The Canadian authorities have decided to admit nursery stock into the Dominion, subject to inspection and fumigation, between the dates October 10 and November 10. Secretary Wm. Pitkin, of Rochester, N. Y., of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association, has written to the authorities asking that the date for shipping nursery stock be left open until January 1.

The following represent the values of nursery stock exported from the United States during 1899 to the countries named: Germany, $15,221; Mexico, $7,763; Canada, $35,974.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

PALMS AND OTHER DECORATIVE PLANTS should be gone over carefully now, and thoroughly cleaned. Where the stock is not very large, there is no better method of cleaning the plants than by sponging them all over with a mixture of Fir Tree Oil and warm water, or some other effective insecticide. Where the plants are too numerous to admit of the sponging being done, dipping the smaller plants overhead in the mixture is the quickest way to treat them, while the larger specimens will require to be syringed thoroughly. By having the stock perfectly free from bugs and scale before heavy firing is under way, the pests can be kept down to a minimum, otherwise they will be a great source of trouble all Winter.

AZALEAS—When newly imported plants arrive, immerse the roots in a pail of water for a few minutes—if they are at all dry. Allow them to drain off for an hour or so before potting; then put them into pots that are only about one inch larger than the balls. These will provide all the room the plants need. Pot very firmly, using a thin lath to press the soil down the side of the pot.

ERICAS—That these are among the prettiest plants for basket work at holiday times is evidenced by the increasing numbers that are grown and put on the market every year. This is the best time to get in a stock. Pot them firmly, allow for plenty of drainage, keep the plants in a cool house, and there is no subject easier to grow.

To Remove White Lead Shading.

Since the removal of white lead from greenhouse roofs is a tedious and more or less difficult job, the florist should welcome any method that will lighten this labor and reduce the risk of the breakage of glass. When this shading is to be applied as a liquid with naphtha, by means of a spray pump, the powdered paint should be purchased; not the paint as it is usually bought in drums or cans. If the latter be used the shade will be much harder to remove in any case, and the method of removing it described below will work much less effectively. The reason for this is that the oil in the mixed paint forms a coating of itself upon the glass, independent of the lead, and is not acted upon by the acetic acid used to remove the lead, only a portion of which can be reached. If adulterated white lead be used the recipe will be useless, because the adulterant commonly used in white lead is barium sulphate, a substance not soluble in acetic acid.

When pure lead is used, mix one part of strong vinegar to four of water, or one part of acetic acid to about 15 of water and apply with a fine nozzle direct to the roof. If any drips down it may be used over again since it will have been applied too copiously. Some of the white lead will have been dissolved in this drip and it will not be quite so effective a second time. After application, the usual rubbing may commence, when it will be found that the shade will come off much more easily. The reason for this is that the white lead is changed from the basic carbonate to the acetate, which is very soluble in water. Water coupled with friction will, therefore, easily remove it. One caution only is necessary: Take care to get none of the lead in the mouth. Both forms are very poisonous. But if some be swallowed take a dose of Epsom salts. This is the best antidote.

Baltimore.

The Market.

Mr. Scott reports business at the Exchange slightly improving. Good flowers are scarce. Some fine Beauty come in from the Ruxton Nurseries. Dahlias sell briskly in the markets; the supply is very short.

Among Growers.

George Black is fast improving in health, and is expected to be about again shortly.

Isaac Moss had a driving accident, his horse taking fright at a steam roller, upsetting his vehicle. He was thrown out and badly, but, fortunately, not seriously, bruised.

President O'Mara is expected in Baltimore to inspect the new roses at John Cook's. In addition to the fine Baltimore, there are a few bedding roses ready for dissemination.

THE BUYERS' PAPER.

The paper that pays advertisers best is the one read by the most buyers. The Buyers' Paper among the horticultural trades is The Florists' Exchange.

Philadelphia.

The Market.

Most of the wholesale houses report business as improving, although the amount done is not yet large. Flowers are improving in quality very rapidly, but the small demand keeps prices down. White roses are very plentiful; in fact, have been so for many weeks. First-class carnations are yet scarce, it being between seasons with these flowers; most of the plants are not fully recovered after being moved into the houses. Quite a lot of outdoor flowers are still coming in, the bulk of which are dahlias. Some colors of these sell fairly well, but the demand generally is light. Smilax is in good demand, but the quality is not up to the standard yet.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the lecture room of Horticultural Hall on Tuesday evening last. Robert Kift gave his illustrated lecture on "American Art in Floral Decorations," this being the same lecture given by him at New York before the S. A. F. It was delivered for the benefit of those who were not at the convention; the public was also invited through the city papers.

Jottings.

Alfred Burton, eldest son of John Burton, was married on Tuesday evening in this city.

Wm. Thompson, 13th Street, above Locust, was married on Wednesday evening to Miss Mary McRae, thus ending a little romance which began two years ago, when he had a long spell of sickness, his present wife then being a nurse and attending him through his illness.

George McLenn, who is with George Craig on South 11th Street, has been on a visit to John Walker at Youngstown, Ohio, and has made arrangements to leave this city in two weeks, going to Youngstown to take charge of John Walker's retail store.

Thaddeus N. Yates has purchased the entire nursery business of his brother David G. Yates, deceased, the Mount Airy Nurseries, and will continue same as heretofore. The nurseries were established in 1869. DAVID RUST.

Woodhaven (N. Y.) and Vicinity.

Notwithstanding the dry weather that has prevailed the past Summer, H. Beaulieu, of this place, has had great success in flowering seedling dahlias. Mr. Beaulieu believes that with dahlias it is more a question of variety than climatic conditions. Some kinds, he says, thrive and flower freely be the season ever so dry. About three hundred seedlings have been brought into bloom. Among them are several that show promise of being useful varieties from their size and the length of stem, together with their free flowering and vigorous habits. Mr. Beaulieu also makes a specialty of pansies and the Mme. Perret strain, which he grows chiefly, produces very large and fine colored flowers, many being a good three inches in size.

F. Neipp, who is located at Aqueduct, is building a new greenhouse for chrysanthemums. The plants are already in, the glass is in on part of the roof, and the house will be completed before cold weather arrives. Mr. Neipp markets his products at the Cut Flower Exchange. Besides chrysanthemums he grows carnations and violets of the Lady Campbell variety. The first bunches of the latter were marketed on Saturday last.

M. Schnorr, also of Aqueduct, has a nice lot of chrysanthemums, carnations and violets of the Marie Louise variety. In the frames are thousands of pansies and English ivies. Planted outside are some good Hydrangea otaksa, also long rows of dahlias that are blooming luxuriantly.

The greenhouses belonging to E. Lenny in Woodhaven are leased by J. Smith, and a general retail trade conducted. At the time of our visit Mr. Smith was engaged in arranging the flowers on a large broken column.

John Reimels has a carnation establishment that is well worthy of a visit. A house of Flora Hill is a perfect picture. This house is 165 by 20 feet and was planted the last week in July. Stem rot has not affected the plants and they are blooming very freely. Wm. Scott, Mrs. G. M. Bradt and General Gomez are grown in large quantities, all being in the best of condition. Maude Adams is also a favorite here, and is cultivated more extensively than it was last year. A bench of G. H. Crane is throwing up plenty of good blooms; this is the best scarlet of all. Among new kinds, Mrs. Lawson, Ethel Crocker, Genevieve Lord and The Marquis are planted, besides a batch of seedlings, among which are several very promising kinds. Mr. Reimels also grows a bench of a variety that sported from Scott. It is identical with the parent in habit, etc., but the flower is marked with white streaks that radiate from the center. The cut from this establisment is sent daily to the New York Cut Flower Co.'s rooms, and sold at Mr. Reimels' own stand by his son.

Cleveland.

Trade Notes.

The retail stores report a considerable improvement in trade within the past few weeks. Numerous dinners, luncheons and other society functions have stimulated business in the decorative line, and store trade in cut flowers is better than at any previous writing for several months past. Prices, however, remain about the same as last reported.

A limited quantity of chrysanthemums is offered at $4 per dozen, the variety being Lady Fitzwygram.

Notes.

A party of Cleveland florists, consisting of A. Graham, H. A. Hart, Isaac Kennedy and Gordon Gray, left the city on Monday evening by boat for a few days' visit at Detroit, Mich.

S. N. Pentecost and wife reached home from a trip abroad on Monday, October 1. Their trip occupied three months; much of the time was spent at the Paris Exposition.

Smith & Son, Wade Park Avenue and Crawford Rock, are the first of local growers to offer chrysanthemums. They cut a few blooms of Lady Fitzwygram early last week. G. A. T.

SKOWHEGAN, ME.—Mr. F. G. Danforth, of Norridgewock, has purchased the J. R. Whittier property on Madison Avenue and will soon erect a set of buildings thereon for the purpose of carrying on the greenhouse business on an extensive scale.

New Varieties of

CARNATIONS

Grown from seed and named after my three grandchildren. We have grown these under ordinary culture for the past four years, and find them equal to any and far superior to many other varieties.

RUSSELL Clean, healthy, and the most vigorous and prolific we have ever grown or seen. We believe it is the best general purpose Carnation ever sent out. Grown side by side with Scott, it is far ahead of it in every respect, except size, which is about the same. It has never burst with us, when others in the same house have done so badly; it is a lively light-rose pink, distinct from anything we have ever seen; very fragrant. Where an abundance of good, fair sized blooms is wanted, it cannot be surpassed.

MILDRED A strong grower, with very long, strong stems. Flower very large, and a continuous bloomer. A fine shade of light, soft pink.

WILLIE Strong grower, with long, stiff stems. Flowers very large, of a bright shade of very dark rose pink. A continuous bloomer. We have more than we have room to house, and offer extra fine plants within reach of all. No. 1 plants, $1.50 per doz.; $6.00 per 100

SCRIBNER'S.—Richard Harding Davis concludes his narrative of the Boer War with a brilliant article in the October Scribner's on "The Last Days of Pretoria." Mr. Davis's sympathies are (as shown in his previous article) strongly with the Boers.

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING—That old favorite among household magazines, Good Housekeeping, enters upon a new career with the October number. It has been purchased by the widely-known Phelps Publishing Co., of Springfield, Mass., and the October issue is bright, with the promise of a large mission, that of offering help and inspiration for the higher life of the household.

In a resumé of the recent convention of the S. A. F. O. H., held in New York, published in The Gardeners' Chronicle, London, of September 22, Mr. Leonard Barron, editor of American Gardening, remarks regarding the "O. H." appendage to the society's title: "Of course, it is well recognized that the self-laudatory term is not good English; it should be 'Ornamentative.' It stands, nevertheless."

Mr. Barron also says the publishing of the daily edition of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, during the convention, "was a great undertaking, and well carried out."

New York City's Markets.

In a recent interview published in The Mail and Express, Commissioner Kearny, of the Department of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies, calls attention to the great need of repairs existing in connection with the majority of the city's market buildings. As regards the one used by the members of the New York Market Florists' Association, the Commissioner is reported to have expressed himself as follows: "The markets are in a deplorable condition. Why, Clinton Market is actually falling to pieces. The roof has caved in, and I cannot repair it because I have no money for the purpose."

