of exceptional interest.

Dupanloup et Cie. (Pinnes et Larigaldie, successors), 14 Quai de la Mégisserie, Paris, with trial grounds at Sarcelles (S. et O.)

J. C. Tissot, 31 Rue des Bourdonnais, Paris, has a general assortment of horticultural implements.

There are numerous nurseries outside of Paris, but not any very large one in the city itself. Among those located near the city is the establishment at Bourg-la-Reine (reached by train from Luxembourg Station), of Bruneau, who grows fruit trees and ornamentals.

At Chatenay-les-Sceaux (by train from Luxembourg Station, stop at Sceaux-Robinson Station), Croux et fils and Paillet et fils, both large nurserymen.

At Vitry-sur-Seine (by tramway or cab from Paris), Honoré Defresne, nurseryman; H. Grandorge, Souchet and A. Roux, large growers of lilacs, roses, viburnums, etc.

For Versailles leave from Montparnasse Station (30 minutes) or St. Lazare Station (40 minutes), Duval et fils, Rue de l'Ermitage, and A. Truffaut, Rue des Chantiers, both large growers of stove and greenhouse plants. M. Moser, Rue Saint Symphorien, has large outdoor nurseries.

At Gennevilleris, reached by tramway or cab from Paris, are located A. Rothberg, with large outdoor nurseries, and A. Serveau, an extensive grower of plants for markets.

Neuilly-sur-Seine can be reached by tramway or cab from Paris. Here is located J. Sallier, at 9 Rue Delaizement. This is the best nursery for new and rare stove and greenhouse plants. Ask him for the location of other interesting nurseries in the vicinity.

At Vincennes, reached by train from Bastille Station, is Gentilhommie, in Rue de la Maladrerie; has a special nursery for ericas, etc.

Montreuil sous Bois is near Vincennes. Here is located Tavernier, at Bard de l'Hotel de Ville; he grows ericas, etc.

For orchids, see, in Paris, Beranek, at 36 Rue de Babylone. He is a large orchid importer, speaks good English and German, and can give lots of information to visitors regarding French growers of this class of plants.

For horticulturists going to Belgium from Paris it would be interesting to visit, on the north railway, at Lille (three hours from Paris,) the establishment of Van den Heede, nurseryman, 1 Rue du Fabourg de Roubais; also that of Mulnard, nurseryman. Ask this gentleman for others. At Wattrelos, from Tourcoing Station, Delmasure et Cie.; at Tourcoing, Willem Hippolyte; at Bailleul, Anatole Cordonnier, and at Steenwercke, Dentries frères. Lille, Wattrelos, Tourcoing, Bailleul and Steenwercke are in the same district.

I give below names of the principal nurseries in the country, from two to six hours' ride from Paris. I do not give those of Lyon, and the very far south, neither those of Ussy, which is very difficult to reach:

Orleans is two hours' ride from Paris, by express train. The best places here to see young nursery stock are those of Barbier et Cie., Levavasseur et fil, Desfossés-Bhuillier and J. Gouchault, all on Route d' Olivet.

At Tours, which is four hours' ride from Paris, among growers of pelargoniums and like plants, are Hubert Gautier, at Rue de l' Hospitalite; Barillet, Rue des Œcacias; Rousseau-Bardet, Rue du Colombier.

In Angers, which is five hours' ride from Paris by express, are Ch. Detriche aîné, Rue des Ponts de Ce; Victor Detriche aîne, at Rue des Pont de Ce; Louis Leroy, Rue du Grand Jardin; Brault et fils, Rue Letenduert. Ask one or other of these parties for indoor nurserymen in same place.

Nantes is six hours from Paris. Among growers of camellias and New Zealand plants at this place are: H. Guichard, nurseryman, at Rue de la Pelleterie; Becigneul, Clethras et Jaunil, Lefevre frères and Lozé frères, nurserymen, all on Rue des Hts., Tavés.

Orleans, Tours, Angers, Nantes, can be reached by same railway from Orleans Station in Paris. E. T.

OBITUARY.

David Ward.

Mr. David Ward, a pioneer lumberman of Michigan, father of Mr. C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., died at his home in Pontiac, Mich., on Tuesday, May 29. Mr. Ward, who had been ill for several weeks, was identified since 1850 with leading enterprises, chiefly in the line of lumbering and pine land development and speculation. He was a native of New York, and entirely self-made, being at the time of his death a multi-millionaire. The deceased gentleman was well-known to many in the florist trade who had met him at the home of Mr. C. W. Ward, and who have pleasant recollections of his kindly, affable and genial disposition.

William Sibson.

William Sibson, florist, Utica, N. Y., died last week, after a six days' illness of pneumonia. Deceased was born in that city in 1852. After receiving his school education he entered the florist business. Mr. Sibson was of a kind and benevolent disposition, and generous to a fault. One brother and two sisters survive him. The Utica florists, at a meeting held in the store of C. F. Baker & Son, passed suitable resolutions of condolence, which were ordered sent to the bereaved family.

Theodore Steiner.

Theodore Steiner, a florist of Decatur, Ill., died May 21 of injuries received in a runaway accident. Mr. Steiner was born in 1842 and came to America in 1871. He built up a large business.

Mrs. Peter Barker.

Mrs. Peter Barker died May 28 after a lingering illness. She leaves a husband and two children. Mr. Barker is well-known among the craft, and is manager at the greenhouses of Mr. C. N. Draper, Canton, Mass.

Hatton, Pa.

The wife of J. W. Miller died on the 17th, after a lingering illness. The funeral services were held on 19th, at Boiling Springs, in Otterbain U. P. Church. Mr. Miller and four children survive. They have the sympathy of the florists, in connection with many friends.

Our Three Prize Competitions.

FLORISTS' EXCHANGE now has three different prize competitions running, as follows:

A CHANCE FOR THE YOUNG MAN. The next competition closes June 7. For subject, etc., see page 522.

COMMERCIAL HOME GROUNDS. See full terms and conditions, page 500, issue of May 12; also page 548, issue of May 26. Intending competitors should apply at once for drawing paper, etc.

PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPETITION. That for May has closed. Competition for the month of June is now open. Full explanatory particulars of this contest, which runs through every month up to and including September next, will be sent on application.

We desire to call the earnest attention of our readers to the Prize Competitions recently inaugurated by this journal for the purpose of stimulating an interest in and a better knowledge of several sections of the industry it covers.

To have the most successful results there must be an active competition; the publishers have done their part in the premises, and they hope their readers will be sufficiently aroused to do the rest.

Insertion will be given in this column to all communications free from animus, but he opinions expressed do not necessarily reflect our own.

Present Status of the Florist Industry.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

I was greatly interested in the extracts given in last week's EXCHANGE from Professor Galloway's work concerning the census of the florists' trade in this country up to the present time, and naturally compared it at once with the Census Report of 1890, which we had to take as forming the best information obtainable up to that date. He estimates that there are now not less than 9,000 florists' establishments in the whole country. In some data I gathered together for your special Spring edition of 1895 (p. 406), I divided the century into four periods, and found that from 1800 to 1840 there were 37 new beginners; from 1850 to 1860, 141 was the number; from 1870 to 1880 it had increased to 1,311, while the fourth period, embracing from 1880 to 1890, the figures were 1,797. If Mr. Galloway's estimate, that there are now 9,000 florists' establishments, which does not look unreasonable, the fifth period that has elapsed since would indicate the extraordinary number of 4,341 new beginners in the decade, well on to double that found by the census taker 10 years ago for the whole period before. It seems to me, however, the professor is wrong somewhere, else the figures in the 1890 census were greatly over-estimated. For example, Mr. Galloway estimates the total number of square feet of glass among the 9,000 florists at 22,500,000, while the former census gave 4,659 firms with a total of 38,823,247 square feet of glass, or upwards of sixteen million more than Mr. Galloway's estimate at the present time.

Then again, in the total value, including houses, boilers and fixtures, Mr. Galloway gives $11,250,000 as the figure, while the census gave, for ten years ago, $38,355,722,43. It may be, however, that the former sum is not supposed to include the value of the land, while the census report may have included the value of buildings, land and contents.

His comparison of prices, undoubtedly the result of great labor, is unique to say the least, and places Chicago in quite a front rank. The carnation estimate per 100 looks on its face strange, when we take into consideration that prior, say, to 1894, but few of what one now call fancies were in existence, and no such prices obtained as those of the last two or three years. But, after all, the number of fancies sold, as compared to common or even standard kinds, is so small that perhaps figures do not lie. Still further, if the price he gives for averages in roses per year are really near the mark, it is no wonder we hear of vast buildings still going up.

EDGAR SANDERS.

Toronto.

Business continues good; nearly all the stores report a first-class demand for cut stock. The weather is still very dry and cool; in many places outside the city the ground is too dry for planting out violets, carnations, etc.

The Queen's Birthday, May 24, was a good day for most of the down town florists, the trade both in plants and cut flowers being exceptionally good.

Trade in bedding plants is now in full swing, and we who are in that line have but little time for rest. I am pleased to report that there is a decided improvement in prices this season, but even yet they are not what they should be to repay the grower for his time and trouble; twelve dozen annual plants in good order for 50 cents will not make the grower rich very rapidly.

Several of the boys are building again this season. Dale, Dunlop, Miller and the North Toronto Floral Co. are all making large additions, and several others are talking in the same strain.

New York.

Market Notes.

The shortage of outdoor flowers for Decoration Day was quite noticeable in the vicinity of New York, and this had a tendency to make roses and carnations clear out well during the early part of the week.

The larger retail stores are not much affected by Memorial Day trade, being situated as they are in the central part of the city, and the day to them is nothing more than an ordinary one, so far as business is concerned.

Such stores, however, as are situated among the working population, or around the outskirts of the city, find this the heaviest business day of the year, though the class of flowers demanded is neeessarily of the cheaper grade.

There are still some producers who persist in holding back flowers and rushing in great accumulations on a holiday. On Wednesday a few such boxes arrived, but the trade of the day was over, and the flowers had to be sold at less than half what they would have brought had they been sent in on the previous day.

The demand for roses was the slowest with American Beauty. These have been draggy all the week. There are few specials as compared to the total number coming in, and their scarcity still makes it possible to hold the price at $3 per dozen for this grade. Bride and Bridesmaid have brought from $6 per 100 for the top, down to $1.50 for the poorest grades.

Gladioli are becoming more plentiful, and go at 5c. per spike. Scarlet paeonies are worth from 50c. to 75c. per dozen, though on Tuesday some of extra quality sold a little higher. White carnations and sweet peas were in greatest demand of any flowers for Memorial Day, and more of these could probably have been sold had they been obtainable. The carnations, when good, brought $2, and the peas of similar quality, $1 per dozen bunches. Thursday they could be bought 25 per cent. cheaper.

Cattleya Mossiæ are on hand, and sell at from 25c. to 35c. each. A limited number of C. gigas is also coming in from Julius Roehrs; these are of immense size and fetch 50c.

Pansies of very fine quality are being received, but there is practically no demand for them. Maidenhair fern is going slow, the best not reaching quite 75c. per 100, as it has been doing for some time past.

Jottings.

Hanft Bros. furnished a full-sized floral representation of a soldier standing with gun in hand and shield at his side for the recent dinner of the veterans of Duryee's Zouaves, which took place at the Sturtevant House. The piece when finished was perfect in detail, and drew crowds of admirers while on view in the firm's window.

Thomas W. Weathered sails to-day (Saturday), per S. S. Lucania, for his annual trip to England.

Cards are out announcing the annual fishing excursion of P. L. Bogart's employees. The date is set as July 11. Tickets are $1, including bait. The trip will be made on the steamer George Starr from her dock, at the foot of West 44th street.

At the wedding of Senator Clark's daughter on Monday, P. Bogart had the house decoration. On the tables at the dinner, orchids and lily of the valley were the only flowers used. The bridal bouquets were made and supplied by N. Christatos, corner of Sixth avenue and 58th street.

The Reception Committee of the Florists' Club met Monday afternoon, in the club rooms. The chairman, W. F. Sheridan, appointed sub-committees to inquire into particulars pertaining to carriage drives, etc., with instructions to report at the next meeting, which is to be held at 7 p. m. on the night of the regular club meeting. President O'Mara was present at the meeting.

Ernst G. Asmus is away on a fishing excursion.

Mr. Iida, of Suzuki & Iida, arrived in this city Friday, the 25th., to remain until October. Mr. Suzuki will sail, June 9, on the S. S. Etruria for England. He will visit London and the Paris Exposition, after which he will go to his home in Japan via the Suez Canal.

Latest advices from Japan point to a plentiful supply of fine longiflorum bulbs and a scarcity of the larger sizes of Lilium auratum.

James W. Withers is rejoicing over the advent of a little daughter on Saturday, May 26. Mother and baby are doing well.

The midsummer show of the American Rose Society takes place in the Eden Musee, June 12 to 14 next.

J. H. Small & Sons had a display of pond lilies and water effect in one of their windows last week.

J. A. Penman, who has had an attack of erysipelas for some time, and was improving gradually, is now in the Presbyterian Hospital suffering with an abcess on his foot.

Schoharie, N. Y.

C. Ford Hinman has left for Saratoga where he has taken a position with a florist and nurseryman.

Notes from Europe.

ANTHURIUM SCHERZERIANUM FOR CUT FLOWERS.

In search of new forms and colors in cut flowers, European growers have come to give a great deal of attention to anthuriums. In many nurseries this culture is developing into a specialty, which, in the course of a few years, as the many thousand seedlings mature, will require a considerable amount of glass. Both A. Andreanum and A. Scherzerianum offer a wonderful variety of flowers, but A. Andreanum is not free blooming enough to become a profitable cut flower producer, though it is worthy of a prominent place among choice decorative plants in private places.

The first A. Scherzerianum was imported some 40 years ago from Guatemala, and later also from Costa Rica. I think the first one to grow it in Europe was the late Van Houtte Père. During the 40 years' cultivation the type has been wonderfully improved; at first, for many years, by careful nursing, and of late more systematically by cross-fertilization. To judge from the astonishing results of the last 10 years' hybridizing the scope of this work seems as yet to be without limit, and one may well look for extraordinary improvements in the near future, for the crossing is now more than ever receiving the best attention of the devotees.

The former method of dividing the plants for propagation has been abolished by the up-to-date growers, excepting, of course, special varieties. The most rational way of multiplication is done by seed, raised through the cross-fertilization of selected varieties. Generally the flowers produce the pistils first, and the pollen only after the pistil is past usefulness—perhaps one reason why seed was so little used for propagation before. Only rarely does self-fertilization take place, and that only where the flowers are somewhat exposed to sunlight, in a rather dry atmosphere.

As is the case with nearly all other plants, judicious crossing is much the better way, and the sure way, to improvement. I don't think there is any other subject so well worth the closest attention of all florists in this respect. The seed, it is true, needs twelve months to ripen, and the seedlings three to four years, until they produce flowers enough to enter into the rank of profit makers; but the care and space which they require meanwhile are very little. As soon as ripe the seed—little scarlet berries—should be taken off, spread on pans and lightly pressed into the rather loose compost of leaf mould, or the like. Inside of a month they will germinate, and may then soon be pricked off into similar light and sandy soil. The future culture suggests itself, potting off into small pots, repotting, gradually giving heavier soil. After they have reached the age of three years they may be counted upon to produce cut flowers, and then need a little special, though not much attention.

To produce flowers freely the anthuriums require to be rather pot bound. Therefore, in order to have them in that state in Fall they should be reshifted in early Spring. Give them liberal rooting space and a strong open compost.

The Belgians use for anthuriums, as for almost everything, leaf mould, with in this special case a little sphagnum added. The English, fibrous loam with sand, lumps of peat and sphagnum; the Germans, leaf mould with an admixture of well decomposed manure, sphagnum and sand; the Italians, leaf mould and chestnut soil (decayed chestnut wood as found in the chestnut groves). Some will add charcoal, and all provide perfect drainage. One may well come to the conclusion that these plants are not hard to please, but they must have a soil, rich in plant food, which is capable of retaining moisture, and the pots must be thoroughly well drained. I think good turfy rose soil, from a pile of last year's compost, would be excellent. Don't break it up too fine, and in potting well divide the roots all through the pot. The plants should go into a warm, well-shaded house, and be kept rather close, well watered and syringed. As soon as they begin to root through they should be watered with manure water, at first twice a month, but later, and all through the Winter, once a week (much like a calla when pot bound). During the Summer the plants will have made four to five leaves, and perhaps one flower; but as toward October to November the leaf growth is gradually checked by the increased crowding of the roots, the flowers will from this time on begin to appear more freely, one from the base of each leaf. During the Winter months one or two new leaves may still be formed, and in all, the plant (of one shoot) will produce from October until May perhaps five flowers. Although these are produced successively they keep so long on the plant that three or four of them may be had together.

April or May is the time to reshift the plants again. They should be grown on in the way suggested above; the same method repeats itself one year after another. At no time is there any resting proper, and the growth of leaves and flowers never stops altogether. The plants become much more productive with age. After the fourth year they generally produce side shoots, each of which branches out again near its base. Thus, a plant of eight to ten years may have 10 to 12 leads, each producing its foliage and flowers like an independent subject, and therefore the flower-producing capacity increases much faster than the required bench space. With three or four-year-old plants a square foot of bench may produce 10 to 12 flowers, but with plants eight to ten years old double the number or more will be produced.

A Winter temperature of 58 to 60 degrees will be best. Raising the temperature above that means reduction of size of flowers, though it will probably increase the number.

Those who wish to start this specialty should procure a dozen or more specimen plants of good improved varieties of different colors and begin to hybridize; or else purchase seedlings of good parentage.

Undoubtedly a five or six-year-old plant would be a desirable Easter subject also, and I think they could be very profitably handled by getting four-year-old stock early in Spring, or the preceding Fall, and growing them on in the way described above. They should, the following Easter, be well furnished with fine, large, green leaves, and from six to ten large spathes. The good modern type carries its spathes on stems 20 to 30 inches long, well above the foliage, and the leaves also on stout upright stems. The plants are therefore of very neat appearance and good to handle about.

The flowers (spathes) of the best red varieties measure from 4 to 5 inches in width and up to 8 inches in length. A fine specimen of A. Scherzerianum var. Mundyanum, at the St. Albans Nurseries, has the following dimensions: Flower stalk, 26 inches; length of spathe, 9 inches; width, 4⅝ inches; spadix as uncurled, 7 inches. The fine specimen of the A. Scherzerianum var. President Carnot, of which K. J. Kuyk, Ghent, was kind enough to give me the photograph, has 150 leaves, each 14x5½ inches, and in full bloom has carried 20 and more flowers of a beautiful cerise. Mr. Kuyk writes me that when two weeks ago I asked him for a photo he had the plant put into a hothouse to bring out a few more flowers. Thus he explains the difference in size of the flowers shown. The two large ones on the left measure 8x5½ inches, and were full open before the plant was put into heat. The little plant to the right is a fair specimen of an improved variety as grown in quantities, and shows the habit of growth very well. This specimen is the only plant existing of Pres. Carnot, and is considered the finest of all A. Scherzerianums. Mr. Kuyk states that for seven years he has tried, but without success, to raise seed from this beautiful variety.

The original white type, A. Williamsii, has not yet been improved so much; one of the best whites, var. Duvivierianum (De Smet Duvivier) measures hardly more than 2½x3½ inches. The well-known A. S. v. Rothschildianum (Bergmann) freckled with red on creamy pink ground, is a little larger and more round in shape. The very fine "La France" (Duval), light pink, speckled red, faintly washed with purple, is 3½ inches wide by 4½ inches long, and one of the prettiest varieties. Some of the very dark red varieties are also rather small yet, but are such delightful contrasts to the other kinds that they are most desirable.

To show how very productive and interesting the hybridization is I may mention one such operation. The pollen of a fine red variety was put on the white (Duvivierianum). Only the flowers of two spadices were fertilized, and the seed (two to four to each berry) produced some 350 plants, nearly all decided improvements on the parents. About one-half of them have come red of different tones and forms, some exceedingly large (4x7 inches); one-quarter of the seedlings are pure white, in shape like the seed parent. The rest are of intermediate coloration; most of them light pink or cream colored and spotted with red. A curiosity, and quite pretty, is one of the seedlings having the base and apex of the spathe tinged green, the middle part being red. (A similar tinge of green distinguishes the A. Andreanum var. Sanderianum.)

May I still add a letter, which Mr. Louis De Smet, Ledeberg, Ghent, was kind enough to send me in reply to a few special questions. He is a recognized authority here on anthuriums, and needs no introduction to Americans who have visited Belgium.

For the Winter he recommends a temperature of from 50 to 60 degrees F. For potting soil three-quarter fibrous leaf mould, one-quarter sphagnum and a good drainage. For Winter flowering repot April to May; keep plants in active growth during Summer and keep them back a little in September and October. Push the plants along during November, December and January (evidently the higher temperature of 60 degrees F. has to be maintained for this purpose). The plants should be specially prepared for Winter forcing during the preceding year, as suggested above.

Plants four to five years old can produce per square meter (about 9 square feet) 100 flowers during the flowering season of about four months. Older plants can produce double that number. During Winter the large flowers sell (here in Europe) at $8 to $10 a 100, the small ones at $4 to $5 a 100; during Summer at 50 per cent. less.

To insure a good steady demand a good assortment of all the colors, from white to dark red, the freckled variety included, should be brought on the market.

Our aim in hybridizing is to produce flowers of round form, stiff and flat (not curled up), on strong, long foot-stalks. Any clear color or combination of clear colors is good.

Prices of plants vary according to varieties. The ordinary good A. Scherzerianum, four years old, which will produce four to five flowers, fetch about $20 a 100. Small flowered varieties fetch $10 a 100. The large flowered kinds do not produce flowers so freely as the smaller varieties.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CARNATIONS.—The young stock in the field is getting a good start this season, the copious rains of the last ten days being just the kind of weather suited to it when newly planted. Cultivate between the plants often enough to keep the soil open, but do not work close enough to the plants to disturb the young roots. If this is done more harm than good will result from the hoeing. Too severe pinching back should also be avoided during the early stages of growth; wait until four or five pairs of leaves are developed, then pinch the lead out with the finger and thumb, or cut it with a knife. This work can be done quicker and easier than by using both hands and pulling out the center. Go over the field occasionally and do the pinching as required and as indicated by the growth of the stock rather than have a set time every so often and pinch all together, whether they need it or not.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—Planting in the benches should be done as early as convenient, and they should be put in in blocks, so that when cutting commences the benches may be cleared in sections, and at once utilized for some other crop. Be careful about watering the newly-planted benches. After the first good watering give it rather sparingly until growth has fairly started. Overwatering when the plants are small is more often the cause of chrysanthemums being of poor quality than any other one thing; and especially must the watering be done with careful judgment if any shade be allowed on the glass. Cuttings may yet be taken, and they will make nice stock for pot plants, or to be grown to single stem flowers. Never allow the cuttings to wilt after being put in the sand. This can only be done by keeping them wet and shaded from the sun.

ROSES.—The end of the season is already in sight, and preparations for planting are under way. From the low values received for flowers that are not of good quality there is no reason why houses that are not throwing off good bloom should not be emptied at once, and the young stock put in its place as soon as possible. There will be a corresponding gain in time when the new plants begin to produce flowers in the Fall, so that what little is lost now will be made up that time. As a red rose, Liberty is to be planted extensively, and as this variety is so much ahead of Meteor, especially through the short days of the season, it will no doubt be the best selling red rose on the market. A few should be included wherever red roses are in demand. Unlike Meteor, Liberty does not require so much heat, and a rose house need not be specially piped for it. The temperature necessary to produce good Bride and Bridesmaid is also suitable for Liberty, and this, we believe, is one of the strongest points in its favor, especially to such growers as retail their own products and cannot afford to devote a whole house to red roses.

More than a year ago the United States Government sent an expert geologist to the Philippines to investigate the material resources of those islands. In the June Scribner's Mr. George F. QUESTION BOX

(118) Lily of the Valley in Frames.—What is the best way to start lily of the valley in cold frames; clumps or pips, and how long after planting can a good crop be cut?—N. E. B.

—For lily of the valley in frames pips are the best. The length of time before they flower depends upon circumstances. For instance, in the forcing house the pips can be had in bloom in 21 days when a bottom heat of between 75 and 80 degrees is afforded. If in the frame, without artificial heat, and the pips were put in in November or December, they would be in bloom early in May. If hot beds were made in the frames, however, and strictly attended to in regard to regulating the heat, pips may be planted in March, April and May, and be brought into flower in from four to six weeks, requiring less time as the Spring advances.

(119) Roses.—We wish to bloom 1,000 roses the coming season in sandy, virgin, hardwood soil; no clay. Benches 6 inches deep. Can we make a success in this soil? How should they be handled? Plants are now in 2½ and 4-inch pots.—QUIZ.

—The soil mentioned we presume means the top soil from land that has been cleared from hardwood timber and has been under cultivation for some time. This, with the addition of about one-sixth well-rotted stable manure should make excellent rose soil. Five inches deep will answer as well as 6 inches for the benches, and as the soil is sandy, care must be taken to have it firm. We would prepare the benches and plant the stock right away; tread the soil down well before planting. After growth fairly starts give an occasional watering with liquid manure, say once in ten days, and keep it up right through the season. That is the best food for a light soil, and the roses will prove successful if its use is persisted in.

(120) Soot in Rose Culture.—How is soot used in rose culture under glass? Is it mixed with the soil when first piled? If so, how much is used to a two-horse-load of soil? Or, is it put on the benches after the roses are planted? If so, how much to the square yard of bench surface and when should it be applied?—N. E. B.

—The use of soot in rose culture is not general, but when afforded with care it is a good fertilizer, and at the same time disagreeable to worms, snails and other soil pests. We would mix the soot with the pile of soil, using about a bushel to the load. It can also be employed with good results scattered over the surface of the soil after the roses are well started, using about a 4-inch potful to the square yard. This may be repeated two or three times during the season, and its good effects will be particularly noticed on the foliage, giving it a deep healthy green color.

Indianapolis.

The past season taken all in all has been very satisfactory to the florist's trade, and the seedsmen report a good business right along. The past two weeks have been the dullest of the busy season, but with Decoration Day and the commencements a few weeks of good business may be expected. The weather is very favorable for growing now after a few good rains; however, it looked very bad a week ago, as it was getting seriously dry.

A recent visit of the writer to the Indiana Flower & Plant Co.'s place showed progressive work to repair the damage done by the late fire—a larger shed between the houses, a separate room for two large boilers, of which one is now in position, the beginning of several large houses, which in time will be extended, are the improvements. Mr. Hasselman, the owner, has a "cinch" on a good gas supply, as long as this valuable article holds out. All other concerns had to fall back on coal last Winter, partly on account of the gas company refusing to furnish gas, partly on account of the short supply.

Besides some rebuilding of smaller houses a few new greenhouses will be erected this Summer: John Heidenreich, one house, 20x100 feet; Bertermann's rebuild, 16x112 feet; John Grande, new house, 10x110 feet, etc.

George Wiegand has taken a two-weeks' vacation to West Baden Springs, Ind.

William G. Bertermann has returned from North Carolina and Florida in much better health, but to be doubly sure he will take a trip to Europe, staying very likely at Wiesbaden, Germany, for several months. He will not attend the Paris Exposition, but will try to be in time for the store florists' competition in the Palmgarten, Frankfurt, Germany, June 22 to 24. He will leave on steamer "Barbarrassa" June 7. He reports having had a delightful, quiet time in the mountains of North Carolina. Ashville, he considers an ideal place for recuperation, not aloue for lung diseases, but all stomach and nervous troubles. Biltmore, Vanderbilt's estate, is getting to be a beautiful place, and at this time of year is incomparable. A few weeks on the east coast of Florida during February and March were delightful. There is a good opening for a florist on this coast, especially at Daytona.

Speaking about North Carolina the movement for a great national park about the Blue Ridge and Apallachian range of mountains is taking shape, and should by all means be encouraged throughout the Middle and Eastern States.

Alfred Pahud and danghter will leave on steamer "La Quitaine" for the Paris Exposition on June 28.

During a recent visit of the writer to Cincinnati he visited Mr. Witterstaetter's place to see the famous Enquirer carnation; it was a little late for good flowers, but there were still some stunners on the plants. It is an ideal flower.

J. A. Peterson was busy getting in his new store. He is one of the most progressive members of our craft in Cincinnati, holding up to some extent the former reputation of the Queen of the West. W. B.

Waycross, Ga.

A local paper says: "The Good & Reese Co., of Springfield, Ohio, is experimenting in floriculture throughout the South. They have shipped assortments of 1,000 rose bushes to South Carolina, North Georgia, South Georgia and North Alabama. After a thorough test the section proving to be the best adapted for raising the flowers will be selected for the establishment of a large nursery and greenhouses. Waycross has been chosen as one of the experiment stations, and S. F. Hoskinson has received a shipment of 1,000 assorted roses."

Oceanic, N. J.

A very animated meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society took place at the Red Men's Hall last week. Dr. W. S. Whitmore delivered an excellent address on the cultivation of flowers, their influence upon society and the benefit to gardeners. A lively debate took place, in which the president, H. A. Kettel, Professor Herbert Walling, Whit. Williams, Mrs. V. A. Legier, Miss Jenny Brill and others took part.

B.

Newport, R. I.

The third annual rose and strawberry Show, by the Newport Horticultural Society, is to be held at Masonic Hall, June 19 and 20. The schedule, consisting of 42 classes, is practically a duplication of that of last year; as is the schedule for the ninth annual Fall show which has also been issued. Copies of either can be had by addressing the secretary, Robert Johnston, Hallidon Hill.

Wadley & Smythe are to open their store on Bellvue avenue June 1.

Siebrecht & Son have rented the Paran Stevens' greenhouses, and not Messrs. Swadley & Smythe, as was reported previously.

At the J. J. Van Alen greenhouses a fine lot of Cattleya gigas has just been received from Messrs. Lager & Hurrell, and a nondescript collection of orchids from South Africa, where Mr. Van Alen is at present traveling. The rose houses here have been recently planted with all the new and best varieties, almost all grafted stock, and are doing remarkably well.

"Bobs" is the appropriate name given to a new canna of the Crozy type raised by Mr. Gardner. The most remarkable thing about the plant is its dwarfness, never exceeding 2 feet in height, yet with stem, foliage and spikes that can only be described as robust; the individual flowers being large, the petals measuring 2½ inches by 1½ inches broad. The color is a bright scarlet bordered irregularly with gold. The fibrous begonias are as popular as ever with Mr. Van Alen, and are being used in immense quantities on his grounds. MAC.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL BY WM. SCOTT.
IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopaedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is
A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

Commercial Plants

THEIR PROPAGATION AND CULTURE.

BY GEORGE W. OLIVER, PROPAGATOR TO THE U. S. BOTANIC GARDEN, WASHINGTON, D.C. AND LATE OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN, EDINBURGH.

A working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist or Gardener, and those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer.

The plants dealt with comprise those which are commercially handled by Florists, Gardeners and Nurserymen, and include Florists' Flowers, Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Annuals, Shrubs, Hardy and Tender Vines, and a chapter on miscellaneous subjects in connection with the above.

This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound to stand rough handling and plenty of it. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

A. T. DE LA MARE PTG. & PUB. CO., Ltd., 2 to 8 Duane St., N. Y.

Cyclopedia of American Horticulture

THIS great work comprises directions for the cultivation of horticultural crops and original descriptions of all the species of Fruits, Vegetables, Flowers, and ornamental plants known to be in the market in the United States and Canada.

BY L. H. BAILEY, OF CORNELL UNIVERSITY, ASSISTED BY WILHELM MILLER AND MANY EXPERT CULTIVATORS AND BOTANISTS.

In Four Quarto Volumes. Illustrated With Over 2000 Original Engravings.

VOLUME ONE (A TO D, 509 PAGES, 743 ILLUSTRATIONS 9 PLATES) IS NOW READY FOR DELIVERY.

THOUGH distinctly an American work, not only plants indigenous to the North American continent are mentioned, but also all the species known to be in the horticultural trade in North America, of whatever origin. It is really a survey of the cultivated plants of the world.

The chief characteristics of this great work are comprised in our describing its source, scope, and general features. It is AUTHORITATIVE since its contributors are the best specialists in America, and there will be at least 5000 signed contributions from the best-known horticulturists, cultivators, and botanists in this country and in Europe. It is also most COMPREHENSIVE in that it presents for the first time in carefully arranged and perfectly accessible form the best knowledge of the best specialists upon greenhouse and garden practice, fruit growing, vegetable culture, forestry and the like. It is moreover fresh, entirely ORIGINAL; not a rehash of old material, old cuts, etc. The articles are specially prepared and illustrated for this work alone; while the trained botanist discusses the botanical features of the important commercial plants, practical cultivators submit observations on their culture, marketing, and the like, so that the reader has before him the very best practice in the most favorable localities for the perfection of any fruit, vegetable, or economic plant. The arrangement is very systematic, clear and convenient for ready reference.

THE CYCLOPEDIA is to be completed in four handsome quarto volumes, embracing about 2000 pages, with more than that number of original illustrations. It is carefully printed upon specially made paper of a permanent character, and the work will be completed this year.

This book is sold only by subscription, and orders will be accepted for the full set only. For terms of subscription and all further information, address

Trade News.

Decoration Day trade beat all records, and was nearly equal in volume to Christmas. Everything sold well, though the increased demand for cut flowers was more noticeable than for plants. The supply of home-grown stock was wholly inadequate for the demand, thousands of flowers being shipped in from Chicago and other points. Outside grown stock was very scarce, lilacs and snowballs being all gone, lily of the valley ruined by heat and drought, and pæonies not yet in blossom. Cape jasmines from Texas helped out in making wreaths and other designs, and prevented a dearth of flowers.

In the city the greatest demand was for blooming plants, but for the country cut flowers took the lead. Retail prices for good stock were slightly advanced.

Decorations in the cemeteries were more numerous and elaborate than ever before. The school children were asked to contribute cut flowers for the soldiers' graves, while the Grand Army Posts remembered their dead by placing garlands of green on the mounds.

The demand for all bedding stock has been very heavy this season, and there is a noticeable scarcity of good stock. Choice geraniums cannot be had at any price. Values have been better than for several years, and the growers are all feeling better.

Jottings.

The prevailing topic for talk is our severe drought, the like of which has never been known before. The rainfall for the month of May was less than one-half inch, or about one-tenth of the average rainfall for the month in this vicinity. With such conditions prevailing vegetation has suffered severely, and outside stock makes but slow headway.

On May 13 we were visited by a hailstorm of a few moments' duration, but in that time it did considerable damage. May & Co. lost over 1,500 square feet; Christ Hansen, about 1,000, and the Warrendale Floral Co., about 800.

A recent visit to R. C. Seeger's establishment, on Gorman avenue, found that gentleman head-over-heels in work. He has extended his three old houses to 200 feet in length, and is preparing to erect four new ones of the same length, three of them to be 14 feet in width and the other 8 feet. He is an ardent advocate of the short span to the south, and is erecting most of his houses on that plan, giving them a high gable. Square solid rafters and 14x16 butted glass are employed. Two benches are placed in the middle and a narrow one on the north side. Roses, carnations and violets will be the flowers grown. In roses, Liberty, Meteor, Bridesmaid, Bride and Beauty will be grown for Winter; Carnot, Testout and Meteor for Summer. A bloom from a Liberty plant, grown in a 3-inch pot, shows the wonderful possibilities of this new variety. The flower is large, well formed and fragrant; the petals thick, leathery and of excellent keeping qualities; the plant a clean, strong, robust grower. We consider it a decided acquisition to our list of forcing roses. Mr. Seeger's plant, when completed, will contain 21,000 square feet, and will be one of the best equipped ranges for growing cut flowers in the city.

The Elks' Carnival, to be held here from June 18 to 28, will undoubtedly help trade in general, though it may not fill the coffers directly. VERITAS.

Philadelphia.

Market News.

The chief topic of interest to the trade this week has been the large number of weddings that have taken place. There were some on nearly every day, but Wednesday was the banner day, when over 18 of prominence took place. Nearly all the stores felt this rush. Some of the more prominent ones were very busy; but at this time of the year flowers are so pentiful that a rush is not noticed in the wholesale market. The chief run this week was on Beauty and sweet peas. The wholesale market is stocked up with flowers, the supply exceeding the demand. Among roses Beauty only is a good seller, the choicest flowers bringing $3 per dozen. Sweet peas are going fairly well, the outdoor flowers having the preference if choice stock, in bright colors, selling at 50c. per 100. Carnations move very slowly. There is a large quantity of outdoor stock now on the market of pæonies, coreopsis and cornflowers, all of which go slow. Pæonies are quite a glut; the best can be bought at $1 to $1.50 per 100.

Shipping business to other cities has been very good. S. S. Pennock had 60 packages on Tuesday for one express company.

Florists' Club.

The meeting on Tuesday last was only fairly attended. Wm. J. Stewart's paper was a good one, and was greatly appreciated; more people should have been there to hear it. J. Austin Shaw was present and made a few appropriate remarks. John Westcott again comes to the front in convention matters, and as chairman of our Club Room Committee suggested open house at our club room on Monday, August 20, in order to entertain delegates to the S. A. F. Convention who may find it convenient to pass through this city and then go on to New York with our delegation Monday evening in the special train, which will be appropriately decorated and well provisioned.

Jottings.

S. S. Pennock has added a ribbon department to his already large wholesale business, and is ready to supply florists with any style and color of ribbon required, and in any quantity.

H. G. Faust & Co. have begun extensive interior alterations at their store at Front and Arch streets, the increasing stock necessitating strengthening of all five floors, and other alterations to facilitate business.

A wedding of much interest to the trade took place on Wednesday, when Alex. B. Scott was married to Miss Sara C. Burpee, sister of W. Atlee Burpee, the world-known seedsman. The contracting parties are well known and greatly respected, and much happiness is wished them. DAVID RUST.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN

WILSON J. PETERS, Troy, O., President; D. S. LAKE, Shenandoah, Ia., Vice-President; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Secretary; C. L. YATES, Rochester, N. Y., Treasurer.

Milford, Del.—The Democrat of this city says it has heard it rumored that Alex. Pullen, the well-known nurseryman, is a candidate for Governor on the Union Republican ticket.

Berlin, Md.—Orlando Harrison has been elected Mayor of Berlin. He is business manager of the firm of J. G. Harrison & Sons, nurserymen, and is 33 years of age.

New York.—The West Shore Railroad Co. advises us that it has named a rate of a fare and one-third for the round trip for delegates traveling to the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, to be held at Chicago, June 13-14 next.

The New York Department of Agriculture has established a special San José scale department. George G. Atwood, of Geneva, is in charge. Percy L. Huested, Blauvelt, and H. C. Peck, Brighton, have been appointed inspectors, with J. Thompson, Seward, and T. F. Niles, Spencertown, assistants.

Summer Treatment for the San Jose scale should begin as early as June 15 and be continued until September 15 at least, with intervals of not more than ten days between sprayings. This will destroy a very large percentage of the young and thus prevent its spreading. Two different mixtures can be used, viz.: (1) Whale oil soap, used at the rate of one-fourth pound to one gallon of water. This mixture will not injure the foliage of tree fruits; (2) a mechanical mixture of kerosene and water, in the proportion of one gallon of kerosene to ten of water, or what is called a 10 per cent. solution. It can be used with safety on all tree fruits except the peach.

For Winter treatment, which means while the leaves are off, a stronger solution of whale oil soap and water can be used—two pounds of the former to one gallon of the latter. Kerosene from 20 to 100 per cent. has been used with widely different results. The why has not been determined as yet. Consensus of opinion is that it should be used on a sunshiny day—the higher the temperature the better.

The whale oil soap solutions can be used with any of the better class of sprayers. The kerosene mixture requires a specially constructed one, with a device for the mechanical mixing of the kerosene and water, of which there are a number on the market.

In the destruction of trees, shrubs, vines, etc., infested with the San José scale, great care should be taken that stumps and sprouts are grubbed out thoroughly and burned with the trunk and branches—otherwise your work will be in vain and the infection but temporarily checked, not destroyed.

Bulletin 72, Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, will give further information.

St. Louis.

Market Conditions Unchanged.

There is little change to report from this point. Business may have improved slightly, but downtown it is still very dull, there being little or no change in the street car strike, which, we fear, will almost be the means of making some business places close up. Good roses have been rather scarce this week; in fact, their has been no over-abundance of anything except, possibly, Daybreak carnations, and these have been most too plentiful. Roses sell at from 2c. to 4c.; carnations, 75c. to $1 per 100. There are plenty of sweet peas in that bring 25c. to 50c. per 100. A few gladiolus, cornflowers, coreopsis, etc., are to be seen, but they do not seem to sell. Paeonies and the bulk of outside roses are over; the latter have been extra fine and have sold well.

Bedding has dragged along and held out well this year, and we now believe most everybody will sell out better than we expected.

Notes.

Martin Renkauf was in town the other day, but took to the timber again on learning the state of business in town. Martin is rather unfortunate in striking us during bad times. He was here also during the big tornado in '96.

Ostertag Bros. are very busy people these days; they have just got through decorating Uhrigs' Cave, a popular Summer resort, with natural and artificial plants, and on the 10th will leave to do a big and profitable job in the East, the event being the planting of the grounds and decorating the home of Mr. Richard Kearns, a well-known St. Louisian, at Elkins, W. Va., for a wedding. Henry Ostertag will manage the undertaking. He will first go to Elkins, make his calculations, and lay out the planting, then proceed to New York to buy the stock, which is to consist of about 500 strings of asparagus, 2,000 strings of smilax, some 10,000 roses and other things in proportion. He takes considerable stock in palms and bedding plants from here, but will also buy great quantities in the East. Mr. O. will probably call and pay his respects to the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, which he considers the best paying advertising medium he knows of.

Thursday, June 14, is the date of the next regular meeting of the Florists' Club. The meetings have been poorly attended of late, and the officers hope to see an improvement, as lots of business will be taken up, especially pertaining to the Fall show.

Sunday last was one of the two open Sundays at Shaw's Garden, and notwithstanding the inconvenience people had to experience in getting there, an admiring crowd was in attendance. The grounds are said to be in prime order, with many new features. C. C. S.

E. Hippard has secured a patent for a greenhouse gutter. He is negotiating with a Cleveland firm to manufacture the article.

New York—At a meeting held Monday night it was decided that the team to roll in the coming tournament shall consist of those players who make the highest average during the months of June and July.

Not more than three games in one evening will be recorded, nor will the averages be taken for a lesser number of games than fifteen. Players will thus have to attend five meeting nights at the least.

Trade News.

The weather has been very changeable—roasting hot, rainy, cold and raw—with the thermometer at 40 degrees, and lower at night, necessitating night fires for roses, and even then the young stock has a mild dose of mildew.

Decoration Day business was fine. The supply was heavy, carnations being in full crop. Some growers did not cut for a week, and then what a pile they stowed away down cellar. In years there has been no such supply, and it cleaned up close. Roses were plentiful also and sold at good prices, although carnations were the flower most in demand. Mulic Bros. stood at the corner leading to the cemeteries with a load of cut flowers and banging baskets, and did a brisk trade.

We have a genuine Chicago curbstone Greek downtown, and just before Decoration Day he wondered why he could not get carnations for 50c. per 100 here, same as in Chicago. It is predicted he won't last long.

There were more hanging baskets and window boxes used this year than ever, it being all the style to have three to five baskets and a couple of boxes for veranda ornamentation.

A glut is now on, and quantities of stock are being consigned to the dump. Carnations brought 25c. to 35c. per dozen; roses, $1 per dozen; shorts, 75c. Lilies still bring $1.50 per dozen, with very light demand. There is yet a good supply of S. A. Nutt and Bruant geraniums in 4 inch pots, they being the varieties most called for; two-thirds of all the geraniums planted are of the former sort.

B. E. Wadsworth, of Toronto, Canada, has assumed charge of Crabb & Hunter's plant as foreman. G. F. C.

Newark, N. J.

Henry Spellmeyer, a landscape gardener, died here May 31, aged 82. He was born in Germany.

(123) Curing Palmetto Palm Leaves.—Please inform me through your Question Box column of your valuable paper the best method of curing, drying and pressing palmetto palm leaves. By explaining each thoroughly and separately you will oblige W. R.

—Can any reader of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE oblige?

(124) Heating Questions.—How many runs of 2½-inch iron pipe will it require to heat a greenhouse 9x16, 7 feet to ridge, one foot of glass in west side, double sided, with paper between; and about what size of heater?—E. A. P., Marlboro, N. Y.

—To heat a greenhouse 9x16 feet to 60 degrees in zero weather will require about six lines of 2½-inch pipe. These can be arranged as one flow and two returns on each side. While there will be less than 100 square feet of radiation it will be desirable to use a heater rated at 150 feet.—L. R. T.

How many 2-inch pipes (hot water) will be required to heat a house 40x150 feet, for lettuce, one foot on sides glass, and one gable glass, 50 to 55 Fahr. in zero weather? How many flows are needed, and the size? The pipe to run in roof.—PHILIP WARNER.

—It is not possible to give a definite answer without knowing something of the shape and construction of the house. If the walls are not more than 5 feet high, and if the house is well built, it can be heated with fifteen 2-inch returns and five 2½-inch flow pipes. Another way would be to use sixteen 2-inch pipes as flows and three 3-inch returns. If it is possible to place the pipes on the side walls one 3-inch and five 2-inch pipes can be placed on each wall and the other pipes can be distributed under the benches, or on the purlin posts.—L. R. T.

I have three greenhouses, one 18x60 and two 18x50 feet. I want No. 1 for smilax and ferns, No. 2 for chrysanthemums and Easter lilies, and No. 3 for carnations. No. 1 and 2 are heated by a Spence boiler; No. 5 with five sections. (1) Now, how much pipe do I need in houses (2-inch pipe)? Houses have 4 feet walls, 8 feet to ridge. (2) Will the boiler heat all three houses and violet frame 5x75 feet? Pipe under side benches, two overhead. (3) Can the boiler be used for steam? If so, how much pipe will be needed? (4) Will it be better to remove partition between Nos. 1 and 2? (5) Can boiler be enlarged with more sections? and where are these made? I intend later to build another house, 60x22 feet, alongside of No. 3.—HILLCREST.

—(1) The number of 2-inch pipes should vary from ten to twelve, according to the temperature desired. (2) A No. 5 Spence heater is rated for about 1,000 square feet of radiation, but about 800 is all that it will carry with economy of time and fuel in weather with the mercury 10 degrees below zero. To heat all of the houses, including the violet frame, 1,200 feet of radiation will be needed, and while the heater will carry it in ordinary Winter weather, with frequent firing, it will be very difficult to keep up the temperature when it is 10 or more below zero outside. (3) The boiler cannot be used for steam. (4) While the partition is not needed it is doubtful if anything will be gained by removing it. (5) The addition of another section would result in the increased efficiency of the boiler when the fire is forced, but the expense would be considerable, as a new water back would be required. The American Boiler Co. has branch offices or agents in all large cities. One of their factories is in Syracuse, N. Y.—L. R. T.

I built a carnation house 100 feet long, and to be economical in pipe tapped the supply one at the far end of No. 1 house and came back through No. 2 with one coil of 6-inch pipes under the bench on the far side. I could not get sufficient heat the past Winter, and am thinking of changing by putting a T on the supply pipe leading to No. 1, and going into No. 2, and running a 5-inch pipe coil around the house under the center bench, using the same return as I have this year. Do you think the scheme feasible, or would you recommend running a supply pipe down the ridge of the house?—WILSON.

—The letter does not give the width of the house nor the size of the supply pipe in house No. 1, neither does it say whether hot water or steam is used. When steam is employed there should be no trouble in taking a supply pipe from the main in the other house if it is of sufficient capacity for both houses. If the house is 20 feet wide five 1-inch pipes will be needed on each side the entire length of the house, and these should be on the walls or under the side benches rather than under the center bench. It will be desirable to carry a 2-inch main down the center of the house, although it may be taken off from the other house if the size is sufficient. If the walls of the house are exposed it will be advisable to add one or two more returns unless the supply pipe is carried the length of the house.—L. R. T.

(1) Will a hot water boiler with 16 square feet of grate surface heat 2,400 feet of glass to 58 degrees in zero weather? (2) Will a hot water boiler, that heats now five houses well, 110 feet away, heat two more if placed close to these houses?—EMIL BUETTNER.

—(1) No, not satisfactorily. Without considering the wooden walls of the houses, about 8,000 square feet of radiating surface will be required or 24,000 feet of glass. For the highest economy in care and fuel 4,000 feet would be the maximum for 16 feet of grate, and under no conditions would it be desirable to use more than 6,000 feet of radiation, or 18,000 square feet of glass with a grate of above size.

(2) It depends a good deal upon the size of the houses and the size and insulation of the mains. If the houses contain 10,000 square feet of glass, and properly insulated 6-inch flows and returns are used, the difference in the capacity of the boiler will not be more than 500 feet of radiation, whether close to the houses or 110 feet away. This will not suffice for one house. If the boiler is several feet below the houses the difference will be hardly appreciable. —L. R. T.

(125) Sub-irrigation for Greenhouses.—Will you kindly give me some information on sub-irrigation for greenhouses. I have a steep side hill (about 30 degrees) which I want to cover with glass for carnations and violets. Would you advise planting on the slope solid, or make narrow beds with less slope and sub-irrigate? What size and style of tile is best for such a purpose, and how far apart and how deep should it be laid? Could it be laid continuous, or with several openings and outlets?—SUB-IRRIGATION.

—When a greenhouse is placed upon a slope of 30 degrees, if the house is wide, there will be a number of degrees difference in the temperatures at the opposite sides of the house. While a greater slope might be used for a narrow house, 10 degrees will be ample for a house 40 feet wide.

Under no conditions will it be advisable to use continuous tiling for sub-irrigation, and my own plan would be to arrange it exactly the same as for houses upon level ground. Beds 6 or 7 feet wide may be used. The bottoms should be level, except for a slope of about 2 inches in 50 feet lengthwise of the house. The bottom can be made of puddled clay, or a thin layer of grout. Three lines of 2½-inch drain tile should be laid lengthwise of each bed. Care should be taken to have the openings between the tiles of about the same size. Most of the tile are slightly curved, and if placed with the convex side uppermost the joints will be loose at the top and there will be a small opening at the lower side between each of the tiles.

The soil should be about 8 inches deep, and while the surface may have a slight slope to the south, it will be most satisfactory if practically level. In a long house it is well to have one or more peep-holes into each tile, to permit of an occasional examination of its conditions. When water is applied care should be taken that all of the under soil is moistened, but the use of an excess should be avoided. The lower ends of the tiles should be so arranged that they can be used as drains if necessary, and the sides of the beds should have frequent openings through which the water can pass when it is 1 inch deep in the bed.—L. R. TAFT.

The Market.

There is little of an encouraging nature to say about the cut flower business this week. Flowers of all descriptions have been coming in in vast numbers since Monday, and the demand has fallen off to such an extent that the bottom has completely dropped out of the market, and there is no such thing as a fixed price for any single commodity.

Carnations seem to be the least wanted, and although the quality is far above the average there has been some fearfully low prices placed on record within the last few days; $2.50 per 1,000 has been an ordinary figure, and one lot, to our knowledge, was sold at $1 per 1,000. Fancy varieties of some colors have been offered at 50c. per 100, and went slowly at that rate.

Out of all the great quantites of roses that reach the city there are but few that can be classed as specials among the Bride and Bridesmaid, and, when obtainable, they bring $5 per 100. Those grading as Nos. 1 and 2 bring about the same prices as were last reported, but are much improved in quality, there being but little mildew in sight as compared with last week. Jacqs. have been plentiful in the Cut Flower Exchange for some days, and have brought from 50c. to 75c. per 100. These have no doubt curtailed the sale of short Beauty to a great extent, as the falling off in the demand for the latter has been quite noticeable. Special Beauty have brought 20c., that is, sometimes; if wanted in numbers they are to be had at $15 per 100.

Sweet peas are in heavy supply and find but little favor with buyers. The best seller among them is a dark blue variety, and this only brings 3c. or 4c. a bunch. Pæonies prevail in every wholesale store, and their large size (and low price, about $2 per 100) makes them a bonanza for church decorations. Spanish iris is in moderate supply, and the white and rose colored pyrethrum is plentiful and of superior size and quality. Valley has been in demand on one or two days, and has fetched $3 and $4 per 100.

Gladiolus, auratum lilies and hemerocallis are coming in, but no fixed prices obtain. Harrisii lilies bring 4c. Smilax has not changed any, neither has asparagus. Maidenhair fern is more plentiful and the price inclines downward.

Auction Sales.

In the auction rooms the sales have been very heavy this week, and for good bedding plants prices have ranged tolerably high. Of all the different kinds of plants offered for sale under the hammer bay trees seem to be the hardest to dispose of at the present time. Earlier in the season they sold much better, and many choice pairs were disposed of by Wm. Elliott & Sons.

J. P. Cleary will sell at auction a large consignment of Japanese plants at the Victoria Hotel, corner of 27th street and Fifth avenue. The sale will commence on Monday and will last for several days.

Jottings.

August Rhotert sails June 28 for Europe.

George Stumpp has been busy this week decorating for some of the largest weddings of the season.

From the store of Alex. McConnell a bridal bouquet of white cattleyas was sent out one day this week.

On Wednesday, the 13th inst., a general meeting of the New York Horticultural Society will be held in the rooms of the American Institute, 19-21 West 44th street, at 4 p. m.

The monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club takes place Monday, the 11th inst. Committees meet at 7 p. m.; regular meeting at 8 p.m. Bowling team meets in the afternoon of the same day.

Members of gun clubs who intend participating in the shooting contests, to be held during the Convention of the S. A. F. in this city, August next, are requested to notify Secretary W. J. Elliott, 54-56 Dey street, at the earliest opportunity. Teams from the under-mentioned cities have already signified their intention of taking part in the bowling tournament: Milwaukee, Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia, New York and Flatbush.

Adolphe Sachse arrived from Venezuela on the Caracas Friday last, where he had been collecting orchids for the past six months. Mr. Sachse was also in Colombia, but owing to the revolution existing there was unable to do any work. He reports that collectors in Colombia are experiencing great trouble in getting consignments to the coast, and that large supplies of Odontoglossum crispum are on that account likely to suffer materially, if not rendered useless. Every available native is impressed for war service.

Tuesday to Thursday of next week occurs the midsummer show of the American Rose Society at the Eden Musée. As the date set for the exhibition is a little early for the season it is hoped that all of our readers who can will send in whatever flowers are available, so as to make a creditable display. Entries should be sent to Leonard Barron, secretary, 136 Liberty street. There will be an interesting exhibit of wild roses from the Botanical Garden, and others of garden roses from several private establishments.

A new steamship line, operating between this city and Boston, direct "all the way by water," and also between this city and Providence, has been established by the Joy Steamship Co., whose office is at Pier 35, East River, foot of Catharine street. The trip to Boston by water will be found a most enjoyable one, and a novelty, besides having the advantage of being cheaper than that by other routes. By this line also, Providence can be reached as quickly as by other sound lines, and for less money. The Boston steamers leave Wednesdays at 5 p. m., and Saturdays at 7 p. m. Providence steamer leaves Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 5 p. m.

Decoration Day Trade.

There is no indication of a falling off in trade in this city for Decoration Day. Florists now handle the bulk of the flowers called for. Conditions this year were favorable for big supplies, as comparatively cool weather has been the rule since the heated spell early in May. The quantities of stock Monday and Tuesday, at all the wholesale stores, was simply enormous, with quality for the season above the average. Shipping, especially on Monday, was grand; some of the retailers spoke of it as a notable feature with them even. This drew off lots of the high-grade flowers at good prices. In roses there were not enough to supply the demand. Prices were well maintained, the bulk selling for between $6 and $8 per 100; a few fancy special lots went above that figure, with culls at $4. Carnations were in big supply, selling freely; standards brought $1.50 to $2, most of them at the latter figure, $3 being the price for fancies. White were hardest to move, which condition holds good yet. There was an abundance of paeonies, which realized $3 to $5.

Everybody who had flowers seemed to have sent them in—Cape jasmines from Texas, paeonies from cold storage and direct from open ground, sweet peas house grown, and just coming in from outside, cornflowers, daisies, lilacs, snowballs, feverfew, hardy pyrethrums, valley, outside grown; stocks, candytuft, clematis, beautiful masses of Spiraea Reevesii, and other shrubs helped to swell the quantity and afford cheap material for those whose purses were low and yet wanted something in the way of flowers.

The plant trade was also a big feature, especially with those catering to cemetery trade. The season is backward, and much planting has yet to be done.

The cut flower trade is back to normal, depending upon school commencements, June weddings, etc. Prices, owing to heavy supplies, will rule low, except for very choice material. A few dozen Jacqs. showed up this week for the first time this season. Sweet peas are selling low this year, mostly of the Blanche Ferry variety. Lots of these bring but $1.50 per 500, the choicest, 40c. to 50c. per 100. Peonies realize all the way from $10 per 100 bunches to 30c. to 50c. per dozen for choice. Quantities are being shipped from Indiana, and Klehm is send ng in his choice stock.

Among Growers.

Singler Bros., Morgan Park, are keeping up the reputation of this establishment for carnations. Tidal Wave and its sport, Evanston, as well as Daybreak and McGowan, are at the present time a forest of bud and flowers. Scott will keep right on flowering until August, as disbudding is carefully attended to. For a dark they still grow their father's seedling, Harvard. White Cloud is well in crop just now, as is Flora Hill. Some good Gold Nugget were also noticed. Mrs. Bradt has never been entirely free of disease here, and is not looked upon with much favor. The firm has a field of 10,000 for Summer blooming, consisting of Mrs. Fisher, Scott and Portia. These were propagated last Fall and kept in 2½-inch pots for want of room. The stock for housing consists of 20,000 plants. Five thousand asters, planted out, are also in fine shape. The large flowering Marguerite has been a paying crop here. The same soil in the benches for carnations has been used many years, but enough of it is at hand, so that it gets a rest of two or three years before being used again. Most of the houses on this place were built twelve years ago, of clear pine lumber. There has never been a sash bar replaced, and these look yet as good as new, but the paint pot is not spared. The houses are attached even span, running north and south. When the father died, some seven years ago, he left nine children, all but the two eldest to be educated and taken care of. It is a pleasure to observe that the elder boys have done well by the family and kept up the father's good reputation. Ess.

Ottawa.

Spring is here with a vengeance, and the plant trade is rushing. Queen's birthday was kept as it should be—a holiday, very little being done by the florists; but since then every one has been kept hustling. A most noticeable feature is a great increase in veranda box orders. Hanging baskets are on the decline and from the experience of the past two years, if one has a houseful of scarlet geraniums, he is all right. Prices are about as in former years: Pansies, 40c. to 50c. per dozen; geraniums, $1.50 per dozen, good stock; coleus, achyranthes, centaurea, 50c. to $1. Pansies have been good, and sold well; up to date there is an increase over former years in the plant trade.

The cut flower trade has also been very good and stock plentiful and of good quality. An elaborate wedding decoration (for Ottawa) is a feature in this week's business.

We have just received our palms from Europe and they came in first class shape.

Carnations in the field are taking hold all right owing to the proper kind of weather. E.

The German Rose Society will hold a congress at Trier, from June 27 to 30 next. There will also be held in connection therewith an exhibition of roses, which will last until October. About 30,000 outdoor roses will be exhibited, together with cut flowers and made-up work.

An Otago, New Zealand, paper, of April 27 last, contains an interview with the veteran Peter Barr, of London, who has been telling the New Zealanders how to make their public grounds attractive. Mr. Barr, during his stay in that city, was the guest of the Mayor and the president of the Reserves Conservation Society.

Gorton & Lidgerwood Co.'s Catalogue.

We are in receipt of a copy of this handsomely gotten up publication, from the firm of Gorton & Lidgerwood Co., 96 Liberty street, New York. The pamphlet contains a host of useful information on the subject of heating generally, and descriptions of the firm's now well-known side feed, hard and soft coal boilers, besides numerous illustrations of same in two colors. The many testimonials printed in the catalogue demonstrate the efficiency of these heaters.

Our Prize Competitions.

Photographic Competition.

MONTH OF MAY.

The result of the first month's competition has been somewhat disheartening; but two competitors entered the contest, and no photograph has been received which could be declared worthy of the first prize.

We look for better results and a more animated contest in this month of June. Certainly, there must be over one hundred good amateur photographers among our subscribers (it would be to the interest of all to be able to portray their own blooms, plants, etc.), and if even a limited number of aspirants would enter the lists some good subjects could be shown, somebody's name be brought to the front, and the first prize for that month turned over to the most worthy.

Therefore, lady and gentleman amateur photographers of the trade, do not remain in the background; the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE is waiting to hear from you, and the trade also.

Pamphlet, "Practical Photography for Florists," with prizes, terms and conditions of contest, sent free on application to this office.

Commercial Home Grounds.

PRIZE COMPETITION.

The FLORISTS' EXCHANGE published full details of this contest early in the season (May 12 issue, page 500), so as to give every one interested ample time in which to prepare themselves.

It is not a condition of same that formal entries should be made, but as this office prefers to supply the drawing paper and character designs, we would like inteading competitors to make early application for these.

This contest should prove of great value to all participants, inasmuch as they will be able to compare the ideas of others in the same line, and secure, free of all charge, the advice of so eminent a landscape architect as Mr. Warren H. Manning, of Boston, who will pass on all plans submitted in competition, and make such suggestions for improvement as he may deem proper in order to secure the most desirable results.

Hundreds, yes, almost thousands of retailers in the trade could materially better and increase their business by themselves setting an artistic example of beautiful and harmonious surroundings to the people on whom they depend for their livelihood. There is nothing more telling than a good example, mentally, morally and physically, and, chief among the good examples, one of the most readily comprehended, understood, and then desired, is that of a charmingly laid out garden and home surroundings; a picture of perfect peace and contentment, appealing so vividly to the eye and the heart that all who see it become at once impressed with the desire to imitate it to the best of their ability and resources.

May we not have a hearty, healthy competition; something to be proud of now as well as later on, when those who have been active participants therein realize the good it has done, not the least part of which will be the swelling of their own pocketbooks.

Sweet Pea Bicentennary Celebration.

The sweet pea bicentennary celebration and exhibition will be held in London, July 20-21 next. The congress and show will take place in the Crystal Palace. In connection with the conference arrangements have been made for papers to be read as follows:

"The History of the Sweet Pea," by S. B. Dicks; "The Evolution and Improvement of the Sweet Pea," "Classification of Sweet Peas," "Sweet Peas in America," by Rev. W. T. Hutchins, and "Some New Points in the Cultivation and Decorative Use of the Sweet Pea." Fifteen judges, including three ladies, have been selected for the competitive exhibits, and the Exhibition Committee will judge the trade exhibits. Applications for space should be made to R. Dean, Ranelagh Road, Ealing.

Stigmonose—A Carnation Disease.

Mr. Albert F. Woods, Assistant Chief of the Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, has just issued a most interesting report (Bulletin No. 19) on a disease of carnations and pinks, to which he has applied the name "Stigmonose" or puncture disease.

This disease, which it is stated is a serious drawback to the successful growing of the carnation, has until recently been attributed to bacteria, and given the name "bacteriosis." From numerous experiments and careful observation Mr. Woods has now concluded that the trouble is due to the punctures of insects, principally aphides and thrips, and of mites. Although these are the inciting cause of the disease the pathological and physiological changes involved are dependent to a large degree on the condition of the plant and the time the punctures are made. The effect of the disease on the plant as a whole is thus described by Mr. Woods:

"The effect of the disease on the plant as a whole depends upon the individual vigor of the plant and upon the number of punctures. A few punctures made by aphides, thrips, or red spiders will not seriously injure a plant, but a large number will cause it to become prematurely stunted and yellowish and also more susceptible to injury from various causes, especially parasitic fungi, which attack the weak stems and roots. Thrips, even though not numerous, may often cause the leaves of healthy, vigorous plants to become much distorted and show light blotches where they have been punctured. The value of flowers punctured in this way is, of course, materially reduced.

"Red spiders seldom do much injury unless the foliage of the plants has been kept very dry. The stunting of the plants which follows a severe attack of any of these animal organisms brings about a premature ripening of the lower leaves, especially if the plants are rather crowded, and such leaves gradually turn yellow and die. Any other cause which stunts the plants growing under the conditions mentioned, however, will bring about a similar maturing and death of the lower leaves.

"The susceptibility of different varieties of carnations to the injury seems to be, as a rule, proportionate to the normal vigor of the variety under the conditions in which it is growing when attacked. The constitutions of certain varieties seem to be very sensitive to injuries of this kind, while others are not, and while the sensitiveness, or resistance, as the case may be, is influenced to a large extent by the conditions of growth and the manner of propagation and selection of cuttings, yet this natural inherent constitution of each variety is the only explanation of the different degrees of susceptibility of different varieties.

Among the varieties which the writer has had under observation, Uncle John, Alaska, Della Fox and McGowan, as a rule, proved to be very sensitive to the punctures of not only aphides, but also to those of thrips and red spiders. Vigorous plants of the variety Storm King spot readily as the result of the punctures of aphides, but do not appear to be otherwise injured much, while weak plants of this variety become badly stunted and lose many of their leaves. The same may be said of Bridesmaid, Sweet Brier, Scott, Garfield, Daybreak, Meteor and Jacqueminot. Garfield and Daybreak are much more injured by thrips than by aphides. Among the other species of Dianthus, D. arenarius is particularly sensitive to aphis punctures, especially if the stem is much injured, in which case the plants often die. D. fanatica, D. caesius, D. chinensis, D. atrobens and D. plumarius are less sensitive, but spot readily from punctures of aphides, thrips, and red spiders. D. chinensis Heddewigii and its varieties, especially the thin-leaved sorts, are particularly sensitive to the punctures of aphides and thrips, and are quite sensitive also to the punctures of red spiders.

As to methods of controlling the disease it is stated:

"As the result of their investigations, Arthur and Bolley recommended that aphides be kept down as thoroughly as possible and that particular care be taken not to wet the foliage in watering. These recommendations were based on their theory that the aphides serve in a measure as carriers of the disease, and that water facilitates the development of the bacteria that were believed to be the cause of the malady.

"There is much to commend in the methods of watering suggested by Arthur and Bolley, and their efforts in stimulating search for better methods of staking the plants so as to keep the foliage more exposed to light and air have also resulted in much benefit. The increased vigor resulting from the use of these improved methods, however, was not due to a decrease in the number of spots, as was first believed, but to the fact that the total injury resulting from punctures was reduced.

"The genus Dianthus is adapted to dry situations, but all the species are nevertheless often exposed to drenching rains when growing under natural conditions, and the thick-leaved varieties are well adapted to shed water. Growers generally believe that the proper syringing of plants with water under a pressure of 20 to 25 pounds is valuable, and the writer's observations lead him to the same conclusion. It must be remembered, however, that this work should be done in bright, clear weather, so that the foliage will dry thoroughly before night. Proper syringing of plants instead of favoring stigmonose is an important factor in holding it in check, as it keeps down red spiders, and in a measure helps to reduce the number of aphides, thrips and similar insects. To keep down aphides, however, tobacco in its various forms must be mainly relied on. Carnation growers are so familiar with the methods of using tobacco that nothing need be said upon this subject here. It must be borne in mind, however, that healthy plants cannot be obtained unless the insects and spiders are prevented from getting too much of a start, hence fumigation and syringing should be so timed and so carried on that these pests will be held in check.

"The various forms of tobacco extract used in liquid form, and also when evaporated by means of hot irons, bricks, etc., have certain advantages, chief of which is that the flowers are less injured by the disagreeable odors. Hydrocyanic acid gas has been found effective, but it can not be recommended unqualifiedly, owing to the fact that it is likely to injure certain varieties. Scott, Garfield, Meteor and McGowan can stand one-tenth gram of 98 per cent. potassium cyanide per cubic foot of space for 15 minutes without material injury. This will kill about 90 per cent. of the aphides, but will not kill thrips or spiders. A stronger dose of gas or a longer exposure can not safely be recommended.

"It has been found that different plants of the same variety react very differently to the punctures of both insects and spiders, and this shows the importance of a rigid method of selection for the purpose of building up a vigorous strain of plants. In propagating plants preference should always be given, other things being equal, to those which show the least evidence of stigmonose. Some plants will be found almost entirely free from it, and it would probably be well to start selection work on a small scale from such stock and continue it from year to year until a more resistant strain is obtained. The writer is satisfied that such a practice would result in much benefit at once, and that within three to five years the vigor of the stock might be materially increased."

Mr. Wood's conclusions are as follows:

(1) The disease of carnations characterized by the symptoms described in this bulletin is widespread, and under certain conditions unfavorable to the plant it is quite injurious.

(2) So far as can be determined by the most careful microscopical study and bacteriological tests, neither fungi nor bacteria are present in the earlier stages of the disease.

(3) As the disease progresses various fungi and bacteria may appear, but their presence is not constant.

(4) Infection experiments with bacteria and fungi, especially with the germ described as Bacterium dianthi, carried out under the most rigid bacteriological conditions, resulted negatively in every case.

(5) A disease having all the characteristic symptoms of the so-called "bacteriosis" except the presence of bacteria, is produced by the punctures of aphides, as was repeatedly demonstrated by colonizing these insects on carnations.

(6) That aphides and not bacteria are responsible for the trouble is shown by the fact that the injuries produced are not accompanied in the earlier stages by fungi or bacteria. The aphides therefore cannot be looked upon as simply carriers of some fungus or bacterium, as they produced the disease on plants growing under perfectly antiseptic conditions as quickly as upon those not protected by antiseptics.

(7) Injuries similar in many respects to those produced by aphides also result from the attacks of thrips—insects which are often present on carnations growing under glass, although sometimes overlooked by growers. Another form of the disease is produced by red spiders.

(8) No matter how badly diseased plants may be, if otherwise vigorous they will grow out of the disease entirely, and the young leaves and shoots will remain free from spots if kept completely free from aphides, thrips and red spiders.

(9) As the disease is not due to bacteria the name "bacteriosis" is inappropriate and therefore stigmonose is suggested for the trouble.

(10) The carnation is readily influenced by the conditions under which it is grown, and as a result its reaction to the injuries of the aphides, thrips and spiders, and its susceptibility to their attacks, not only varies in different varieties, but also in individuals of the same variety. Plants grown under improper conditions, therefore, show more of the characteristic injuries from a given number of punctures than do plants growing where all the conditions are favorable. Certain plants rich in oxidizing enzyms have been shown to react more quickly to the work of puncturing insects and mites than plants poor in these enzyms.

(11) The size of the spots made by the punctures of aphides increases in proportion to the rapidity of growth of the leaf and the susceptibility of the plant, and also depends to some extent on the genus and the species of insect which makes the puncture. It is believed that the insect injects some irritating substance of an acid or enzymic nature into the wound, that this substance causes the increase of oxidizing enzyms in the cells which it reached, and that these enzyms interfere with the nutrition of the cell by destroying the chlorophyll and setting up other changes which finally result in death.

(12) Besides the carnation and different species of Dianthus many other plants react similarly to the puncture of aphides and other sucking insects, and also to mites.

(13) The grower can successfully combat this disease by the proper selection of cuttings, careful propagation of stock, good soil, the proper amount of moisture, light and air, and by the reduction of aphides, thrips and red spiders to a minimum.

The Bulletin is illustrated with several plates, one of them, colored, showing the nature of the disease.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

Richard Gardner registers seedling canna "Bobs;" a dwarf variety of the French type, growing about 18 inches tall; foliage thick, leathery and dark green; flowers orange scarlet, sometimes slightly margined with yellow; petals 1½ inches wide, spike compact.

New York Convention.

Important Notice.

S. A. F. members who have attended previous conventions and know something of the discomforts of waiting in line for an opportunity to pay assessments and procure badges, do not need to be reminded to forward their dues to the secretary in advance and thereby contribute to their own comfort and facilitate the secretary's work. To those joining the society this year, however, this advice is given with much earnestness. The crowd at the New York Convention will be unprecedented. Dues cannot be paid while meetings are in progress, and hundreds of applicants will be demanding attention before the opening session on the morning of the first day, the possession of a badge and membership receipt for 1900 being absolutely necessary before any individual can sign the roll book and receive invitation cards for the various entertainments provided by the New York Florists' Club, including the ladies' ride, which is planned for the afternoon of the first day. Memberships paid at any time during the year expire on December 31, so there is no advantage in deferring payment until August. On receipt of $3 from those who have paid membership dues for 1899, and of $5 from all others, certificate and badge for 1900 will be mailed promptly from the secretary's office. Preserve your certificate and bring it to the convention with you.

Park and Outdoor Art Association.

The fourth annual meeting of the above society opened in Fullerton Hall, Art Institute, Chicago, June 5, President Charles M. Loring in the chair, Warren H. Manning, of Boston, secretary; the objects of the society are the promoting and conserving of natural scenery; the acquirement and improvement of land for public parks and the advancement of all outdoor art having to do with the designing and fitting of grounds for public and private use and enjoyment. Eighty-five cities and towns in 28 states and in Canada are represented. According to the secretary's report the membership now numbers 400—a gain of 100 since the meeting last year in Detroit. Among these are many of the prominent men of the country.

A number of park men and others interested in such work in this city were present at the meetings.

The program laid out provided for work in the morning, visiting the parks and drainage canal in the afternoons, with lectures at night and a banquet at the Auditorium on Wednesday evening.

The present officers are: Charles M. Loring, Minneapolis, president; John C. Olmsted, Brookline, Mass., E. J. Parker, Quincy, Ill., Lewis Johnson, New Orleans, La., M. L. Moore, Toledo, O., L. Wolverton, Grimsby, Canada, and Thomas H. McBride, Iowa City, vice-presidents; Warren H. Manning, of Boston, secretary, and Osian C. Simons, Chicago, secretary.

Dr. Taylor, in behalf of the Mayor; Wallace Heckman, on behalf of the Art Association, and Peter B. White, on behalf of the Art League of Chicago, welcomed the guests to this city. President Loring replied and then read his annual address, summarizing what the society had done during the year. Impromptu addresses were made from the floor by delegates E. J. Parker, president of the Quincy Park and Boulevard Association, and Sidney Foster, of Des Moines, strongly advocating the establishment of a system of prizes for stimulating landscape art among schools in towns and cities. Mr. Parker suggested that if the school grounds were made play grounds it would be beneficial.

In the afternoon, after spending an hour or two in the Field's Museum, the delegates were driven in coaches furnished by the South Park Commissioners, through Jackson Park and the Midway Plaisance, where they could see the changes since World's Fair days, thence to Washington Park to the park conservatories for a halt, returning over Drexel and Grand Boulevards to headquarters, at the Auditorium annex, on Michigan Boulevard. On Wednesday afternoon the West Park Commissioners took the delegates from the Auditorium Hotel, through Douglas, Garfield and Humboldt Parks. On Thursday the Board of Lincoln Park Commissioners took them for a ride through the Lincoln Park system and to other points of interest. On Friday an excursion was given the delegates to the drainage canal, which proved of profound interest.