Referring to the late plant market at Union Square, the Commissioner, (who, by the by, takes credit, according to the interview, for having had a hard fight to get the Board of Aldermen to pass an ordinance establishing the flower market there), states an amendment was inserted at the last minute requiring that market to close at 7 a. m. This was done, he says, in the interest of those florists (presumably retail florists) who wished to keep the trade, and was the means of defeating his flower market scheme. Mr. Kearny adds: "An ordinance designed to transform Clinton Market into a flower market is pending in the Municipal Assembly. (This ordinance has passed the Board of Aldermen, has been approved by the Mayor, and referred to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment for action.) It will not meet the requirements of the case, because Clinton Market is too far down town."

We had a talk with the Commissioner one day this week on the subject of a flower market for the city. He is interested enough in the matter to be willing to lend his assistance as far as possible, looking toward the establishment of such an institution; his idea being that same should partake more of the nature of a retail market than otherwise. He believes that were the subject properly presented to the municipal authorities, showing to what extent a flower market would prove a satisfactory source of revenue to the city, there is a great probability of the authorities erecting a suitable structure in some of its vacant spaces in a central location, that would meet the requirements of the florists' trade.

There are many in the trade who believe with the Commissioner that Clinton Market, even in its rehabilitated condition, is not in the proper location for the flower market of the metropolis, but as some of those who favor it remarked, "it is a beginning, and may in time lead to what we require." Still, if by agitation, united effort and perseverance a step farther in the proper direction can be made at the present time, the attainment of such would seem worth striving for.

New York is being constantly reproached by those of her citizens who have visited such European capitals as Paris and London, when it comes to the matter of a general flower and plant market within her borders. A similar condition as regards New York's parks prevailed about half a century ago. Now, thanks to the opportune assistance then rendered by the late lamented Downing, and the good sense and magnanimity of her people, New York's park system leads the world to-day, and is the pride and glory of all who dwell, as well as the admiration of those who visit within her gates. New York is also the fortunate possessor of a Botanical Garden that bids fair to take a foremost place among similar institutions existing the world over. Is there, then, any reason why, with the same energy and public spirit that created her parks and her Botanical Garden, displayed in the case of a general plant and flower market, the latter should not take form and assume a like position to what these others now hold?

Let those most concerned lend their utmost aid in the matter, thus relieving the city of a stigma that has for long attached to it, and in a substantial manner making for the material betterment of the trade generally.

Referring to the illustrations in last week's issue, J. B. Heiss, of Dayton, O., informs us that he now has 22 houses devoted mostly to palms. Trade in this branch has been quite satisfactory during the Summer, and the outlook for a good Fall trade is favorable.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

In another column President Arthur Herrington, of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, makes a timely appeal on behalf of this association. Mr. Herrington points to the success which has attended the carnation and rose societies, both as regards work accomplished and membership, and asks a measure of support for the Chrysanthemum Society, similar to that which has been accorded the other bodies cited.

We are glad to see, also, the president advocating an annual exhibition under the Society's auspices, in some of our prominent cities, and the enlarging of the Society's scope, so as to include all phases of chrysanthemum growing. Much of the success of the other societies devoted to the improvement of special flowers can be attributed to the magnificent exhibitions given under the auspices of each, as well as to the interest centering in the annual meetings of the societies in question held in conjunction with such shows. We firmly believe that greater enthusiasm in the Chrysanthemum Society and its work would be engendered were the Society to follow in the lines of the associations mentioned, and which have tended so much to their material advancement. The annual meetings of the Chrysanthemum Society in August have, as has been frequently pointed out by us, been unworthy of the great chrysanthemum cult in America. Change the date of the meeting to that on which the Society's exhibition (now proposed) is held, and the present supporters of the Chrysanthemum Society will be astonished at the increased interest and membership following this necessary innovation, and wonder at and blame their own obstinacy, in holding so long to a practice which has undoubtedly proven such a great deterrent to the welfare and progress of the Society.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia., register the following new dahlias:

SALMON QUEEN (Peacock)—Decorative, height 3½ feet, bushy grower; flowers large, salmon, deepening to orange-salmon toward center; petals long-pointed.

HARLEQUIN (Bassett)—Fancy, dwarf, branching, with long slender stems; height, 2 feet; flowers, small to medium, crimson with white stripe through each petal; stripe sometimes suffused with pink; flowers occasionally solid crimson.

Gustav Obermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va., registers new canna, WEST VIRGINIA, a seedling of Queen Charlotte, color of Gloriosa, with narrower yellow band. Full spike and very dwarf.

M. H. Walsh, of Woods Holl, Mass., registers new rose, "FLUSH DAWN." Hybrid tea, flowers light pink changing to white, fragrant, five to six inches in diameter when open. Vigorous grower, stems 2½ to 3 feet; foliage dark and glossy; continuous bloomer.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

The Sander Cup.

We present herewith an illustration of the cup donated by F. Sander & Co., St. Albans, England, and Bruges, Belgium, at the recent S. A. F. convention exhibition held in New York City. The cup was won by Julius Roehrs, Carlton Hill, N. J., and the conditions governing the award were as follows: "For the most creditable exhibit in the trade exhibition department. The exhibit which shows the greatest enterprise in its contents and its arrangement, and is calculated to attract, in the opinion of the judges, the greatest amount of attention from trade visitors, will be entitled to the cup. All classes of trade exhibits are eligible for competition."

The prevalent long-credit system is the most mischievous feature of the flower trade as conducted to-day.—New York Correspondent American Florist.

That is a fact, well known and appreciated by everybody concerned. Yet it must not be without its advantages. Otherwise those most affected would set about at once to remedy existing conditions. Why wail intermittently over a grievance which concerted effort would tend to eliminate? Oh, the perversity of human nature!

New York.

The Market.

The trend of the flower trade this week points to a better demand for high-class stock in roses, with the supply diminishing. The quantity of mildewed foliage now observed is something enormous. The impression that two feet of mildewed stem, with a hollow formed flower at the top, constitues a special rose, seems to be gaining ground. This is not the case, however, and when the foliage is not good, the stem might just as well be cut short in the packing room, and the flower sent to market as a Number 2, for the length of stem alone does not make the grade, and never will.

Extra Bride have touched the $6 per 100 mark, and specials, in very small lots, reached 8c. each. On the other hand, poor, soft stock coming in meets with scarcely any demand, and has to be offered at prices that seem very low in proportion to what fancies and extras are bringing.

American Beauty, through some cause or other, are decidedly inferior in color to what they were one week ago. Those who are fortunate enough to have these flowers just right have no trouble in maintaining the price which reaches $3 per dozen for the best. Where they are off color, however, the blooms have to be sacrificed to clear them out.

Liberty is becoming stronger as the season progresses, and is gaining in favor. Golden Gate is rather weak in the stem as yet; and is not decided enough in color to suit a great many buyers.

Carnations have advanced a step; the best white kinds have brought $2 per 100 when with long stems. Scott and other ordinary varieties fetch from 75c. to $1.25 per 100, except when very poor; then they do not realize more than 50c. Orchids were probably never so plentiful as they are at present; they are to be had by the thousand if it were necessary. Oncidiums and cypripediums do not find much favor, but cattleyas, owing to the better class of funeral work going, and to their cheapness, have been in fair demand for several days.

Chrysanthemums are not so much in evidence; still, there are good blooms of several varieties coming in, notably Lady Fitzwygram, Mme. Gasteiller and Marquis de Montmort. There was a call for yellow blooms, but they were not to be had.

Among the Retailers.

Funeral work has constituted the main part of the business the past week. Cattleya labiata were the flowers used for a canopy at the obsequies of a banker at Mount Vernon recently.

Fred Sewig, late with Herman Kuhn, has taken the store at 940 Sixth Avenue, formerly occupied by Fred Donohue, and will conduct a retail business there.

Henry Butler, of 918 Broadway, is on the sick list. A new retail store has been opened at 860 Sixth Avenue by Smith & Hammer.

Chas. A. Dards' store was entered by a burglar on Wednesday morning last. The thief was caught by one of Mr. Dards' men, and turned over to the police. He has not yet been tried.

Auction Sales.

J. P. Cleary conducted a sale at the Stoke Pogis Nurseries on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The sales in the auction rooms have been well attended and satisfactory prices have ruled.

Sander & Co.'s annual orchid sale will occur on Tuesday, October 16, at Cleary & Co.'s rooms. Mr. Dimmock will offer, as usual, many rare and valuable novelties. The catalogue of the sale is ready for distribution, and may be had on application. J. P. Cleary will be the auctioneer.

Jottings.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Plumb sailed for England on Tuesday by the Oceanic. James Cowles, of Newport, R. I., was also a passenger on the same steamer.

Julius Roehrs has about 5,000 blooms of Cattleya labiata on his plants at the present time. This is the largest crop of these flowers probably ever seen at one place on this continent.

The meeting of New York Florists' Club will be held on Monday evening the 8th inst., in the rooms, corner of 27th Street and Broadway. The house committee promises refreshments, and Samuel Henshaw will give a descriptive talk on what he saw while abroad. The matter of the Club assisting in the relief of the Galveston florists will be considered.

The Bowling Club will meet at 4 p. m., same day, at the store of Traendly & Schenck, 38 West 28th Street.

Boston.

Market Notes.

The market is in good condition for an improvement in business, which, if it amounted to much, would about use up the daily supply. As it is now, there is an overstock of many things. There is a good demand for the finer quality roses which are not over-plentiful. American Beauty of best grade do pretty well at $20 to $25 per 100, with ordinary stock, more plentiful, fetching $6 to $16 per 100. Good Bride and Bridesmaid do not appear very fast, but, of course, the weather is not suited to an improvement in quality; still the flowers are swelling a little and the color of Bridesmaid is improving. Prices hold about the same as last week.

Here and There.

Fred R. Mathison, of Waltham, has returned from a most enjoyable trip through the White Mountain range, having been gone about a week.

both of these gentlemen lost, they clubbed together, and made it one dinner for 20, settling both bets at one time. When Messrs. Hatch and Wood entertain any description is superfluous; suffice it to say that everything was done up to the "Queen's taste," even though Her Majesty's yacht was responsible for it.

The invitations and menu cards were very neatly gotten up, being replete with nautical terms, cleverly adapted.

F. J. N.

St. Louis.

The Market.

Trade still comes up to expectations in a general way. The supply of stock is about sufficient to meet the demand. Roses are selling at 2c. to 4c. Bridesmaid are a little off color, just now. Beauty have been quite plentiful, but a special demand one day this week used them all up; they have been bringing from $2 to $4 per dozen.

Carnations are in good supply, at 50c. to $1.50 per 100. Asters are somewhat

THE SANDER CUP.

The stall-holders took possession of their new stalls at the Flower Market on Monday morning; several changes were noticed.

Del Cartwright is now salesman at the Market for the Waban Rose Conservatories, and is handling quantities of roses.

Donald Carmichael is cutting some good flowers from both his seedlings, Eleanor Ames and May Whitney, the former being the only pink carnation he is growing this year.

John Pritchard is bringing in a few very good early chrysanthemums in pots, for which he finds ready sale at $6 and $10 per dozen in two sizes.

The improvement in the florists' supply department of George A. Sutherland's business, has necessitated the taking of a large floor at 14 Bosworth Street.

Another of the older private greenhouse places about Boston, which are now getting very scarce, has been broken up, and the plants sold at auction. They were from the Barthold-Schlesinger estate in Brookline.