On Tuesday evening a very interesting lecture, illustrated with stereopticon views, was delivered by J. H. Patterson, and E. L. Shuey, of Dayton, O. The views showed the homes of the laboring people of Dayton before and after systematic attempts had been made to improve them by artistic grouping of shrubbery and flowers. "We have found the moral effect of beautifying the homes of the people most gratifying," said Mr. Patterson. "We all know that every one is interested by his surroundings, and if they are made attractive and beautiful the influence cannot be but good."

Mr. Shuey said that he had endeavored to collect all the available statistics, photographs, and other information of the history of such experiments among manufacturing establishments in this country, that only about half a dozen great concerns in the whole of the United States made any attempt whatever to beautify and make their surroundings artistic and appealing to the eye. He presented a number of views of notable examples of such experiments in England, and several in this country.

Wednesday morning session was opened by the secretary reading a lengthy paper prepared by Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormack, subject, "Landscape Gardening." The essayist traced the work from Eden up to the present time.

A long report of the committee on billboard nuisance was preceded by a series of stereopticon views shown by Mr. W. M. R. French, director of the Art Institute, demonstrating the horrible condition this practice had reached on the park fronts and boulevards of Chicago. The report, which was read by the chairman, Mr. Olmsted, certainly gave much food for thought, and the recommendations of the committee looking toward aiding in abating the nuisance are likely to do much good. Several members spoke on the subject, including G. Van Seven, Dr. Folwell, Messrs. Peterson and Shuey, of Detroit; Mr. Parker, of Carthage, and Mrs. Hall, of Milwaukee, who recommended that the society make more direct appeals to the ladies for aid in furthering their objects.

Mr. French, Director of the Chicago Art Institute, gave a splendid talk, and made some off-hand drawings to illustrate the use of trees in landscape work. Trees and grass the speaker considered the grand feature around the abode of man, and the manner in which vegetation was arranged either marred or made the picture. By a few dashes of color he easily showed what was improvements or injuries. ESS.

The Benefits of Organization.

Read by Wm. J. Stewart before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, June 5, 1900.

A decade seems a fairly long time when one is looking forward, but it passes rapidly, and, looking back, we are astonished at its brevity. The young man lives in the future, but as age comes upon him he is inclined more and more to indulge in meditation over by-gone days. If one who has reached or passed the meridian of life wishes to retain youthful associates and retard as long as possible the evidences of his rapidly accumulating years, let him watch out and avoid getting too much into the habit of everlastingly telling about what happened 10, 20 or 40 years ago. A little of it is all right, but carry it beyond a reasonable limit and one is apt to soon find his listeners reduced to a bunch of old fogies like himself. Knowing this I have approached the subject assigned me by your committee with some misgivings, not being disposed as yet to line up in the columns of "has beens." Without, however, indulging too freely in tiresome retrospect or exploring too deeply in ancient history, we may, perhaps, spend a brief time profitably in reviewing our achievements for the past decade, and thus acquire fresh courage and incentive to face the problems which await us in the future.

Ten years ago the Society of American Florists was in its sixth year. The Buffalo Convention had passed into history. The Boston fraternity were busily engaged in the work of preparation for the approaching visit of the national society to the Hub. The Philadelphia Florists' Club was already a prosperous young organization with a proud record and a promising outlook, while here and there throughout the country the good example set by them was being imitated, and florists everywhere were awakening, for the first time in their lives, to the grand social and material advantages afforded by these useful local bodies.

So ready had the national society found the field and so effectively had it started in on the work to which it had pledged itself, that, even then, the record of its services in the cause was one of which it might rightly feel proud. From the convention reports of the period we learn what questions were being discussed and what important problems we were endeavoring to solve. The standard flower pot had just been adopted, and the trade was in the transition period from the old unsystematic conditions to the improved order of things which it now seems hard to believe we could have dispensed with for so long a time. Yet, as with all reforms, the change was not made without opposition, nor was it accepted with unanimity even by those who would benefit most. A perusal of the records of the trade exhibitions at our annual conventions will bring us to realize, as much as anything else, the great practical strides we have been making, and the many devices and improvements that date their introduction from their exhibtion on these occasions bear testimony to the ingenuity and genius of our colleagues whom we are thus encouraging to develop those practical and mechanical industries so closely linked with our own profession.

The comparative merits of steam and hot water heating for greenhouses furnished a prolific theme for discussion in the earlier days; and how hot the supporters of each system were wont to get! Scientific versus practical education for young gardeners! Ah, there was a veritable jaw breaker. While it is true that questions such as these are rarely settled for good and all, and that the lapse of time is often the only tribunal that can determine the facts, yet the educational value of their discussion can hardly be over estimated. Jumping over the intervening years, who will say that, in our profession to-day, both practical and scientific knowledge do not exist in much greater degree than ever before, or that we have yet reached that stage where we have a sufficient supply of either of them? Although we scarcely realize how great is the advance until we sit down and compare the olden time with the present, the problem of the higher education is slowly but surely settling itself. The floricultural world "do move," and, whether or not we individually desire it, we have all been advancing steadily with it, so that to set back the average intelligence of the florists' trade, as it exists to-day, to the average as it was 10 years ago, would be a calamity as great as, if not greater, than it would be to reconstruct every feature of our modern greenhouse, according to the standard existing prior to that time.

McMillan's memorable satire on the prevalent style of formal gardening was the most notable feature of the Buffalo Convention. It precipitated a controversy that extended over several years, and was the severest blow ever dealt in this country against the artificial and abnormal in gardening. The seed planted at that time has been bearing fruit ever since.

The reform in the matter of plant nomenclature which has taken place can scarcely be realized, except by those who knew what were the conditions existing up to a dozen years ago, and who remember the delight with which the agitation of the subject and the appointment of a committee by the S. A. F. was welcomed by the suffering trade all over the country. Thanks to that movement, plants are no longer renamed at will by unscrupulous or ignorant dealers, and humbug has given way to reliability. Few committees ever accomplished so much with so little effort. There were a few short, sharp tussles at the outset, and then publicly and public approval took up the work and helped prepare the way for the systems of registration which are proving so serviceable to-day in protecting the right of the originator and of the buyer.

Thus we find our entire profession elevated in a practical way through the interchange of experience and intercommunion of bright intellectual minds which our trade organizations, together with the invaluable co-operation of an enterprising trade press, have made possible. With aggressive persistence and far-reaching effort the campaign of education goes forward. The fittest are forging to the front as greater intelligence gives a well-directed impulse to enterprise. The floricultural trade is becoming barren ground for adventurers. Catalogue men and advertisers are more careful in their representation of the goods they offer, not alone because of a higher integrity, but also because they know that they are dealing with a more enlightened clientage. It doesn't pay, nowadays, to misrepresent varieties; it doesn't pay to ship stale flowers as fresh; it doesn't pay to raise "any old thing" for the plant or flower market; the buyers are too well informed to be handled that way any longer. On the other hand the man of doubtful responsibility or unsavory record finds it more and more difficult to obtain credit, as the old loose habits give way to correct business methods. For the remarkable progress in cultural skill, too, the improvement in varieties of florists' flowers, and the advancement in gardening art along rational lines we are deeply indebted to the influence and work of our societies. It was organization that gave us the chrysanthemum shows and made possible the tremendous wave of popularity that flower enjoyed. Organization has in a few years raised the carnation to an eminence which it could not otherwise have reached in our lifetime.

Looking back over 10 years and comparing men and conditions as they existed then, and as we see them to-day, there are in evidence a much smaller percentage of those who "know it all." Positive opinions are not so prevalent, and instead of the "knowing shake of the head" is seen a healthy desire to learn and to improve. The intolerance that in the past fostered a disposition to mislead the inquirer has given way to a generous spirit that recognizes our obligations one to another, engenders that good feeling between business rivals whereby each recognizes that he, individually, does not hold a patent on all the integrity, and that his fellow florist is not necessarily a rascal because he does business on the same street. The incentive in all this is organization, which, by bringing us into personal contact with each other, has enlarged our business capacity, strengthening our executive ability and developed our common sense, so that, instead of wasting time and effort in trying to pull one another down, we unite with a will to uplift the whole outfit. Even this is uphill work. Deep-seated prejudices cannot be attacked without stirring up opposition, and the process of correcting abuses involves trouble for somebody's toes always. In the American Florist of 10 years ago last September we read the following: "From its inception the Society of American Florists has been a chosen mark of the critics. At first they would hardly allow it a twelvemonth in which to die and be buried. When that period had passed, a rousing meeting closing the year and a new prediction must be hazarded, they saw swift decay in the rule of cliques and in other dimly outlined evils. The fifth annual meeting just closed has proven no exception in its disappointment of this class. They said the end had been reached and all the changes rung—the florists had learned all the society could teach. What a further disappointment will it be then to know that the universal opinion is that in all that makes the gathering of real benefit to the florist the last is still the best." Well, the S. A. F. is still a very lively corpse and apparently growing more tenacious and invincible every year.

And how has the Philadelphia Club been progressing during all this time? Sorry to remind you of it, and wouldn't do it except for the sake of comparison, but according to the records of the bowling tournament at Buffalo in 1889 Philadelphia had the honor of having made the lowest score in the series—571. Glance at the score books to-day and tell us whether organization is helpful or not! Invincible with the balls, the gun or the shuffleboard—more trophies in the show case than are possessed by the whole push of florists' organizations put together—the Philadelphia Florists' Club is a peach and a shining example of what organization and fraternal standing shoulder to shoulder together can accomplish. In Boston our social opportunities in societies and clubs seem to have developed a fondness for good living rather than for athletic diversions, and the only active florists' organization has a banquet at every meeting. Thus we are assured of having every member in that sublime condition consequent upon a well filled interior when he is at the highest degree of geniality. I trust you will not accuse me of unseemly boasting, but I am inclined to think that Boston stands as pre-eminent in gastronomy as does Philadelphia in athletics. Her trophies won in many a hard fought tournament are not to be seen in any show case, but are evidenced in the ample and constantly increasing waist circumference of her representatives! Yes, Boston is matchless, too, in her own favorite game, and she is about to build a horticultural hall big enough to hold all her solid men without crowding, and still have room left for our friends from everywhere, whom we hope to be able to welcome on and after May 1, 1901, in one of the grandest edifices ever dedicated to horticulture.

The individual benefits in numberless ways through the wholesome contact with his fellows which organization encourages. How many eloquent orators, how many astute parliamentarians, how many exquisite singers have come to light under the quickening influence of this great developer—entertaining us unselfishly and brightening our existence by their admirable social traits that otherwise might have remained dormant for all time. The evolution of the "Brave old Duke of York" is alone a triumph sufficient to justify the formation of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, if it never accomplished another thing. Its gifted yet unpretentious exponent has given more genuine pleasure in its tuneful strains, so artlessly rendered, than has been derived from any other social feature of our national gatherings. Philadelphia is well supplied with such congenial spirits. Your grandest trophies are not exhibited in that show case that adorns your club room, but are safely stored in the breasts of a thousand fellow florists who have tasted your boundless hospitality, well lubricated with the good cheer which John Westcott dispenses so liberally. I recall by the way that Mr. Westcott 10 years ago gave it as his opinion that a retailer should make not less than 100 per cent. profit on all flower sales. Wonder whether his views have changed any with the lapse of a half score of years?

Notwithstanding all the good accomplished there is still plenty to do, many things proposed but not yet a reality. A reliable chart of the hail belt is wanted; all the scoundrels are not yet blacklisted; the imaginative newspaper horticulturist still revels in wonderland, and the crape chaser's own door bell is still minus the crape. We are yet without the blue dahlia, although in New York you can now buy the wonderful Tuba rugosa, which "blooms in three weeks, 36 distinct colors on one plant," for a few pennies. The national flower still blushes unseen, the mealy bug continues regular at his meals, and the eel worm still has a wiggle on. The "floral artist" has not quite ceased to construct steamboats of carnations, nor the landscape artist to build Jacob's Ladders of alternanthera; and the "mossback" is growing mossier and mossier and more difficult to stampede as the years roll on.

Organization is concentrated power. It gives courage to the faint-hearted; under its beneficent rule intellects are awakened to activity, the strong help to sustain the weak and the weak help to encourage the strong; selfishness is eliminated as we learn the humane principal that what concerns one concerns all, and our eyes are opened to the utter barrenness of a life where trading and hustling, brow-beating and slave driving, untempered with neighborly forbearance, unselfish deeds and kindly consideration for the feelings and welfare of our fellow man is the one controlling idea.

Help your society, it will help you. The societies are as yet only feeling their way and cutting out their work in the rough. How tremendous would be their power if every florist in the land was enrolled and would undertake to do for the common good as his share even one-quarter as much as he has benefited from the work of others! In the coming 10 years we may expect to see a greater proportionate advancement than for the past decade in everything that goes to make our profession honorable and honored. Just how great the stride depends upon individual effort. If our organizations would attain to their highest usefulness every member should be enlisted as a worker; and this can only be done by making our scope so comprehensive that each individual, whatever his circumstances, will see in it something to fit his case.

There are many broad questions and far-reaching issues that can be dealt with much more effectively by the national society than by the local organizations. It is one of the duties that the local club owes to the cause generally and to its members individually, to foster the interests of the national society within its own ranks. This advice, however, is superfluous in Philadelphia. The fullest measure of loyalty and earnest support has here been ever given to the S. A. F. from its inception up to the present moment, and were Pennsylvania's part in the annals of the national organization blotted out it would be an irreparable disaster. To urge you to show up in goodly numbers at the coming convention in New York is also unnecessary, I know. It goes without saying that if any other city in the country is ambitious for the honor of sending the biggest and merriest delegation to that great event, they will have to do some tall hustling. But you'll make no mistake in coming New York is fully aroused and will acquit herself nobly. The enthusiastic support being given to those intrusted with the work of preparation is remarkable. It comes from all sides—rose growers, carnation growers and plantsmen, bulb dealers and supply men, wholesalers and retailers, seedsmen, nurserymen, builders and boiler men, all seem actuated by the same generous rivalry and emulation as to who shall do the most. And the resultant gain to New York floriculture it is impossible to estimate. No doubt there will be some croakers, they are "with us alway." Some men croak incessantly, and the only apparent reason is that there is a pleasure in being a croaker which none but croakers know. In spite of them, in spite of their unfriendliness, and our own inevitable mistakes, we have every reason to believe that co-operative and fraternal sentiment is stronger to-day than ever before in the history of American floriculture. Of the past we have a right to feel proud; for our future we have good reason to feel confident. Let us so direct our organized effort that the historian of 10 years hence will find in our acts much to praise and nothing to condemn.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

GENISTAS AND ACACIAS.—The larger and established plants of these, that is, those that are used for cutting and decorative purposes, should now be put outdoors. Choose a location where the plants will be sheltered from strong winds, as if they are top heavy they are easily blown over. Cut them well back but not into the old wood, except to preserve the symmetry of the plants. Try to have them even and well balanced in shape when in flower by cutting them back properly now. If it is not desirable to put them in larger pots, take out as much of the top soil as can be done without injury and fill in with rich compost; half and half loam and well-rotted manure is the best mixture. Keep them pentifully supplied with water at all times, and, aside from cutting back an occasional extra strong growth, they will need no other care until they are housed in the Fall.

FICUS ELASTICA.—When the young plants are well rooted in the 3-inch pots, instead of potting them alone, prepare a bed for them in the garden by digging into the soil a good supply of rotted manure. Plant in the rubbers 2 feet apart, and 3 feet between the rows. Drive in stakes at the corners of the bed and stretch any kind of thin cloth over the plants to keep them shaded. In a week or ten days' time commence to remove the shade gradually, taking it off about an hour earlier each day. This will inure the foliage gradually to the full force of the sun and eventually the covering must be taken off completely. Frequent watering will be necessary all Summer should the season prove at all dry, and each plant should be tied to a stout stick to prevent the wind blowing it about and loosening the roots. By the latter part of August it will be found that the plants have made a far superior growth to what could have resulted in the greenhouse, and their care was light compared with indoor culture. They must be lifted and potted, however, before the nights become cool, and when doing this care must be taken to get the roots working in the pots as soon as possible. To accomplish this clear a space in a shaded house, either on the floor, or a deep bench; fill in with stable litter, such as would be suitable for a hotbed. Into this plunge the newly potted rubbers, and the bottom heat thus supplied will keep the roots moving without a check and not a leaf will be lost. In about ten days they can be taken from the hotbed and placed on the benches, when they will be found to have made as large specimens as would have taken two years of ordinary pot culture to obtain.

HYDRANGEAS.—If these are not intended for early forcing next year they may just as well be planted outdoors. Give them a good, rich soil to grow in, and lift early enough in the Fall to avoid freezing. Where early forcing is contemplated it is better to keep the plants in pots, shifting them into larger sizes as required.

BOUVARDIA.—This once popular flower seems to be grown less and less as the years go by, yet it is always useful, and a bench of it can be grown very profitably. Plant the young stock outdoors, where it will grow luxuriantly through the Summer; lift early in September and put in the bench. Not a shoot need be lost in the final transplanting, if ordinary care is exercised and a shade applied for a few days.

SOWINGS may be made now of herbaceous calceolarias and cinerarias. Shrubby calceolarias are coming into vogue again for bedding, and a few of these can be profitably grown by every florist. To secure a stock one should procure a few plants and plant in the garden, labeling the different varieties. In the Fall there will be abundance of short, stocky cuttings which should be taken, put in flats, and kept near the glass in a very cool house, where they may remain until the latter part of January; then they may either be transplanted into boxes or potted, and treated the same as other half hardy bedding plants.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Ornamental Asparagus.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

There appears to be some confusion in the nomenclature of asparagus grown for ornamental purposes. What your European correspondent, T. E., refers to is A. decumbens, not deflexus. It is very suitable for hanging baskets, mirror decorations, etc., as stated by your correspondent, but its deciduous habit, and the color, too, are against its becoming a regular florist's and house plant. The true Asparagus deflexus, or more correctly, A. scandens deflexus, is evergreen, and in many respects similar to A. Sprengeri, growing as freely; its habit is more erect and much more dense and compact. It will not produce such long sprays for cutting; as a pot plant it is sure to prove prettier and more graceful than A. Sprengeri. It also stands neglect better, which is saying a good deal.

Allow me to add in reference to the Banksia rose mentioned by your correspondent, that for many years it has been used in southern Europe as stock for climbing roses, and no better can be found to be sure. Marechal Niel, for instance, does wonders on that stock. The trouble is that Banksian roses will stand only very little frost.

Allen's Golden Mignonette.

Allen's Golden Mignonette.

The mignonette shown in the accompanying picture was raised during the past season by C. H. Allen, of Floral Park, N. Y. Mr. Allen informs us that it is very much finer than its parent, Allen's Defiance. The single flower is very large, growing very close on the stem, and as there is very much yellow in the color it has a golden appearance, differing greatly from any other. The growth of the plant is exceptionally strong, as will be seen in the illustration, as it represents only a single plant which was pinched back but once.

Cincinnati.

Decoration Day business was very satisfactory; in fact, the best I have ever known in this city. The shipping trade was very good, and all stock in the commission houses was well cleared up at fair prices.

The Fall festival is now beginning to assume large proportions, and September 19 will be a gala day for Cincinnati and the florists. The festival will open with a flower parade, of from 200 to 300 carriages, all beautifully decorated with natural or artificial flowers, palms, grasses and ribbons. The parade will meet the Harvest Queen at the river and escort her to the reviewing stand at Fountain Square, where she and her court will review the parade. At this point the judges will make the awards for the best decorated vehicle. Afterward the Queen will go to Music Hall, where she will open the festival with appropriate ceremonies. We expect many thousands of visitors at that time, and I hope our florist friends will avail themselves of this opportunity to visit our city. The festival will continue ten days, and during that time there will be given on the streets a magnificent electric pageant at night, on which artists are now at work. This affair will eclipse anything ever given of a similar nature. There will be trade and manufactures' parades. At Music Hall there will be trade displays, pony shows, liquid air exhibits, poultry show (Bro. Coles take note), floral competitions, trap shooting contests, dog shows, band contests, drill contests, county fair and many other attractive features. So ye growers of cut flowers look to your laurels. We shall need lots of flowers to decorate all of these carriages and floats, and now is the time to prepare.

June 9 is the annual meeting and election of officers of the Cincinnati Florists' Society. E. G. GILLETT.

Louisville, Ky.

During the last week Louisville was honored with the Reunion of the Confederate Veterans, and that did give the florists a little extra work. The greatest demand was for red and white flowers. Several large decorations also added to the business done. Carnations and paeonies were mostly used in the decorations, while for the balls, Beauty roses were in greatest demand. Prices received were: Beauty, $3 to $5; Bride and Bridesmaid, $1 to $1.50; carnations, 50c., and paeonies, $1 per dozen. The market was well supplied with good stock. The fag end of the planting season has come and now the growers are all busy transplanting and cleaning the plants, getting ready to make necessary repairs; and those who can afford it are getting ready to build new houses. J. S.

On May 31, 1900, after all financial obligations and other difficulties had been duly satisfied, the old firm of Bertermann Bros. (John and Wm. G.) again took full charge of the business of the Bertermann Floral Co. All current accounts therefore will be duly honored by Bertermann Bros.

Memorial Day Trade.

Decoration Day business was very good indeed this year, an improvement being noted in many instances over previous years.

Flowers were not very plentiful. Nothing but lilac was to be had from out of doors, consequently the demand for indoor stock increased quite a good deal. Most years rhododeadrons, pæonies, dentzia, etc., were in very good shape and found very useful, but the late season kept all these things back this year.

Roses were in pretty good supply, but all of them of any kind of good quality sold and very good prices were realized.

Carnations though in large supply did very well, selling out at very good prices.

Among the retail stores the demand for dried-flower designs was not up to that of last year. Those of galax leaves and laurel wreaths, however, were used quite extensively—the call for these is growing and tends to the doing away with the old-fashioned Cape flower, immortelle, milk weed, etc. Quite a little plant trade was found.

Business has now become very quiet, there being very little of it outside of a few June weddings and a little funeral work. The wedding decorations, as a rule, are not very heavy, although there have been a few good ones distributed among the retailers. Quantities of rhododendrons and pæonies are coming in, and are found very useful at such functions.

The market has become very druggy in all kinds of flowers, but more especially in roses and carnations. The former have gradually fallen off in quality, until now the supply of good ones is rather limited, all kinds being smaller and the colored sorts losing color. American Beauty fetch from $1 a 100 to $1 per dozen for short to medium grades, No. 1 making $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen, and extras, in limited quantity, $2 per dozen. Bride and Bridesmaid are getting poor, both being very small and the latter light colored.

Kaiserin, however, is coming of very good quality, and the passing of the Bride is not felt so much; but there is almost nothing to take the place of Bridesmaid. There are also a few Carnot in the market. The best Kaiserin and Carnot bring $8 per 100.

Carnations are gettting very cheap, and the growers who a week ago were dictators, when they set the price at $4 per 100 for Decoration Day, are now prostrate before the buyer begging of him to take their flowers almost at his own price; $1 buys 100 very fine carnations, while smaller grades, or even the same grade, when bought in larger lots, sell for 75c. and 50c. per 100. During the week quite a few street men have obtained 1,000 for $4.

Outdoor stock, which was late for Decoration Day, is now coming in very plentifully. The demand for sweet peas holds out very well, but the hot sun is affecting the flowers. The supply is also heavy, consequently the price has dropped to about 30c. or 35c. per 100 for good stock. The demand for valley, for wedding bouquets, is quite lively, and just at a time when most of the frame valley is cut out and before the forced material is very good. Welch Bros. are now getting a limited supply of forced valley of very good quality; Sutherland, too, is receiving some very good stock.

Norton Bros. have given up their Hotel Berkeley store, and are to occupy the Massachusetts avenue one alone for the Summer. This firm had been in the old store for 27 years, and was the pioneer in the Back Bay district. F. J. N.

Trade Items.

We are enjoying the pleasantest of June weather. It, however, assures but a moderate business from June weddings. Most all kinds of flowers are plentiful, and quality of inside growth dropping, excepting, probably, that of carnations, which are still quite fine.

The call for bedding plants generally is improved over recent years, buyers showing liberality about prices. A shortage is already noted in cannas and light coleus. The stock of geraniums will no doubt be cleaned up well. We made a hurried call at a few places this week and noted as follows: On the east side Joe Stallingers' place shows pleasing vacancies in the benches here and there, and stock hardly "ready enough" in the blooms customers wish to see for the demand. John Speiss has at present most of his stock set together in one house, and reports good sales. Kumpf Bros. have been buying in some kinds. E. O. Boorman took care of extra geranium stock in some unoccupied houses that he hired for some months, and is showing a larger supply than common, in good quality, with business active. H. Keitsch, on Earl place, one of the veterans here, still knows how to grow improved quality geraniums and verbenas. The French street establishment, over which John G. Pickelman presides, has done a good veranda box and vase filling trade. Wm. Scott's Cold Spring place reports good business—up to previous years, apparently, or better. Coleus have become scarce, and but a few days continuing active calls will see shortage in other lines. Chas. D. Zimmaman mentions a pleasing Decoration Day trade, with the bedding business good on all sides. Geraniums none too forward in flowering; cannas scarce. A call at E. A. Butler's, Niagara Falls, last week, showed him decidedly a buyer now in geraniums. He had a good business on Decoration Day.

The decadence, in popular demand, for the verbena for bedding is noticeable. The call hereabouts seems to be at a low minimum and at low prices.

At the parks proper, or those under the management of Supt. J. C. Graves, assisted by Capt. James Braik, planting out is now being pushed vigorously. At Humboldt Park, directly under the charge of Henry Elbers, a good deal of solid bedding is being done. Large rustic plant stands are also being added.

A hasty trip through the Pan-American grounds shows that under Superintendent Ulrich a large amount of ground moving (rather clay it is) has been done in the necessary grading.

Jottings.

Geo. McClure has severed his connection with exposition work and is again in the park employ.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL BY WM. SCOTT.

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

PROSPECTS.

The seed growers are still complaining about the scarcity of stocks planted for next crop, and for the most of the articles prices will range about the same as those of last season. Those on cabbages and other cruciferæ are rising and will keep on doing so; same with turnips, which crop will be insignificant.

The seedlings of annual vegetables, such as chicory, lettuce, radish, etc., have all been planted late, and as cold weather and cool nights prevailed till the last crops will, for that reason, be much retarded. As to beets and mangolds more have been planted than was anticipated in Autumn, but they also have suffered from the weather conditions. However, if the Summer is favorable a middle crop is looked for.

Carrots are a feeble crop only, and prices will keep steady if they do not increase.

As regards field seeds the season has ended better than we thought in March it would do, all the stocks having been nearly exhausted. For next August's sowing the early red clover is in large demand, and the first prices are higher than those of last year. The red and white late sorts are a little under the early sort, which is rarely the case.

In places where young fruit stocks, etc., are grown for America it is said that pear and apple are doing fairly well, and are in good quantities. Mazzard cherry is more abundant than last year, and will be a little cheaper. Myrobolan is in small quantities at Orleans and Angers, being a little more plentiful at Ussy. Prices for the small quantities will keep high, same with Mahaleb; St. Julian will be cheaper than last year, larger quantities being cultivated. Prices on Rosa canina will still remain high, the frost having obstructed cultivation and killed quantities of small seedlings. Modest supplies only will be obtainable in season. Manetti and Grifferaies stocks have been planted in quantities, but it is too early to give an opinion on them. E. T.

European Notes.

"Cold and wet with no warm weather yet in sight," that is just where the 1st of June finds us. The one thing needed from Naples to Aberdeen is sunshine. Rutabagas and late turnips that still survive will benefit by the rains, as will also our spinach plants. Radish can now be transplanted, but it is very late, and the plants of the earlier varieties are generally in poor condition. Short crops all round are inevitable, but as your presidential election often appears to restrict trade it is possible there may be enough to go round, but there cannot be a surplus.

As regards flower seeds, cinerarias, cyclamen and primulas sadly need the sun to develop and mature their seeds. Calceolarias are just in full bloom, and are not likely to take any hurt for a time. Pansies are blooming grandly, but they do not set their seeds; and as early deliveries are now the order of the day their condition causes us some anxiety.

Nasturtiums and sweet peas are biding their time; the plants look healthy and only need warmth to set them moving.

The Temple Show, mentioned in last week's notes, provides very little useful matter for this page. Calceolarias were shown in grand condition by James, Carter and Sutton. Some complaints were made respecting the dwarf habit of James' superb strain, but every cultivator of these plants knows that this is a fault in the right direction and one that can easily be remedied by the grower. Begonias were exhibited in splendid condition by Laing, Cannell and Ware, but no very striking novelty appeared in either collection. The improved forms of Cinerarla cruenta, from the Royal Gardens at Kew, amply demonstrated their value for florists, but the individual flowers are too small and the colors too dull for them to become generally popular. The magnificent display of streptocarpus from Veitch's should certainly help the sale of these easily grown and very beautiful plants. In a climate like yours they would prove a grand success.

H. Low & Co.'s exhibit of schizanthus was very effective and beautiful. This easily grown and long neglected plant appears to be coming to the front once more.

Of the vegetable displays it is unnecessary to speak, as the exhibits would be of little interest on your side.

EUROPEAN SEEDS.

P. S.—As the mail is closing the latest report from Italy arrives. Onion, lettuce and leek are standing well. Tomatoes, egg plants, cauliflower and centaureas have suffered somewhat from the cold and heavy rains. All other flower seeds appear to be benefited by the humid atmosphere, and everything needs the sun.

The Paris Exposition.

The International Exposition opened on April 14, the horticultural section on April 18 with the first temporary show in the Horticultural Palace. This building was not then completed, but preparations sufficient for the occasion had been made by the architect, M. Gauthier, and M. Martinet, Editor of Le Jardin.

Outdoors, at the opening, the bulb display in the Trocadero was in full flower. The Dutch growers exhibited collectively. American horticulturists who are able to read French will find much information in Le Jardin, No. 317, which largely explains this exhibition.

In tulips only single and early sorts were shown, among them Cerise Gris-de-Lin, Chrysolora, Duchesse de Parma, Joost Van Vondel, La Belle Alliance, La Precieuse, L'Immaculée, President Lincoln and Wouwerman. Among fritillarias, William Rex and the variegated sorts were shown. In narcissus, Bicolor, Empress and Sir Watkin. Hyacinths, Gertrude, King of Belgians, King of the Blues, King of the Yellows, La Peyrouse and Mme. Van der Hoop. As all the bulbs had been well chosen, and the decorative effect well thought out, this exhibit will stimulate the taste for outdoor plantings of flowering Spring bulbs in this country.

Nearly all the plantations of forest and fruit trees, shrubs, conifers, roses, etc., were ready for the exhibition opening. These will be dealt with in future articles. The horticultural exhibit is one of the best, and, to my idea, the most attractive of the exposition.

For the temporary show, April 18, there were fine displays of orchids, the largest exhibitors being Messrs. Bernnek, and Dalle, of Paris; Maron, of Brunoy; Regnier, of Fontenay-sur-Bois; Magne, of Boulogne-sur-Seine; Cappe & Son, of Le Vesinet. The following sorts were noticed in the different lots: Dendrobium nobile Cooksonii, D. phalænopsis, D. fimbriatum oculatum, D. Brynerianum, Epidendrum O'Brienii, E. Stamfordianum, E. Wallisii, Lælio-Cattleya Berthe Fournier, L.-C. callistoglassa, L.-C. Hayana, L.-C. highburiensis, L.-C. Wharnanensis Cappei, Cypripedium Lathamianum aureum, C. Hyeanum, C. Rothschildianum, C. varinbile Angela, Masdevallia trochilus, Phajus Normanni and sorts, Phajus Cooksonii, Phalnæopsis grandiflora aurea, Oncidium maculatum, Odontoglossum luteo-purpureum, Rodriguesia venusta, Scuticaria Steeli, Tricophilia suavis, Vanda cœrulescens, Vanda lamellata Boxalli.

Vegetable Plants—Cabbage and Tomato Plants, best leading varieties, fine plants ready to plant out, $1 per 1000; $8 per 10,000.

Of the hyacinth and other seasonable bulbs, such as tulips, anemones, ranunculus, etc., the principal exhibitors were Vilmorin, Thiebaut ainé, Thiebaut-Legendre, of Paris. This last gentleman had also a rare plant named Tecophilæa cyanocrocus, with a small flower of a pure blue—much admired by visitors. Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co. exhibited also several new things, among others Primula obconica gigantea, chamois rose; Primula obconica gigantea, bright rose, also numerous hybrids, cinerarias and an old rose-colored type of great value. Displays of Azalea indica and rhododendron hybrids from several growers were also in good form.

Of hardy shrubs in flower M. Croux, nurseryman, Aulnay-les-Sceaux, had good lilacs. Among the doubles and other kinds were noticed Cesse-Horace de Choiseul, Condorcet, Mme. Abel Chatenay, Mme. Lemoine, Michel Buchner, Gloire de Lorraine, Gloire de Moulins, President Massard, Senateur Volland. This exhibitor had also in flower Cerasus Sieboldi, Cytisus elongatus, Exochorda grandiflora, Kerria japonica, Staphylea colchica, Spiræa Thunbergii, etc. M. Georges Boucher, nurseryman, Avenue d' Italie, Paris, also showed lilacs in flower, including about the same sorts as named above, and Jean Bart, Lamark, Virginal, Beranger, President Grevy, etc., and a seedling unnamed, clear yellow in color.

Bougainvillea glabra was shown by M. Nonin, of Chatillon, in good form. German irises and violets in varieties were exhibited by M. Millet, of Bourg-la-Reine.

A new rose, named Mme. Viger, color clear rose, passing to white, with good foliage, a very promising sort, was shown by the raiser, M. Jupeau, of Le Kremlin-Bicetre.

Fruits were exhibited by different growers and in good condition. Apples Reinette Grise and Reinette du Canada were very fine. In pears Belle Angerine, Doyenne d' Hiver, Bergamotte Esperen and Beragmotte Sageret were in good shape.

Thomery, near Fontainebleau, maintained its reputation in grape culture, several growers showing magnificent lots of their Golden Chasselas of Fontainebleau. Other varieties of grapes were Drodelabi, Gradiska, Black Alicante, Pink's Black Muscat, Rose Royal Chasselas, etc.

Cerasus, with matured fruits in pots, and detached fruits were exposed by different growers in the following sorts: Anglasse native, Belle d' Orleans, Belle de Saint-Fronde, Bigarreau, Reverchon, May Duke, Ramon, Oliva, Royale, etc.

Fruiting strawberries in pots and separate fruits came from different growers, specially in Dr. Morere and Laxton's Noble, also the ever-bearing large fruited kind, St. Joseph.

The vegetable exhibition was small, but well presented, especially by Vilmorin.

The second temporary show took place in the Horticultural Palace, beginning May 9. Most of the exhibitors were the same as those mentioned in connection with the first show.

The display of orchids was large. Among the lots shown were Cattleya Luddemani, Cattleya Col. Villebois de Marevil, Cypripedium bellatulum, Lælia superbiens, Lælia hybrids, Mozart and Mme. Naelmackers, Lælio-Cattleya Empress of Russia, with its improvement, Lælio-Cattleya Empress of Russia superba.

Thiebaut ainé, seedsman, Paris, exhibited bulbous plants in flower, mostly in cut flowers, numerous varieties of tulips—double, single, Darwin, bizarres, etc. Two plants much remarked in his lot were Iris Sari and Iris iberica.

Thiebaut-Legendre, of Paris, staged bulbous plants in flower, notably Gladiolus Lemoinei in sorts and Tulipa cornuta, also perennial plants in flower, among which were admired two nice border plants—Phlox divaricata (several sorts) and Phlox nivalis atropurpurea; noted also were Alyssum saxatile nana compacta, pale yellow.

Billiard & Barre, nurserymen, exposed Crozy cannas in flower in large variety and well done.

Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co. staged their usual lot of annual flowers in pots.

Graverean, seedsman, Neauphle le Chatean, had Nemesia nana compacta in flower in the following colors: White, yellow, rose and white and red.

Lilacs, azaleas and roses were the principal exhibits of May, 9 also Clematis grandiflora, etc. Several exhibitors had magnificent Azalea mollis and Azalea mollis sinensis. M. Moser, of Versailles, showed a new A. mollis hybrid named President Viger. Numerous A. mollis hybrids, unnamed, of great value, from several exhibitors were also admired. A sport from Azalea indica Empress of India, named Mme. Moreux, clearer as to color than the type and with larger flowers, was exhibited by M. Debille, nurseryman at Versailles.

Lilacs were exposed en masse, both in pots and in cut flowers, by Messrs. G. Boucher, Paris; Baltet, nurseryman, Croyes; Lemoine, of Nancy; Gouchault, of Orleans. Among the many varieties were particularly observed double lilac Charles Joly, best red; Fernande Viger, good double white; Negro, single variety, and well named for its color.

It is impossible to describe the rose exhibition; it was too large. The principal exhibitors were Messrs. Honore Defresne, nurseryman, Vitry; Leveque, rose grower, Ivry; Rothberg, nurseryman, Gennevilliers; Nabonnand, nurseryman, Golfe Juan, etc. The roses shown were from dwarfs to standards, in pots, well grown and completely free from any disease.

Large flowered clematis were exhibited in good form by Messrs. G. Boucher, of Paris, and Paillet, of Chatenay-les-Sceaux. This last named gentleman had also 50 sorts of tree pæonies, well flowered and well assorted.

There was a nice lot of shrubs in flower exposed by Messrs. Croux, of Aulnay-les-Sceaux, and Bruneau, of Bourg-la-Reine, etc. Very interesting was the lot of M. Lemoine, of Nancy, among which were noticed Deutzia gracilis capitata, Deutzia gracilis rosea, Deutzia gracilis venusta, Deutzia Lemonei compacta, Deutzia Lemonei Snowball, and two new forms of deutzia not yet sent out—Deutzia discolor floribunda and Deutzia parviflora purpurescens.

Among foreign exhibitors those from America and Russia had nice lots of fruits. The American collections from different societies were in good form, and well grouped. Their manner of exhibiting was noted by French growers, who will profit thereby for the future. The following varieties of apples were seen in this lot: Baldwin, Golden Russet, Jonathan, Minkler, Smith, York Imperial, and Winesap.

The prizes obtained by American societies were: First prize, general collection, Illinois Horticultural Society, New York State Commission, Missouri Horticultural Society; second prize, Indiana Horticultural Society, Connecticut Pomological Society, Nebraska Horticultural Society; third prize, Kansas Horticultural Society, Virginia Horticultural Society, Agricultural Department of North Carolina.

A report of the third temporary show, which surpassed its predecessors, will be given in my next.

All the florists were kept busy the past week with funeral work, a number of weddings and one very large coming-out reception. Roses are plentiful, but not over good in quality. Carnations, all colors, are also plentiful, as are sweet peas, Harrisii lilies, and gladiolus.

The bedding plant trade is nearly at an end, and the majority of the growers report that they are entirely sold out. Geraniums have been very scarce, and the growers had to buy them out-of-town to fill orders. More vases, hanging baskets, window boxes, etc., were filled this year than ever before.

Mr. Greenlaw, representing N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston, was in town the past week.

The New York Rose Show.

The American Rose Society held its first midsummer show this week in the Eden Musée, New York. The exhibition opened Tuesday and continued three days.

This exhibition, being held in June, is, we understand, gotten up chiefly to interest private gardeners and amateurs, though by referring to the schedule it is seen that the major portion of the classes are "open to all." It is a well-known fact that the commercial grower cannot make extensive exhibits at this time of the year, while for the private gardener and amateur the present period may be safely called the height of the season; and it is to be regretted that with the liberal prizes offered in the schedule of 41 classes there was not keener competition among the many gardeners and amateur rose growers of the country.

In about one-half the classes there were no entries and in many of the others only two or three competitors. This lack of interest among the gardeners is much to be deplored. We cannot have a really creditable rose show in June without them, and if there is some underlying difficulty that prevents them from entering into the spirit of the thing it ought to be brought to light and removed. There is one thing we would like to suggest to the society when holding shows in the future, and that is, that the entry book shall not be closed until the morning of the day the exhibition opens. This would, in a measure, make it unnecessary to scour the country side at the last moment to round up exhibitors and solicit exhibits.

On the first day (Tuesday) the showing of roses was rather slim, but there were on view goodly collections of herbaceous and other flowers that filled the tables, and helped to make a creditable display. John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., had an extensive collection of hardy flowers, among which were some choice forms of German iris, pæonies, hemerocallis, aquilegias, zephyranthus, phlox and lilies. Siebrecht & Son, New Rochelle, N. Y., besides entering largely into the rose competitions, made a pretty showing of hardy flowers, among them being some choice single flowering pæonies, one, Fantasie, a very pleasing pink variety. Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., displayed a magnificent bunch of their No. 666 carnation. Its fine keeping qualities in warm weather were well demonstrated here. Benjamin Dorrance, Dorranceton, made an exhibit of hardy and indoor roses. The Pratt estate, Glen Cove, N. Y., showed 85 varieties of hardy roses, and the New York Botanical Garden, 20. These three exhibitors did not enter for competition, however. There was also a collection of garden roses from F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.

On the second day (Wednesday) most of the hardy flowers were removed and replaced with roses. This gave the hall a much better appearance as a rose show than it possessed the day previous. The judges for the first day were F. Newbold, Wm. Turner and J. W. Withers. Their awarding resulted as follows: For the best 25 varieties, three of each; 12 named varieties, three of each; 6 named varieties, three of each; display of single roses, display of moss roses and collection of 100, named, Siebrecht & Son took first honors, Wm. Scott taking the second prize in the class for six named sorts.

In the hybrid classes, for Mme. Gabriel Luizet, W. W. Law was first, Siebrecht & Son second. Wm. Scott took first for Alfred Colomb and Marshall P. Wilder, Siebrecht & Son were first for Baroness Rothschild, second going to W. W. Law. For Anne de Diesbach W. W. Law was first. Siebrecht & Son secured first for Ulrich Brunner and Gen. Jacqueminot, and W. W. Law second. Siebrecht & Son also were first for six of any variety.

On the second day (Wednesday) the judges were Robert Simpson, J. Holloway and Dr. Van Vleet. In the private gardeners' class W. G. Gomersall, Fishkill, N. Y., took the premier honors for the best 12 varieties. For the collection of named roses, not less than 150 blooms, the first prize, a silver cup, valued at $35, went to Geo. H. Hale, gardener to Mr. E. D. Adams, Seabright, N. J.

In the amateur class, Miss Ingraham won first prize for 12 blooms, named, and for six blooms, also named varieties.

The Henderson Cup, valued at $50, offered for the best display of hardy roses, was won by Siebrecht & Son. The Joline Cup, offered for the best 36 blooms of La France, was captured by Thos. Young, Jr.

Certificates were granted to W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., for collection of hybrid Wichuraiana roses and M. Horsath, Glenville, O., also, for new hybrids of this rose. In the latter collection a cross of R. Wichuraiana with Bridesmaid looked promising as a pillar rose.

There was also on exhibition some very fine blooms of Cattleya gigas, grown by Peter Duff, Orange, N. J., gardener to J. Crosby Brown, Esq.; a plant of Cattleya Mendelii having a number of choice blooms grown by T. Welch, Riverdale, N. J., and a few vases of Malmaison carnation from F. W. Newbold, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Robert Kift, Philadelphia, made an elaborate display of his cut flower holders, the arrangements for table and altar bouquets being specially admired.

The New York Gardeners' Society had their strawberry show near the orchestra on the same floor as the rose show, and Wm. Scott, S. Hess, H. L. Terrel and H. Nichol captured the major portion of the prizes.

Some of the gardeners from up state, on the occasion of their first visit to the Eden Musée, to see the rose show of the American Rose Society, this week, were much chagrined at the stolidity and indifference shown by the wax figures, especially those of the policeman and guards, when asked for information as to the locality of the floral exhibition. Pretty servant girls, in wax, also came in for a share of attention, unwittingly.

Hackensack, N. J.

Captain John J. Phelps, of the Red Towers Greenhouses, has started on a fifteen hundred, probably a two thousand, mile drive with a team of four horses. Captain Phelps is locally noted as a long-distance traveler by land and water, being equally at home on the seat of a coach or the deck of a ship. A few years ago he had the schooner yacht Brunnhilde built, and sailed her around the world under a master's certificate, issued to him by the Government. On this trip he lost a mast during a gale on the Red Sea, and later in the China Sea fought off Chinese pirates who attempted to board the Brunnhilde in small boats. The present drive will occupy about three months.

Presentation to F. L. Harris, Boston.

About eighty friends of the veteran gardener, Fred. L. Harris, coming from many parts of the country, gathered at the Hotel Brunswick, Boston, on Saturday evening, June 9, to show their respect for and admiration of this venerable gentleman, who has perhaps done more for the gardening profession than any other man on this side the Atlantic. Mr. Harris had only just retired from the position of head gardener at the beautiful and world-renowned estate of H. H. Hunnewell, Esq., at Wellesley, a position he had held for 46 years, during which time his artistic taste and his great energy and ambition have raised the place to the rank it now holds—at the very top of the ladder.

When learning of his intention to retire a body of his friends instituted proceedings looking toward tendering him a complimentary banquet and presentation, and a committee consisting of M. H. Norton, chairman; E. M. Wood, W. J. Stewart, W. W. Edgar and F. R. Mathisoa was appointed to take the matter in charge. It may here be mentioned that great credit is due this committee for the success and smoothness of the event. Ninety-three subscribers entered into the spirit of the affair and thus greatly aided the committee in its task.

FRED. L. HARRIS.
For 46 years Gardener on H. H. Hunnewell Estate, Boston.

The guests arrived in good season, and were received by Mr. Harris in the handsome "Venetian room" of the hotel. The decorations of the dining hall, all contributed by friends, were very elaborate and artistically arranged, W. W. Edgar being chairman of the special committee on decoration. A bountiful banquet had been prepared, and as is always the case with members of the craft here "ample justice was done to it."

When cigars had been reached M. H. Norton called the gentlemen to order and introduced W. J. Stewart, who in a few well-chosen remarks presented Mr. Harris with a large, handsome loving cup, suitably inscribed on one side, while the other side contained a true representation of the Italian garden, which has long been an interesting feature on the Hunnewell estate. After gaining control of his feelings Mr. Harris responded, thanking all present for the much appreciated gift.

The presiding officer next introduced Hon. C. W. Hoitt, Nashua, N. H., as toastmaster. Mr. Hoitt's abilities in this line are too well known to need further comment. He succeeded in keeping everybody in a happy frame of mind throughout the whole of the proceedings.

Among those gathered around the festive board were the most prominent gardeners and florists in this vicinity, also some well-known visitors, including Robt. Craig, R. E. Berry and George C. Watson, Philadelphia, Pa.; Wm. R. Smith, Washington, D. C.; Patrick O'Mara, New York; John N. May, Summit, and W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Henry A. Siebrecht, New York; T. McCarthy, Providence, R. I.; Jos. A. Fuller, Leominster, and H. F. A. Lange, Worcester, Mass. Most of these gentlemen were called on for a few words, as were several of our local orators, all of whom paid a high tribute to the grand old man whom they had met to honor. Messrs. John K. M. L. Farquhar, John Galvin, Fred. R. Mathison, Lawrence Cotter and last, but not least (any way you put it), Warren Ewell paid their respects for the local members.

Fred. L. Harris, Jr., ably entertained the party with a few piano and vocal selections which were well received, as were the efforts of a quartette, which discoursed several appropriate songs.

After singing Auld Lang Syne the party broke up. A very neat souvenir menu card had been prepared bearing an excellent likeness of the guest of honor. This was preserved by all present, and in future years will remind them of the pleasant evening thus spent. F. J. N.

At the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, held Monday evening last, Messrs. Wm. R. Smith, Washington, and Robert Craig, Philadelphia, were visitors, both being en route to their respective homes from participating in the complimentary dinner festivities given in Boston to F. L. Harris, gardener to H. H. Hunnewell, Esq. Both gentlemen made a few remarks. Mr. Craig, in eulogizing Mr. Harris' attainments, said: "I wish all the young gardeners of the country could study Mr. Harris' methods, emulate his honesty of purpose, and try to achieve something of his greatness in the line of gardening. He had a brilliant imagination, a healthy fancy to conceive those beautiful designs which, by industry, application, patience and perseverance, he brought into such wonderful development. He created a garden that is a credit to the country and an inspiration to the whole world." On motion of Mr. Manda Mr. Harris, who had been in Mr. Hunnewell's employ for 46 years, and whose kindly offices on the occasion of the S. A. F. visit to that gentleman's grounds, are still a pleasant memory with all participants, was made an honorary member of the club, the president also paying a high tribute to the qualities of the man.

A. Blanc & Co., Philadelphia, have issued their illustrated catalogue of new and rare plants and bulbs. The frontispiece represents an Alpine scene, with a mountaineer exhibiting flowers of the edelweiss in a Swiss home. Florists and others in search of new things should send to the firm for a copy of the catalogue.

American Association of Nurserymen.

The twenty-fifth annual meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen was held June 13 and 14, at the Chicago Beach Hotel, Chicago, Ill. A large number of members was present.

An address was made by Hon. N. H. Albaugh, of Ohio, giving reminiscences of the association and its members up to the silver anniversary. Mr. Albaugh referred feelingly to those members who had passed away, mentioning particularly Peter Henderson, Elisha Moody, Robert Douglas, S. W. Hoover, Isidor Bush, Franklin Davis and George W. Campbell. He also referred in high terms of praise to Mr. Van Lindley, of North Carolina, and Z. K. Jewett, of Wisconsin, who had for so many years been faithful members of the association.

N. W. Hale, of Knoxville, Tenn., gave a talk on the retail nursery business. Mr. Hale desires to see a high standard set in the type of agent employed to solicit business, as it becomes the mission of these men to educate the people and awaken in them the desire for the good and beautiful things which the nurserymen can furnish. Prof. N. E. Hansen, of South Dakota, read a paper on some new lines of work for prairie nurserymen. The paper contained recommendations as to varieties of plums, pears, cherries, peaches, and grapes which could be safely planted by farmers in the great Northwest, naming the Prunus Americana plums, Russian pears, Vladimircherry, Bokhara Number Three peach, and stating that the future would have to evolve a grape which would be hardy enough to winter in the prairies. Mr. R. C. Berckmans, of Georgia, read a paper on the future of the nursery business in Cuba and Porto Rico, in which he gave an account of conditions found there during a recent visit.

The report of the committee on legislation showed nothing as yet accomplished, although the committee expect to get their bill through shortly. The obstacle in the way of passage during the past year was an amendment which the fruit interests of California had succeeded in inserting at the end of the section regulating interstate shipments reading as follows: "Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the inspection of such nursery stock by the authorized inspectors of any state or territory at the final point of destination in accordance with the laws of said state or territory."

The report of Committee on Exhibits mentioned photo and litho plates, by Rochester Lithographing Company; Missouri raspberries, by Henry Wallis, of Wellston, Mo.; specimens of juniper, Arbor vitæ; photos of hybrid and tea roses and carnations, also gooseberries, by Joseph Heinl, of Jacksonville, Ill.; new evergreen, by Baker Brothers, Fort Worth, Kan.; plain and printed labels, by Benjamin Chase, of Derry, N. H.; litho and hand-painted plates, by Stecher Lithographing Company, Rochester, N. Y.; Clematis paniculata, by E. Runyon, Elizabeth, N. J.

The report of the treasurer showed a balance on hand of $1,400. Standing committees appointed are: Transportation—A. L. Brooke, Topeka, Kan.; William Pitkin, N. W. Hale, and Peter Younger. Tariff—Irving Rouse, Rochester; Thomas B. Meehan, J. J. Harrison. Legislation—C. L. Watrous, Silas Wilson, N. H. Albaugh, R. C. Berckmans, Charles J. Brown.

Officers for the ensuing year are: President, Theodore J. Smith, Geneva, N. Y.; vice-president, N. W. Hale, Knoxville, Tenn.; secretary, Geo. C. Senger, Rochester, N. Y.; treasurer, C. L. Yates, Rochester.

Next place of meeting, Niagara Falls.

Trade News.

The retail stores have been quiet this week; almost all flower buyers have gone out to their suburban residences. About the only business going on is a few commencements and these do not benefit the florist to any great extent, as in many schools flowers have been forbidden at the graduation exercises.

The principal event now talked of is the Republican convention, and from present indications florists will not derive much benefit from it. The city is now filling up rapidly with politicians, and the usual flower buyers are as rapidly getting away from the crowds.

All kinds of flowers are plentiful, and prices in favor of the buyer. Nothing is moving well, and with the close of this week business will settle down to the regular summer basis.

The June meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will be held next Tuesday evening, and will be a sweet pea night. There will be many exhibits staged in competition for the prizes offered by Henry F. Mitchell for pink sweet peas, and for general display of sweet peas. D. R.

The Market.

With Decoration Day and school commencements trade has been good the past two weeks. Roses and carnations were very much in demand, most of the stores having to shut down on sales; plenty of outdoor stock was to be had but it did not go. Beauty was the favorite flower for the commencements; a great many were sold but they had to be ordered ahead, and on Thursday and Friday, the two big days, a Beauty rose could not be obtained at any price. Bridesmaid were next in favor.

At the ball of the University Club some fine decorations were called for.

A New Florists' Club.

On Friday, June 8, a few of the craft met at one of the trade stores and organized a florists' club—name to be given later. The chief object of the club is to hold a flower show in the Fall. Mr. Graham, superintendent of parks, has been promised by the Park Commissioners the use of the conservatories for the showing of plants, and a large tent, to be erected near by, for the flowers, the city also to donate the music. Mr. Graham was elected president and John Berry, secretary, so that with two such earnest workers at the head success is assured. A committee was appointed to confer with the Mayor and Park Commissioners. Another meeting will be held Friday evening, June 15, when we expect to get everything in shape and start out for a good show. DENVER.

Toronto.

The Market.

Business during the past three weeks has been very good, both in plants and cut flowers. The call for carnations, up to last week, was satisfactory, but there has been a great supply lately, and though they are still in demand prices have diminished. There has been a large number of weddings this month so far, and considerable bloom has been used up. Roses have been plentiful, and poor stock very cheap, but fairly good. Choice blooms have kept up in price, the supply being short. Sweet peas are good and plentiful. Pæonies are coming in now, and will soon be in abundance. Gaillardias, gladiolus and pyrethrums are also arriving, and sell fairly well.

The sale of bedding plants has been very good this year, with prices generally better than those of the last few years. Geraniums have sold very well, General Grant being the favorite in this market. There has also been a great demand for cannas, the favorites here being Alphonse Bouvier, Mme. Crozy and Florence Vaughan. These varieties are much used in our parks, and so are well known to our people. Coleus has not sold so well as in former years, excepting in the varieties Golden Bedder and Verschaffeltii; good plants in these two kinds are about sold out.

The beds around the Parliament Buildings this year will, I think, look very well, as there are some good plants in them. We have been very short of rain here this Spring—all through last month we hardly had a shower, but we had two good ones during the last two weeks, and everything is growing finely now.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The June meeting of the Horticultural Society last week was devoted to a pansy show, but there was not a good exhibition, the boys being too busy to give attention to the matter. A few pansies were on the tables, some of them large blooms, but they were generally of the commercial type and of poor substance. Had the show been held earlier in the season much better flowers would no doubt have been exhibited.

Mr. Ross read an interesting paper on pansies, and the society discussed the advisability of holding a show of plants and cut flowers in August. The latter matter was left in the hands of the directors, to present a full report at the next meeting. T. M.

COLEUS 10 choice variety, 2½ in. pots, $2 50 per 100; Verbenas in bud and bloom, 2½ in. pots, $2.50 per 100; Geraniums, 10 fine variety, strong, 3½ in. pots, $6.00 per 100; Dwarf Marigolds, 10 bud, 2½ in. pots, $2.50 per 100; Tall Marigolds, from flats, $1.50 per 100; Single Petunias, Thorburn's Superb strain, stocky plants in bloom, $3.00 per 100; Nasturtium, dwarf fine stocky plants, 2½ in. pots, $2.50 per 100; Fuchsias, in bud and bloom, 4 in. pots, $8 00 per 100; Lobelia, compacta and trailing, in bud and bloom, $2.00 per 100.

Trade is Quiet.

Business is now very quiet, June weddings and commencement exercises contributing to what little there is; but the demand for flowers is entirely inadequate to clear out the receipts. The supply of roses, already heavy, is now augmented by some of the outdoor flowers. American Beauty continues of good quality, as do Kaiserin and Carnot, and the best sell fairly well. Beauty making $1.50 to $2 per dozen for highest grade, while Kaiserin and Carnot fetch $2 to $6, extras bringing $8 per 100. Bride and Bridesmaid are falling off in quality, and move more slowly, at prices which are difficult to quote, so uneven are they.

The supply of carnations continues greatly in excess of the demand, and prices in consequence rule low, 25c. to 50c. per 100 being the figure for much of the stock, while the finer grades make 75c. Extras go at $1 per 100; all kinds and colors are included.

Pæonies, red and pink, are very plentiful and sell slowly, being only found useful for decoration purposes. Rhododendrons, deutzia, iris and various other outdoor flowers add to an already heavily overstocked market, and for much of this class of stock there is no outlet. Sweet peas continue in popular demand, but they, too, are very plentiful. Cornflower, coreopsis, swainsona, etc., in small bunches, are in fair supply and sell pretty well. Valley is plentiful, and though there is a fair demand for it the daily receipts are seldom cleaned up.

News Notes.

The Twombly Co. have closed their store on Tremont street, and, it is said, have gone out of business entirely.

Rhododendron Show.

The postponement of the rhododendron show for one week was indeed very beneficial in its results, for the exhibition turned out to be one of the finest of its kind in years. The quality of everything shown was of very a high standard, and the displays quite numerous.

The exhibits of orchids were very fine. These were arranged very tastefully with cocos palms, ndiaatums and such choice things. Wm. Donald, gardeuer to Jason S. Bailey, Esq., was awarded first prize, and those sent by James E. Rothwell and Mrs. John L. Gardner, second and third respectively. Amoug other orchids staged was a very handsome and finely grown plant of Cattleya gigas var. Sanderiana, by James Brydou, gardener to Bayard Thayer, Esq. This plant had been grown by Mr. Brydon since 1897, and was a marvel of health and culture, bearing 35 fine flowers on five spikes, two with eight, two with six and one with seven blossoms. H. H. Hunnewell, Esq., showed a very pretty plant of Miltonia vexillaria var. H. H. Hunnewell, bearing five spikes of delicately tinted flowers. A silver medal was awarded for this variety, and a first-class certificate of merit for superior cultivatiou to Mr. Thayer's plant. Dr. C. G. Weld, Kenneth Finlayson, gardener, exhibited four nice cypripediums.

Two tables were entirely devoted to rhododendrons, and nearly one-half of another. Collections of these flowers in their numerous varieties were staged by Mrs. B. P. Cheney, Mr. H. H. Hunnewell, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, T. C. Thurlow and Dr. C. G. Weld. The prizes from the H. H. Hunnewell Fund were divided between Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Mrs. B. P. Cheney. Mrs. Gardner captured first for 12 distinct varieties of unquestioned hardiness, with Caractacus, purpureum elegans, Everestianum, purpureum grandiflorum, delicatissimum, James McIntosh, Alex. Dancer, roseum elegans and album elegans, H. W. Sargent, album grandiflorum and Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Cheney took first for six hardy varieties.

T. C. Thurlow made quite an extensive display of hardy azaleas, winning nearly all the prizes in this class.

The showing of oriental poppies was very gorgeous, and one of the largest ever seen here at this time; they were well displayed by W. J. Clemson, H. S. Rand and Dr. C. G. Weld.

Pæonia officinalis were also well in evidence as were the tree pæonies.

Good irises were shown by Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Mrs. Gill. Extensive displays of hardy pyrethums were made by H. S. Rand, Rea Bros., Dr. Weld and others. M. A. Patten had two vases of fine carnations, Mrs. E. M. Gill a vase of mixed flowers, and James Comley a very fragrant seedling magnolia.

In the upper hall two fine collections of show pelargoniums were displayed, one of ten plants by E. J. Mitton, and one of six by Dr. C. G. Weld. Wm. H. Spooner showed an interesting collection of roses, including Lord Penzance's hybrid Sweet Briars, Stanwell Perpetual Scotch roses and Carmine Pillar.

On Friday the Garden Committee made its first visit to estates entered in competition for the H. H. Hunnewell triennial premiums "for an estate of not less than three acres, which shall be laid out with the most taste, planted most judiciously and kept in the best order for three consecutive years." Friday's trip was made to C. H. Tenney's estate, at Methuen. It was the first time this place had been entered in this competition. There are about 80 acres, containing many of the best and most choice specimen trees and shrubs. Mr. and Mrs. Tenney entertained the party at dinner, and all left with pleasant recollections of their first visit to Graycourt, as Mr. Tenney calls his beautiful estate. F. J. N.

Our Prize Competitions.

The Photographic Contest.—Competitors can send in as many subjects for each month as they prefer. There is no limit.

Home Grounds Competition.—The sectional drawing paper is 12x18 inches, ruled into squares of one-eighth inch, each square representing one foot. When the area to be covered by the plan exceeds 72x144 feet, it will be best, ordinarily, to reduce the scale rather than to attempt to provide for the whole place on two or three sheets. This is a matter, however, that each contestant must determine for himself, bearing in mind always that a plan on a large scale can be drawn to show much more detail than a plan on a smaller scale.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING for June is, as usual, replete with information of great value to every home owner. The magazine is published by George D. Chamberlain, Springfield, Mass. Price $1 per year.

Invitation to S. A. F. Delegates.

At the last regular meeting of the Florist's Club of Philadelphia it was moved by John Westcott, seconded by Geo. C. Watson, and carried with a heartfelt unanimity not soon to be forgotten, that a cordial invitation be extended to everybody intending to attend the next Convention of the S. A. F., which is to be held in Greater New York in August, and on their way thereto to stop off at Philadelphia and renew old acquaintances possibly, and probably make some new ones, as the Club Room Committee will hold open house during the Monday immediately preceding the opening of the Convention on Tuesday. Everybody welcome. Don't fail to give us a call.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary F. C. P.

Flowers at Funerals a Necessity.

A judge of the Rhode Island Supreme Court has ruled that flowers at a funeral are a necessity. The decision was made in an appealed case where it was argued that the flowers for a citizen's funeral ought not to be paid for as they were not essential, this argument having been put forth on behalf of the estate of the deceased. In his opinion the judge remarked that "flowers are appropriate expressions of feelings of love and respect for the departed and should be held to be a necessity."

It is perhaps fortunate that this ruling has been obtained; but apart from the sentimental side of the matter, which seems to have actuated the judge in making his decision, flowers are also articles of commerce; and as such should be dealt with, as far as payment for value received is concerned, in the same way as any other commodity. The after statement that the flowers at the funeral in question were not an essential was a poor excuse for non-payment of the florist's bill; this opinion should have been formed prior to the order for the flowers having been given.

It is alas, for the florist, too common an element in the conduct of his business to have trouble in collecting his accounts for flowers used on occasions where momentary sentimentality or superficial grief for a departed friend or relative has overturned one's judgment in connection with the expenditure then made, which in the light of assuaged sorrow or other relief from the feelings prevailing at the time the orders were given, seems exaggerated or too costly. This sordidness seems but ill-fitted to such occasions, and it will afford some satisfaction to the trade to learn that those inclined to haggle over an honest debt must "count the cost" before ordering, just as in the other every day transactions of life.

On the other hand the practice is not uncommon for those supplying flowers for funerals to take advantage of the then natural mental condition of friends or relations and charge exorbitant and outlandish prices for the goods furnished. We sympathize entirely with those who seek to be relieved from this form of oppression, which, more than any other, is responsible for the "omit flowers" notices that are becoming more and more numerous in mortuary announcements. That florist is no friend to his business who for usury would seek to restrict the expansion of one of the most beautiful traits in man's nature—deference and respect for the dead, as exemplified in the use of flowers at funerals, our loving tribute to the memory of dear ones gone before.

New York.

The Market.

Something seems to have struck the business this week, and struck it very hard.

Wholesalers are all of one opinion, and declare that of all dull periods the present week has been the slowest on record for this time of year. Flowers of all descriptions are plentiful, and top grade American Beauty are the only stock that maintain their price; this is mainly owing to the fact that they are almost the only flowers used for steamer trade.

Bride and Bridesmaid are plentiful, but the quality is away off, and to clear them out is utterly impossible, except by way of the garbage barrel or at prices that would not pay the expressage from the grower to the city. There are also many hybrid roses coming in. A bunch of Margaret Dickson, seen in the store of Thos. Young, Jr., were about the most handsome flowers brought in. Sweet peas are of excellent quality, and are received by the thousands. There is but a small demand for them as compared with the supply, and when offered at $1 per 100 bunches clearances could not be accomplished.

Iris, pæonies, pyrethrums, lilies, valley, gladiolus, carnations, yes, and cattleyas even, may be all mentioned together as being too plentiful for the demand and that no fixed prices obtain. They fetch just as little as the conscience of the buyer will allow him to offer, and those that don't know him have no idea how little he can offer sometimes.

Among the retailers there is but little doing, except in the way of steamer trade. This branch of the business has been very good during the last week. The numerous varieties of flowers in the market just now give the retailers plenty of choice material for window displays, and they do not fail to take advantage of it. A tour among them is equal to visiting a June flower show in this city.

Auction Sales.

On Friday, the 8th inst., the annual sale of cacti and other curious plants from L. Menand was held in Cleary & Co.'s salesrooms. Mr. Cleary has also been conducting a sale of Japanese plants in the Victoria Hotel, 27th street and Fifth avenue.

On Tuesday, June 26, Wm. Elliott & Sons will hold a special trade auction sale of decorative plants, carnations, primulas and other commercial stock suitable for Fall trade.

Jottings.

F. L. Atkins sailed for Europe on Saturday, the 9th inst., to inspect nursery stock.

W. J. Elliott, secretary of the shooting section of the committee on sports, has secured a range on the McKnight property, Jersey Meadows.

Samuel Heashaw has recovered from the injuries he received in the runaway accident recently, and was a visitor at the rose show this week.

Visitors: W. R. Smith, Washington, D. C.; Robert Craig and Robert Kift, Philadelphia; Theo. Eckhardt, Hamburg, Germany; Benjamin Dorrance, Dorranceton, Pa., and E. Wallace, Hartford, Conn.

A. L. Miller, of Jamaica avenue, Brooklyn, showed a bloom of the new canna, Kate Gray, at the Florists' Club meeting on Monday night. The flower was admired by all who were present, but as the variety is already in commerce the award committee could not pass upon it.

While attending the rose show here this week, Benjamin Dorrance, president of the society, made a flying trip to Poughkeepsie, to be present at the graduation of one of his daughters at Vassar College. This is the second of Mr. Dorrance's daughters to graduate with high honors at Vassar.

A meeting of the New York Market Florists' Association will be held in the Clinton Market, corner of Canal and West streets, on Tuesday evening, June 19. A good attendance of the members is expected. On Friday, the 8th inst., a portion of the roof of the market fell down and the general condition of the building becomes worse and worse. Some steps should be taken toward placing the question of a plant market before the proper authorities, and it should be done as early as possible. All who are interested should not fail to attend the meeting on Tuesday night.

Club Notes.

Notwithstanding the excessively warm weather prevailing a large attendance was present at the club meeting Monday evening last, President O'Mara in the chair. S. A. F. matters again engaged the attention of the members, the various committees all reporting progress. It was decided that free admission be given the public to the horticultural exhibition in connection with the S. A. F. meeting.

Alex. J. Guttman was elected a member and several candidates were proposed.

A. L. Miller, of Brooklyn, exhibited a spike of canna, Mrs. Kate Gray, one of the Italian type (see page 384, present volume FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, for full description).

The Lord & Burnham bowling trophy was on exhibition, and was an object of great admiration, especially by the sporting element. The shooting grounds and bowling alleys have both been selected, each being favorably spoken of.

There is yet time to insert an advertisement in the club's Souvenir Book, the matter prepared for which will shortly be in the printer's hands. A "dummy" of the book was on exhibition at the meeting, and received many compliments. Treasurer Weathered will furnish any needed information regarding rates, etc., in the Souvenir.

The Horticultural Society of New York held a thinly attended meeting at the Berkeley Lyceum, Wednesday last, Dr. Hexamer presiding. Election of officers was deferred. G. T. Powell was added to the committee on nominations, which was also constituted a committee of membership. It was suggested to hold a chrysanthemum show in conjunction with the American Institute, at which the new society will also offer awards, the date of the exhibition to be about November 14 next. This matter was left in a committee's hands for consideration.

A protracted session of the New York Gardeners' Society took place Wednesday evening, at Broadway and 24th street, Wm. Bartholomæ presiding. A lengthy discussion on gardeners' wages occurred, arising out of the recent action of the Catalpa Club, an association composed of the park gardeners of the city. This club is a sub-division of the Knights of Labor, and through the efforts of its members the rate of wages for gardeners was fixed by the Park Department at $75 per month "without privileges." The club desired the opinion of the Gardeners' Society as to the wage standard in general. After full deliberation the conclusion arrived at was that the sum mentioned was equivalent to the prevailing wages of fairly good gardeners who enjoy the usual perquisites accompanying their situations.

A committee was appointed to wait on the managers of the Eden Musée looking to the holding of a Fall show there. Votes of thanks were passed to the various exhibitors who had this week assisted in the exhibition of the American Rose Society.

Over 1,700 trees have been planted in the city during the past year by the New York Tree Planting Association.

The third annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Society will be held in Montreal August 16 and 17.

WINDSOR LOCKS, MASS.—Howard J. Pinney has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of about $1200 and assets about $250.

The Grand Central Palace.

MEETING PLACE OF S. A. F. O. H. 1900.

Our illustration shows the building in which the S. A. F. O. H. will hold its annual meeting and trade exhibit in August next, in New York City, also where the horticultural exhibition will take place. The building itself covers an area of 200x275 feet, and contains 400,000 square feet, equal to over nine acres of floor space. The natural light of day penetrates every foot of the floor space of the entire building. The floor space adjoining the Auditorium, to be devoted to the trade exhibit, and that of the Auditorium itself for the horticultural exhibition, embraces some 40,000 square feet, 30,000 for the purposes of the former and 10,000 for the latter. In addition to that there is ample accommodation on the same floor in which to hold the convention meetings, a space of 200 x56 feet having been set apart on the Lexington avenue front for that purpose.

Entrance is gained through the arched corridor fronting on Lexington avenue, thence past inclosed box offices to broad marble stairways leading directly to the Auditorium, etc.

The Auditorium is surmounted by a glass dome 65 feet high, containing 12,000 square feet of glass, superbly lighted by electricity at night. Small rooms off the main hall are admirably adapted for the use of committees. The balconies are capable of seating over 2,500 people. The building is fire-proof and fitted with electric lights throughout. It is located on Lexington avenue, in close proximity to the Grand Central Depot. The Broadway and Lexington avenue street cars pass the door.

The diagram herewith shows the plan of the floor of the Grand Central Palace, as arranged for the trade exhibit, the horticultural exhibition and the convention hall. The following are the articles included in the respective classes: Class A, plants; B, cut blooms; C, boilers and heating apparatus; D, greenhouse appliances, including flower pots; E, florists' supplies, including fancy earthenware; F, bulbs and seeds; G, miscellaneous.

As shown in the illustration, there is ample freight elevator accommodation, it being possible to drive up, on the south side, within the building right to the elevator door.

John P. Cleary, 60 Vesey street, New York, is manager of the Trade Exhibit, from whom full information as to space, rates, etc., can be obtained.

Pan-American News.

Although the absence of rain has been most unfavorable for the thousands of trees and shrubs planted this Spring, many of them late, there are very few failures, and the appearance of the plantations is most flourishing. Many more exhibits were sent in than were expected this Spring, but in the case of hardy roses it was either plant them now or not at all.

The Music Garden is in the center of a broad elevation, and scattered over this area are many large beds of hybrid perpetual, rugosa, Wichuraiana and Crimson Rambler roses. One large bed is filled with standard and dwarf Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora. All of these exhibits were sent in several weeks later than the proper time to transplant, but with careful planting and hard pruning they are making fine growth. Upward of 6,000 roses are among the exhibits. The principal contributors are Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; Nelson Bogue, Batavia, N. Y.; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, and Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. Y.

The excavation of the lakes is complete and grading is now the chief work on the grounds. The sloping banks of the canals are finely graded and seeding is being done. With access to the hose in every part of the grounds these banks will soon have a most refreshing appearance.

Mr. Ulrich has obtained several hundred fine red cedars, 20 to 25 feet high, and of most symmetrical shape. They are boxed and shaded from the sun, and if successfully carried through the Summer will have a delightful appearance when located in that part of the grounds known as the "Court of Cypresses," which is two basins, each 200 feet in diameter, and will be filled with aquatics. One of these basins will be heated to facilitate the growth of the Victoria regia.

The grounds around the Service Building have a finished appearance. Large flower beds are blooming, and the thousands of visitors who already view the grounds seem surprised at the progress made. The Transportation and Liberal Arts Buildings are going up rapidly, and progress is making on all the structures.

I was much pleased to hear last week from Mr. Alexander Forbes, of New York, that he considered we were most favorably ahead with all the work compared to past expositions at a corresponding date. WILLIAM SCOTT.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—After these are planted, too much care cannot be given to the watering of them until they get fairly started growing, particularly if the house in which they are planted is shaded. Let the first watering be thorough enough to wet the soil clear through, after which the plants should be allowed to get pretty well on the dry side before they are again watered, applying it only in the spots on the bench that appear to need it. Syringe them lightly every morning, and when the weather is excessively warm syringing may be done twice a day, and will be beneficial to them. Give plenty of air at all times, both day and night. In the matter of shading there is no strict rule to go by; good flowers can be grown either with or without it; it all depends upon their treatment. Should a house be shaded lightly and treated with discretion as regards watering, etc., it will produce as good flowers and with less labor than a house that is left unshaded, as the latter will often in the course of the Summer become so hot and dry that twice a day waterings are necessary. Dust the young plants occasionally with tobacco dust, and keep the aphis down from the beginning. This is a much better plan than waiting until the fly has obtained possession, and then having to use twice the amount of tobacco to dislodge it.

ARDISIAS.—Young plants may be planted in a well prepared bed outdoors, and they will make a much better growth than if kept in the pots all Summer. Dig into the soil some well-rotted manure, and if the soil is at all heavy some leaf mould should also be dug in to lighten it. Established plants, those that are intended for next Winter's sale, may be stood outdoors, on a bed of clean ashes or gravel, where the drainage will not become clogged up, and a weekly watering of weak liquid manure should be given them as the pots become filled with roots.

CYCLAMENS.—These should be out in the frames now and making a rapid growth. Shade them from the full force of the sun every day. Look them over twice a day and water such as are in need of it, using a watering can with water taken from a barrel or tank. Shift into larger sized pots as required, never allowing the plants to become root-bound until the flowering size is attained.