A party of the Old Guard journeyed to the Point Shirley Club House, on Friday of last week, in response to an invitation received from Edward Hatch and Edmund M. Wood, each of whom had bet "the dinners for ten" with Lawrence Cotter, on the Shamrock's winning one leg, in the yacht race last Summer. As scarce, and the receipts are from other points, where they seem to be grown better than here.

News Items.

Henry Felter, of 4335 Lexington Avenue, has without doubt as fine a lot of pot-grown chrysanthemums as was ever offered in this city. We refer to market plants, as he does not grow chrysanthemums for show. They are simply perfect, grown in six to eight-inch pots, the plants often being two to three feet in diameter.

The Englemann Botanical Club gave a show of native wild flowers last week. The collection is said to have been very extensive and complete. The exhibition was enjoyed by some 3,000 visitors.

Fred Weber, Jr., has left a position in a city bank, and has gone to work for A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., to learn the florist business.

Walter Krauswick has bought out the Old Orchard greenhouses built by A. Berdan. He will grow cut flowers for the local market.

The Reissen Floral Co. had the decoration for our big Veiled Prophets' ball, held at the Merchants' Exchange. The principal decoration was the fountain, which was draped with smilax and vines, interspersed with bunches of flowers, the base being heavily banked with plants. The effect when the fountain was playing, and the electric lights turned on, was magnificent.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

ROANOKE, VA.—F. Fallon has established a retail flower store here at 106 Jefferson street.

MARIETTA, O.—C. H. Smith and Robert Pugh have taken a one-year lease of the Fisher greenhouses, at Williamstown, and have already taken possession of the same.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y.—E. T. Palmer has taken a five-years' lease on the place formerly occupied by G. J. Busteed, on Webster avenue, and commenced a general florist business. He is also erecting some frames for forcing vegetables.

CHICAGO.—The firm of Walter Retzer & Company, 2045-2059 Clarendon avenue, Chicago, was dissolved September 26. The business will be continued by Walter Retzer under the name of "Walter Retzer & Company." All liabilities of the firm have been assumed by him.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

"Open Thine Hand wide unto thy Brother, and to thy needy, in thy Land."

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have, for the convenience of our readers, decided to receive subscriptions at this office for the Galveston relief fund, which will be at once acknowledged in these columns, and the amount contributed forwarded to the proper authorities as the donations of our trade on behalf of their suffering brethren in the storm-swept sections. Checks and money orders for the Galveston relief fund should be made out in favor of the A. T. DeLa Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., crossed "in aid of Galveston sufferers."

The known contributions to the fund for the relief of trade sufferers by the Galveston disaster have up to date been so slight as to lead to the belief that our readers generally have not realized the magnitude of the disaster to their unfortunate brethren in that city, and that after perusing the figures furnished herewith, by Mr. J. D. Pruessner, himself one of the largest losers, they will loosen their pursestrings right liberally, maintaining their class reputation as being the most generous of givers to those in adversity.

As will be seen from the tabulations herewith presented five families have been partially or wholly wiped out, including a property loss estimated very carefully at $17,950, while eleven other concerns, whose representatives esteemed themselves fortunate to have escaped with their lives, have lost in property value alone, $26,550, this money summary taking no account of cumulative losses, occurring through present complete inability either to pursue or obtain business.

Surely herein is sufficient evidence for appeal to our readers to come at once and without further hesitancy to the succor of the stricken ones, either with money or seasonable plant supplies, and we hope to see following this publication a spontaneous and gratifying response from all parts of the country.

Contributions in money may be mailed direct to Sealy, Hutchings & Co. Bankers, Galveston, Texas, with directions to apply same to the "Florist Relief Fund," or may be made through this office. In either case we would like to have the names of contributors for publication.

Contributions in stock are also solicited, the same not to be forwarded, however, until arrangements for its proper distribution have been effected.

A certificate for $154, all the money collected to date, was duly forwarded to Mayor Jones, with the suggestion that Mr. J. D. Pruessner, having gone carefully over the entire field of losses, might be a good man to put on the committee of distribution, together with some other party of his own selection.

President O'Mara will bring up this matter before the New York Florists' Club at its meeting on Monday evening next, and we would suggest that every Florists' Club and Gardeners' Association throughout the country do likewise, in fact some of the clubs already have acted.

Next most important point after contributing is to ensure a fair and equitable distribution of both plants and cash, and we acquiesce in Mr. Laeverenz's suggestion that the above-named firm of bankers act as trustee of the funds, disbursing same at their discretion.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, Sept. 30.

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

The Hon. Walter C. Jones, our mayor, has referred to me your kind letter of recent date to him, asking to furnish you with the necessary data and correct estimate of losses sustained by the Galveston florists in the terrible tornado which swept over and devastated our lovely city. I enclose you said list, and think the estimates given are correct. I would further beg to advise distribution of funds through a local bank, according to annexed schedule, if approved by you. This would be the best method of reaching the craft more surely. As a local bank I beg to name Messrs. Sealy, Hutchings & Co., one of the soundest institutions in the South. I have forwarded you, under separate cover, photograph of my place, which, as you will perceive, was shora clear of everything; that which the waves did not take will die from the effects of the salt water, with which the ground will be so impregnated that it will take many a heavy shower of rain to get the salt out of the ground. My place was partly paid for, and with no money to again improve and stock up, I will have to let go the good cash put down as part payment. We cannot tell yet to what extent the real estate has depreciated, but am convinced a good many of us will have to seek different fields. (The writer then gives a list of the dead, similar to that already published.) He adds: So far as I know, they have not left any one dependent; their places where they lived were swept away entirely. Thomas Kemp and wife I think took refuge in a two-story house in their neighborhood, which went down with 150 persons, of which one was left to tell the tale. I could not begin to relate to you the horrors of that night, when even reporters, who were sent here by Eastern and Western papers and magazines, collapsed after two or three days' work.

May God bless the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE for the noble work you are doing on behalf of the sufferers belonging to our craft.

A. G. LAEVERENZ,
Prop. Acme Nursery.

[The schedule of estimates of losses, with one or two additions, was the same as that furnished by Mr. Pruessner. Those supplied by Mr. Laeverenz have been added.—ED.]

Our Chrysanthemum Society.

Chrysanthemum time is with us again. Is it a coincidence, or is it the importance of the flower that is accountable for more flower shows being held in chrysanthemum time than at any other period of the year? To my mind, the fact is clearly demonstrated that the Queen of Autumn is so thoroughly ingratiated in popular favor that she is in no danger of being deposed. In short, the flower that was thought to be a popular fad is now an accepted entity.

Now that it is again coming in season, appears an opportune moment to say something on behalf of the society that is devoted to this special flower, and to bespeak for the Chrysanthemum Society of America such a full measure of support that the good work it has so far done, may be amplified and extended for the general good of all.

Special societies devoted to particular flowers have passed beyond the experimental stage, have proved by earnest, conscientious work that they existed for something more than mutual admiration purposes, and the aggregate of work accomplished shows material advancement of the subject.

Can any one deny that the American Carnation Society has justified its creation? Has not the resuscitated American Rose Society a fruitful field wherein to labor, and its initial effort this year is but an earnest of greater future attempts. The Chrysanthemum Society, too, is in the field, and the sum total of its accomplishments will be in an enlarging ratio with the support that is given to it.

For several years committees have met weekly during the chrysanthemum season in five leading cities, and have passed judgment upon such new varieties as were submitted to them. This surely is work of an important character in a flower so prolific in variety, and work of positive value to chrysanthemum growers. It has saved them money, time and wasted effort, in fruitless trials of varieties that they might have been tempted to try, if there had been no Chrysanthemum Society of America standard of merit, and no committee to judge in accordance therewith. For two years a substantial prize was offered at an early date to encourage the production of early flowering varieties of merit, but as these were not forthcoming the prize was last year offered for and awarded to the seedling scoring the highest average of points before the committees. This year a similar prize is offered for competition at Chicago in connection with the Chicago Horticultural Society's show, under conditions appealing to all growers, namely, for ten blooms of any one variety, new or old.

The society is working in harmony with the national chrysanthemum societies of England and France, and is offering a prize this year to be competed for at the forthcoming show of the French society in Paris this Fall.

But is this enough? We have a society capable of greater things, and it is the opinion of many that each recurring chrysanthemum season should see an exhibition held under the auspices of the National Society in one of our prominent cities. Let this become an accomplished fact, and in this enlarged sphere of activity the society will grow in membership and in influence with large resultant benefits accruing to those most interested.

There is plenty of work in the chrysanthemum field. We should take up the flower and develop it along other lines. There are other important points of view from which to regard it besides commercial adaptability, which is the dominating factor of our present work. We have an immense territory where chrysanthemums in the open air are not in danger of succumbing to early frosts. A national society should do something in this direction. Our first great need, however, is for more workers. And who, loving the flower or having aught to do with it, would remain outside the ranks of the society when membership in it costs but $1 a year! Join now, while the flower is in season, and a year hence you may be participating in the consummation of present hopes. Applications for membership, with the accompanying fee, may be sent to the secretary, Edwin Lonsdale, Wyndmoor, Philadelphia, Pa., at any time.

A Chrysanthemum Leaf Miner.

We send you some chrysanthemum leaves injured by the work of a small worm. Please tell us what the pest is, and how to eradicate it. It attacks some varieties, such as Marion Henderson and Harry Parr, quite badly, while others in the same house are immune from its ravages. D.

—It is much easier to say what ails the leaves than to suggest a cure. It is a leaf-mining maggot that is at work here, and it is practically beyond the reach of insecticides. The most satisfactory method, on the whole, is to keep a sharp lookout, pick off and destroy every leaf at all badly infested, and crush between thumb and finger the little larva at the large end of the blotch or mine, if the leaf is not badly injured, or if its loss would harm the plant. This method will prevent the development of adult flies, and will check the increase later on, or the spread to other varieties.

FARMINGTON, N. H.—James A. Fletcher will build a greenhouse 50 feet long.

BARRYTOWN, N. Y.—Charles V. Henton has built a house, 20x112 feet for violets.

COLUMBIA, S. C.—The Rose Hill Greenhouses are building a new house, 100 x 26½ feet, giving them about 12,500 square feet of glass.

WESTERN SPRINGS, ILL.—J. C. Vaughan has been making some additions and improvements to his greenhouse plant. He has built a new and much larger office, and enlarged and extended the center shed; and is putting down a cement floor. He is also adding two new wings to the west side.

ALBANY, N. Y.—The Department of Agriculture has issued certificates of inspection up to the first of October to 338 nurserymen; 348 duplicates have been issued for filing in other States. The inspectors examined 110 orchards, having an acreage of 2,724. In 1898, 6,749 acres of nurseries and 469 acres of vineyards were inspected. In 1899, 6,015 acres of nurseries and 817 acres of vineyards were inspected. Certificates issued to nurserymen aggregated 499, and 64 certificates were issued to vineyardists.

Chicago.

Trade Conditions.

As cool weather prevails and firing is necessary, a decided improvement in stock is noticed day by day. Beauty are getting their true color, and are in good supply, selling fairly well. As price improves Kaiserin is pulling back. Bridesmaid and Meteor are of better quality, but one sees few really good flowers in the open market, and these might command $5 per 100, such flowers being reserved for special buyers and shipping orders. There are still plenty of the $1 or $2 per 100 quality.