CINERARIAS.—After the seedlings are large enough to be got into single pots, the best location for them is a cold frame which faces the north. Here the sun never strikes them, and they will grow luxuriantly, and aphis will not attack them. Pot along as required and leave them in the frame until the nights are too cold for the plants. When potting be sure to use material of the roughest kind admissable, according to the size of the pot employed. Cinerarias will never do well in fine or sifted soil.

WHILE IN THE RUSH OF PLANTING for your customers do not neglect the home garden. This should be made to furnish lots of serviceable flowers through the Summer and Autumn, and to neglect it now would be willful carelessness.

ROTATIVE PLANTINGS of asters, stocks, sweet peas, gladiolus, tuberoses, etc., should be got in, and all the herbaceous plants that are growing should be cared for, as regards watering, mulching or staking, as the case may be.

(126) Sulphuric Acid.—How much commercial sulphuric acid does it take to make one gallon of water smoke, as used in making hydrocyanic acid gas? Also does it turn the paint yellow on the inside of a house if you burn sulphur in it for fumigating.—C. C. R.

—The strength of the commercial grades of sulphuric acid are so variable that it is impossible to say definitely, in what proportion it should be used in preparing hydrocyanic acid gas. Usually one part of the acid to two parts of water is ample to heat the water sufficiently to cause a copious ebulition of steam. In case steam is not produced with this amount of the acid, however, enough should be added to bring about the desired result.

The yellowing of paint on the interior of greenhouses frequently follows the burning of sulphur in fumigating. This is due to the fact that some unburned sulphur may escape and may be taken up by lead paint and thus produce a trace of lead sulphide. Even should no unburned sulphur escape, the sulphurous acid produced in the burning may lead to a gradual yellowing of the paint, especially if direct sunlight strikes it, as under the influence of sunlight sulphurous acid can decompose itself with the liberation of sulphur: $3SO_2 = 2SO_3$ S. —P. H. DORSETT, Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

(127) Insects on Maples.—The insect on the leaf of J. E. Jackson's maples at Gainesville, Ga., is the maple leaf plant louse (Pemphigus acerifolii,) and the scale insect on the bark from the same place is the so-called gloomy scale (Aspidiotus tenebricosus). The insects are entirely different. The leaf insect is not a serious enemy of the tree, and generally disappears toward the middle of Summer. It is preyed upon so extensively by Coccinellids and Syrphus flies that I have never known it to do any serious damage to a tree. The gloomy scale, however, is a more serious matter. I have seen large branches killed, and smaller limbs are rendered so brittle that they are readily broken off in rain storms and high winds. There is no perfect remedy, but if the trees are well cut back and sprayed during Winter with strong kerosene soap emulsion, or with whale oil soap and water, the insect will be reduced to a minimum. I will send you, by a later mail, a copy of Farmers' Bulletin No. 19, in which these insecticides are described.—L. O. HOWARD, Entomologist U. S. Department of Agriculture.

(128) Heating Questions.—We have two houses, each 123x24½ feet, running east and west. The south house is planted to roses, the north one to carnations. We wish to put a partition across the rose house, using the east end for roses and the west end for carnations. How many runs of 2-inch pipe will it take in the eastend to maintain 58 to 60 degrees nights, and 48 to 52 degrees in the west end? We have overhend system, hot water, and have not had good results. Pipes have a fall of 12 inches each way, and boiler is down in a 6-foot pit. Have we fall enough, and if so, with a good fire, should the water not stay hot with the drafts shut off? We contend that boiler is defective, and would be glad of your opinion; also if 75 tons of coal and coke is not an exorbitant consumption. Houses are well protected by boiler room extending clear across the west end and nearly 2 feet higher than roof. They are new, well built, with lapped glass, and only exposed to southeast winds. Are houses too long for good results from hot water?—four flows and twelve returns, all 2-inch in each house.—F. BROS.

—With a roof and walls of the usual size for a house of this width, about 16 runs of 2-inch pipe will be required for a rose house, and 12 or 13 should answer for carnations. The fall of the pipes is much greater than is needed if they are on a even slope, and if the top of the boiler is lower than the floor of the greenhouse there should be no difficulty in securing a good circulation. The water should remain hot as long as there is a fire in the boiler. Seventy-five tons of coal is nearly double the amount that would be required if hard coal is used, but is not an excessive quantity for some of the cheap grades of soft coal and coke. Houses of the above length can be readily heated with hot water, but when each flow supplies three returns about 300 feet of radiation is carried by each main. This is 50 per cent. more than is desirable, and two returns for each flow will be more satisfactory.—L. R. TAFT.

I have two houses, one 32x47 feet, and one 18x65 feet, which I wish to heat with a coil boiler. Would 80 feet of 2-inch pipe for coil be enough for 60 degrees F. in one house, and 50 in the other with the outside temperature 15 degrees below zero? If not how many would it take; also how many rows of 1½-inch pipe would it take in the 18x65-foot house for 60 degrees, and how many in the other for 50 degrees?—R. A. BEGALKE.

—The use of only 80 feet of 2-inch pipe in a coil for heating the two houses mentioned above would necessitate heavy firing and would result in the loss of a large amount of heat up the chimney. One hundred and twenty-five feet is the least that we would recommend, and for economy of labor and fuel there should be 175 feet. The 18x65-foot house will require twenty 1½-inch pipes if it is to be heated to 60 degrees, and 16 will be needed to heat the 32x47-foot house to 50 degrees, exclusive of mains. If three 2-inch flow pipes are used in each house the number of 1½-inch returns can be reduced by four.—L. R. TAFT.

We have three houses, two in roses and one in carnations, 18x70 feet, heated with steam, that we wish to change to hot water. The two rose houses are piped with nine runs of pipe, one 3-inch flow and eight 1½-inch returns. The carnation house has one return less, or one 3-inch flow and seven 1½-inch returns. The boiler is about a 35-horse power, two 8-inch return flues. What we wish to know is how much more pipe will it take to heat the place to 60 degrees in zero weather; also, how should the expansion tank be arranged to give best results? The return pipes have a fall of about 3½ feet.—HEATER.

—To heat 3 houses, measuring 18x70 feet to 60 degrees in zero weather, supposing that the roofs are of about the average slope and that there is no glass in the side walls, will require about 580 square feet of radiation. The rose houses which now have one 3-inch flow and eight 1½-inch returns will each require six additional 1¼-inch pipes, and the carnation house will need seven more pipes. Although five should be ample for providing the heat necessary for carnations. The expansion tank may be connected at almost any point. Ordinarily, it will be best to connect it with the highest point of the main supply pipe. The tank should be elevated as much as possible, without danger of freezing.—L. R. T.

(129) Plants for Name.—The variegated leaved plant is a form of Bishop's weed—Ægododium Podagraria. The shrub is Tamarix gallica.

Trade News.

In the store lines equable and seasonable weather helps a trade that inclines to slowness for most part, probably the more apparent, however, through the existing large lot of bloom, more than the demand calls for. Roses continue in a fair June quality; some later than the average, and now carnations are very plentiful. School commencements have helped a bit, and between such, and weddings, good business is looked for after this week.

The California poppy is a great display flower, and dresses up a window wonderfully, as seen in Palmer's, on trees, combined with white water lillies. Rebstock cks out his window show to fine effect with some good standard roses in bloom.

A visit to the newly built South Park or Botanic Garden conservatories, which at last are now in rapid process of arrangement for occupancy, shows that the stock so long housed closely in the old houses will have ample space for a while. The two smaller of the large dome-roofed structures are practically filled, while the fine crotons have been given head room ample in the connecting portions. It will require some weeks longer to finish putting stock in shape, when we hope to give other details. A good showing of orchids now attracts many admiring vistors.

Jottings.

Bedding plant trade moves on steadily, and to apparant satisfactory transactions in most quarters.

The store men are beginning to ease up. Will Palmer is at Cambridge Springs, and S. A. Anderson has been visiting friends in Rochester for some days.

Wm. Scott attended the Convention of Park Superintendents in Chicago last week. VIDI.

The Market Unchanged.

There has been very little change in the market conditions since our last report. A nice lot of stock is to be seen these days for this time of the year. Carnations are nearly as good as in Winter, with fine long stems. The flowers only bring $1 per 100 for the best, and were offered at 5c. per dozen, retail, in one store this week. Roses are of rather poor quality in Bride and Bridesmaid, and sell at from 2c. to 4c., with extra Kaiserin as high as 6c. Some few Harrisii are in that bring 6c.; also some candidum lilies, at 75c. per dozen stalks. The town is full of sweet peas; they bring 25c. to 40c. per 100. A few cornflowers, gladiolus, iris, marguerites, etc., are to be had, but they don't sell, except for special orders, which we are sorry to say are not very plentiful, as business is anything but good, the street car strike still being in force and no prospects of an early settlement.

Notes.

Several have left to attend the nurserymen's convention at Chicago this week, among them Frank A. Weber, of H. J. Weber & Sons' Nursery Co.; Jos. Scheutte, of Scheutte & Czarnoski; Geo. W. Salle, of South St. Louis, and Carew Sanders, of Sanders' Nursery. Local nurserymen all report a heavy business this Spring. C. C. S.

Cincinnati.

Trade Notes.

The past week has been very satisfactory from a business standpoint. Many roses and carnations have been in evidence, and have sold fairly well considering the time of year. Commencements and weddings are in vogue now, and every now and then we have prominent people die, but almost invariably the funeral notice reads, "Please omit flowers." This small sentence has a large meaning, and when the florist has his mind made up to do a large amount of funeral work the breath almost leaves his body when he reads those three words.

The News.

The fight for the office of park superintendent was consummated Saturday by the appointment of B. P. Critchell, to succeed R. H. Warder.

Gus. Sheible, who was foreman at the city greenhouses, died last Thursday, June 7, of consumption. He received the greater part of his floral education while employed by the late H. L. Sunderbruch. He was buried Saturday afternoon from his late residence on Walnut Hills, several of the craft attending the funeral.

Club Meeting.

Saturday evening, at the rooms of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, occurred the annual meeting and election of directors which resulted as follows: Wm. Murphy, Ben George, Frank Ball, R. Witterstaetter and Geo. S. Bartlett. The Board of Directors then adjourned and elected the following officers for the year: President, Wm. Murphy; vice-president, R. Witterstaetter; secretary, Geo. S. Bartlett; treasurer, F. Ball. It was decided to hold the next annual outing at Mt. Lookout Park, at the end of the Madison avenue car line, F. Ball and Ben George masters of ceremonies.

The next monthly meeting of the society will take place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Adrian, at Clifton, on July 12, at 2:30 p. m. All members are requested to be present, as a committee from the Fall festival will be there to tell what is expected of the florists.

The gold medal offered by Hon. John R. McLean, and won by R. Witterstaetter with Enquirer, was presented to Richard by President Murphy. Dick, of course, had a speech all prepared, which was listened to with a good deal of pleasure.

The greenhouses formerly owned and managed by W. C. Nolan were sold at auction June 12, at 2 p. m.

Visitors during the week: A. L. Randall, Chicago; Martin Renkauf, Philadelphia, and A. Haage, Montgomery, Ala., gardener for W. B. Paterson.

E. G. GILLETT.

Orange, N. J.

At the meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, on June 6, Henry Bird, of Newark, exhibited and explained the use of his new self-watering seed, spore, cutting and propagating pot, by special invitation of the society. The pot presents the appearance of the ordinary 10-inch flower pot, though, perhaps, a little shorter. A groove encircles the outside of the pot about 2 inches from the top. In this groove rests a piece of heavy woollen yarn connecting with the reservoir, and this furnishes the vehicle for introducing the water through a number of small holes, connecting grooves with the inside of pot, and which may be increased or decreased at will, rendering the amount of moisture by the further raising or lowering of the reservoir subject entirely to the control of operator through the agency of capillary attraction. It accomplishes a result hitherto unattained by any former system. Under the old method of surface watering, spores which are so small as to be invisible to the naked eye, as well as very fine seeds, such as azalea, begonia, cineraria, rhododendron, etc., are often, if not entirely, destroyed, washed or floated away with the water; and those that grow, if any, come up very unevenly and irregularly. Not infrequently the action of the water on the soil, no matter how fine the spray, compacts and hardens the surface, rendering it impossible for the seeds or young germs to get through; as a result the seedsman is often scored for selling old or worthless seeds, while the real cause of failure is found elsewhere. The invention is designed to obviate all this trouble.

The judges gave the pot the highest award in the power of the society, and upon their recommendation the society gave it their unanimous indorsement.

The floral feature of the evening was a fine exhibit of President Carnot roses, grown by George Smith in the open. He received the highest certificate.

The balance of the evening was spent in reports of committees and finishing of business prior to the Summer vacation, after providing for a representation on the part of the society at the exhibition of the Rose and S. A. F. Societies.

Messrs. C. W. Ward and Hitchings & Co. received a vote of thanks for valuable assistance in the distribution of plants lately made by the society to the school children.

The meeting adjourned until September 5. A social reunion will occur on that date.

The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

State of Trade.

There is not much change in the market conditions. Stock is plentiful, and except for real fancy flowers a great deal of it goes at very low prices. First-class roses are becoming scarce, and sell at good prices for the time of year; the rates for ordinary stock, however, are low. Several of the large growers are cutting from young roses; the flowers, although not extra long in stem, are generally of good color. The varieties embrace Beauty, Kaiserin, Meteor and Bridesmaid, the latter suffering most in the way of color.

Carnations are still abundant, a few fancy red and Bradt sell at $3, but $2 may be considered high-water mark, while standards bring $1, and after the first pick, 60c. per 100 in big lots, down to as low as 5c. to 10c. per bunch.

Peonies are still an important factor in this market, and will continue so all the month, on account of cold-storage stock, tens of thousands of bunches being so treated. The best growers always bunch in dozens and closely paper the flowers when the outer petals begin to expand, whether the blooms are sent direct to the wholesaler or put in cold storage. This preserves the flowers in shape. They sell at from 25c. to 50c. per dozen, the price depending upon the quality of the variety. Common stock, which comes in unwrapped, realizes from 10c. to 20c.

Sweet peas are now abundant. There is but little variety, and some of very long and fancy kinds have sold the past week at 75c. per 100; 20c. to 40c. being the general price. The first Lilium auratum are in.

Retail dealers expect to do a very good business the most of this month, cheap prices allowing a large margin of profit, on big orders.

Park and Outdoor Art Association.

The following are the officers elected for the ensuing year; L. E. Holden, Cleveland, Ohio, president; John C. Olmsted and E. J. Parker, vice-presidents, and members of council; Warren H. Manning, Boston, secretary; and O. C. Simonds, treasurer. The place of meeting for 1901 will be Milwaukee, Wis.

Mr. J. Frank Foster's paper on "Park Roads" was a good one, showing thought and knowledge of the subject handled; S. M. Millard's, on "Art in Landscape," was a fine literary effort; the Rev. J. A. Roudthaler's paper, on "The Influence of Public Parks Upon the Morality of the Community," was grandly given, and highly appreciated by the members.

Round About Town.

Sam J. Pearce, of Clybourn avenue, will, as soon as he can get his benches ready, plant 25,000 chrysanthemums. After these come off lilies take their place, and as these again are disposed of, bedding plants. In one house which was occupied by lilies for Easter, he now has a fine lot of Kaiseria roses, starting with a second crop of flowers. Sam says his business for Decoration week was $500 ahead of any year he ever had.

William Scott, of Buffalo, was in the city last week, in the interest of the Pan-American Exhibition.

The Stollery Bros. have made a good thing out of their window box trade. Their general home business is increasing nicely. George is planning a trip to England with James Hartshorne, if berths can be obtained, the end of June or early in July. He expects to be back in time for the S. A. F. Convention. The Chicago bowlers don't want to lose George's help.

Frank Garland, of Desplaines, is building a new greenhouse, 24x150 feet, to be planted with chrysanthemums, afterward bulbs.

Richard Donovan is sending in to Piepgrass good plants of the old hydrangea.

J. A. Budlong has a lot of American Beauty replanted that will be in full flower, just right for the graduation trade. The first crop of young, early planted Meteor is also just coming in.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting some well colored long-stemmed Beauty.

John Fuhrman, 1651 N. Clark, has quite a batch of belated lilies which he finds very useful in funeral work.

Adam Zender, on the Ridge, is building three houses, each 20 x186 feet.

Demand shipped Monday, in one order, 10,000 ox-eye daisies.

Weinhoeber had 250 orders, some small, of course, for one school, and used at a wedding 6,500 sweet peas.

C. W. Northrup, of La Grange, has been sending in extra fine sweet peas.

Visitors the past week were: Joseph Reeve, Walter W. Adams and E. M. Jerauld, all with J. C. Murrny, Peoria, Ills.; W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, on his way West; J. E. Button, Denver, Col.; A. Forbes, of Peter Henderson & Co., and Miss Headworth, of Vaughan's seed store, New York; Carew Sanders and Ostertag Bros., St. Louis, Mo., the latter on their way East, and George Faber, of Kankakee, en route to Europe. AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALEXANDER ROGERS, Chicago, Ill., President; ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, First Vice-President; F. W. BOLGIANO, Washington, Second Vice-President; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer.

Echoes from the Convention.

Among the many good things heard in the corridor are the following as regards the state of trade throughout the country:

Allan, John H. Seed Company, Picton, Ont., report very large orders and the condition of the trade most favorable, but the prospects for the coming crops very poor. In some districts too much rain, in others too little. There appears to be a series of extremes in all parts of the country of their seed-growing sections.

W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, Ill., report a very satisfactory trade, both in increase of business and increase of profits.

Frank Barteldes, of F. Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kan., is always jolly, good natured and of good cheer. He is not only happy in regard to the state of business, but endeavors to make everybody else happy. Judging from his standpoint trade could not be better.

Buffalo Seed Warehouse, Buffalo, N. Y., L. H. Manly, manager, report a healthy steady increase in their business with satisfactory profits. This is a growing house, evidently in the race to win.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., says business is steadily increasing and prospects all that could be desired.

Jos. Breck & Sons, Boston, Mass., report trade in a satisfactory condition, an increase being noted, particularly in the wholesale department.

Alfred J. Brown, Grand Rapids, Mich., says our prospects are good, business increasing. Our output of seeds is suffering from the weather. Too much water in some places, too little in others.

C. S. Clark, Wakeman, O., is the grower for the trade generally. The steady increase in business all over the country proportionately benefits him.

Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield, Conn., tell us that in all lines of their business there has been a steady, healthy increase, the outlook being good. It is yet too early to speak of their growing crops.

L. J. Coryell, Oshwa, Ont., who is exclusively a pea and bean grower, reports more business than seed on the outlook of the unfavorable crop.

S. G. Courteen, Milwaukee, Wis., is in the same condition as the rest of the pea and bean growers.

Currie Brothers, Milwaukee, Wis., say they have had a remarkably fine trade. They do not belong to that class known as the "Western rushers," but confine themselves wholly to the first-class retail market gardeners' trade. Their object is not to sell quantity, but quality.

F. H. Ebeling, Syracuse, N. Y., has no complaints to make, and from the appearances in his store he has no reason to make any. Business brisk, profits good.

W. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., reports a healthy, steady increase of business; like all other pea and bean growers he is very anxious about the coming crops, because of the present climatic conditions, which are very unfavorable.

The Cleveland Seed Company, Cape Vincent, N. Y., S. M. Pease, general manager, reports business in a satisfactory condition, steadily increasing, and is very hopeful.

The Illinois Seed Company, Chicago, Ill., have added vegetable seeds to their extensive business in grass and grain seeds, and report trade very satisfactory.

The Iowa Seed Company, Des Moines, Ia., Mr. Page, manager, reports business very satisfactory and a large increase over last year. They are beginning to get more satisfactory prices.

Johnson & Stokes, Philadelphia, Penn., say business is generally very good.

A. C. Kendel, Cleveland, O., needed not to say one word, his countenance only too plainly indicated a satisfactory business.

S. F. Leonard, Chicago, Ill., has arisen, "Phoenix-like," from the flames that destroyed his warehouse last year. His new establishment, in Monroe street, is commodious and well adapted for his largely increasing business. His shipping facilities are admirable.

Mangeldorf Brothers' Company, Atchison, Kan., are satisfied with the growth of their business; they say that to go West is one of the secrets of success.

L. L. May & Co., St. Paul, Minn., were too busy to attend the convention, but not too busy to say that the business outlook is all that could be desired.

J. M. McCullough Sons, Cincinnati, O., state that trade is very satisfactory in most lines. They are growing not only in the volume of their business, but in the profits.

J. Chas. McCullough, Cincinnati, O., can say ditto to every point of the above.

J. G. Peppard, Kansas City, Mo., like all other Western dealers, is cheerful and happy, which means good business.

J. B. Rice & Co., Cambridge, N. Y. Jerome is ever hopeful and good natured. This year he is particularly so, the margins of profit having materially increased as well as the volume of business.

J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb., says that there is no question as to the volume of business; the only question is supply, which at this date is a little too early to predict, as their vine seeds are not yet all planted.

Alexander Rodgers, Chicago, Ill., is the "Mark Tapley" of the seed business, always jolly, no matter whether the profits are large or small; but it is very easy to see that trade is perfectly satisfactory.

Rush Park Seed Company, Independence, Ia., whose business has been changed quite often of late as to the management and condition, report a very excellent business and are well satisfied with the situation.

J. A. Salzer Seed Company, La Crosse, Wis., gave us to understand they were too busy to attend the convention, and that business this year had been unusually good.

Corneli-Schisler Seed Company, St. Louis, Mo., report a steady increase of trade and everything very satisfactory.

R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill., is one of the few firms doing a mail business almost exclusively, but reports a large increase, more particularly over the past year.

Steele Briggs Seed Company, Toronto, Canada, report business in a very satisfactory condition.

Frank Seberger, seed merchant, although not long established in business, says that prospects are bright and business constantly increasing.

Trumbull Seed Company, Kansas City, Mo., report a steadily-increasing trade.

J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, Ill., has had a much better business this year than last, particularly in the wholesale department, and the trend of the times is for a more profitable trade than in the past, and he is in no wise discouraged.

James Vick & Sons' Company, Rochester, N. Y., report their business this year very satisfactory.

T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va.—The senior member of this firm no longer takes an active part in the management of the business, but regards it as one of his specials. The junior members are wideawake, and report trade to be in a very healthy and prosperous condition.

J. Steckler Seed Company, New Orleans, are successors to the late Richard Frotchser. This was Mr. Steckler's first appearance at the convention. He reports a very prosperous business, and will undoubtedly keep up the enviable reputation held by the late Mr. Frotchser.

It was impossible for want of time to have a personal conversation with a large number of the members present, but it is plain to be seen that the seed business in general is on the line of improvement. Many regrets were expressed that some in the trade should have wantonly cut prices, for which there was no excuse, particularly as during the past year there was an opportunity for an increase. We believe that all who are doing a strictly seed business, either in bulk or in package, have had a good season. If any have suffered to a very great extent, it is those who confine themselves to the mail trade, and many of these seem to be well satisfied, while the few remark that business is no better than it ought to be.

Upon their return from the boat ride on the Hiuda and visit to the controlling works at the terminus of the drainage canal, the members of the American Seed Trade Association gathered in the parlors of the Grand Pacific, and President Albert McCullough summoned before them with great solemnity Mr. Alexander Rodgers, the retiring president of the association. The President having presented himself before the august tribunal of ladies and gentlemen, Mr. J. E. Northrup stepped forward and produced a handsome gold-mounted cane, accompanying its presentation with the following poetical address:

The members here present—about fifty-six—
Have selected, from various walking-sticks
This one, of rare and tasteful design,
To give to our President of old '99.

'Tis the wish of each one in presenting this gift,
(Towards the purchase of which we all gave a lift),
That your life may be long and full of true joy,
That your years may be happy and without alloy.

But whate'er the weather, be it sunshine or rain,
May you find firm support in this beautiful cane!

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN

Echoes from the Nurserymen's Convention.

It is generally conceded that the convention held in Chicago last week was the best attended in many years, some asserting the best since the florists started a separate society in 1881, drawing away florists that in former days met with the parent body. One of the strong traits of the nurserymen's convention is close attention to business, with a large share of the time taken up between meetings in business talk and trade. There is no doubt but this is an important factor in bringing them together.

An unusually good feeling was manifested over the improved trade conditions existing among nurserymen this year, and, prospectively, for the coming one.

In the prospectus given out, which N. H. Albaugh, in his reminiscences evidently followed, it was stated that the present was the silver, or 25th, year of the society's existence. This, however, is not the fact. Did Mr. Albaugh get mixed up in the same way as the twentieth century correspondents awhile back all over the country? This was the twenty-fifth convention, as one was held at the society's formation in 1876, but we are now in the twenty-fourth year of the life of the society, and will not reach the silver anniversary until 1901. The society's first conception was at a meeting of the Northern Illinois Horticultural Society, in January, 1876. A committee of arrangement was appointed then, consisting of Dr. John E. Ennis, of Clinton, Ia.; J. S. Stickney, Wauwatosa, Wis.; A. R. Whitney, Franklin Grove; Edgar Sanders, Chicago; D. Wilmot Scott, Galena; S. K. Scofield, Freeport, and Louis Elsworth, Naperville, all of Illinois. A call was issued for a meeting on June 14, 1876, in Chicago, and the society was then formed. The membership for that year, the report shows, was 62. Of these J. J. Harrison, Painesville, Ohio; Edgar Sanders, P. S. Peterson and J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago; T. S. Hubbard, Fredonia, N. Y., and Z. K. Jewett, Sparta, Wis., are now the only names without change marked in the Badge Book, 25 years after. From the 62 members given in the report in 1876 the society grew apace, till in 1885 we find 367 bona-fide members. The meeting for that year was also held in Chicago, the Society of American Florists being born, or organized, in the same city, its first convention being held in Cincinnati, Ohio. In those times a large number of ladies attended, who were made honorary members, at the meeting of the nurserymen held at Washington, D. C., in 1886, 48 being so enrolled. Of the 25 conventions 11 have been held in Chicago, other cities honored being: 1878, Cleveland, Ohio; 1879 and 1881 missing; 1882, Rochester; 1883, St. Louis; 1886, Washington; 1888, Detroit; 1890, New York; 1891, Minneapolis; 1892, Atlanta; 1894, Niagara Falls; 1895, Indianapolis; 1897, St. Louis; 1898, Omaha. It is a little singular that so far no one has been able to furnish reports, or a synopsis of the work done by the society, for the years 1878-1879 and 1881. We have a prospectus and call only for the Cleveland meeting in 1878. Who can furnish the "missing links" so as to complete the society's history?

The question box was, in this meeting, not much of a success.

The secretary proposed to struggle for a membership of at least 500.

It was a good move to confine discussion to a five-minute limit, no one to speak more than twice.

The exhibits were few. A new evergreen from Baker Bros, Fort Worth, Texas, called "Rosedale Hybrid," said to be a cross between the golden Arbor vitæ and Retinospora squarrosa, looks like a very useful thing for florists. It has the same dense, compact, upright and uniform growth of the golden Arbor vitæ, with the color and texture of the retinospora, except being soft and feathery to the touch. The color is a bright pea-green. Joseph Heinl had Juniperus compacta, so called, which is also apparently useful for florists for piazza and other decorative work.

N. W. Hale made an off-hand talk on "the retail nursery business," bringing out many excellent points. According to him the one-time despised "tree peddler" is now looked upon with less disfavor, and is a very necessary disseminator of trees and shrubs.

A number of the nurserymen joined the seedsmen on the invitation of J. C. Vaughan, to help fill up the tally-ho coaches on Friday on the trip through the parks. ESS.

The nursery and greenhouse establishment of W. A. Manda are increasing in dimensions yearly. Last season seven acres were added to the property, which at this time is all planted. Ten more acres have been added this season, making a total of twenty acres. The recently acquired ground adjoins the D. L. & W. Railway, and also connects with the rest of the nursery. A stream of water, which runs through the center, makes it an ideal spot for the business.

There are many interesting things to be seen on Mr. Manda's grounds at all times, but just now those commanding most attention are the hybrid Wichuraiana roses, which are in full flower. For the private place these roses have already established a value for themselves, particularly for covering rockwork, dead trees, stumps, or for trellis work. Being as they are, almost mildew proof, nearly evergreen, perfectly hardy, requiring no protection whatever, and also being very rapid growers, their value for outdoor work can hardly be overestimated. The gem of the collection is undoubtedly the one named Pink Pearl. This variety is the result of crossing Meteor with R. Wichuraiana, the former variety furnishing the pollen. Although it has not yet been tested thoroughly as a pot rose for forcing, the general habit of the plant, together with the size and profuseness of its flowers, leaves no room for doubt that it will be an acquisition for commercial growers, especially for Easter work. The individual blooms are very double and are of heavy substance, which gives it the best of keeping qualities. In size they range from 2½ to 3 inches. The color is a pleasing pink, with the center petals a shade deeper than the outer ones. The foliage is dark and heavy, almost leathery, and the wood very short-jointed. The hybridizer informed us that improvement in foliage has been his chief aim, the idea being to produce a variety that would be mildew proof. The leathery texture of the foliage on Pink Pearl would indicate that perfection along this line had almost been reached.

Another new variety is Improved Pink Roamer. This is decidedly better, both in size and color, than Pink Roamer. Being a single flower, however, its value lies as a garden variety, rather than for commercial purposes.

Manda's Triumph, double white, and South Orange Perfection, double blush white, are both good subjects for pot purposes, and are useful commercially. Evergreen Gem, as its name implies, holds its foliage throughout the Winter. The flower is white and has the delicious fragrance of the old sweet briar. Improved Universal Favorite is unique in its coloring, being almost a lilac shade.

There are also several new varieties, now flowering for the first time, among which is a white one of a distinct anemone type.

A ramble through the grounds reveals many things of interest. There is a fine batch of blue spruce, own root stock, that are perfect in coloring. The comparison between these and the grafted stock is very much in favor of those on their own roots, they being superior both in shape and coloring. Altogether there are 300 varieties of coniferous plants on the grounds. Japan iris are represented by over fifty varieties, which are just beginning to flower, showing many choice specimens.

In the greenhouses there are many novelties, particularly in dracænas. Stock of several varieties (as yet unnamed) is being worked up, and next Spring will see some of them on the market. Among the broad-leaved ones are several that show extremely rich coloring, blended types of the rubra and terminalis showing very rich.

Asparagus Sprengerii is grown largely, the basket method being mostly used. Asparagus decumbens is proving a very free grower, and for many purposes is more decorative than A. Sprengerii.

There are also many choice things in begonias of the decorative type, chiefly B. Harlequin, which shows a different variation on every leaf. Among the new unnamed kinds there are some especially fine dark leaved kinds.

Palms are grown extensively. In addition to a block of houses that are filled with 2-year-old plants, there are 50,000 seedlings potted and located in frames. Of orchids there is also a vast collection, the most important of which (to the owner) is the collection of naturally hybridized lælias. As these come into flower, Mr. Manda has them reproduced in water colors by an accomplished artist, and the collection of paintings already numbers fifty or sixty.

From South Orange a twenty-minutes' drive brought us to the grounds of Dr. Mandeville, where Malcolm McRorie has been head gardener for so long. Mr. McRorie gave us the run of the strawberry patch, and the many fine varieties were duly sampled. We were also shown what the hybrid Wichuraiania roses can accomplish in a short time. Here were plants, planted at the foot of decayed fruit trees, two years ago last fall, that are now 12 or 15 feet in height, having covered the old trees. They are a mass of bloom at the present time. No protection has been afforded, nor was the soil specially prepared for them. In the conservatories everything is in good order, the collection of crotons being fine, as also are the palms and tree ferns, some of which are very large specimens. Maidenhair fern is very well done, Adiantum Farleyense and the hardy Farleyense being specially good. Out-door roses are just past their best, but they are still a magnificent sight.

Near to Monntain Station we found the tea garden of Kushibiki & Aral. Plants are displayed on tables under canvas covers, and the older the plant the more beautiful it is supposed to be. Here are some subjects said to be over a thousand years old, which must be very valuable. We did not explore the garden thoroughly, as it was too late in the day, but intend making another visit in the near future, when we can say more about the many curiosities in plant life seen here.

(129) A Color Guide.—J. R.—The work you want is "Color Guide for Florists," by Kohn, price $1.25. It can be supplied through this office.

(130) Scale on Palm Leaf.—F. J. A. S.—The palm leaf is affected with the ordinary black scale, and it can be removed by dipping in or syringing plant thoroughly with fir tree oil, diluted according to directions which are on the packages. Germol, another insecticide, is also recommended for scale. A prominent grower testified to its merits in the removal of scale in these columns only a short time ago.

(131) Heating.—I have one house used for carnations and bedding stock that I carry, or wish to carry, at a night temperature of 50 degrees, using two 2-inch overhead flows. How many return runs 1¼-inch pipe will I require? The house has 4-feet board wall, is 12 feet to ridge, glass in one gable. House No. 2 is 72x25 feet and is a forcing house that I wish to carry at 65 degrees night temperature, using 2-inch overhead flows. How many 1¼-inch returns will I require? The house is ¾-span glass in one gable, 20 inches of glass under south gutter 13 feet to ridge. Houses to be heated by hot water. My boiler is tapped to 4-inch pipe. Will that (having 1 flow and 1 return) be large enough to carry these houses? The boiler is a 30-horse tubular, of the economic type (or return flue internally fired). How many houses would this boiler be capable of heating? I am changing from 4-inch pipe, and do not want to go astray.—C. B. Husler.

—As the size of the carnation house is not given a definite answer cannot be supplied to the first question, but if about 20 by 72 feet it can be heated by twelve 1¼-inch returns, in addition to the two 2-inch flows. If much longer than this it will be well to use three 2-inch or two 2½-inch flow pipes and eight 2-inch returns. The other house should have three 2½-inch flow pipes, and it will be best to use seventeen 2-inch returns, although good results can be obtained if 25 1¼-inch pipes are used as proposed, provided the boiler is well below the level of the coils. If well up to its horse-power the boiler should readily carry 3,000 feet of radiation, which is probably double the amount in the two houses.—L. R. T.

POLLINATION IN ORCHARDS. By S. W. Fletcher; Bulletin 181, March, 1900, Cornell University, Agricultural Experiment Stations, Ithaca, N. Y.—The bulletin recommends when setting out new orchards do not plant a solid block of each variety, but mix them intelligently. If established orchards are unfruitful, because of self-sterility, it may be profitable to put a few grafts of another variety on each tree. Keep fruit trees well nourished, but do not stimulate them to an overvigorous growth.

NOTES ON INSECTS AND PLANTS. Bulletin 61, March 1900, Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, Orono, Me.—Contains notes on the specimens of insects and weed plants sent to the station by correspondents in 1899; also a full account of the brown-tail moth.

Bulletin 66, of the Hatch Experiment Station of Massachusetts Agricultural College, contains some useful information on Variety Tests of Fruits; Fertilizers for Fruits; Thinning Fruits and Pruning; also a Spraying Calendar.

FRUIT DISEASES FOUND ALONG THE HUDSON. Bulletin 167, New York Agricultural Experiment Station, Geneva, N. Y.—An interesting pamphlet. The most important fact connected with this survey is the discovery that there exists throughout the entire Hudson Valley below Albany a destructive cane blight of currants caused by a sterile fungus about which but little is known.

COMMON DISEASES AND INSECTS INJURIOUS TO FRUITS. Bulletin 170, same Station.—Gives a concise account of the common diseases and insects most injurious to cultivated fruits in New York State, and up-to-date directions for fighting them most efficiently and economically. An exhaustive index is also furnished.

EXPERIMENT STATION WORK. Farmers' Bulletin 114, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.—Among the subjects dealt with are: Influence of Salt and Similar Substances on Soil Moisture; Extra Early Potatoes; Rotting of Cranberries; Chestnuts; Crude Oil as an Insecticide, etc.

GRASSES AND FORAGE PLANTS, COOPERATIVE EXPERIMENTS WITH.—This subject is treated upon by Dr. P. Beveridge Kennedy in Bulletin 22, Division of Agrostology, Department of Agriculture, Washington.

INVESTIGATION AND IMPROVEMENT OF AMERICAN GRAPES. By Mr. T. V. Munson. Bulletin, 56, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Austin, Tex.—A most valuable publication, giving the results of the author's experiments and research extending over many years, classified lists of grapes by families, and other important information. Profusely illustrated.

Grand Rapids.

We have been having glorious weather of late—warmer days, cool nights, with a shower thrown in just often enough to make things grow finely. It is ideal carnation weather. Chrysanthemum planting is now well under way; there are also several violet houses planted. Grand Rapids intends to be right in the swim with violets this Winter; in fact, the craft has actually gone violet crazy.

Roses are of poor quality, there being not much first grade stock on the market. Poor flowers of any kind, particularly roses, find their way to the dump. Outdoor flowers are hurting the sale of the greenhouse product.

Commencement exercises are using up large quantities of stock, but the supply is ample for any demand that may be made on it; shipping trade continues very satisfactory. As soon as commencements are over and the resort season is open, any of the fraternity can take a well-earned rest, provided he is not building too many new greenhouses.

Prices remain as per last quotations.

Trade Notes.

The heaviest of the Spring rush is now past, although everyone is still very busy and likely to continue so for the next few days. Careful inquiries as to the result of the Spring trade in bedding stock clearly indicate that this has been the best season for several years. There was no noticeable surplus of stock of any kind. One feature of the season is the very largely increased demand for window boxes, and a corresponding decline in the popularity of the hanging basket. If the growers can keep the boxes of sufficient size to prevent them drying out too quickly there seem to be almost unlimited possibilities in this line.

The past week in other lines has been uneventful. There has been a few weddings, but in no case has there been any very elaborate florists' display. Carnations are still good and plentiful. Roses are abundant, but poor in quality; outdoor stock is coming in in large quantities, and can be bought from the "habitants" on the various markets at ridiculous prices.

Club News.

The meeting on Monday night was unusually well attended. The chrysanthemum show committee reported that the usual check for $100 toward the funds had been received from our honorary president, Lord Strathcona. Several other smaller subscriptions have been received, and altogether there is a bright outlook for the Fall show.

The annual picnic was decided on, and will be held at Isle Gros Bois, about the middle of July. A committee of four was appointed to complete arrangements.

Horticultural Society.

A meeting of the directors was held Monday night, to complete arrangements for the first of a series of Summer exhibitions, which will be held in the beautiful grounds of Mrs. J. H. R. Molson, "Piedmont," on Saturday afternoon, June 16. A couple of sections are devoted to fruit, the balance of the list is filled with perennials. Three trophies will be awarded to the winner of highest aggregate number of points. D. Williamson and F. C. Smith are the judges appointed. The judges for the society's Cottage Garden competition will be Messrs. W. M. Ramsey and C. A. Smith. This class is judged twice—once in July and again in August. Several valuable trophies are given in each of the three sections.

Notes.

Our old and esteemed friend, John S. Murray, is now rapidly recovering from a paralytic stroke, with which he has been recently afflicted.

Mr. Gray, of Toronto, representing Messrs. Macmillan, the publishers of Professor Bailey's "Cyclopedia of Horticulture," is at present with us. He reports a great demand for the book, and, indeed, it would be surprising if it were otherwise, if we may judge from the small portion Mr. Gray carries as a sample.

Monsieur Pinoteau, Chevelier of Horticulture, France, Montreal's City gardener, who is just starting for a three months' trip to France, was the recipient of many kind wishes for a "bon voyage" at the club, Monday night.

Obituary.

It is with the deepest regret that we have to record the death of Miss Mary Perrin, another estimable daughter of our old friend and member, Mr. John Perrin. The young lady was of a most pleasant and cheerful disposition, and will be sorely missed. B.

Denver.

At the second meeting of the Denver Floral Club, held June 15, plans were made for the Fall flower show. Competition will be open to the State and Eastern growers, not only in the chrysanthemum line, but in all branches of floriculture. M. Bloy, Frank Rushmore and A. M. Lewis were appointed a committee to arrange for the social welfare of the club and the entertainment of visiting florists during the exhibition, which will be given the first or second week of November. The chrysanthemum show will probably be given at City Park, the Park Board having extended to the club the use of the grounds and hot houses.

Chicago.

Club Meeting.

As the meeting, Friday, June 15, was the last before Summer vacation, a smoker and refreshments were provided. The committee on co-operative coal purchase was also ready to report, so the combination brought out the best gathering in a long time. W. N. Rudd, for this committee, announced the receipt of 47 replies to postals sent out, with a total of 24,000 tons of coal called for. Some of the larger firms had already contracted for 30,000 tons, and the estimate easily indicated that at least 100,000 tons are used by the florists tributary to Chicago. Out of this only 270 tons of hard coal are employed; 2,755 tons of smokeless soft coal, the balance being Illinois and Indiana, a poorer grade, costing at the present time from $2.35 to $2.45 per ton, as against the smokeless at $3.60, which rate, with extra switching, is often increased to many florists. After considerable discussion, on the recommendation of Mr. Rudd, who thought nothing was to be gained now with prospects of lower rates inside of 60 days, the committee was continued and will communicate to the consumers later. On the question being asked of Joseph Helnl, of Jacksonville, what kind of coal he used, he stated Springfield or Danville, costing him $1.65 per ton. One of the Miller Brothers, of Terre Haute, Ind., stated they wagoned their coal direct from the mines, paying 50c. per load of about 2½ tons each.

J. Austin Shaw being called on, gave an interesting account of doings of the florists' clubs in Eastern cities, what the New York Club was preparing in the way of entertaining visiting clubs at the S. A. F. Convention, in August next, winding up with the work being done at the Pan-American Exhibition, and warning the Chicagoans that if they expected to capture the convention for their city in 1901 they would have to come with a heavy delegation, as in the East it was in the air to go to Buffalo.

Carew Sanders, of St. Louis, told that the florists of his city expected the convention in 1903, and on the question being put to him would the St. Louis boys help Chicago for 1901 if the latter aided St. Louis for 1903, he said they would.

G. L. Grant, for the Committe on Transporation to New York, reported that there was every promise of good rates being obtained, and a lively feeling was manifested to make up a big delegation.

Vaughan's Greenhouses.

A trip to Western Springs is always a treat. Mr. Wilson reports an excellent season. They are just planting two houses, 6,000 plants, to single stem chrysanthemums. They are growing the show plants in the house this year, and the stock is looking well; two grafted specimens have already 50 varieties taken on each plant. The sales of Boston fern are enormous. Mr. Wilson is preparing specimen plants in from 6-inch up to 12-inch pots for the Fall trade. Asparagus decumbens is likely to be the coming favorite among florists. The show zonal standard geraniums are just now ready to form heads, the dwarf ones being very sturdy, and in 9-inch pots. The palms are very healthy; the collection includes a fine lot just in from Germany.

Some Fine Pæonies.

P. S. Peterson & Son's pæony field has been a blaze of color and a great attraction all last week. The firm has many new varieties of its own raising. The Drop White, of our market, is old Festiva, with a bright blotch in the center. W. Peterson has two improved forms. Marie Lemoine, Reubens, Water Lily, Alice Crosse and Rosea alba were very noticeable at time of our visit. The firm has 150 new varieties planted on trial.

State of Trade.

There is no complaint regarding trade just now. Friday and Saturday of last week were really good days, and this week business is expected to be better; in fact, early in the week there were not enough carnations sent in to supply the demand. This is partly owing to the big growers not caring to pick close and get prices too low. It is safe to say an order for 100,000 carnations could be filled in 24 hours' notice, say at $10 per 1,000.

Roses are coming in a good deal mildewed, and first-class stock is none too plentiful. Pæonies will sell well all this week, although many varieties are now over on the outside. There is good call this year for a yellow Iris, at 50c. per bunch. Quantities of Cypripedium spectabile, from the swamps of Indiana, the finest seen in years, sell at 50c. per dozen. Bunches of white clematis are also abundant, as are all kinds of flowers of the season. Sweet peas are plentiful, except choice colors, and whites are often short. Lilies and callas, now they are scarce, are in demand again, at $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen.

New Buildings.

N. Wilter and Wm. L. Thill will be new beginners for next year. They have 30,000 carnations afield, purchased of Peter Reinberg. They will build, at 800 Wesley avenue, South Evanston, a range of nine houses, each 26x150 feet, heated by steam.

Wieland & Risch will also build 60,000 to 75,000 feet addition to the present plant.

Round About.

The rose garden in Wooded Island this year is a picture. The mild Winter and cool days for June is the supposed cause. It was estimated 50,000 people viewed the garden last Sunday. It is a grand memorial of World's Fair days, and Mr. Kants may well be proud of his success in growing hardy h. p. and June roses. We will give full particulars next week.

A. De Thier has succeeded J. Jenson as superintendent of Humboldt Park.

A white pompon chrysanthemum, in full flower, was on exhibition at Beamud's on Monday, said to have been raised from seed by a private gardener in the city. Ess.

The Market.

Business still remains good in this city, and stock is moving nicely. Roses are beginning to show the effects of mildew in some localities, but from others are coming in clean and in fine condition; 4c. is the ruling price on the best grade, while seconds and thirds sell at 2c. and 3c. Carnations are holding out nicely, at $1 per 100 for ordinary, and $1.25 to $1.50 for good. Fancy stock, strictly speaking, is out of the market. Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities, and 25c. is about top notch for them. Some extra good pæonies in pink and white bring 3c. to 4c. Lily of the valley sells well at 4c.

The trade for school commencements and weddings this month has been far in advance of former years.

The News.

The work of Park Superintendent Critchell is already beginning to show. In Garfield Park he has taken the various collections of palms, which have heretofore remained in the city greenhouses, and planted them all through the park, giving same quite a tropical effect. He is also carrying out the same idea in the other small parks in the city.

George & Allan bought the W. C. Nolan place, which was sold at auction on the 12th.

E. Hall, of Clyde, Ohio, is in the city selling his wheel hoe. This is one of the inventions of the age for keeping weeds down. A man, with this hoe, in a carnation field in one day can do more work than three men in the old way, and can do it much better and with more ease.

Geo. S. Bartlett informs me he is having a fine sale on his bone flour. This shows that the craft knows a good thing when they use it.

Carnations in the field never looked better than they do now in this locality. We have had plenty of seasonable rains, and all outdoor stock is in elegant shape.

Miss White, of Anderson & White, Lexington, Ky., was a caller this week.

E. G. GILLETT.

Kansas City, Mo.

An Excellent Example.

Too much cannot be said in favor of the movement started by the Kansas City Times to beautify the city lawns and present a good appearance for the coming National Democratic Convention, July 4, and as there is the solid inducement of $1,600, in 40 premiums, it has had the effect of creating flower beds and the placing of shrubs in places where their presence was hitherto unknown. This movement, as one can readily see, will not stop with the season of 1900, and to the florist it means a great deal. Our customers who usually content themselves with two dozen plants of as many different varieties, have found that they cannot attain the desired effect with this conglomerate selection, and in consequence we see many fine beds of solid colors. Some very fine terrace work may be observed, and, though carried out by amateurs, it would do credit to the craft.

Jottings.

The greenhouses present a deserted appearance, and many of the florists are breaking ground for new structures. A. F. Barbe has two large houses nearly completed, and is swelling his range to one of the first in Kansas City. S. Murray has improved his city conservatory and store. Stakes have been driven preparatory to building a first-class range, on private grounds, in Hyde Park.

The demand for bedding plants and shrubbery was about 30 per cent. over last year's; and "experienced help" has been the cry from many florists for the work on private grounds. D.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its first June show on the evening of the 14th. The quality of the exhibits was excellent, strawberries in particular being very fine. Wm. Turner, A. Taafe and Wm. Scott were the principal prize-takers. Mr. Scott and H. Nichol were ahead in the rose classes. Numerous special exhibits were shown in vegetables, fruits, etc., all being suitably recognized by the society.

The Lord & Burnham Co. Bowling Trophy.

We present herewith an excellent photograph of the Lord & Burnham cup. This trophy is to be offered by the New York Florists' Club at the annual S. A. F. O. H. tournament for competition between the various clubs, the club making the highest score in the three games to hold it for one year, and the cup to be offered for competition at the next annual tournament. Should the same club win it twice in succession it becomes the property of that club.

Ottawa.

Moderately warm days and cool nights have been the order of the weather for the past week, and it is giving the carnations a fine send off. Two weeks ago Ottawa was treated to a genuine hail storm, which did considerable damage to everything planted out. C. Scrim lost about 150 lights of glass; fortunately the storm was of short duration.

The Spring plant business is about over; in fact, it has to be, for most of the florists are sold out. This has been the best season that Ottawa has ever had; and that in face of the big fire. Prices have been good. There has been an immense demand for scarlet geraniums and the call for veranda boxes has increased nearly a hundred per cent.

The cut-flower business continues very fair and the supply good; but as all are now planting roses these will soon be short enough.

Owing to a backward season the rose show has been postponed until the 26th. E.

PLANTS and FLOWERS.

GERANIUMS.—C. H. Gerbig, Archbald, Pa., sends, us a flower truss of a new geranium, a seedling of 1899, and numbered 77. The truss is of good size and borne on a stout stem. The individual flowers are single, of medium size, and a pleasing color, being a suffused carmine on a white ground, deepening at the outer edge and shading lighter toward the base of the petals.

We acknowledge receipt with thanks, of a bunch of cut flowers, from H. Beaulieu, Woodhaven, N. Y. Prominent in the lot were some fine flowers of that chaste white pansy, Cecil Davy.

We acknowledge receipt from the International Navigation Company (American Line—Red Star Line), 73 Broadway, New York, of a neat type measure and rule, giving also full list of the company's steamers and offices.

It is expected that the American Dahlia Society will hold its annual exhibition for 1901 at Buffalo.

Flowers at Funerals a Necessity.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Referring to your article, page 606, of June 16 issue, relative to an opinion handed down by the Rhode Island Supreme Court, permit me to say that you take the wrong view of the case, inasmuch as the party that ordered the flowers did not seek to avoid payment. On the contrary, she wished to have the bill settled, but the administrator of the estate desired to avoid payment, claiming that the sister-in-law of the deceased had no authority to order flowers. However, the sister-in-law (being the nearest relative) did order them and, of course, had the bill charged to the estate. The judge, therefore, holds that the account be paid, the flowers being a necessity in common with other funeral fixings.

OBITUARY.

Charles F. W. Neuner.

Charles F. W. Neuner, one of the pioneer florists of Louisville, and one of the originators of the firm of Nanz & Neuner, died of a complication of diseases at the home of his brother-in-law, June 18.

Mr. Neuner was 52 years of age, and was one of the best known German citizens of Louisville. Four years ago he gave up the business which he had followed all of his life, and entered the life insurance business.

Mr. Neuner was born in Berg, near Stuttgart, Wurtemberg, Germany, where his father was the King's gardener. In 1868 he came to the United States in company with his brother Alfred, who died in January. He secured a position in Rochester, where he remained for two years. In 1870, while representing his employers, he arrived in Louisville, where he met Mr. Nanz. Both recognized Louisville as an admirable field for a large floral concern, and a partnership was formed. Three years later he married Miss Louise Nanz, who, with four children, survives him. Mr. Neuner was never publicly known as a member of the firm of Nanz & Neuner until four years ago, when he retired. J. S.

SEEN, HEARD AND READ.

The Summer show of the American Rose Society can hardly be characterized as a success; yet as a first effort it may be considered encouraging. The woeful lack of support accorded it by the trade at large, even by the society's own members, was one of the most noticeable features.

The private gardeners, too, were not much in evidence, and it is scarcely creditable to them that "press gang" methods were necessary in order to bring the majority of those appearing to the exhibition hall with their flowers. Visitors, not exhibitors, among the gardening craft, explained the absence of their displays by the tale that they thought their flowers were not good enough or up to exhibition quality, but when they viewed those actually on show were sorry their own blooms were left at home. This discretion might pass as commendable under other existing conditions as to weather, etc., but seeing all outside stock in the neighborhood was on the same footing this year, it cannot be said that any real progressive "exhibition" spirit was exemplified by the action. We had looked for less of the "sure thing" idea as to prize winning and more of that speculative element that characterizes the true "sporting" gardener.

As regards the tradesmen, they had more at stake; midsummer is not a favorable period to display greenhouse products, and the commercial men probably acted wisely in leaving well enough alone. But if the private gardener and the amateur are to continue to exhibit the laissez-faire spirit that permeated last week's proceedings, at future June shows, one of the primary, and really the most essential, objects for which the society was created—that of interesting the people in the cultivation of garden roses—is frustrated. This nonchalance should, if possible, be removed, and it is the Rose Society's duty to do it.

Some not very commendatory remarks were heard as to the advisability of holding the society's shows in a place of public amusement. Wax figures, chamber of horrors and such like accessories, with the cinematograph scenes thrown in, are not compatible with a floral exhibition, although, it seems, they, especially the wax figures, afforded lots of fun for some of the up state visitors. Besides, they have a counteracting influence; many would prefer to look at "Bobs," "Oom Paul," or "Charlotte Corday," to viewing Mrs. John Laing, Magna Charta or Alfred Colomb. Let the rose show stand on its own bottom—it can do it, if properly supported.

* * * *

The show, however, demonstrated one thing, viz., that several rose hybridizers are quietly pursuing their patient, painstaking work, the results of which are beginning to tell, especially in the fine crosses obtained of Rosa Wichuraiana and some of the teas.

* * * *

An attendance of eight does not augur well for the newly created Horticultural Society of New York. Perhaps the weather was too warm, or the need for such an institution was not as fully appreciated by the public as it was by the eight enthusiasts, who made their presence felt, and voted to hold a chrysanthemum show in connection with the American Institute.

* * * *

The gardeners, too, want to hold a chrysanthemum show this Fall. This is a case where the "more the merrier" is to create greater harm than good. Why not consolidate efforts and hold an exhibition worthy of New York, the Florists' Club also taking part, and thus keep up the interest which the S. A. F. Convention and exhibition in August are bound to create. But keep the show away from live stock, automatons and other like "contrapshuns," they won't harmonize with it.

It is amusing sometimes how the "types" get mixed. The following account of a wedding decoration affords a good example of the many ridiculous things for which the printer (?) is responsible:

"The church was finely decorated with holly and evergreen and the altar was entirely hidden in a wealth of flowers. Out of the recesses rose rare tropical plants, and from the ceiling hung 15 Western veals, which just at the time of the year are scarce and corresponding dear at 6a8½c. per pound. There was also an active demand for choice lambs and farmers living east of the Mississippi River can now profitably turn to sheep raising and take the bride, who wore a gown of white corded silk, a creation of Worth's, with pearl ornaments.

"Then came the maid of honor, the cousin of the bride, a Miss Henriette Blower, of Chicago, wearing a dress of white tulle, with diamond ornaments and she was closely followed by a small bunch of Montana sheep, which bleated most piteously as they were driven on board and shipped to the Winter hotel in Bermuda. They will there be cut extraine and slightly decollette, and after the remainder of the party had reached the rail the minister turned and said in a most impressive voice: 'I cannot bid more than 6½ cents for state veals, but cablegrams from London quote refrigerated beef at a price that will enable me to pay $4.90 for a car of choice Indiana beeves,' and hearing this there was a rush for the young married couple, and the bride fell into the arms of her father, who is known to bear a very striking resemblance to a Connecticut ox weighing 1,875 pounds. The market here took a upward turn and advanced 1a2c., and the guests, who numbered about 200 were served with a sumptuous dinner at the house of the bride."

New York.

Market Notes.

Since Tuesday morning the wholesale district has presented a healthier appearance than has prevailed there for some time previous. This has not been brought about by any increase in the demand for flowers, but is the result chiefly of the sudden falling off in the supply, the low wholesale prices having undoubt tempted many growers to throw out stock and commence replanting.

The supply of roses has diminished fully 75 per cent.; there is just about enough business to use them up from day to day, and dealers are not under the necessity of holding them over by thousands, as was the case a week ago.

During the latter part of this week special Beauty brought 25c. each. These had to be select stock, however, and those sold at that figure represent but a small portion of the Beauty with long stems that are at present coming in. Where the heads were not perfect the flowers have gone at any price nearly some as low as $6 per 100. Special Bride and Bridesmaid have brought $5 and $5, and a few extra fine blooms have realized $6 per 100.

Cattleyas are coming in in fairly large quantities, and they are beautiful as a Summer flower. Several commission dealers are receiving them regularly nearly all the year round, and these orchids have become one of the staple flowers of the trade.

Carnations went very slow at the beginning of the week, but improved greatly by Thursday. The extremely low prices are not heard of any more. Standard grade flowers are bringing 50c. and 75c. per 100, when they are fresh. Flora Hill and such fancy stock bring $1.

Gladiolus of the lighter colors are in fair demand, and an increase in price over last week is noticed; some of the very choicest have realized $1 per dozen spikes.

Blue corn flowers have sold very poorly all Spring; so also have the other varieties of centaurea. Excellent blooms of the latter do not at present bring more than 50c. per 100. Sweet peas, both white and pink, bring 2c. and 3c. a bunch; other colors are not much in evidence at present.

Lily of the valley is now bringing from $1.50 to $2.00, but it sold much cheaper earlier in the week.

Among the retailers school commencements are furnishing the most of the business doing.

Thorley will open a branch store about October 1, on the corner of 45th street and Fifth avenue.

The New York Market Florists' Association held a meeting Tuesday evening, at which 13 members were present. Asa Brown was elected a member of the association. President Fred. Lehnig, in a few words, stated the object of the meeting. He said that part of the roof of the market had fallen down and something must be done, or there would be no shelter for next year. After due deliberation a committee was appointed to get the help of two or three resident New York men and go before the Controller for relief. As a resolution has already been passed by the City Council, that a new market be built on the site of the present old structure, it seems possible that something may be accomplished. The committee appointed was composed of Messrs. Steinhoff, Nicol, Schafer and Dryer. Another meeting will be called in one month or earlier, to hear the report of the committee.

Jottings.

A. Winnefeld will leave shortly for a visit to Germany.

W. F. Sheridan is away in Maine on a fishing excursion.

W. Ghormley attended the Republican Convention at Philadelphia this week.

Commencing July 1 the New York Cut Flower Co. will close at 4 p. m. daily, except Saturday.

The Greenwood Florists' Association will hold its annual outing at Ulmer Park next month.

Visitors: J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; John Hall, secretary of the Western New York Horticultural Society, Rochester, N. Y.—the latter en route to Europe.

Great interest is centering in the annual fishing excursion of the employees of P. L. Bogart, which occurs on Wednesday, July 11, and the event promises to be the best ever held.

J. Austin Shaw is now traveling in the West in the interests of the Jackson & Perkins Co., the wholesale nurserymen of Newark, N. Y.

The auction season at Wm. Elliott & Sons will close on Tuesday, June 26, with their annual trade sale of plants for florists.

Cleary & Co. will hold their last auction sale of the season on Friday, June 29.

St. Louis.

Market Report.

The general closing of the schools created quite a little activity in trade circles the past week. Good roses were in demand and short supply, the best Kaiserin selling as high as 6c. and from that down to 2c. for the poorest. The extra demand for roses also made carnations and sweet peas go better. Of the former there was no great surplus. Sweet peas are, however, too abundant to make any impression. With the above exception, things are very quiet.

Notes.

R. J. Mohr, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, left for Philadelphia to attend the Turners meet there.

Bedding is entirely over, except a very few late jobs. We believe every one is well cleaned out, and the season has been a fairly good one. Owing to the very favorable weather, the plants have grown luxuriantly.

The bedding in Forest Park has been considerably changed for the better this year, and will shortly look its best. One of the prettiest sights there is a group of Crimson Rambler roses, even though they are now past their prime. This is the first year we have had the Rambler out to perfection, and it has proved a very attractive thing; the sales of it will no doubt increase next year.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting took place on the 14th, the attendance not being as good as was expected and hoped for, owing no doubt to the trouble experienced in getting to the meeting place, for while the strike is practically over, it is dangerous in some parts of the town to ride on a street car. Among other business done was the passing of a vote of sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke, on the loss by death of their daughter Helen. A committee was appointed by the chair to draw up resolutions.

J. W. Kunz was appointed to make inquiries as to railroad rates to New York. As yet not many here have made up their minds to go to the convention, and it is rather doubtful if St. Louis will be represented in the bowling tournament at all. However, there is some little time to think the matter over, and possibly a goodly crowd may be gotten together after all. All who intend going will please notify Mr. Kunz as soon as possible.

By vote of the club it was decided to have the regular picnic in July again this year, and the trustees were instructed to make the necessary arrangements.

Owing to the poor attendance and there being only two exhibits, it was voted to carry over the miscellaneous flower display till next meeting. Now that the World's Fair is an assured fact, the question of increasing the club's subscription came up. It was decided by vote that the present amount was all the members could contribute at present.

Mr. Kunz asked if the club, as was common with other bodies, wished to take any action on the present railway strike. Knives were immediately drawn, even up to the president, and Mr. K. hastily withdrew his proposition.

Market Unchanged.

There has not been any change in the condition of cut flower trade since last report. Business has been quiet the past week, and all attention has been devoted to the Republican convention, which did not bring much business to the florist.

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society met on Tuesday last. There was a very large attendance, especially of ladies. For the past five years the society has not held meetings in July and August, but at the present one it was decided to hold meetings this year in these months. Many of the gardeners present promised to send exhibits. Some good papers were also promised. The meeting on Tuesday last was devoted to sweet peas. Many exhibits were staged in competition for the premiums offered by Henry F. Michell. For the best vase of pink sweet peas, Francis Canning, gardener to Mr. Sam. L. Bodine, Esq., Villa Nova, took first; Victor Holmes, Jr., gardener to Mr. C. L. Bone, Jr., Jenkinstown, second. For best collection of sweet peas, Wm. Robertson, gardener to Mr. J. W. Pepper, Esq., Jenkinstown, was first, and Ernst Schrieber, gardener to Mr. Wm. L. Elkins, Ashbourne, second. Alphonse Pericat, gardener to Mrs. Geo. B. Wilson, West Philadelphia, exhibited a fine lot of orchids and was awarded a silver medal and three certificates. Ernst Schrieber staged three plants of double tuberous begonias, which were greatly admired and received special mention.

Joseph Hurley read a paper on the "Culture of Asparagus." Wm. Kleinheinz read one on the "Culture of Hybrid Calceolarias." These will be given in a future issue.

DAVID RUST.

Newport, R. I.

The Newport Horticultural Society's Rose and Strawberry Show, which was to have been given June 19 and 20, has been postponed to June 26 and 27.

Luke Fagan, one of the best known among the gardeners here, died at his home on the 14th inst., death being due to cancer of the throat. He had been for nearly 40 years in charge of the James Gordon Bennett estate, and was universally respected by all who knew him. A widow, one son and a daughter survive him.

In view of the rapid spread of the San José scale and other insect pests dangerous to vegetation, the Newport Horticultural Society in August, 1899, commenced to agitate the question of having a state entomologist appointed. A committee of five was selected to take the matter in charge, and as the result of their labors a bill was presented at the January, 1900, session of the General Assembly and referred to the Judiciary Committee. Two hearings were given, one in Newport, May 30, and another in Providence, June 12, both being well attended by parties interested. Yet the public at large do not seem to realize the importance of the act. The bill was tabled for the present, which course is much regretted by those best posted on the question.

MAC.

Boston.

A special auction sale will be held at N. F. McCarthy & Co.'s rooms, on Friday, June 29. The stock will consist of 15,000 Boston ferns and about 20,000 young rose plants, all grown by Wm. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass.

Providence, R. I.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island was held in the Franklin Building, Thursday night, June 14, and was largely attended. The principal topic of discussion was the trip to the annual convention of the Society of American Florists to be held in New York City in August. It is expected that there will be a delegation of nearly 100. Upon invitation of President James Hocking, it was voted to hold a picnic some time in July upon the grounds of the Dunnell estate at Pawtucket. William Maxfield, of Barrington, exhibited some promising carnations, while Walter Nichol showed some handsome sweet peas.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

ASPARAGUS.—The Summer season is the best time to start an asparagus bed, and as there is no green grown that can be turned to more uses than this (whether cut in strings or sprays), there should be a bed of it on every florist's place. It does best when grown in a solid bed. This should be made on the floor of a house where there is 8 feet or more head room. The sides of the bed may be made of 2-inch plank, and a height of 15 inches will be sufficient. Place in the bottom 2 or 3 inches of good drainage material; small stones or broken bricks are to be preferred. Then fill in the bed with good fresh soil, adding one-fifth of well-rotted manure thoroughly mixed with the soil. As the bed is intended to be in use for several years it is imperative that the soil used should be perfectly new, and if virgin loam can be obtained (that is, the top soil of a pasture that has not been under the plow for a number of years), the results will be better and prove more lasting. Fill the bed full and have it evenly firm all over, being careful not to pack it down hard in one place and loose in another. When planting get two-year-old plants if possible, and use the two varieties, A. plumosus nanus and A. Sprengerii. The latter variety will send up long strings, same as the former one does, if allowed to do so. The planting may be done as late as the last week in July, and good strings will be ready by November 1; though if the house is at liberty, and the stock is obtainable, the planting should be done any time after the first of June, as there is good sale for the crop when got in earlier in the Fall. Put the plants in rows, 12 inches apart in the row and 15 inches apart between the rows. After the planting is completed run a wire across the surface of the bed, as near to the plants as possible without disturbing them, drawing it tight and fastening it securely to the plank at each side of the bed. Then fix a corresponding wire overhead, at a height of 8 or 10 feet, or as high as is thought necessary, depending chiefly upon how long the strings are expected to be grown before cutting them. When the wires are thus permanently fixed thread or twine should be tied from the bottom to the top wire at each plant, and the bed is complete. As the shoots appear turn the tip once or twice around the thread, and they need no other training. Water sparingly until growth has fairly started. When growing the plants require plenty of water, but when they are not growing an over-supply is the worst thing that can happen to them.

The after-treatment is simplicity itself. Syringe regularly when fire heat is on. Commence cutting at one end of the bed and clear the bed from that end on, instead of picking out a string here and there. This is necessary, as the plants that are cut down must be watered very sparingly until growth commences. When the bed has been completely cut down, and is again showing activity, give a mulch of well-rotted manure, and it is ready for another year.

ASPIDISTRAS.—This is a good time to increase the stock of these hardy decorative plants. Although there are many more decorative subjects, there are none, we believe, that will stand the neglect and abuse that aspidistras will, and owing to this feature chiefly we shall always have a demand for them. Take a few old plants, knock them out of the pots, shake the soil from them and cut each leaf apart with a few of the roots attached. Pot these up into 3-inch pots, or, if convenient, plant on a shallow bench in a shaded greenhouse, and pot them up when necessary.

BOSTON FERNS.—Young plants that are being grown along for next Winter's sales may be planted on a side bench, where they will thrive and do much better than if kept in pots all Summer. A shallow bench is to be preferred, 2 or 3 inches of soil being all that is needed for them.

Candytuft.

The candytuft shown in the picture was grown by Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., and is a revelation to growers of this very useful flower. Mr. Sim has raised candytuft with marked success for some years, but this year's crop far excels anything he has ever obtained in this line. The picture shows a vase of 25 stalks of some of the selected stock. From tip to tip across the vase measured slightly over 4 feet. The Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently awarded Mr. Sim a "certificate of merit for superior cultivation of candytuft," for a vase exhibited about four weeks ago.

Origin and Amelioration of the Garden Gladioli.

I am happy to state that M. Lemoine, on my appeal for a few notes for the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE on his work on the field of gladioli raising, has very kindly furnished me with very complete information. In the following abstract I shall endeavor to give all the data which seem to me of general interest.

The genus gladiolus was well known and quite popular in European, especially in English and French, gardens two centuries ago. More than 90 species are now described by the botanists; all of them are indigenous of the old world, South Africa and southern Europe being the home of most of them. Of the many different kinds which were successively taken into cultivation I shall only name a few, those which have played a prominent part in the development of our present-day garden races. Even these have now nearly entirely disappeared, except from botanical collections.

G. communis, of southern Europe, was very early cultivated in English gardens. Most of the African gladioli were introduced into England from the Cape toward the middle of the last century. Of these we may mention G. angustus, G. blandus, G. trimaculatus, G. tristis, G. ramosus, etc.

Twenty-Five Stalks of Candytuft.
Grown by Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

About the end of 1700 followed G. cardinalis and G. floribundus, also from the Cape. G. psittacinus (syn. natalensis) made its appearance in 1824. Later G. papilio and G. atroviolacens were brought to England from Palestine, and finally in 1870 William Bull received G. purpurea-auratus from Natal, which was followed by G. Saundersii, from the same country. This last acquisition flowered in the Kew Gardens in 1872 for the first time.

Being of easy culture, very floriferous and quite hardy the gladioli have very early won for themselves numerous devotees, mostly amateur gardeners. Since their first appearance in the English gardens they have been subjected to artificial cross-fertilization and with success. Thus in 1820 Dean Herbert, of Spofforth, England, had obtained a number of pretty hybrids from the earliest Cape introductions. Later on a few growers paid more attention to those species which, flowering very early, responded readily to a special forcing method. The intercrossing of these early bloomers was the starting point of one of the groups of gladioli, which at this date are so popular with European florists. We may call this the Colvillei group. The type of these suggest their origin as a mixture of the blood of G. cardinalis, G. communis, G. floribundus, G. ramosus, etc. They nearly all bear the characteristic purplish blotch of the G. ramosus.

The Holland bulb growers produce this race of gladioli in large quantities yearly, and the forcing of them is quite a specialty with the florists of the Channel Islands, Belgium, France and Germany. The favored varieties, such as Colvillei, G. albus (the Bride), Queen Victoria, Ardens, Formosissimus, and many more, are well known. About the time of this writing (May 20) the shop windows here are full of these flowers. The little bulbs are planted in pots or in beds from October to December, kept in a cool house, or pit, and without much care, except proper airing, come naturally in blooms in the order in which they have been planted. The "Bride" seems to be the favored one of all.

The next distinctive group, much more diversified in color and shape, the G. gandavensis, originated from a cross of G. psittacinus and G. cardinalis. Beddinghaus, gardener to the Duke of Aremberg (Belgium), had the happy thought of carrying out this delicate operation in 1837, and Louis Van Houtte purchased nearly the whole stock of seedlings, naming them G. gandavensis (they are popularly known as Ghent gladioli). Of the G. psittacinus the new race has kept the structure of the inflorescence, and the G. cardinalis blood infused the color. The late Van Houtte (1841) described the new seedling enthusiastically: The dimensions excel those of ramosus, the majestic corollæ, 17 to 20 in number, are of the brightest vermilion; the inferior petals are painted with chrome and amaranth and beautifully contrast with the sky-blue anthers. M. Lemoine says: The present-day gandavensis varieties are in every respect so far superior to this original type that it is almost impossible to imagine how it could create such enthusiasm. The new seedling was rapidly and widely disseminated out of the hands of this famous Belgian horticulturist, and soon many busy hands worked on its further improvements. Crossed with G. floribundus it produced the G. Wilmoreanus, with white flowers striped with pink, and pollenizing it with G. blandus and G. ramosus M. Souchet, a French grower, obtained about 1853, not only a well formed open large corolla, but also a greater hardiness and a large diversity of color, from white tinged with lemon-yellow to the darkest carmine and purple. But these fine acquisitions have also since been much improved, and could not bear comparison with the fine varieties which the European and American specialist send out to-day.

While most of the gladioli amateurs continued in the line of work which had given these wonderful results, M. Victor Lemoine traced himself a different course. When in 1870 G. purpurea-auratus had been introduced from Natal, observing its absolute hardiness, its freedom of growth in all kinds of soil, and the readiness of multiplying itself by young bulblets, he determined to try to impart these valuable qualities to the gandavensis race, which had already acquired such great perfection in its flowers. We know how successful he was, and how even the flowers of the gandavensis gained new forms and coloration through his subsequent hybridizations; but he never lost sight of his special aim, and he assures me that many fine-flowered varieties were discarded, or at least never sent out, because they did not stand the rigorous Winter test to which all were subjected. M. Lemoine calls his new race "the hardy blotched hybrids." I think they are more generally known as the Lemoinei group.

The seed parent of this group is the above named G. purpurea-auratus. A short description of it may be of interest: The rather broad glaucous green foliage attains a height of about 1½ feet. The flower stalk is thin, and about 3 feet high; at the base of the first flowers it generally develops two lateral branches; the upper part is arched and thus carried nearly horizontal. The flowers bent downward against the stalk are of light sulphur yellow, and the two inferior lateral petals are marked with a purplish blotch. The bulbs are very small, about one inch in diameter. The first hybridization was carried out in 1875, and two years later three plants came into bloom. One was discarded on account of its color, and the remaining two received the names of G. Lemoinei and Marie Lemoine, respectively. The first one was of pinkish white ground color, and the latter straw colored; both showed the characteristic blotches of the seed parent, which were purple with a margin of yellow. These two new hybrids proved perfectly hardy and endowed with all the good qualities of the Natal parent.

Lemoine now turned his attention to the coloration of the flowers, and using the best gandavensis varieties he brought the pollen of these on his new seedlings. This studious work was as successful as the former, and in 1882 he could send out five new varieties. All new seedlings had to pass the Winter test, and it now proved that those which showed the Lemoinei character the most (the smallness of bulbs and well-marked blotches) were the hardiest. Each succeeding year brought more and finer forms, and the 1900 catalogue enumerates about 200 varieties. The variation of color which has now been obtained in this race is marvellous, and not the least striking the increasing clearness of blue tints. A few varieties are of very marked earliness of bloom and promise the advent of a new group, which would, of course, immensely increase its value as a florist's flower. (I may mention "Avant Garde" flowering at the beginning of July.)

As the last introduction, also for Natal, I mentioned G. Saundersii. This species, too, was called to play a prominent part in the gladioli history. It is a rather low-growing species; the flower stalks are rarely more than 2 feet high; the leaves are short, but the flowers, though the number per stalk is small, are of large size. The ground color is pale scarlet, and toward the base the three inferior petals are finely spotted with white and rose. The species is quite hardy and free of growth. It seems that Leichtlin, a German amateur, was the first to make use of this species for artificial hybridization. By fertilizing the gandavensis variety with it Leichtlin obtained hybrids with larger flowers and quite a variety of new color combinations. It appears that he did not follow up this work and that his entire collection was sold to U. S. A.

In 1883 Lemoine made his first crossing trials with this newest Natal species, but instead of taking the gandavensis variety, as did Leichtlin, he chose his best Lemoinei types, and this time he brought the Lemoinei pollen upon the G. Saundersii and made the inverse cross as well. By the first cross a goodly number of seeds was raised, but only four of them germinated. Of the four plants, which in 1885 flowered, two only were kept and later named President Carnot and Maurice de Vilmorin. The inverse cross yielded many seeds, and these germinated freely; but the flowers proved inferior to those just named. The two new hybrids, President Carnot and Maurice de Vilmorin, were in their turn the starting point of another distinct race, which is known as the Nanceianus group.

By subsequent crossings this group acquired, like the Lemoinei varieties, a great diversity of color combinations. But the flowers preserved the characteristic large, open form of the two original hybrids, and also their peculiar and very prettily dotted blotches. The flowers measure up to 6 inches across, and in some instances even more; they are symmetrical in shape and well rounded. About 100 varieties have already been sent out. This group seems to be destined to gradually embody all the good qualities of the other groups. The Nancelanus varieties are perfectly hardy, grow very freely in any kind of soil, carry and present their brilliant flowers boldly and well on long, stiff, substantial stems, and they produce a large number of new bulbs yearly, thus multiplying very rapidly.