Carnations, from out-of-doors, are nearly ended, but house-grown stock is ready to be substituted, although, as yet, the stems are short and the blooms of only medium quality. There are indications, however, of plenty of high-grade carnations for a little later, including most of the novelties.

Both white and yellow Lady Fitzwygram chrysanthemums, on October 1, were of better quality. There is quite a demand just now to fill orders for Buffalo. The selling price of this variety, if good, is $12 per 100. Some higher grade flowers are expected, for orders placed at Richmond, Ind., for the 8th; and, if good, may command $2 to $2.50 per doz.

Single violets are showing up. The flowers are small, but very sweet. They sell, so far, at 75c. to $1 per 100. Asters as yet seem to hold on, many being shipped from the East. Wild smilax is a regular feature again. Some lycopodium is selling at $3.50 to $4 per 100 pounds. Leucothœ sprays and galax leaves are also in, the latter mostly green stock as yet. Bunches of short asparagus, of both varieties, find good call, selling for $1 to $1.50 per 100; strings, 50c.; A. Sprengeri, 50c. a dozen. There is a fair demand for all green supplies.

The last week dahlias were much better in quality at $1 to $2 per 100. Gladiolus, late stock, is selling at $3 to $4 per 100.

Florists' Club.

A special meeting was called by the Florists' Club inviting thereto all the florists of the city, Saturday, September 29, for the purpose of soliciting aid for the Galveston florists. Committees were named to canvass each division of the city, and all the wholesale houses will receive subscriptions. As the regular meeting occurs October 5, it is expected that a favorable report will be ready by that time.

Among Growers.

So far as we can yet find out, chrysanthemums grown around Chicago this year are to be late. Last year quite a number were on the market all through September, and of a better class than any that have shown up this year at writing. Chicago growers seem to have fought shy of extra early varieties. Stollery Bros. grew this year 1,400 plants. Excepting one bench of October Sunshine and another of Yellow Queen, there is none up to the usual Stollery standard. George tells me he found it hard to get satisfactory buds to take at the usual time. The plants are healthy enough, but late in getting ready to bud.

Carnations are in fine shape. Argyle looks very promising. Flora Hill has had a siege of stem rot since housing. The brothers were in the midst of putting away, in flats, in the ground, 70,000 hyacinth, tulip and narcissi bulbs—more than usual with them. The tulips consist mostly of Chrysolora, Keizerskroon and Murillo. They have a fine bench of poinsettias again; also one of adiantum that is paying well.

S. J. Pearce's crop of chrysanthemums numbers 25,000; these are also later than usual; it will be well into October before any considerable number is ready to cut. Quite a few are purposely late. Sam is also in the buib way to the tune of 55,000. He has modernized all his old houses, and installed a new steam boiler.

John Laing has about the same number of chrysanthemums as last year—7,000. Although somewhat later, this stock is in excellent condition.

Albert Retzer grows about 4,000 chrysanthemums. He also has a big stock of bulbs, now being attended to.

Round About.

L. Vaughan, son of J. C. Vaughan, has entered at Cornell. George Wienhoeber, who left that university this year, is now at his father's store on Oak Street.

Mrs. Fred Hills, of Maywood, presented her hubby on the last day of September with a daughter.

Arthur Bather and Miss Jessie Bather of Clinton, Ia., passed through the city on the 27th, on their way home from the New York convention, after a six weeks' stay. It was their first trip East, and they were delighted with what they saw.

Walter Retzer has bought out his partner, Alfred B. Everett. The firm name remains unchanged.

A new wholesale store will shortly be opened by Adolph H. Poehlman, of Morton Grove, for the sale of his own stock. He has contracted for a 12x12 cooler. Charles S. Stewart will be the manager.

Albert F. Amling, of Maywood, has purchased the old Rockefellow greenhouse there, and next year will largely increase his own place by using the available material. Ess.

Cincinnati.

Trade Improves.

Business is improving nicely; stock, likewise. The Fall Festival, financially speaking, was a howling success, and while the florists' float did not win the thousand dollars, it was conceded to be the handsomest floral production ever witnessed in these parts. A description, with a photograph, will appear at a later date.

Quite a number of the craft from out of town were visitors. E. G. G.

Tarrytown, N. Y

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting September 27. F. R. Pierson Co. made a grand display of dahlias, comprising 17 varieties; these were awarded a certificate of merit. The same firm also showed three vases of cannas: Rosemaur, Mrs. Kate Gray, and Tarrytown; the two former varieties were awarded certificates of merit. William Turner staged seven varieties of dahlias, the colors being excellent. John Egan was awarded a certificate of merit for his new seedling canna. The color of the flower is orange scarlet, the foliage dark bronze. The variety is a valuable addition to the canna family. He also showed a vase of dahlia Camelliæflorn. The exhibition created considerable discussion on dahlia culture.

The following were elected to membership: Alex Hoag, E. Hansen, F. S. Palmer, Charles Briggs, William P. Ross, and Charles Robinson. R. ANGUS.

MR. THERON PASKER, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Dear Sir:—Your Model Carnation Support is all right in every way, and will no doubt be considered as necessary as good plants with growers when better known. I consider it the best to the market, and if your other specialties are as good, they should make soother addition to the money makers of 1900.
Very respectfully, ALBERT M. HERR.

Grand Rapids.

Trade Report.

Fall trade is not opening as briskly as it might. Roses are in fine trim, as the buds have been kept off so as to give the plants a chance. They will soon be allowed to come in now, if the weather turns cooler.

Carnations are not very plentiful as yet, and are kept well cleaned up by the few straggling shipping orders coming in. Most of the stock is of recent planting. The best all-around white is still Flora Hill; it is the earliest good white, and although not quite up to White Cloud during the Winter, it is the best in Spring and Summer again. It will be necessary to grow both, until a better arrives. Evelina is fine with us, and in full bloom. If it does as well as it did last year, it will continue in flower until about the first of February, when it should be fired, as it is not again in bloom until warm weather. New York shows up better this season than it did last, and is much in demand, being brighter than Scott. Crane and Estelle are both good reds, with the latter a trifle better in color. It will be Spring before an accurate comparison can be made, but we are inclined to the opinion that Estelle is a little the best red. Firefly is the freest blooming red, but the color is no good. Madame Chapman and Daybreak are still prime favorites with the local growers.

Chrysanthemums are coming along fast now, and promise a large crop. Fitzwygram will be the earliest white, but what a pity the foliage is so poor.

The Michigan State Fair opened September 25. James Schols and William Cunningham exhibited this year, while, of the former exhibitors, Henry Smith and Crabb & Hunter drop out. The latter firm has exhibited in Grand Rapids for 17 years.

New York.—S. B. Dicks, of Cooper, Taber & Co., London, having completed his thirteenth annual visit to this country and Canada, sails for England to-day on the S. S. Etruria. He is much pleased with his visit, and considers the American seed trade is in a sound and healthy condition.

Vaughan's Seed Store has just taken in a large stock of Japan Lilium longiflorum. Quantities of this lily are reported arriving heated again this year.

European Notes.

Although showers have been rather frequent of late the ground is by no means so damp as we could wish, for the work of transplanting turnips and rutabagas must very shortly be commenced. France, particularly in the West, appears to suffer more than any other part of Europe, for until during the past eight days the rainfall has been almost nil in that district. Some of the growers have had from 17 to 20 men constantly employed in watering the seed beds of beets, in the hope of saving their plants, but in general the plants are so poorly developed that it will be almost an impossibility to lift and store them, and the first severe frost will destroy them. Of crops for the present season only leek remains satisfactory to the end. Onion is not turning out more than half a crop, while beet, lettuce and carrot are practically nil. The French crop of mangels, that at one time threatened to glut our markets, has shrunk to an alarming extent. There will not be any surplus this season. It is reported that a lot of mangel seed was also destroyed in the fire at Jaensch & Co.'s warehouse, at Aschersleben; also a very large quantity of spinach. This has caused a sharp rise in price for good samples of the latter article.

EUROPEAN SEEDS.

Import and Export Statistics.

The following exports and imports of plants, shrubs, and seeds, etc., are for the month of August: The dutiable imports of plants, shrubs and vines amounted to $111,124 in August, 1900, against $111,546 in the same month of last year. The free imports of seeds amounted in August, 1900, to $66,214, against $47,547, the value of the imports of August, 1899. The dutiable imports of seed amounted to $26,751 in August, 1900, against $34,746, in August, of the previous year.

The exports of seed to other countries amounted to $615,490, against $232,195 in the same month of 1899.

American Dahlia Society.

The American Dahlia Society held its annual meeting at the rooms of the American Institute, Wednesday, September 26, Samuel Henshaw presiding. This gentleman was afterward elected president of the American Dahlia Society for the ensuing year; Rev. W. T. Hutchins, vice-president, and James W. Withers, secretary and treasurer. A Committee on Nomenclature was elected as follows: M. S. Higgins, East Bridgewater, Mass.; W. W. Wilmore, Denver, Col.; W. F. Bassett, Hammonton, N. J.; Rev. W. C. Bolton, Pelham, N. Y.; and Rev. W. T. Hutchins, Indian Orchard, Mass.

The secretary was authorized to make arrangements with the authorities of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., for the holding of a dahlia show in connection with the Exposition next Fall.

The following new dahlias were brought before the Society and passed upon: W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, presented "Harlequin," fancy pompon, flowers 2½ inches in diameter, the plant accompanying the vase of blooms showing its extreme floriferousness, and adaptability as a bedder. The variety received a certificate. "Magnificent," canary yellow, was offered by the same exhibitor, but the committee asked that the variety be brought before them again. "Salmon Queen," decorative, from the same exhibitor, was certificated. In connection with "Salmon Queen" the original introducer, L. K. Peacock, withdrew the name "Aguinaldo," making the statement that only a very few plants had gone out under that name. This was accepted by the committee. Rowehl & Granz, Hicksville, L. I., presented a fancy, color buff and crimson, under the name of "Menheddy Beauty." This variety was also certificated. O. B. Coombs, Queens, N. Y., exhibited a number of blooms under the name of "Miss Helen Gould." The committee disqualified this exhibit on the ground that the variety was already known under the name of "Uncertainty." It also has the following synonyms: "Mary Enstace," "Floral Park Jewel," and "Miss Roth." Their decision was that the variety was simply a light colored form of "Uncertainty," and that the chances would be that the stock would revert back to the deeper color by which "Uncertainty" is known; hence the variety was refused recognition.

SALMON QUEEN—(Peacock.) (Introduced by W. Atlee Burpee Co.) Decorative. Height 3½ feet. Strong, vigorous, bushy grower; flowers very large, of a glowing salmon color deepening to a rich orange salmon toward the center; petals long, pointed. Entirely distinct in color and form.

HARLEQUIN—(Bassett.) (Introduced by W. Atlee Burpee & Co.) Dwarf fancy. Plant, dwarf, branching, with long, slender stems; height two feet. Flowers small to medium size, a brilliant crimson color with distinct white stripe running through each petal, white stripe sometimes becomes suffused with pink, and sometimes flowers are solid crimson; an extremely profuse bloomer. An acquisition. JAMES W. WITHERS, Secretary.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEODORE J. SMITH, Geneva, N. Y., President; N. W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., Vice-President; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Secretary; C. L. YATES, Rochester, N. Y., Treasurer.

Through the efforts of Secretary Wm. Pitkin of the Eastern Nurserymen's Association of Rochester, N. Y., the open date to which nursery stock can be shipped into Canada, after fumigation, has been extended to December 15.

Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, N. Y., have been awarded first prize, a gold medal diploma, for an exhibit of 118 varieties of peas at the Paris Exposition.

The Missouri State Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting at Farmington, Mo., December 4-6, 1900. The Society will have a display of horticultural products at the Pan-American Exposition, next year. The exhibit will be made by counties and labeled accordingly.

The following figures represent the values of nursery stock, plants, trees, shrubs, vines, etc., imported into the United States during the year 1899: From Belgium, $130,864; France, $122,739; Germany, $63,229; Italy, $11,421; Netherlands, $286,797; United Kingdom, $49,523; Bermuda, $38,424; Canada, $1,678; Hong Kong, $3,212; Japan, $41,748.

Minneapolis, Minn.—Hawkins Bros. have lately dissolved partnership, and one of the brothers, A. A. Hawkins, has started a nursery on the east side of Lake Minnetonka, with post office at Chowen.

Newark, N. Y.—Jackson & Perkins Co. are building two more greenhouses to be used in the growing of their leading specialty, hardy roses.

A Valuable Catalogue.—Messrs. Thomas Meehan & Sons, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., have just distributed their catalogue for the Fall of 1900 and Spring of 1901. For completeness, fullness of description, and accuracy of nomenclature, this catalogue takes a foremost place among the pamphlets of a similar nature now being published and disseminated, its whole make-up rendering it extremely serviceable as a work of reference. It is profusely illustrated with beautiful half-tone and other cuts. The typography is of the highest class of workmanship; the only fault to be found with it being perhaps the smallness of the type used in many instances, this rendered necessary, of course, by the large number of subjects dealt with. From the preface to this, the 34th edition of the catalogue, we learn that it is 49 years since Thomas Meehan, the senior member of the firm, commenced in Germantown the nursery business which is now conducted by himself and sons. The business, which at that time three acres were ample for, now demands 150 acres, and additional facilities for the increasing business are continually called for. As will be surmised, the business would not grow in this way without a proper appreciation by the firm of what the business demands. From the first, attention has been given to the procuring and testing of all kinds of ornamental trees, shrubs and flowers, both as to their hardiness and desirability.

Dutchess Co. (N. Y.) Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on Wednesday, October 3. There was a large attendance, and much interest was displayed in the coming exhibition. The report of the Exhibition Committee on the final arrangements for the show was approved. The judges secured are: Samuel Goldring, J. H. Troy, George Hale and William Turner. The first day of the exhibition being on election day, it was decided to have the election results announced during the evening, in the exhibition hall.

Two new members were elected—Messrs. William R. Sands, and Thomas J. McPherson. It was announced that the amount already promised and paid for special prizes, and donations toward the exhibition fund had reached $420.

OBITUARY.

John A. Jeffrey.

John A. Jeffrey, florist, Torrington, Conn., died at his home October 4, after a short but severe illness. Mr. Jeffrey had been a resident of Torrington for many years, and had identified himself with the best interests of the town. He was a member of Trinity Episcopal Church and an active worker in the Sunday school and Brotherhood of St. Andrew. He was also a member of the local lodge of Knights of Pythias.

James Henry.

James Henry, a retired Philadelphia florist, died Saturday, October 6, in the Odd Fellows' Home. Mr. Henry was born in Ireland November 23, 1823, and in 1850 came to this country, locating in Germantown, where he carried on the business of a florist until July, 1898, when he retired owing to his being stricken with paralysis. One month later his wife died, and having no children or relatives, he became a resident of the Home, on October 4 of that year. He had been a member since 1874 of Philomathean Lodge, No. 10, I. O. O. F.

Fell to His Death.

Carl Kruger, a nurseryman of San Francisco, fell from the dome of the City Hall there, a distance of three stories, September 29, and was instantaneously killed. He was until recently engaged in business with John H. Sievers, but sold out and started a nursery of his own. Deceased was 42 years of age, a native of Chili, and leaves a widow and two children.

Firms Who Are Building.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.—Ira Fairchild has completed a new greenhouse.

SALMON FALLS, N. H.—Harvey Bros. are building a large addition to their greenhouse on Washington street, and are also putting in a new boiler of much larger heating capacity.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Drake & Carlson have been granted a permit to build eight greenhouses, each 10x57 feet.

Encouraging Exhibits by Amateurs.

In connection with a flower show to be given in Penn Yan, N. Y., next month, for the benefit of the Ladies' Guild, of that place, several prominent trade firms have donated seeds and plants as premiums. Among the donors are included Messrs. Peter Henderson & Co., James Vick's Sons, Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, Messrs. W. & T. Cass, Glen Bros., W. & T. Smith, George W. Park and Chase Bros.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

HAMILTON, ONT.—E. McLeod has started in the florist business here, building a greenhouse, 18x80 feet. He will grow a general stock.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The Wm. Roethke Floral Company filed articles of association with the County Clerk October 3. The capital stock is $25,000, held as follows: F. Wm. Roethke, 450 shares; Bertha Roethke, 450; C. L. Roethke, 800; Otto T. Roethke, 600; Mrs. Eliese Granse, 20.

NUTLEY, N. J.—W. L. Jones has started a greenhouse plant here, consisting of two houses, each 120 feet, built by Hitchings & Co. There are 2½ acres of land in connection with the establishment. Mr. Jones says: "I have just filled my houses with plants bought from your advertisers. All the stock purchased has been satisfactory, showing your care in selecting business."

New Jersey Floricultural Society.

The regular monthly meeting of this society was held at Orange, N. J., October 3, Vice-President Davis in the chair. The essay committee failing to provide a speaker, a Question Box was substituted. Among the topics thus submitted were: Stem Rot in Carnations; Celery Rust; Thinning Japanese Plums; Cabbage this Season and Remedy for Worms; Is it Better to Spray Grapes to Keep off Black Rot, or to Bag Them; Causes for the Drooping of Young Rubber Plants. So profitable was the evening considered that it was voted to have the Question Box a permanent feature of the monthly meetings.

Letters were read from H. A. Dreer, inviting the society to view his establishment at Riverton, and from the Morris County Gardeners' Society, concerning its forthcoming show.

Intelligence having been received of the recent death of the father of President Duff in Scotland, the society passed a resolution expressing the deep sympathy felt in the president's sad bereavement.

Denver.

The club met on Friday last, and the members turned out in good force. It was decided to hold a meeting every week from now until the show is over. The arrangement committee was appointed, consisting of five of the leading representatives. A paper on "The Easterner" was read by Philip Scott.

This has been a quiet week for trade, nothing going on socially excepting the Horse Show, and that did not help the business much. A severe frost has settled everything outside—a good thing, too, for chrysanthemums are coming along very fast, and some pretty good carnations are to be seen around.

DENVER.

New Haven, Conn.

At the meeting of the New Haven County Horticultural Society, Tuesday evening October 2, the project of holding a flower show this year was abandoned by a vote of the society. The society will continue its monthly meetings. A series of lectures and discussions is being arranged for, and the Fall and Winter's work promises to be quite interesting. An exhibition will take place at each meeting. The funds raised for the intended flower show will be retained and augmented for use in the Spring, when an exhibition of flowering and decorative plants and cut flowers will take place. The date for that display is not yet set, but will be about a week previous to Easter.

The Market.

The state of the cut flower trade is anything but satisfactory at present writing. Owing to the very disagreeable weather that prevailed during the earlier part of the week, it was next to impossible to dispose of the quantity of flowers coming in. The street vendors had no inclination to speculate, and roses were a drug in the market. Thursday brought clear, cool weather, and the supply of roses shortened up considerably. The effect of the changeable weather is plainly shown on most of the stock reaching the city, and mildewed foliage is not the exception, but the rule.

Dahlias are quite plentiful, especially white ones; no frost having yet been experienced to check their flowering. These are used extensively in funeral work, and the poor demand for carnations is, in a measure, due to this fact.

Chrysanthemums are very backward as yet. Last year at this time they were the principal flower on the market, while at the present time there are but a few dozens arriving daily. Yellow Monarch has begun to come in, in small quantities, and being the only yellow in sight, the flowers are easily disposed of.

Violets are on hand much in excess of the demand for them. What to do with all the stock is a problem that is facing the dealers just now. Retailers are not using nearly so many as in other years at the same period, while, on the other hand, the output seems to be almost doubled. Of course, there can be but one result from these conditions, and flowers of the previous day's shipments are offered at a dollar a thousand, while many of the fresh ones fetch but 25c cents per hundred.

Orchids and lily of the valley move very irregularly, there being no steady demand for either of them. Asparagus, both in strings and bunches, is also lingering longer on the tables of the dealers than usual, and a decrease in the prices of these materials is noticed.

Among the retailers there is very little life in the business at present. Windows are kept looking bright and seasonable. Tritomas, hydrangeas, dahlias and cattleyas, all being obtainable at such reasonable figures, are being used lavishly for window display and are quite effective.

Auction Sales.

Tuesday was a stormy day, but the attendance at the auction marts seems to be benefited when the weather is disagreeable. At William Elliott & Sons a large consignment of palms, ferns, pandanus, etc., from the establishment of N. Studer, Anacostia, D. C., was disposed of.

The annual orchid sale of Sander & Co. will be held on Tuesday next, October 16, in the auction rooms of Cleary & Co., 60 Vesey Street, J. P. Cleary, auctioneer.

Traendly & Schenck have added another telephone to their outfit; one instrument was not sufficient to take care of the numerous calls. The firm's new telephone numbers are 798 and 799, Madison Square.

Dan'l D. L. Farson has entered the employ of William Elliott & Sons, 54 Dey Street, as traveling representative. He started on a Western trip Monday last.

Visitors; George Fields, Washington, D. C.; Gustave N. Amrhyn, Superintendent of Public Parks, New Haven, Conn. Louis G. Pfunder, Portland, Oregon, arrived from Europe, Saturday, the 6th inst., on the S. S. Pretoria. Mr. Pfunder has been attending the Paris Exposition in the capacity of United States Commissioner.

The Committee on Alleys of the New York Florists' Club met Thursday afternoon and temporarily engaged the alleys at the Arlington, No. 19 St. Mark's Place, between Second and Third Avenues. These are three in number, are on the ground floor, and are well ventilated. A good attendance of the members is requested to try the alleys on Monday evening, October 15. Transfer from any of the Metropolitan cars at Eighth Street, and the car passes the door.

Personal.

WATERTOWN, CONN.—Otto T. Roeske has purchased the heating apparatus from Florist Benedict in Morris.

ROME, N. Y.—H. B. Snow, the florist who recently purchased the Seeley property on Railroad street, has moved the building to the front of one of his greenhouses. It will be fitted up to be used in connection with his business.