It may be useful to mention that these two groups which Lemoine raised are considerably earlier in bloom than the gaudavensis varieties. For this reason alone they should receive due attention from those, for whom a succession of bloom is valuable. If they are planted successively in March, April and May, choosing the early varieties for the March planting, flowers may be had from the middle of July until frost. Where, on account of the stiffness of the soil, the Gandavensis do not give satisfaction, these varieties will prove invaluable.

I asked M. Lemoine if, in the pursuance of his work of improving the gladioli, he had a definite ideal form and color of flower in view. My question was prompted by the marvelous success of the American carnationists, who seem to work along well defined lines toward a preconceived ideal aim.

M. Lemoine writes me as follows: "If a hybridist would at each step discard everything that does not directly point toward the form and color which he has set himself up as his ideal, he would thereby considerably diminish his chances of success. He will either be disappointed altogether and not find anything that will satisfy him, or at best he will obtain one or at least only a limited number of varieties of great similarity of character. For the work of creating new or improved races one has to allow one's self a larger scope. It would be altogether wrong to at once discard, as being out of the way indicated by the ideal aim, the many divergent forms which incidentally present themselves. Even if they themselves do not merit a place in the collection their progeny may turn out much more perfect varieties than would have been obtained if these odd, less perfect forms had been neglected."

Bedding, Etc., at Newport, R. I.

Through the courtesy of Hugh Williamson, the gardener at "Beulieu," the estate of W. W. Astor, Esq., we present herewith two illustrations. No. 1 is a bed of Eulalia japonica zebrina with edging of Funkia odorata, and No. 2 a part of the interior of one of the greenhouses, the center bed of which is used in Summer as a lily tank, for which purpose it is well adapted. The principal varieties grown are Nymphæa devoniensis, N. dentata and N. cœrulea. Among the plants seen at the end of the house are dicksonias, Seaforthia elegans, Musa insignis, cycas, dracænas and pandanus in variety and Peristeria elata. The vines trained to the wire are allamandas, Begonia rubra being also used for the same purpose.

"Beechwood," the summer home of Mrs. Astor, is shown at Fig. 1. The English ivy which covers the front of the house, as shown in the picture, is sheltered from the sea breezes, but is exposed to the western winds in Winter, yet it stands admirably without protection. The border of trees and shrubs to the left of the picture very effectively shuts off the view of the buildings in the rear. The picture gives only a faint idea of the number of specimen plants used to decorate the grounds in Summer. MAC.

[We present these illustrations for the helpful suggestions they contain to those florists upon whom devolves the work of looking after private conservatories and grounds.—ED.]

Business Methods.

How often one hears the remark, "There is no money in the florist's business now; I am no better off than a year ago." We shall not have very far to look for some of the causes of this. In many places I have found the stock all mixed up—geraniums, heliotrope, verbenas, etc., scattered about as if they had come down in a rain storm; the walks dirty and muddy, dead plants thrown under the benches—the whole place looking uninviting and not fit for a lady to walk through. Then again, the houses are glazed with 8x10 glass, and the wood work black with age. I am well aware that many a small florist can ill afford to buy paint, at present prices, but anyone can buy a bushel of unslacked lime, and if a good quantity of salt is mixed while slacking the mixture will not rub off and will last a couple of years. Go over walls, rafters, purlins; in fact, every part, and you will be surprised at the result. Instead of a dark wall of a house you will have one bright and cheerful. Take a few barrowfuls of ashes and scatter evenly over the walks. Place your stock together, each variety by itself; arrange your plants so as to make your houses as attractive as you can. Another item of great importance is the matter of tools. In many places, I know from experience, very little attention is paid to them; no one knows where anything is, and men lose time going around hunting for something they want to use. On a recent visit to Ernst Asmas' well ordered and well-kept place I saw printed on the tool house the following notice: "All tools must be returned to the man in charge, thoroughly cleaned after finishing the day's work, under penalty of 10 cents." Let me say here, Mr. Asmas' place is my ideal of a florist's establishment. Every nook and corner is clean, and everything in order fit for the President to go through at any time. Truly the successful men are those whose business is carried on with order and system.

Last, but by no means least, is the matter of keeping books; and I will say here that florists, as a rule, are the most careless of any class of business men in this respect. I know many who think a man is losing time who tries to have books kept as they should be; too often this most important work is left to some one else—son, daughter or friend—and entries are often left to memory with the result that many charges are forgotten, and would not be recalled unless some honest customer came to pay the bill. I venture to say hundreds of dollars are annually lost through this alone. Many florists keep only a day book, and to make out one's bill the whole month's entries have to be searched, which entails a loss of much time. I have known of many cases of customers calling to pay their account who have been sent away with the promise that the bill would be forwarded by mail, because of the time it would take to look over the books. If a ledger had been kept it would not have taken five minutes, providing the books had been posted properly each month.

No one should buy a single article on credit without entering it on the day book—be it cut flowers, pots, plants, or what not, and posting it up in the ledger; then at the end of each month a man can tell exactly how he stands. A list of all debtors, with the amount owing, should be made out, and if the bill has been running two or more months, if the figure 2 or 3 is placed against it, you can easily remind your customer by a polite note that you would like a settlement. As the bills are paid the names should be crossed off. About the middle of the month you can tell at a glance who needs looking up.

Buffalo.

Market News.

Trade in flowers in a retail way is, for the most part, taking on some activity in a petty manner in supplying some small wedding calls and bunches for school graduates. Flowers are more plentiful than common at this date, with roses now not so good, carnations still being very dependable, both in quality and quantity.

With the institutions of learning assuming larger proportions in recent years the management of graduating exercises ruled against the receiving of flowers in open display at the hall or school exercises. For a while this seemed to act as a setback to the demand at these occasions. It is fairly returning now, we judge. The graduates will be favored with floral tokens, even if they must be sent to their residences. As filling of such orders can be done all through "commencement day" a manifest advantage to the florist ensues over handling a large number of deliveries inside of a brief hour, as of old. Tuesday of this week, on High School's Day, showed an active trade all through the day.

Bedding plant trade is moving along nicely and conditions point to a good finish.

The Depew Improvement Company, large owners and promoters at Depew village, will use upwards of 5,000 bedding plants, geraniums leading.

A visit last week to Eggertsville shows a good beginning of C. F. Christensen's new growing houses. Five detached houses, in size 20x125 feet, are now fitted with bars. These are being put up in the most substantial and modern wood construction, and planting can soon commence.

Almost across the way Rudolph Boettger has made a reputation, in a modest way, as a grower of good stock. He will continue to bloom some carnations during the Summer. Several houses and a lot of hotbeds have been well emptied of bedding plants, while his outdoor Summer growing of asters for blooms goes into many thousands.

Toronto.

Trade News.

With June weddings quite numerous and considerable funeral work, business has continued good the past week. Cut flowers have sold well, and very little good, or even fair, stocks have been wasted.

The trade in bedding plants has also kept up well, and there is but little good stock left on hand now. By the end of the month I fancy all the boys will be satisfied to call this the best season we have had for some years.

The last week has been very dry and warm, and outside stock is in need of a good rain again.

Death of a Well-Known Citizen.

By the death last week of William Christie, who for some years was vice-president of the Industrial Association, we have lost a good friend and patron. He was a great lover of flowers, and every year spent large sums of money in decorating his grounds. He gave much time and money to make the Toronto exhibition the success it has been, and was always ready to help along any work for the public good. He could have had any office in the gift of his fellow-citizens, but he never would accept a prominent position, being better content to do the work and let his friends have the honors. At his funeral on Friday, June 15, many beautiful flowers were used, most of the designs being large and handsome.

Orchids Admitted Free of Duty.

By an order in council, orchids are again admitted into Canada free of duty. This is a step in the right direction, I think. T. M.

Among the Magazines.

There is a sensible article in the July Delineator that will be read with pleasure by troubled mothers. It relates to amusements for sick children. It is the first of a series of articles along that line by Lina Beard, the famous sister of the famous cartoonist and author, Dan Beard.

And, speaking of florists, where will their business end? Gold fish was an addition of months ago; one florist added birds a few weeks since, and now another has a full-fledged ribbon department. Ice cream and umbrellas may follow.—Philadelphia Record.

Madison, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners and Florists Club held its regular meeting in Masonic Hall on Wednesday last, President Buckham in the chair, and with a good representative attendance. The schedule for the Fall show was taken in hand for final settlement. The president announced a most gratifying state of affairs in the matter of special prizes, the number and value of these already donated having exceeded the committee's expectations. With the society's appropriations in the usual class the schedule, when issued, will total more than $500, and with such liberal prizes a fine exhibition must surely result. The schedule will be ready for distribution next month.

The society then adjourned over the hot period, to meet again on the regular date in September. A.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL BY WM. SCOTT.

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

Trade News.

There has been a little going on this week, occasioned by graduation and commencement exercises. The class-day functions at Harvard created a little stir, though confined mostly to decorations of green material. Thursday and Friday quite a little business is expected for the various spreads given by clubs and individuals. Much of the demand experienced by the wholesalers up to Wednesday was from outside the city for the various college commencements. Jacq. roses, from out-of-doors, have been very popular for this work, nearly every shipment containing a goodly proportion of these flowers.

Out-of-door roses are now very plentiful and in fair demand. American Beauty do fairly well, also, at the prices that have prevailed for some time past. Bride and Bridesmaid are getting poorer daily, and good ones are scarce. Prices range on these roses about as quoted last week. Kaiserin and Carnot are still a little scarce, that is, good quality stock, though the small grades are plentiful enough.

Carnations continue in heavy supply, greatly in excess of the demand, and prices rule low.

Pæonies, rhododendrons, irises, etc., are still to be had in quantity, but meet with little demand. The former, however, are usually wanted for wedding or other decorations.

Sweet peas are still very plentiful, a few having been picked from outside. Prices now average 15c. to 25c. per 100, and quantities are disposed of daily. Valley, too, is in good supply and meets with a very fair demand.

Jottings.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. had the contract for furnishing 2,000 evergreen trees for class-day decorations at Harvard.

W. H. Elliott has eclipsed all former records by cutting some very good Jacq. roses from inside at this date.

W. A. Twombly has returned from his trip across the ocean.

Pæony Exhibition.

The pæony exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held on Saturday last at Horticultural Hall. An excellent showing was made, both of pæonies and the other flowers on the schedule, by Dr. C. G. Weld, Mrs. John L. Gardner, George Hollis, W. J. Clemson, Jos. S. Chase and Miss Hattie B. Winter. The four first mentioned exhibitors were awarded the four prizes offered in the order of naming.

For the special prizes, offered by Kelway & Son, Langport, England, "for a collection of 18 named varieties, single or double, of Pæonia albiflora," Kenneth Finlayson, gardener to Dr. C. G. Weld, received the silver gilt medal.

W. J. Clemson showed a nice collection of foxgloves, W. H. Spooner a fine lot of hybrid sweet briars. Henry A. Dreer exhibited some very fine nymphæas, and Rea Bros. made a nice exhibit of pyrethrums.

On Friday and Saturday, June 22 and 23, the Rose and Strawberry Exhibition was held. Particulars next week.

Holbrook, Mass.

The funeral of Nathaniel Brook, florist, took place June 12. The Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Exchange, of which the deceased was a member, sent a broken wreath with sickle, composed principally of roses, lilies and pinks. The burial was in the family lot in Union Cemetery.

THIS great work comprises directions for the cultivation of horticultural crops and original descriptions of all the species of Fruits, Vegetables, Flowers, and ornamental plants known to be in the market in the United States and Canada.

BY L. H. BAILEY, OF CORNELL UNIVERSITY, ASSISTED BY WILHELM MILLER AND MANY EXPERT CULTIVATORS AND BOTANISTS.

In Four Quarto Volumes. Illustrated With Over 2000 Original Engravings.

VOLUME ONE (A TO D, 509 PAGES, 743 ILLUSTRATIONS 9 PLATES) IS NOW READY FOR DELIVERY.

THOUGH distinctly an American work, not only plants indigenous to the North American continent are mentioned, but also all the species known to be in the horticultural trade in North America, of whatever origin. It is really a survey of the cultivated plants of the world.

The chief characteristics of this great work are comprised in our describing its source, scope, and general features. It is AUTHORITATIVE since its contributors are the best specialists in America, and there will be at least 5000 signed contributions from the best-known horticulturists, cultivators, and botanists in this country and in Europe. It is also most COMPREHENSIVE in that it presents for the first time in carefully arranged and perfectly accessible form the best knowledge of the best specialists upon greenhouse and garden practice, fruit growing, vegetable culture, forestry and the like. It is moreover fresh, entirely ORIGINAL; not a rehash of old material, old cuts, etc. The articles are specially prepared and illustrated for this work alone; while the trained botanist discusses the botanical features of the important commercial plants, practical cultivators submit observations on their culture, marketing, and the like, so that the reader has before him the very best practice in the most favorable localities for the perfection of any fruit, vegetable, or economic plant. The arrangement is very systematic, clear and convenient for ready reference.

THE CYCLOPEDIA is to be completed in four handsome quarto volumes, embracing about 2000 pages, with more than that number of original illustrations. It is carefully printed upon specially made paper of a permanent character, and the work will be completed this year.

This book is sold only by subscription, and orders will be accepted for the full set only. For terms of subscription and all further information, address

BOOK DEPT. THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, Nos. 2 to 8 Duane Street, N. Y.

European Notes.

Hardly any change worth recording has taken place in the condition of things. The record of continuous failures, although a very real factor associated with the approaching harvest, is becoming a trifle monotous. In this connection much also depends upon the acreage planted, and this can hardly be correctly estimated for another three weeks. But it is positively certain that the supply of the extra early and more delicate varieties of radish from this year's crop will be very limited. The outlook in regard to turnips and rutabagas is even more serious, particularly as regards the latter. For reasons already set forth the supply of plants was very limited and none of them well developed. The result is that they have no strength to resist the canker which has broken out in every direction. Prices of rutabagas for present sowing have nearly doubled during the past two months, and as the demand is extra good, next season's trade has been left to take care of itself. The failure of extra early turnips has already been reported. Unless a great change takes place during the next ten days the Aberdeen varieties must also be added to the list.

Culture of Calceolaria Hybrida.

Read by Wm. Kleinheinz before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

There are two distinct classes of calceolarias. Those known as shrubby are used in some parts of Europe for planting out in Summer time, and there are the herbaceous or hybrida varieties. It is of the latter class, which is the best for pot culture, that I will talk to you about this evening.

They are grown from seed, and the best time to sow the seed is in the months of July and August. The seed should be sown in pans, or small boxes, in a mixture of even parts of well decomposed sod, leaf mould or peat, in which some sand has been mixed. Care should be taken to choose a shady situation for the seed pans—as cool and airy as possible. The plants should be pricked off as soon as large enough to handle, again using pans or small boxes, this time affording two parts well-decomposed sod and one part leaf mould, with a little sand.

After a day or two of careful shading they should be gradually given air, and a position selected as near to the glass as possible. When strong enough they may be potted into 2½-inch pots and placed in a frame outside, if possible, with the sashes elevated sufficiently so that a free circulation of air may be assured at all times when the weather is favorable In the outside frame they may remain until cool nights set in, by which time they should be large enough to be repotted into 3-inch or 4-inch pots, according to the strength of the plants.

By following the method recommended some of the biggest will become sufficiently large to occupy a 7 or 8-inch pot to advantage. The temperature in the Winter months for these cool greenhouse plants should, whenever possible, be kept down to from 45 to 50 degrees in day time, and at night from 42 to 45 degrees.

The greatest care must be exercised in watering, especially in the Winter time. The plants suffer a great deal if allowed to become too dry, and one overdose of water will almost kill them.

The greatest enemy of these plants is the green fly; to overcome this trouble, tobacco stems must be liberally placed between the pots.

This is the method I used last year and had very good results. I had in the months of April and May plants full of bloom, in 6-inch pots, 2 feet across, and they were grown in a natural way without training, which surprised many of my gardener friends who called to see them. In the collection of over 300 plants it was hard to find two alike, so varied were they in their shadings and markings. Among them were some very nearly clear white; one was a pure canary yellow, and, again, one a canary yellow, with large spots nearly black.

I hope with the brief cultural directions given that my fellow gardeners will take these subjects in hand and make an effort to grow them, for nothing, in my opinion, gives more pleasure than a collection of well-grown hybrid calceolarias.

SCRIBNER'S—The outdoor article of the July number is Frank French's "Trees," in which he describes with sympathetic appreciation the life and forms of a number of the more familiar varieties that grow about an old New Hampshire homestead. New York.—Louis Leroy, of Angers, France, has been appointed Chevalier de la Legion d' honneur by the President of the French Republic.

At a Summer meeting of the Minnesota Horticultural Society, held June 19, a fund was started by the members to be used in purchasing premiums, or in assisting students of the agricultural school who are especially proficient in their studies. The fund will be known as the "Gideon Memorial Fund." It was named in honor of the late Peter M. Gideon. About 350 horticulturists were present. W. W. Prendergast, Hutchinson, called the meeting to order, and the address of welcome was made by Dean Leggett, of the Agricultural School. Among the topics discussed that of strawberry culture in Minnesota received much attention.

Aquatic Gardening

Extracts from Paper read by Walter Retzer before Chicago Florists' Club.

Aquatic gardening is one of the most recent arts. Sprung up, as it has, just within a few years, it is surprising to what extent it is already practiced, and it promises to become the chief ornamental factor in beautifying our homes and surroundings. There is a certain pleasure peculiar to aquatic decoration, one that once experienced will always be sought after, and none will be more thoroughly enjoyed. The beautiful, pleasing and quieting effects are those peculiar to this art. It has not that harshness which one can not help but feel in some other classes of decoration.

In a beautiful valley we may admire the general scenery, but naturally we seek the bottom, and there, on the banks of a little stream, while away our few leisure moments. Were we not to see this our pleasures would rapidly diminish

In the plants that adapt themselves to the banks of these streams we find not that boldness nor that harshness of color that seem to be peculiar to others, and that offensive odor, so prominent in many other plants, is absent. The colors of nearly all aquatics harmonize, no matter which way they are planted; a discord is hard to produce

The decoration of a pond, however naturally carried out, would not have a calming effect were it not for the borders, which are the finishing touches. The border plants are an introduction to what we are to see later.

LOCATION OF PONDS.

In locating a pond many things have to be taken into consideration not thought of at the first moment. A pond poorly located, no matter how highly decorated, will always mar the surroundings. We must aim to select a place that will produce the most natural effect. If the surroundings are rolling, or even hilly, with deep valleys between, we would not select the crest of our hills for lakes or ponds, even though we find beautiful bodies of water on high plateaus and elevations, but never abounding in aquatics. Seek a place low enough to retain the water without great artificial means. We never find a lake at the very base of a valley, for sufficient grade must be left for an outlet. If the most suitable place for a pond is where a rippling brook is winding its course, a pond can be easily made by having it dammed. For this the strongest and safest material would be stones of considerable size, the larger the better, held firmly together by cement. This stream will afford a constant supply of fresh water so essential in aquatic gardening. If the stream is large or subject to swellings after rains, large pipes should be placed beyond the beginning of the pond. These pipes must be large enough to check the force of water during the heaviest rains, leaving only the amount required pass into the pond. If the whole volume of water be allowed to pass through the pond our aquatics would soon be where we would not want them. These pipes must be laid just below the surface of the stream when it is at its lowest mark, for if raised to the point that the stream attains during rains the pipes would be unsightly objects as they protrude out of the water after it has receded.

These surplus water pipes, if no other convenient place be found, must be laid underneath the pond, where they will be out of our sight. This can readily be done before the pond is constructed. If, however, the rising of the water is not thought of at the time of building, the evil may be remedied by laying the pipes around the edge of the pond, though this will require a good deal more piping and other work. Wherever the pipes are placed have them covered in a way not to attract attention. The principal rule that one must invariably follow is: "Select the most natural place." It is quite impossible to lay down certain rules as to the location of ponds, as circumstances alter cases.

GENERAL OUTLINE OF PONDS.

In regard to the shape of ponds it can not be too strongly impressed that symmetrical ones are not to be tolerated, except where surroundings are laid out in the most symmetrical way, in very limited areas, and the back yard of a city residence, and even there the irregular-shaped pond would be more appreciated after the merits of each become known.

First we should select the irregular-shaped pond, as it more resembles a natural bit of water than a symmetrical one, and consequently makes the surroundings appear more like nature. It can readily be seen that a pond of an oval shape can be used to greater advantage than a circular or an angular one. The angles or corners of a square pond would be nearly worthless, as no aquatic, except the small floating varieties, could fully develop, as the foliage would soon come in contact with the border, be forced over this, and scalded by the burning rays of the noon sun. No room is left here for border or back water decoration. No suitable form of introduction can be made as will be seen when compared with an oval-shaped pond.

The corners produced by the oval-shaped pond give ample room in which groups of swamp or border plants could be planted, the tall ones in back, their naked stems, if any, hidden by those of medium height and the low spreading ones in front.

THE CONSTRUCTION OF PONDS.

Probably the principal point in aquatic gardening, and one that has to be fully mastered before success can be attained, is the construction of ponds. A pond poorly built or drained will only be a nuisance, a malaria breeder and a continual source of disappointment, the plants not proving to be as advertised. In nearly three-fourths of the cases it is not the fault of the nurserymen, the catalogue nor the advertiser that the plants do not succeed as well as they were represented, but simply that of the grower or the pond. This fact is marked in this branch of gardening. Aquatics, even if they are water plants, require drainage as well as those grown in pots, and even more so. For this and other reasons that will be mentioned later a soil bottom pond will be found the most preferable. There is a constant regular seepage or drainage of water which varies according to the lower strata of soil, causing constant, but regular, changes in the water. With supply pipes sufficiently large to replenish that lost through drainage and evaporation, the water will be kept in circulation, so essential in aquatic gardening. This thorough drainage will prevent the diseases which occur so frequently when a pond is badly or not at all drained. With large and convenient outflow pipes placed near the surface all the dust which naturally collects on it, as well as the insects which skip about the surface, are carried away. These pipes may be so placed as not to be seen by even the most critical observer, by placing over them a few bowlders or some graceful border plants that will completely cover the opeaing. The number of these pipes must vary according to the size of the pond.

Besides the natural drainage of a soil bottom pond and the surface outflows, it is very important to have a pipe sufficiently large placed at the deepest part of the pond to carry off the water in a short time. It will be found of great advantage in the Fall, when the tender plants have to be removed. Always have the pond so graded that the deepest part of it is in the center. If the pond is exceedingly large have several parts that are deep enough to drain the entire pond. The trap of this pipe should be so made that it can be opened without entering the pond. The outflows at the surface should be large enough to carry away the water from the rains.

One of the greatest difficulties met with in aquatic gardening is that the place where we wish to locate the ponds does not retain the water. We may re- who has only the few leisure hours after his daily work is performed to look after the requirements of his pond. You will not have the rank weeds so numerous in the other ponds, and the wild water lily (Nymphæa mexicana) will not become a nuisance, as it can be well controlled if planted in tubs. This nymphæa, if left to take care of itself, will soon assert its rights as a native, and will in a short time completely fill the pond; and there is no other way to get rid of it, after it has once established itself, than to dig out a foot or more of the soil and cart it away. The whiteness of the bottom of a granitoid pond without the gravel at the bottom has such a glaring effect that the eye is pained to look upon it, besides it reduces much of the beautiful color of rather difficult to make out of granitoid. Have the edge about 6 inches lower than the surrounding soil, and have this graded to make a gradual slope toward the side of the pond. In this way the whole of the white granitoid edge, so unsightly, will be completely hidden. The water in the pond can be raised to the soil and occasionally allowed to flood it. This will keep the border moist enough for some of our best border plants. In the granitoid ponds all plants should be placed in tubs or something similar. The ease with which plants are moved about after being in the water, and the fact that the water does not become discolored from the dirt that is plowed up as one enters the pond and the ease with which they are kept clean, are advantages not to be disdained by the layman, sort to various means to remedy this great evil. The cheapest as well as the best, as far as the health of the plants is concerned, is to place a layer of clay mud (the amount varying according to the porosity of the lower soil) at the bottom and the sides, which must be thoroughly packed.

The granitoid pond has its advantages as well as the soil bottom one, although not as numerous. If it is found necessary to have a granitoid pond the whole can be so arranged as to give a natural effect. It must be made to produce the best effect regardless of the curves, which are the aquatics. So with the white edge; it must not be tolerated, not only because the reflected light pains our eyes, but the contrast between the green foliage and the white edge is too great and consequently lessens the beauty of our plants.

The granitoid must be of the best, as it would easily crack during the cold weather were it otherwise; and even if it is of the best material it must be covered with straw or something equally as good.

SOIL.

Soil requisite for aquatics can easily and cheaply be obtained. They have done exceedingly well in a clay soil, though in good, rich soil, thoroughly mixed with a liberal quantity of well-rotted cow manure, the plants will many times repay the trouble in the profusion of blooms and the substance of the foliage. In a pond where but little clay has been used to retain the water, and where a good rich loam is found beneath, no other soil will be required. Whether our ponds have a clay, natural soil or granitoid bottom it is well, and will give the whole a neat appearance, if a layer of sand or gravel is placed at bottom; moreover, this prevents the water from becoming muddy when it is necessary to enter the pond.

Plants for a granitoid pond should be potted or rather planted in boxes or half kegs. The boxes should be rather shallow and wide, as the roots of most aquatics have a spreading habit. The bottom should be well drained so as to admit a free circulation of water. The practice of making pockets in granitoid ponds is of a great disadvantage, as it is difficult to remove the soil in the following Spring, in order to replenish it; besides, it does not admit of thorough drainage.

The Value of Books.

That a man or woman of intelligence may fit himself or herself for a vocation through the use of books is, of course, beyond dispute. My success as a florist I attribute entirely to books; they have supplied the theoretical knowledge which I have put to practical use in my business. No training was possible in my case. A book taught me how to build my house; how to heat it; where to buy a boiler; what, when and how to plant my house. By its aid I have been enabled to reap a fair harvest, in profits. That book was "Practical Floriculture," by Peter Henderson. The chapters on propagation are so clear that the novice may follow the directions with the most gratifying results. I had many and grave doubts about my stock, where to buy it, etc. A chance copy of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE came my way. Presto! change. All doubts fell away before its many advertisements. The magnitude of the trade was unknown to me. I live too far from trade centers to visit other greenhouses, but the EXCHANGE opens the door to many. Its illustrations of large establishments are a revelation. The diversity of articles offered in its columns has been a liberal education on the needs of my chosen profession. The many fine articles on the diseases of plants have benefited me very much.

I regulate much of the work in my house by the "Briefs for Busy Florists." The modern and above all practical advice and methods given therein are of the greatest assistance to me. Such plants as I grow are often treated of, and I many times turn to a back number for advice. I watch for its suggestions as to the best time and way to treat this or that plant.

Timidity has kept me out of the Question Box, but my eyes have been open to its answers to florists bolder than myself.

I am an advocate of wide reading on all lines relative to our trade. There is always a kernel of knowledge the truth of which we may test sooner or later, if we but fill well the store-house of memory. A note book is a valuable aid even to a good memory.

Even catalogues have been of use, in familiarizing one with new plants, and in many cases filling a gap which even a Botany could not unless one were trained in its terms.

"Commercial Violet Culture" and "How to Grow Chrysanthemums" have revolutionized my way of growing these plants; so far the results from their methods have been most satisfactory.

A lack of books is a calamity—only a lack has restricted my reading to the above-named books, which, with a few other magazines of small value, constitute my stock of books. The best investment I have ever made have been books. The palm of praise must, in my case, be divided between "Practical Floriculture" and the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE. The why of which is that they are, above all, practical. M. O. LINTON.

SEEN, HEARD AND READ.

The S. A. F. has in its brief career played many parts in the matter of enlightenment and instruction of its clientele and the trade generally, and many and varied are the suggestions that emanate from those within its ranks, as to the additional rôles it could or should assume in order to be all-beneficial. One of the latest of these suggestions comes from Lancaster, Pa. Friend Herr now sees a way whereby the society could be still more helpful to the trade in the propaganda of "a simple system of keeping accounts, one that would apply to large and small places, and a set of books for recording them." Here, indeed, is a field for the genius of a Treasurer Beatty or a Dan. B. Long.

* * * *

It occurs to one on the outside that it is not so much a set of books that is needed, as book keepers, with just a slight knowledge of correct business principles; and no set of books, however simply devised, will make a good business man out of a bad one, unless "Barkis is willin'." Much of the after bother and worry arising from credit sales result not so much from the ignorance of buyers on the methods of bookkeeping, as from their total disregard of what their obligations are to the party or parties granting them credit. The S. A. F., if it does anything, should spread the doctrine of cash sales more; with consequent less need for books, and if growers have not gumption enough to formulate a simple system of bookkeeping for themselves, the evening schools of the country are at their command free of charge.

* * * *

Mr. Herr also hints at what appears on the face of it another impracticable proposition—that of collection of accounts by the S. A. F. What with this, that and t'other thing for the S. A. F. to do, the florist will, if all are put into effect, have nothing to do but live. The society already tells him how to grow his stock, and how it can be marketed. Now, some would have it buy his goods for him, collect his bills, etc., all for a membership fee, while he enjoys life in an Elysium. There is at present no deterrent to legal proceedings being instituted by the individual to collect overdue accounts, if he so elects. No society can undertake to run the business of its members, in the matter of stating imperatively just when bills must be paid. That rests entirely with the individual, and the individual should insist on accomplishing it to his own satisfaction. Besides the membership of the S. A. F. forms but a small part of the whole fraternity of florists.

* * * *

There are lots of collecting agencies better equipped than the S. A. F. ever could be for this kind of work, eager and willing to do it for a small consideration; and where they fail, and the publication in a "black list" of the names of the delinquents has not the desired effect, then the seller can work out his own salvation by refusing the granting of further credit.

* * * *

The man who succeeds best in business is he who acts in matters of the kind mentioned independently, fearlessly, and with relentless hand. To make the S. A. F. a "Pooh-Bah" for the florist trade could serve no good purpose, and would remove from its members that spirit of self-reliance so essential to their individual welfare.

* * * *

What the S. A. F. might and could do is to furnish information to its members relative to the financial standing of other members, or even the trade at large, for a sum equal to the necessary outlay; still, as this ground is so fully covered already, the herein proposition may, like Mr. Herr's, be considered ethereal. But the S. A. F. can certainly preach "more cash sales, less credit" with impunity.

* * * *

It is encouraging to observe the evident rivalry existing among cities for the annual gathering of the S. A. F. O. H. Already, for 1901, both Buffalo and Chicago are in the field, while for the 1903 convention St. Louis makes a bid thus early. Among other things which may be looked upon as actuating these invitations are the benefits resulting to a city from the visit of the S. A. F., and the desire of local florists to entertain their visiting brethren, the latter, probably, being the strongest impelling force, and so long as this hospitable spirit is present among the craft, there is little fear of the society's extinction. With its "orders" so far ahead, the officers of the S. A. F. O. H. should feel greatly encouraged, and act well their part, so that the utmost good may accrue to all concerned.

* * * *

We hear it asked, now and then, "Who is to be our next president?" and among other names whispered is that of a popular New Yorker. His feeling in the matter has not been ascertained; but one thing is certain, should the society, in its wisdom, see fit to elect him, it is sure of an able, agressive, hard working leader to undertake the labors of the first year of the new century.

What John and Jane Found in the Exchange.

John and Jane were husband and wife. John was born with a love for flowers, a love for working among them and a faculty for making them grow; in fact, John was born to be a florist, but he didn't find it out soon enough. Jane always had a flower garden that was the admiration of the neighbors, and after they had been married a number of years, and had saved up a little money and had built a home they thought they would build a greenhouse and grow some carnations. So up the greenhouse went, and into the ground the carnations went. In the meantime Jane had slipped everything she could lay her hands on ready to put into the out-of-the-way corners of the new greenhouse. The carnations grew and were housed, the slips were potted and got into their places; and everything started off swimmingly.

After a while, like many another, John and Jane found it was not always clear sailing in their new enterprise. They didn't know how warm to keep their house nights; they didn't know where to purchase the various tools and the different plants they wanted. In fact, they found there was a good deal more they didn't know than what they did. They read in the daily paper (afterward) of the very interesting meeting of Society of American Florists (it was before the days of the Ornamental Horticulturists), and John said, "Oh, dear, I wish I had known about that. I wonder where I can get a report of the meeting?" Th Jane read of the wonderful exhibits chrysanthemums (afterward) and wish she could have seen the beauties.

One day an old man, who had been the business for 40 years, called to s John. He was a nice old man, who h worked up a good business himself a was willing for somebody else to do t same. After he had looked around a l tle and given John some good advi about various things, he said: "John, you take the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE "No," said John. "What is that "Well," replied the old man, "it is trade paper, published in New York, th gives a great many valuable points to beginner, as well as much valuable info mation for the man who understands b business. You will also find the be firms advertise in it, and it is quite sa to purchase from these advertisers. have taken it," he added, "ever since i first issue, and would not try to get without it." John took down the a dress, inquired the price, and sai "There! I believe that is just what I' been wanting, and didn't know it." H went into the house and told Jane t take that dollar she had saved to bu her a new pair of gloves, and send right off after the FLORISTS' EXCHANG and perhaps when the time came sh could go and see those chrysanthemum if she found out when they were to l seen (beforehand).

Well, the paper came and was eagerl read by both John and Jane, and eve the children were interested. There we the cultural direction of carnations; told the best time of year to slip certai plants; and, as the papers continued t come, John and Jane found the prop time to sow the various seeds, instru tions regarding the water required b various plants; how to keep the plant free from the multitudinous insects tha infest greenhouses. The knowledge the gained from the EXCHANGE began t grow oppressive; and the one house the had built was not anywhere near larg enough to try the various ideas that ha eminated from the EXCHANGE brain Even here they were helped, for in diffe ent issues were given thoughts on con struction; on the proper regulation benches in the houses, etc. So agai they built, and having found (throug the EXCHANGE) a man who raised chry anthemums, and who was willing to se cuttings and plants, they bought som and put them in the new house. The they learned to have some bulbs ready to put on the benches after the days o the chrysanthemums were over. The learned it was a good plan to have a lo of bedding stock ready to fill right up with after the blossoms were gone from the bulbs; they were introduced to tha pretty plant, the swainsona, and sent right off for some, and have never been without it since. They became acquaint ed with many plants they never before heard of. After a while the direction for growing violets attracted John's at tention, so he studied them and then built a violet house, and has picked and sold thousands of good blooms.

The EXCHANGE, too, introduced them to many men whose names have become familiar to them, because of their ideas. There is Secretary Herr, of the Carnation Society. Jane liked him because he said in (the EXCHANGE) that it was a good plan in the dull times for florists to send their surplus flowers to sick and aged people; and Jane always did have a kind heart for the helpless. Then there is Grove P. Rawson, at whose bright, witty writings they always have a good laugh. Then, too, there is Henry A. Dreer, who invites his neighboring florists to come and see him once a year; and John does wish he lived near enough to be considered a neighbor.

I can't begin to tell you of the different men whom they know through the EXCHANGE, nor of the interest they take in the doings of the different floral societies, and the excellent papers read before them; nor of the fine shrubs procured from the Elizabeth Nurseries; nor the nice cinerarias from Whittin & Son. I haven't time to tell how nicely the seeds grew, obtained from Elliott, the bulbs from the Cottage Gardens, nor how the Rose Leaf killed the green fly and Ivory soap the mealy bug.

But when the ten-year anniversary number of the EXCHANGE came round, right there in that little reproduction of its first issue was an advertisement of the man who introduced the EXCHANGE to John. Jane says she would as soon try to keep house without a broom as to run the greenhouse without the EXCHANGE; and John says he will always take the EXCHANGE, if Jane never has another pair of gloves as long as she lives.

Coil Boilers.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Two articles appearing lately in n contemporary, one June 7, from J. W. Margrave, of Hiawatha, Kan., and one June 14, from E. B. Beals, Greenfield, Mass., giving the poor innocent coil boiler a scorching, suggested that perhaps fair play ought to be awarded to the aforesaid boiler, as is generally done in many other matters. The coil boiler is a boon to the small florist, and for 1,000 to 4,000 or 5,000 square feet of glass it is probably the cheapest heater, all things considered; and there is not at the present day a water heating boiler in use that will approach a mechanically constructed coil boiler ("mechanically" is following strictly natural laws). There is one in use in Brooklyn for 6,600 square feet of ground space (carnation temperature) that is fired, or left from 8 p. m. until 7 a. m.; and there is no water boiler made yet that will equal it. A guess-work construction of coil boiler might result as Margrave and Beals have stated. The Margrave boiler at least was a very poor guess-work construction, and a coil boiler only in name; it had not one single mechanical idea in its outline, could not be cleaned, and any duration of fire, especially from soft coal, would pack it with soot.

Probably one feature of the aforesaid coil boilers was that the pipe was light-weight steel pipe, and probably 1½ inches in size, instead of full weight, wrought-iron pipe, and 2 inches in size. Probably the construction was based solely upon the idea of heating water, instead of heating and circulating it, as a properly disposed coil boiler will do.

Where the construction is scientific the rebuilding of a coil boiler is simple and not expensive; it is not short-lived, and even if rebuilt every five years, is a cheap investment for small plants. But any construction of pipe can be called a coil boiler, and if of light weight steel pipe, and small size, its life will be short, in-deed.

ROSES.

Roses on Wooded Island, Chicago

The roses planted by John Thorp on the Wooded Island in 1892 were th exhibits from numerous sources, an have now stood the test eight years. Th high quality of the flowers and size o the plants vary somewhat with the sea son, some Winters being more severe o them than others. Then again, it take n cool June to bring out their finest cha acteristics, and an early morning visit t see them in all their glory. The presen season those mentioned below are th cream of the flock planted, standing a kinds of tests. Quite a number of kinds including the Pride of Washington hedg surrounding the garden, have either die out or proved unworthy of keeping i this climate. The beds of moss roses an some of the hardy June roses, includin, the fine old Mme. Plantier, are now a from 3 to 4 feet in height, and grea bushes of flowers. The stronger h. p.' this year, from 2 to 3 feet bushes, an kinds like Baroness Rothschild, 1 foot t 18 inches, are perfect bouquets of silver sheen. The iron-clad list having beds t themselves still are: In scarlets an crimsons, Gen. Jacqueminot, Anne d Diesbach, Alfred Colomb, Louis Van Houtte, Marshall P. Wilder, Pæonia Prince Camille de Rohan, Victor Verdier Grace Darling a very deep purple.

Rose colors and pinks: John Hopper Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Magna Charta Mrs. John Laing, Paul Neyron, Souv Gabriel de Levet and Mrs. George Dick son.

In light colors: Francois Levet, Baron ess Rothschild, Comptesse de Serenye La France and Merveille de Lyon.

The border round the garden, originally planted with tender roses, teas an others, is now filled with a very choic variety of hardy herbaceous perennia plants. The rose garden proves a con stant attraction, and a bright spot i June days in Jackson Park. Ess.

The Market.

The supply of stock is falling off rapidly, especially is this true of carnations, and as usual in all such cases the demand is increasing. Sweet peas are very plentiful, and never were finer than at present; the ruling price is 25c. per 100, but it looks now as if $1.50 per 1,000 would have to be resorted to in order to move the flowers lively.

We are now having some hot and sultry weather, with an occasional thunder storm thrown in, but the carnation plants in the field delight in these conditions, and are growing rapidly; in fact, some of the newer sorts are large enough to house now.

Credits.

I notice quite a good deal is being said about credits by several writers. My experience has been that my best customers are those who pay the first of every month; in fact, 30 days is the limit of credit extended, and all bills are due and payable on the first of every month, regardless of the date of purchase. It would be very much better if there was no credit in the florist's business, especially so far as cut flowers are concerned. It seems to be characteristic of the American people to run in debt; many will use their credit to the limit, and when you want your money they will give you the cold shoulder and pay cash somewhere else for their goods. Collection agencies are all right. They are at times necessary evils, but it's the credit system that keeps them running. The S. A. F. could be made much more useful if it would establish such an agency, or an information bureau, whereby members could be posted as to who paid their bills and who did not. E. G. GILLETT.

Publishers' Announcement.

PRIZE PHOTOGRAPHIC COMPETITION.

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE offer special inducements in the endeavor to encourage the practice of the art of photography, as relating to their industry, among its readers, with the aim that this may lead to a more thorough understanding of what constitutes desirable photographs for reproduction, either in the trade press, catalogues, or for advertising purposes generally; also to advance the fact that the ability to take a good photograph will serve as a first-class introduction to do more business.

The competition remains open for the three months of July, August and September; awards will be made at the close of each month on the pictures submitted during that month; these should reach us not later than the 30th.

The Prizes We will pay, each month, for that photograph which shall be adjudged the best received during the month, a prize of $5.00 in cash (or $6.00 in books, at winner's option). For all other photographs retained, prizes of 50 cents and $1.00 each will be paid, according to their merit.

The Conditions The months named comprise the open or outdoor season, hence preference will be given to pictures of specimen Shade, Ornamental and Flowering Trees and Shrubs, Climbing Vines, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, and outdoor planting generally. Other factors being equal, sharpness of finish and clearness of detail will decide the order of merit.

Size of photographs submitted should not be less than 4x5 inches. This competition is open to every subscriber to the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE in good standing, and all photographs submitted must be of their own unassisted taking; the mechanical portion, however, may be done by professionals.

Competitors must indorse name and full particulars as to size, locality, etc., of subject and date taken, on the back of all photographs, and these must be most carefully packed so as to avoid cracking or breakage in the mail.

The FLORISTS' EXCHANGE to reserve all rights to all such photographs as the publishers may award prizes or money to; others will be returned if accompanied by sufficient stamps to pay postage. Photos may be taken whenever a subject presents itself.

The publishers also reserve the right to withhold the first prize should none of the subjects offered be deemed worthy thereof.

Send for our free pamphlet, especially printed for the amateurs in the trade, "Practical Photography." Address all communications, Prize Bedding Competition.

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE herewith extend an opportunity to all originators and makers of flower and foliage bedding designs to prove their skill before their fellow-workers. The season is well advanced, the beds have about taken on their designated form and appearance, and now is the time to accurately describe them.

DESIGNS AND PRIZES.

Class A—For the best and most effective Circular Bed, planted in a design, with low growing foliage plants only—excepting in the center, where a taller plant may have been used in harmony with the rest.
Prize—A Five Dollar Gold Piece.

Class B—For the best Carpet Bed, any size or shape.
Prize—A Five Dollar Gold Piece.

Class C—For the best Border, Scroll, or Ribbon Bed; dwarf plants only, either flowering, foliage or mixed.
Prize—A Five Dollar Gold Piece.

Class D—For the best Group of Beds, any design or pattern, planted for foliage effect.
Prize—A Five Dollar Gold Piece.

Class E—For the best Mixed Bed or Border, planted for sub-tropical effect or otherwise.

CONDITIONS.

This competition is open to all: employers, employees, subscribers, or non-subscribers; it is required, however, that competitors must have actually set out or planned the beds themselves.

The publishers reserve the right to withhold an award in any class unless there are at least three competitors in said class.

Competitors must send to this office a correct drawing to scale of each design submitted, in strong black ink (do not put more than one design on a sheet), together with full descriptions of how the measurements were taken, and the number and variety of plants used in filling them. This office will furnish sectional drawing paper free when requested.

Although not at all essential to winning a prize, we will be glad to receive photographs in addition to diagrams when possible.

Competitors may enter for one or for all five classes.

Diagrams and photos must be fully protected against being cracked or broken in the mails.

This competition is now open and will close Saturday, September 15.

The American Carnation Society.

The preliminary premium list for the Baltimore meeting in February next has been issued.

A few changes from previous schedules are noted. The specifications in the various classes are confined to colors only; that is to say, named varieties are eliminated from these classes. The amount of money offered for prizes has also been added to considerably. In Class A, for vases of 100 blooms, the first prize is $12; second prize, $6 each. In class B, for vases of 50 blooms, first prize is $6; second, $3 each, and in class C, for vases of 25 flowers, first prize is $3; second prize, $1.50 each.

It is announced in the schedule that a number of special premiums will no doubt be offered by the disseminators of new varieties. The following special prizes are already named:

The Michel Cup, to be awarded to the individual or firm making the largest and finest display at the show.

The Society Cup, to be given for the best arrangement of carnation blooms with their own or other foliage, but no other flowers to be used.

The Lawson gold medal will be awarded to the best vase of 100 blooms, any variety, any color.

The Lawson silver medal will be awarded to the best vase of 25 blooms, any variety, any color.

The Lawson bronze medal will be awarded to the best 12 blooms of a seedling carnation not yet disseminated.

Vases competing for the Lawson medals are not allowed to compete in any of the other classes with the same vase.

Copies of the preliminary schedule may be secured from Secretary Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa. Instructions for entering varieties and a program of the meeting will be issued early in January.

N. Y. Florists' Club Souvenir.

The material for the Souvenir Book, which the New York Florists' Club intends issuing in connection with the S. A. F. O. H. Convention in August next, will be in the hands of the printer next week. Parties intending to advertise in the book should lose no time in securing space from Treasurer C. B. Weathered, 46 Marion street, New York.

The Souvenir, in addition to containing some interesting data regarding the S. A. F. and its work, the florist's business of the city, ancient and modern, etc., will be handsomely illustrated by views of points of interest in New York, the parks of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx, besides having other excellent features calculated to create in the minds of the recipients a desire to retain the work as a memento of their visit to the Metropolis in the closing year of the century. The book is to be gotten up handsomely, and will be turned out in the printer's best style. As a permanent advertising medium, therefore, the Souvenir offers exceptional opportunities.

The Flower Trade in India.

The trade of the florist, pure and simple, is a very ancient one in India, where the sale of flowers has been carried on as a profession for ages. A visit to the native quarter of Calcutta, or any large town in India, will show how far this profession of the florist is carried on. In Calcutta we have the Municipal Market where flower stalls on the European model are fairly numerous. Some of the proprietors of these stalls own gardens up the line of railway, whence consignments of flowers are daily received. That the profession is a lucrative one, admits of no doubt. The trade is as yet confined to natives; but there is no reason why Europeans should not take to it. Last cold season the demand for flowers exceeded the supply, and record prices were paid for bouquets, 150 rupees (about $35) being demanded and paid for a single bouquet for Lady Curzon's Drawing Room.—Indian Gardening.

OBITUARY.

John Hallam.

Another of Toronto's prominent citizens passed away last week in the person of John Hallam. At the time of the convention of the S. A. F. here, Mr. Hallam was chairman of our Parks and Gardens Committee, and took considerable interest in the meeting. He was much interested in all connected with shrubs, trees and flowers, and spent time and money in introducing new varieties into our country. He was a public-spirited man, taking great pride in our parks. The deceased was a self-educated man, and he had a wide knowledge of men and affairs. He was for years a director of the Industrial Exhibition and an honorary member of the Toronto Gardeners and Florists' Association. T. M.

N. J. Cosgrove.

Nicholas J. Cosgrove, son of P. Cosgrove, rose grower, of Madison, N. J., and brother of Jas. A., Frank P. and John F. Cosgrove, died suddenly, of heart disease, Saturday morning last, on the board the steamer Monmouth, of the Sandy Hook Line. Though not a florist he was well known to many in the trade. Mr. Cosgrove was 34 years old, and for the past nine years had been manager for a large lace and silk importing house at 51 Greene street, New York City. He leaves a widow.

John C. Smith.

John C. Smith, a grower of flower seeds at Newburyport, Mass., died June 18, aged 74 years. In early life he was a shoemaker. A widow survives him.

The Market.

Comparisons are always odious, and they were never more so than when the present week's wholesale flower business was compared with the corresponding week of last year. At that time there was a fair demand for the stock, and there was much more coming in than at present. Whether the excessive heat we have been having, or fewer flowers are being used for commencement exercises, or both, have tended to make the flower business so dull, we are unable to determine, but true it is, that for the last week in June this has been the poorest one for some years. It is also remarked that collections are very slow—a fact that is not encouraging, to say the least.

The supply of roses and carnations has fallen off very considerably. Of the roses that come in but few can be found that are really good, consequently these can be disposed of at about the same figures as last week. Outdoor flowers are of poor quality, with scarcely any demand for them. This condition is the result of the very warm weather of the last four or five days; the mercury dancing around the nineties. Such flowers as sweet peas have sometimes wilted right away within an hour after they were received in the market. Gladiolus, iris, cornflowers, stocks, h. p. roses and all the other hardy flowers have been at a disadvantage during the hot spell, and, as for fixed prices or values, there were none. Lilies even have been a drug, and sales have been effected at as low as $1 per 100.

Among the retailers there is a general quietness. Windows are kept looking at their best, and the buyers make a daily tour of the wholesale district, more, probably, from force of habit than anything else.

Auction Sales.

The season closed this week in the auction rooms, and the number of plants handled during the season is probably larger than ever before. Wm. Elliot & Sons closed their sales with one of palms and other decorative plants on Tuesday. The stock was very fine and went off very satisfactorily. Cleary & Co.'s last sales were on Thursday and Friday, and consisted chiefly of choice Japanese plants.

Brevities.

The committee appointed by the president of the New York Market Florists' Association, called upon the Comptroller last Monday forenoon with regard to the present dilapidated condition of Clinton Market. The Comptroller assured the committee that he would take up the matter and give it his attention. Mr. Patrick O'Mara and Mr. J. Weir were with the committee and rendered valuable assistance.

A meeting of the members of the above association will be held at the Clinton Market, Thursday, July 12, at 8 p. m. As the business is urgent every member should make a special effort to be present.

Manager J. P. Cleary, of the S. A. F. trade exhibit, informs us that space in the exhibition hall is being taken up quite freely. This promises to be the largest trade exhibit ever held, and parties wanting space will do well to inquire early.

Robert Schultz, rose grower of Madison, N. J., was married on Tuesday, the bride being a young lady from Jamaica, N. Y. The married couple started Bostonward via the evening boat directly after the ceremony.

C. W. Ward is visiting in Detroit this week.

C. B. Weathered is touring the principal cities of the Middle West.

J. A. Penman has again been obliged to enter the hospital owing to his continued ill health.

Thos. Young, Jr., is back after spending a few days in the hills of Pennsylvania.

W. F. Sheridan returned Wednesday from a ten days' fishing excursion.

Chas. Thorley has gone to the Berkshire hills for a vacation.

J. I. Raynor's bicycle came easy (he won it in a raffle), but has been a hoodoo so far.

The Reception Committee of the Florists' Club, together with Pres. P. O'Mara, met Tuesday afternoon and discussed matters pertaining to the convention entertainments. A goodly number of the members was present.

Miss E. Hodgson, a daughter of the late J. M. Hodgson, died suddenly at Newport, R. I., last Saturday.

James Hart, the obliging salesman for his brother, M. A. Hart, was married on Sunday last to Miss McCafferty. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Taylor at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, West 71st street.

The sympathies of the trade will go out to S. J. Limprecht, West 30th street, when they learn of the great loss he sustained this week by the drowning of his son Freddie, aged 7 years and 4 months. While staying at New Rochelle, on Wednesday afternoon, Freddie, along with another boy younger than himself, went on the river in a row boat. Through some cause or other the little fellow fell overboard and was drowned.

Visitors.

Professor Galloway, of Washington, D. C., and Dr. Wm. Trelease, of St. Louis, were in the city this week, attending the meetings of the Association for the Advancement of Science, which were held at various points in New York and vicinity.

Philadelphia.

Market is Quiet.

The flower market is very quiet some growers have discontinued sending in material, until the newly planted stock comes in. Good roses when wanted are difficult to obtain. Sweet peas are abundant, good stock being sold at from 30c. to 50c. per 100, while the street men are buying at $1 per 1,000.

The stores have been unusually quiet the past week; on account of the extreme warm weather transient trade has been dull, and there has been but little funeral work on hand.

Club Meeting Night.

Next Tuesday evening will be Florists' Club meeting, and it is hoped that a good attendance will be on hand to talk over convention matters. The bowlers are attending to their duties in good shape; every night, no matter how warm, some are on hand for practice.

Jottings.

Most of the growers are now busy repairing houses and planting. Joseph Heacock is making alterations in benching and piping some six or seven houses. He has had a good season on palms, being well sold out of many sizes.

Fishing trips are now the order of the day—John Westcott made his preliminary trip to Waretown last week, and goes down again in a week or so with a party and two or three to be initiated.

C. S. Loder, of National Florists' Board of Trade, spent two days here this week. Another arrival was A. W. Stephens, who is canvassing for Prof. Bailey's new book, "The Cyclopedia of American Horticulture."

DAVID ROST.

John G. Barker, formerly superintendent of Forest Hills Cemetery, Boston, and lately in private practice in landscape gardening, at South Bend, Ind., and elsewhere, has accepted an appointment in Philadelphia, to take charge of Graceland Cemetery, now in course of development.

Toronto.

Market Notes.

Business is fast getting down to the Summer level. Cut flowers are plentiful, and roses generally are not first-class, much of the stock coming in being mildewed and off color. Really good flowers still sell well. Dunlop is sending in some good Beauty. A great many pæonies are still being sold. Hardy roses, gaillardias, Coreopsis lanceolata, Clematis Davidiana, hemerocallis, sweet peas and Cypripedium spectabile are to be seen around, and make our store windows look bright and business-like.

The plant trade is now very dull, and but few good plants are to be seen on St. Lawrence market. Most of the boys report business this Spring as being very good and prices better than before.

T. M.

Buffalo.

Summer atmospheres, in warmth, are a feature now. This week sees a finish up of commencement calls for flowers, and a few small wedding orders close up modestly in that line. Outdoor sweet peas are in, of good quality and fairly plentiful. Roses are smaller and scarcer; carnations still abundant, and quite good in quality.

The systematic bedding plant man is now sending out his bills. VIDI.

(132) Plant for Name.—B. A. Roach.—The plant is evidently a species of Vicia, which one it is impossible to say without having seen a flower. None of the species is of much horticultural value.

(133) Making a Carnation Bench.—The bottom of a carnation bench should be made with the boards an inch apart at the least, to allow for drainage. Straw placed over the openings will keep the soil from falling through.

(134) Wagon for Plant Trade.—What style of wagon is best suited for a retail plant trade, where the team is sent out from 8 to 14 miles, sometimes returning and often remaining the next day.—A SUBSCRIBER.

—Will some reader who has a knowledge of wagons for retail plant work please oblige?

(135) Preserving Ivy Leaves.—Ivy leaves being evergreen there has been no necessity for packing and preserving them, seeing they may be picked and used when wanted. Put in cold storage they would no doubt keep indefinitely, the same as do the galax leaves. Aside from this we know of no way of preserving them. If the wreath is mossed, the same as is done for flowers, and the leaves are put well into it, using only those that are thoroughly matured, the wreath will last a long time if kept moist, though just how long depends upon circumstances. Out in the full sunshine it would not last half as long as it would do in a cool place.

(136) Roses.—I want to grow a few roses next Winter but the house will not be ready until September. Can I get good results by transplanting into the house at that time? If not, please tell me the best way to get them under these conditions?—F. N. A.

—To make the best of the roses, seeing that the house will not be ready for occupation until September, we would advise growing the plants in pots until that time. If the stock is not already secured it should be had at once and potted along. Plants may be stood outdoors and must receive plenty of attention as regards watering and keeping them free from aphis. Pot them again in July, or as soon as they require it, and again in August if necessary, the main object being to keep them growing without a check. When the house is ready the plants will be of good size and stocky, and give nearly the same results as if they had been on the bench all Summer; and the extra work will be amply repaid. We would add that all flower buds should be taken off that appear before the plants are in their final growing place.

(137) Heating.—I would be pleased if you would tell me how to run my hot water pipes in houses on different levels. Two of the houses run—well—north and south, and the other east and west. The north and south houses are 3 feet higher than the east and west house. The houses are all the same height in ridges—10 feet 6 inches. Now, the experience is that I have all pipes under benches. The north and south houses have overhead flow; the east and west house under-bench flow. The north and south houses, being the highest, take all the heat. I have a valve on the high houses, and when I choke that then the low house works O. K., but the high houses fall in temperature. Will the main flows all have to be on a level or not? Houses are all fitted with 1½-inch returns and 2½-inch flows.—Q.

—It is always desirable to have the pipes in all of the houses on about the same level, but if the boiler and the supply pipes to the houses on the lower level are of ample size, there should be no difficulty in securing a fairly even circulation, if the flow pipes to the higher houses are no larger than are required to give the needed heat. When these pipes are larger than this the greater portion of the water will pass through them, and the circulation in the lower houses will be very sluggish at best. In the case under consideration the flow pipes in the different houses are arranged exactly the reverse of what they should be, and the first change recommended will be to use overhead flows in the lower houses, and underbench in those on the higher level. It will also be well to carefully adjust the size of the supply pipes to the amount of radiation they afford. Thus 2-inch pipe will feed about 150 feet of radiation in the coils; 2½-inch about 300 feet, and 3-inch about 600 square feet of radiation.—L. R. T.

About what amount will it cost to put in the hot water heater and piping for two houses shown on drawing? How should the pipes be arranged, and what size of pipe should I use? What do you consider the best heater?—F. J. P.

—The drawings accompanying the letter show two three-quarter span houses, one of them 12x50 feet and the other 14x40 feet, located respectively 4 and 40 feet from the boiler house. The narrow house is for palms and geraniums, and the other for carnations. For economical heating the boiler should be one rated for 800 to 900 feet of radiation, the price of which will vary all the way from $100 to $200. In the severe climate of Minnesota it will be best to use about 300 square feet of radiation in the 12-foot house and 200 feet in the other. The pipe and fittings will probably cost $150, and with the labor will bring the cost of a first-class heating plant up to $400. Nine lines of 2-inch pipe will be required in the palm house, of which three can be flows and the others returns. In the carnation house eight lines, of which two can be flows and the others returns, can be used. The mains leading to the houses can be 2½-inch, and if insulated with ordinary asbestos pipe covering, and run through 6-inch sewer pipe, there will be little loss of heat. Wrought-iron tubular boilers may be used, but cast-iron boilers, like the Hitchings and others advertised in the EXCHANGE, will be more durable.—L. R. T.

We have a 2,000 foot radiation sectional boiler, and two houses, 22x100 feet, with 2 to 3-inch flows and twelve returns. With temperature at 10 degrees above zero we are compelled to keep water at boiling point in order to have houses warm, which we think is too high for that temperature. What is wrong and what is the best way to remedy the trouble?—ELY BROS.

—The letter does not tell what temperature is desired in the houses, nor does it give the size of the returns. Although it does not say so, I infer that there are two 3-inch flows and twelve returns in each house. If there is no glass in the side walls two 3-inch flows and twelve 1½-inch flows should give a temperature of 50 degrees, when the weather is 10 degrees below zero; and if a temperature of 60 degrees is desired there should be twelve 2-inch returns in addition to two 3-inch flows. Rather than use the 3-inch flows for these houses it would be better to use three 2½-inch flows and seven-2inch returns if 50 degrees is desired, and the same number of flow pipes and ten 2-inch returns for 60 degrees. If the pipes are run down hill, and are well above the boiler, there should be no trouble about the circulation. This will give but about 1,600 feet of radiation, and the heater should carry it easily.—L. R. T.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

GLOXINIAS.—As these plants begin to flower less moisture in the atmosphere is required, and the wetting down of benches and paths need not be done more than once a day. The glass of the house in which they are confined should have another coat of shading put on it if necessary, as the flowers will not last long if good protection from the hot sun be not afforded. When watering use the watercan if possible, then each plant will get what it needs, and no more; the leaves also can be kept dry, while if the hose pipe be used there is danger of keeping them over-soaked with water and cutting short their usefulness.

FUCHSIAS.—Stock plants of varieties intended for next year should be taken care of and given another potting if necessary. They may be placed outdoors if desired, and will do better there than in the greenhouse. Care should be taken, however, to have them sheltered sufficiently, so that the wind will not keep blowing them over and breaking the shoots.

ROSES.—When throwing out the old plants and preparing the house to replant with the fresh, young stock, take time to give the house a thorough cleaning. Have all the wood work gone over and the sides and bottoms of the benches given a good coat of whitewash, made with freshly slacked lime. Put it on thick and be sure to fill every crevice in the boards. It is a well-known fact that new houses always give the best results, and the reason of this is not far to seek—everything being new and clean there is not a last year's corp of bugs and snails hiding about the wood work, ready to pounce upon every green leaf as it appears. If we endeavor, during the time we have the house empty, to make it practically like a new one, by cleaning every part thoroughly, underneath the benches as well as overhead, the crops will be as easy to manage as they were the first year the house was built.

CARNATIONS UNDER GLASS are beginning to look rather weary, yet there are some benches that must be made to furnish flowers for some time yet. These should be gone over, and where the growth has been very rank, alternate plants should be taken out, and all worthless shoots pulled from the plants that are left. Liquid manure may be freely applied, and the glass should be lightly shaded.

ADIANTUM CUNEATUM, growing on benches, and from which it is expected to cut fronds next Winter, should be partially dried down and have a season of rest for a few weeks. When the plants have become dormant they can be lifted and divided if necessary, at which time new soil should be added. If the age of the plants is such that division is not required, then the old dead stalks should all be cleaned away and the surface of the soil loosened and removed. Some new, fresh soil should be added, making it quite firm when finishing. Very little water will be needed until the new fronds appear, therefore care will have to be exercised along this line as an over-supply would prove disastrous. Keep a sprinkling of air-slacked lime between the plants at all times, putting it on fresh whenever that put on previously has washed into the soil. Snails will never then be found meddling with the young fronds.

N. Y. Botanical Garden Conservatories.

Our illustration shows the New York Botanical Garden conservatories, erected by Hitchings & Co., in Bronx Park, New York City. Owing to the fact that there were trees and other obstructions directly in front of the conservatories, the photographer could not get a front view, consequently the range appears very much shorter than it really is. The total length is about 325 feet, the central house being 100 feet in diameter and 87 feet high. The two curvilinear wings are each 120 feet long by 30 feet wide, and the corner houses are 85 feet square, without the vestibules. This half tone is the first and only one made from a photograph of the structures as erected. All other published cuts have been reproduced from drawings.

Florist visitors to the city in August next will find much to admire in these noble structures, which reflect the greatest credit on the builders, from the superior workmanship displayed, and the substantial character of the buildings.

The Cultivation of Flowers, their Influence Upon Society and the Benefit to Gardeners.

Address delivered before Monmouth County Horticultural Society, at Oceanic, N. J., by Dr. W. S. Whitmore.

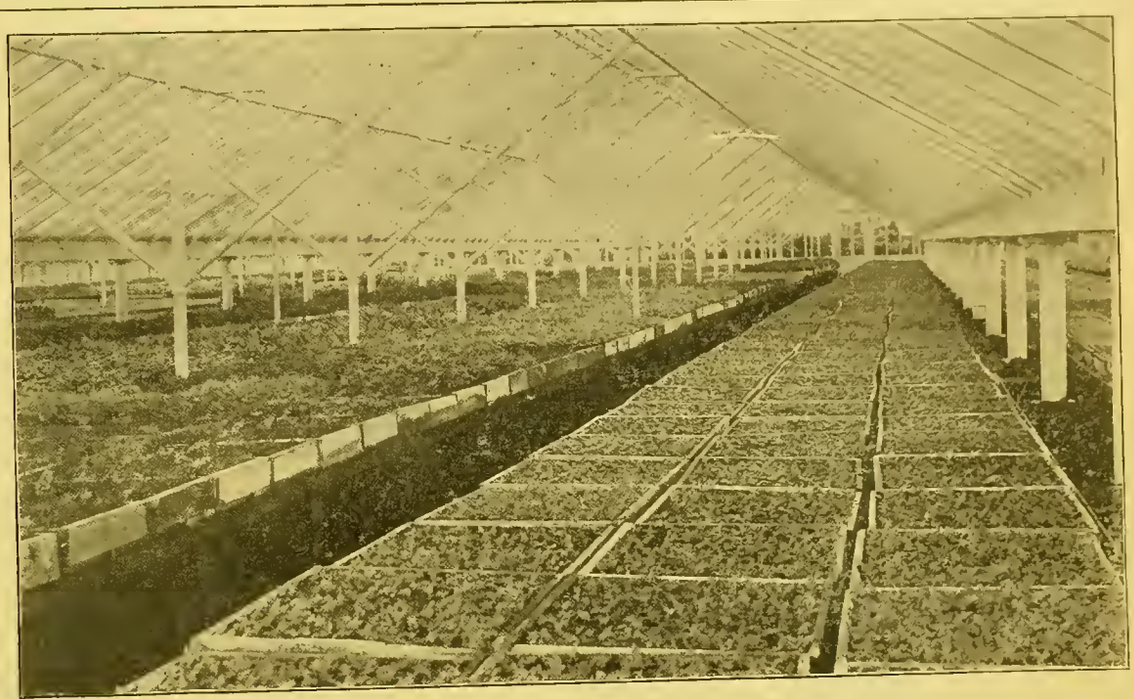
In presentiug my humble effort for your consideration I do not claim to have exhausted the subject. Could I write a volume there would still be things beyond me, and left unsaid. It is not within the province of man to embrace all the significance of my subject, and I merely touch upon the possibilities when I briefly present my sketch. It is a theme that has made man famous in poetry and song; has placed artists upon the highest pedestals of fame, and has brought joy and sunshine into myriads of lives and households, and will go on like the brook forever. The cultivation of flowers was among the first arts. When God created the Garden of Eden He became perforce the first gardener. He filled it with beautiful flowers that it might be both a delight and joy to our first parents.

Of their kind and character Biblical history gives us no knowledge, so we are obliged to turn to mythology for our information and description. It is said that the trailiug arbutus was the richest in beauty, foliage and fragrance of all the floral kingdom. It was styled the flower of Eden, by reason of its attributes, and was Eve's favorite. When desolation was visited upon the Garden, and Eve was banished therefrom, the little arbutus elected to go with her. The Lord in punishment robbed it of its beautiful foliage, but by reason of its attachmeat and loyalty to Eve, allowed it to retain its fragraace. Its companion was what we now known as the night blooming cereus, which was relegated to Adam, and was his favorite. The same condemnation was visited upoa it, and in addition to the loss of its beautiful foliage the Lord decreed that it should never raise its head or bloom in the suulight agaia; and so on through all the vocabulary each flower of Eden has its mythological history, and, though but fictioa, is suggestive of beautiful thoughts and associations.

In the cultivation of flowers, the elemeats, which are stored awny in the recesses of the seed, are brought into activity by man's ageacy, enabling the light to act upon them and delight the eye. They have the colors given them by nature. They are beauties of her majestic bounty. Man's genius, actiag through a perfect understanding of nature's laws, has afforded us the wonderful creations of the floral kingdom; the marvelous colors and combination that delight the eye and make the gardens and the homes veritable Heavens upon earth. Nature's best efforts ia the growing of flowers, all so cleverly improved upon by the artist gardener, that art caa be what it is, because the gardener is what he is.

Who can express the joy of coloring as produced by the gardener? The gleams in the brooklet, the shimmer in the sunbeams, the mellow softness in the morning mist, the flash of color in the song bird's throat, the depth of toae in the ivy leaf, the sheen of silver phosphorescence of the tropic seas, and the cold gray of the October morniag, these and every shade of color are knowa to the expert florist. They make harmony of color a life study and are truly learned in the crossing and the hybridizing of plaats and flowers. All lovers of uature are born for the loving of flowers, and only require the encouragement of the gardeaers' masterwork to develop their latent gift, and direct their work toward beautifying the home; improviag their knowledge and love of flowers and stimulating the effort of the gardener to aobler and greater productions. This innate talent intelligently directed and assisted by the true gardener is what will make them better fitted to disseminate this love of the beautiful aad cultivate it ia the comiag generations. The gardener is naturally eadowed to create and improve oa nature, and is therefore in a position to cultivate and instruct, and by this means are the mediums through which the improvement of man's love and ideas are ealarged, and the increased cultivation of flowers is encouraged, and new loves created. Thus the florist gardener is not only the instructor, but the creator of new loves and new ideas, and also new lovers of nature's sweetest creatioa—flowers! Thus I hold the professioa of gardener is one of the noblest that tames the intellect of maa. Rome had its Cæsar to whom all nations bowed and paid tribute to his power, yet in all his might and majesty he could not raise a single flower. England had her William the Conquerer and France her Napoleon, but with all their knowledge and power they could not propagate a single bud. America had her Washington, than whom the world has seen no greater General, yet he, like all the rest, was ignorant of what he loved the most, the cultivatioa of the flower. Go with me if you will into the church, where tapers burn and vestal choristers sing their hallelujahs to the first Gardener and Creator, the great Jehovah, and what is the first tribute we lay upon the holy shrine? Sweet flowers, emblematic of Christ's purity and love. Follow me to the festal weddiug, and what do we behold? The same tribute to this holy and sacred office—flowers. Go further with me, to the homes of the dead, who sleep their long sleep in their tents of green, and what do we see? The same loving tribute—flowers. And so on through all the phases of life; in joy or in sorrow, in darkness or in sunshine, the one great monitor that speaks, our love and our grief, our sadness or our pleasure, is the same sweet creation of the gardener's handiwork—flowers.

This love of the beautiful opens every day a wider and more useful field for the gardener. The flower is not a simple fad to be cultivated for a few days and then cast aside. They were on earth when the sons of morning sang together, they will gladden the eye until the resurrection. Thus the gardener is the happy instrument through which this love of flowers is perpetuated. Practical men are made poetic by the beauty which is about them, and this love for the flowers grows upon them and is transmitted to their children. Hence, societies are formed and the gardeners vie with each other to create new and beautiful ideas in the cultivation of flowers. Witness the constant rivalry for supremacy at the flower shows throughout our land. The struggle for prizes as a reward and recognition of their efforts. The cynic will say, "Of what use are they? What do they bring? What are they worth?" What is a ribbon worth to a soldier? High thoughts, bright dreams, the ambition to create and improve. It is the desire of every true gardener to succeed, and every success brings a betterment of his condition. It does not come without care and thought. Before anyone can be an artist in his art he must first be a workman at his trade, aad it is only by giving close attention to this diversified and comprehensive study, that these possibilities are acquired. Thus many men are florists, but the want of thoroughness in their early studies is always apparent. This thought should be an incentive to stimulate the gardener to renewed efforts for the mastery of his profession. Every great epoch in the history of the world brings with it a usefulness for flowers. Let me cite one example, the conflict between the North and florists? Hundreds and thousands of South. When the war was over in the South, where, under warmer skies and more poetic temperament, symbols and emblems are better understood than in the practical North, the mothers, widows and children of the Confederate dead went out to decorate the graves of the fallen. With what? Was it with gun and sabre, or implements of war? No. Was it with insignia of heraldry? No. With what then? With simple flowers, casting them unconsciously alike upon the unmarked resting places of the Federal and Confederate dead. Oh, what a revolution of feeling did this create in the hearts of the people of the North. It aroused feelings of amity and friendship. It allayed sectional animosity, and it gave birth to a general day of decoration. And what has been the benefit to gardeners are employed throughout the length and breadth of our land, engaged in the cultivation of these beautiful gems, that our honored dead may sleep beneath a wilderness of flowers. Flowers, sweet flowers, they will ever continue to play their part. Will bring joy to the sorrowful, happiness to the afflicted. They will gladden the heart of the bride, they will be sweet emblems of love to the departed; they are indigenous to all climes. On the summit of the snow-clad hills, greeting the first sun of the early morn, in the wild wood, where the foot of man has never trod. They are in all homes and places. There is not in the history of the world one other creation that bears the same relationship to all our moods, that expresses our thoughts, that conveys the echo of our hearts, that has the same influence upon society, that enriches, ennobles and cultivates the good within us, as this noble effort of the gardener's handiwork—flowers.



House of Seedling Ferns at H. A. Dreer's Nurseries, Riverton, N. J.

Ferns, etc., at Riverton, N. J.

The accompanying illustration shows one of three similar houses which contain in the aggregate more than half a million ferns, chiefly commercial kinds, grown in flats. June is a busy month for the fern grower, and when I paid my usual visit to the nursery of Henry A. Dreer (for it has become an extensive nursery as well as a plant emporium), I found a large number of men busily engaged in preparing a big section of frames for the reception of this popular plant now being placed in pots for Fall use. N. Bruckner, the successful grower, tells me that more than three-fourths of the varieties now grown are comparatively hardy and desirable for dishes. He enumerated a long list of desirable kinds, among which the aspidiums, pteris, lastræas, cyrtomiums and davallias rank foremost, with some kinds of adiantums, of which pubescens is the favorite. Many others, in addition to their suitability for filling dishes, are of ventilation fame, did not agree with valuable as specimens, making this a most interesting class and one that must be studied closely to insure the success attained here.

This is also the season to overhaul palms, and now that the Spring rush of business is over (and the genial superintendent, J. D. Eisele, whispered it was the busiest season he has experienced in almost a quarter of a century), all hands are potting up and repotting to enable the plants to make their Summer growth and become established for Fall shipping. Kentias and cocos are abundant, arecas and latanias not in such large volume. All look in prime condition. There were doubtless many other items of interest to be seen in the houses, but the day was very warm and the aquatic garden more inviting (although my friend John Evans, me—possibly from prejudice, as the aquatics at this season need no ventilators). I found Mr. Tricker examining a seedling nymphæa, which he hopes will surpass that exquisite variety, Wm. Falconer, for which the highest encominms have been received from the highest authorities in Europe as well as in America. And, by the way, shipments to Europe from Riverton have been heavy this season. In yellows there is nothing finer than Chromatella. I observed Victorias with leaves 3 feet across. Of course, they are protected at present, but by the Glorious Fourth they will appear in full view to the crowd of admirers who now annually visit this delightful garden.

On my way to the station I passed some lath or summer houses, beneath which were a fine lot of araucarias making their Summer growth. VISITOR.

The Market.

Graduation and commencement exercises occasioned a little stir in business the past week. Flowers continue in heavy supply, and though the demand is a little better than it has been, yet large quantities are left daily. Outdoor roses are very plentiful, being popular for such business as is going, and clean up pretty well. American Beauty are still in good supply, but are losing color somewhat; still, some of very good quality are obtainable, and when called for fetch $2.50 a dozen; but when the dealer wants to dispose of them badly lower prices prevail. Bride and Bridesmaid are getting very poor in quality, and move slowly at low prices. Carnations continue in pretty good supply, at usual prices, but meet with little demand.

Jottings.

George A. Sutherland entertained a party of six or eight friends to a sail on his steam launch down the harbor last Saturday. The warships, which were then in the harbor, were visited, and altogether a pleasant afternoon was spent.

Edward Hatch entertained the Old Guard at his handsome estate at Wenham on Tuesday of this week. Although only about one-half reported at roll-call, yet the pleasure and jollity made up for the lack in numbers.