WHY DO FLORISTS

not use the same common sense in buying their heating apparatus as in developing their plants? On certain plants, money and time are thrown away, and no matter how much money and time are spent on them they never amount to anything. It is so with boilers; unless they have excellence in their construction, they are a constant source of

WASTE

Such boilers are usually cheap when first bought, but because of repairs, waste of fuel, labor required in managing, they are a continual source of expense, and every year the florist wastes the difference between what he has paid for a poor boiler and what he would have to pay for a good one. Our boilers are acknowledged of superior merit, they operate with a reasonable supply of

and the labor required in managing is reduced to a minimum. With these boilers the florist does not have to STAY UP NIGHTS to keep his plants from freezing. He sleeps with perfect confidence that the boiler will take care of itself and provide the heat wanted. Where our boilers are known they are appreciated. Where they are not known it is safe to say money is wasted.

WE KNOW that our statements are prejudiced because we are interested in selling our boilers. Do not believe them, but write for our Catalogue and read the letters of florists who have used these boilers and who have written us the results accomplished. They are not prejudiced or interested.

Season Opens Late.

It is quite evident that the season will open late here this year. Business in the flower line should by this time be well under way, but the retail stores have but little doing so far. Regular flower buyers are scarce, and the bulk of the work at present is for funerals, some good orders having been received in this line. There have been several prominent weddings in the suburbs the past week, but outside of bouquets the florist has not been sent for. Prices are about as quoted last week. The past 10 days of cloudy weather have been very detrimental to roses, and many poor flowers, with weak stems, are seen. Good carnations have been in demand; in fact, white have been very scarce on days when an extra quantity of funeral work was on hand.

Early Chrysanthemums.

S. S. Pennock was the first to offer chrysanthemums this season. He received the first shipment on October 3; these were of the variety Montmort and sold at $3 per dozen. The demand being slow, the price has dropped this week. He now offers Bergmann, in addition to the above-named sort. Most of the stores bought some for window display purposes. So far few chrysanthemums have been asked for by patrons.

Jottings.

William Scott, Buffalo, was in town this week on business for the Pan-American Exposition. He is visiting exhibitors, and making arrangements for the despatch of different plants, bulbs, etc., for the Exposition.

The second consignment of Roman hyacinths arrived this week, much behind time. With some dealers, this was the first shipment; a few received a small lot some time ago. The tardiness of the French growers has caused much trouble to dealers this season, many orders being held to make a full shipment, while in several cases the Holland stock was sent out, and another shipment must now be made.

CHAS. BLACK, Hightstown, N. J.

From all sides the cry seems to come that chrysanthemums will be later this year. While it is true that the flowers finish very rapidly from now on, if the weather is cool and bright, the fact is evident that the dull, wet weather we have had for the past 10 days will make quite a difference in the case of the earlier flowers. Glory of the Pacific, with its white sport, Polly Rose, should be in by this time; but I have not seen any of them as yet. Robinson we have been, hitherto, able to commence cutting by the 18th of this month, but at this date, October 10, the flowers are only just beginning to expand. October Sunshine will be ready for cutting in a week, and a beautiful thing it is. The bad weather does not affect it as it does so many of the earlier varieties, causing them to damp, and, I think, as this variety becomes better known, it will be grown more extensively. True, it is a trifle pale in color, but a beautiful clear yellow notwithstanding. Sunderbruch and Australian Gold are both well forward, but not so early as last year. Australian Gold, on the early bud, has too long a neck to rank very high among yellows. Trenor L. Park is also pushing up rapidly.

The thrips should be closely looked for as the flowers develop. The number of petals a single insect will disfigure in a flower overnight is appalling. Sunderbruch is one of the favorite varieties for this pest to work on, though in its absence any other old variety will do.

The grower with all his early kinds together in one house is fortunate, as he can maintain the dry, buoyant atmosphere which the opening flower needs, with a night temperature of 50 degrees, without injury to the later varieties, which require to be syringed yet on bright days to keep down the red spider and aphis. The black fly grows apace in a dry, bracing atmosphere, and it is impossible to fumigate heavily enough to kill them, if half the plants in the house are in full flower.

Feeding the early varieties should be stopped when they are well showing color. In the case of Glory of the Pacific, it should be done before the bud shows color, and the same rule applies to Pink Ivory. If continued too long the flowers, instead of coming pink, will be washy, and neither pink nor white.

Clear, cold weather from now on will bring in the midseason, and later varieties about their usual time. The buds are swelling fast, and many of them are showing specks of color around the edges. Mayflower, Hardy, Morel, Bonnaffon, Falconer, and Belle of Castlewood are showing color, more or less. White Bonnaffon has picked up wonderfully since the cooler weather. Buds on both crown and terminal seem coming equally well.

Of the late ones Golden Wedding, Chadwick, Jerome Jones and Lucie Faure are still comparatively small in the bud, but look promising. These late varieties will stand feeding for some time yet. Liquid from cow or sheep manure is best, though if your plants are in good condition and do not require much feeding, a few applications of chemical manures will suffice. Nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia may be used in the proportion of one pound to 50 gallons of water, but it is not advisable to use either after the bud shows color, as these fertilizers have a tendency to make the flower soft, and a dose of nitrate of soda given too late will cause all the petals to fall from the head and, possibly, that variety or varieties to get a bad name as being too soft, and bad shippers, when the fault lay really with the grower. Used carefully, the chemical manures are a great help, but bitter personal experience seems to be the only way to teach some men to be careful in the use of these. IORA.

Mr. Eisele's European Trip.

At the Dreer establishment, Riverton, N. J., I met that genial person, J. D. Eisele, bronzed from his recent European trip. He looks 10 years younger, and says he feels as he looks. Much of his time was spent, together with George D. Clark of the Seed Department, in looking for new things both in annuals and perennials. They found several novelties, but very few of much promise, among them a new montbretia of German origin, which greatly resembles Crocosma imperialis, introduced a few years since, excepting that it is larger, in fact, the largest yet seen of this family. The flower is a dazzling scarlet, borne on a long spike, and the plant is very free. It will make a grand bedding subject, or for cutting during Summer, as it comes into bloom very early, and continues until late in the season. Mr. Eisele has had the plant under observation for four years. A new hardy climber is Polygonum baldshualcum, a strong, rapid grower, commencing to bloom in July and continuing until cut down by frost. The flower is creamy white in color, being borne in large feathery sprays. The plant will become very popular; but is somewhat difficult of propagation. Dahlias were splendidly done at the Palm Garden, Frankfort, some new kinds being very fine. They were at their best at the time of Mr. Eisele's visit. The finest display of aquatics was seen at the gardens of Lord Rothschild, at Gunnersbury, London; and the first nectarine ever tasted by the visitor was sampled at the gardens of J. Pierpont Morgan, at Dover House, where that entertaining and enthusiastic member of the craft, Mr. McCloud, has presided for several years, and is responsible for the high character of this charming establishment.

The mammoth plant of the Rochford's was visited, and it being a holiday the visitors were invited in by the genial head of the concern to witness the games to be participated in by the army of employees. The interest taken in the sports by their jovial employer, together with the good feeling exhibited toward him by the boys, was a grand object lesson, and one which could not but make a favorable impression upon those who witnessed it.

Very little that is new was seen in cannas, nothing better than what is observed in the trial grounds here, and noticed elsewhere. In hardy plants we have Desmodium penduliflorum, one of the prettiest things in its class. The flower is of a wine color, and borne in racemes in great profusion. A baccharis, with flowers creamy white, produced in dense clusters, was also noted. Azaleas are fine this season. Mme. Van der Cruyssen is rather scarce, but enough was secured to fill contracts.

Many inquiries were made regarding the Pan-American Exposition, and it is very likely that a larger number of Europeans will visit the Bison City on this occasion than attended our World's Fair at Chicago. W. M.

In connection with the Handicraft Schools of Hartford, Conn., is a School of Practical Horticulture where students are instructed in the study of fruits, flowers, botany, economic entomology, market gardening, and landscape gardening. The marketing of crops is also given both study and practice. H. D. Hemenway is director of the school.

Benjamin B. Nourse, the inventor of Nourse's folding plant stand and Wardian flower cases, died at Westbrook, Me., recently, aged 86 years.

The Model Plant Stake Co. have had an exceptionally large number of orders of late, including one order for 57,000 carnation supports.

The Bindekunst says that the Frankfurt Show reached the goal it had in view. The projectors and exhibitors share alike in the success, and as both parties were not disappointed in their expectations, it may be safe to expect a second similar exhibition in the near future.

A French philanthropist has opened a free "hospital" for plants in the Faubourg St. Antoine, and the institution is proving a great boon to poor Parisians, nearly all of whom are flower lovers and have plants in their windows. The "hospital" buildings are big greenhouses, and the doctors and nurses are gardeners who look after the plants which are kept until they recover, when they are returned to their owners.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

"Open Thine Hand wide unto thy Brother, and to thy needy, in thy Land."

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have, for the convenience of our readers, decided to receive subscriptions at this office for the Galveston relief fund, which will be at once acknowledged in these columns, and the amount contributed forwarded to the proper authorities as the donations of our trade on behalf of their suffering brethren in the storm-swept sections. Checks and money orders for the Galveston relief fund should be made out in favor of the A. T. DeLa Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., crossed "in aid of Galveston sufferers."

If you, dear reader, without an hour's warning, without the faintest possibility of escape therefrom, were suddenly, through some unforeseen overwhelming power, awful in its work of death and desolation, deprived at one fell stroke of all your earthly possessions, glad to escape with your life, you would still be, however, bravely you might strive to bear your trouble, mentally tired and sick at heart, and the substantial sympathy of your friends, as shown in their ministering to your wants, and in their financial efforts to restore your losses, would be welcomed, each and every act of kindness, as angels' visits.

You, however, are fortunate; you have not suffered; your brethren in Galveston have, though, and they need your sympathy and substantial assistance.

Let them have it promptly.

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

The Galveston florists met October 2, at the home of Mr. J. D. Pruessner, and organized. Mr. Pruessner was elected chairman, and Mr. F. G. Laeverenz, secretary.

We beg to acknowledge receipt of draft from the Hon. W. C. Jones, Mayor of our city, to the amount of $154, which you were instrumental in collecting and forwarding for our benefit. Any future donations that may be addressed to you, kindly forward same to Sealy, Hutchings & Co., bankers, of this city, to be placed to the credit of the Galveston Florists' Fund. We will render you final account of disbursements.

We have brought our condition to the notice of the Chicago Florists' Club, also of the S. A. F. Previous letters of individual florists have pretty well stated our immediate needs, and every florist of this broad and generous land is by this time fairly well acquainted with our condition, and knows where we stand—we simply have to commence at the bottom of the ladder again. Any communication addressed either to the chairman, or secretary of the Association, will receive prompt attention.

The florists of Galveston beg to convey to you their warmest thanks for the kind assistance which you so far have rendered them, and the kind contributors to our cause may rest assured of our eternal gratitude. Kindly aid us in future in the furtherance of our aims, and oblige,

THE GALVESTON FLORISTS,

The Carnation as a Party Emblem.

Political leanings aside, we believe that every carnation grower in America will welcome the selection of the divine flower as one of the great party emblems, during election campaign this year—the first time that a flower has been chosen as such in the history of national politics. The carnation is President McKinley's favorite blossom, and that is the reason why the Republican party has selected that flower as its emblem. It is recorded that when Mr. McKinley first entered Congress, his mother, on his leaving home, gave him a pink carnation. She had read, says a writer, years before, that "those who succeed in cultivating perfect carnations understand the true science of flowers. Happy is the florist, or owner of a garden, who can boast that he can raise six perfect blooms of these beautiful blossoms." So interested did she become from these sentences, that she devoted years of her life to raising carnations, and on the morning that her son entered Congress for the first time he wore his mother's gift on his black coat—a perfect carnation flower.

In order to still further create interest in this feature of the campaign, the wholesale florists and growers in New York and vicinity, have, at the instance of C. W. Ward of Queens, agreed to furnish carnations for the New York Wholesale Dry Goods Club, to be worn in the Business Men's Parade, in New York, on November 3. Mr. Ward will supply quantities of the varieties President McKinley, a beautiful clear pink, and the now well-known Governor Roosevelt. Dailledouze Bros. will furnish a quantity of No. 666; John N. May, of Olympia. Other contributors, we understand, will include the Briarcliffs greenhouses, Wood Bros., Thorwald Jansen, Charles Hunt, A. J. Tharp, of New York State. It is estimated that 50,000 carnation blooms will be forthcoming, as the result of the above donations.

Photographic Contest for September.

The first prize in the Photographic Contest for September goes to Mr. Peter Bissett, Washington, D. C., for his view of the Water Garden at "Twin Oaks," that city, a beautiful picture, and an excellent piece of photographic work. Mr. Bissett has been fortunate enough to secure an almost perfect lighting of his well-chosen subject, and this, together with the wonderful amount of detail (due no doubt to a good lens) and careful attention to development, printing, etc., has given him a picture to be proud of. The plate used was a Seed 26x, stop F 28, and the exposure three seconds on a cloudy day in September.

A prize has been awarded to Rudolph Windt for a view in Forest Park. We hope to reproduce these pictures on an early date.

The Wages of Florists.

That was a frank admission reported as having been made by the employing florists of Denver, Col., to the effect that the wages paid their help were lower than those paid in other lines of industry, where less skill and reliability were necessary to turn out the finished product. To the wage-earner this must appear a somewhat anomalous condition, yet the explanation of it given by the Denver florists, namely, the low scale of prices received by them for plants and cut flowers, seems not an unreasonable one, though, of course, the help as individuals contribute in no way to the existence of such a condition. It would appear evident, too, that a bettered state, so far as the help is concerned, would result from the establishment of more uniform prices among employers. That this uniformity exists in other lines of trade is also to be inferred from the statement that in these higher wages are paid for less skilled workmen; or, perhaps, employers in other businesses are content with a smaller share of the profits accruing therefrom than are the florists from theirs. If the former deduction is correct, is it just for employing florists, through lack of harmony among themselves in the matter of selling prices, to hold down the wage level of their employees to a standard below what it actually should be?

"The laborer is worthy of his hire" at all times, and that hire should be commensurate with his actual value to those employing him, and not be governed by conditions for which he himself is totally unaccountable. The lack of good help in the flower trade is in greater or less measure traceable to the wage scale, admittedly low, prevailing, and to provide a remedy for the one will naturally lead to the betterment of the other.

The American Rose Society.

The American Rose Society's Executive Committee held a protracted session in Hotel Westminster on Friday, October 5, for the purpose of revising the schedule in connection with the forthcoming Second Annual Exhibition of the Society to be held in March next. The schedule is now in the printer's hands, and will be ready for distribution in about a week or ten days. Copies may be had on application to the Secretary, Leonard Barron, 136 Liberty street, New York.

The classes for cut blooms were revised and enlarged. The principal alteration in the schedule, however, will be found in the classes for pot plants; these have all been thrown into the open classes.

A gold challenge medal with bar will be offered for the first time for the best exhibit of cut blooms of novelties introduced during the four years preceding and including the date of the exhibition. A grand challenge cup will be offered to private gardeners, but the particulars governing the competition for this have not yet been decided upon.

A large number of classes have been instituted for single blooms open to private gardeners and amateurs only, which should insure a good display.

The following scale of points was adopted:

Points.	Competitive Classes.	Novelties for Certificates, Etc.
Size	15	10
Color	20	20
Stem	20	15
Form	15	15
Substance	15	10
Foliage	15	15
Fragrance	For novelties only.	5

New York Florists' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the club was held on Monday evening, October 8, in Elks' Hall, corner 27th Street and Broadway. President O'Mara, in opening the proceedings, mentioned that those members who had not yet received a copy of the Souvenir Book, would do so within the next few days, as Treasurer Weathered had the books all prepared for mailing.

A Gratifying Report.

A report from the Ways and Means Committee was read by W. A. Manda, the secretary of this committee, chairman John N. May being absent through sickness. The reading of the report was received with enthusiasm. It showed that after all collections had been made, a substantial balance would remain, and that it would not be necessary to call for the offered contributions to the guarantee fund.

A Liberal Act.

President O'Mara then referred to the fact that the gardeners, who helped to make the horticultural exhibition such a marked success, had, in most cases, to meet the charges of transportation of their plants to the show out of their own pockets, and stated that, as there was a balance on hand, or would be when all moneys had been collected, it would be well to defray such transportation charges from this fund. A motion to that effect, proposed by Mr. Withers, was carried. The total charges amount to $300.

The Press Committee's Work.

C. W. Ward presented clippings culled from various newspapers, as a report from the Press Committee. The large number of these clippings showed that the daily press had been duly supplied with information regarding the Convention, and that the papers had made free use of such information. It was ordered that the clippings be placed in a scrapbook and kept on file. Mr. Ward consented to have the matter put in such form.

This Money Should be Paid.

The president then called attention to the amount yet due the club by the renters of space, etc., in connection with the Convention. This, he said, was not a debt for merchandise received, but took the form rather of a debt of honor, and must be looked upon accordingly, and not allowed to become old. On motion of Mr. Morris, a special meeting of the club will be held Monday evening the 22nd inst., to provide for the collection of these outstanding amounts.

Additions to the Ranks.

The following new members were elected; Henri Beaulieu, Woodhaven, N. Y.; E. T. Buckingham, Brooklyn, N. Y.; T. H. Keefe, Madison, N. J.; William G. Kirkland, Flushing, N. Y.; John Nash, New York; Hervie C. Harris, Long Island City; W. C. Mansfield, New York; Edward Walz, Bay Ridge; Edward Smythe, Brooklyn, and J. C. Gowing, Queens, N. Y. Three names were placed in nomination for membership, S. Batchelor, J. Lappey and A. Amberth.

A Happy Thought.

A. S. Burns spoke of the recent departure of William Plumb for England, saying that he understood Mr. Plumb intended making his future home in that country, and, as this gentleman had always been a faithful worker in the club, and, moreover, was an ex-president, some fitting testimonial of the club's appreciation of Mr. Plumb's valuable services should be sent to him in England. This met with hearty approval and the president appointed the following committee to discharge that duty, viz: A. S. Burns, John Young, W. J. Stewart, Charles B. Weathered and J. H. Troy.

An Annual Exhibition.

President O'Mara then made a few remarks upon the advisability of holding an annual flower show in this city. W. A. Manda indorsed the president's remarks. He believed the club ought to have such an exhibition, and that it should be held at a regular stated time when the public would come to look for it. Samuel Henshaw said the spacious rooms at the Bronx Park Botanical Garden, had already been offered, free of expense, for the holding of such an exhibition. C. W. Ward moved that a plan and scope committee be appointed to take up the matter; the motion was carried, and the president announced that members to be appointed on this committee would be notified by mail.

An Illustrated Lecture.

Mr. Henshaw then gave his illustrated talk on Puerto Rico. The views thrown on the screen portrayed scenes in Ponce and San Juan, and showed the flora of the surrounding country. A rising vote of thanks was tendered the speaker.

George Fields, of Washington, D. C., was a visitor at the meeting.

The House Committee served refreshments at intervals during the evening; this has become a regular feature and helps to make the meetings interesting.

On the Exhibition Table.

Several exhibits of dahlias were made. Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., had quite an elaborate display, in which were many fine varieties of the pompoa and cactus types. This exhibit was awarded a cultural recommendation. A. L. Miller, Brooklyn, displayed two bunches of dahlia Camelliæflora, which were highly commended. H. Beaulieu, Woodhaven, showed a bunch of seedling dahlias, also specimens of Japanese pears, which the committee pronounced an interesting exhibit.

Bowlers' Business Meeting.

After adjournment the members of the bowling section met and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, J. Thielmann; vice-president, W. Marshall; treasurer, A. S. Burns; secretary, T. J. Lang; captain, F. H. Traendly. A vote of thanks was tendered Theo. Roehrs for his efficient services rendered during the tournament. Treasurer A. S. Burns in his report, showed a substantial balance on the right side of the ledger. F. H. Traendly and A. S. Burns were appointed a committee to find suitable alleys, those hitherto used being no longer available.

President Wood's Political Aspirations.

President Edmund M. Wood, S. A. F. O. H., is a candidate for nomination on the Democratic ticket at Natick, Mass., as representative to the Massachusetts Legislature. The Natick Review says: "The Democrats of Natick have an opportunity to put forward a man who in solid capacity is the peer of any man who is likely to be elected to the next Legislature. They should see to it that he receives a unanimous nomination. If this is done his election is almost certain to follow."

BOOKS RECEIVED.

HEDGES, WINDBREAKS, SHELTERS AND LIVE FENCES—By E. P. Powell. Illustrated, 12 mo., pp. 140, cloth. Orange Judd Co., New York. Price 50 cents. This is a compact, practical handbook on the management of hedge plants and hedges. It gives accurate directions concerning how to plant and how to treat them; and especially concerning windbreaks and shelters. It includes the whole art of making a delightful home, especially giving directions for nooks and balconies for bird culture and for human comfort; and for those retreats longed for by the women of the household. The illustrations include numerous ground plans for laying out suburban lots and country homesteads.

A Florist Strikes Gold.

While excavating a pit in the vicinity of his greenhouses, on October 10, A. E. Hunt, a florist, of North Evanston, is reported to have discovered a small "pocket" of gold quartz, about six feet below the surface.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—E. S. Haskell, florist, has assigned to Amos Wadley in the interest of his creditors. His assets are about $1,200, and his liabilities about $5,000.

(200) Plant for Name. M. D. & Son. The name of the plant is Mesembryanthemum crystallinum, popularly known as ice plant.

(201) Peat for Orchid Culture.—The kind of peat used for orchids is that which is full of root fibres. Dealers in orchids make a specialty of handling this soil for the convenience of those who are not in a locality where it can be obtained. The trunks of old ferns gathered from the woods and chopped up into pieces will answer the same purpose as the peat.

(202) Rust on Carnations, G. S.—The carnation leaves are badly infested with rust. To eradicate the same, pick off every affected leaf; then dust the plants with dry, air-slacked lime; let this stay on five or six days, then clean it off with the hose pipe or syringe, and apply another dusting of the lime. Keep the atmosphere of the house as dry as possible. Repeat the lime treatment, and the plants will eventually outgrow the trouble.

(203) Butted Glass.—Will butted glass work as well on a roof, even span, as lapped glass? What is used with butted glass to prevent leakage? Are zinc joints a success?—H.

—Butted glass is used by some large growers, and they consider it superior to the lapping method. There is no doubt that if the butted glass is laid properly, it works as well as the other system. Have the glass cut true, and zinc joints are unnecessary. When a row of glass is laid, push the panes up from the bottom as tight as possible, then drive a nail close to the edge of the bottom light that will hold them tight in their places.