Wm. J. Stewart and his party of New York and Philadelphia friends returned from a fishing trip to Rangeley Lakes, Wednesday. Either they had a very good catch, or ran across a fisherman with a handsome lot of fish to sell, judging by the manner in which they distributed their prizes in the city on Wednesday. It can easily be imagined how the fish bit, when it is known that a bold one made away with a line, pole, hook and all, which the luckless fisherman never saw again.

Sarah, daughter of William J. Stewart, was married on Wednesday, June 27, to Mr. Albert S. Dunwell, at Winchester. The best wishes of Mr. Stewart's many friends go with the happy couple.

Lawrence Cotter is getting some exceptionally fine Brunner for this season of the year, from frames.

Welch Bros. are receiving some good pond lilies now, for which they find a very fair demand.

It is hoped a large attendance will be present at the Webster Bowling Alleys, 22 Warren street, Roxbury, on Monday evening, as very little time remains to select a team before the convention. Scores of Monday, June 25, games are to be found under "Bowling" in another column.

Rose and Strawberry Show.

The annual Rose and Strawberry Exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, held on Friday and Saturday last, was very fine. The various displays were large, and the flowers and fruits shown of a very high standard. As usual, M. H. Walsh, of Woods Holl, was the largest exhibitor of roses, but this year he did not have the field all to himself, as has been the case in some former years. Nevertheless Mr. Walsh captured the lion's share of the prizes. Among the other exhibitors of roses were Dr. C. G. Weld, Mrs. O. S. Paige, Miss E. J. Clarke, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, W. J. Clemson, Mrs. E. A. Wilkie, Francis Blake, E. C. Lewis and Mrs. E. M. Gill. Mr. Walsh's collection included a great variety of roses, and, his seedling J. S. Fay again showed up very well. Miss E. J. Clarke's Jacqueminot were very fine, and the moss roses sent in by Mrs. J. L. Gardner were also of a high standard.

Jackson Dawson exhibited 11 hybrid seedlings of various colors, for one of which, "Lady Dunham," he received a silver medal. W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., staged Pink Pearl, a hybrid between Rosa Wichuraiana and Meteor, for which a first-class certificate of merit was awarded; also Improved Pink Roamer (Jersey Beauty × Bardon Job). William H. Spooner showed a semi-double Japanese rugosa, Mrs. Georges Bruant, Lord Penzance's hybrid sweet briars and some old sweet briars, which proved to be an interesting display. Mrs. E. M. Gill exhibited a prettily arranged basket of roses.

Very fine groups of decorative plants were sent in by J. S. Bailey, Mrs. J. L. Gardner and E. S. Converse, who captured the three prizes in the order named.

Some excellent orchid plants were also shown. J. E. Rothwell made a fine exhibit and took the prizes for six varieties in bloom, three varieties in bloom, and both first and second for single specimen plants, his handsome Lælia purpurata, with 34 flowers, capturing first, and a fine piece of Cattleya Mendellii, bearing 26 blooms, second. Mrs. J. L. Gardner showed a nice collection of orchids, and W. A. Manda a hybrid orchid (Cattleya gigas × Lælia tenebrosa). E. S. Converse had a few tuberons begonias, which captured first prize in that class.

In the lower hall some large and interesting displays of native plants were made by Rea Bros., Blue Hill Nursery, and Carl Blomberg. Rea Bros. and W. J. Clemson made nice displays of Spanish irls. Sweet williams were very extensively shown by W. J. Clemson, Anthony McLaren, Mrs. J. L. Gardner, E. C. Lewis, Blue Hill Nursery and Wm. C. Winter. W. E. Coburn made a fine showing of foxgloves, sweet williams, lilies, coreopsis, etc.

The strawberries exhibited were very fine, the season being well suited to them, and the show coming just at the right time. In the competition for prizes under the Theodore Lyman Fund, W. Heustis & Son got first, Sumner Coolidge, second; W. Heustis & Son, third, and G. V. Fletcher, fourth. The variety Marshall captured all but third, where Messrs. Heustis, after getting first on Marshall, won the place with Bubach. Again, in the special prizes, offered by the society, for any variety best adapted for garden cultivation for home use, Marshall won first and second for J. E. Coburn and W. Heustis & Son. Messrs. Heustis got third with Nick Ohmer, and George McWilliam fourth for a seedling. F. J. N.

Wm. C. Stickel has purchased a farm in East Lexington, on which he will erect a residence, using the greater portion of the land in connection with his florist business at North Cambridge.

Trade News.

Summer dullness seems to have settled in. Everything is very quiet in all branches of the trade. In some ways this is a good thing, for as one retailer remarked, "We could not do any business for want of stock to do it with, if there was anything to be done." A few funeral orders comprise the bulk of the trade. Roses have been very scarce and bring 3c. to 6c. Carnations are in fair supply, at 1c. to 1½c.; sweet peas plentiful and cheap as low as $1.50 per 1,000 in large lots.

Notes.

Henry Ostertag has returned from Elkins, W. Va., and is very enthusastic over the success of his mission, the kindly treatment he received in New York and the splendid stock he was able to procure there. He reports the big undertaking went off very smoothly, and, owing to very favorable weather, it being wet and cool, everything kept well. Mr. Ostertag is enraptured over the flora of that part of the country. The rhododendrons and mountain laurel then being at their best he used great quantities of these in his work to good advantage.

Professor Wm. Trelease, of Missouri Botanical Garden, is in New York on a 10 days' visit.

H. G. Berning left recently on a Western trip in the interest of his firm.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL

BY WM. SCOTT.

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

Trade Notes.

The story can now be told of what may be called the close of the florists' harvest, counting, say, from Thanksgiving of last year through to the end of June; and, tersely, may be set down, for this city at least, as a good one. More flowers than ever before have been grown and sent into this market and sold, on the whole, at steadier prices, with gluts of shorter duration.

The past week has been an extremely active one, roses being decidedly below the demand; but to make up, the quantities of choice pæonies sold was very great—a large stock of a red, supposed to be Lord Rothschild, being a notable feature. Last year our estimate of sales of pæony flowers was a quarter of a million. It will go 100,000 better this year, quite a stock yet being in cold storage. The handling of pæonies in this city has got down to a fine point. They are put up in bunches of a dozen blooms, cut just before expanding, closely wrapped with paper and brought from the cool room as fast as sales warrant—may be a dozen times a day. This means, for the very prime, white, pink and yellow, 50c. to 75c. per dozen; others from 20c. to 40c., while those sent in with exposed open flowers go at from 10c. to 15c.—the latter exactly suits the street man.

June brings us no outside roses worthy of mention, hence house-grown stock has the field.

The favorable Winter has increased the quantity, quality and variety of hardy herbaceous flowers. Among those seen the past week were Achillea (the Pearl), columbines, lots of fine Canterbury bells, Coreopsis lanceolata, delphiniums, Gypsophila paniculata, single early sunflower, candytuft, iris and lychnis of sorts, silene, centaureas, Lilium candidum, ox-eye daisies, garden pinks, clematis, feverfew, pansies and mock orange.

It has been a great week for hardy ferns, tens of thousands being sold daily by all the wholesalers. When this is the case business is brisk all along the line.

Round About.

Walter Retzer & Co. have purchased a tract of 45 acres of land between Bowmansville and Niles Center, with a view to branching out extensively hereafter. They are getting the old Fuchs' place in fine condition, having added a long pit for bringing on their kentias. A fine new delivery wagon is another of the good things showing progress. They have imported a lot of standard roses and clematis, which are now all planted out and doing finely.

Fred Hills, of Maywood, has his new house, 27½x130 feet, far enough advanced to be planted to chrysanthemums—about 5,000 plants. W. H. Chadwick is to be grown quite largely. Mr. Hills was very successful with sweet peas the past Winter and Spring.

W. N. Rudd and a party of congenial spirits spent last week fishing in the vicinity of Glen Haven, Mich.

Peter Reinberg and others are cutting a few Liberty roses, as a foretaste of what is to come.

The McClave candidum lilies, from Benton Harbor, Mich., began to arrive on the market on Saturday. They are put up in bunches of 100, and sell for $3. He expects to market about 10,000. The flowers are in good shape.

Nick Wietor is suffering from poisoned thumbs and fingers, through handling roses—the more roses the more thorns. It is supposed, however, the trouble occurred through a bad condition of the system.

Fritz Bahr, of Highland Park, was in the city Saturday and reports a fine Spring business.

J. Austin Shaw left on Monday for Bloomington, thence working toward St. Paul.

James Hartshorne and George Stollery left on the Ivernia, from Boston, for the other side, June 30.

Summer outings of the club are again all the talk. A boat ride to Milwaukee, a big tally-ho coaching party to some point and the deferred trip to Elgin, are all spoken of.

In my notes of the last meeting of the club, when speaking of coal used at Terre Haute, I should have said one of the Hunt Bros., and not Miller.

There are as yet no signs of the early closing movement for the Summer.

Visitors: G. W. Weatherby, Chillicothe, Mo.; D. W. Woods, Los Angeles, Cal.; Fred Gear, Cincinnati, O.; H. W. Kœrner, Milwaukee, and O. Speidel, Oconomowoc, Wis.; George Blackman and J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind. Ees.

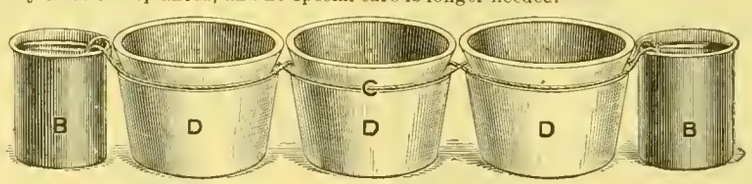
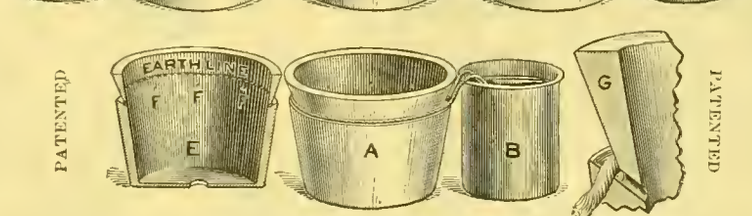
ACME POT

THIS INVENTION is a self-watering pot or pan, devised specially for spores, fine seeds and cuttings, and accomplishes a result hitherto unattained by any former system. Under the old method of surface watering, spores, which are so small as to be invisible to the naked eye, as well as many very fine seeds, such as azalea, begonia, cineraria, rhododendron, etc., are often, if not entirely destroyed, washed or floated away with the water, and those that grow, if any, come up very unevenly and irregularly. Not infrequently the action of the water on the soil, no matter how fine the spray, compacts and hardens the surface, rendering it impossible for the seeds or tender germs to get through; as a result the seedsman is often scored for selling old or worthless seeds, while the real cause of failure lies elsewhere. The pot, as will be seen by the cuts, is original in its construction and application, and is the result of many years of practical experience in the art of propagating and raising seeds and spores; it dispenses entirely with surface watering and the dangers arising therefrom until the plants or seedlings are ready to be transplanted, and no special care is longer needed.





Description of Pot, Showing Method of Supplying Water:

A, indicates the pot; B, a reservoir for water; C, a cord, preferably of wool or yarn, connecting said reservoir and pot, through or over which the water is siphoned by capillary attraction or force from the reservoir B, to the pot A. D D.D. is a series of pots with reservoir at both ends, showing siphon cords in position. E, section of pot through its vertical axis, showing earth line and perforations or water passages below. Encircling the pot about 1½ inches below the top is a peripheral angular groove leading downward, out of which, at its lowest point or angle, are the water passages or ducts, F.F.F. G, full size section, showing groove, with cord siphon.

PRICE BOXED, F.O.B:

Pot and Siphon Cord Complete, 50 cts. each; $5.00 per dozen.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, O., President; F. W. BOLGIANO, First Vice-President; S. G. COURTEEN, Milwaukee, Wis., Second Vice-President; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer.

New York.—The seed business is about over for this season. Trade has been very satisfactory. In some of the city seed stores a marked increase has been noted in the retail trade. Pole and some other varieties of beans have been in rather short supply, as also were some kinds of peas and early cabbage seed.

Des Moines Ia.—The Iowa Seed Company has secured ground in a new location, and will erect a three-story and basement seed warehouse, 66x132 feet. The new building, when completed, will give employment to 100 hands and enable the company to fill all orders promptly. The main offices and the retail business of the Iowa Seed Company will remain at their present quarters, on Locust street, where they will be all the better prepared to take care of their large and constantly-increasing city trade. Many improvements and a considerable outlay of money will be made also on their extensive greenhouses and other property.

Long Island Crops.—What the harvest will be now depends upon atmospheric conditions, which are unknown, ungovernable quantities. When the cabbage, kale and turnips were coming into flower the conditions were absolutely perfect, the weather was cool and dry. Then nothing was more dreaded than rain, which, if long continued, destroys the pollen, rendering fertilization impossible, consequently a failure of crop. Now, there is nothing so much needed as rain. In some sections where the soil is light the crop is beginning to suffer, and it will continue to do so unless we have copious showers at once. With such the acreage set, unfortunately small, will be the most productive ever known. Without rain, in some soils, the crop will mature, the seed will be small but of excellent quality.

Beans are already suffering badly; they are, in many fields just coming into blossom, while the plants are not more than half size. A generous rain would be timely, as it would save the crop.

Kale could not now be benefited, it being nearly ready for the harvest, and on light soils the crop will fall much below our anticipations.

Turnips have completed their work, and will be harvested this week. The same is true with Brussels sprouts; the crop will be heavier than usual and exceptionally fine.

Dill is in a bad way. Insect enemies devoured most of the plants; the remainder are weak from the loss of their juices! In addition to that the present dry weather is exhaustive. Two weeks more and the harvests will be over with the brassicas, and the tale will then be told.

European Notes.

A hot, dry wave has spread itself over the whole of Europe, and in general the effect must be beneficial. There are some few exceptions, particularly Swedes and turnips, that are always benefited by a "dripping June," but onion, carrot, endive and lettuce fairly revel in the sunshine, and just now they have their fill. If our mangel and beet plants had been stronger we should have been equally satisfied on their account; as it is, the acreage is small and the crop will be also meagre.

Beans, both dwarf and pole varieties, are doing grandly. The broad beans, like the peas, sadly need a good rain. Celery will also be short this year. So far as the common varieties are concerned this will not matter very much, but the fancy varieties so highly esteemed in America were almost cleared out last season, and the crops are bound to be insufficient.

Up to date we have had the pleasure of visits from Messrs. Lem W. Bowen, of Detroit; J. B. Agnew, of Agnew, Cal., and W. H. Maule, of Philadelphia. We hope to see many more.

Origin of Greenhouses.

Mr. Wm. Watson, of Kew, says that the first greenhouse erected in England, was in the Apothecaries Garden, at Chelsea, in 1684. It merely had glass sides, and was heated by a kind of oven. In 1717, a glass-roofed house was built by the Duke of Rutland, at Belvoir Castle, for foreign grapes, heated by furnaces placed under the floor of the house. Steam was first used in 1788; and hot water, soon afterwards, was applied to a small house in the Jardin des Plantes, at Paris.—Meehan,s Monthly.

We wish to assure those interested that Chicago is still in the race, and will be in at the finish, and to ask the mutual friends of the two contestants to make their decision at the convention after both sides have had a hearing.

Trade Notes.

The past month has been an unusually good one in flower lines, and trade at the present time is reported to be quite brisk for this time of the season, with the usual Summer dull period just at hand. Weddings and commencement exercises are over, and work in these lines is at a standstill. Flowers are in good supply, and although the demand for stock is much less than it has been for the past several weeks, growers and wholesalers report a fairly good trade for the present week. Present rates on roses are $2 to $5 per 100. Carnations move slowly at $1 to $1.50 per 100. Lillum candidum are still on hand in considerable quantity, but the stock now offered is all from storage, and the prevailing rate for best spikes is $5 per 100. Sweet peas are quite plentiful, and the best rate realized by the growers is $1 per 1000; much of the present offerings does not bring that figure. There is an abundance of outdoor flowers brought in, and there is no market on this class of stock; growers take whatever price is offered, there being no fixed value on such stock as cornflowers, coreopsis, gaillardia, iris, etc. A few gladiolus are offered, but there is as yet no established price on them.

Retail trade is but fair and prices are as follows: Roses, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; carnations, 25c. to 50c. per dozen; candidum lilies, $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

Weather conditions at this writing are very trying. We are suffering from a drought of several weeks duration with prospects for rain are not very bright, and unless a change comes before long the dry weather will create incalculable damage to all growing crops. The temperature for the past several days has been hovering pretty close to the ninety mark.

Notes.

It is expected by many of the downtown storekeepers that the six o'clock closing movement will be started in the near future, and as near as the writer can learn all that is necessary is for someone to take the initiative in this direction; the majority express a willingness to enter an arrangement of this kind if once started.

Care of Trees on the Streets of Cities.

Read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, by John C. Lewis, City Forester and Landscape Gardener.

While the form of the question before us "The Care of Trees on the Streets of Cities," is at the same time both comprehensive and incomprehensive, inasmuch as the variety and treatment of trees on the streets of cities differ on account of location and climatic conditions; hence one prescribed form, while eminently successful in one city, would be inapplicable and unsuccessful in another perhaps. I will therefore confine my remarks to the care of trees on the streets of our own city, Philadelphia; and when we consider the fact that on the City Plan there are over two thousand miles of streets, and over one thousand miles opened and occupied, we have sufficient food for thought in the trees of our own city, without going elsewhere.

The subject of trees on our streets in its many and varied aspects, is quite an extensive one, and as the time for its consideration to-night is limited, it will be necessary for the conveyance of a general and practical idea, to condense its consideration as much as possible. I will therefore proceed under the following headings. First: The suitable variety to plant; the selection of the trees; how to plant and where; pruning at the time of planting; after care and attention, and general remarks.

SELECTION OF TREES.

In my opinion, the most desirable varieties to plant in Philadelphia are as follows:

Platinus orientalis or Asiatic plane, Acer saccharinum or sugar maple, Acer platanoides or Norwny maple (pyramidal type), Acer dasycarpum or silver maple, Liriodendron tulipifera or tulip poplar, Populus balsamifera or balsam poplar, Tilia americana or American linden, and Ulmus americana or American elm.

There are others that are less desirable for reasons obvious, a few of which I will enumerate:

Acer pseudo-platanus or sycamore maple, Æsculus glabra or horse chestnut, Ailantus glandulosa or tree of heaven, Catalpa speciosa or Indian bean tree, Salisburia adiantifolia or Ginkgo, Tilia europæa or European linden and some few others.

Having decided on the variety to be planted, the next in order is the selection of the trees. This is a very important matter, for we must not lose sight of the fact that nurserymen very properly select locations most suitable for the growth of trees, where the soil, moisture, both subterranean and atmospheric, and other climatic conditions harmonize, and are in every way adapted to the luxuriant growth and development of the trees they eventually offer for sale, consequently in bringing trees from the nursery to our streets, where they have to combat contra-conditions for an existence, it is imperative that the trees be healthy, vigorous, free from scars or wounds and insects in any form, and having an abundance of energetic fibrous roots, with robust and straight stems.

HOW AND WHERE TO PLANT.

Having made the selection in quantity and quality, how and where to plant, is next in order. Years back, when the Winter set in before the expiration of the Autumn season, and the Spring followed closely on the heels of Winter, the Spring season was preferable for planting, but now the seasons being erratic, and often vice-versa to what they formerly were, I have found it profitable to change my tactics and plant in the Fall season, with the exception of the liquidambar, liriodendron and one or two other varieties that have succulent roots, for which the Spring season is the best.

We will now consider how to plant. The streets of Philadelphia contain, generally speaking, and in greater or less degree, matter that is not only deleterious to the growth of a tree, but in many cases kills the tree outright. We find ashes, gravel, blue clay and other sterile soil, seasoned with brick bats, tin cans, antiquated shoes, etc., the whole being impregnated with gas and other noxious odors, all of which form a combination exactly opposite to what the tree has been accustomed to, and to which it must adapt itself or die. However, the several thousands of trees that have been planted on our sidewalks and other places under my direction bear evidence by their luxurious growth and development, that this difficulty can be overcome. On unpaved sidewalks the operation of planting is decidedly easier and less expensive than on paved sidewalks, for there is nothing but plain digging to be done, while on a granolithic pavement, the crow-bar takes the place of the spade, and the operation is slow and tedious.

The rule I adopted four years ago, and which has proved successful, is this: On an unpaved sidewalk, where nothing obstructs, the hole for the tree should be dug three feet square and three feet deep, and refilled with rich earth, free from all deleterious substances. On a paved sidewalk, where the aperture is about two feet only, excavate till at least a full sized cart load of rich earth can be deposited in the hole made, the depth being considered rather more than the width in this case.

In filling in the new soil, about half a bushel of oyster shells should be mixed in, which will absorb and render harmless the gas, which is poison to tree life and which percolates through the subsoil throughout the city, from the numerous gas mains, etc. Care must be taken to firm the earth as it is filled in, and in the performance of this operation the human foot is far preferable to the rammer, the elastic tread of the former produces a better firming effect, and excludes the air far better than the latter. In planting the tree, carefully observe the surface mark on the stem and avoid planting too deep. My rule is to raise the tree one, or one and a half inches above the mark of the nursery ground line, so that when the ground sinks to its normal condition, which it invariably will, however well firmed or rammed, the tree will then be at its proper depth. Before passing on, it is necessary to add that an ordinance of Councils requires trees, awning posts, etc., to be placed not less than fourteen inches from the outer edge of the curb, so that collision with the hubs of wagon wheels will be avoided.

PRUNING AT TIME OF PLANTING.

The next heading is pruning at the time of planting. It is unreasonable to suppose and expect that nature can maintain the luxuriant and symmetrical form of a tree produced by several years' growth under the most favorable conditions, when that tree is brought into the city and subjected to contra-conditions; Nature will assert, and strive to adapt itself to the existing conditions, it is true, but without skillful assistance, it will fail in the attempt and the tree will succumb. Pruning is necessary both in the branches and roots. In my opinion, as the root is the most important feature of a tree, it should receive the first and greatest attention. The ends of all trunk roots should be pruned off, broken roots removed, and any cancerous or fungoid growth, however minute its appearance may be, must be pruned away, the operation being performed with a sharp knife and not by shears. Of the use of shears I will speak a little later on. Now as to head pruning. Practice teaches us that the beautiful symmetrical form of the tree obtained by the patient and skillful assistance to Nature by the nurseryman in the tree's natural element, cannot possibly be maintained under adverse conditions. The only remedy, therefore, is to extend further assistance to nature by judicious pruning into a reduced symmetrical form natural to the true type of the tree, according to its variety, thereby relieving the tree of a burden it cannot possibly carry, and assisting it to reproduce itself in a healthy form, under its new conditions.

The results of the foregoing methods are to-day in evidence in several parts of our city, especially so on the sidewalks surrounding Allegheny Square, which is situated on Allegheny avenue and Belgrade street, John Dickinson Square, Third and Tasker streets, and Wharton Square, Twenty-third and Wharton streets. At each of these places the sidewalk pavements are granolithic, and the surrounding streets are surfaced with belgian blocks and asphaltum respectively.

AFTER CARE AND ATTENTION.

Continuing we will consider the after care and attention of the trees we have now in our mind's eye, planted. I do not in all cases agree with the practice of puddling the roots of trees immediately prior to planting, but prefer giving a liberal supply of water at the close of the firming. When the water has disappeared the soil should be filled in slightly above the surface line and leveled off without further treading or firming, and if the weather be dry the earth should be kept moist by an occasional watering. This applies to Spring planting only, for rarely, if ever, is it necessary to water trees that are planted in the Fall season. The infant forest giant has many enemies to contend with when ensconced on our sidewalk, apart from the underground conditions. The cart driver frequently breaks off a branch to switch his horse, the small boy loves to swing around and around its bending stem; at night cats may be seen sharpening their claws in its bark from which wounds are made, the boy with the knife, and what boy hasn't a knife, is very fond of trying its edge on every tree he passes, especially a young, newly planted tree, with tempting smooth bark, and older boys that are supposed to know better, do not hesitate to hitch their horses to the convenient sidewalk tree, the horse at once gnaws the bark or young shoots or both, and often leaves it irredeemably mutilated; and then the caterpillar pest, with which many portions of our city are infested at this present time, neglect for the want of watering and several other adverse contingencies could be named, atmospheric gases and influences, etc.; and yet some people wonder why their trees do not thrive, and endeavor to compare their friends' trees in the country with theirs on their sidewalk, failing to consider the wide difference between the conditions of the two.

Experience has taught me that the antiquated tree box, the wood or metal frame tree guard, is very little service to the tree, but rather on the contrary is injurious, as also the wooden stake or support, except, perhaps, in the case of the latter in very windy and exposed situations.

To guard the tree from the attack of its worst enemies, I find the half-inch mesh galvanized wire cloth placed loosely around the stem and fastened with wire to be not only economical but the most protective of all the several designs of so called tree guards. This can be removed or enlarged at will, according to the requirements of the tree. It is proof against the grasp of the swinging boy, the claws of cats, the edge of the jack-knife, the death dealing bite of the horse, and forms a comfortable rendezvous for the caterpillar to go into the cocoon stage of its existence, and being easy of removal, this pest can as easily be annihilated and the tree preserved.

GENERAL REMARKS.

We have now reached our last heading, "general remarks." Referring back to the pruning question, I recommended the use of the knife in preference to shears, and the reasons for my preference for the former are as follow: The drawing together of the tissues by the action of the shears bruises them, leaving a rough surface and causes decay, and this applies to the branches as well as to the roots, whereas the knife leaves a clean, smooth surface and the liber or inner bark forms a callous covering, from which new fibres start and form roots, thus supplying new feeders to the tree. In reference to the branches, the shears leave the ends rough and bruised, and death to the immediate part is the result, for decay sets in; and time alone will tell us whether one inch, one foot, or the whole branch succumbs to the operation. Whereas, if the knife is used the liber exerts itself and gradually envelops the wound till it disappears from view. I do not by any means wish to disparage the use of shears for general purposes; in this age of keen competition they cannot be dispensed with, for both shears and the knife can be used. The shears can do the trimming, but the knife alone can do the pruning. The operator can go over the tree, both root and branch with the shears, trimming the parts an inch or so beyond the pruning point, and then follow with the knife and do the pruning expeditiously. The foregoing applies only to small trees such as are usually planted on our streets. In larger trees both shears and knife are laid aside and the saw and broad chisel take their places.

I have offered us evidence in support of the methods here recommended for street tree planting, those trees surrounding the small parks named, and in support of the enlarged method of pruning, several thousand trees and many of the largest are in evidence in our beautiful Fairmount Park. I could there point out to you numerous amputations, some of which extended over twelve inches in diameter, that are now nearly covered with new bark, and thousands of others that are entirely covered, and but for my association with the trees themselves, even I could not locate the parts pruned. After pruning, all wounds from one inch and upwards in diameter should receive a coat of paint, which will prevent the decay of the heart wood, and the kind used in my many years of practice, is boiled linseed oil colored with lamp black. Why I prefer this and not coal tar, put on hot, as some recommend, is because linseed oil is a vegetable production and therefore analogous to the tree, while coal tar is a mineral production and contains carbolic acid, which is injurious to plant life. It is optional whether lamp black is used or not, the only recommendation it has is that it turns to an invisible green color in a short time, and thus hides from view the bareness shown by the amputation, and without which the wound in a large tree would be very conspicuous.

Among the many drawbacks incident to the life of a city tree is the contraction of its outer bark, the roots may take hold of the soil, which we can tell by external evidence in the growth and vigor of the branches, but some times a check occurs and the tree stands still. This I find is caused by being bark-bound, or as we would say in reference to an animal, hide-bound.

The reason I ascribe for this, is that vegetation in the city, especially in the more crowded parts, does not receive the full benefit of the nightly dew. The dew falls over the city as well as the country, but the smoke, heat and gaseous vapors arising from the city, either absorb the dew or impregnate it to such an extent, that it loses its life-giving properties and destroys its efficacy. Now to remedy this bark contraction, I find scoring gives relief to the tree. This is performed by drawing the point of a sharp knife down the stem to the ground, leaving a furrow from top to bottom. The salutary effect of this scoring process will be discernible in a very short time, by the renewed energy of the buds and twigs or infant branches of the tree.

Having guarded the tree from injurious attacks of all its enemies here enumerated, there remains yet another to combat, namely, the caterpillar, the second army of which is now so strongly in evidence throughout parts of our city.

Doubtless all here present remember the disastrous state of affairs in the matter of tree life that existed in our city four or five years ago, caused by the ravages of the tussock moth and its numerous progeny, the hairy caterpillar. To say nothing of the trees on the streets and in private grounds our small parks and squares were not only denuded of their foliage and rendered shadeless, but were practically deserted by pedestrians and the rest-seeking public, for in sitting on the benches or even passing through the pest dropped down from the trees in such numbers that many persons carried umbrellas to shield themselves from the rain—literally speaking—of caterpillars, and this occurring as early as the beginning of July, the thousands of our citizens whose scant means and daily vocations prevented them from leaving city during the heated term, were deprived of the life-resuscitating advantages, and health-giving properties our public squares and small parks afforded them prior to the advent of the caterpillar, and which they now enjoy through the untiring energies of the Bureau of City Property. A tour of our small parks and squares will reveal the fact that less than 1 per cent. of the thousands of trees owned and controlled by the city are leafless, and further, if the tour is made late in the evening, it would convey an idea of the appreciation shown by hundreds of thousands of our citizens and their families, of the provisions made by Councils and the carrying into effect of the same by the Department for the health, comfort and pleasure of our people at large. But to produce this it has not been an easy matter; time, thought and money have been expended, and the warfare must go on to preserve this state of affairs, and further, it is imperative that private tree owners co-operate with the Department by judiciously caring for their own trees. If they do not, the pest remains, and year after year we will be subjected to its ravages. The destruction of the trees our fathers and grandfathers planted for us, to say nothing of those we have planted ourselves, goes on, and the city is put to an unnecessary expense year after year.

I am gratified to state that many of our citizens have awakened to this fact, and frequently my office is visited by numbers desiring information on this all-important subject, and which is at all times cheerfully given. Time will not permit me to enlarge on this question of extermination, and suffice to say, that the means used by the Department are three (3) and are as follows: Remove and crush or burn the cocoons whenever and wherever found, spraying with Paris green in weak solution at the rate of one pound of Paris green to four hundred (400) gallons of water, or if necessity requires, the strength is doubled. This, however, is the exception and not the rule. It is not the quantity of Paris green used that renders it effective so much as the agitation and distribution of it. These are exterminators, while the third means is a preventive. The trees are girdled about six (6) feet from the ground, with a device known as "Pillar Catter," which consists of a cotton bandage to which an adhesive paste is attached. This prevents the caterpillar from ascending the tree, and places it in a convenient position to be crushed. Now while each individual tree owner cannot command the use of a steam sprayer, that cannot be used as an argument why his tree or trees are not protected from the caterpillar, for he can produce equal effects in a small way with an ordinary greenhouse syringe, as with a steam spraying machine, especially so if the number of his trees is limited to one or two, and those one or two on his sidewalk, which are easy of access. With the aid of a tall step-ladder, a syringe, and a bucket of solution, a great number of the trees on our streets can be protected and preserved, and at a nominal cost.

Rose Show at Newport, R. I.

The annual rose and strawberry show of the Newport Horticultural Society was held at Masonic Hall, Newport, R. I., June 26-27. The display of roses was large and the quality good. Fruit and vegetables were only shown in limited quantities, but both were above the average in quality.

The judges were William Anderson, Henry Siebrecht, Jr., and Arthur Griffin. The latter, being a competitor in many of the classes, was unable to serve in these, his place being taken by John Ash, of Pomfret Centre, Conn.

In roses the principal exhibitors were: Messrs. M. H. Walsh, of Woods Hole, Mass.; Thomas Beattie, of Pomfret, Conn.; Hugh Williamson, gardener to W. W. Astor, Esq.; Colin Robertson, gardener to Mrs. Robert Goelet; Alexander Frazer, gardener to H. McK. Twombly, Esq.; William Nichol, gardener to Mrs. William F. Burden, Esq.; Richard Gardner, gardener to J. J. Van Alen, Esq., and Gibson Bros.

M. H. Walsh showed a vase of his new seedling hybrid perpetual rose, J. S. Fay, which was awarded the society's first-class certificate of merit. The same gentleman was also awarded the society's silver medal for the largest and finest collection of roses on exhibition, and in the regular classes won first place for best 25 blooms H. P. roses, best 12 blooms and best six blooms. His varieties in those classes were: Jubilee, Marchioness of Londonderry, Proper Laugunge, Mrs. J. G. Sharman-Crawford, Fisher Holmes, Marie Rady, Alfred Colomb, Baron de Bonstetten, Marchioness of Downshire, Mme. Annie Wood, Baroness Rothschild, Helen Keller, Ulrich Brunner, Mrs. John Laing, Clio, Rhodocanachi, Margaret Dickson, Charles Lefebre, Udster, Merveille de Lyon, Marie Baumnn, Mrs. F. W. Sanford, Mrs. Frank Cant, Mme. Nachury, Earl of Dufferin, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, some of these varieties being represented in all three classes. He also was first in class for best vase, 12 blooms, red, with Ulrich Brunner; best vase 12 blooms, pink, with Mrs. Sharman-Crawford; best vase 12 blooms, white (Margaret Dickson); best vase 25 blooms, any variety, with Ulrich Brunner.

For best fancy basket of roses arranged for effect, Gibson Bros. were first, Bruce Butterton second, Robert Laurie third. Competition in the above class was good, some excellent taste being shown. By the way would it not be well in classes of this kind to have the baskets replenished each day? As it is, few of them are presentable on the second day.

In strawberries, for best collection, Elbridge T. Gerry, Esq., Arthur Griffin, gardener, was first. His varieties were: Marshall, Enormous, Gandy, Glen Mary and Brandywine. Isaac L. Sherman second, with Jessie, Princess, Tennessee Prolific, Brandywine, Bismarck, Glen Mary. Colin Robertson won the medal for best dish of strawberries on exhibition. Andrew Ramsey and Charles D. Stark were also prize takers.

John Ash, of Pomfret Centre, Conn., showed some fine grapes, being a large prize winner.

In the class for fern dishes one of Adiantum Farleyense was the winner, the premiums being awarded first to Robert Laurie; second to Arthur Griffin; third to Chas. D. Stark.

For center piece of foliage plants: First, Arthur Griffin; second, Robert Laurie; third, Charles D. Stark.

Specimen palms—Kentia—Robert Laurie; specimen areca—Arthur Griffin. Specimen any other palm—Robert Laurie, with a fine piece of Phœnix rupicola.

Six specimen ferns, at least three varieties: First, Harry Westley, gardener for I. T. Burden, Esq.

Certificates of merit were awarded as follows: To new rose, J. S. Fay, shown by M. H. Walsh; Mrs. Theo. K. Gibbs, for new climbing rose Virginia, the flowers in size and form resembling a bloom of Gardenia radicans, color after rose Waban; Charles D. Stark, for large specimen plant of Alocasia Thibautiana; Robert Laurie, for extra well-grown specimens Begonia rex; Arthur Griffin, for English musk melon, "The Favorite."

Andrew S. Meikle, for group of palms, ferns and orchids, was awarded a gratuity, and a similar award was made to Charles D. Stark for group of finely colored crotons.

James Matson received special mention for display of cut blooms hardy roses, as did James Boyd, for exhibit of cut blooms Marechal Niel rose; Bruce Butterton, for specimen clerodendron plants in blooms; John Falkenholm, for cut blooms herbaceous plants; William S. Nicholl, for large specimen plants Dracæna Lindenii, and The Geo. A. Weaver Co., for a fine display of garden tools and implements.

A discussion arose as to whether rose American Beauty should be classed with the H. P. group or among the H. T's. One grower who entered in Class 1—that calling for 25 blooms H. P.—by oversight put in a bloom of Gloire de Dijon and was disqualified, and yet, strange to say, the same judges gave first place, as a tea rose, to Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, which is usually classed as an H. T. MAC.

Boston.—The attendance on the alleys was better this week than on the opening night, quite a few of the old rollers appearing who were not present a week ago. Some fairly good scores were made. Geo. A. Sutherland rolled high single score of 183, and M. H. Norton made best average in three strings, with 153⅔. Capt. Rough announced a prize of $15 which he offers to the member of the Boston team making the highest string at the bowling contest in New York.

The Market.

The Fourth, combined with a tropical heat, have contributed this week to create conditions somewhat intensified from those last reported, so far as the cut flower market is concerned. There has been little or nothing doing. The stock arriving, too, has been of poor quality, roses particularly showing up in a sorry state from mildew and other untoward agencies. Carnations have also deteriorated in quality, and to aggravate matters some shippers, mistaking the nature of the holiday just past, held back large quantities of the divine flower, dumping them on an already stagnated market on the morning of the Fourth, with the result that they went on the street—or nowhere.

Lily of the valley has been overplentiful this week, as have longiflorum lilies. Beauty being about the only flowers for which a demand was felt. Gladiolus have also increased in supply, with a consequent fall in value; asters are arriving in quantities, bringing $1.50 a dozen bunches.

The funeral of the victims of the terrible fire that occurred Saturday last, on the North German Lloyd Steamship docks, at Hoboken, N. J., when three of the company's steamers were destroyed and over one hundred persons either burned or drowned, created a slight improvement in the market conditions existing in the Cut Flower Exchange at 34th street, Thursday morning, in a demand for funeral stock by the Hoboken florists, but didn't affect the whole market, the most of the flowers being purchased at the before-named mart.

The business of the day may be said to be over by 10 o'clock, and after that hour salesmen and their help have all they can do this sultry weather to keep awake.

With the exception of the Cut Flower Company the wholesale stores will not this year close at 4 p. m.; instead the proprietors have agreed to grant the boys a half holiday every alternate day—an arrangement that is evidently giving general satisfaction.

Jottings.

Ghormley & Perkins, who have been in the wholesale commission business for some time, at 57 West 28th street, dissolved partnership July 1.

J. J. Featherstone, 23d street, was in attendance at the Democratic Convention in Kansas City this week.

The Cut Flower Company held a meeting Monday last for the election of officers and directors. The old board was re-elected. The officers are: President, John N. May; vice-president, Eugene Dailledonze; secretary and treasurer, George W. Hillman, Jr., of Flushing.

Several of the commission stores are now house-cleaning and otherwise fixing up in preparation for the critical inspection of the numerous delegates to the convention expected here August next.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club occurs Monday evening next. It is expected that many matters connected with the convention will be finally decided at this meeting, and a large attendance is therefore earnestly requested. The bowlers, as usual, will roll in the afternoon of the same day.

The shooting tournament is hardly creating the excitement of its sister sport, bowling, judging by the small number of inquiries regarding the former coming in. Is it not time that a home shooting team was formed to participate in the contest?

Thomas Young, Sr., called on his boys in 28th street this week. The old gentleman, despite his many years, is as buoyant and sprightly as ever.

President O'Mara was recently the recipient of a communication from Salt Lake City, offering to sell him a formula of a "cure-all" for every kind of "poison" to which the florist is subjected. The president says he has no use for the decoction, never being afflicted along the lines indicated, but advises us of the "blessing" for the benefit of those less fortunate.

The present week has seen an exodus of quite a number of the craft for Europe; among them Thomas Young, Jr., accompanied by Mrs. Young, Herman Kuhn, Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, and L. J. Kreshover.

Among visitors en route for the "other side" have been Prof. L. R. Taft and R. Gunson, of the Agricultural College, Michigan. Others in town were Messrs. Rennie and Pino, Providence, R. I.; Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., and Mr. Peterson, of D. Landreth & Sons, Philadelphia.

Club Meeting.

The meeting on Tuesday evening was fairly well attended for a July assembly; but what with the high temperature and a heavy thunderstorm all the life was taken out of those present. It was decided to send invitations to all florists' clubs whose members are likely to pass this way on their trip to the convention to stop off in this city, as Monday, August 20, there will be open house in our club room, and all visiting delegates can have an enjoyable time, be infused with enthusiasm ready for the convention, and then join the delegates from this city in a special train to New York that evening. This special train will be appropriately decorated and well stocked in case it should get delayed on the way.

An Elegant Trophy.

The feature at the club meeting was the magnificent silver cup presented by the Floral Exchange, Inc., the introducers of the new rose Queen of Edgely, through this club to the Florists' Bowling Association, to be competed for at New York. The donors have left all details to the Bowlers' Association, but conditions will be regulated by what the other tropies are given for. There being prizes for the best single game and best three games, this one may be given for best two games. It is the finest trophy ever given in connection with the florists' convention, standing three feet high, massive and of fine appearance. An illustration of it will appear next week.

At the August meeting a discussion will take place as to the "Best Methods of Constructing Cooling Rooms for Florists," to be opened by H. C. Geiger. Do not take this to mean that florists themselves want cooling; it is really the best kind of room for growers to keep their flowers in after cutting.

Nothing can be said as to business in the cut flower line, everything is very quiet. Not even is there much funeral work around.

Harry Bayersdorfer has returned from his annual trip to Europe. He has had a very successful journey, and has succeeded in picking up many novelties in the florist supply line. Some of these will be seen at the convention next month.

BY GEORGE W. OLIVER, PROPAGATOR TO THE U. S. BOTANIC GARDEN, WASHINGTON, D.C. AND LATE OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN, EDINBURGH.

A working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist or Gardener, and those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer.

The plants dealt with comprise those which are commercially handled by Florists, Gardeners and Nurserymen, and include Florists' Flowers, Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Annuals, Shrubs, Hardy and Tender Vines, and a chapter on miscellaneous subjects in connection with the above.

This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Making an Asparagus Bed.

Read by Joseph Hurley before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Asparagus is a vegetable that ought to be in every private garden, therefore it is one of those things the planting of which should not be put off from year to year, but should be done just as soon as the property has been secured and the owner has made up his mind to build his home.

A great many people are deterred from planting an asparagus bed because it takes so long to come into bearing, hence the greater the necessity for starting at once.

LOCATION.

Having made up your mind to plant the asparagus bed, the next thing to do is to choose a good location, and by that I mean one with a southern exposure and sufficient fall to carry away all surplus water. On flat, level land, where the water is apt to lie, you can help it considerably by putting broken stone about one foot in the bottom of the trenches; this will keep the water away from the crowns at all times.

PREPARATION OF THE BED.

For a good and lasting bed of asparagus it is necessary to prepare the ground thoroughly by digging the whole bed over to a depth of at least four feet. First remove all top soil, one spade deep, and cart it away to a pile close by the bed so as to have it handy when the bed is dug over to spread again over the surface. You now proceed to open up your first row. This can readily be done by carting the dirt over and beyond where your last row is to be; then put in the bottom of your trench a layer of manure 6 inches deep, then a layer of dirt off your next row; again a layer of manure and so on, every other layer of manure and dirt until you have the whole bed dug over.

When digging keep a sharp lookout for stones, and remove all of them, no matter how small, as they will interfere with the cutting, especially if you want white grass.

SOIL.

The best soil for growing asparagus is a rather light, sandy one. Not only will it produce the nicest heads, but it will produce three heads to the one that you will get from a heavy clay soil. I would recommend wherever the soil is not naturally light, that it be made so in preparing the bed by mixing sand or some other light material with it.

PLANTING.

Having had the whole bed dug over we now start to dig trenches for the plants. These trenches should be 20 inches deep and 4 feet apart, and the plants in the rows not less than 3 feet apart; and where room is no object I would put the plants 4 feet apart in the row and cover the crowns to the depth of 2 or 3 inches.

Spring is the best time to plant; do not do it in the Fall or the crowns will rot; or at least nine-tenths will, necessitating planting again in the Spring.

Two-year-old roots are generally used, and I would advise anyone planting a bed of, say, 500 roots, to order from the nurseryman at least 1,000 roots, and pick from them the strongest crowns and those that have been the least injured and throw the remainder away.

TREATMENT.

All that is necessary to do the first year is to keep the bed free from weeds. This will have to be done with the hoe. Care should be taken that not too much soil is hoed off the banks, as it all drops into the trenches and is liable to smother the crowns. The second year the treatment is about the same as during the first, except that you can go a little deeper with the hoe. Each time you hoe you can pull a little soil off the banks around the growing plants, so that about August, when you have hoed for the last time, you will have about 12 inches of soil above the crowns. In the third year, if you have succeeded with your bed, you may begin cutting, and from time to time as the bed requires digging you can keep adding a little more soil off the banks to the crowns, so that by the middle of June, when you have allowed the asparagus to grow for the season, you will have your bed level on the surface.

CUTTING THE GRASS.

This should always be done by the same man, and wherever practicable, I would recommend that it be done by the gardener; and if he has not time to do it then he should select the most trustworthy man under him, for it requires good judgment, especially when you are cutting white grass. If one is not careful in observing the proper angle at which you insert your knife you will cut off the young shoots that have not appeared above the ground. By having the same man cut the grass every day he becomes familiar with every crown in the bed, and he will soon learn the proper way to insert the knife. Of course, where green grass will do so much care is not necessary in cutting.

GENERAL REMARKS.

Two or three applications of salt during the cutting season will be very beneficial, not only in helping to keep the bed free from weeds, but it also improves the crop. Early in November, when the Summer growth has ripened, and before the seed has a chance to drop, the bed should be cleaned by cutting away the stalks with the scythe and burning them up. The bed should then have a top dressing of well-rotted cow manure from 3 to 4 inches deep, free from straw, so that it will dig in nicely in the Spring. The bed should be dug over carefully in the Spring as soon as the ground is dry enough and before the young shoots appear. A dressing of ground bone, or soot, or in fact, any commercial fertilizer applied in the Spring will be very beneficial to the crop.

The judges' decision in the Photgraphic Competition for June will be announced in next week's issue.

The new rule of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society to the effect that winners of first prizes and silver medals at one meeting of the society tell at the next how they grew the prize-winning subjects, is working admirably, many valuable hints being obtained by those interested.

The book written by Mr. George W. Oliver, and published by the A. T. De La Mare Ptg. and Pub. Co., Ltd., is announced as being ready for delivery July 18. As the book progressed and its contents expanded, the title under which it has been advertised, "Commercial Plants," was not deemed sufficiently inclusive to cover the mass of information it contained, hence the title has been altered to that of "Plant Culture," under which name it will hereafter be known. See advertisement in another column.

Arrangement, Planting and Maintenance

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, firm in the belief that the home surroundings of America's multitudes can only be made beautiful through force of example, and that these examples must be set and maintained by the florists and nurserymen themselves, and, further, that the more attractive and numerous these examples become the more prosperous will be the business of the industries this paper represents, have instituted the following competition:

Class A—Unimproved Grounds
Prize, $10.00

Any fully paid-up subscriber to the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, the professional landscape architect and engineer and landscape gardener excepted, may forward a plan of his grounds as they now stand, together with a full and definite statement of existing conditions and requirements. This preliminary plan to be accompanied by a second one, drawn to the same scale, showing subscriber's own ideas as to the proposed improvements in arrangement and planting which he intends to put into effect.

All plans received in Classes A and B will be submitted to Mr. Warren H. Manning, of Boston, Mass., landscape architect, who will pass upon same and offer such suggestions and criticisms as will, in his opinion, add to the value, harmony and effect it is desired to bring about in the subscriber's surroundings. The best plans will then be published in the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE for the benefit of those interested in the planning and maintenance of attractive commercial grounds. All competitors in Class A will be eligible to compete in Class C in the year 1901.

The institution of Class A is intended to arouse an interest among those who have not hitherto given much attention to their own home surroundings, and the absolutely free and eminent professional advice which the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE now tenders its subscribers on this important subject should result in very many taking advantage thereof.

Class B—Improved Grounds

The FLORISTS' EXCHANGE offers a prize of $25 for the present best laid out and planted commercial home grounds and complete description thereof as they stand. Successful competitor must supplement the plans of his grounds by photographs to be taken in June, July or August, to prove correctness of statement. (Or the testimony of two expert witnesses will answer.)

In making the prize award for Class B, natural advantages of any one competitor's ground will not be taken into consideration as against another competitor whose grounds are not so well adapted to effect; in other words, judgment will be pronounced on the best use made of existing surroundings.

Class C—Grounds Improved in 1900

Competition in this class will be restricted to competitors in Class A in 1900. No awards can therefore be made in Class C until the Fall of the year 1901, at which time the above substantial cash prize will be awarded that competitor who has displayed the most skill and care in the laying out and maintenance of his grounds, working on his own plans and such professional advice as may have been tendered to him. The award will be decided under the same conditions as govern the competition in Class B.

All pertinent questions on these competitions will be answered through these columns, or privately, as the case may be.

Intending competitors should make themselves fully informed as to all conditions (herewith printed) before proceeding with the work.

All plans must be drawn to a scale of one-eighth inch to the foot.

Use black ink only, as plans will be photographed directly from competitor's copy.

Competitors must work on the sectional drawing paper and material which will be furnished, free, on application to the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE.

The FLORISTS' EXCHANGE will also furnish a printed sheet of instructions (Directions for Making Surveys) showing the signs and characters to be used indicating a tree, a shrub, flower beds, groups, lawns, boundaries, fences, greenhouses, dwelling house, etc., etc.

Use figures (1, 2, 3, 4, 5, etc.) to indicate nature and composition of planting, the plantings indicated by said figures to be given in full in the descriptive text.

Plans drawn out of scale, or executed in an unworkmanlike manner, will not receive any consideration. By this we do not mean that we expect to receive as good plans as those which would be drawn by professionals, but we want plans good enough for publication without having to be redrawn by a professional.

Competitors in Class A, in order to get the benefit of professional advice for this Fall's planting, should send in their plans as early as possible.

The competition in both Classes A and B will close October 31. Decisions will be given as soon thereafter as is practicable.

While the publishers will recognize all merit shown, they will not commit themselves to a prize award in any class unless there are at least five competitors in said class.

Drawings must be mailed in a tube and fully protected against being cracked or broken in the mails. Address all communications,

Publishers FLORISTS' EXCHANGE,

New York's Plant Market.

There is perhaps no greater stigma resting on the City of New York to-day, from the standpoint of the florist, than the very inadequate, in fact one might say almost total lack of provision made in the matter of a suitable market building within her borders for the disposal of plants and flowers. Ever since the plant business assumed any proportions in this city, dating back over a period of fifty years, the cry of the grower for a market building in which to sell his products has remained all but unheeded up to the present time.

The history of the plant markets of New York—for there have been several—clearly demonstrates that, to the powers that be, the florists' industry has not appealed in its proper light, and "any old place" has been considered good enough for the plant grower to stand around in.

Street corners whereon to station his plant-laden wagon—for a consideration—were his primal lot, necessitating leaving his home the night previous and camping out all night in the open air in order to secure a coign of vantage for the opening of the coming day's business. Subsequently the "triangle" at foot of Canal street became his stamping ground, considered an improvement on previous conditions, though still demanding the same method of procedure to obtain advantageous selling positions. A step still further in the line of progress resulted when Union Square plaza became a plant market place; but its inappropriateness as such seemed to be testified to by its total abandonment by the florists. Two years ago the Bureau of Markets came to an arrangement with some of the plant growers selling in this city, whereby stands were rented for the disposal of stock in the Clinton Market, Canal and Washington streets. But the old, ramshackle structure was unable to withstand the fury of our present day elements, succumbing to their force, and it is now unfit for occupancy for plant-market purposes.

The Controller, on being approached on the subject last week, gave a promise to look into the matter, with a view to putting the building in a habitable condition. That, however, in our opinion, is not enough. What is needed is a structure erected or secured in the most suitable location, commensurate with the importance of the business, which reaches into the millions of dollars annually—a building that will draw to it the now scattered marketing branches of the florist trade and one that will be truly representative of the high degree of refinement and elegance reached by our citizens, as typified by their interest in floriculture.

And while we attribute to the authorities a misconception of the florist industry both as regards its moral influence and its extent as a commercial factor, and blame them for the neglect of its needs in the line of fitting market accommodation therefor, there is no question that the prevailing conditions are largely due to the market florists themselves. These men, lacking unification or unanimity of desire along these lines, have really frustrated the efforts made by those who sought to assist them, and whose reward has been a thanklessness tinctured with abuse.

If New York is to have a flower and plant market building worthy of the name the initiative to secure such must be made and supported by the whole plant and flower growing interests tributary to the city. There must only be one opinion on the subject, viz., that we need a market and must have it—and the various organized bodies should throw in their whole influence to obtain it.

The resultant benefits to the trade of such a building are too well known to admit of question; we need only cite Cincinnati's plant and flower market as a case in point and its influence on the great development of the business there.

That New York, the first city of the Union, should, in this day and generation, be without an adequate structure for a plant and flower market is appalling, and an eloquent tribute to the inertia of her florist merchants, as well as to the indifference of her municipal authorities to the preservation and furtherance of a great moral, refining and elevating factor in the midst of us.

Early History of Seed Trade in America.

The history of the development of the seed business of the country is one of the most interesting chapters in American horticulture. From small beginnings in the later colonial period the business has grown so that to-day its value is measured by the tens of millions. Carried on at first in small shops, where a few boxes of seeds shared a corner with codfish or a shelf with calicoes or books, it has come to claim for itself immense warehouses and business establishments whose interests extend to every portion of the globe. The trade has grown with the growth of the country; and its leaders have influenced popular taste for good vegetables and fine flowers, creating and stimulating a demand which only their enterprise could suffice to meet.

When the Pilgrims landed on the rocky shores of Massachusetts they brought with them seeds of the plants they had cultivated in their English and Dutch homes. Their first care was to secure the necessaries of life; corn, barley and peas were planted and fruit trees set out. The early records of horticulture are almost entirely devoted to the discussion of fruits, the introduction of improved varieties of apples, pears and plums occupying a much larger share of attention than the improvement of vegetables. The latter were, however, only second in importance to Indian corn. William Wood gives a list of vegetables grown in New England before 1633, and adds "whatever grows well in England grows as well there, many things being better and larger." A century later there is a distinct reference to saving garden seeds. Justice Dudley, of Massachusetts, writing in 1733, says "an onion set out for seed would rise to 4 feet 9 inches, and a parsnip would reach 8 feet." Some agricultural seeds were certainly raised, and they formed an article of commerce as early as 1747. In his interesting book on "Farm Husbandry," the Rev. Jared Eliot has much to say about clover, and in the first essay published, 1748, he urges the liberal use of seed because an acre of clover will produce two bushels of seed worth 35 pounds, "Old Tenor." (The colonial currency was of three values, and was known as "Old Tenor," "Middle Tenor," and "New Tenor," the "Old Tenor," was below par, but the rates varied in different colonies.) That clover seed was not abundant, however, is shown by the high price and the fact that in 1773 James Vaux, of Pennsylvania, imported some from England, because it was difficult to get in America. In 1787 Vaux, in a paper before the Philadelphia Society for the Promotion of Agriculture, advocated a bounty on clover seed in order to encourage its use by reducing the price.

The first record of seeds for sale that the writer has been able to find is in the Newport, R. I., Mercury of 1763, where Nathaniel Bird, a book dealer, advertised garden seeds just arrived from London. Connecticut-grown onion seeds early acquired more than a local reputation. In 1764 Gideon Welles, "on the Point," announced in the Newport Mercury that he had some choice Connecticut onion seed for sale. Other advertisements ran through the following years, among them one by Charles Dunbar, gardener. We get some idea of the prices of seeds from Dunbar's advertisement of 1767, where the following are given: Peas and beans, 30 shillings per quart (the value of the currency had fallen so low that in 1759 it required 2,300 pounds in currency to equal 100 pounds sterling; these conditions were only beginning to improve in 1767); Strassburgh onions and orange carrots, 25 shillings per ounce; early cabbage, 40 shillings per ounce, and "colliflower" 6 pounds per ounce. An N. B. informs us that "said Dunbar has to sell a great variety of flower seeds."

In New York City hemp and flax seeds were advertised for sale at least as early as 1765 and garden seeds in 1776. In that year Samuel Deall, a dealer in general merchandise on Broad street, opposite the end of Weaver street, kept "a general assortment of seeds," many of which he names, including red clover, grass, and "Saintfoine" for improvement of land.

In the New Hampshire Gazette field seeds were advertised as early as 1766 and garden seeds in 1770. But Boston was the chief city for the sale of garden seeds, as it was the commercial center of the time. In the Boston Gazette of 1767 six out of 26 advertisers were dealers in seeds. Some of these did not advertise other goods, but it is doubtful whether they were seed dealers exclusively. In the Spring, when these advertisements appeared, the trade in seeds was probably more important than any other branch of their business. Some of these dropped out and others appeared in later years, but several advertised regularly each year until 1773. William Davidson, the gardener in Seven Star lane, offered in 1768 seeds of 56 varieties of vegetables and herbs, and of one flower, the carnation. Some of his prices were as follows: Lettuce, 3 to 4 pence per ounce; cabbage, 9 pence to a shilling were ounce; cauliflower, 3 shillings per ounce; carnation, 4 shillings per ounce. Most of the other vegetable and herb seeds ranged from 2 pence to a shilling per ounce; peas, Early Golden Hotspur and Early Charlton, were worth 24 shillings the bushel or 10 pence per quart. Davidson dealt in seeds wholesale and retail for cash.

The War of Independence, interrupting as it did the regular channels of trade, interfered with the importation of seeds, and the few garden seeds offered during this time were either imported from Holland or were taken from prize ships. Immediately after the war there was a revival of the trade in seeds, and in 1784 John Adams, Susanna Renkin, and Susanna Martin all advertised seeds just imported from London. These advertisements, however, soon after ceased, and in 1790 John Adams advertised for the last time in the Boston Gazette. It is not to be supposed that the absence of advertisements indicates the total cessation of the trade in seeds. This either flowed in other channels or the traders lost enterprise. But with the advertising habit well formed as it was prior to 1770, the total absence of advertisements of seeds for sale indicates an unhealthy condition of the trade.

In Philadelphia and New York seeds were but little advertised, whatever the trade may have been. In Philadelphia in 1772 Peleliah Webster sold clover and duck grass seed, and 1775 James Longhead made known to the public that he kept "a quantity of the largest kind of colly-flower seed, found on trial to be extraordinary good." In 1775 David Reid, who styled himself "Gardener and seedsman," advertised seeds for sale at his stall at the courthouse, and in 1781 purchasers were advised that flower seeds and seeds for the kitchen garden, "imported from Holland, can be procured next door to General Philip de Haas, in Third street, near Race street."

During the remaining years of the eighteenth century the papers contained few advertisements of seeds, and we can trace no connection between dealers of pre-Revolutionary times and those of the opening years of the nineteenth century. It is not probable, however, that there was a time when seeds could not be bought in any of the large towns. The people were fond of gardening, the population was rapidly increasing and there is no reason to suppose that the demand for garden seeds was less than before the war. This demand was doubtless partly supplied by the market gardeners, one of whom, David Landreth, established himself in Philadelphia in 1784, and engaged in the market gardening, nursery, and seed-growing business. The last was at first of small importance, and for many years the nursery occupied most of his attention. Seeds were almost entirely imported, and American gardeners had yet to learn that seeds could be as well grown here as in England. In spite of this, however, the seed business seems to have increased in importance until, in 1848, David Landreth, Jr., sold the nursery and became exclusively a seed grower and merchant.

One of the first seedsmen of the present century was Bernard M'Mahon, gardener, seedsman and author, who in 1800 opened a seed store in Philadelphia. Fortunately, we have a description of his store, which throws light on the condition of trade at that time:

His store was in Second street, below Market, on the east side. Many must still be alive who recollect its bulk window, ornamented with tulip-glasses, a large pumpkin and a basket or two of bulbous roots. Behind the counter officiated Mrs. M'Mahon, with some considerable Irish accent, but a most amiable and excellent disposition, and withal an able saleswoman.

Mr. M'Mahon was also much in the store, putting up seeds for transmission to all parts of this country and Europe, writing his book, or attending to his correspondence, and in one corner was a shelf containing a few botanical or gardening books, for which there was then a very small demand; another contained a few garden implements, such as knives and trimming scissors, a barrel of pease, and a bag of seedling potatoes, an onion receptacle, and a few chairs, and the room partly lined with drawers containing seeds, constituted the apparent stock in trade of what was one of the greatest seed stores then known in the Union, and where was transacted a considerable business for that day.

In the Fall of 1805, Grant Thorburn began to sell seeds in New York, and subsequently built up a substantial business. During the next quarter century seed stores were opened in Baltimore, Boston and Charleston, S. C., as well as in Philadelphia and New York, and there was a considerable trade in Shakers' seeds. These Shakers' seeds were popular as early as 1818. They were sold by regular dealers, and were peddled about the country in the Shakers' wagons. The population of the United States had increased from a little more than three millions of whites in 1790 to ten and a half millions in 1830. In 1790 this population was practically confined to a narrow strip along the Atlantic seaboard. Forty years later it had overflowed into the rich valleys beyond the mountains.

To meet the growing demand for vegetables and flowers these ten and a half millions required more than three and a half times as many seeds as were used in 1790. Dealers established themselves in the principal cities and crossed the Alleghenies in the rear of the wave of settlement that swept into the Ohio Valley. The large cities became centers of distribution for the surrounding country, but the trade remained essentially local, though the larger houses did a wholesale business and supplied country dealers with their stocks, put up in packets for the retail trade. But transportation was slow and expensive, and the modern development of the postal service was as yet undreamed of. The amount of seed sold in Ohio at this time was insignificant. Mr. Parsons Gorham, a grocer and seed dealer in Cincinnati between 1827 and 1831, seldom carried a stock of more than 50 bushels of grass seed, and when in 1831 S. C. Parkhurst opened a seed store, he sold in one year not more than 600 bushels of timothy and clover seed, while before the end of ten years his trade had increased to 6,000 bushels. Seed houses were opened in Mobile and New Orleans, and in 1844 William W. Plant began the sale of farm tools and seeds in St. Louis.

While most of the trade between 1820 and 1850 was local or wholesale to country dealers, a change took place with the advent of the locomotive. The larger houses reached out for wider fields, made accessible by the railways, and new firms sprang up in every city of considerable size. Locomotives were unknown in the United States before 1829 and were scarcely used before 1832. At the end of 1835 there were 1,098 miles of railway in the United States; in 1850 the total mileage was 9,021, and in 1860 it was 30,635.

This rapid increase in the railways not only opened up a vast and flourishing country, but facilitated transportation in the East and made possible the immense development of the mail trade. The mails brought the seedsman to every door; a letter brought a catalogue, and a few cents paid the postage on an order of seeds. The changes in the rates of postage and the regulations of the post office have at times helped or embarrassed the trade; but, though cheap postage has stimulated, higher rates have never checked the growth of the business.

Aquatic Gardening.

Extracts from Paper read by Walter Retzer before Chicago Florists' Club.

(Concluded.)

HEATING.

Through the numerous varieties of water plants at our disposal it will readily be seen that the few years of attention that have been given to the culture a great number of distinct and beautiful kinds have been produced.

A pond can be artistically planted with nothing but these hardy plants, and the use of them is to be especially recommended to those who have but limited areas, no greenhouses or other suitable place to keep the more tender varieties through the Winter, and those who have but little time to devote to the aquatic garden, and the care which the more tender varieties naturally require. But even those who have but a small part of their surroundings devoted to aquatics, and have their residence heated with either hot water or steam, will be able to enjoy the lovely nymphæas of the sunny South, by simply laying a branch from the main heating plant to the pond where it is desired to grow these favored plants.

If a lake or a pond of considerable size is on the ground, or near at hand, the work can be commenced at once. At the surface of this body of water have a sufficient number of pipes that will supply the amount of water lost through drainage. This water is conducted to another pond of smaller dimensions than the preceding one. This in turn must be quite deep in one part with a large shallow arm in the other. From the deep part of this pond, but at the surface, have the pipes which lead into the pond where you wish to grow the tender nymphæas.

The surface water of the large pond is heated during the day by the sun. This warmed water is carried away by the pipes, they being near the surface, into the next pond and enters it in the deepest part. The large shallow arm would become heated to quite a high temperature were it not for the deep and large body of water at the other end. As the water becomes heated it naturally intermingles with the cooler water of the deep basin, thus raising the temperature of this body considerably. With plenty of fish in the water this will be accelerated. From the deepest part of the second pond, midway between the place where the pipes of the first pond enter it, and the shallow arm or branch, but about 2 inches below the surface, is where we have to locate the pipes that supply the water to the main pond. The reason for placing the last pipes where I have outlined is that if they are placed either near the opening, where the pipes of the large pond enter, or near the arm, the warmest part of the water would enter into the main pond. This would take away the heated water nearly as fast as it runs in. The water cooling off during the night would bring about too great extremes of temperature, a thing that must be avoided. By placing the pipes several inches below the surface we shall receive not the warmest water, but some that will remain at a certain temperature longer than the other. A seedling of the Victoria regia was grown in a similar manner successfully in Tower Grove Park.

The heating of a pond by artificial means is but recent, and I may safely say since the queen of water lilies, the Victoria regia, has come to our notice, have the ways and means been found to heat a pond to grow this native of the Amazon. As this is about the only plant that is worth the trouble and the expense of heating a pond, I shall make but a few notes of the best way this can be accomplished:

Where either steam or hot water is used for greenhouses, or a residence, a sufficient quantity of pipes must be laid to heat 600 square feet of surface, as this is the amount of space a full-grown Victoria requires. Of course, where it is wished to grow more of these queenly flowers, more piping will be necessary, and the amount will vary with the locality. Four flows, using 2-inch hot water pipes, which will act as returns, are sufficient in this latitude. It is essential to have some sort of inclosure in which the Victoria is grown to keep the water from intermingling with the rest during the early part of the season.

In the course of time the heating of ponds will be totally abandoned, as seedlings of the Victoria will in future be as hardy an annual as any other aquatic.

Certainly more care must be taken in planting out, not venturing to do this before the nights are quite warm. Further details as to culture will be mentioned later.

PLANTING.

Probably this is the simplest as well as the least troublesome part of aquatic gardening. Plants which are to be potted into tubs need thorough drainage, and must have the soil well packed, though not tightly, to prevent it washing out. The size of the tubs varies according to the requirements of the plants. Spread the roots carefully and cover them with from three to four inches of soil. The process frequently practiced and even recommended by some of placing the tubs into the pond first is ridiculous. The ease with which tubs of considerable size can be moved in water should never induce any one to go to the trouble of first having the tubs, then the soil, and lastly the plants, carted to the pond. Pot the plants where all the potting of the season is carried on, where pots, tubs, soil and other required material is at hand. After several tubs have been planted cart them to the pond where they can be immersed anywhere for the time being. If the ponds are covered with a layer of gravel or sand the discoloration of the water caused by entering will be slight. Even if the water becomes muddy, in a few hours it will be as clear as a crystal. It is quite necessary to place the plants into water immediately, or as soon after as convenient or possible, for if exposed to the action of the sun's rays for some time the result may be injurious and in some cases prove fatal. If the plants are to be taken some distance give them a good watering before taking them away.

Where the planting is carried on in the open ground, a plank may be laid across, if the pond be small, thus saving the trouble of wading about in rubber boots. The plants must be well set and the roots well covered and even weighted down with something if necessary, to keep the plants from rising to the surface. If the foliage is completely immersed it matters little, as the leaves will soon put in their appearance at the surface.

The time of planting varies with the locality, the tender varieties not being planted out before the weather has become settled, unless the pond is heated, when the operation may be begun as soon as the frost leaves the ground or Spring planting in general commences. All plants may be started in suitable frames or greenhouses, thus bringing forth the flowers a few weeks earlier.

BORDER DECORATION.

More stress upon this branch of aquatic gardening should be laid than is generally done, for much of the beauty of a pond would be marred by a badly kept or poorly decorated border. It would be like a beautiful bed with carefully selected plants, with weeds several inches high for a border, instead of a neat plant or a well finished lawn. It not only enhances the completion of the pond, but a certain beauty may be added to it. Just as the colors of acalyphas when used as border plants or intermingled with crotons will tend to heighten the colors of the latter, so does a good border tend to heighten the beauty of the pond.

One of the greatest mistakes too often made is the planting, or rather placing, of some, in appearance, artificial piece of rookery upon which bamboos and the like are planted. Who ever heard of bamboos, cyperus or some other rush growing upon rocks. Nothing would be more pleasing than a bit of natural rockwork over which the little forget-me-not or the lysimachia are creeping, flushed here and there by the water as it enters from the supply pipe. A bridge, even of rustic design, gives the place an artificial appearance. Have a bridge where one is requisite, and let that be a durable one. If nicely made it may add to the beauty of the surroundings instead of the contrary. Fountains are out of place unless the pond and the surroundings are artificial or symmetrical. Simplicity, harmony and beauty are the three great things we must strive for, and when these are attained we may rest assured that the sought-for end has been accomplished.

To lay down rules which govern the planting and selection of border plants is difficult, as no two ponds are alike or enhanced by the same environments. The rules laid down in landscape gardening also apply to this and must be followed if success is to be attained. The planting of a border depends much upon the surroundings, and unless the place is large the rules mentioned before will apply.

If it can be avoided never have a gravel walk leading around the pond. The effects of beautiful foliaged border plants are completely broken down by the yellow gravel. A lawn in perfect condition up to the very edge of a large pond will give the most pleasing effect when broken up here and there by the border plants. A gravel walk leading in front of the pond is not a disadvantage, and no harm is done in having one. Let it approach, not in a direct way, that is, having a right or oblique angle with perfectly straight lines, but let that walk be carefully selected, as the effect produced upon one approaching the pond must be most favorable.

If the pond is large and the surroundings in proportion, and more than one point, so to say, reaches the climax, have the curves of the walks just touch upon these points. To one passing, the whole would seem as a panorama, one beautiful view is lost and another appears. This is the effect most sought for in landscape architecture and is what we must strive to reproduce, even in the planting of a pond. If there is but one point upon which our eye can feast it soon grows monotonous and tiresome. Each step we take must bring something new to our view, and each view should be distinct in itself, but the whole gradually leading up to the point where the greatest beauty is attained. If the intermediate changes did not exist the stepping from the poorer to the higher form of decoration would be too great, and the height of the latter would be considerably reduced.

Where, as in parks, the place is well planted with trees and shrubbery, great care must be exercised, as through injudicious planting a pretty view would be lost, while if the work be done carefully much beauty would be added. The fact that there are large trees and shrubs on the place and about the water gives the whole a more natural appearance.

INSECTS AND ENEMIES.

Of the numerous insects that are injurious to aquatics none can be said to be troublesome if a sufficient quantity of fish are kept in the pond. Besides the beauty which the little gold fish add to the pond they are invaluable. Frogs, as beneficial as they are in preventing the increase of insects, ought to be done away with as soon as possible. In addition to feeding upon the gold fishes they ruin the foliage. It is not uncommon to see a beautiful tender leaf of a Victoria with a hole in it, caused by these creatures as they leap upon it. Water rats and musk rats are about the most injurious. The damage done to a pond before their presence is detected is often great, frequently causing the destruction of the entire pond. In a granitoid pond we need not fear them, for to dig through the hard material is impossible. As soon as they are detected make war against them, and do not give up until every one is killed. Trapping is the best way in which this can be done, unless one is a good shot with the rifle. Mice will frequently devour the tubers of the nymphæas and nelumbiums if nothing else is at hand. Turtles are the greatest enemies to aquatic gardening in the large natural ponds. They feed upon the young shoots of all plants.

Besides having members of the animal world to combat with we have to put up with a few enemies of the vegetable kingdom. Of these the green slimes and other algæ are the most formidable, sometimes completely choking up all other inhabitants. These can be fished out with a rake or wire net. There is no way to prevent these pests growing, as the spores are in the soil. Strange it may seem, but a fact it is, that a large quantity of fishes of the German carp and the black bass will completely cause the disappearance of this pest. A large pond in Tower Grove Park, St. Louis, out of which annually cartloads of this algæ were taken, was entirely freed of this nuisance in a year by the fishes.

There is a leaf roller that attacks the leaves of the nelumbiums, but can be eradicated by the use of hellebore put on in the morning while the foliage is damp with dew.

If diseases of any kind appear the timely use of the Bordeaux mixture will prevent any further trouble.

SEEDS.

The saving of seeds becomes quite necessary, as plants like the Victoria regia and a few others must be treated as annuals and propagated by seeds. After fertilization has taken place and the flower is again under water, tie a piece of wire netting securely around the flower. This will prevent the scattering of seeds after maturity. Never use cloth, as it prevents the free circulation of the water, and frequently rots before the seeds are ripe. Seeds after maturity are to be kept in water at a low temperature, or moist sand, through the Winter.

The saving of seeds is only necessary with the Victoria regia and its varieties, Euryale ferox and Nymphæa zanzibarensis. Though all of these plants are perennials in their native countries they must be treated as annuals and seed sown every year. If the tuber of Nymphæa zanzibarensis could be ripened or matured it would not be necessary to go to all the trouble, but being a truly tropical plant and in full vigor when the first frost comes it is unable to mature.

If the seeds of the nymphæa are allowed to fall upon the soil they will begin to germinate and produce plants the same year. These may be taken, potted and immersed in the water until Fall, when they should be taken up and cared for in a suitable cool place during the Winter.

The seeds of the Euryale ferox, if left upon the ground, will germinate the following Spring, and the young plants may then be put wherever wanted.

Sow seeds of the Victoria in February, or early March, in water kept at a temperature of 85 to 95 degrees. As the plants become large pot them on, until the time is at hand for planting out.

PROPAGATION.

Nymphæas may be reproduced in two ways—by seed, if any are produced, and the division of the rhizome. Varieties are not true to seed, and many unique hybrids are produced by the planting of them. Seeds of most all germinate rapidly and flower the same season. The division of the rhizome is the most practical way, and the only one through which varieties may be kept true.

It is quite impossible to give here a list of hardy and tender aquatics and border plants, as some that prove perfectly at home here require protection further North, and those that are treated as tender varieties in the North become troublesome weeds in the South. For those not acquainted with the plants it is best to refer to some reliable nurseryman or florist in their vicinity.

A Provincial Retail Store.

Nothing marks more the real progress of the florists trade throughout the country, than the elegance of the retail stores that are springing up in provincial towns. A good example of the ornateness of these structures is seen in our illustration, which is reproduced from a photograph of the store of John C. Hatcher, Amsterdam, N. Y., kindly sent us by the proprietor.

Insec s and Diseases.

Unquestionably the most persistent insect that bothers the chrysanthemum grower is the black fly. Day in, day out, he works faithfully on, fulfilling the biblical injunction to increase and multiply. Regular fumigations once a week seem to be the only way to keep down this pest.

The green fly, in some respects, is worse than the black one, because it keeps on the very smallest and most delicate leaves, and disfigures them sadly if not cleaned out in good season. The very finest tobacco dust, sprinkled on the plants in such a way as to get right down into the points, we find to be the best remedy. Fumigating does not catch them nearly so readily as it does the black fly.

There are several kinds of thrips that are a source of annoyance. At this time of year they merely disfigure the foliage, but if allowed to stay until the flower develops they make a nasty mess of the petals. A frequent spraying with tobacco water helps to make life unpleasant for them.

The army worm some seasons is a perfect pest. He has a voracious appetite and believes in indulging it to the fullest extent. He will bore through a bud and cut off every petal as cleanly as if it had been cut with a knife. Hand-picking is the best method of disposing of this fellow.

The grasshopper has his little fling also when his season comes round. He always selects the nicest shoots and buds for his meals, believing, I suppose, in living on the best of everything.

The caterpillar also gets free board from the chrysanthemums, and the only sure way of getting rid of him is to pick him off and crush him under foot.

These insects represent the bulk of the troubles and trials of the chrysanthemum grower, and to be a successful cultivator you must closely keep track of them, from the time the plants are put out till the flowers are cut.

Diseases.

The worst disease by far is the rust. It was not troublesome in America until 1897, but now seems generally distributed. It is claimed that this disease is distinct from the carnation rust, though there seems a striking similarity to the ordinary lay mind between the two. We have practically escaped this disease so far by keeping close watch on the new plants introduced to our collection, and throwing away, or burning, every one that showed traces of rust. Many of our friends have not been so fortunate.

We have never seen a bad attack of rust on plants grown inside, where the atmospheric conditions are under control, but plants outside are nearly always struck with it, sometime during July or August, if the weather is wet for a day or two. The obvious moral of this is: Don't keep your plants inside too wet and don't crowd them on the benches. Have the benches well drained so the water can pass away freely, and if your stock was clean when you planted it, the rust will not be troublesome. It is too late to do much good by spraying after the rust has appeared, but a good preventive is to spray with a solution of potassium sulphide at the rate of 1 oz. to two gallons of water.

Leaf spot is generally caused by the benches being poorly drained and the soil consequently keeping wet and soggy after watering. Where leaf spot is troublesome keep the plants well on the dry side, and get all the air possible circulating through the house.

Mildew, while quite common, is not feared to any extent, because it is comparatively harmless, and is easily kept in check by the use of sulphur. Golden Wedding easily ranks first as the variety most susceptible to this trouble.

(138) Fluid for Preserving Fruits—Please give receipt for best and latest fluid for preserving fruits of all kinds. I want something that will keep the fruit, for sample, in its natural color and which is not too expensive but reliable.—J. N. WILSON, Texas.

—I have made many experiments and have tried many different recipes for preserving berries and other fruits in their natural form and color. I found the best solution was pure alcohol diluted one-half with distilled water. With gooseberries, currants, cherries and white and yellow raspberries the result was entirely satisfactory, but with strawberries and red raspberries more or less of the coloring matter of the fruit would be extracted and discolor the liquid. I spent as much as five years testing and experimenting with different preparations as stated above, found the solution of one-half alcohol and one-half distilled water the most satisfactory.—J. T. LOVETT, Little Silver, N. J.

—I should think that a strong solution of salicylic acid in alcohol, then reduced with water, would keep the fruit all right.—E. GREINER.

St. Louis.

Trade Items.

Business is very quiet here; little stock is coming in, and that of poor quality. Roses are very scarce, that is, those that can be used; most of them are too poor to do anything with. They sell at from 2c. to 5c. Carnations bring 1c. to 2c., with a moderate supply. Sweet peas realize 15c. to 25c. per 100, these with a few Asmenes are about all there is in the market.

News Notes.

Henry Berning has returned from a business trip to Western Missouri and reports things in a better condition, as regards supply, in Kansas City than here. The trade there has done a good business the past Spring and seems to be prosperous generally. George M. Kellogg, of Independence, Mo., will add to his present large plant three houses, each 30x250 feet—two for Beauty and one for carnations. Mr. Berning says the Kellogg place is in splendid shape and we are proud of the fact that our state can boast of at least one up-to-date, large cut-flower growing establishment.

Geo. Waldbart has renewed his lease on his present location, and will tear down the structure now there, and build a larger and better one, at a cost of about $2,000. Thompson, Anderson & Kennedy, our local greenhouse builders, have the contract.

The committee in charge of the show for next Fall is holding meetings quite often now, and trying to fix things up so we can have an exhibition and still not lose money, as has been the case the past two years. The committee asks the co-operation of the craft of the city in their efforts in this direction.

The picnic committee will hold a meeting this week to fix time and place for the next outing.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club takes place on the 12th. Nomination of officers for the ensuing year will occur, and it is hoped and expected that a large and old-time gathering will result, especially as we have just learned that the big strike is over, and will no longer interfere with transportation facilities.

There is some complaint of the growth of field carnations this year. Notwithstanding an abundance of rain—a little too much if anything—they do not seem to be making the growth they ought to, being inclined to be uneven and rather backward, and not as good as last year.

. C. C. S.

Newport, R. I.

Messrs. Lord & Burnham Co., New York, have secured the contract for the removal of the present range of glass at E. J. Berwind's to the lot recently purchased, and the erection of an extensive range of new houses.

MAC.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CARNATIONS.—To keep the plants that are in the field going right ahead; hoe, or cultivate them every week, not deep, but just deep enough to have an inch or two of the top soil loose at all times. The pinching back of the strongest leads should be attended to every few days. By doing this often, it is rarely ever necessary to take more than one or two at a time from the same plant, but if the pinching is left for any great period, four or five shoots may have to be cut from a single plant at the one time, and whenever this is done the growth of the plant so pinched back is checked to a certain extent.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—Those plants on the benches have started fairly into growth now, and the wires or stakes, whichever are used, should be put in place. Keep the surface soil on the bench loose by an occasional stirring, and if there be any signs of worms give a watering with lime water, or sprinkle a covering of dry lime on the bed and let it be washed into the soil by degrees. Syringe regularly and do not let the fly get a start at all.

ROSES.—If any of the beds are to be carried over another year do not let them dry down too quickly. The drying off is really a gradual ripening process, or, rather, it should be, and to discontinue watering suddenly is not ripening by any means; 'tis only crippling the plants by stopping their growth and making them totally unfit to depend upon for another year. The water should be withheld gradually, and at no time should the wood become shriveled for lack of it. Syringing should be done occasionally; it will help to keep the plants clean, besides maintaining the wood in a good, hard condition.

The Market.

Now that commencement and graduation exercises are over, the bottom has about fallen out of business, and there is little or nothing going on. Steamer trade is about all that the city florists are getting now, excepting, of course, the ever present funeral work. Outdoor roses are still plentiful, but move slowly. Beauty, too, are in good supply, but are very little sought after. Bride and Bridesmaid are about past, and many will soon be thrown out. Kaiserin and Carnot are still of very good quality, and extra grades sell pretty well, though with no rush.

Carnations hold on about the same—in plentiful supply, with a few of good quality, the large majority being seconds or poorer grades. Sweet peas are becoming plentiful from out of doors, and fetch 20c. to 25c. per 100.

The early closing season has not as yet started.

Mass. Horticultural Society.

The regular Summer shows of the society were inaugurated on Saturday last with a very good exhibition. The J. S. Fay estate won all three prizes awarded for hardy roses with a fine collection; Mrs. B. P. Cheney and Mrs. E. M. Gill also had good exhibits. W. H. Spooner and W. J. Clemson showed Crimson Rambler, and Mrs. E. A. Wilkie some nice moss roses. Mrs. J. L. Gardner and Dr. C. G. Weld made nice displays of iris; Mrs. J. L. Gardner sent in delphiniums, sweet williams and campanulas; these were also well staged by Rea Bros., Miss M. S. Walker and W. J. Clemson.

James Comley brought in a fine lot of longiflorum lilies and E. C. Lewis and W. J. Clemson had displays of sweet peas.

Edward J. Mitton staged a beautiful specimen Cattleya gigas bearing ten handsome flowers. Hardy herbaceous plants were finely shown, the largest and best exhibits coming from the Blue Hill Nursery, Rea Bros. and W. J. Clemson.

A party of friends visited Mrs. E. M. Gill at Medford, on Thursday, of last week, on the anniversary of her seventieth birthday. A handsome cut-glass berry bowl, the gift of some forty members, was presented to Mrs. Gill, as a testimonial of the respect and regard in which she is held. F. J. N.

Trade News.

A Summer dullness plainly exists; a drought of almost a serious extent is noticeable. Small fruit crops suffer, and asters will bring good prices unless a change soon takes place. L. candidum from outdoors saw a brief flowering period of barely ten days from beginning to finish.

Indoor carnations are plentiful and of good quality. Sweet peas are in good supply now also, with roses scarce and of low quality.

A few plant men report or show some small stocks on hand, but nothing of a discouraging extent. The city parks found need of some more than produced under their facilities, and have been purchasing to a small extent.

The noted handsome lake steamers Northwest and Northland were well fitted out in free style with hanging baskets and jardinieres of ferns by John G. Pickelman, the job in its entirety making a nice order.

The hanging basket as a veranda decoration has been largely superseded by "porch pots," consisting of sizes in 10 inches and up. Filled with plants to suit, and bedecking the entrance steps of a residence, these are sensibly attractive.

What a charming acquisition for general use the Crimson Rambler rose is! Five years hence we will wonder how we got on without it, and we predict a popularity far exceeding that of the clematis.

In these dull days Palmer & Son give some pleasing attention to their window display. White pond lilies have been used prominently in broad, shallow pans. For an Independence Day effect a number of mammoth imitation firecrackers several feet in length were constructed, and with a cannon made largely of flowers and a free use of national colors, a fine display was created. Boxes of flowers going out to customers were neatly tied with tricolored ribbons, a small silk flag and a "cracker" added.

The Pan-American.

A hurried visit to the Pan-American exhibit grounds on Tuesday last shows work progressing. A good beginning was made in seed sowing, so now a bright new green shows in occasional stretches and patches, lending interest to the look of things. Though to our eyes the work looks expansive, a new character in arrangement must result in the long vista of walks bordered by rows of foliage and trees in formal style of arrangement. The extent of the larger buildings seems to emphasize as their forms and exteriors loom up, and showing beyond question that this affair will be of no small proportions.

Wm. Scott, superintendent of floriculture, and his work, with portrait, was made the subject of an extended exhibition article in the Buffalo Express of last Saturday.

Dan'l B. Long visited Cleveland and Detroit last week. VIDI.

State of Trade.

Except Saturday, nearly always a fair trade day, last week proved an eye-opener as to what intensely hot weather, the season of the year, and lots of stock on the market (such as it is), can do in the way of cutting prices and demoralization generally. Market quotations would be but a delusion and a snare, at least to the growers, a woeful average price being obtained from the total cut sent in. Usually this corrects itself for a time, and so it goes on. It is not a new state of things, and history but repeats itself.

It may be that for a few really choice Beauty $2 to $3 per dozen is obtained; for teas $4 to even $6 per 100; carnations, $1 to $2; sweet peas, 40c. to 60c. per 100; but the quantity sold at these figures is out of proportion to the supply in the market that has to be sold at some price, or extra money paid out to carry to the dump, and the buyer and not the grower or seller makes the values.

The weather here is now fine for growing plants. Rains, except in spots, have been frequent. Carnations are making rapid growth, and may surely be housed early.

Jottings.

Adam Harrer, of Niles Center, has sold his greenhouses. They will hereafter be used for growing vegetables.

P. M. Broadbeck, Ravenswood, has been having great shows with his night-blooming cereus.

S. N. Raisig has removed to a larger and better store, from 416 to 442 W. 12th street. He has done good business the past year.

Oscar Kreitling, 392 W. 12th street, says he never has done so good a business in any June as the past one.

Sam Pearce is the proud father of a boy.

S. A. Tinker, florist, Austin, has sold his property and greenhouses. The latter are to be torn down.

George Asmus, with Herman Schiller, West Madison street, is rejoicing over the advent of a son.

The commission houses will close July and August at 5 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Pieser started for West Baden, July 3, to begin a series of Summer outings.

C. W. McKellar and wife are on a visit to Chillicothe, O., the home of Mac's father, who has had an attack of grip. This leaves his partner a busy man, but then Ed. can get rid of a lot of work.

The pancratium is quite a feature in the market this year; it goes for cheap work. Paeonias, Lilium longiflorum, some auratum, with lots of candidum are still on the market, the latter being hard to clean off at $2 per 100. A few common asters are showing up.—Ess.

Trade News.

We are now (July 3) passing through another heated term. This is a time of year when about all we have to do is to try and keep cool; although I must say that trade in this city is holding up remarkably well. Monday the city officials of the new administration took their seats, and flowers by the wagonload were delivered at the mayor's and other offices in the city building. Critchell had several set pieces and bunches; Julius Baer also had a goodly share of the work. A. Sunderbruch Sons had a wagon load alone, and C. J. Jones, Fred Gear, Peterson, Huntsman, J. O'Maley, O. Walke and Hoffmeister Floral Co. all delivered work to the various offices. Superintendent of Parks Critchell sent several wagonloads of plants from the city greenhouses, so that taking it all in all the decorations were very handsome.

The Fall festival committee offer $1,000 for the best decorated float in the trades' parade. Nothing special has been done by the florists, but if they will get together and do a little hustling they can win that thousand.

As the time draws near for the meeting of the S. A. F. O. H. we all want to go. I am sorry I for one cannot go, but will send my representative, C. J. Obmer. There is no doubt that this will be the greatest of the great meetings held by this world-renowned society. New Yorkers as entertainers are noted for not doing things by halves. I trust that Patrick O'Mara will be the president for 1901. We all know his executive ability; he is a hustler and all-round good fellow.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Murphy are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a daughter.

Frank Snyder, of Gallipolis, O., is spending a few days in this city.

Remember that the next meeting of the Florists' Society will convene at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Adrian, Thursday afternoon, July 12, at 2:30. A large turnout is anticipated; there is much business of importance to transact. E. G. GILLETT.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Joseph Bradbury.

Mrs. Joseph Bradbury, wife of the well-known rose grower of South Orange, N. J., died on Monday, June 25, after a short but very severe illness of pneumonia. Mrs. Bradbury was born in Rockland Co., N. Y., and was 70 years of age. She leaves six daughters and one son, Wm. H. Bradbury, who is a rose grower and connected in the business with his father. Just previous to the death of Mrs. Bradbury came the sad news of the passing away of Miss Dorothy Moody, her granddaugter. She was seven years of age. Mrs. Bradbury's funeral was held Thursday noon, her pallbearers being her nephews. Among the floral pieces were some of the handsomest seen in this vicinity.

Mr. Bradbury and family desire to express their thanks for the many kind expressions of sympathy received from their friends.

William Desmond.

On Saturday night, June 29, when alighting from a south-bound Cottage Grove avenue car, at 55th street, Chicago, William Desmond, then living at 50th street, fell to the pavement unconscious, and before medical aid could be summoned he died. The immediate cause of death was said to be heart disease.

William Desmond was one of the old-time florists of Chicago, one of the six only, all burned out, occupying retail flower stores at the time of the big fire of 1871. He was then doing business under the firm name of Desmond & McCormack, with a greenhouse plant at Cottage Grove avenue and 37th street, afterward owned by the late D. B. Fuller. The deceased came to this city along about 1867 from the East, and was first employed by "Doc" Farrell, shortly afterward starting in business for himself; like most others in those early days, in a small way, but for a time cut quite a figure among us, being an old country educated gardener possessing some business vim. The troubles following 1873 proved too much for him, and the place on Cottage Grove avenue ultimately came under foreclosure into the hands of D. B. Fuller. Desmond then went to Kewanee, Illinois, subsequently moving to Minneapolis. He was about sixty years of age at the time of his death and had been about Chicago again for a year or two past. Ess.

BY WM. SCOTT.
IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

W. Atlee Burpee in California.—

Mr. Burpee is on his annual tour through California. In a recent interview with a representative of the Los Angeles Herald, he is reported to have said among other things:

"There is going to be an onion famine. You know nine-tenths of all the onion seed used in the United States comes from California. We have immense yields from Gilroy and Arroyo Grande, in the Santa Clara valley. Unfortunately, the reports from all this district this year are very discouraging, and the yield of seed will only be from one-third to one-half the normal crop. Many large firms are reporting almost total failures, and the outlook is very dismal, and unless changed by the late rains it will be impossible to make up the supply.

"We depend almost wholly on California for seeds, you know; 99 per cent. of all the lettuce seed comes from California, and 95 per cent. of all the Lima beans. The bean outlook is bad. There was an advance of almost 50 per cent. in December, and the prices then were high. The bean supply comes almost entirely from Saticoy, Carpenteria, Lompoc and Santa Paula. Indeed they produce almost all the lima bean seed grown for the world.

"I shall visit Thomas Rafferty of Santa Ana. He is raising for us a very superior quality of grand flowered cyclamen. Then I start north, stopping at Santa Paula, where Bodger & Son are growing us fine asters. At Ventura I shall visit Mrs. Theo. B. Shepherd, who is producing for us two beautiful new novelties in nasturtiums, one with her happy faculty for selecting names, she calls Butterfly, the other, a companion, not yet named. Both are tall growing, or climbing; both have very large flowers, brilliant in coloring and fine for seed. The three nasturtium we have introduced originated with Mrs. Shepherd. 'Moonlight' and 'Sunlight' are both finely placed varieties; the latter is golden yellow, the former light cream. The third one introduced this year is called 'Caprice,' happy in name and remarkable in character, producing from three to six types of blending in color of flowers upon a single plant, with unusually dark foliage for a background.

"Mrs. Gould's petunias at Ventura are fine. She is making surprising results for us in her different strains.

"In Santa Barbara and Goleta I shall give all my attention to beans. We have a distinctive type now grown in California, new, too, which is known as Burpee's Willow Leaf. It is a bush lima, very productive and of the Silva type, with beautiful foliage, cut like the foliage of a willow tree, beautiful enough for a flower garden. At Santa Clara I shall visit the great ranch of C. C. Morse & Co. The death of Mr. Morse, upon May 5, was a great loss to the community. He was one of the pioneers in California in seed growing. Mr. Morse's business is carried on by his son, Lester L. Morse, under the direction of several Chinese foremen, who are gardeners of remarkable ability. Two of these men, Ah. Him and Henry, have the direction of 300 men. They are most able gardeners, and have most wonderful heads for selecting and propagating.

"At Santa Rosa I shall spend a little time with that wonderful 'Wizard of Horticulture' on the Pacific coast, Luther Burbank, to see what new creations he has in process of development. We are giving a wide area in our Philadelphia farms now to his remarkable silver-lined poppy which is peculiarly marked on each petal, as if overlaid with tissue paper."

European Notes.

The situation is practically unchanged, for while the English growers have enjoyed the benefit of some good rains, this is more than neutralized by the persistent drought which obtains in the most important districts of France and Germany.

Beet and mangel, also carrot and endive, continue to make fairly satisfactory progress; the conditions are as favorable as can be desired if we get rain during the next seven days. If not—we shall see. At any rate we will live in hope if we die in despair. The cruciferæ has said its last word; the place thereof knows it no more—this season.

EUROPEAN SEEDS.

St. Louis.

The Market.

There is practically nothing new from this point. Business is from fair to poor, with good stock very scarce. Asters are beginning to arrive in small lots, also a few tuberoses. A spell of quite hot weather has played havoc with sweet peas, and they will soon be no more in this part of the country. Quite a few outdoor carnations are arriving. There will be a good supply of these flowers later, as several growers have planted largely. The best roses sell as high as 5c.; carnations at 1c. to 1½c. There is little or no demand for a lot of poor stock sent in.

News Notes.

C. Young & Sons Co. will rebuild and extend some houses for carnations this Summer. They have their several houses replanted with roses, that are looking well. The same can be said of chrysanthemums, of which they are growing a number of houses. They are trying a new plan with the latter, planting them in boxes, made to fit the benches; and will later move the chrysanthemums into houses now full of asters.

Henry, and possibly James Young will attend the New York Convention. John Young will, as usual, take a sojourn at Atlantic City, and no doubt run over to the Convention, too.

S. S. Sidelsky, of Philadelphia, is in town. C. C. S.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

A local paper reports the formation of a new stock company, with a capital of $10,000, for the purpose of extending the scope of the Central Nursery Co., and building a large range of greenhouses. Land has been acquired in the northwest of the city, and the work of erection will begin at once. It appears several of our local capitalists are interested in the company, which will be under the general management of Mr. Cook, lately with the Dunkley Floral Co., of this city.

Van Bochove Bros. are erecting a violet house 20x150 feet. Mountain Home are doing a few alterations, as also is the writer, which, while not extensive, will prove beneficial. B.

Nurserymen Advance Prices.—The Des Moines (Ia.) Leader says:

An advance in the price of fruit trees of from 50 to 75 per cent. has been declared by all the nurseries of the middle West.

The increased demand for stock is the principal factor in the present rise in the price of trees. The fruit tree men say that the increased demand for their goods is superinduced by two causes. First, is the general prosperity of the farmers in the middle West, which enables them to buy trees, and pay for them what the nurserymen call a good living price. Another cause for the increased demand is that two years ago a large number of trees and grapes were killed by root-killing. Thousands of young trees that would have matured for market in 1899 or 1900 were killed, thus causing a scarcity of trees. One Iowa nursery is said to have lost over 1,000,000 apple trees alone, and other nurseries sustained a proportionate loss. The area in which the root-killing was most effective extended from central Nebraska to eastern Ohio, and from southern Minnesota to central Missouri.

Apple trees have been advanced from 60 to 75 per cent. in the wholesale market, and retailers will make a corresponding advance. Cherries and grapes are advanced from 200 to 300 per cent., and the nurseryman who has a good supply of either need not worry himself about going to the Klondike or Cape Nome. Other trees and shrubs will be advanced in price this year.

At the meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen in Chicago it was ascertained that most of the eastern nurserymen are planning to work the Northwest thoroughly this year. It is expected that the sales in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, the Dakotas and other Western states will be larger this year than ever before."

Hon. Albion P. Hall, of Placerville, Cal., Secretary of the Peuryn Fruit Co., died June 28 last.

Plums, a Comparison of Varieties.—About 175 varieties of plums have been planted in the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station orchard, and nearly half of these have borne fruit, but the trial has been too short for critical comparison in all cases.

The following is the Station's summary on the experiments made, as given in bulletin 113:

Native plums are divided into several groups, but it may be said of them, as a whole, that they are injured less by the curculio, are not so liable to rot, and are hardier than European varieties.

Native plums are infertile when planted alone, and where a few varieties are planted, care should be taken to select varieties which bloom at about the same time, in order to insure fertilization of blossoms.

The Americana group is the hardiest of the natives, as well as of all other classes. The trees are vigorous, with dark green leaves; the fruit is firm, with thick skin, dull in color, but usually high in quality, although having more or less astringency next to skin and stone. Some of the varieties of this class are desirable for home use, but, owing to rather unattractive appearance, but few of those now known are likely to prove profitable for market. The following are some of the most desirable that have been grown here: American Eagle, Champion, Hawkeye, Illinois Ironclad, Lonisa, Rollingstone, Weaver.

CELERY and CABBAGE

CELERY Pink Plume, (extra strong) Golden Self-Blanching, Giant Pascal, Golden Heart, New Rose, and other varieties, 15 cts. per 100; $1.00 per 1000; $8.50 per 10,000.

CABBAGE H. Succession, Second Early, Premium Flat Dutch, Late Drumhead, Savoy, and other vars., 15 cts. per 100; $1.00 per 1000; $8.50 per 10,000.

KALE Dwarf Green Curled Scotch, same price as Cabbage.

If any of the above plants by mail, add 10 cts. per 100. Cash with order.

The Miner group is intermediate between the Americana and Wild Goose groups, and includes some choice varieties for culinary purposes. The following are desirable: Forest Rose, Miner, Prairie Flower.

The Wild Goose group: The varieties of this class are mostly vigorous and very fruitful. The foliage resembles that of the peach, the fruit is thin-skinned, juicy, and often watery, and usually not of high quality. Although not as hardy as the Americana species, all varieties that have been grown here have endured our winters. In some sections the fruit of varieties of this class is in good demand in the market, but in this state it usually sells at a lower price than that of the Domestica class. The following are worthy varieties: Choptank, Milton, Poole's Pride, Wild Goose, Whitaker.

The Wayland group: Similar in habit of growth to Wild Goose, but the foliage is more shiny, the trees being quite ornamental. The fruit is very firm, not watery, and of fair quality, and in most cases, very bright and beautiful in color. The following are desirable varieties: Golden Beauty, Reed, Sucker, State, Wayland, Moreman.

The Chickasaw group: Rather dwarfer and more spreading than the Wild Goose group. Fruit juicy, watery and, usually, not of high quality. The least desirable of any of the native groups for domestic uses. The following are among the best varieties: Newman, Pottawattamie, Yellow Transparent.

The Triflora group, or Japanese plums: Trees robust in habit and mostly very fruitful. Fruit usually handsomely colored and of good quality, but most varieties quite inclined to rot. Trees bloom very early, and most varieties are rather tender in bud. As a class, the Japanese sorts have been overrated, but many of the varieties possess considerable merit. The following are some of the best that have been fruited here: Abundance, Chabot, Burbank, Ogon, Red June.

The Domestica group: This is the well-known European plum. At present it is the most important class, although subject to numerous diseases and very liable to the attacks of the curculio. The following varieties have been found to be valuable, both here and in other portions of the state: Arch Duke, Bradshaw, Coe's Golden Drop, Grand Duke, German Prune, Gneii, Imperial Gage, Lincoln, Prince of Wales, Reine Claude de Bavay, Yellow Egg.

Hybrid plums: But two varieties of this class have fruited here, viz.: Gold and Juicy. Both are very prolific, beautiful in color, but somewhat deficient in quality. More time is required to determine their value.

This is a silver cup of graceful design. It stands 32 inches in height, and is one of the most beautiful prizes as yet offered to the bowlers. It is presented to the Florists' National Bowling League by the Floral Exchange, Inc., of Philadelphia and Edgely, Pa. They have named it the Queen of Edgely Trophy in honor of their new pink American Beauty rose. It is given to the League without reserve, except that it has to be won twice by the same club before absolute ownership is awarded.

New York.—Monday afternoon a few members of the Flatbush Bowling Club visited the New York alleys and played one friendly game with the New Yorkers. To a bystander the game appeared to be one of great importance; extreme quiet prevailed from the first to the last frame, and it was plainly apparent that these two friendly opponents were feeling the strength of each other, in order to get a line upon what chances each stood of capturing some of the silver cups during the S. A. F. Tournament. At the finish the scores stood as follows:

FLATBUSH.

On the adjoining alleys another game was in progress that made noise enough for both. John Young has a vocabulary which can be specially adapted to coaching a nervous thrower of the ball, and he kept it going. The scores made by this crowd were not so tall as some, but, the strict adherence to the scientific rules of the game are responsible for this. They are as under:

We Have Drawn Upon All principles of boiler construction that were known at the time this boiler was designed, selecting the good and rejecting the bad

FEATURES

We have, therefore, a boiler that embodies a multitude of desirable features and its work has proved its excellent construction. For instance,

H. J. LEECH, Yeadon, Del. Co., Pa., says:

"The No 70 Standard Sectional Steam Boiler bought in 1899 is all you claimed it to be. It did all the heating for my 3000 feet of glass with one ton of Pea coal per week, and I carried a temperature of 65 degrees in the coldest weather we had, 4 above zero. I can run my fire by one firing, five hours at a time and have no trouble in keeping up 7 lbs. of steam. It is the best, quickest and most perfect steam generator I have ever seen, with such a small amount of coal. It has been inspected by a large number of florists and they all think well of it and I am sure you will hear from some of them."

WHAT HIS BOILER has done

every boiler we make will do. We want to hear from every florist who has an unsatisfactory heating apparatus, whether he buys or not. We can give him information that will be valuable and will send, without charge, our NEW GREENHOUSE BOILER CATALOG which should be a HANDBOOK for every florist.

Market Notes.

We are now experiencing the usual summer dullness. The stock being received could be much better, but for the time of year it is very good. Carnations are still to be had, but of inferior quality. W. E. Hall, of Clyde, Ohio, is sending in some fine Flora Hill. This variety is yet far in the lead for an all-the-year-round white carnation.

Part of last week was extremely hot and it had a telling effect upon all stock coming in. Sweet peas are nearing an end. Plenty of candytuft, feverfew and balsam are to be had, also smilax.

It has developed within the past few days that the flowers to be used at the coming Fall festival will be made of paper. This is anything but encouraging news for the florists. One article states that the committee will put 500 girls to work making paper flowers for decorating the carriages.

Jottings.

Geo. S. Bartlett has returned from a ten days' pleasure trip in the mountains of West Virginia.

E. W. Guy, of St. Louis, spent a few days in the city this week. He left Monday morning for Richmond.

I see Buffalo is in the field for the next S. A. F. O. H. meeting and I trust same will be selected. Why separate the tail from the hide? We all want to see the great Pan-American, as well as to see the Great Scott. Chicago can afford to wait. E. G. GILLETT.

Boston.

The Market.

There is now little or nothing in the way of business going on. Early closing is not general as yet, though some stores have been closing at 5 P. M. for nearly two weeks past, which example all others should follow.

Stock, such as it is, is plentiful. There are very few good roses now, Carnots and Kaiserins being the best on the market. Bride and Bridesmaid are about over, and the outside hybrids are getting a little passe. Beauty, too, are shortening up in supply somewhat, and are not of so good quality as they have been.

Carnations are very plentiful, with little or no call for them. Sweet peas are abundant and though quantities are disposed of at low prices, many remain unsold. When bought in small lots, 10 cents to 15 cents per hundred is the prevailing figure, while 50 cents per 1,000 ruled the sale of large quantities last week.

Lawrence Cotter is cutting some very fine Carnot roses which meet with quite a ready sale.

The Vacation Period.

Vacations are in order. E. Sutermeister goes to Holland and will combine business with pleasure, visiting the bulb men with whom he deals quite extensively. James H. Delay, of Beacon Street, has hired a cottage at Lake Sunapee, N. H., and started for there July 11. Mr. Delay intends to drive over the road.

Herman P. Strekfus, with W. W. Edgar, has also gone abroad. William Gilson, salesman for J. T. Butterworth, will start on his vacation this week and is contemplating a trip to the maritime provinces.

Mr. Gilson, for many years salesman for E. M. Wood & Co., has returned home from the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he has been for about three weeks. His health is somewhat improved.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society has decided to appropriate an additional sum of $60,000 toward erecting a new horticulturnl building.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

PRIMULAS—The seedlings of these will all be growing quite rapidly now, and they must not be allowed to become too crowded or the leaves will quickly turn yellow and fall off. Never let them get root-bound while in the small sized pots. Whenever, by turning them out of the pots, the young roots can be seen at the outside of the ball, they are ready for a shift into a larger sized pot, and it should be given them at once. When potting primulas, avoid using a heavy soil—this can always be accomplished by mixing leaf soil or rotted peat with the compost. Use a common piece of crock for drainage. When excelsior is used for this purpose, it too frequently becomes a breeding place for wood-lice. Above all things, do not try to grow too many primroses in a limited space, as they cannot be successfully done if kept at all crowded.

HYDRANGEAS that were planted outdoors from the pots must not be allowed to suffer for want of water. If the weather prove at all dry, they should be kept from wilting by the use of the hose-pipe.

FREESIAS can be made profitable if got into bloom early enough. Through November and December there is nothing prettier to be had in the market, and that is the time that they should be in flower to pay the best. Try to get the bulbs planted during this month; put them two or three inches apart in shallow flats. Place the flats outdoors in some location where the sun will not strike them, also give them a light covering of straw or some such material, removing it again when the bulbs begin to send up their foliage. They will need to be kept moist all the time, but not soaking wet, and in case of heavy rain storms occurring repeatedly, boards or some other temporary shelter should be placed over them.

SMILAX—Where a new bed has to be made, or an old one replanted, the sooner such work is done the better the results will be. There is no use in waiting till later in the season, as one crop in the fall would be lost by so doing. Use well-enriched soil when making up the bed, as smilax is what may be termed a grass feeder.

Exhibition by Retail Florists at Frankfort, Germany.

This exhibition was held June 22 to 24. To one greatly interested in the general arrangement, he was at once favorably impressed with the completeness and practicability of the rooms, etc., of the exhibition. The interior of the palm garden (a great conservatory) forms a good background and surrounding for the beautiful, complete and single arrangements of floral work, room arrangements and table decorations, while the garden outside prepared the visitor for the splendid view inside. It was like holding an exhibition in the Philadelphia Horticultural Building in connection with the conservatories and the flower beds in Lincoln Park, Chicago, close by. Every corner, stairway and veranda was suitably decorated for the occasion.

Many gold, silver and bronze medals were offered, besides cash and other prizes.

The display of cut flowers and different foliage and other decorative material was really the best of the exhibition. A great many funeral wreaths were made of green foliage, pine cones, etc. Hardy outdoor flowers, such as pæonias, spiræs, and iris, were exhibited in great profusion and of good quality. Cut roses, principally of outdoor growth, were in great variety, but of medium quality. A daily display of a first-class American flower store would have knocked out the whole business.

In carnations the exhibit was very meagre. A few abnormally developed flowers were looked at as wonders. With us they would have gone to the dump. Of lily of the valley several Hamburg and Berlin growers made splendid displays.

For furnishing winter gardens or arranging a conservatory, several good prizes were offered. In this line some excellent displays were made, consisting of palms, selagmellas, walks, rockeries, dainty rustic bridges, settees, chairs, cozy corners, for which all kinds of foliage plants and vines were used, with choice blooming plants here and there. These displays, as well as the cut-flower exhibits, were made in the side galleries of the palm garden proper, being very suitably arranged for the purpose.

In funeral work the display was very varied, but there was nothing of special interest to the writer. Many of the arrangements were made very loosely—in fact, too loosely, as the next morning the flowers were nearly gone, and the third day, very likely, nothing was left.

Any attempt at making solid, choice floral work, as we are used to making it, was a dismal failure, the groundwork being of very cheap material and the finishing touches very poor.

In the basket arrangements and those of loose bouquets for general purposes, the color effect was much better. The use of orchids was very lavish, and in this particular line the exhibition was a great success; but, this taken away, very little could be said of the remainder. In the line of laurel wreaths, of which the writer saw many beautiful effects at the Hamburg Exhibition in 1897, very poor specimens were shown on this occasion.

Many table decorations were exhibited—some good, some indifferent, some very bad—something really very good among them could not be seen, excepting, maybe, several orchid tables. The table arrangements—that is, cloth, tableware, menu cards, etc.—were in every instance complete and of good quality.

The second day of the exhibition showed many displays in a badly withered condition; while some exhibitors made efforts at replenishing, most of them left their displays untouched. It was noticed that the best things shown had a card attached, "Not for Competition." This seems to show that the judge question is always open for discussion.

The weather was cold, drizzly, sometimes a little warmer, with thunder showers during the whole time. We have had nearly three weeks of miserable, rainy, cool weather, with but a very few days partially good. W. B.

Providence, R. I.

Business the past few weeks has been fairly good. Decoration Day trade was all that could be expected, both in cut flowers and plants. The supply was about equal to the demand. Graduation work for schools and colleges was very satisfactory, much better than a year ago. At present business is very quiet but we need a rest and a chance to collect our thoughts—and bills also. The stores started to close at six o'clock July 2.

Weather has been very warm since the latter part of June, with little or no rain, and the crops and grass are suffering greatly.

We expect to send quite a delegation to the New York Convention from Rhode Island.

The club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday, July 12. The annual outing will occur Thursday, July 19, at President James Hockey's place, at Pawtucket, which is admirably adapted for such purpose, and easily reached by trolley cars from Providence. The committee, T. Johnston and F. Macrae, promise all who may attend a good time.

J. Johnston, of Johnston Bros., left today for the wilds of Maine.

F. Macrae has about completed his new range of houses and new heating plant, and is getting everything in shape to attend the convention.

M. Sweeney is building a large palm and show house at his model place on Pine street.

T. L. O'Connor spent the Fourth at Narragansett Pier. Most of the boys are putting off vacations until August, and will attend convention and take a vacation at same time. A. M.

Market Report.

We are shortly to loose a very popular associate in the trade in this city. John Walker, who has been the right hand man of Robert Craig for many years, has bought out the establishment of E. Hippard, Youngstown, Ohio. The terms have been agreed upon, and now all that remains is for the necessary papers to be drawn up. In all probability Mr. Walker will leave for his new field early in August. John will be greatly missed in this city, where his genial disposition has made him many friends; but everyone wishes him success in his new venture. Without a doubt his move is a good one, as there are splendid opportunities west of the Alleghenies for good plant growers.

Leo Neissen intends improving his wholesale establishment this Summer. A new refrigerator will be installed, and several improvements made to better handle his increasing business.

DAVID RUST.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

With persistent individual effort the Convention of the Society of American Florists, to be held in New York City next August, can be made a memorable event in American horticulture. It is the desire of President Wood that each member of the Society constitute himself or herself a committee of the whole and obtain at least one new member and as many more as possible, either life or subscription.

If each member will make this effort the strength of our organization will be greatly increased and our ability to carry forward the work of the Society in the coming century will be strengthened accordingly.

President Wood also requests that each member read his remarks at the Detroit convention, upon co-operation, which were published in the last annual report of the Society; also the discussion and the Society's action upon this subject, and come to the New York convention prepared to act and vote understandingly upon the measures which will be presented for the future management of the Co-operative Department or for the organization of a corporation with capital.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

The foregoing call is timely, and if the request of President Wood anent the securing of new members is faithfully carried out by each individual a very large augmentation to the membership list should result.

But why not enthuse the present members with a competitive spirit, by offering the gold medal of the Society to the party who secures the largest number of members within a specified period? There are no doubt many who like to do work gratuitously for the Society, and there are doubtless as many more who would take increased interest along this line for some sort of recognition as herein proposed. The S. A. F. has been liberal with its medals for the benefit of others; surely, it can well afford to be thus generous on its own behalf!

As regards the co-operative matter, the Society has practically disposed of it by referring the whole subject to the Executive Committee, as individuals, and for separate action "without involving the Society of American Florists in any way whatever." So whatever that committee may elect to do in the premises would seem to be no concern of the Society as a body.

If the president has ready the measures which will be presented for the future management of the Co-operative Department, or for the organization of a corporation with capital, we would suggest that these be made known through the trade press at once, so that full and deliberate consideration may be given them previous to the assembling of the convention, at which time the delegates may then be expected to act intelligently regarding said measures.

How Many Are Going?

In order to aid the New York Florists' Club in making its final arrangements regarding S. A. F. convention matters, it has been suggested by President O'Mara that the S. A. F. vice-presidents procure and send to Secretary John Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth Street, New York, on or before July 23 next, the number of delegates (or as near thereto as possible) likely to be in attendance at the convention from the various sections of the country, under the jurisdiction of the vice-presidents. A list of these gentlemen is subjoined, and intending delegates should at once notify their respective vice-presidents of their intention to be present at the largest convention in the Society's history.

Transportation to New York Convention.

It has now been definitely settled that practically all the railroads and steamship lines in the United States, as far west as Utah, have concurred in a uniform rate of one and one-third fare on the certificate plan to those attending the convention. Attention is called to the following rules, which must be followed in order to obtain the benefit of the concession:—

1. Tickets at full fare for the going journey may be secured within three days (exclusive of Sunday) prior to and during the first three days of the meeting. The advertised dates of the meeting are from August 21 to August 24, consequently you can obtain your ticket not earlier than August 17, nor later than August 23. Be sure that when purchasing your ticket you request a "certificate." Do not make the mistake of asking for a "receipt."

2. Present yourself at the railroad station for ticket and certificate at least thirty minutes before the departure of the train.

3. Certificates are not kept at all stations. If you inquire at your station you will find out whether certificates and through tickets can be obtained to place of meeting. If not, agent will inform you at what station they can be obtained. You can purchase a local ticket thence, and there take up a certificate and through ticket.

4. On your arrival at the meeting present your certificate at once to Secretary Stewart, who will return it to you after it has been duly validated.

5. It has been arranged that the special agent of the Trunk Line Association will be in attendance to validate certificates on August 22, 23 and 24.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

Chicago to New York.

The Western passenger agents of the various railroads, the past week, decided to allow special rates to delegates to the S. A. F. convention, which will insure a goodly company from here, especially if all those going from west, south and north of this will make Chicago their common starting point for New York. The committee has authority to guarantee all a good time, and a special train, if enough can be got together. It is yet too early to guess as to the extent of Chicago's contingent, but it will be large, and eager for the meeting here in 1901. ESS.

And We'll Be There!

The hum of the approaching convention is evidenced by the "bee" in the bonnet! The FLORISTS' EXCHANGE has a word apropos. Rudd is "buzzing" and says there are others.

As to a nominee for president-elect, the name of the New York gentleman is very pat, indeed. There is no more efficient or practical man in the Society, and as a presiding officer he is simply unequaled. He would make an ideal Populist candidate, and able to suit both parties to wonst; 16 to 1 he'd get it, at the same time, his gilt-edged principles would observe the golden rule.

Is the office of a retiring president ex-officio or de facto? It is quite amusing to note the genial Rudd in his new role of dictatorship! As a druggist, he has an inimitable way of sugar-coating pills!

Mr. Rudd now tells the Society what's what, and orders the S. A. F. to keep away from Buffalo and steer straight to Chicago—all because of the fascinating allurements of the forthcoming Pan-American Exposition. The S. A. F. meeting was on the boards at St. Louis when the Columbian Exposition was the Chicago attraction, and visitors in general preferred to stay in Chicago to a trip to St. Louis. The S. A. F. Convention that year was a slimly attended affair. History would repeat itself should Chicago be selected as the place of meeting for 1901—and Buffalo would still be the magnet of attraction.

Let the Society go where it can best attract attention, secure and hold membership. If the Society goes to Chicago in 1901, there will certainly be a falling off in membership for that year; and while Chicago is a delightful city and her ways are pleasant to the craft, the location is not at all "central" as far as the S. A. F. is concerned.

Mr. Rudd must be in athletic training, and the way he puts on the gloves for a sparring bout with President Wood for introducing guileless business into the S. A. F., is "nery," nous verrons!

If the Society is to be remodeled into a strictly business enterprise, why not have the whole durned thing—horns, hoofs and all! But who is to be the "hide and tail," to use Mr. Rudd's hairy expression? What's everybody's business is usually nobody's business, and somebody must needs shoulder the enterprise or there will be danger of head-end collision! Why not elect a president for life and hold him strictly to account for advance in the price of coal, iron, glass, et al, and make him go bail for honest ac'ts and collections!

To make the thing a "go," the office of president would need to be as much a "sticker" as the secretary's, still, I fancy no one would hanker for a third term.

Better let the S. A. F. enthuse its activities in developing hortus, educating and interesting public sentiment in its ever increasing favor, thereby creating more and more demand for our commercial products.

Business—as business will take care of itself individually and collectively.

GROVE P. RAWSON.

SEEN, HEARD AND READ.

W. N. R., with an abundance of choice metaphor and scholarly diction, takes exception to the remarks appearing in this column recently in reference to the S. A. F. furnishing information relative to the financial standing of its members to other members so desiring it; and while agreeing with our treatment of the suggestion regarding turning the S. A. F. into a collection agency, adds that "there seems to me no possible objection to the collection proposition which is not equally valid against the other. Why separate the tail from the hide?" We ourselves had some doubts as to the feasibility of our proposition, yet thought we saw a way whereby the hide could be kept intact while the caudal appendage could be lopped off, or taken care of by those responsible for its being twisted.

Any one except those who are "sellers in a very limited market," knows full well the difficulties attending the granting of credit, and the large outlay often necessary to obtain payment of an honest debt; they also know how much easier and cheaper it is to secure trustworthy information regarding many an intending purchaser than it is to collect from him after he has become a buyer. Therefore, if the S. A. F. were to do anything at all in a matter of this kind, we thought of the two evils, it should choose the lesser, acting on the assumption that "prevention is better than cure," and still be "lifting up and carrying forward" something tending to the interests of its members.

Of course, much of the rating information regarding individuals comes along when the tail and the hide remain normal, yet, some of our large mercantile agencies, being hide bound in such matters, devote all their attention to caring for the pelt, and with success. Besides, in undertaking work of this kind, the Society would be of service to all its clients; for even those of them who "sell in a limited market" are at times imbued with the desire to ape the more progressive and seek a wider field.

It occurs to us, however, that this insatiable desire as to the benefits that do, ought, could, would or should arise from membership in the S. A. F. has been encouraged and fostered by the Society itself as an attempt to perpetuate, through the association, the pet schemes of perhaps well-meaning but superficial-thinking individuals. If we look around, we shall easily discover that there is no similar organization existing to-day that does so much for so little. The Society's own end would be best served were it to "sit down," and that heavily, upon every proposition, no matter whence emanating, that tends to engender the "hogishness" (pardon the word) now rampant in the trade. The craft must be educated, and that by the Society itself, as to what is the latter's proper and legitimate sphere, and any suggestion as to labor outside of that sphere should at once be squelched.

There is much, very much, that the S. A. F. could do for the florist trade without attempting to run the business of every one engaged in it, and that right in line with its originally conceived programme. Many of these latter-day propositions, in addition to displaying the unwisdom of their originators, tend to bring the Society into ridicule and rob it of any dignity or moral influence that it may possess as a national institution. Let us, in the classic words of Rudd, "return to our knitting." The needles cannot be set in motion too soon.

Market Notes.

The cut flower trade seems to be fairly well adjusted at the present time. Very little stock is being sent to market, and there is just about enough demand to use up the receipts. Roses are very few in numbers, especially good ones; and this helps to keep the values about stationary. The best grades of American Beauty are worth $3 per dozen, and the same grades of Bride and Bridesmaid are bringing $5 and $6 per 100. Standard sorts of carnations have realized 50c. and 75c. per 100. Fancy varieties, when to be had, have fetched $1.25 and $1.50, a few extra fine Flora Hill bringing as high as $2. Longiflorum lilies are yet obtainable, and they realize from $2 to $4 per 100, according to quality. Lilium auratum are also fairly plentiful, but do not seem to be sought for very much, being offered at $4 per 100.

Sweet peas are of better quality at present than they were a few days ago. Gladiolus are rather plentiful, and the best is to be had at 50c. per dozen. Asters are increasing in quantity, but the finer blooms have not yet begun to arrive; those at present coming in are offered at 10c. per bunch of one dozen.

Cattleya gigas sells at 50c. each, and there are some elegant flowers arriving. Other varieties realize from 25c. to 35c.

The call for maidenhair fern, asparagus and smilax is almost nil. Good, long strings of the latter are now freely offered at $8 and $10 per 100.

Among the retailers business is almost at a standstill, yet window displays are kept as effective as ever; and there is no doubt that the larger portion of the stock disposed of in the wholesale marts is used for display purposes only.

Wadley & Smythe, Fifth avenue, who also have a branch store at Newport, R. I., had the elaborate decorations for the Havermeyer-Whiting wedding, which took place at Newport on Wednesday.

Jottings.

The Bogart employes fishing excursion took place on Wednesday, the 11th, and was a grand success. Some fish were caught, and everybody had a good time, with the exception of a few individuals, who, thinking the boat would not start exactly at the time stated, were a few minutes late in reaching the dock, to their great disappointment.

The wholesale florist's store, hitherto conducted by Ghormley & Perkins, whose co-partnery dissolution was announced last week, will hereafter be under the sole ownership of W. Ghormley.

J. A. Perkins will open a wholesale store on Monday next at No. 45 west 29th street.

S. J. Limprecht, who is staying at New Rochelle for the Summer, is confined to the house with sickness.

John Karl, Thomas Miller and Charlie Schimmel, all popular salesmen of the wholesale district, are away on vacation.

Wm. H. Gunther, with his wife and daughter, left Thursday for Dalton, Mass., to spend the Summer. Mr. Gunther intends coming to town occasionally, however, and keeping in touch with his business.

The reception committee of the club have about completed arrangements for giving the visiting ladies at the Convention beautiful carriage drives. One section will go through Central Park and Riverside Drive, and the other section will be driven through Prospect Park and Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

A. H. Langjahr is devoting all his spare time to the Brooklyn end of the drive, and his zeal will, it is anticipated, bring out some music and a collation, to be served under the trees of the beautiful grove in Prospect Park.

The Horticultural Exhibition promises to be a display such as has not been seen before in this city. Gardeners who have not yet received a schedule should drop a card to the Secretary, J. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., who will immediately forward a copy.

The New York Market Florists' Association will wait and confer with the Alderman who drew up the resolution regarding the reconstruction of Clinton Market before proceeding further in the matter. The resolution mentioned is one that was passed by the City Council some time ago, and calls for an entirely new building.

W. Ghormley will continue in business at 57 W. 28th street, succeeding to the firm of Ghormley & Perkins, recently dissolved.

Rev. W. T. Hutchins, of Indian Orchard, Mass., sailed for London, Wednesday last, to be in attendance at the sweet pea bi-centenary meeting at the Crystal Palace, where he will read a paper on "Sweet Peas in America." From all indications a rousing meeting is assured.

Chas. A. Dards leaves to-day (Saturday) for Europe.

Club Meeting.

A large attendance was again present Monday evening last, President O'Mara presiding. Convention matters were taken up with a vim, occupying the whole session. The Horticultural Exhibition committee reported a scale of points for the purpose of awarding the two $100.00 cash prizes at the forthcoming show. This will be distributed through the trade papers on an early date. The committee also announced the appointment of Arthur Herrington of Madison, N. J., as superintendent of the exhibition. The selection of Mr. Herrington gave general satisfaction.

Erust G. Asmus was unanimously chosen captain of the home gun club to be formed to participate in the shooting tournament. It is expected this contest will take place on the Wednesday afternoon of Convention week (August 22), at McKnight's Meadows, Lafayette, N. J.

A ladies' committee will be appointed to look after the visiting ladies.

The printing and advertising committee reported excellent success with advertisements for the souvenir book. It is intended to close up all matters connected with the souvenir by July 18 next, so that all intending advertisers should lose no time in securing space.

Wm. Duckham was appointed on the exhibition committee, versus C. H. Allen, resigned, he being unable through press of other business to give the matter the necessary attention.

The newly elected members were at once assigned to committees as follows: Fred Donoghue and Lawrence Corbett to the horticultural exhibition committee; E. B. Dunn to ways and means; and Chas. J. Dawson and Wm. Wallace Burnham to reception committee. John Hayes and Dan MacRorie were proposed for membership.

Mr. Nugent, for committee on hall decoration, promised something magnificent along this line.

President O'Mara earnestly requests that the state vice-presidents ascertain the likely number of delegates to the Convention from their various sections, and notify Secretary Young, 51 West 28th street, on or before July 23. This will greatly aid the club in making its final arrangements.

A letter was read from F. L. Harris, expressing his high appreciation of his election as an honorary member of the club, and the deep interest he would continue to take in progressive horticulture. Mr. Harris added that he was not feeling very well just now.

Manager Cleary, of the Trade Exhibit, reported a very satisfactory outlook for a large display. No time should now be lost by intending exhibitors to secure space, in order to prevent disappointment later on. Considering the large number of delegates expected the Trade Exhibit this year offers exceptional opportunities to the craft.

A special session of the club will be held, Monday evening, July 24, in the club rooms, to promote convention work.

The exhibition committee recommended that the club's certificate of merit be awarded to W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., for new rose, Pink Pearl, which the committee states is an acquisition as a garden variety, also for rockeries and trellis work.

The entertainment committee provided cigars and refreshments, which were enjoyed during the proceedings.

The New Jersey Bowling and Curling Club extends an invitation to all interested to visit their grounds, which are within easy walking distance of where the shooting contest will take place, and participate in "the grand old game of bowling on the green."

Flatbush and vicinity was visited by a hail storm Thursday afternoon. While it was not heavy enough to break any glass, the leaves of ficus that were planted outdoors were slightly damaged in some instances.

PHOTOGRAPHIC CONTEST.

AWARDS IN JUNE COMPETITION.

First Prize.—S. G. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y., $5.00 for a rose arbor.

Honorable Mention.—Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa., for a porch view; S. G. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y., for a bed of pink hyacinths.

The judging was done by a gentleman who, passing on several hundred photographs daily, is eminently qualified to act in that capacity. We refer to Mr. C. P. Browning, proprietor of the Galvanotype Engraving Co., Photo-Engravers, 216 William street, New York City.

Following is Mr. Browning's letter announcing his decision:

Publishers Florists' Exchange.
Rhinelander Bldg, City.

Gentlemen—I have examined the photographs you sent me, and have decided that the Crimson Rambler arbor, photographed by Mr. S. G. Harris, of Tarrytown, N. Y., should be awarded the first prize. The subject is well-selected, the picture is symmetrical in its proportions, the detail sharp and the photograph is well finished. We would suggest that had Mr. Harris waited until the sun had passed a trifle more to the right, the deep shadow in the lower left hand would have been lightened up and the photograph still further improved.

I also wish to call to your attention two other subjects that are worthy of honorable mention. One is the photograph of the Crimson Rambler and Mary Washington roses, on a porch, by Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa.

The photograph is certainly a very pleasing one, but the dark foliage being photographed against the shadow of the porch leaves it too obscure; had the photographer omitted the palms at the lower left hand, the photo would have been improved. This gives it a rather set appearance, and, I think, when tropical plants are brought in close proximity to our native vines and shrubs, the effect is not harmonious.

Crimson Rambler and Mary Washington Roses.

Photographed by Henry Eichholz, Florist, Waynesboro, Pa. Awarded Honorable Mention.

The second is the bed of pink hyacinths by S. G. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y., deserving especial mention for the clearness of detail, and being exceptionally well printed and toned; the artistic features of the photograph are, however, lacking, and the effect of the hyacinth bed is injured by being cut off at the right.

Yours very truly,
C. P. BROWNING.

New York, July 10, 1900.

Other competitors sending in very creditable work were L. A. Alt, Rochester, N. Y. and F. Herman Cook, Baltimore, Md.

Now that other intending aspirants, who have hitherto held back from fear or diffidence, are enabled to note the class of work turned in, we trust they will take courage and let us hear from them.

(139) Leaf for Name—Burton Parks. The leaf submitted is the ordinary bronze galax, which has now come to be used largely in the cheaper grades of funeral work.

(140) Violet Houses—I have two violet houses 10 x 75 x 7, running east and west, three-quarter span. I am told by some that they are built wrong. Now I wish to build two more. Could you tell me the right way they should run? From what I see around places that I have visited the houses are built all kinds of ways.—R. C. SMITH, PA.

—Violet houses give the best results when built even span, running north and south. For full information regarding violet culture and the construction of houses to grow them in, you should procure a copy of Galloway's Violet Culture. Price $1.50. It can be obtained from this office.

(141) Distance of Benches from Glass—I have had some discussion on how far the benches in a rose house or carnation house should be from the glass to give the plants the best advantage of light and yet give them plenty of head room. Would you kindly give me the desired information in your Question Box, as I am about to put up new benches. My houses are a good deal shaded.—ENQUIRER.

—As inquirer does not state how high his houses are, we cannot advise him as to what would be the best height to build the benches. Where the houses are partially shaded by nearby buildings, etc., the benches should be raised up from the floor accordingly, leaving about six feet head room in the centre; providing the house is an even span one, side benches will necessarily have to be much lower than that, and the bench should be so made that the row of plants nearest the glass will have from 24 to 30 inches head room, as each succeeding row will gain in head room according to the slope of the glass. We might say, in addition, that in the modern well-ventilated houses that are now being built, the benches are just high enough to be conveniently worked, the houses are so airy and light that the distance the benches are from the glass does not enter into the matter at all. We know of carnation houses that produce the finest of flowers, where the plants are ten or twelve feet from the glass.

(142) Mushrooms under Carnation Benches—We cannot advise the growing of mushrooms in the same house as carnations, as the piling of manure under the benches breeds vermin to such an extent as to render it impossible to keep the carnations clean.

(2) For the carnation benches short manure, with the heat partly spent, is the best, 12 or 14 inches deep, made solid and about three inches of soil on top.

(3) In regard to boiler and pipes, consult some of the horticultural engineers whose advertisements appear in these columns.

Awarded First Prize in FLORISTS' EXCHANGE Photographic Competition for June

NOTES BY THE WAY.

ELMIRA, N. Y. Chrysanthemums and violets are very promising with Grove P. Rawson, who tells me he will have something fine in new kinds the coming Fall. Mr. Rawson expects to be one of the big crowd of delegates at the coming convention, no obstacle appearing at present. There will be a host of others who will attend, and thus strengthen our society.

Ed. Hoffman, of Hoffmann Bros., will be there. He has just planted up roses and violets—fine stock it is. Carnations are looking well outside.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y. Anton F. Spofford has sold his business to Lyman Cornell, who will continue on the same lines. Mr. Spofford retires after many years' active service, and carries the best wishes of the craft into his retirement.

Mrs. Barnes would be with us at the Convention did not a bad attack of grip prevent her presence. This busy lady has been kept from active employment for six months past, but holds herself in touch with the trade through the medium of the EXCHANGE.

W. H. Graham is busy replanting and fixing up after a good season.

SCRANTON, PA.—Geo. R. Clark is taking advantage of the cool spell to rush the planting of chrysanthemums and roses. His thoughts are turning eastward, while his late foreman, John Brown, has turned his steps westward, having entered the employ of E. Hippard, Youngstown, O.

WILKESBARRE, PA.—Ira G. Marvin is adding two houses for roses, which is all the building to be done this season. He reports a fine season with geraniums, which are very scarce. I notice stock is being worked up earlier this year, owing to close selling. Mr. Marvin may join Geo. Fancourt in the trip to the metropolis to exhibit some of his mammoth Kaiserin roses at the Convention.

CONCORDVILLE, PA.—Henry Hannen, grower for J. J. Styer, gave me a few statistics regarding his success in growing tomatoes with carnations, that makes interesting reading. Growing for the wholesale market entirely, he plants between carnations on centre and entirely on back benches, during the months of February and March, to obtain successional crops. The first crop comes in about April 25 and continues until about July 25, by which time he will have gathered in the neighbourhood of five tons, all of which have been sold at good figures. The variety he thinks most of is Lorillard. I saw one fruit which weighed 18 ounces, a specimen of the general quality of the crops. The mushroom crop was a success this season, as high as one dollar per pound being obtained in New York at one period.

Business Difficulties.

SANDUSKY, O.—Joseph C. Gooding, a florist, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States District Court. He says his debts are $2,335.66, and his assets $6,355. Of the latter amount $5,000 worth is his stock in trade.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—Martin Bartholomew has sold his florist business to Edward Firkin, a practical man from New York, who took possession on July 2. Mr. Bartholomew expects to go West and locate in Minneapolis.

Culture of Narcissus.

The first thing to do is to get suitable soil. Any good ground will do, but some soils are better adapted for the purpose than others. Bulbs will thrive in light or heavy land, dry or wet soil, provided there is no stagnant water at the roots.

The best soil of all is a good deep medium loam, and a north or north-west aspect if sheltered will answer as well as any. If the land hangs to the south, the blooms will be earlier, but the bulbs do rather better if not exposed to too much direct sun in the middle of Summer.

The soil should be deeply worked, not so deeply as to bring up a lot of poor subsoil, but deep enough to prevent the bulbs suffering from drought during the Summer. Work with the spade in preference to the plough. Spade work is better, it is generally deeper, and leaves no smooth bottom to prevent draining, as is the case in ploughing. When the ground is well worked down, mark out the piece in beds.

There are various methods of planting; some plant in much the same way as you would plant potatoes. This suits very well for such large bulbs as Sir Watkin, Emperor, etc., but for medium and small bulbs the following will be found the quickest and cheapest plan: Having marked out all the beds in the piece by notching the edges of the paths, dig out the soil from the bed at one end to the required depth, carrying in to the other end of the piece to fill the last bed. Prepare the bottom by working it with a spade or fork, then put in the bulbs regularly and firmly, so that they will not be thrown down in covering them. Plant not too deeply. If the top of the bulb be covered two inches, it will be found sufficient for the smaller kinds, and three or four inches is ample for the larger varieties. The bed having been all planted, it may then be covered by digging out the ground from the next bed and throwing carefully over the bulbs. When this is done the second bed is ready for planting, and so on through the whole piece.

Having planted the bulbs, which should be done at the latest by the end of September and, preferably, in August, there is nothing to do but to keep the ground clean till they bloom in March or April. This is best done by passing over them with a Dutch hoe several times, before the green points come too near the surface. A good plan especially in wet ground is during December to cut out the paths, to the depth of five or six inches, and throw the ground over the beds, in this way killing any small weeds there may be. At the same time the sunken paths will act as so many drains to take off the surplus water. Another way to keep the ground clean is to give it a good covering of seaweed; this also serves as a manuring.

The bulbs begin to bloom very early in the Spring; in fact, before Spring begins, some few varieties blooming throughout the Winter. I have known the Paper White to commence blooming in September and continue in bloom throughout the Winter. It is quite usual for such varieties as Soleil d'Or and Double Roman to commence at Christmas.

During the flowering season the bulbs should be gone over at least once a fortnight, to dig out any stray bulbs of other kinds that may be among them. If this is not done carefully the stocks will soon get mixed, and, therefore, practically unsaleable. Care must be taken during the flowering season that the bulbs do not get overgrown with weeds, as these will dry the ground and stifle the foliage. Any injury done to the bulb during its growing season, after the flowers are off, will spoil the flower crop for the following year, as it is during the Summer that the bloom for the following year is formed.

As soon as the leaves have died down the bulbs are ready for digging. It is not necessary to dig most bulbs every year; they will do very well left for two or even three years in the ground, providing the soil is good, and not allowed to get foul with weeds. But for some of the more delicate varieties, and if the bulbs are required for sale, in which case a fine plump, round bulb commands the readiest market, digging every year is advisable.

In digging, care should be taken not to prick the bulbs with the fork, as the least injury will cause some varieties to rot. If the bulbs are to be left out on the ground, they should have a slight covering, to prevent them scorching. When storing the bulbs, take care not to mix the various kinds, let each lot be labeled, and put them in a dry shed, if possible. When well dried, they may be separated, sorting them in two or three sizes, and having all ready to plant again as early as possible.

In the case of delicate varieties, such as Obvallaris, Sulphur Crown, etc., plant, if possible, in ground quite new to narcissus.

As regards manuring, I find it answers best to use little manure directly to the bulbs. Grass ground, grass fed off and manured regularly every year, is the most suitable, but, when this is not available, use land that has been well manured for the previous crop; or, if manure is really needed, well decayed farmyard manure may be used, care being taken to bury it well away from the base of the bulbs; they, being deep rooters, will find it when they need it. Bone meal is also very good.

One of the pests we have to contend with is the narcissus bee. It lays its eggs at the base of the leaves, at the times when the leaves are nearly ripe. The grub when hatched finds its way down to the base of the bulb, where it commences eating its way through, thus destroying the bulb completely, if given time enough. I know of no cure for this pest, but if the bulbs are lifted every year and examined carefully, and those attacked treated with paraffin, or the grub otherwise destroyed, the pest may be kept within bounds. It does not attack all sorts equally, and some seasons it does more damage than in others. I think a lot depends on the state of the weather, when the bees come out. If it happens to be cold and wet, you will find them dull and quite easy to catch, but in bright, sunny weather they are very active, as they need to be, their life being very short.

Narcissi suffer from several diseases: some go bad with rust at the base, and others will rot off completely at times without any apparent cause. I can suggest no remedy, but if the directions as to their culture, which I have given earlier in this paper, are followed, I think it will go a long way towards preventing the troubles.

Now as to which are the best sorts to grow, I will suggest a few names, but cannot give a list of all the best varieties.

If flowers are needed as early as possible, grow the well-known varieties I have mentioned before—Paper White, Double Roman and Soleil d'Or.

Then in February you can have Double Daffodils, Princeps and Obvallaris or Tenby, and among any dearer sorts, Henry Irving, Golden Spur and Countess of Anaesley.

March and April are the principal months for narcissi. Then you have nearly all the different kinds in bloom, some of the best market varieties being Bicolor, Horsfieldi, Incomparabilis, Sir Watkin, Princess Mary of Cambridge, Barri, Conspicuous, Cynosure, etc. Then the Poeticus section, represented by Ornatus and Poetarum; these are among the best for market purposes. Ornatus especially, is one of the finest blooming varieties grown; its pure white flowers coming as they often do at Easter, are always in great demand.

Among the later sorts are Emperor, Empress and Grandee. I should have also mentioned the Orange Phœnix and Sulphur Crown, and also Polyanthus Grand Monarque, and the latest of all blooming in May, the Double White Narcissus. Of course there are many more kinds, some catalogues naming 200 or 300 varieties, but the really valuable and distinct kinds are not nearly so numerous.

Great care should be taken in gathering and packing the flowers, as it is no use growing them well if they are to be neglected in the end. When gathered, stand the flowers in water, taking care that the blooms themselves are kept dry, and leaving them in water till packing them in the boxes the morning of sending. Bunch carefully twelve in a bunch, leaving the stems as long as possible. It is bad policy to shorten them, as buyers are always anxious to get long stems. Pack in the boxes supplied by the salesman, in a single layer, not in two or three, as is sometimes done. This is the cause of many of the complaints of flowers arriving in a damaged and heated condition.

To keep the flowers from shaking and getting bruised in transit fix a piece of wood across the box, pressing firmly on the stems where they cross in the middle of the box. If these precautions are taken and the boxes firmly bundled together, there will be fewer complaints of the flowers arriving damaged.

A word or two as to forcing before I close. Plant the bulbs in boxes or pans in August, stand them outside, covering with ashes to keep them cool. As soon as the points show through, the ashes may be removed.

Double Daffodils, Princeps, Tenby, Golden Spur, Sir Watkin and Ornatus are among the best varieties for forcing.

Double Daffodils, Princeps and Tenby may be taken into the forcing house about Christmas, care being taken not to get the temperature above fifty degrees till the buds are well advanced. The other sorts may be put in the beginning of February, giving a supply of good flowers during the coldest months of the year.—E. T. Wheadon, in Guernsey Growers' Year-Book.

Florists' Picnic.

The only thing of importance the past week was the picnic given by the Park Floral Co., to all the employes. About forty people, assembled at the depot on the morning of the Fourth, and took the train to the mountains, or rather to the edge of them, and from there we "tally-hoed" or "hay-rocked" it up a little higher. A good program of sports was laid out beforehand, so that when we arrived at the grounds everything was in readiness. Liberal prizes were offered by the company, and a great deal of rivalry existed, especially in the 90-yard dash handicap, open to all employes. The program started off with the boys' race, 75 yards' handicap, and was won by Harry Berry, off the 2½ yd. mark; time 9½ seconds.

The bugle sounded, calling the old men to the scratch. This race was open to those between the ages of 50 and 100 years. They ran 50 yds., and John Berry lasted just long enough "to cop the dough." Time 8½ seconds. Pretty good, John thought, for a man 60 years old. Then came the race that put us on edge—the ladies'. There were several entries, but by post time a few had scratched out, some declining the weight and others preferring a heavy track. This race was 50 yards, and they carried weight for age. And some of them got it pretty hard on that. To describe the race would be a very hard task. I can only say that some of them raced down, others walked, and I saw one that came down single foot. Miss Page ran the best, but at the end the weight told, and she just won by a length. Next we had the much-talked-of race, the 90-yds. handicap dash. Mr. Valentine did some clever handicapping in this event, and the final brought out a pretty finish. Twelve started, so we ran three heats and a final, the winner of each best to qualify. Don Scott won his heat off the 5-yard mark, Geo. Plews his off the 12-yard mark, and Philip Scott and Chas. Mossholder ran a dead heat in their race, Scott starting on the scratch and Mossholder on the 18-yard mark. So as not to tire them, the judge allowed both to start in final. There were men set all the way up to the 18 and 20-yard line, but they couldn't qualify. Geo. Plews won the final, with P. Scott second, and D. Scott third, he winning very nicely by a yard, in the fast time of 9¾ seconds.

In the hop, skip and jump, Plews again scored, with P. Scott second, and D. Scott third—distance 40 ft. 6 in., with a handicap of 7 feet 6 inches.

The three-legged race was next, and three teams started, but they didn't finish, Scott and Bloy taking a tumble. The race was won by Plews and Harry Berry, but it looked as though they had been doing a little work before the race.

The sack race was very amusing, most of the starters never having been in a sack before. Plews said he had run sack races in England and had an easy time of it.

The peanut race brought out a good many starters, and was supposed to be for the ladies only, but John Berry sneaked in and won it, but the judge decided that, as he was no lady, the prize would go to the next best, and Mrs. Sked got it.

The program was wound up by a ball-throwing contest, and P. Scott scored his only win; but he's thrown a ball before. The happy crowd then went over to a beautiful spot, high up, to have dinner. It was a grand layout, and much credit is due Miss Page and Miss Simpkins, they having the honor to look out for the grub. The spot was an ideal one, if for nothing more than an appetite. Behind us were the great snow-capped Rockies, and before us, as far as one could see, lay the eastern prairies.

Before leaving the grounds, the crowd gave three rousing cheers for our genial boss, Mr. Valentine, and went home to think over the many happy events of Park Floral's gala day.

Louisville, Ky.

Business has now assumed its usual midsummer dullness. Good flowers are very scarce, and the Florists Society held its July meeting at the residence of Jacob Schulz, on Tuesday afternoon, July 3. After the business of the day had been attended to, the members present were served with refreshments. A most enjoyable time was spent. The sympathies of the Louisville florists and the trade in general are with C. F. Wood, of the firm of Wood & Stubbs, seedsman and President of the Society of Kentucky Florists, in the loss of his wife, who died at Richmond, Va., Mr. Wood's former home.

Victor Mathis leaves to-day for a visit to the Paris Exposition and his old home.

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is

OBITUARY.

Robert Murray.

We regret to have to chronicle the death of Robert Murray, of Toronto, a gentleman who for several years had acted as superintendent of the Horticultural Department of the Industrial Exhibition. He was around, and apparently quite well, on Thursday, June 28; was taken suddenly ill on the 29th, and died on Monday, July 2. Mr. Murray was highly respected by all who knew him. He was an ideal superintendent for a show; he had a rare knowledge of flowers and fruits, and while being perfectly fair, was so firm and tactful that he nearly always made things go smoothly. It will be hard to fill his place.

Deceased was one of the old-time gardeners who had a good general knowledge. He came to Canada many years ago from Scotland, and had charge of several private places in different parts of the country. He lived a few years in the United States, but about 20 years ago went to Toronto and started in the florist's business, in which he was successful. A few years ago his land became very valuable, and he retired with a competency. M.

Trade News.

Business is slow. The roses and carnations offered are generally of very poor quality. The few really passable flowers offered are soon picked up. Outdoor stock still sells fairly well, but there is no extensive demand for it. Nymphæa odorata meets a fair demand at retail, but there does not appear to be any call on other varieties at present. Sweet peas are coming in very plentifully, and bringing from $2 to $5 per 100 bunches of one dozen in a bunch. Choice white flowers are rather scarce, and there is a fitful demand for them.

Our retailers still keep a few nice flowers or plants in their windows for appearance sake.

Fred Browne, the Queen street florist, is a happy man. His first-born a son arrived about two weeks ago.

Harry Dale, of Brampton, is seriously ill, but we sincerely hope he may pull through. T. M.

Ottawa.

Trade Notes.

For the past week we have had continuous rains, but as the ground was very dry, they have done no harm. Carnations in the field are looking good. Sweet peas have been greatly benefited, and in this locality are just in. Roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, and violets, planted in the houses, have made a good start, owing to the cool nights.

Business still has a little body, even in the bedding plant line; some rather good orders last week caused quite a hunt for geraniums, and any old plant had to be utilized.

A visit to Alymer last week showed friend Wright had been doing something else besides selling bedding plants, as he had four new houses just ready for planting—two for carnations and two for roses. They are built in pairs, path under the gutters; 110 by 56 feet; and, as they say in house building, with all modern improvements. As man, location, and soil are most suitable, we look upon them as the nucleus of another large rose establishment.

The Horticultural Society had a very successful exhibition. The show of roses was very good and the attendance large.

I would suggest to the Montreal and Berlin Canadian Horticultural Society officials to begin on the Convention advance notes. 'Tis a long way to Winnipeg. E.

Montreal.

Trade Notes.

The dull Summer season is now with the retailers, and trade is practically nil. Indoor flowers, with the exception of carnations, are past; and even for them there is no demand worth mentioning. Outdoor stock is plentiful, but all show signs of rough treatment accorded them by the elements. Sweet peas are coming in freely, and are of very good quality compared with those of late years.

Whatever may be the condition with the retailers, the growers are trying to get a few more than the usual 24 hours into each day. Prospects must be considered improved, as most of the local men are either making additions to, or improving and modernizing existing structures. Some very fine, freshly planted houses of roses are seen.

The weather the past three weeks has been the most remarkable on record. From intensely hot and dry, the thermometer steadily fell, until on the night of June 28 a frost was registered, which, accompanied by a very strong north-west wind played havoc with all the more tender outside plants and flowers—baskets, vases and window boxes were practically destroyed. The Summer residents on the banks of the St. Lawrence suffered more heavily than the dwellers under the shelter of old Mount Royal. Very heavy rain and wind storms ever since, with the thermometer below 50 almost every night, has been most unseasonable, but is proving splendid for carnations and other plants in the field, the former in some cases being nearly as large and far healthier than those lifted last Fall.

Jottings.

We are all pleased to report that John S. Murray still continues to make gratifying progress toward convalescence.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS Now is the time to plant them. We offer extra fine vigorous plants, from 2 and 2½ inch pots. Everybody likes them; they are so strong and healthy that they surprise all of our new customers; our old customers, of course, always know what to expect, but even they occasionally tell us that our stock is getting better all the time. Following is a partial list.

Club News.

The meeting Monday night was, considering the time of year, very well attended. The proceedings were of an interesting character. The picnic committee reported that the steamer Hochelaga had been engaged to carry the members and their friends to Isle Gros Bois on Wednesday, July 18. There will be the usual program of sports, etc. The trip on the St. Lawrence, lasting about two hours each way, will be one of the most enjoyable features.

Two papers were read, one by John Walsh on his specialty—hardy shrubs; one by John Pidduck, gardener on Mount Royal, on bedding and bedding plants. Both papers were of a thoroughly practical nature, and were greatly appreciated.

A resolution of condolence was passed and ordered forwarded to the family of the late Robert Hall, one of our honorary members. The committee reported that a suitable floral design had been sent. The deceased gentleman, who was an ardent lover of flowers, and who was always willing to help on the society in the most practical way, expired suddenly in his chair while apparently enjoying the best of health.

Lachine Horticultural Society.

This society, formed last Winter in this popular Summer resort, already boasts nearly 200 active members. Cottage garden competitions in several sections are being held, valuable prizes having been already secured for each section. A grant of $100 has been obtained from the provincial government, a like sum being practically promised by the municipality of Lachine, which will also give free use of the town hall for the September exhibition, at which substantial cash and donated prizes will be offered. Moreover, what will go far to make this show a success is, that the money to pay the cash prizes is already in the bank. The whole society is a monument to the perseverance and industry of the able Secretary-Treasurer, Chas. A. Smith. B.

Trade News.

In the stores, occasional orders for funeral work break the monotony of dullness on sundry days. There is a disposition to decidedly early closing of the stores.

Some warm, almost hot weather, as our atmosphere averages, has been on much of the time recently, latterly followed, however, by much cooler and refreshing showers of such extent as to put all growing nature again in amiable trim.

Roses are scarce, and likely to be so for a while. Carnations are still good and pleatiful, as are out-door sweet peas: some good aurntum lilies are now seea in the stores.

Jottings.

Local report has it that Mrs. D. Newlands will remove from the location with whieh she has been so long identified on Forest Lawn Cemetery property, on Main street, to a prominent position on Delavaa avenue, opposite the same cemetery.

Louis J. Hack has severed his connection as tenant of the Brauer greenhouses, on E. North street, to re-enter the employ of C. F. Christensen on his new place.

They are beginning to "talk about us" apparently, concerning the 1901 S. A. F. Convention. So far, or up to the present, to the Buffalo craftsman an echo of prematureness follows it all.

Richard Ludwig of Cromwell, Conn., the active inside business man of A. N. Pierson's establishment, was last week the guest of S. A. Anderson. Geo. A. Tilton, of Cleveland, en route to the etropolis, paid us a pleasant visit on Tuesday.

VIDI.

Rochester, N. Y.

"The dullest June for several years," s the verdict at several places. The first week of July showed no improvement.

Sweet peas are already over-plentiful. Asters appeared on the fifth, but are hardly in full supply yet. The abundant rains of last week were in time to save much stock that was suffering from drouth. A good deal of planting that had been held back for rain was rushed through the showery days.

The acreage of Danish cabbage in Monroe County, running into the thousands, is reported larger thaa usual, and starts out favorably.

Mrs. Jacob Thoman & Sons are carrying on the business at their North Goodman street place this Summer, while Mr. T. is taking in the Paris Exposition.

E. R. Fry has put in a fruit stand, aad finds it a sensible addition to Summer trade. Several local growers were noticed, lately, swapping posies for pine apples.

It is expected that the Rochester A. O. H. (Associated Ornamental Horticulturists) will have a clambake at Arnold's sweet pea farm on the Chili Road some time the present month. Culinary matters will be in charge of an experienced chef, Thos. Gilmore, whose Falstaffian proportions indicate an intimate knowledge of the subject. G. A., Jr.

State of Trade.

Business is slower than was the case a few weeks ago. Even shipping orders for flowers or florists' supplies are limited. The fakir is quite a personage now, especially in the sweet pea line. These flowers are everywhere; never were they so plentiful in this market, often a quarter of a million arriving in a day. Twenty-five cents a hundred is a big price for this stock, the bulk of it going at from $1 to $2.50 per thousand. They cost ½c. per 100 to pick and bunch. The hot spell has reduced the quantity of roses and the quality is decidedly poor, especially in Bride and Bridesmaid. Kaiserin and Golden Gate are included in this category. Meteor is fair. Liberty is showing up somewhat, but the flowers will have to be of a finer calibre to cut much of a figure. The fragrance, however, is there all right. It would be better to let the plants get growth for a while, for all the money the flowers bring.

At last the carnation is growing smaller and less sought for. There are plenty of them yet, but none that can be classified above standard quality. A few samples of outdoor stock have shown up.

Auratum lilies are more in evidence, selling at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Longiflorum, about equal to demand, bring $8 to $10. Some excellent water lilies from the Calumet realize 50c. to $1 per 100, but often are sold lower.

Mainly About Outings.

Outing days and outing ways of (some) Chicago florists may as well be the theme, as it is seasonable. O. P. Bassett has purchased a delightful Summer home at his favorite Delavan Lake, Wisconsin. W. S. Washburn left on Tuesday for Lake Harbor, Mich. Mrs. Miller will leave last of August for Colorado Springs. C. M. Dickenson, of E. H. Hunt's, is on a camping and hunting trip in northern Michigan. Miss Sisler will go to Ningara Falls later. John Zeck at Budlong's has gone to Michigan City. Miss Nelda Wolf will go to Astakisie, northern Illinois. C. W. McKellar is still at Chillicothe, O. Arthur Frank, packer, spends his two weeks' vacation with his regiment—2nd Illinois, N. G., now camping at Springfield, Ill. A. Rosen has had his outing at Lonisville, Ky. Louis Winterson will go to Kansas City; Joseph C. Craig to Kalamazoo, Mich; Miss Torner to South Haven, Mich. J. B. Deamud may summer on his father's farm at Cairo, or at Papau Lake, Mich.; Miss Florence Emmett in Wisconsin. Charles Hughes is now in Michigan. Flint Kennicott always spends his holiday at the old homestead. E. E. Pieser is now at West Baden. Steve Minau is in Detroit, Michigan, and Walter Kennicott on a fruit farm in same state. Charles Hunt, of J. C. Vaughan's, is now at his old home in Terre Haute. Mrs. J. C. Vaughan and youngest son are now in Paris.

Alex. Nenberson and Miss Minnie Sorenson, both some time at Vaughan's seed store, were joined in wedlock July 7. Their associates gave them a handsome marble clock. Miss Jessie Ludlow, cashier, is looking forward to a delightful visit to St. Paul, Minn.

Major Freese, the State street florist, was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention held at Kansas City, Mo.

A. L. Vaughan and wife will go across the lake this week and occupy a cottage for the Summer on the St. Joe River.

E. Wienhoeber summers in his beautiful country house on the Lake Bluffs of Waukegan.

John Fuhrman, 1651 N. Clark street, sailed from New York Saturday, July 7, for a two months' trip through Belgium, Holland, Germany and Paris.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago occurred Tuesday afternoon, July 10, at the Sherman house.

McKellar and Waterson have just received a fine lot of Zanesville (Ohio) jardinieres, fern dishes and Chinese lily pans.

Herman Schiller, 897 W. Madison street, is remodeling his store and greenhouses to meet his increasing business.

P. J. Saunders has opened a flower store on 51st street, opposite Washington Park.

Anton Then and H. W. Bruns have just ended a two weeks' service on a Cook County jury. Ess.

PLANT CULTURE

HITHERTO ADVERTISED AS "COMMERCIAL PLANTS"

BY GEORGE W. OLIVER

Propagator to the U. S. Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C., and late of the Royal Botanic Garden, Edinburgh.

A Working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist, Gardener and Nurseryman and all those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer. The plants dealt with not only comprise all those which are commonly handled by the trade, but include numerous deserving varieties not so fully known.

THE FOLLOWING ARE THE CHAPTERS:

	Page		Page
STOVE AND GREENHOUSE PLANTS	9	ORNAMENTAL GRASSES	92
BEDDING PLANTS	50	WATER PLANTS—AQUATICS	96
VASE AND BASKET PLANTS	65	FERNS AND LYCOPODS	101
BULBOUS PLANTS	79	HARDY SHRUBS	147

And a lengthy chapter of General Directions, including Propagation—Seeds, Grafting, Budding, Layering—Hybridization, Potting Plants, Soil, Mulching, and Watering. Concluded by a very Complete Index to all Subjects Mentioned.

This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound in buckram to stand rough handling and plenty of it.

St. Paul.—Recent rains have brightened seed prospects in this section and raised the estimates quite materially. Onion sets have suffered with everything else, but will be a fair crop. Beans look very promising, with propects for a full average crop. Sweet corn will be an average yield. Potatoes are booming, and will give more than an average yield. L. L. May and family are now at their Summer home at Mayfield Farm, 16 miles south-east of the city. Recent callers were H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill. A. Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, Ill. The demand for milled and fodder corn continues. Farmers are still sowing these, to take the place of the hay crop destroyed by the drought. S. B. Beal, who has been traveling for L. L. May & Co. for many years, met with a serious accident at Longview, Texas, a few weeks since. In boarding a moving train he missed his footing and sustained the loss of two toes.

H. Cheeseman is now representing L. L. May & Co., in the East. VERITAS.

Bay City, Mich.—It is expected that the Hammond Seed Company will erect a new warehouse in South Bay City, to replace the one recently destroyed by fire.

As a producer of flaxseed, the United States ranks second among the nations of the world, this notwithstanding the fact that its production to any degree of importance does not at present extend beyond the eight States, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Wisconsin, and Kansas.

Import and Export Statistics.

The following exports and imports of plants, shrubs and seeds, etc., are for the month of May, 1900.

The dutiable imports of plants, shrubs, and vines amounted to $52,304 in May, 1900, against $32,438 in May, 1899. The free imports of seeds amounted in May, 1900, to $45,170, against $41,282 for May, 1899. The dutiable imports of seed amounted to $59,662 for May, 1900, against $18,861 for May, 1899.

The exports of seeds to other countries amounted to $75,982 in May, 1900, as compared with $89,331 in May, 1899. The countries to which the United States exported seeds were, the United Kingdom, which received shipments to the value of $11,473 in May, 1900, against $20,539 in May, 1899. Shipments to France amounted to $6,513 in May, 1900, against $5 in May, 1899. Germany imported seeds from the United States to the value of $7,504 against $38,543 in May, 1899.

Other European countries imported seeds to the value of $631 in May, 1900, against $1,839 in May, 1899. British North America imported seeds to the value of $32,352 in May, 1900 against $19,755 in May, 1899. Exports of seeds to the Central American States and British Honduras amounted to $186 in May, 1900, against $1,139 in May, 1899. Mexico's imports of seeds from the United States amounted to $1,094 in May, 1900, against $302 in May, 1899.

British Australasia received from this country in May, 1900, seeds to the value of $13,782, against $4,534 in May, 1899.

European Notes.

Conditions ruling at present are, in general, not favorable to our crop prospects. In the most important district in France no rain has fallen since Whitsunday. In Germany and England there has been a plentiful supply, but growers fear that for too many things it has come too late. Vermin and disease abound, but the conditions are peculiarly favorable for their development.

New York.

The Market.

The heat has been something terrific in this city the past week, and business has been very much affected thereby, as also has the stock of flowers daily sent in. True there is not such a large quantity arriving at present, yet there is more than enough. Flowers of all kinds are coming in in very poor condition, owing to the extreme heat, and any that are not sold on the day of arrival might as well be thrown away, as they are practically worthless if kept over till the following day. Roses, of course, are in a worse condition than any of the other flowers; many seem to be half blown open when unpacked, and special blooms are not to be had, even if wanted. Very little attempt at grading is done. When sales are made it is usually by the box and low prices are the rule. Lily of the valley is in moderate supply, and the demand is only meagre; the price asked has gone away below that of one week ago, and $1 to $1.50 per 100 now rules.

With carnations and sweet peas, no change in values is noted, though the latter, in some colors, can hardly be given away, notably the pink varieties.

Gladiolus is more plentiful, and a decrease in price is the result; good spikes are to be had at $3 per 100.

Asters are also more abundant and of improved quality; from 4c. to 5c. per bunch of one dozen is being realized for them, and the pink and purple varieties are the best sellers.

Lilies of the longiflorum type are advancing in price; for real good blooms 6c. each has been received.

Dahlias, hollyhocks and coreopsis are also on the market, but the condition of business is such that no fixed values can be attached to any of this class of stock.

Smilax, asparagus and ferns are a drug, it being next to impossible to dispose of them, except in very small lots.

Among the retailers trade is quiet in general, and many employes are enjoying vacations. Alex. McConnell has been making extensive alterations in the front part of his store—enlarged windows and tiled bottoms are some of the new features.

Convention Matters.

The New York Florists' Club will meet at the usual place on Monday evening next, July 23, to perfect arrangements for the coming Convention of the S. A. F. Thanks to the efficient leadership of Mr. O'Mara, everything is running smoothly, and every member has work of some form or other allotted to him. This keeps all hands interested in the Convention, and the coming meeting of florists in this city will be one to be long remembered.

A list of hotels suitably located for the visitors will be published in the trade press in the next week's issues.

All the Club members' lady friends who wish to participate and help the Club in its efforts, by becoming members of the Ladies' Committee, are requested to communicate with W. F. Sheridan, chairman of the reception committee, as early as possible.

Jottings.

The first importation of Lilium Harrisii arrived at this port last Saturday.

S. J. Limprecht is so far recovered as to be at business again.

Frank McMahon, Seabright, N. J., leaves this week for Europe on board the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

Philadelphia florists sent a bowling team to Hoboken this week to compete in the international bowling tournament. We believe this was the only team at the tournament composed of florists.

John Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, is away on a vacation.

Myers Gottlieb will leave Saturday night to spend two weeks at the seashore.

James Coyle and Frank Sheehan have both entered the employ of W. Ghormley.

There are only seven teams entered so far in the bowling tournament to be held here in conjunction with the S. A. F. meeting. Many beautiful prizes are offered, and every club having bowlers should make an effort to send a team and notify Secretary Chas. Schenck of their intention as soon as possible. The teams already entered are Milwaukee, Buffalo, Detroit, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Flatbush and New York.

It is expected that New York will have a team at the shooting contest. Ernst G. Asmus is captain, to whom gun experts should send in their names, if inclined to join.

T. J. Lang is back from Atlantic City, where he has been rusticating some time.

J. P. Cleary, manager of the Trade Exhibit, is pushing his inquiries among the trade, and space is being taken quite satisfactorily, insuring a monster exhibit.

C. B. Weatbered, John Young and others have spared no pains on the souvenir book. The matter is now all in the publisher's hands and when issued it will be found a work of art that every recipient thereof will be proud of.

S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, was in town this week.

R. Clucas, of Clucas & Boddington, arrived Thursday from Europe on the S. S. Germanic.

(143) Packing Hardy Ferns.—To keep ferns for Winter use very little in the way of packing is required. Pick them late in the Fall, at a time when they are thoroughly dry, and lay them flat in boxes, which should not be more than 1½ feet deep. Then place the boxes in a cold, dark cellar, or in cold storage, and the ferns will keep for months.

(144) Hollyhocks.—Will pot-grown plants of Chater's double hollyhocks sell to the trade for enough more than field-grown plants to pay for the work? At what price should 2½-inch hollyhocks, of above strain, sell in the Fall? Seed was sown last of June?—C. S. D.

—Hollyhocks being of such easy culture we do not think it would pay for the extra trouble to have them pot-grown. We can hardly advise as to what price 2½-inch plants would sell for. Hitherto, hollyhocks have sold in October at from $1 to $4 per 100, but, of course, they were not pot-grown. The only way to find out would be to get a limited number ready and advertise them at a fairly profitable price; then if they are a success, they could be grown more extensively another year.

(145) Pæonies for Market.—I wish to set out ½ acre of pæonies for buds for the city market. What are the four most saleable kinds? What distance should they be set apart, and what mode of culture is necessary?—J. S. L.

—The mode of culture for pæonies does not differ from that of any other herbaceous flowering plant. The land should be well enriched with good barnyard manure, and then either dug or ploughed well under. If ploughed it will also need to be well broken up afterward with the harrow. Planting should be done in rows, and the rows need not be more than 3½ feet apart. The distance for planting in the rows depends on whether the plantation is to be permanent or not. If only intended for one season, 2 feet apart will be sufficient, but if the plants are to remain two or more years, they should be 3 feet apart. Keeping them free from weeds and giving them an annual dressing with manure is all the care they need. There are so many good varieties now on the market that it will be better to consult the catalogues of the various firms who deal in these plants. We can safely recommend P. officinalis, however, as a good, early flowering red variety.

(146) Stunted Chrysanthemum Plants.—I send you some specimens of Ivory Chrysanthemum, very stunted in growth. I have had the same experience in the same part of a solid bed for the past three years, while in the balance of the house the plants grow all right. There are numerous young millipedes running around in the soil. Do they injure the roots; or can you say what is likely to be the matter? New soil (light) was added this year to a depth of five inches, and greenhouse glass shows no defect. Neither is there any subterranean obstruction of drainage. Plants were pinched back hard ten days after planting.—GROWER.

—I think the trouble must be due to some fungoid growth in the soil, which prevented the plants from making a good root growth. If your correspondent had removed all of the soil from that particular spot, instead of only to the depth of five inches, he would possibly have got rid of the trouble. If the other plants grew well, the temperature and soil seem to have been favorable, and the trouble must be due, as I said before, to some fungoid growth or some poisonous substance in the soil. The millipedes would not hurt the roots, and if they did, they would not confine themselves to this one spot in the bed; but their work would show, to a certain extent, all over. My theory is that the plants started and made roots in the new soil, but as they began to run down into the old stuff, they encountered the old injurious substance, whatever it may take the form of, with the same result. If the bed is cleaned out even to the drainage, and filled in with new material and soil, I think it will give good results all over. If the trouble still continues, your correspondent can say with Shakespeare that there are more things in heaven and earth (particularly earth) than he wots of. A stunted growth is always caused by a correspondingly stunted root action. This is the only conclusion I can arrive at after considerable thought on the matter.—IOWA.

(147) Greenhouse Heating.—Be good enough to say what horse-power horizontal tubular boiler will be sufficient to heat to 60° in zero weather, five houses of dimensions as per diagram, all well-built, tight, and comparatively new; double boards with interlining of paper?—B. G.

—Four of the houses are built "ridge-and-furrow," and are respectively 26 ft. 6 in., 14 ft. 8 in., 21 ft. and 25 ft. 8 in., measured over the ridge from plate to plate; the other house is 22 ft. 6 in., and stands by itself. Two of the houses have about 300 square feet of glass in their south walls. All of the houses are 100 feet long. The houses have about 13,200 square feet of glass, and can be heated by a 35-horse power boiler, although it might be better to put in two of 20-horse power each. One of the small boilers would answer in mild weather, and by having the valves so that either of them can be cut off in case of accident, it will make it possible to heat the houses with the other.—L. R. T.

(148) We have nine houses, 150 by 18 feet, with the ridge eight feet above the plates. They are heated by two boilers of 40 and 80 horse-power. The mains run from the boiler to houses Nos. 2 and 3, where they connect with a main running along the ends of the houses. The mains are all 4-inch except from houses 6 to 9 where it is only 3-inch. The system does not give good satisfaction. What can be done to improve it?—SUBSCRIBER.

—Without knowing definitely regarding the amount and arrangement of the radiation, it is not possible to say just what the trouble is, although it is evident that much of the difficulty would be corrected by increasing the size of the mains. For economical heating there should be at least 5,000 feet of radiating surface, and under low-pressure two 5-inch mains would be required. However, as the 80 horse-power, alone, can easily handle this amount of radiation, it will be well to have the main pipe so arranged that it can be used to furnish the heat in all except very severe weather. A 6-inch main would answer very well, but a 7-inch would be rather more satisfactory with low pressure. The 4-inch connection with the small boiler will answer all right, except that it would be well to be able to maintain the heat with this boiler, in case anything should happen to the other. Of course, it will be out of the question to keep it up to sixty degrees in severe weather, but if there is a 6-inch connection, the small boiler would be able to prevent the loss of the plants. The main pipe across the ends of the houses should be six-inch at houses 2, 3 and 4; five-inch at houses 5 and 6; four-inch to house 7; three and one-half inch to house 8; and two and one-half to houses 1 and 9.—L. R. T.

The committee of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, having in charge its exhibitions, met at Field's Point last week and considered plans for the Fall exhibition. After a full discussion of the outlook, and in view of the abandonment of the State fair, the committee unanimously decided to hold a three days' exhibition in September, and the usual chrysanthemum and fruit exhibition in November. The premium list will be out in a few days, and can then be had at the Secretary's office.

St. Paul.

Midsummer dullness is upon us, and the tide of trade is at low ebb. Still with funeral work, weddings, etc., and an occasional club dinner, there is some demand for florists' products and skill in decorating. Spring trade was one of the best on record, with a good demand and good prices for good stock. All bedding plants sold well, but geraniums were most in demand. With the improvement in varieties of these old-time favorites comes an increased call for them, and they will undoubtedly continue to be the most popular bedding plants for many years to come. Cannas also are growing rapidly in favor, and there are fully five times as many planted here as there were five years ago.

Renovating, repairing, rebuilding and replanting are the order of the day with the progressive growers. Roses are being planted, chrysanthemums are nearly all in, and preparations for housing carnations and violets are going forward. In my rounds I find Bride, Bridesmaid, Beauty and Meteor the leaders in roses, with some Perle, Sunset and Wootton. In the new varieties, Lady Dorothea and Liberty are being put out, as well as quite a few Golden Gate, which is gaining in favor with those who have grown it.

Our severe drought was broken July 2nd, since which time copious showers have relieved the parched condition, and all vegetation has taken on new life.

Jottings.

L. L. May & Co. are putting in solid beds in two of their houses—the first of the kind they have ever constructed.

R. C. Seeger is pushing work on his new range, which will soon be completed, and which will give him a glass area of between 20,000 and 25,000 square feet, all to be devoted to growing cut flowers.

The Warrendale Floral Co. are erecting one small house.

The Twin City Florists' picniced at Lake Park, on Lake Minnetonka, Friday, July 20. An enjoyable program was provided, including races, ball playing, etc., etc.

Gust. Monson, who was foreman for C. A. Smith Floral Co., Minneapolis, for several years, is erecting a range of houses near Lake Calhoun in that city.

L. Anderson, rose grower for L. L. May & Co., is now foreman for the C. A. Smith Floral Co. L. L. May & Co., had quite a unique and elaborate decoration recently for the Town and Country Club. The decoration consisted of a reproduction in miniature of the golf links of the club. It was planned and executed under the supervision of Carl Johnson.

J. Austin Shaw, was a recent visitor, representing Jackson & Perkins Co., of Newark, N. Y. Judging from his order book, his trip here must have been a very profitable one.

A recent call on Frank Berry, of Stillwater, found his houses in the best of condition after a very profitable Spring trade. He grows a general line of bedding plants and cut flowers, disposing of his products at home at retail. His Jubilee carnations and chrysanthemums are among the very best grown in this section. He has two ranges of houses, both kept in the best possible condition.

P. Holm has returned from rusticating in the country.

E. Nagel, of Minneapolis, is building an addition to his residence—another evidence of prosperity. VERITAS.

Toronto.

Business during the week has been of the Summer variety, with but little to cheer it up.

The 12th of July created some demand for rough flowers; and in the early part of the week considerable funeral work was done, but general business has been very flat.

Trade on Saturday afternoons is now very poor, and some of the boys down town would like to close their stores at 2 o'clock, but they are not all agreed on the matter; so while nearly every other business takes a half-holiday, the florists keep open with the ice cream and candy men. Those attending the St. Lawrence Market now generally leave for home by three o'clock, thereby showing the other fellows a good example.

The death of Harry Dale, following so close on that of Robert Murray, has made all those who knew them well feel very sad. T. M.

Buffalo or Bust.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

In looking over the EXCHANGE of the 14th, I find a few words from the racy Rawson of Elmira about the Convention for 1901. What he says is about correct—that the Buffalo show will be a great attraction, and many folk who, if they cannot go to the Convention and the Buffalo Exposition, will go to Buffalo and leave out the S. A. F. Convention. It worked that way in St. Louis, and history will repeat itself again; if we go West in 1901, let us go West; that is, either to St. Paul or Tacoma. The weather will be comfortable, and not like that experienced in Omaha—so fearful hot, and where even the water was not wet enough to quench thirst. The West is beyond Chicago, while Buffalo is as level as Chicago; she also has the cool Lake breezes, and display of decoration, if Scott lives, will be worth studying, and the folks know it. When it comes to the time to be going, and time and money are to be disposed of, the most of us will say, "I can't go to both places; guess we will take in Buffalo this year," and in attendance Chicago will be behind. Such is the deduction, and all good Chicagoans will want to see Buffalo and Brother Scott at his best.

Sweet Peas in America.

Extracts from Paper read by Rev. W. T. Hutchins, of Indian Orchard, Mass., on Occasion of Sweet Pea Bicentenary Celebration, at London, July 20-21.

It would be about the same thing if my subject were, "A Decade of Sweet Peas," for this flower hardly attracted attention in America till this last decade of the century came in. And to tell of the wave of interest that has swept over the land since this flower was regenerated would put your credence to a sore test. Of course the old-fashioned "Painted Lady" sweet peas is still remembered in old gardens, and as many as a dozen sorts were found in the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's exhibitions twenty years and more ago. My soul was kindled at that time by a magnificent row grown by a well-known Boston man, at one time Mayor of Newton. Twelve years ago I had begun to get together a collection of varieties, and when I had nineteen distinct sorts the fact was worth publishing. About that time I began to notice Mr. Eckford's name in Farquhar's catalogue, and in a sort of timid foot-note, and about the most modest thing I ever saw in a seedman's catalogue, they intimated that they could supply, but did not feel warranted in recommending, the latest sealed packets of the Eckford introductions. The sensations I felt in those days as I succeeded, one by one, in getting the named sorts into bloom, are still vivid. In those days Scarlet Invincible and Butterfly and Adonis, and Crown Princess of Prussia and Princess Beatrice were treasures indeed. The first vision I had of Mr. Eckford's work was in Boreatton, and Splendor, and then came Orange Prince and Countess of Radnor. I exhibited the first that had been seen in Boston of these last colors. There was no longer any skepticism in my mind about Mr. Eckford's achievement. I do not believe any flower yields more jealously to the hybridizer's art than the sweet pea. It was wonderful that Mr. Eckford got such colors, even after years of effort. And then we began to see his work in the hooded and grandiflora form that now characterizes nearly all the novelties.

The Eckford sets of 1892 and 1893 set the United States ablaze on sweet peas. California was just in time to prove that sweet pea seed could be grown in America, and to meet the enormous demand the seed houses jumped from a few pounds of stock to tons. A small florist would sell a hundred pounds, an ordinary seedsman two or three tons, and one jobber has had twenty-five tons in stock in a season. Ten years ago a Boston seedsman declared to me that sweet pea seed could not be grown in America. Within four years of that time I visited California at the growers' invitations, and inspected the sweet pea fields of four growers, altogether not more than 350 acres. Sixty varieties were represented at that time, and vogued carefully to name and type.

Now the subject of sweet peas in America covers a wide range of data in the matter of climate and local conditions for their successful culture. We have every possible kind of soil, every degree of altitude, a wide variance of season. Sweet peas are grown in every State of the Union. They are planted all the way along from November to June, from the semi-tropical belt of Gulf States to the Canadian latitude. For 3,000 miles, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, almost every garden has in the last decade had its row of sweet peas. And even when people have had ill luck in trying to grow them, they still try and try again, for of all flowers they think they must have sweet peas. The American seed trade handles somewhere from 125 to 150 tons of seed of this one flower. I suppose that at this moment there are as many sweet peas in bloom in America as at any time during the last decade. We have such a diversified territory that there are always localities where people are making a fine showing on this flower, and plenty of new localities where the interest in them is in its first flush. Previous to this last decade they would grow as thriftily as weeds in our gardens, but since they have been so highly developed they demand virgin soil or something approximate thereto. We do not get so strong a fibrous root as we used to, and hence our season of bloom is a good deal shortened. But every year shows the market full of them, and for July and August they are our leading flower.

It has taken rank as an exhibition flower. In several cities our sweet pea shows have for some time been an annual event. We are still competing for an Eckford cup at Springfield, Mass. The cup was taken last year by a gentleman who sent his flowers 300 miles from Western New York. He sent magnificent bunches of the complete set of Eckford's latest introductions, and, as nearly as I could figure, it cost him about $10 per bunch to grow and transport and table them at our show. But the whole town where he lived celebrated the event of his winning the cup, for the whole town has had a sweet pea craze for three years. That is Cohocton, N. Y. It is a sample of a locality where this flower does splendidly, and where a local interest is kindled to a high pitch.

But let me say, you who know only the moderate range of temperature which you have here in England, with its abundant moisture, cannot realize what our gardens have to contend with in America. Our summer's work is often spoiled in a single day by a scalding sultriness, with the sun close on to 100 degrees in the shade. These extremes of temperature, often accompanied by drought, not only burn the finer shadings out of our blooms, but put a ruinous strain on the less thrifty root, which we now get. So exhaustingly does evaporation go on in our midsummer days that only by heroic fortitude can we follow up the battle, year after year. It is a joy to come over here, where your climate smiles upon the delicate shadings of Mr. Eckford's beautiful seedlings, but with us only the stronger colors hold. We have to translate your descriptions into a much narrower vocabulary of colors and markings. Still our enthusiasm for ten years has, I think, led the world on this flower. It is not to be expected that we can Americanize the results of Mr. Eckford's work in ten years. I look upon Mr. Eckford's work as a permanent legacy. As a rule, a new color once made on the sweet pea is forever a fast color. Even if we have temporary setbacks in America, we shall again and again revive this splendid annual in more and more acclimated form.

And now I take it, your committee desires me to speak of that very important branch of my subject, the growing of American sweet pea seed. It is not all grown in California, but the great bulk of it is. I believe there are but three main points in the production of good seed. First, conditions that will produce a strong, well-nourished plant and bring it steadily to full maturity. Second, conditions that will, at the best stage of the plant's strong growth, throw out promptly and ripen uniformly, just as much of a seed product as the plant can, at one normal effort, carry out. Third, conditions insuring good sunshine for uniformly ripening and harvesting the product. Now the seed ranches of California are located where the most wonderful virgin soil is found in abundance. It is of inexhaustible depth. Some of it is a heavy adobe soil, but in other places it graduates off into a quality that pulverizes well. It is a wonderfully rich deposit, often of great depth. The California year is pretty evenly divided between six months wet and six months that are rainless. But when the rains begin in the fall they begin to plant. The southern part of the State is semi-tropical, and north of that the winters are sufficiently mild, so that the sweet peas go on making root all winter. As far as possible they get their stocks in to catch these fall rains. Much of it comes into bloom in April, and May is a grand month to visit these immense seed ranches. I have seen thirty acres of one variety in bloom, but when you come to compare that with one block of onion seed a mile square, dimensions become dwarfed. I am sure that California soil makes a strong seed-producing plant. And the work done on sweet peas by these California growers is not only intelligent and conscientious, but enthusiastic. And their harvesting conditions would make English seedsmen hilarious. I am here to tell the simple truth. No storms ever beat their crops down, and just at the right stage they pull up those vines loaded with pods, and lay them upon great sheets in the sun, and that seed doesn't see a warehouse till it reaches the Eastern jobber.

If I am to be honest to-day, I ought to say that three things will occur to any observing man who visits the California growers and carefully examines their conditions and products. You are entitled to ask whether the method of planting in November and harvesting in July has a tendency to change the habits of the vine, whether a seed matured two months later would carry the vines in our gardens through midsummer better. I do not know. Then there is the question of whether seed produced under very stimulating conditions will hold up under the trying conditions which the amateur grower has in many localities. And then seed ripened under such a sunny sky sometimes makes a hard-baked shell that is tardy about swelling in the moist spring ground. But which would you rather do, harvest in rains or in a sure sunshine? Sum up the pro and con of California conditions. The conditions there are like everything else Californian. You can travel 900 miles in a straight line without crossing the boundaries of that State, and the Creator gave them conditions for seed-growing on the same grand scale, and I do not know where else the present enormous demand can be met. And I have not been able to find any seed that is better. The trouble is likely to be in other localities that vines will not mature so strong a product uniformly. I do not think you can pick pods from a growing vine and get as good a result as from seed that has matured uniformly and taken the whole strength of the plant at one time.

I was fearful once that Mr. Eckford's novelties would deteriorate under these wholesale conditions of growing seed, but I think the Eckford blood is improved by being transplanted to California, and it is the common opinion on our side that the American-grown seed is holding up the Eckford quality very well. But I do hope that specialists in this flower will multiply, for we need from various parts of the world that painstaking work that will do for this flower what is done for other flowers, to hold them up to the highest type.

Perhaps I ought to say a word about American novelties. I think our claim to American novelties is legitimate, and yet, of course, we owe it to Mr. Eckford that he has made it easy for us to get them. Where a grower has from 200 to 250 acres of this flower in bloom, and most of it has come from the Eckford stock, of course his eye is always out for any precious rogue that may appear. And he frequently finds them, and carefully saves every seed from such a plant. The Eckford sealed packets are likely to break at any time into the most remarkable seedlings. The California growers have in reserve, with quite an accumulation of stock, many beautiful things. I do not know how you can stop them. And then, too, if you now cross two of Mr. Eckford's fine sorts you get the result of that hybridized blood that breaks in all directions. The California growers have done some of this crossing successfully, but they do not need to do much, for the list is already overloaded. I know this, that they very sincerely want Mr. Eckford to hold the lead. We feel almost a sacred dependence on him. We should count it a calamity to have any other name but his hold the pre-eminent place.

Gentlemen, there is one debt that has troubled my conscience for three years. It was an event in my life when I formed the acquaintance of S. B. Dicks, of London; and after that I looked forward to his annual coming with eager anticipation. He was a walking encyclopedia. If I could only have him to fire questions at for five minutes I was happy for a year. You could not rely upon what the catalogues said about sweet peas, but I became an authority after Mr. Dicks answered my questions. It was largely by his help that I was able to go to California in 1894 and set the growers right in their names and types of the sixty varieties then known. One day, about four years ago, I met him and he said he was going to add something to the literature of the sweet pea. From that day to this no opportunity has offered itself to worthily tell him of the personal debt I felt toward him for that chapter on the history of this flower. If I were to name the salient points that should form the corona of this celebration, that historical chapter by Mr. Dicks would be one, and worthy to be put beside the splendid work of Mr. Eckford. His article, with valuable illustrations, appeared in the New York Florist Exchange and American Gardening in 1897. You have surely added luster to this occasion by giving him again the history of this flower.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CYTISUS AND ACACIAS that were potted and placed outdoors must have regular attention with regard to watering, etc. After heavy growth has commenced, the plants will need to be trimmed in occasionally to keep them in proper shape; especially is this the case with the cytisus or, as most people call it, genista.

BULBS.—As the first consignments of bulbs—Harrisii lilies and Roman hyacinths arrive—get them into the soil without delay. Hyacinths do not cut much of a figure as cut flowers until winter has set in, therefore, there is no need to hurry them at all. Put the bulbs in flats, using any ordinary soil that is free from fresh manure. Put the flats outdoors, and after watering them thoroughly, cover with three or four inches of soil, and leave them there until they are wanted in the fall. The Harrisii bulbs can be forced into flower early if necessary, and, when brought in during November and December, they usually command a profitable price, either at wholesale or retail. Pot the bulbs when they arrive, using a good, rich soil; but the manure incorporated in the soil must be old and well rotted. After they are potted, they can either be put out of doors or under the benches in a greenhouse. In either case, they will need to have a light covering of straw or hay, which will keep them from drying out too rapidly, and also hold back the top growth until the roots have got well started. When the shoots begin to push through the covering, it will be necessary to place the plants on the bench in the greenhouse, where they will come along gradually; or, they can be forced at will by raising the temperature of the house in which they are growing.

MIGNONETTE.—This is the time to prepare for next winter's supply of mignonette, if the best results are to be had. Prepare a solid bed of well enriched soil, and, if it is inclined to be rather heavy or stiff, so much the better. When the bed is ready and made moderately firm, put a few seeds in at each place where it is intended the plants shall grow—15 inches apart each way is about the right distance. When the seedlings are large enough so that the strongest can be easily distinguished from the weaker ones, they should be then thinned out, leaving one plant only at each place. There is one other important feature about growing good mignonette, and that is, having good seed, and of a good variety; and to give the best satisfaction all round, it is better to get the seed from some specialist, who keeps his strain pure, and by constant selection and in-door cultivation improves it with each succeeding year.

FERNS.—There will be a big demand for small ferns suitable for pans and ferneries the coming winter, and we cannot do better than be preparing our stock now. Seedlings of many of the popular varieties can be purchased from those who make a business of fern growing, and there is no better way than buying them in the seedling stage and growing them on.

Such young stock can be planted in shallow boxes, where they will do better than if potted up right away, and, as they become crowded in the flats, it will be time enough to put them in 2 1-2 inch pots and they are then ready for any purpose required of them.

Cincinnati.

Market News.

We have nothing special to report regarding business. The usual summer dullness is with us, and vacations are now in order.

Thursday, July 12, the craft assembled at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Adrian in Clifton, for the purpose of holding the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society. Nineteen members were present. We also were favored with quite a goodly number of ladies, which always gives tone to any assembly. The meeting was called to order by President Murphy. Mr. Frank Ball, chairman of Committee on Annual Outing, reported progress, and said that everything was in readiness. A good time is assured to all who go. The date of this outing is Wednesday, July 25, at Mt. Lookout Park. Everybody is invited.

Mr. Brownstine, who represented the Fall Festival Association, was present for the purpose of inducing the florists to put a float into the trades' parade. The florists decided to comply with the request. There is a prize of $1,000 offered for the best float, and there is no reason why the florists should not win this premium. The size of the float is twenty-four feet long by eight feet wide. A committee was appointed, consisting of F. Brownstine, J. A. Peterson, Ben George, R. Witterstaetter and E. G. Gillett, to solicit subscriptions for the purpose of building the float. E. G. Gillett was appointed a committee of one to attend a meeting of the Fall Festival Committee and procure all needed information. This has been attended to. Visitor present, Charles W. Crouch of Knoxville, Tenn.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Adrian for their kindness in entertaining the Society. After the meeting adjourned a sumptuous dinner was served and very much enjoyed. John Lodder of Hamilton, was also present, and invited the Society to hold one of its summer meetings at his home. The invitation was accepted, and we will go to Mr. Lodder's residence August 2. All who will attend this meeting must be at College Hill at 12:30 p. m., where a special car will be in waiting.

The next regular meeting will be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, August 9, at 2:30 p. m. The September meeting will be held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. Schuman, Newport, Ky., Thursday, September 6, which will end our summer meetings.

William M. Goodlow, of Paris, Ky., and S. S. Skidelsky were callers during the week.

A trip to some of the carnation growers shows that a good soaking rain is much needed, although the plants are looking very well. Ethel Crocker and America are taking the lead as growers. William Murphy's fields are well cultivated, and all the plants are in good shape.

Richard Witterstaetter is building another fine greenhouse.

Four or five will probably attend the New York meeting from this locality.

E. G. GILLETT.

Horticultural Exhibition at New York.

The Exhibition Committee of the New York Florists' Club, at a recent meeting, decided that the various medals and certificates and other awards to be made in connection with the Horticultural Exhibition, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, at the same date as the meeting of the S. A. F. O. H., have the following values attached to them in a scale of points to decide the winners of the two One Hundred Dollar cash prizes to be awarded at the said exhibition:

N. Y. Florists' Club Gold Medal	100 points.
Society of American Florists' Silver Medal	30 "
N. Y. Florists' Club Silver Medal	25 "
Society of American Florists' Bronze Medal	15 "
N. Y. Florists' Club Bronze Medal	12 "
Society of American Florists' Certificate	9 "
N. Y. Florists' Club Certificate	6 "
N. Y. Florists' Club Honorable Mention	3 "

The New York Florists' Club is preparing a rousing welcome to S. A. F. delegates. The New York Florists' Club is very thorough when it gets down to work, and it's working hard now.

Chicago.

State of Trade.

There is not much change to report in either the condition of stock or the demand. Rains in this vicinity are still very seasonable, and, except in low ground, everything growing out-of-doors is in grand condition. In roses, as the new planted Beauty come in, the quality gets better. Bride and Bridesmaids as usual are the poorest, Kaiserin and Meteor being in best condition. Sweet peas are still plentiful; choice varieties with long stems, and well put up, bring 15c. per bunch; the bulk of the stock goes at 5c. to 10c. per 100. Gladioli are now sent in in large quantities.

With the retail men, funeral work is the best item; there is no let-up in flowers used for the bier in this city. The cheapness and abundance of sweet peas, certainly increase the quantity used to adorn the person, out on the streets.

Jottings.

Nick Wietor has just returned from a fishing trip. He and the foreman, Mr. Collins, will be with the Chicago contingent for the S. A. F. at New York in August.

Wieland & Reisch have begun building a grand new addition to their plant at South Evanston; it will cover 48,000 to 50,000 square feet of land.

Bassett & Washburn have commenced housing their carnations. This firm has also, well on the way, three more immense carnation houses, all detached and built in their usual perfect style.

The George Wittbold Co. is working up a fine stock of the new fern, Nephrolepis Wittboldii. It will be a great acquisition, and give the Boston fern a hard race.

The Chicago Contingent.

It is always problematical, until the last moment, to say exactly how many and who will take in a convention, but it is now an assured fact that Chicago will have a strong team of bowlers, with half a dozen spares in case of accident, all known to be good on the alley. As my list already has 44 names, including a dozen ladies, to say nothing of those yet to be heard from; there is the promise of the biggest turn-out that ever left this city on a similar errand. With those from west and north of us that the committees are struggling to get to join the party, I for one will be disappointed with less than half a hundred, in the contingent from this city.

The Chicago Florists' Club's committee, Messrs. Grant, Rudd and Kreitling, report to me to-day they have as yet been unable to secure a satisfactory concession, but are still at work, and hope to report definitely very shortly.

Round About.

W. N. Rudd will have all his carnations benched by the 1st of August; he began the work July 15, giving the plants a short course in open ground.

John Brod, whose greenhouses are at Niles Center, has brought out and will run as a retail florist's place the establishment of E. Kitzinger, 867 Milwaukee avenue.

Miss Lizzie Joho, is now bookkeeper for E. C. Amling. She was for a long time with T. J. Corbrey, McKellar & Winterson and others in a similar capacity, hence is familiar with the wholesale florists' business.

In my notes last week the types make me say Alex Neuberson, when it should have been Alex. Henderson, who has joined the benedicts. Ess.

Springfield, Mass.

The Hampden County Horticultural Society's sweet pea show comes on the 24th. It will be for one day only this year. The most attractive offer is the Eckford Silver Cup. Sweet peas generally are looking well, and it is hoped that the display will equal that of former years.

The florists' stores close Wednesday afternoons at one o'clock, during the Summer months, a move in the right direction. W. F. G.

Chicago to New York.

The Chicago Florists' Club's Committee on Transportation has arranged with the Lake Shore and Michigan railroad for a special train to leave Chicago the afternoon of Sunday, August 19. Niagara Falls will be reached early Monday morning, and the train will lay there several hours, then proceeding to New York, arriving at the Grand Central Station in the evening.

Those desiring to do so may return to Albany by boat up the Hudson River, thence by rail, and all will be entitled to a ten-day stop-over at Buffalo, and if desired may travel by boat from Buffalo to Cleveland, Toledo, or Put-in-Bay.

Going down a dining car will be attached to the train clear through. The round trip tickets will be $26.70, and will be good to return four days after the adjournment of the Convention.

S. A. F. Convention.

Elsewhere in this issue we publish the preliminary program for the New York Convention of the S. A. F. As will be seen, the program is a most interesting and varied one, comparing very favorably with its predecessors. It has been arranged that the whole of the business connected with the Convention proper be concluded by Thursday forenoon, August 23, leaving the afternoon of that day for the trip to Glen Island, and the whole of Friday for the bowling tournament and sight-seeing in the city to those so inclined. Two lectures, illustrated by stereopticon views, are to be provided, one on Tuesday evening, August 21, on "Floral Decorations," by Robert Kift, of Philadelphia; the other, Wednesday evening, on "The New York Botanical Garden," by Dr. Britton, the director. Both of the lectures should, and no doubt will, prove extremely interesting. We are pleased to see this recognition accorded the retail branch of the profession, and trust it may be the means of awakening among the retail trade an interest in the Society's work, with a consequent increase in membership from that quarter.

A proposed amendment to drop the latest addition to the Society's title, "and Ornamental Horticulturists," will probably be creative of some discussion. We never at any time could see the advantage of the appendage in question; the Society's constitution being all-embracing for the purposes that the addition was intended to serve. Our good friends, the professional and amateur gardeners, need offer no objection to the removal of the augmentation which was supposedly made on their behalf, neither should they feel slighted by the proposed action to sever it from the Society's title. Always ridiculous, it should never have found a place there. It is not so much the name of a society that is a guage of its usefulness as the work it performs, and the value of that work to particular individuals, and it would, indeed, be a hard matter to dissociate the professional or amateur gardener from those participating in the good resulting from the labors of the S. A. F., to join the ranks of which every one of the latter has at all times been eligible. The motion to amend the constitution, as herein mentioned, will be made by ex-president Rudd, who has previously advocated the lopping off of "the excrescence," and a return of the Society "to its knitting."

Meetings of the Florists' Hail Association, the American Carnation Society, and the Chrysanthemum Society of America, will also be held during the Convention, on the days specified in the program.

A new feature in connection with the trade exhibit is the offering of a valuable cup by F. Sander & Co., St. Albans, Eng., "for the most creditable exhibit in the trade exhibition department. The special committee of judges for this class will be selected from the ex-presidents of the S. A. F. who may be present at the convention. The exhibit which shows the greatest enterprise in its contents and its arrangement, and is calculated to attract, in the opinion of the judges, the greatest amount of attention from trade visitors, will be entitled to the cup. All classes of trade exhibits are eligible for competition." It will be, we think, a somewhat difficult task for these judges to divine the predilection of visitors as to the exhibit that is calculated to attract the greatest amount of attention from such visitors. The visitors themselves could better decide that by a plebiscite, taken, say, at the close of the second day. To tell, also, the exhibit which "shows the greatest enterprise in its contents and its arrangement" would likewise appear a very hard problem. It appears to us these stipulations are too obscure, and need more or less overhauling to lead to a proper conception of them, and a consequent intelligent awarding of the prize.

With the array of good things, both intellectual and physical, provided for the delegates, there should be, as Secretary Stewart aptly puts it, "an unprecedented crowd" present to participate therein. Such exceptional opportunities in everything attendant upon a convention are not likely soon to occur again in the history of the S. A. F.—at least not until its next visit to the Empire City—and he who misses them will stand greatly in his own light. From President O'Mara down, every member of the New York Florists' Club has labored hard to make this convention the "greatest yet" in the true meaning of the word, and the appreciation of these labors will surely be seen in the presence in New York next August of every progressive florist in America who can possibly spare the time, even if he can ill afford to do it.

Don't let a consideration of such weighty subjects as whether or not an exposition city is a good meeting place for the society deter you from coming to the city that is one "continual exposition." Problems like the foregoing easily adjust themselves under the pressure of the combined wisdom of those having the Society's best interests at heart.

Finally, be assured New York is preparing to give you cead mille failthe.

Why Not Have a Great Flower Market?

No one who has visited foreign cities, notably Paris, has forgotten the gorgeous flowers and plants displayed there in profusion in the market—the wealth of specimens from which to choose and the armful of blossoms to be brought away for little more than half the money expended in the costly florists' shops.

The shops are all very well in their way; they serve a useful purpose, and if expensive, they are nevertheless of great convenience to lovers of rare and beautiful flowers, who don't mind the added tax on their purses. But what New York should have from early Spring until late Autumn is at least one great centrally located market, where the little fellows, the small growers, as well as the more important florists, could make a great display of the products of hot house or open air beds from April till November.

What a glorious sight it would be, what a feast to the eye, what a place for the gathering of thousands who would come to see the daily show and be easily induced to carry away something sweet and fragrant! What a lovely feature it would be in this city of granite and bricks and mortar—a market filled daily with thousands of blossoms!

The florists themselves have urged something of this sort—a purely commercial market—but if the idea is carried out, let it be enlarged and well located, to be not only useful to trade, but a delight to New Yorkers generally.—New York Herald.

[This support on the part of the Herald is encouraging. Those interested should endeavor to keep up the agitation—and work hard—and sooner or later a plant and flower market in the first city of the union will be an established fact. But it, of course, will be an all-the-year-around mart.

June Show of American Rose Society.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Judging from the remarks published in your columns in relation to the American Rose Society's show, it is a fair inference that you either have a grievance or you are being put into the position of pulling some one's chestnuts out of the fire. Covert innuendo may set people wondering what on earth you are getting at (and I will allow that a certain amount of mystery may give no end of amusement), yet it does not really help to a solution of any problem which may exist.

Referring to your report on page 602, of course we cannot help your "understanding" or misunderstanding, as the case may be. As to the purpose of the June show, Sect. 2, Art. 1, of the By-Laws very plainly sets forth what that is. The Rose Society does not set out to "encourage" the trade grower during one part of the year, and the amateur at another time. Our organization works not for this or that class of grower, but for the rose; it does not say "Floreat vendor rosie," but "Floreat regina florum."

As to "lack of interest," you are surely misled. It is a matter of common knowledge that the absence of exhibits was due to the unusual lateness of the season, and it is only fair to state that I was the recipient of not one only, but of very many letters of sincere regret at the writers' inability to show, and my executive committee has the full knowledge that had our date been, say, a week or ten days later, history would have been very different.

As to the holding open of the entry books up to the morning of the show, I fail to see how 24 hours could effect such a marvelous revolution as the writer of the report imagines. Moreover, you should know that staging has to be prepared and other preliminary work done—entry cards must be written, for instance. The question is largely "one of work vs. time." It is easy to stand off and criticise; it would be better evidence of good will if your representative would step in and help in the clerical work that devolves upon the show management, so as to become acquainted with the details. He would then be better qualified to give advice. I defy anyone to satisfactorily handle the entries of a decent size show in the space of an hour or so on the day of the opening.

Will it be news to learn that at our March show several of us sat up all the night previous to the show, and even then hardly caught up with the work? If the press would lend its aid toward encouraging early entries—system as against dilatoriness and a happy-go-lucky method at shows—I fancy the final result would be more satisfactory all round. Competing exhibits could have their space allotted and labeled, an exhibitor would see at once where he had to stage his entry, and instead of the interminable bustle so frequently seen today, the staging of a show would work evenly and quickly to a punctual opening—and wouldn't that jar you?

LEONARD BARRON,
Secy. American Rose Society.

—The first paragraph of our esteemed correspondent's communication we can afford to pass over unnoticed.

We do not think our "understanding" of the object of the June show of the American Rose Society was so wide of the mark as the secretary's statement, even with its classical embellishment, would have one believe. The article of the By-Laws he cites states that "another show will be held later, in order to recognize the rose as a garden flower." And our "understanding," as reflected in our remarks complained of, is to the effect that the June show "is gotten up chiefly to interest private gardeners and amateurs." The fact of the major portion of the classes being open to all, does not in any way impair the status of the private gardener or amateur as an exhibitor in these classes, nor does it rob him of any opportunity to exhibit. We think the results of the show in question demonstrated that the interests of the private gardener and amateur were of greatest concern to the society in connection with the June exhibition, as was proven by the society's envoy being sent to drum up exhibits from that quarter. But, aside from that, the discussions of the society anent the June show, all point to catering then to the interest of "the private gardener and amateur," because that interest is most representative of "the rose as a garden flower."

And, too, we would quote for our correspondent's edification the following from a Prospectus issued by the Rose Society regarding what the Society "sets out to do," and has said (this is in plain English fortunately,) in reference to exhibitions, as "encouraging" certain classes of rose growers: "It has been decided to hold two shows in New York City in the Spring of 1901. The first during the fourth week of Lent; this will be principally a show for the commercial and private gardener classes. The second show will be held in June, and its principal feature will be exhibits, by the amateur classes, of outdoor grown roses." (The italics are ours.)

Now, as to holding open the entry books: For a Summer show, where conditions surrounding the obtaining of exhibition blooms are so largely beyond the control of the intending exhibitor, the latest moment possible should, we think, be granted him to make his entry. Even 24 hours, in that case, might make a "marvelous revolution" in the number of exhibits securable, as well as in the efforts of the secretary to get through the clerical work consequent thereon. Assistance is always obtainable, for a consideration, if those intrusted with this work do not feel equal to the task.

We can also pass over lightly the puerile remarks of our esteemed correspondent as to "criticism," and our representative stepping in and helping in the clerical work, etc. We don't retain his services for that purpose; neither do we think his doing so would add to his qualifications to offer suggestions or advice even to the American Rose Society.

We have no doubt that in connection with the March exhibition several "sat up all night previous to the show, and even then hardly caught up with the work." The question of getting through with the work, or not getting through with it, is largely a matter of capacity, as possessed by the individual worker or workers. The Rose Society should not, we think, impose on its secretary any more than he can perform. Give him a manager of exhibition, who will attend to the details of staging, etc., and as many assistants as he cares to ask for in order to expedite the making out of entry cards, and other work of that nature, to save this burden of laboring "all the night previous in order to catch up with the work." He has one consolation, however, in connection with the June show, and that is, that there was no all-night sitting necessary to put through the details of the four entries which represented the sum total of the interest exhibited by those who were "unable to exhibit," as well as others, on the morning of the first day of the show.

BOOKS RECEIVED.

PLANT CULTURE, by George W. Oliver, propagator to the United States Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C. A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Company Limited, publishers, New York. 12 mo., 193 pp. Price $1.00, post-paid. The title of this work informs us that it is a "working handbook of everyday practice for all who grow flowering and ornamental plants in the garden and greenhouse;" and a perusal of its pages convinces us that the author's claims have been fully borne out, for as a practical handbook the work stands in the forefront of modern horticultural publications.

The author has divided his subject into eleven chapters, viz: Stone and Greenhouse Plants, Bedding Plants, Vase and Basket Plants, Vines, Bulbous Plants, Ornamental Grasses, Aquatics, Ferns and Lycopods, Hardy Perennials, Hardy Shrubs and General Directions. Under the last named chapter are given explicit instructions for the performance of such branches as propagating, seed growing, grafting, budding, layering, hybridization, potting, soils, mulching and watering.

Each subject is arranged alphabetically and is dealt with in such a manner as only a practical and experienced man can handle it, being easily comprehended by every one interested. The old saw that "books on plants are only fit for those that do not need them," cannot be applied to Plant Culture, for from the first to the last page, it contains good, sound talk about the plants that are in common cultivation on this continent, others that should be and how to grow them most successfully. That the author's aim has been to give clear, brief and concise cultural directions with the descriptions and usefulness of the subjects treated upon, is evident in every line.

To the commercial man the articles on palms, ferns, carnations, roses and violets will be of especial interest; while the amateur and private gardener will find on every page such condensed information relative to plants and their treatment as has never before been offered at any price.

The book contains no useless verbiage, neither are its teachings obscured by superfluous technicalities. The shortest road to the goal sought, viz., pertinent, practical instruction—has been traveled and made easy for those who would follow therein.

The caliber of Mr. Oliver's writings is already familiar to all our readers and need not be elaborated upon here. His capabilities, both as a botanist and a practical gardener and florist, have been testified to by his numerous successes in competitions and otherwise. His instructions, therefore, have an additional value not possessed by those emanating from less reliable sources, often costing many times the price of the present work to secure them. A good feature in connection with the book is the very complete general index and cross-references provided. The binding is made to stand the handling that a book of this nature is likely to be subjected to. In short, the book is evidently meant for use, and not for ornament. We have pleasure in recommending it as the most practical and comprehensive work of its kind that has come to our desk.

OBITUARY.

Harry Dale.

Harry Dale, the Canadian rose grower, passed away at his home in Brampton, Ont., Sunday, July 15, after a brief illness. By the death of Mr. Dale Canada loses one of its most progressive and able florists. A sketch of his career appeared in our columns on October 29, 1898.

He was born in the town of Dorking, Surrey, England, in 1851. His father and grandfather were market gardeners. The former came to Canada in 1863 and settled in Brampton, where he followed the business of market gardener and florist. Harry went in with his father about 1870, and they ran a successful business until 1881, when the young man started on his own account—still as a market gardener, but growing also a few roses, mostly climbing varieties, under glass. He built his first rose house of any account in 1887. This structure was 200x20 feet, and at the time it was built it was thought to be a very large one. Out of this house Mr. Dale sent into Toronto some extra fine roses—Perle, Sunset, Niphetos, Safrano, Duchesse de Brabant, etc. Additions have been made to the plant almost yearly, until now the houses embrace 200,000 square feet of glass.

Few men were better known in the trade than Harry Dale, and his fame as a rosarian years ago ceased to be confined to his own immediate locality, being recognized over a large portion of America, wherever the products of his skill were presented. Thoroughly up-to-date in every particular which goes to mark the successful florist, he never lost the opportunity of introducing every factor tending to the betterment of his material welfare, and he had built up an establishment, the largest of its kind in the Dominion, which to-day stands as a monument to his persevering and indomitable spirit. By nature a quiet and unassuming man, his was a most lovable disposition, and he shared the good will and respect of every member of the craft who had the pleasure of his acquaintanee. He took a deep interest in everything that made for the promotion and development of the industry in which he was engaged, and was ever ready to lend a helping hand, whenever occasion demanded, toward that end. Mr. Dale was for some years a member of the S. A. F. O. H., the American Carnation Society, a life member of the American Rose Society, and an earnest worker in local clubs and associations. He leaves five children four daughters, and one son about 16 years of age to mourn his loss, to whom the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, in common with the trade in the United States and Canada, tenders its sincere sympathy in their sad bereavement.

One of his brothers, Edward Dale, will manage the business.

The funeral took place, to Brampton Cemetery, on Tuesday the 17th. A great many of the florists of Ontario attended. The house was filled with beautiful flowers, sent by friends in Buffalo, Montreal, Ottawa, London, Toronto and other places. A short service was held in the house, and another at the grave, and the splendid workman was laid to rest until called to labor in a better world.

Among florists from outside points who attended the funeral were: W. W. Gammage, London; F. G. Foster, W. Lindsay, Geo. Anderson, C. E Walker Hamilton; A. Gilchrist, Toronto Junction; Dr. Roe, Georgetown; J. H. Dunlop; C. J. Tidy, Wm. Joy, Wm. Tidy, W. Muston, F. Miller, R. Abbs, Geo. Mills, A. Dilmenth, A. Horley, J. Mortimer, A Trupp, A. Trupp, Jr., M. Bullamot, J. Bryant, T. Clinkinboomer, J. Vair, J. Graham, J. Riggall, W. J. Lawrence, R. Mearns, W. Wood, S. A. Frost, A. Frost, G. Price, T. Manton, Toronto; A. H. Ewing, Berlin. Floral designs were sent by The Canadian Horticultural Society, Toronto Gardeners and Florists' Association, Buffalo Florists' Club, C. Scrim, Ottawa, Montreal Florists' Association, J. H. Dunlop, Employees; W. W. Gammage, A. Gilchrist, Mr. Jennings, C. J. Tidy and others from local friends.

Merrit S. Worden.

Bulletin and Preliminary Program

OF THE

Sixteenth Annual Meeting and Exhibition

TO BE HELD AT THE

GRAND CENTRAL PALACE

Lexington Avenue,
East 43d and East 44th Streets

NEW YORK CITY

August 21=22=23=24, 1900

Important Notice.

Members who have attended previous conventions and know something of the discomforts of waiting in line for an opportunity to pay assessments and procure badges, do not need to be reminded to forward their dues to the Secretary in advance and thereby contribute to their own comfort and facilitate the Secretary's work. To those joining the Society this year, however, this advice is given with much earnestness. The crowd at the New York Convention will be unprecedented. Dues cannot be paid while meetings are in progress, and hundreds of applicants will be demanding attention before the opening session on the morning of the first day, the possession of a badge and membership receipt for 1900 being absolutely necessary before any individual can sign the roll book and receive invitation cards for the various entertainments provided by the New York Florists' Club, including the ladies' ride, which is planned for the afternoon of the first day. On receipt of $3 from those who have paid membership dues for 1899, and of $5 from all others, certificate and badge for 1900 will be mailed promptly from the Secretary's office. Preserve your certificate and bring it to the convention with you.

HOTELS.

August is a busy month with New York hotels. A large number, however, are located in the immediate vicinity of the convention hall, and there will be no difficulty in accommodating all who apply, comfortably and at reasonable rates. Those wishing the services of the local committee in securing rooms should apply early by mail to S. S. BUTTERFIELD, Box 1697, New York City, Chairman of Hotel Committee, specifying grade of accommodations desired.

THE QUESTION BOX.

The Question Box will be, as heretofore, an interesting feature of the meetings. Members are requested to forward inquiries intended for the Box to the Secretary previous to the meeting, when practical, so that they may appear in the regular program.

For information as to transportation rates to New York, see page 686 of last week's issue.

THE TRADE EXHIBITION.

Entries with the Superintendent indicate that this will be the grandest exposition of the latest improvements in all requisites for the greenhouse and other departments of the florists' business, models of greenhouses and apparatus, new and rare plants, garden implements, bulbs, seeds and supplies, ever inaugurated. A very large amount of space has already been rented, and intending exhibitors should make application at once to the Superintendent for such accommodations as they require.

Revised rules relative to the judges' duties and methods of making awards may be had on application to the Secretary or the Superintendent of exhibition.

Entries for Purposes of Exhibition Only.—Special arrangements have been made for the accommodation, free of charge, of displays of plants or flowers intended for exhibition only, no sales to be made in connection therewith. Parties desiring to exhibit in this department must so specify in making application to the Superintendent of the Trade Exhibition. Due recognition of valuable exhibits will be given by the Society.

AN EXHIBITION OF PHOTOGRAPHS.

All persons having photographs of floral decorations and design work are invited to send same to the convention hall, in care of the Secretary, where they will be displayed on exhibition, and a competent committee will be appointed to examine and award such recognition as the quality of the floral work represented may justify.

THE SANDER CUP.

F. Sander & Co., St. Albans, England, offer a valuable cup for the most creditable exhibit in the trade exhibition department. The special committee of judges for this class will be selected from the ex-Presidents of the S. A. F. who may be present at the convention. The exhibit which shows the greatest enterprise in its contents and its arrangement, and is calculated to attract, in the opinion of the judges, the greatest amount of attention from trade visitors, will be entitled to the cup. All classes of trade exhibits are eligible for competition.

A Great Horticultural Exhibition

Will be held at the same time and on the same floor as the Trade Exhibition, the awards in connection with which will consist of the Society American Florists' Silver and Bronze Medals, and the New York Florists' Club's Gold and Silver Medals and Certificates; also cash prizes.

The Pan-American Exposition.

Conversing with a gentleman who had recently returned from the Paris Exposition and spent some time in the horticultural section there, he agreed with me that the elaborate preparations going on at the Pan-American promise results that will eclipse that magnificent show now being held in that beautiful French city. To those who by force of circumstances are compelled to stay within our borders this year, we can console ourselves by anticipating a visit to the Bison City to see the grandest effort of the new century. Wonderful progress has been made since the time when many of the attendants to the carnation convention paid a visit to the grounds, which were then barren, save for a few trees planted. Now all is changed, thanks to the Board of Works, of whom Mr. Newcomb Culton is director. Landscape Architect Ulrich has faithfully carried out his directions, so that we see green slopes upon the canal banks and innumerable groups of trees and shrubs flourishing.

I fail to see why that ordinary word canal should be given to a strip of water which will encircle the whole grounds, narrowing here and widening there, with groups of aquatics planted in the many bends reserved for them. William Scott, S. O. H., takes particular interest in the beautiful lily. It is to make its début in the Queen City in great force, and as he is its sponsor, he will see proper attention is given it. At time of my visit, he was overseeing the planting of five hundred nymphæas, and was on the lookout for another and yet larger consignment.

In the nursery corner there are in the aggregate one hundred thousand plants —hardy and herbaceous climbers, and the like. It is when looking at such an enormous collection that one can form some idea of this gigantic undertaking, yet Mr. Scott doubts whether there will be enough stock, and the order to his able assistant, Hermann Searmann, is propagate, propagate. Mr. Scott's idea is to have this branch in such shape that when the Horticultural Building is completed there will be no delay in furnishing it. It is expected that this handsome building will be constructed ere the snow flies, and, judging from the rapidity other structures are being erected, it is reasonable to expect this. Instead of being painted a uniform white (as was the case at the World's Fair), it is intended to paint the buildings in pleasing tints of harmonizing colors.

Mr. Ulrich has secured a grand lot of cedar trees for his Court of Cypresses; hundreds of sweet bays and box trees will adorn the several buildings, where, towering above all, a mammoth electric tower, fed from the roaring Niagara, will throw its myriads of lights upon a series of cascades terminating in an exact reproduction of Venice.

Professor Taylor tells me that the applications for concessions far exceed those at Chicago or Omaha. Additional space has been granted. The Midway will surpass anything yet attempted.

Mr. Scott reports a liberal response from the trade, and is giving his personal attention to every consignment. It keeps him on the jump, but he likes it and says they have only commenced to do something, and by the time the members of the Buffalo Florists' Club attend the convention at New York in August next, he will have something more to tell the craft.

I ran out to South Park and found Professor Cowell had accomplished much this spring in grading and adorning the grounds about the new range of glass. If he can carry out his plans, everything will be in fine shape by next year. W. M.

Frequent heavy showers have been a great help to the trees, shrubs and grass. The large area situated between the Elmwood Avenue and the Park entrance, which has been laid out in hundreds of beds mostly to receive exhibits is now assuming a most beautiful and finished appearance. Under the energy and skill of Mr. Ulrich, what was a few weeks ago a most forbidding waste of clay is now covered with a velvety lawn. No expense is spared in preparing the beds for exhibits. They are excavated fifteen inches and filled in with rich soil. The banks of the lakes and grand canal are as green as beautiful grass can make them. The sunken gardens, which lie between Horticultural Hall and the United States Building, are nearly completed and produce a grand effect. There are two sets of them, each 800 feet long. The extent of the landscape features begins now to be evident, and they are most lavish and diversified. Wherever shrubbery will adorn, it is planted, and between the shrubs the ground will be covered with herbaceous plants. To supply all these Mr. Ulrich has raised immense quantities of the leading sorts. A visit to the propagating houses and a chat with the foreman, Herman Searmann, who walked me over two or three acres of frames, which were filled with hardy plants and grasses, convinced me that there are plants enough to make this department of the Pan-American truly remarkable. They were sown during the Winter, and are now strong plants, and will be planted permanently early this Fall. There are 100,000 of these hardy plants and another 200,000 low growing or creeping plants, that will need the protection of a frame this Winter, and will be planted out early in the spring. These plants, such as vinca, lysimachia, othonna, cerastium, and others, will be used to cover the ground beneath the groups of palms, etc. The herbaceous plants form a long list, and include mostly all the hardy, showy plants. We noticed achillea, potentilla, digitalis, campanula, lobelia, platycodon, polemonium, gypsophila, delphiniuu, rudbeckia, chilone, aquilegia, asters, salvias, helenium, lychnis, coreopsis, dianthus, geum, and many others.

Then there are thousands of the handsome grasses that will be placed on the banks and margins of the lakes, lagoons, and picturesque inlets. There are agrostis, andropogon, eulalia, bambusa, elymus, erianthus, panicum, and other less-known varieties I have not enumerated but they are here in great numbers. Surely all these plants, wisely distributed, must make an unparalleled display.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Some Injurious Effects Produced by Fumigation with Hydrocyanic Acid Gas.

Reviewing the work already done along the line of destroying insect pests by the use of hydrocyanic acid gas, we find a varied record wherein the results obtained have in many instances been highly satisfactory, but very often the disadvantages noted have far outweighed the advantages. In 1886, Professor D. W. Coquillett made successful application of the gas for the destruction of scale insects, a full account of which is given in the Report of the United States Department of Agriculture for 1887. Since that time, the gas has been extensively used by nurserymen and orange growers.

Referring to Circular No. 37, Division of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, also to an article published in the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE of October 9, 1897, we find that the first recorded experiments of a satisfactory nature to rid greenhouse plants of insect enemies by the use of hydrocyanic acid gas were made early in 1895 by Messrs. Woods and Dorsett, of the Division of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology. In these experiments a house of ferns, and later a large house of coleus plants were treated with entirely satisfactory results. The use of the gas for these plants has become a practice rather than an experiment for fumigating both cuttings and plants in benches, and is the only insecticide that will entirely eradicate their insect enemies.

There is, however, a large number of plants which will not withstand the treatment at all and others which will bear fumigation only under certain conditions.

In the presentation of these notes it is the purpose to call attention to the fact that under certain conditions it is possible to do great damage to plants, even where rules have been strictly followed. On the evening of May 12 a house devoted to general plants, representing a large range of distribution and habitat, was treated to a fumigation consisting of .10 gram of 98 per cent. cyanide of potash per cubic foot of space. The application was allowed to remain in the house for twenty-five minutes. All the usual precautions were taken, but many of the plants began to show effects of burning after thirty-six hours.

The damage in this case is attributed to the following causes, all of which it may be well to consider before subjecting a house to cyanide treatment. The house was a new one and much tighter than the average greenhouse, thus preventing waste of the gas. The house had not been shaded and the full effect of the sun had produced a vigorous growth that was easily injured. Another interesting point in our observations was that many of the plants injured were in a weak constitutional condition and the parts injured were those that would ordinarily be the first to show lost vitality; this was very noticeable in the case of several cactæ where the tips of branches that had made no growth for a long time were whitened and shriveled. A plant of agave had its outer and lower leaves injured in much the same manner as when the plant is allowed to become too dry.

The following plants showed the effects of the gas the most and had the appearance of having been severely frosted, and should undoubtedly be included in the list of plants that should not be fumingated with hydrocyanic acid gas: Small tomato plants, cardoons in variety, young foliage of grape cuttings with most of the terminal buds killed, small plants of sweet pea and Kenilworth ivy were killed to the ground.

Among those not injured were a large number of varieties of cabbage, cauliflower and kales, celery plants, ferns in variety, palms, loquats and several species of ficus.

It may be stated, as a general rule, that houses of mixed plants must not be fumingated with hydrocyanic acid gas. A far better way is to provide a box or small room, conveniently located, to which the plants to be fumigated can be transferred. Such a room is now in use by the Division of Botany; it is 4x5 feet by 8 high, being a corner of a basement room partitioned off to form a chamber. In the top of this inclosure is placed a trap ventilator connecting with the outside; this may be opened by means of a cord. At the floor and on the outside of the chamber is a box connecting with the chamber itself; the jar containing the acid is placed in this box and in easy reach of the operator without entering the chamber proper. In addition to this, an electric fan is connected to the chamber near the floor to be used in driving the gas out rapidly after fumigation. The chamber is heavily lined with building paper and the door and other openings weather-stripped.

The electric fan may be omitted, but in most cases some sort of fan is desirable, as it clears the chamber of gas in a few minutes and facilitates the work.

Too much stress cannot be placed upon the danger to human life from the extensive use of this gas and no precaution should be omitted. The potassium cyanide in the dry form should not in any case be allowed to touch the hands of the operator, and even a smell of the gas should be avoided.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL BY WM. SCOTT.
IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (8½x11 inches), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is
A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

An Everbearing Plum.

We send you by mail to-day a sample of the Eagle, our Everbearing and Never-failing plum. Please keep the fruit till ripe before eating. We shall be pleased to know what you think of it. The original tree now has on its 28th successive crop, and ripe fruit can be gathered during the Summer from it six to nine weeks.—BAKER BROS., Fort Worth, Texas.

—The plums were quite ripe when they reached this office and were duly sampled. While the flavor is not up to the standard of some other plums, the everbearing qualities of the variety should make it a desirable one.

Retinosporas are being used extensively in England as decorative plants for corridors, staircases and dining tables.

The Market.

Funeral work makes up the bulk of what business there is doing these days, and there seems to be enough of it to clean up most of the stock that comes in. Roses are of very poor quality, hardly worthy of the name; they sell at from 2c. to 5c., while 8c. could probably be gotten for anything like good stock. Carnations are still in fair supply and quality; about $1 per 100 is still the price for them. Asters are now in, in limited lots, and sell well. Gladioli are quite abundant and good; also tuberoses. Sweet peas are practically over.

Notes.

Owing to alterations in the building occupied by J. W. Kunz, he is obliged to give up business at 506 Olive street. He will probably open up again later.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting took place on the 14th inst., with President Amman in the chair. The attendance was considerably better there being some 19 members present. Routine and committee business was transacted. Among other things brought up was an offer of a year's subscription to the National Florists' Board of Trade, as a prize to be given at our coming show this Fall. Same was accepted with thanks. The preliminary list of the show will be out in a few days.

Nomination of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: President, F. H. Meinhardt and E. W. Guy; vice-president, Chas. J. Jeungel; secretary, E. Schray; treasurer, J. J. Beneke; trustees, F. J. Fillmore, J. W. Kunz, Mr. Grossheardt, Mr. Emmons and Phil. Mohr.

Then followed a lengthy and interesting discussion as to the advantages of the early planting of carnations, in which Messrs. Dunford, Fillmore, Emmons and Guy took part.

By vote of the Club it was finally decided to have the picnic at Montesano Springs on Wednesday, July 25th. Boat will leave at 9:30 o'clock from foot of Olive street. All florists and their friends are cordially invited, and it is hoped a good crowd will turn out to make the affair a success. Tickets can be had at the wholesale houses, and of the trustees.

C. C. S.

Pittsburg.

For the past two months or more trade has been rather better than was expected. Even now there are occasional good days when stock is scarce, mainly for funeral work. Carnations and roses are getting off in color and size, but still command a pretty fair price—the former about $1.50 per 100. Sweet peas are suffering from dry weather. Asters are beginning to show up and will be very useful.

The Florists' Club meeting, held last week, was the best attended in some time. Matters pertaining to the Convention and picnic were fully discussed. As to the latter, it was decided to have it before going to the Convention—some time in the first week of next month. A committee was appointed as follows: John Bader, L. I. Neff, J. W. Ludwig, E. L. Ludwig and W. Loew, who have full charge, will issue invitations to every member. Any member desiring to take friends with him should apply to the secretary of the club for extra invitations. It seems as if a good delegation from Pittsburg and vicinity will attend the Convention in New York. Outside of the 1⅓ rate granted to the S. A. F., so far nothing better has been heard of, and it is more than likely that the majority of those going to the Convention will take in the Atlantic City excursion on August 16, spending several days in the city by the sea, go to Philadelphia on Monday and proceed with the Philadelphians (providing they allow us) to New York. The fare from Pittsburg to Philadelphia or Atlantic City and return, good for 16 days, is only $10; and from Philadelphia to New York not over $4 for the round trip, and perhaps the Philadelphia boys will get a still better rate, and extend the same to our members; so it will be fully as cheap as the 1⅓ rate, giving a longer time, besides taking in Atlantic City, Philadelphia and New York at leisure, as a few desire to stay away for half a month. If a better plan, or a better rate can be secured, I will be able to let the readers of the EXCHANGE know at least a week before the convention.

E. C. REINEMAN.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS Now is the time to plant them. We offer extra fine vigorous plants, from 2 and 2½ inch pots. Everybody likes them; they are so strong and healthy that they surprise all of our new customers; our old customers, of course, always know what to expect, but even they occasionally tell us that our stock is getting better all the time. Market News.

There has been little or no change in the condition of business. Vacations and a general early closing are the rule. Stock is very plentiful, but is very poor for the most part.

Jottings.

Philip L. Carbone of Boylston street, and Antoine Leuthy, of Rosindale, the palm grower, went abroad Saturday last.

Thomas F. Galvin returned Saturday from a month's sojourn in Europe.

Burglars broke into Galvin's conservatories, on Boylston street, Friday night last week, but got nothing for their trouble. They only damaged the cash register in opening it.

Fred. R. Dow, formerly with Thos. F. McCarthy, has opened a wire-worker's shop at 19 Province street.

John Walsh, manager of the Flower Market, is now on a two weeks' vacation; George Cartwright is substituting for him.

Anderson & Williams are just finishing a new rose house.

The regular Saturday exhibition last week was a very good one. H. Dumaresq captured all the prizes awarded for hydrangeas. Achimenes were also nicely shown by Mr. Dumaresq, he taking the only prizes awarded in this class. W. J. Clemson showed a few nice cut blooms of gloxinias, very tastefully arranged with ferns. In the class for tuberous begonias, E. S. Converse was awarded both prizes—one for single, and the other for double varieties. Mrs. J. L. Gardner receive the award for aquatic flowers with a choice variety, prettily arranged.

There were quite a few choice things shown, not scheduled. Oakes Ames, staged for the first time a hybrid cypripedium, W. R. Lee, bearing large, handsome flowers, for which a silver medal was awarded. The Bussey Institute sent in a showy catasetum, with a fine spike of flower, a native of Venezuela, found near the mountains of Caracas. Dr. Weld had a novel plant from South Africa, called Gerbera Jamesonii.

Sweet peas of very good quality were shown by W. J. Clemson, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and E. C. Lewis. The Hon. J. S. Fay estate sent in a nice collection of hollyhocks, and a new hybrid climbing rose, a cross between Rosa Wichuraiana and Baroness Rothschild. Hollyhocks were also shown by Jos. S. Chase. Rea Bros. and the Blue Hill Nursery staged hardy herbaceous perennials.

W. J. Clemson also showed bougainvillea and Japan irises. F. J. N.

Absolute quietness now exists, and the lack of what otherwise would be a scarcity in many kinds of blooms, is not an item of complaint. Early closing hours now rule at the stores.

On Friday last an informal talk on matters pertaining to the probable doings here in 1901, was indulged in by a few of the leading local craftsmen, but no defined action resulted.

Our outside friends have been with us more numerous; no doubt attracted by the cooling influence of our plentiful rainfalls, copious showers having been of almost daily occurrence for the past week. Gardeners' Outing.

The chief event of this past week was the visit to this locality of the Westchester County (N. Y.) Gardeners' Association. The members of this society have an annual outing, and this year they accepted the invitation of Thomas Meehan & Sons to visit the firm's large nurseries and be their guests for the day. The delegates, headed by their vet ran president, John Shore, arrived at Broad street station at 9:30 a. m., and took train again for Carpenter street, Germantown. Here they were met by Thos. B. Meehan who had a large coach with four horses in waiting to convey the party to the nurseries, where on arrival they were welcomed by the head of the firm, the venerable Thomas Meehan, who told his visitors that he would like to go around with them, but as he was 80 years of age, his legs were not equal to the task; and so he must leave the entertaining to the young members of the firm. The visitors were then taken around some of the most interesting parts of the nursery, and after a rest on the lawn under the fine shade trees, the extensive herbaceous borders were inspected. Then all were taken to the old Meehan homestead, where an elaborate lunch was served. After lunch Mr. Shore, on behalf of the visitors, thanked the Messrs. Meehan for their hospitality, to which Thos. B. Meehan responded. The party, after bidding adieu to Thomas Meehan, again entered the large coach and were driven down the Wissahickon; the route taken was through Pelham up to the Wissahickon Inn, and then down to the drive, which was traversed for about 10 miles to the Green street entrance of the park. The visitors were much surprised at the grand scenery along the Wissahickon. There were 20 gardeners of the association present, and they were accompanied by James W. Withers and Chas. Weber, of Weber & Don, New York. DAVID RUST.

Dover, Del.

The bedding-out season has been longer this season than usual, owing to the protracted drought. Taken all in all, trade has been satisfactory and shows a marked increase over previous years. There was a noticeable increase in the call for cannas and tuberous-rooted begonias; the latter will become quite popular. Palms, too, sold well. Verbenas, coleus and centaureas moved slowly. Outside stock has started off to make nice growth, but the plants are not as large as they should be, owing to the dry weather. A wealthy lady is laying out and planting a beautiful public park here, at her own expense. It is situated on the borders of a most picturesque lake.

J. C. Baker, the florist, has had a vacant piece of unsightly land, adjoining his greenhouse, ploughed up and made into a very attractive flower garden, where all his stock plants are put in very attractive flower beds.

H. Y.

Ithaca, N. Y.

Never before has spring stock been so well cleared up. Geraniums had first call. Palms and the Boston fern are still selling well.

The Bool Floral Co. have moved their store two doors up the street, and are to have a single plate glass front put in. Arthur H. Bool, the manager of the company, was married on the 11th inst. to Miss Carrie B. Storm, the wedding taking place at the home of the bride's parents at Owego, N. Y. Many very handsome presents were sent, and the best of friends in the craft wish the young couple a happy and prosperous life.

Carnations, violets and other outdoor stock are making an excellent growth and promises well for fall housing.

H. Y.

Falls City, Neb.

Hail stones, weighing 10 ounces, and 13 inches in circumference, wrecked, last week, the houses of B. Simanton. He was insured in the Florists' Hail Association.

There's only one New York, one New York Florists' Club, and once in a decade that these two get an opportunity to entertain the S. A. F. That the combination will make the most of it goes without saying.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, O., President; F. W. BOLGIANO, First Vice-President; S. G. COURTEEN, Milwaukee, Wis., Second Vice-President; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer.

New York.—Mr. James Shiels, member of the firm of Nimo & Blair, seed merchants, Dunedin, New Zealand, is registered at the Murray Hill Hotel. Mr. Shiels is on a trip round the world, and sails for Europe in a few days.

Long Island Seed Crops.—The harvest is nearly completed, and there is sufficient to show that our predictions regarding the damage from drought were correct; but the damage has been far greater than we expected. The kale crop will not be one-half of what we were assured three weeks ago, and not one-fifth of what the plants promised us when in flower. To show the effect of the drought, we will say that an uncommonly early piece, which was in the seed pod before the general crop came into flower, has given us a yield of twelve hundred to the acre, while the same variety that was nearly two weeks later in coming into flower will give us a yield of not more than one hundred and fifty pounds to the acre.

The cabbage seed crop has suffered badly, but not to so great an extent; while the yield per acre is considerably above the average, we shall not have more than two-thirds as much as we had reason to expect three weeks ago. The seed will be small, as hard as shot, but of very high germinating power.

The bean crop on Long Island is looking better than we could expect in such dry weather. The pods are short, but well filled, and the plants show no signs of wilting nor any serious check in growth. We confidently look for twenty bushels to the acre.

European Notes.

A cold, wet spell has spread over nearly the whole of Italy, at a time when onions and flower seeds are in the most critical stage. They have been doing extra well for the past three weeks, and are full of vigor, so we hope for the best. France and England are bathed in glorious sunshine, and crops are maturing in good shape. We are about three weeks later than last year, particularly with our annual crops.

As the Sweet Pea Conference approaches we expect more visitors. At present we have in our midst Mrs. J. C. Vaughan and her son, John H. Allan, Pictou, and Thos. Rennie, Toronto. EUROPEAN SEEDS.

The Onion Outlook.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Upon my return from California last week I was shown the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, which had reprinted the interview with me published in a Los Angeles paper early in June. The fact is that this interview being published now might tend to mislead the trade as to the onion outlook. I hasten, therefore, to write you that that portion of the interview relative to the onion seed prospects was based entirely upon the very blue letters we had received from onion growers throughout California prior to my arrival there, and before I had personally inspected the crops. I found, however, that practically all the growers were rejoicing in a great change for the better, and my own opinion to-day would be that, with the exception of but few varieties, existing contracts will be filled nearly in full.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS in pots should now have their last shift. There is no need for overpotting them at this time, and if they receive a shift into a two-inch larger sized pot than they are in at present, it will be amply big enough for them. Pinching must be discontinued, and each shoot should be allowed to go ahead, tying them up to a stake as soon as support is needed by them. An occasional dusting with tobacco will keep the green or black fly down. This and the persistent use of the hose pipe on the plants will keep them clean. Grasshoppers will soon be making their appearance; and as no insecticide will touch these they must be taken off by hand-picking. Fortunately, they do not enter a house in large numbers, and by disturbing the plants by shaking them, the grasshopper is easily found.

Don't be too hasty in applying liquid manure to the roots; wait until the buds have been taken before starting to feed the plants.

ROSES that are being held over for another season's work should be gradually approaching the dormant stage by this time. Do not try to dry them down suddenly; if that be done, they will be no earthly use afterwards. Syringe them lightly every two or three days, being careful at the time that as little water as is possible penetrates the soil.

PANSIES, for early or Winter blooming, should be sown early in August. Prepare the bed thoroughly by digging in plenty of well-rotted manure; make the soil moderately firm, and sow in drills or rows, transplanting when large enough to handle and replanting them on the greenhouse bench in October or the latter part of September. If pansies are only wanted for selling as plants in early Spring, the sowing of the seed may be deferred a couple of weeks yet, and the plants be gotten large enough to withstand the Winter where they are sown, if a little protection in the shape of straw or leaves be given them.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE. As a flowering begonia this is a marvel, and no florist should be without it. Cuttings taken now root readily. When growing on the young plants the most serious thing to guard against is their damping off. If plants are watered late in the day, and the foliage remains wet through the evening, a damping off is the result, and the young plant is gone. Keep them rather on the dry side at all times. Water in the forenoons; avoid a moist atmosphere in the house through the night, and this charming begonia will thrive as well almost as any other variety.

ANY LATE ASTERS that are yet to be planted should be got out at once. They may be planted closer together than the earlier set out ones, as it is not to be expected that they will make as large growth as the latter.

ALTERNANTHERAS. If the stock plants of these are at all limited, it would be well to take a batch of cuttings from them at this time. A corner of a cold frame can be utilized as a propagating bed by spreading sand to a depth of a few inches and making it firm before putting in the cuttings, keeping them shaded until rooted.

Business Bits.

Trade has quieted down a little the past week, and but for funeral work it would have been very slow indeed. Roses and carnations show the effect of the hot weather, also sweet peas; but other stock such as lilies, asters and gladiolus are in good shape. Asters are quoted at from $1.25 up per 100; gladiolus, as high as $6, but will soon be less. J. Semple is cutting some fine stock, which finds ready sale.

Jottings.

The growers all have their hands full, making repairs; many of them expect to go to the Convention and want their work all completed before leaving. Very little new building is doing this season, for material and labor are too costly. John Bader is erecting a fine residence for himself on his place at Mt. Troy and intends to occupy it this Fall.

Hartman Bros., of Allegheny, have quit the florist business, sold out their place and moved to Warren, Ohio, on a fine farm.

Railroad rates to the Convention remain firm. It is a pretty hard matter to get any concession east of Pittsburg. So far no change has been made regarding rates and routes from those given in my last week's notes. The Atlantic City excursion rate of $10 seems to be the one preferred by the majority of the members going. Between 30 and 40, including ladies, will be the size of our delegation.

The sixth annual picnic of the Florists' Club takes place Wednesday, August 1, at Ross Grove, where it has been held heretofore. The committee in charge has made all arrangements, and everything gives promise of a good time for all attending. Sports of all kinds, for which prizes will be given—the regular base ball game, dancing and other amusements—are on the list; so don't fail to come, and if any member desires to take a friend or two, not members of the club, he should apply to the secretary for invitations. Liquid and solid refreshments will be served. Take Sharpsburg and Aspinwall street cars to end of line, where wagon will be found going to picnic ground about a quarter of an hour's walk distant.

Trade Notes.

Business still remains fair for this time of year, and more stock could be disposed of if it could be secured, carnations especially being scarce. Roses are still coming in in limited quantities and are selling at 2c. and 3c. each. Asters are commencing to arrive, and meet with ready sale at 2c. and 3c. During the past week we have had some fine rains that are making things move, and have cooled off the temperature.

Jottings.

Don't forget to vote for Buffalo. Paste this in your hat before you get to New York.

Richard Witterstætter, Albert Sunderbruch and Clarence J. Ohmer will probably comprise the delegation from this city to New York.

Many of our boys have been fishing this week, but all that I heard they caught was a bad cold and a few crawfish.

I understand that E. G. Hill has returned from Europe.

Miss Carrie Hoffmeister, Hon. Edwin Hoffmeister, and their father are now at the Sneaux Islands, Mich.; they report having a fine time and plenty of good fishing.

Miss Katherine Critchell leaves Friday for Lake Kegonsa, Wis., to spend the Summer.

A Victoria regia will be blooming at the city greenhouses in a few days. Supt. Critchell is very busy cleaning out the parks and getting ready for general repairs.

The Fall Festival is now assuming vast proportions and will be a grand success. The opening day is September 19, the exposition continuing ten days.

E. G. GILLETT.

Grand Rapids.

Torrid Weather and Trade.

We are having just about the hottest spell of torrid weather imaginable, and, excepting funeral work, business is at a standstill. This work has made a strong demand on a short supply of flowers, keeping the stock from wasting; in fact, very few flowers have been dumped so far this season.

Rose planting is about over. Nearly all the violets are also in the bench and, as a whole, are looking fine. The Grand Rapids violet crop promises to be an enormous one the coming season.

Carnations in the field are looking well and promise a fine crop. Rain has fallen just often enough to keep the plants in good growth.

We do not know yet how many will attend the New York Convention from here, but expect at least two or three, possibly more.

Carnations, although poor, fetch 15c. to 25c. per dozen; roses 75c. to $1 per dozen; sweet peas are plentiful at 10c. per dozen. The early crop of asters has been badly stung, and is almost a total failure.

Wencil Cuirskinsky, Superintendent of Parks, is dangerously sick.

G. F. C.

Omaha, Neb.

The Florists' Club held its annual picnic at Krug's Park, Friday, July 20. It was voted by all, the best that ever happened. The event of the day was the bowling contest. Two teams were chosen from the Club, and the side captained by J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, won each and every prize right handily. Lewis Henderson finds it necessary to carry a gun, having been captain of the losing team.

The Nebraska Horticultural Society will hold its regular Summer meeting at Geneva, this state, on July 25 and 26. L. Henderson, J. H. Hadkinson and G. W. Hervey will discourse on interesting subjects.

J. H. B.

Newark, N. Y.—Mr. E. Alvin Miller, of Jackson & Perkins Co., accompanied by his wife, sailed from New York the 14th inst., on the steamer "Pennsylvania," for Hamburg, intending to spend several months in Germany, Belgium and France. Mr. Miller is planning especially to visit the leading European rose growers.

Florist bowlers will have no end of fun—and hard work—in winning the many beautiful trophies at the New York Convention next month

Cut Flower Market.

There is a fair demand for roses and carnations; but both are scarce and of inferior quality. Flora Hill and Fisher are the prevalent carnations, Kaiserin and White Cochet the roses of the season.

All outside stock has suffered fearfully from the drought, sweet peas were the first to succumb. The field carnations show signs of fatigue and of red spider and thrips, especially Daybreak and Victor. Several thunderstorms brought us showers of rain; but not enough to penetrate six inches.

Changes in Business.

Messrs. Madson & Anderson, of Govanstown, have dissolved partnership, Mr. Madson retaining the old place. Mr. Anderson is building two fine new houses for Beauty and greens on an adjoining lot. These two genial gardeners have been the most successful rose growers about here. Messrs. Fisher & Ekas have separated; Henry Fisher continues on the old place.

Firms that Are Building.

Messrs. S. Feast & Sons are adding a modern house, clipper bars, short span to the south, to be occupied by chrysanthemums, and later by carnations.

Henry Eberhardt, of Catonsville, is rebuilding and adding to his glass. His son Gus will take the place.

S. B. Sands is again adding to his houses. He now has one of the best-equipped places around this city, and is very successful with carnations and roses.

I. Moss, of Govanstown, is reported to have purchased a large quantity of glass —for new houses?

R. Kaiser, Annapolis, is building a large violet house and overhauling others.

Random Notes.

American glass, florists' sizes, seems to be scarce in the market.

John Cook has a promising seedling of Asparagus Sprengeri x A. decumbens. As far as can be judged by the small plant, it retains the character of A. Sprengeri, but is more loose and airy in appearance. Mr. Cook has also succeeded in propagating a white variegated Sprengeri from seed borne by a fine old specimen. A few new German carnations are undergoing trial, and promise well.

At Annapolis, Mayor Seidewitz is busy spending $120,000 for pavements, and planning other improvements befitting the capital of one of the most prosperous states of the Union. But Seidewitz is a florist before all, and if his public duties have imposed additional work upon him, his working capacity must have developed accordingly, for his business is not suffering any decrease of personal attention. He is planning extensive enlargements. Though he has his hands full, he finds time for everything, even for recreation and fun. He thinks that the secret of happy and successful life lies in wisely dividing one's time between work and recreation. When on New Year's Day he called, in his official capacity, on the Governor of Maryland, the latter, absorbed in conversation with friends, went up to him and, seizing his hand, said: "Say, Seidewitz, is this a good time to trim trees?" He emphatically rejoined: "No, Governor; this is the time to drink punch!"

M. A. Hantske has for 18 months past filled the post of gardener at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and expects to have a few modern houses built this season, his work being well appreciated. He can talk guns, drill and war as if to the manner born. T. E.

Notes.

The 6 o'clock closing movement was inaugurated by the downtown storekeepers about the 15th of the present month, and will continue until September 1.

On the 15th inst., J. M. Gasser removed his store from 101 Euclid avenue to the storeroom immediately adjoining, the present location being No. 99½.

Fire.

The greenhouses of the F. R. Williams Co. located on Eddy Road, Glenville, Ohio, were damaged by fire to the extent of about $2,500 early Monday morning, 23d inst. The boiler room and tool shed, 24 x 32 feet, were entirely destroyed, and potting shed, 75 feet long, nearly destroyed. The ends of seven greenhouses adjoining the toolhouse and potting sheds were considerably damaged—three of which were fern houses, three rose houses, and one carnation house. The entire stock of adiantum contained in the fern houses was completely destroyed. There was no insurance. The houses will be immediately rebuilt.

A. H. Graham and wife left the city, a few days ago, for a two weeks' stay at Sag Harbor, L. I.

Miss Emma Gray, with James Eadie, 97 Euclid avenue, is spending her vacation at Saegerstown, Pa.

(149) Solanum Capsicastrum—Can anyone answer how to treat best Solanum capsicastrum. They are nice plants, in four-inch pots. Shall I shift them into larger pots, or plant them in open ground and pot them in the Fall again?—H. N.

—The solanums will certainly do better if planted outdoors and will make much larger plants than they would if kept in pots all Summer. They must, however, be lifted and potted before the nights get too cool, or the foliage might drop, making them worthless for decorative purposes.

(150) Chemicals vs. Horse Manure.—In reply to your inquiry of a few days since, which reads as follows: "Can there be furnished in 100 pounds of chemicals, at a cost not exceeding $3, as much nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash as is contained in one ton of horse manure? Signed, Market Gardener," we would say that a ton of good horse manure contains about 12 pounds of nitrogen, 6 pounds of phosphoric acid and 12 pounds of potash. At present market prices of chemicals, these amounts of plant food are worth about $2.50, provided we do not take into consideration the question of availability. For $3 we could purchase the following amount of plant food: 15 pounds of nitrogen in the form of nitrate of soda, 8 pounds of available phosphoric acid in the form of acid phosphate and 16 pounds of actual potash in the form of muriate of potash. —L. L. VAN SLYKE, Chemist, New York Agricultural Experiment Station.

(151) Carrying Azaleas Through the Summer.—Kindly tell us through your valuable paper the best way to keep over Azalea indica through the Summer. Ours have been in a shaded, deep frame, and some have made quite a growth. I had thought of trimming them and making some sash of laths or slats, just to shade them a little, allowing the air to ventilate through, and plunge the pots in ashes. I have found from a few plants, which I stood in the sun, that the leaves got burned, although I have been told, planting out in open is a good way to hold azaleas over. Give us your idea.—A. D.

—If the azaleas are large plants it would be quite right to plunge the pots in ashes and shade them slightly from the hot sun with the slats as mentioned. If they are young plants, and it is desired to grow them on, we would take them out of the pots and plant in well-enriched soil, shading them during the hottest part of the day. Trim back the straggling shoots, and keep the plants well watered and syringed. In September lift and pot again. Pot very firm and place in a cool house.

(152) Compost, Fertilizers, Etc.—1. Of what materials are the carnation beds in the greenhouse composed and the proportions? 2. How long are they used without making new ones? 3. What is done with the old material taken out? 4. What is the liquid manure used in the greenhouse made from? 5. What quantity is used to 50 gallons of water? 6. What quantity of this strength is used to 10 square feet of bed. 7. How often applied?—A. W.

—No. 1. The best compost for the carnation bed is four-fifths loam and one-fifth well-rotted stable manure. The loam most to be preferred is that taken next to the sod from an old pasture. No. 2. One year. No. 3. There is no rule as to what should be done with the old soil. It can be saved and mixed with potting soil, to be used for a variety of bedding plants; or it can be spread in the garden or field, and will always prove beneficial. No. 4. The liquid used is made by putting animal manure in a tank or barrel, filling the said tank or barrel with water, letting it stand for 24 hours or more and then drawing off the liquid. No. 5. Cow dung 1 bushel; sheep manure, 1½ pecks; horse manure, 2 bushels. No. 6. When liquid manure is applied, enough to penetrate to the roots is the necessary quantity, as the strength of manures is variable, and as soil and plants also vary in their needs for stimulants, no specific quantity can be given; the grower's judgment must guide him in this. No. 7. When the plants show that they need feeding, give the liquid once a week.

(153) Heating.—I have a small house 16x20 feet, and I am adding 16x50, making 16x76. This house is 10 feet 4 inches from floor to ridge, and will have three feet of glass on each side. The walls are six inches thick and are filled with cotton seed hulls. When we have zero weather outside, is a 16x30 Wilks' heater sufficient to keep the house at 55 degrees? If so, how many runs and what size pipe? I am now using four runs of 2½ and four runs of 1½ inch pipe. The house runs north and south, and is protected on the north by boiler and potting rooms.—J. W. G.

—I have never had any practical experience with a Wilks' heater, but as with all others I would advise the selection of a size that is rated as having a capacity about one-third larger than the actual amount of radiation to be supplied, in order to secure economical heating. In zero weather you will need about four runs of 2½ inch and six of 1½ inch pipe, but it will be better to use 2-inch pipe for the returns, if the house is to be extended to 75 feet. To utilize the pipe now on hand, I would suggest that you use two 2½-inch flows and six 2-inch and one 1½-inch returns. This will make about 450 square feet of radiation, and the heater should be one rated for 600 square feet. —L. R. T.

I am building a slope house for carnations and smilax, 42 x 50 feet, running east and west. The sash bars on south side are 32 feet and on north side are 12 feet long. The ground slopes, so that the ridge is only 12 feet from surface of ground. On the north side is a mushroom pit, 8 feet in width, with double boarded and papered side and roof. On the west side is a potting shed and propagating house, which protects house from prevailing west and north winds. The east end is glass. 1. Will two 2½-inch overhead flows and 12 2-inch returns heat the house to 50 degrees in zero weather with a hot water closed system?

2. Will a 2½ flow (overhead) feed six 2-inch returns under bench?

3. Which is best for hot-water—coils, manifold Ts or return bends?

4. My heater is an upright boiler laid down horizontally, set in brick the same as a tubular boiler. It has a 3x3 foot fire box and 100 2-inch flows. The heat passes under the boiler, through the lower half of flues, and then through the upper half to the chimney. How much radiation should it carry? Would it be large enough if I should wish to extend the 42-foot house 50 feet more another year, making it 42 x 100 feet.—C. E. C.

—1. If run under pressure it will be possible to maintain the temperature desired with two 2½-inch flows and 12 2-inch returns, but it will be more economical of fuel if three flows and 15 returns are used, with an open tank system.

2. Yes, if the house is not enlarged; but if made 100 feet long, as proposed, it will be well to use only four or five returns for each flow pipe.

3. With an open tank system coil boilers put up with manifolds are preferable, but for use under pressure return bends can be employed. In the construction of coil boilers it is desirable to use extra heavy 1½ or 2-inch pipe, and to have the threads well turned in.

4. Nothing is said regarding the length of the tubes in the heater, but if they are four feet long it is probably rated at about 15-horse power, and it would be large enough to heat a house 100 x 42 feet, but in order to secure the draft needed to maintain the desired pressure, a large stack, say 15 inches in diameter, will be required.—L. R. T.

The Henry Shaw Medal.

The St. Louis Florists' Club desires to call attention to the fact that in June, 1893, the Board of Trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden founded a gold medal, to be known as "The Henry Shaw Medal," for the introduction of a valuable plant, and to be awarded each year when practicable for a new plant of value for cultivation exhibited in St. Louis, as a part of the premiums or prizes to a flower show or exhibition provided for in the will of the late Henry Shaw, provided that the judges or other persons making awards at such exhibition shall certify that said medal is "awarded for a plant of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce, and introduced to such commerce by the exhibitor during the year in which said award is made."

Numerous plants worthy of the award of this medal are each year introduced into American trade, and the undersigned will at any time gladly furnish detailed information to their introducers as to the time of holding the flower show at which they may be exhibited in competition for the medal. This year the medal will be offered as a part of the premiums placed in the hands of our local florists' club for award at our annual Chrysanthemum Show to be held in St. Louis, November 14, 15, and 16, 1900.

Buffalo.

Trade News.

Not enough trade or business to talk about, or extract gossipy bits from. The weather is all right and agreeable for the time of the year.

To Invite the S. A. F.

A meeting of the Buffalo Florists' Club was held on Friday afternoon last, at Kasting's store. The session became a red-painted one, in the interests of fraternal war, as it then and there was decided that the Florists' Club extend an invitation to the S. A. F. O. H. to hold the 1901 meeting in this city. A somewhat interesting debate over the matter, pro and con, was had, resulting in a unanimous falling in for the proposition. As planned from our advance existing standpoints, the nation's interests are involved in the realization of our desires in this matter, so we naturally expect every vote on the subject next month will be cast in our favor. At this early stage, a certain modesty prevails, but we expect to be heard from further later.

The Club's Picnic.

Besides handling the above important matter, the holding of a picnic, intended for participation by the craft and their families, was decided on, to come off early in August, and which will be in charge of Emil Brooker, Wm. Scott and W. A. Adams. James Brown was elected a member.

Jottings.

Our reputed prowess in bowling, even if, perhaps, a bit below a present high pinnacle, will be kept in active remembrance at least, by a contesting team at the Convention games next month.

Wm. Scott and Daniel B. Long were appointed a committee on transportation convention-ward, and Mr. Scott will be the incumbent of a new position, probably best styled "press agent."

We are reliably informed that the structure of the new South Park conservatories, as a piece of work or city job, have not as yet been accepted from the contractors by the city authorities, and the present occupying of the same is done under an understood arrangement. Some of the mechanical finishing has not as yet passed the necessarily exacting municipal inspection for approval.

A number of palms were carried out of John G. Pickelman's French street greenhouses one night last week, and sold about town for trifling sums. It evidently was done by some one familiar with the premises, who has not, however, been apprehended. The palms generally were recovered.

The progress of work at the Pan-American shows more attractive, impressive and convincing at each visit. Surface work in Landscape Superintendent Ulrich's department is now rapidly being put into finished contours and outlines. Grass seeding is being rapidly pushed, and with past favorable weather, and a copious supply of city water available, quick effects are brought about. The seed is applied in liberal quantity, and an unusually good mixture seems to be used. Contingent to the horticultural interests, a visit here last week of F. Lamson-Scribner, Government Agrostologist, and representing the Department of Agriculture, confirmed the making of an exhibit in that class. A plot of one and one-half acres, will be placed at disposal for this purpose, to be devoted to comprehensively arranged display of economic and ornamental grasses. In itself, such a showing should beget a large resultant value.

Recent callers included Arnold Ringier, of Chicago, and Thos. Mansfield, of Lockport, N. Y. VIDI.

St. Louis.

Market Conditions.

Receipts of stock have increased somewhat; but the quality, as yet, is not much improved. Asters are coming in freely; common stock sells at $1.00 per 100, some extra choice flowers bringing as high as $2.50 per 100. Not many of the latter are to be had. Carnations, mostly white, from out doors, are in plentiful supply, still selling for $1.00 per 100. Lots of gladiolus bring 3c. to 4c.; tuberoses 5c. per stalk.

Business is very quiet all along the line. This, however, is what we expect, and nobody is disappointed. The weather generally is very good, the Summer kind—plenty of, but not too much, rain. This has been the finest six months, in this respect, we have ever seen; at no time have we suffered from either extreme. C. C. S.

Providence, R. I.

Trade Notes.

Business has been very quiet with us the past two weeks. Flowers are plentiful, but the only call for them is on an occasional funeral order.

Carnations in the field are doing fairly well, but need a good watering. We are having exceptionally dry weather this season; all vegetation is suffering for the lack of water.

Several of the growers have their houses filled with violets, which are apparently in a very healthy condition at present; but a few weeks will tell better what they will be.

Sweet peas are coming in plentifully and meeting with a fair demand. Asters have made their appearance, but in limited quantity. Lilium auratum are again short this year. One grower, who purchased a large number of bulbs last Fall, anticipating a large revenue from them this Summer, is sadly disappointed in the results. He will hardly get the cost of the bulbs back.

Boston.

At last week's show prizes were offered for sweet peas, hardy herbaceous plants, for vase of flowers, and fruits and vegetables. The exhibits of sweet peas were excellent and of varied kinds, containing many of the newer varieties, which show a wonderful assortment of colors. H. B. Watts, J. H. Fletcher, and Mrs. H. A. Jones showed the best collections, while other good ones were staged by E. C. Lewis, W. J. Clemson, Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and T. F. Dwight. Hardy herbaceous plants were shown by the Blue Hill Nurseries, W. J. Clemson, Rea Bros. and Carl Blomberg, and contained many interesting species.

Oakes Ames exhibited two new hybrid nymphæas, one being a cross between a hybrid of N. Diana x N. Sturtevantii and N. ampla; and the other a hybrid of N. ampla x N. rubens. For the former a first-class certificate of merit was awarded. Mrs. E. A. Wilkie showed nymphæa Gladstoniana and N. Marliacea rosea, also a nice collection of roses, poppies, begonias, verbenas, etc.

Mrs. E. M. Gill and Miss H. B. Winter received the prizes for the vases of flowers. Mrs. Gill also showed roses and cannas.

The Hitchings & Company Bowling Trophy.

News Jottings.

Early closing is in order with the downtown florists. Six o'clock finds the most of the stores closed except where two brothers should face each other on the same street, and in that case, one waits for the other to close.

The outing of the club was a decided success. It was held on the spacious grounds, adjoining the houses of our president, James Hockey, at Pawtucket, and everybody enjoyed themselves. Much credit is due Mr. and Mrs. Hockey for the able manner in which they cared for the brethren and their friends.

A large number have signified their intention of attending the coming Convention in New York. All those going are asked to correspond with the committee in charge of arrangements (T. J. Johnston and Alex. Rennie) to assist them in getting a special rate from Providence.

The next regular meeting of the Florists and Gardeners' Club will be held August 9, at 96 Westminster street, and it is hoped every member will be there, as it is the last meeting before the Convention.

George Johnson, of Elmwood, will not be with us this year. He left here last week for Wyoming, on a visit to his son, and expects to be gone all Summer.

Sweeney Bros., is the name of a firm of florists that has recently started business at 446 Cranston street. They have the best wishes of the trade for their success.

Walter S. Hogg has been on a visit to friends in Long Island and New York.

T. J. Johnston and family are at Narragansett Pier for the Summer.

Rennie & Pino received their first shipment of Lilium Harrisii last week, and are busy filling orders. The bulbs opened up well.

Farquhar Macrae is making extensive alterations and additions to his place this year. When completed it will be one of the best, if not the best, in the state. A. M.

Mrs. J. B. Lawrence and E. C. Lewis staged tropæolums and Mr. Lewis also had hollyhocks and sweet peas. W. J. Clemson exhibited some very good allamandas. F. J. N.

Toronto.

There is but little change in business conditions. Our stores keep up a bright appearance, and do a little window decorating just to keep their hands in. Such flowers as are offered are generally good, but only really first-class roses and white asters find anything like a ready sale.

We have had several good showers lately and stock in the fields is improving very much.

Several of the craft from London, Ont., were in the city last Saturday. W. W. Gammage is rejoicing over the advent of a daughter.

There is considerable talk among the boys about the Convention at Montreal, and if all go down who are talking now, we will have quite a goodly party. T. M.

Worcester, Mass.

At the weekly horticultural show, held on Thursday last, there was a hall full of exhibits. The competition was so close on the 40 vases of sweet peas with ten exhibitors that it took two judges to decide who should win. H. B. Watts was first; C. H. Robinson, second; Mrs. H. A. Jones, third; A. A. Hixon, fourth.

The large exhibit of Phlox Drummondii was extra fine, as was the display of cut hollyhocks and others, among which was a large table reaching across the hall, covered with an elaborate showing of foliage plants and orchids. J.

For business and pleasure the New York Convention is to take the banner. He's a very slow man who misses it.

There'll be dancing and music at the New York Convention. What a gloriously good time is in store for the delegates?

Convention Matters.

No better guage of the enthusiasm of the local florists in connection with Convention matters can be cited than the recent largely attended Club meetings to which the gathering on Monday evening last was no exception, when, in shirt sleeves, the members tackled the various problems brought before them with commendable energy for a sultry July night.

President O'Mara occupied the chair, and handled things with his wonted ability. Twelve new members were elected. The Committee on Hall Decoration reported a proposed plan of ornamentation of the meeting room, and asked for donations of plants and flowers to assist in the work. Intending donors will oblige by notifying Chairman Nugent, 42 West 28th street, of what they can furnish. Mr. Nugent would also be glad to receive any suggestions or help looking to a grand presentation of what can be done in the way of decorating an interior that of itself lends little aid to the floral artist.

Chairman Rochrs, for the Committee on Sports, reported the selection of the alleys: that 12 individual prizes (with more to come probably), in addition to the Hitchings and Lord & Burnham cups, had been secured. The former cup will be given for the highest score in three games; the latter for the highest aggregate in three games.

Wm. J. Elliott announced that shooting grounds had been obtained near Cypress Hills, those previously mentioned not being securable. E. G. Asmus sent a notification to the effect that, as he would be abroad at date of the Convention, he could not officiate as captain of the local shooting team. He predicted the discomfiture of the local shooters by the Philadelphians, to even approach whom would, he said, necessitate two years constant practice. Nevertheless the New Yorkers will shoot.

The chairman of the Reception Committee, W. F. Sheridan, outlined the various enjoyable treats his committee intends providing for the delegates, and from his remarks a very pleasant time, indeed, is assured.

Mr. Weathered for the Printing and Advertising Committee, reported that the Souvenir book was now on the press, and that the advertising obtained for same had been beyond his most sanguine expectations. Those desiring extra copies of the book should advise Mr. Weathered as soon as possible.

Owing to the large crowd of delegates expected from outside points, and in order to fully accommodate the visitors, it was decided to furnish only two tickets to each member of the local club, for his own use and that of one member of his family, in connection with the Glen Island trip, for which no tickets will be sold.

A delegation will wait on the Mayor of Greater New York and invite him to open the Convention. Invitations will also be extended to the various heads of departments of the municipal government, and to the President of the Board of Education, who will be asked to announce to the city's school teachers that the Club extends to them and their scholars an invitation to visit the horticultural exhibition on a day most suitable to them. The Secretary of Agriculture, and the officers of the nearby Experiment Stations will also be invited to be present at the opening of the Convention.

The chairmen and secretaries of the various committees will meet in the Club rooms, Monday afternoon next, July 30, at 3 o'clock.

During the evening the Entertainment Committee served light refreshments.

Delegates desirous of securing the services of the Reception Committee in the matter of being met on arrival of trains, the obtaining of hotels, and in any other way, should notify Mr. Sheridan, 39 West 28th street, New York, as to the railroads by which they will travel, at the earliest possible moment.

As there appears to be a mistaken impression abroad, in some quarters, with regard to the reinstatement in the S. A. F. of those whose membership in same has lapsed, it has been considered advisable to call attention to the fact that all such may rejoin the Society, as new members, on payment of $5 each, which amount should at once be forwarded to Secretary Stewart, 67 Bromfield street, Boston, Mass., to insure the receipt of a badge and certificate of membership, the possession of which alone will allow of participation by individuals in the Convention privileges.

S. A. F. Trade Exhibit.

Entries with the superintendent indicate that this will be the grandest exposition of the latest improvements in all requisites for the greenhouse and other departments of the florists' business; models of greenhouses and apparatus, new and rare plants, garden implements, bulb, seeds and supplies, ever inaugurated. A very large amount of space has already been rented, and intending exhibitors should make application at once to the superintendent for such accommodations as they require. Revised rules relative to the judges' duties and methods of making awards may be had on application to the secretary or the superintendent of exhibition.

Special arrangements have been made for the accommodation, free of charge, of displays of plants or flowers intended for exhibition only; no sales to be made in connection therewith. Parties desiring to exhibit in this department must so specify in making application to the superintendent of the Trade Exhibition. Due recognition of valuable exhibits will be given by the Society.

Superintendent of exhibition, John P. Cleary, 60 Vesey street, New York, is anxious to hear from all intending exhibitors at the earliest possible moment. We would urge upon every progressive florist, and those in allied trades, to make an exhibit on this occasion. The opportunities are exceptional, and the money spent for space will be a paying investment.

Chicago to New York.

The arrangements for the special train by which the Chicago contingent will travel over the best road going, the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, are creating some stir, and a goodly number is assured. L. F. Vosburgh, city passenger agent of the L. S. & M. S., who will personally conduct the party, will be pleased to correspond with those interested, giving any further information; or either of the committee, Messrs. Grant, Rudd, or Kreitling, will be glad to supply particulars. The train will make the fewest possible stops, halting wherever there are convention-bound florists who wish to board it. The train leaves Chicago Sunday, 3 p. m., reaching Toledo 10:30 p. m.; Cleveland, 2 a. m. Monday. At the latter point it is expected to pick up a goodly number. Niagara Falls will be reached at 8 a. m. Monday; a stop over to see the Falls made, arriving at New York Central Depot Tuesday morning.

Buffalo, 1901.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

The S. A. F. should certainly hold its convention in Buffalo next year, and make the Exposition a drawing-card for every florist in the country. Never was there a better chance to call out the American seedling growers of new varieties of annuals, cannas, geraniums, etc., by offering S. A. F. medals and certificates for beds of new varieties! Being planted out on the exhibition grounds, the plants can be given a test. Let us see if America and its growers cannot produce novelties of the first water; or whether we have to rely wholly on Europe for these.

We have seen boilers, pots, moss, and Posey County ventilating "contrapshuns" every year; let us see some plants—and new plants at that, as they grow.

Buffalo offers every opportunity; therefore, "all aboard for Buffalo, 1901."

OBITUARY.

Wm. McKellar.

William McKellar died on Wednesday afternoon, July 18, at his late residence in Chillicothe, Ohio. He had suffered from La Grippe, muscular rheumatism finally causing his death.

Mr. McKellar was born in Paisley, Scotland, January 31, 1833. His parents died when he was a small boy. He was employed on the estate of the Duke of Argyle and it was there that he learned the gardening trade. He came to this country when about 17 years old, and worked at his vocation in Jersey City. From there he went to St. Louis and engaged in the same business, thence to Ironton, Ohio, where he married, after which he located at Chillicothe, Ohio, where he had lived for the past 37 years; 12 children blessed this union, eight of whom still live to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate father. His son, C. W. McKellar, is a partner in the firm of McKellar & Winterson, Chicago, and is well known in the trade. Deceased was a member of Tecumseh Lodge, Odd Fellows, and at his request the funeral was conducted by the order at 4 o'clock, Saturday afternoon last.

Mr. McKellar will be greatly missed by the craft in general. One of his specialities was the Niphetos rose which he grew as near to perfection as it can be grown. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and had been an elder for the past 13 years.

E. G. GILLETT.

George C. Bliss.

George C. Bliss, florist, New Bedford, Mass., died at his home July 22, after a brief illness. Apoplexy was the cause. Mr. Bliss was born in New Bedford. He attended the public schools of the city, and after finishing his schooling, went to work for his grandfather, the late William Howard, one of the first to engage in business as a florist in New Bedford. Learning the business, Mr. Bliss was given it to conduct, which he did up to a short time prior to the demise of Mr. Howard. At one time Mr. Bliss was city forester. He was in his 46th year.

Thomas Lewis.

Thomas Lewis, who for several years was a florist in Indianapolis, having his place of business at the location now occupied by Bertermann Bros., died in the hospital in that city, July 17, of locomotor ataxia, aged 52 years. He was born at Plainfield. At one time he was in charge of the Lake Side and Winona Parks, near Warsaw. Deceased was a soldier in the War of the Rebellion, and had been afflicted for years with partial blindness, the result of paralysis. He leaves a widow and three small children

The old firm of Baur & Smith will remain in control as before.

MARION, IND.—The Marion Floral Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $2,500. Incorporators, J. W. Bernhard and Herbert, both of Marion.

Maxson; vice-president, Judge J. M. Davis; secretary and treasurer, C. A. Krill. The principal stock will be held by the officers, E. J. Phelps, who will be elected a director, and W. C. Cook, formerly with the Dunkley Floral Company. Mr. Cook will be manager.

The Market.

There is little to tell about the flower trade this week. We are right in the dullest season of the year and the dullness is felt more than usually at this time by shippers, owing to the great falling off in orders from the various watering places, Newport, R. I., in particular. Whether the Summer resorts are suffering from a dearth of business, or are being supplied from other sources we do not know, but it is evident that New York is not being called upon to any great extent; and the decrease of these out-of-town orders tends to make this Summer's business very quiet indeed.

Gladioli are the most popular flowers at present; thousands are being received from Floral Park, (there are almost 90 acres planted at that place). The blooms sell at $1 per 100, and their cheapness makes them the best available flowers on the market for window or other decorative work.

Sweet peas are not so plentiful as they were and it is somewhat easier to clear them out, although no advance in price has been attempted.

The best lily of the valley is bringing $2 per 100. Asters are numerous and do not meet with much favor. The best selling colors have been the purple and the white; these kinds are offered at 50c. per 100, other colors going at 30c. per 100.

Harrisii and auratum lilies are not so much in evidence as they were last week.

Plenty of good smilax and adiantum are on the market; but there is a very poor demand for them. Galax leaves have met with a fair call which is a safe indication that the bulk of the flower business doing is composed of funeral work, as, owing to their better lasting qualities, galax leaves are preferred during hot weather for that purpose. Roses are not very plentiful. The warm spell we have been having has not been conducive to cutting high-grade flowers, and but few special or fancy blooms are to be had. Carnations are fairly plentiful yet, and no change in their value has been noticed.

A Plant Market Asked.

The New York Market Florists' Association met last Monday evening and ratified certain resolutions that had been drawn up with a view to petitioning the Council for a new plant market. Councilman Ryder, who represents the Clinton Market district, presented the resolutions to the City Council on Tuesday afternoon, and through his efforts that body adopted them and referred them to the Board of Aldermen for immediate consideration. It would seem that at last the long-looked for market is almost in sight, and that the plant growers are taking steps along the right lines to secure results.

Jottings.

Painters and decorators were noticed at work in the Cut Flower Company's store and in those of several of the commission men this week. Many visitors are expected during the Convention, and everything is going to be made as attractive as possible.

Lager & Hurrell, orchid specialists, Summit, N. J., have just completed the erection of a new greenhouse 25x150 feet. The house is of iron framework and was built by the Lord & Burnham Co.

The committee on Hall Decoration met at the Grand Central Palace Wednesday afternoon last, and decided on a plan of decoration for that part of the interior of the building to be occupied during Convention time. With the known able talent for decorative work that the individual members of this committee possess, there is no fear but that the Convention hall will present an excellent example of decorative art, from a florist's standpoint.

W. F. Sheridan, together with Robert Craig and John Westcott, of Philadelphia, spent Wednesday fishing in Barnegat Bay.

Secretary Charles Schenck of the Sports Committee, informs us that Chicago's bowling team has entered the list for the tournament.

On the exhibition table at last Monday's meeting of the Florists' Club, there was a bunch of unnamed seedling gladioli, shown by John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y. Some fine mottled varieties were among them, and the spikes were all of good size.

C. B. Weathered left Tuesday afternoon for a brief visit to Detroit.

Visitors this week included Francis A. Fitzell, seedsman and florist, Yonkers, N. Y.; J. Rupert, representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa., and Mr. Williams foreman for W. N. Rudd, Mount Greenwood, Ill.

Secretary Loder, of the National Florists' Board of Trade leaves next week on a business trip to Kanopolis, Kan.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society held its first annual excursion to Swinefield Bridge, July 25. An enjoyable time was spent.

The National Florists' Board of Trade is showing its interest in the coming Convention by the issuance of an illustrated circular, tendering the freedom of the Board's offices to the delegates.

C. W. Ward is home from Detroit, where he has been staying for several weeks.

The greenhouses of Chas. Zeller & Son, Flatbush, N. Y., were entered by thieves last Sunday night. Several orange trees in fruit and some palms were stolen. It is evident that the theft was committed by some one familiar with handling plants, as two araucarias were found in the well on the day following, where they had been dropped by the thieves. The plants were tied up nicely, and this could only have been done by some one who was used to the work. The space on the benches, where the oranges had been taken from, had also been filled in by spreading the remaining plants to cover it. As Zeller's oranges are so well-known, there is some chance that they will be recovered.

Trade Notes.

For the midsummer season, the past week has been a very fair one for the cut-flower business. White flowers are mostly in demand, as, outside of funeral work, the stores are not doing much. The supply of stock is now at the lowest point, and from now on will increase. Beauty from young stock have been coming in. These have stems from 14 to 16 inches in length, and the best flowers sell at $1.50 per dozen. Kaiserin, from new stock, are also arriving, and sell at $3 and $4 per 100. Asters are becoming more plentiful; prices ranging from 75c. to $1.50 per 100.

Jottings.

Everyone who can is away at the seaside resorts fishing, etc. The excessive heat of the past two weeks has told on many. Last week this city recorded the hottest six successive days in 20 years. In spite of all this, some of the club members gather every night at the bowling alleys, and scores of 219 and 214 are on the record board.

Wm. McKesick, formerly bookkeeper for S. S. Pennock, has started as a purchasing agent for cut flowers. He will not carry stock, merely purchase on order.

Henry Pennock has purchased a locomobile. He made a trip to Cape May the past week. DAVID RUST.

Sweet peas around North Adams, Mass., have suffered severely from a green louse. One grower found a solution of whale oil soap, and water an efficacious remedy.

You'll want space in the Trade Exhibit. Manager Cleary, of 60 Vesey street, New York, is now booking orders. His last call has been issued.

A Modern Greenhouse Plant.

Our illustrations show the mammoth greenhouse establishment of A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., to whom we are indebted for the following particulars concerning the range:

"The location selected for the houses was an east slope, with too much pitch for the houses, necessitating a cut at the upper end, averaging about 5 feet, with a grade at the lower end averaging about 10 feet, still leaving an incline of 3 feet per 100 feet. To hold the grade I built a heavy retaining wall about 6 feet wide at the bottom, 4 feet wide at the top; said wall forms back side of the head-house, in which are placed the steam and hot water mains with the distributing pipes to each house. To prevent the houses from settling where the grading was done, we excavated for each post and placed solid brick piers 12 feet deep, 3 feet into the original soil. The wisdom of this expense has been proven by the perfect alignment maintained by the houses, while the ground around them has settled.

"You will see by looking at the picture that some of the houses are even span, some three-quarter, with short span to the south, and some three-quarter span, with long span to the south. Back of the latter is a lean-to containing smilax beds. The houses are iron structure. Near the center of the plant and immediately back of the retaining wall, I built a large cold storage room with vent pipes extending up between the greenhouses. Being deep and well shaded it makes an excellent room for cold storage.

"The floor of the head house is about 10 feet lower than the floor line of the houses; this makes the gable of the head-house about 25 feet high. All of the houses, except those for smilax, have ventilators at the top and sides, making it possible to give a perfect circulation of air at all times. The ventilation is operated by the 'Evans Challenge Ventilating Apparatus,' except where small ones were needed, in which cases I have used the 'Evans Little Giant.'

"The drainage is accomplished by a system of underground pipes so that the accumulation of water between each house is carried into the main aqueduct which leads into the rear of the property, where it runs off on the surface.

"You ask especially about the piping, which I think would require a small book if I should give you all the details. When I decided to erect these houses I simply wrote to Mr. Dean, president of the Dean Boiler Co., of Boston, told him what I had to be heated, and stated that I wanted two separate systems—a steam plant with capacity for two-thirds of the heating, and a hot water plant with capacity for about one-third. My object in having hot water is to enable me to use underneath heat in solid beds, and I have found it to be very advantageous. Desiring this feature I also put in enough hot water so that in case of an accident with the steam plant I can force the hot water plant enough to keep the houses from freezing, which, as you see, gives us a factor of safety which we otherwise would not have. I do not like hot water for Fall and Spring use, because there is too much heat to be disposed of after sunrise, whereas the steam can be cooled off quickly.

"The steam piping which Mr. Dean planned for us is something new, and it has proved as valuable as it is novel. It is what is called the single pipe system. All of the piping was planned with the expectation that at some future time I will build more houses, which can be connected without making any changes by simply connecting to the main already installed.

"To each boiler is connected an 8-inch steam pipe leading into one large common steam main. Each of these pipes is provided with an 8-inch angle valve, so that any boiler, or number of boilers, can be shut off independently. There is also in each of these pipes a double swing joint, so that the expansion of the main or branches can in no way affect the boilers.

"Leading from the boiler room through a tunnel under the head-house is a 16-inch steam main, which rises near back wall of head-house, passes over the hot water mains emptying into two 12-inch steam mains, which run along the back wall of the head-house, pitching downward in either direction, reducing in size as the branches are taken off.

"To supply steam for each three-quarter span rose house and 8-foot lean-to, a 5-inch main is taken from the side of the large main, rising vertically about 2 feet from which point they incline upward 1 inch in 4 feet into the house, where it branches off to the heating pipes, as shown on the plan. Each of the heating pipes continues to incline upwards to the far end of the house, on the same grade as the houses, i. e., 3 feet per 100 feet. At the far end the pipes are supplied with a cap and air valve. At the end of each house, next to steam main, each heating pipe has a valve which controls its respective line of pipe.

"The heating pipes are only connected together at and controlled from one end of the houses, thus saving much valuable time walking from end to end of houses to open valves, as the houses are 300 feet long. These pipes are carefully supported so as to allow for expansion and contraction. They are 2 and 2½ inches in diameter, 2 inches being the smallest pipe that can be used on this system in houses of this length; 2½ inches is the size recommended for the houses.

"There is not an independent return pipe for each of the different houses. The water condensed in each pipe returns along the bottom of same, back into the 5-inch pipe, which carries it to the large steam main through which it flows in the same direction that the steam travels until it reaches the far end of same, at which place it drops down and returns to the boiler through an independent return pipe designed for that purpose.

"For each 15½-foot house there is a 4½-inch branch taken from the side of the steam main, rising vertically, entering the houses, sub-divided and valved the same as in the large houses. By taking the pipe from the side of the main it gives a swing joint, so that the expansion of the large main does not have a tendency to rack or pull the houses apart. The 4½-inch branches for the 15½-foot houses are taken off between the houses, so that half of either house is supplied from these branches. This was done to save piping.

"You will notice by the sectional view of the rear wall of head-house, and main pipes shown on the upper left-hand corner of the plan of piping, that we have a walk below the main pipes, and a walk above the main pipes, so that the pipes practically occupy little or no valuable space. For the same reason the large mains were brought across under the head-house, to avoid the shadow which they would make if placed overhead.

"Referring again to the diagram, in upper left-hand corner, showing section of wall, mains and supports for same, I wish to call attention to the special manner in which the pipes are supported. Over the horizontal pipes which are bedded in the wall and supported at the opposite end by upright pipes, were placed two iron hooks, into one end of which was connected an ordinary turn buckle. Into the bottom of the turn buckle and the hook opposite same was connected a heavy iron chain, and into same were laid the mains. This not only allowed perfect freedom for expansion and contraction, but was of great value when installing the piping, as a few twists of the turn buckle would throw the pipes into perfect alignment.

"By referring to the plan of piping you will observe that the steam main leading to the right is quite large at the far end. It was left in this condition so that I could at any future time connect to same, and add the four additional houses as suggested on the ground plan. By looking at the opposite side of the ground plan you will see that there is room for two small houses besides a large driveway. When all of these additional houses have been built the boiler house will be exactly in the middle of the plat.

"To those who have not had experience with boilers it might appear that our pipes are unduly large, but in our old plant the largest steam main is an 8-inch pipe. During the Winter just past water hammering became sufficiently severe to split a 6-inch pipe, making it necessary to replace same during severe weather. We have had no such trouble with our new plant, and do not anticipate trouble of any kind.

"The connections to the hot water boilers, both flow and return, are 8-inch pipes valved with swing joints, the same as the steam pipes, but they are planned for two flow and two return pipes to each boiler. The 14-inch hot water main parallels the 16-inch steam main through the tunnel, rises up the rear wall of head house and distributes into two 10-inch hot water mains, which incline upward in either direction with branches for each house taken out of the side of the main, rising vertically and entering the houses with distributing pipes, the same as the steam pipes. The flow pipes rise gradually from the boiler to the far end of houses; and returns pitch downward from that point back to boilers.

"For each three-quarter span house with lean-to there is a 4½-inch hot water branch with its sub-divisions inside of houses, and for each 15½-feet house there is a 3-inch hot water branch, with its sub-divisions. In the 15½-foot houses there are two solid beds at the bottom of which there is about one foot of loose laid stones, on top of which is the soil. Through the bottom of the stones, in a little archway, are laid two 2-inch hot water pipes valved at both ends, so that in case of a leak at an unaccessible point they can be entirely shut off. These pipes are for underneath heat. The hot water pipes, both mains and branches, are supported in the same manner as the steam mains and branches. The main hot water return pipe parallels the main flow pipe along the rear wall of head-house, and lies between it and the large steam pipe in tunnel. Being large pipe with sufficient capacity the hot water pipes in houses farthest from the boilers heat up as quickly as those in the houses nearest to the boilers, showing that the system is well planned.

"These hot water mains are planned for future connections for additional houses the same as the steam mains.

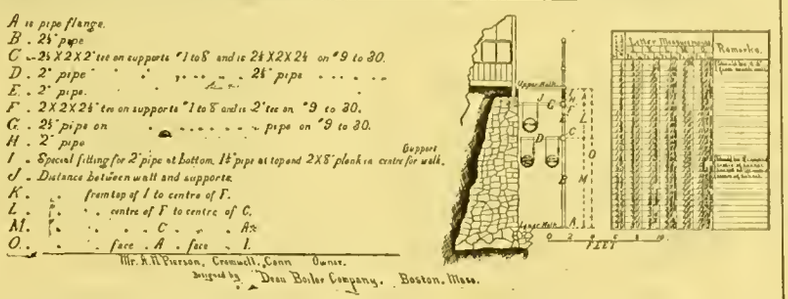
"The hot water heating pipes in the three-quarter span houses with lean-tos are all 3-inch pipes, while those in the smaller houses are 2-inch pipes.

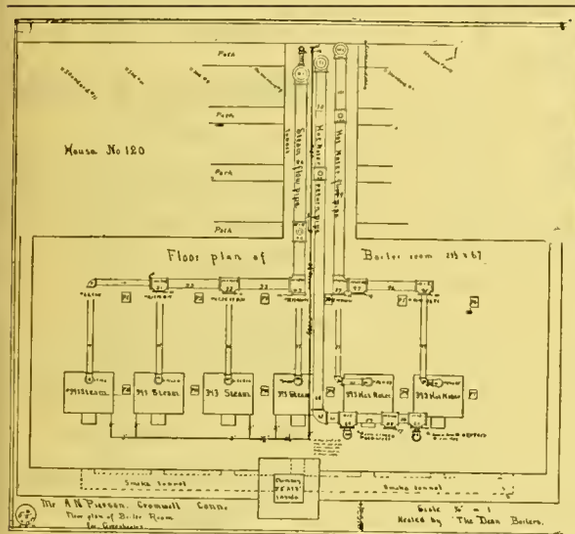
"The boilers are manufactured by the Dean Boiler Company, of Boston, Mass. They are cast iron sectional boilers, each section being complete within itself, i. e., each section forms its own outside wall surface, forms its own headers (through the large push nipple) for both steam and hot water, has its own direct fire surface in the fire-pot, has its own indirect fire surface apart from the fire-pot, forms its own ash-pit, and takes just one grate bar. This being so, the capacity of the boiler can be increased at will, by simply removing the front section, putting in one or more intermediate sections, and returning the front to its position. The heating surface in the boiler is confined to side wall and ceiling surface. The boiler is practically self-cleaning, all of the fire surface is accessible to a brush which can be manipulated through the fire or clean-out doors; however, the only cleaning we have ever done has been to brush out at the bottom of smoke ways on the sides, which is a very easy matter, consuming but little time.

"The connections between the grate bars are all made outside of the boiler, which renders it very convenient to detach them whenever such is necessary.

"The manufacturer furnishes asbestos cement for covering the entire outside surface of the boiler, which retains the heat most effectively.

"Last, but not least, I have found the boilers to be very economical in the consumption of fuel, which, in my estimation, is one of the points to be considered when placing an order for a boiler."





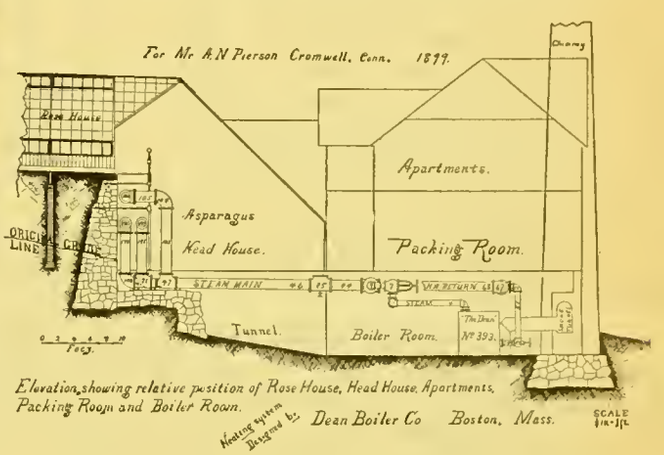
Some of the earlier rooted plants will now be making an early bud. Some growers call it the Summer bud, some, the July bud, and others, the first crown. What to call it is of little moment. It isn't the bud to keep; rub it out and take on the best of the shoots that appear round it. If kept to the one shoot, of course the stem will be stronger and the flower correspondingly larger; but if a medium grade flower only is needed, three shoots can be taken up from this "break," and this is the system generally followed by the commercial grower.

Staking should be finished before the plants are very high. It is more than twice the work if the plants are falling about all over before this is done. Some growers prefer to use cheap string, but we use a wire stake, held up by a wire running lengthways of the bench, and catching the stake about half way up. Tie each stake to the wire securely, or use a rubber band, and then you have a support that you can tie your plants to firmly, which is a great help sometimes if the stem gets crooked.

We have been pestered by an insect that gnaws a ring around the plants at the ground line. This pest, unless we are mistaken, is the army worm. You will find him in a hole in the soil during the day time, and if you see a plant with the bark stripped off at the bottom, it will pay you to look for him.

If the bench plants have made good growth and the soil is full of roots, a light mulch of rotten cow manure will be a great help at this time. It keeps the soil from drying out so rapidly, and the way the roots will run into it will soon show you how they appreciate it.

The novelties are now beginning to show their individuality, so far as growth is concerned, and so far Colonel Appleton takes the lead. It is a good, clean grower, comes away freely from the bud, and conducts itself excellently throughout. Comparing Appleton with the growth that Gold Mine is making, and recalling that these two varieties were the chief contestants for the silver cup offered by C. S. A. last year, for the seedling scoring most points, it looks as if the Society made a mistake in not awarding the prize to Appleton. Time will show when both kinds are more generally grown. Souci is a dwarf grower and seems to be afflicted with a peculiar leaf disease, which, however, it may grow out of. White Bonnaffon has got to pick up a good deal, if it is going to make the ideal commercial white. The foliage runs small and measly, and the plants at the present time may be classed as unsatisfactory. Over-propagation may be at the bottom of the trouble, and the first year is hardly a fair criterion of a variety.



June struck cuttings that it is purposed to flower in six-inch pots, should now get their final potting, and if the pots can be plunged in some coal ashes, spent hops, or any like material, the plants will be materially benefited. All pot plants, in fact, are better plunged for the next two months, unless you can afford the time to stand over them with the hose.

IORA.

Roses.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

In your reply to query No. 136 you recommend the growing of roses in pots for the planting of a house that will not be ready for planting until September. In California many of the leading growers for the San Francisco market never plant their houses until September, using low budded, field-grown plants, which are, by that time, perfectly dormant; and the same will produce their first crop of flowers within six weeks, and will continue to bloom throughout the season, producing the finest quality of flowers. In many cases, too, they are carried over into the next season, with excellent results; and I see no reason why the same results may not be obtained in the eastern states.

New Orleans, La.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its annual excursion on July 14, again to Grand Isle. The members chartered a steamer and left Saturday morning early, returning Monday evening. It was one of the best outings ever enjoyed by the Society. All kinds of sports were indulged in—fishing, hunting, shooting, bathing, etc. The wants of the inner man were well looked after by the Society, and almost everyone had private stores in case of emergency.

The island itself is just about the same as we found it last year. The great storm of 1894 seems to have discouraged the planters. Cauliflowers are grown here to perfection during the Winter months and shipped all through the western and eastern states; also cucumbers. The soil is pure white sand, and the only fertilizer used is fish, which is added by the ton.

There was a grand ball given on the Island in honor of the visitors, which both the old and young members thoroughly enjoyed.

Horticultural Society.

The annual election of officers of the Horticultural Society took place on the 20th with the following result: Paul Abele, president; C. Eble, vice-president; John Eblen, treasurer; Dan Newsham, secretary.

After the election a nice supper was served downstairs, and a pleasant time was spent until a late hour.

Jottings.

News just received from Europe tells us that C. Holst is having a good time on the Rhine. He is expected home in September. Mr. Fonta is expected back here in October, after spending two years in France.

M. Cook & Son have just built a new palm house, 65 x 20 feet, butted glass. They are now busy re-glazing their show house; they have added an extra house of roses this year; one house of Perle is looking grand. They have re-leased their store on Canal street. U. J. Virgin is building several dwelling houses on his back square.

E. Valdejo is building two houses, and A. H. Ahten is building three houses, each 200 feet long, for cucumbers.

P. Chopin is about taking a store on St. Charles avenue.

J. H. Menard will remove to a new store now building on Barronne street in front of the new theatre. A new firm has just started to build rose and carnation houses. They intend to supply our home florists, and have established themselves a short distance out of town, on some of the best rose land that is to be found anywhere in the states. The writer hopes success will follow their venture.

John St. Mard is building a small house for palms, etc.

Abele Bros. will put in a new heater this Summer.

Our seedmen are just beginning to get ready for business, which commences next month.

C. H. Eichling reports a great increase in the commission seed business; he has boxes out in most of the southern states.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—P. R. Quinlan has purchased the entire plant of Smith, Powell & Co. Robert Bard will continue in active charge of the greenhouse plant as heretofore. His stock of roses is, if possible, finer this year than usual.

L. E. Marquisee has greatly improved the appearance of his plant by bringing each house in a line with his frontage. The Marquis will be seen to better advantage; now 'tis in the field and doing splendidly. I took a look at the White Marquis through a wire screen (it is jealously guarded). The habit of the plant is identical with that of The Marquis.

AUBURN, N. Y.—A pretty conceit as a decoration for a wedding was recently effected by Alfred Patrick in banking a mirror from the ground to the ceiling with fancy-leaved caladiums, Cocos Weddeliana and Asparagus plumosus. The base was filled with caladiums and Adiantum Farleyense. One rich group consisted of Caladium argyrites, and other silver-mottled varieties with the scarlet, Anthurium Scherzerianum. Mr. Patrick is busy rebuilding and making an effort to be through in time to don his convention garb.

GENEVA, N. Y.—W. & T. Cass anticipate a big demand for h. p. roses the coming Fall. If the season is propitious they may make an exhibit at the Pan-American, having several thousands planted, in anticipation for such a purpose.

State of Trade.

The past week the weather has been cooler, hence roses were a trifle better in quality, perhaps; still it's hard to find, in any quantity, really good stock. But then the business does not call for a great deal. It does seem as though really good roses are scarcer in the Summer now than they were a few years ago; every effort seems centered in preparation for Fall and Winter crops. Yet there is considerable trade in Summer, taking it all together, and good teas would now bring easily $4 to $5. Beauty are also shy, although some shorts are coming in from newly planted stock, that tells one it won't be long before better material is here.

Some good white carnations are to be seen of the varieties Mary Wood and Flora Hill. Field-grown flowers are now coming in apace. There are sufficient for all demands. Gladioli, largely of a very common type, go at $2, and below, while choice stock is worth $3 to $4. As yet the supply of asters is of manageable dimensions, and the flowers of only ordinary quality, but every day shows an improvement, with signs of monstrous stocks a little later on.

Round About.

Charles W. McKellar is back at his post. The firm sent a handsome floral piece to the funeral of his late father. It was a standing crescent and lyre. Their large store is now undergoing the regular Summer overhauling.

The Klehms, at Arlington Heights, entertained a bevy of the lady employes of J. C. Vaughan's store on Sunday. They came back loaded down with flowers, and were a happy looking lot.

W. J. Smyth, 31st street, will take a trip round the Thousand Islands, thence to the Convention. His brother, Harry, with E. Wienhoeber, will go with the contingent. The route just suits him, as Albany is his old home.

E. C. Amling took a trip to New Castle and Richmond, Ind., calling on his consignors there, and looking over the stock for another year.

George and Peter Reinberg have remodeled and greatly improved their wholesale places in the Atlas block, giving much more counter room, which was greatly needed.

Susie Flora, daughter of John B. Weeks, was married at her father's home, July 19, to Dr. A. W. Purrington, Sangerville, Maine, where she will be at home after August 1. Susie was born in this city, her father having the distinction of being the first bouquet maker employed in the first retail flower store opened in Chicago.

Nick Reading has bought six houses of John Zender on the Ridge. These houses have heretofore been used for growing Beauty; they will hereafter be devoted to carnations.

A. C. Kohlbrand, for a long time manager for Klehm's, afterward with the Kennicotts, will, subsequent to a short vacation, join the staff of E. C. Amling.

Weiland & Risch have a white sport from carnation G. H. Crane, which they believe will be a splendid thing.

George Reinberg's roses have greatly improved, his La France, Kaiserin and Meteor especially. Even Bridesmaid and Bride are good for the season. He is also cutting some Liberty.

Plant Culture

NOW READY FOR DELIVERY.

FORMERLY ADVERTISED AS

BY GEORGE W. OLIVER, PROPAGATOR TO THE U. S. BOTANIC GARDEN, WASHINGTON, D.C. AND LATE OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN, EDINBURGH.

A working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist or Gardener, and those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer.

The plants dealt with comprise those which are commercially handled by Florists, Gardeners and Nurserymen, and include Florists' Flowers, Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Annuals, Shrubs, Hardy and Tender Vines, and a chapter on miscellaneous subjects in connection with the above.

This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound to stand rough handling and plenty of it. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

A WEEKLY MEDIUM OF INTERCHANGE FOR FLORISTS, NURSERYMEN, SEEDSMEN AND THE TRADE IN GENERAL.

Vol. XII. No. 31. NEW YORK, AUGUST 4, 1900. One Dollar Per Year.

LILIUM HARRISII IS NOW READY

And we are pleased to state that our bulbs have never been finer. Bulbs are exceptionally fine, clean and bright, and running well up to size. We are very particular about the Harrisii that we handle. Our stock is not picked up indiscriminately from small growers. We have our bulbs grown for us by only a few selected growers, whose stocks are the healthiest, and for which we pay the highest prices. Our fields are the healthiest and best on the Island, and we are sure that our stock will prove unusually satisfactory. Certainly the bulbs have never been finer than they are this season. If you have not already covered your wants in this line, we will be glad to have your order. Bulbs are ready for immediate shipment.

WE OFFER THESE, IN CASE LOTS, AT $18.00 PER CASE.

5-7's contain 400 bulbs to the case; 7-9's, 200 bulbs to the case; 9-11's, 100 bulbs to the case. If cash is remitted with order, we will supply for only $17 per case.

European Notes.

With the thermometer playing about between 95 degrees in London and 102 degrees in Paris, your readers can form their own conclusions as to the condition and prospects of our growing crops. Only beet and mangel appear to flourish, as the maggot in the carrot is assuming quite alarming proportions. It is, however, with reference to next year's crops of cabbage, etc., that we are now most anxious, and we have already good cause for alarm. We shall see.

S. A. F. Meeting Features.

Recent articles in the trade paper columns lead one to think further, then to jot down thoughts that may lead others to think in a way that mature ideas may be formulated ready for expression at convention time.

As recently touched on, methods of accounts or bookkeeping for the trade will, no doubt, at an early day, receive full attention of its needs through the enterprise of publishers in such lines. If the need shows up, the supplying of it will undoubtedly be ready forthwith.

Before the S. A. F. should be again led into attempting the collecting or commercial agency business, the experience of its former attempts at that which resulted in a failure, should be looked up, as an asset in pointers or hints for renewed action. The co-operation that failed to co-operate in the fine points necessary to bring about a needed whole, or oneness of action.

The S. A. F. can, as rightfully due to itself, give the matter of exhibits its better and more consistent attention. As it has been, the "Trade Exhibit" is a splendid talk-about-in-advance-item. And little more than this talk is awarded it. The rules and regulations need revising. Conditions of exhibits change, and the rules need changing as frequently. It now is most evident that a position of manager of exhibitions should be made a position on the Society's official staff, instead of only a member in a local florists' organization.

The Society now should rise to the occasion of attempting to make its existence and influence felt right in the Pan-American Exposition of 1901, by co-operation with that organization. The Exposition no doubt would meet with open arms the plan of the S. A. F., offering prizes of award to be passed on by S. A. F. judges, on exhibits that would be seasonably in perfection at convention time. Should the 1901 convention be held in Buffalo, the extra cost of judging these exhibits by the S. A. F. would be practically nothing. If the Exposition officials are approached soon enough, they no doubt would be pleased to reserve with specific dates certain spaces or beds for exhibits under S. A. F. auspices. After such exhibits are installed, they can be properly (and modestly) S. A. F.-labeled, to the Society's needed advertising advantage. In adaptable cases, as regards nature and importance of exhibit, perhaps awards may be given by both organizations.

As its name implies, the Pan-American (meaning all-American) Exposition is to be purely an American affair, as is also the S. A. F. They should work hand in hand to accomplish the most good possible.

Action entered into at the coming meeting, followed up by executive committee details, could result in such being handled properly through the year. The hope of the writer is that the matter will be brought into the early sessions of the convention and forthwith receive heary support for a progressive and active finish.

What's in a Name?

Editor Florists' Exchange.

A good name is always desirable. A name that means something is its own seal of worthiness. A conglomeration is so much nonsense. There was a time in the history of the Society of American Florists when a change of base might have been future capital and stability. The auxiliary societies should have become departments of the Alma Mater instead of separate and distinct organizations, as they will now remain. There is only one name that would have covered the ground—a grand name, simple yet comprehensive—Horticulture. It would have secured a national charter—for those who wanted it.

And the S. A. F.'s constitution and by-laws needed revision badly. The present conglomeration would hardly credit a school boy's composition. One of the several anomalies is that the matter of secretary's salary is a part and parcel of the constitution (instead of by-laws—where it naturally belongs). As it stands, one might infer that the Society was created for the benefit and support of a secretary! However, as but little attention is given to its laws and precepts, the thing can be lightly passed over.

The old S. A. F. is preferable to the additional A. O. H. The phrase, "ornamental horticulture," is something of a misnomer, any way. Horticulture is ornamental in its art and expression, whether natural or artificial. It is superficial to limit its scope. I suppose this superfluity was tacked on to the S. A. F. as a tail to the kite, to sort of give it equilibrium and respectability. Now, the truth of the matter is that the tail never hankered for the "kite," nor the kite for the "tail"! The S. A. F. is more like the new-fashioned kite, that don't require any tail to make it "go."

The S. A. F. can be useful, and best serve its purpose in its own prescribed limits, and it should not hanker for delicacies outside its jurisdiction. Its present constitution would hardly survive a national charter, and, no use talking, the elusive retailer, as a class, will not socially affiliate with the grower.

But then there will be a "survival of the fittest," so we might as well follow Mr. Rudd's advice—"return to our knitting." Yes, and "darn the stocking."

A Warning Against Fraud. — The Ohio Experiment Station has just received the following letter from Marion County: "There is a company of men canvassing this territory for fruit trees. They are putting in what they call a 'model orchard.' They claim to be working directly for and in the interest of your station, which gives them quite a leverage with a great many farmers." To this letter the Station replies that it sells no fruit trees of any description, and all persons who claim to represent it in the manner indicated are swindlers and should be arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses.

Laws against Weeds and Insects.— For all the ineffectual efforts to keep out insects, fungi and weeds by law have been so freely shown to be supreme folly, Canada, as our readers know, prohibited the importation from the United States of nursery products, in order to get immunity from the San José scale. These pests have numerous paths of travel without going through custom-house gates, and it was predicted the San José scale would soon show itself to our friends over the border. Dr. Fletcher, a Canadian entomologist, has stated, recently that the San José scale has become the most serious pest that has ever occurred in Canadian orchards. But the law is still left as a scarecrow to the scale that is laughing literally "behind its back."—Meehan's Monthly for August.

The nursery inspectors of the State of Maryland have about completed their work for this season. So far as determined all the nurseries are in good condition. The nurserymen are growing about the same amount and kind of stock as heretofore.

Cincinnati.

Trade Items.

Business remains about the same as last reported. Stock is a little scarce in some lines. Asters are beginning to fill a long-felt want; they sell readily at $1.50 to $2 per 100 for good stock. Carnations are now coming in from the field and they answer well for funeral work. The weather is yet warm, but showers, now and then, keep all vegetation growing nicely. Carnation plants in the field never looked better than they do at the present time.

Thursday afternoon quite a party of the Cincinnati craft will take a trolley ride to Hamilton, Ohio, to visit John Lodder & Son, also to see Friend Theodore Bock. Final arrangements will then be made for putting a float in the fall festival parade, September 20.

Owing to a heavy all-day rain, the florists' annual outing, held at Mt. Lookout Park last Wednesday, was not a huge success.

Correspondence received from Lexington, Ky., states that there will be about nine persons who will attend the convention in New York.

E. G. GILLETT.

Grand Rapids.

The weather continues hot day time, with cool balmy breezes by night. This has been a busy week for funeral orders; indeed, they have been so numerous as to use up every available flower in town. Many out of town orders had to be refused. As most of the carnations are thrown out, the supply is very low. With roses, several growers have several houses each, that can be allowed to come in any time, so we may soon have a fresh crop of this stock.

The various carnation crops are looking good, but that of the Grand Rapids Floral Co. is certainly the best in this locality, their plants being remarkably large and fine for this early in the season.

The nearness of the Convention does not make much stir among our florists. But two, as yet, have declared they will go. Henry Smith and George F. Crabb will accompany the Chicago contingent.

G. F. Plowman, of Iron Mountain, Mich., was a recent visitor. He reports trade as having been very good.