(204) Ventilating a Span-roofed House.—Give us the most convenient way of ventilating a span-roofed house, 100 by 22 feet. We thought of having small sash extend along the top on both sides, 3 feet deep, but we fear the weight will be so great that the plan will be a very inconvenient one.—SUBSCRIBER.

—A better plan would be to have the sash not more than two feet deep, and running the whole length of the house; then connect them with a shaft, so that they can all be raised or lowered at once. What the sash would cost, your local carpenter will tell you better than we can. Apparatuses for lifting sash will be found advertised in the columns of this paper, and a card to any of the advertisers will bring full particulars as to cost, etc.

(205) Black Fly on Violets.—The little black fly referred to is the worst enemy that the violet grower has to contend with, and many remedies have been tried to eradicate it. Keeping down the fly by fumigating with tobacco is undoubtedly the best remedy, taken all in all, as there is no risk to the operator when using it. This remedy should have been applied at the first appearance of the fly, and kept up regularly every other day until the plants were perfectly clear of the pest. The reason the tobacco smoke does not now rid your plants of the insects, is because these harbor on the under side of the leaves, and the latter being so close to the soil the smoke does not reach the fly. We would advise a thorough syringing (taking care to reach every part of the plant, if possible) with tobacco extract, properly diluted. Repeat every second day until three or four applications have been afforded, after which fumigate with tobacco every second night for ten nights, when the fumigating will only need to be done one or twice a week.

(206) Heating.—I have two houses that I wish to heat with hot water so that I can keep up a temperature of 60 degrees, when the temperature outside is 10 to 20 degrees below zero. My boiler is capable of heating 500 square feet of radiating surface. One house is even span, 25 by 15 feet, with walls 4 feet, and ridge 12 feet high. House No. 2 is 16 by 9 feet, lean-to against a barn, with the ridge 10 feet high. The side wall is 6 feet high, with 4 feet of the side and ends of glass.—J. T.

House No. 1 can be heated by two 2-inch mains and 12 1½-inch returns. If there is a purlin under the center of each of the sash-bars, and these are supported by posts, it will be a good plan to carry the flow pipes upon these. The returns should start directly under the south ends of the flow pipes and run either way, across the end to the corners of the house, and then be carried either upon the walls or under the benches to the east end of the house, where they could be joined by a header, and connect with the boiler by means of a 2-inch pipe from each coil. For the lean-to house use a 2-inch flow on the north wall two feet below the ridge, and eight 1½-inch returns along the east and south sides. The heat from elevated flow pipes melts the snow and frost on the glass, and thus favors the entrance of the rays of the sun, thus securing light and heat, and also checks cold drafts of air down upon the plants. The principal benefit from overhead flow pipes is from the more rapid circulation secured, as the heat radiated from the returns when the mains are overhead, is as great as from both flows and returns, when they are all under the benches. For houses 75 to 100 feet long, 2-inch pipe is generally preferable to smaller sizes; but for houses less than 50 feet in length 1¼-inch pipe has many advantages.—L. R. T.

(207) Carnations.—I send you a few diseased carnation plants. Please inform me, through the Question Box, what the disease is, and how to treat it; and if cuttings taken from affected plants will also be diseased. Or is it possible for the plants to grow out of the trouble through the Summer? The soil in which they were planted is very loose with some horse manure added. The plants from which these cuttings were taken were also diseased last Fall when planted in the house, but afterward bloomed freely, showing no signs of disease. The disease also does not show when the plants are in the open ground, but as soon as they are placed in the greenhouses in Fall it spreads rapidly, also to plants that have not been affected.

—The specimens sent, although received in a rather dried-up condition, show a pretty bad case of what is commonly known as twitter. We have noticed this more or less every year at the time the plants are housed. It can easily be distinguished by the ends of the shoots having a twisted and distorted appearance. This is sometimes caused by a check in growth while the plants are in the field. We do nothing for it, as the plants soon overcome it, and seem to be none the worse for it.

Twitter, or a trouble very similar to it, can also be brought about by insects in the ends of the shoots and in the buds. A close examination in a case of this kind will generally reveal the presence of thrips. The only practical remedy is to cut off all shoots and buds and burn them. These little pests keep as far away as possible from the air and light in doing their work.

There is also some trace of spot on the leaves, though not in large quantities. This disease can be distinguished by the round circular spots which gradually eat their way entirely through the leaf, destroying the tissues. If left unchecked and favorable conditions surround the plants for its growth, viz., a moist, humid atmosphere, whose destructive power is largely increased by the addition of heat, with an insufficient supply of ventilation, it would take but a short time to kill a batch of plants. In the center of these small spots are openings from which the spores are discharged, thus spreading the disease in all directions.

The only practical way in which to check or eradicate this trouble is to go over the plants and carefully pick off every leaf showing traces of it. Several pickings will be necessary in mild cases, and in severe cases one may as well strip the plants of all the leaves at once. This will be a severe setback to the plants, but if they are valuable it is worth the while; otherwise it would be better policy to burn up the diseased plants and procure others.

The specimens sent were full of dried leaves, which would indicate that the plants had not been thoroughly cleaned when housed. This is very important. Not only then should they be thoroughly cleaned of all bad leaves, etc., but after they have become established, and before the supports are put on they should be again thoroughly gone over. Constant vigilance is necessary to keep plants clean and healthy in places where they are grown year after year.

I always prefer a medium soil, neither very light nor very heavy, and prefer cow manure to horse manure, although we have used the latter with good results.

I would have no hesitation in propagating from plants which had had twitter and had outgrown it, or from plants which had been affected with spot and had been cleaned of it. H. WEBER.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—Do not apply any liquid manure after the flowers begin to show color; neither must any fumigating with tobacco be done from now on, or the blooms will be injured. If the fly is at all troublesome, spread fresh tobacco stems on the surface of the benches, or between the pots, as the case may be.

CARNATIONS.—The plants are mostly established by this time, and if not yet tied up, this work should be done now. Use either wire hoops, or wire and string, criss-crossed. Either of these is much better than the wooden-stake method, and more economical, as when once applied, the stakes stay for the rest of the season. Do not attempt to feed the plants with liquid manure yet; nor try to rush them along by using artificial fertilizers, or the flowers produced will have a tendency to go prematurely to sleep. Have the houses dry every day before sunset, and leave on some ventilation both day and night.

SMILAX.—As firing becomes regular see that the smilax is syringed accordingly, or an attack from red-spider will soon result, and the leaves will turn yellow.

BOSTON FERN.—If large specimens of these ferns are wanted for the holidays, and old plants are at all scarce, put smaller plants, three or four together, in a large pan, choosing a taller one for the center. Put up in this way they make good substitutes for specimen-grown plants.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.—If one would have this plant give satisfaction when it reaches the lady's parlor, grow it moderately cool, and keep it on the dry side. If forced too hard, and kept in a moist atmosphere, its value as a house plant is impaired; but if grown cool, it is one of the very best plants for the house, and blooms continuously.

Flower Business Beats Politics.

The greenhouses of former Town Collector Samuel E. Banks, of Westport, Conn.; are to be made more attractive by ealargement, the work to that end being now in progress. Mr. Banks, says the Bridgeport (Conn.) Standard, finds more can be made staying at home working at a pretty good floral business than is possible under any circumstances, depending on a political reward.

A Carnation of 1872.

Our illustation represents a plant of carnation, Louise Zeller, and is reproduced from an engraving furnished us by the originator, the veteran Charles Zeller, of Flatbush, N. Y. The variety was a cross between Mont Blanc and Madame De Graw, originated in 1872, and was disseminated in 1874, along with a collection of other seedlings.

Mr. Zeller informs us that he had a bed of this carnation 100 feet long by 7 feet wide, in which the plants grew so strong that cedar poles were used with which to stake them. The variety was a splendid bloomer, though the flowers, as will be seen, were rather small. The picture is interesting, inasmuch as it demonstrates that there were "giants in those days" also.

Crotons.

Though these have not proved an unqualified success as bedding plants, nor are they par-excellence as plants for the drawing-room, nevertheless they are indispensable as a decorative plant, possessing as they do variety in form and coloring unapproached by any other family of foliage plants.

Their culture, taken as a whole, is comparatively easy, given a suitable house where plenty of heat and moisture can be supplied. The old system of propagating by means of mossing is very little practiced at the present time, but it is still the most practicable where extra fine small plants (what might be called single stem specimens) are wanted. Varieties, with long drooping foliage and naturally short jointed, are best for this purpose. It is foolish to attempt to root extra large shoots, as in so doing the bottom leaves are apt to drop, and the specimen is spoiled. Shoots about eight inches in length are quite large enough. Select shoots of a nice free growth, with the wood not too hard, remove a few of the leaves at the point where it is intended to root them; cut the shoot fully half through, drawing the knife in an upward direction; run a strand of raffia through the incision to keep it open, then wrap a good ball of sphagnum moss firmly around. The moss should never be allowed to become dry; and the plant is best kept in a rather close atmosphere, and shaded from strong sunlight.

No attempt at potting up should be made until the roots begin to show plentifully through the moss; then cut the stem just under the moss, and pot, moss and all into that size of pot that will just allow of an easy fit, using a light sandy compost. Keep in same atmosphere until well started, then remove to lighter and more airy quarters. Plants rooted by this system, if carefully handled, receive little or no check, therefore retain their leaves right down to the pot, besides commencing to make leaves of corresponding size to that on the original cutting; whereas in plants from ordinary cuttings, the first course of new leaves, on account of the unavoidable check through entire separation, are smaller than those on the original cutting.

Of course, where the plants are intended to be grown in bush form, they should be pinched to induce branching just after they have got under way in their new quarters, and the roots working freely; therefore, the smaller leaves on the new growth would be no detriment, so that the ordinary cutting, being the quickest means of increase, is for general purposes the most practicable. Cuttings taken now, of matured young growths, with the foliage not too large, and about four inches in length, will root quite freely in the ordinary cutting bench, providing this is filled with clean, sharp sand and gentle bottom heat supplied. If well shaded, and kept comparatively close the plants ought, at this season, to retain all their foliage, which at an earlier date they would be more apt to lose through unavoidable flagging. In from two to three weeks they should be ready for potting into three-inch pots, an open porous compost being used. That composed of equal parts of sod soil, leafmould and sand, and finely sifted, will suit well. The plants should be kept somewhat close for a few days until they begin to root freely, when more or less air should be admitted to the house on favorable occasions.

During the Winter months, to keep crotons growing freely a night temperature of 65 degrees should be maintained, allowing a rise of from 15 to 20 degrees by sunheat. Though crotons like plenty of atmospheric moisture, it is well to guard against overdoing things in this respect, during the dull short days, or mildew may attack the young plants; and, again, the other extreme, that of having the atmosphere too dry and burning, is apt to cause the dropping of the old leaves. In short, the dull Winter days is the only time at which they require careful handling.

Though not gross feeders, a little well-rotted barnyard manure added to the compost for subsequent pottings, will be advantageous. Being rather susceptible to over-potting, only small shifts had better be given. For Summer quarters I prefer a house where the plants can be kept near the glass, which I shade slightly. Some cultivators grow crotons in the full sunlight, contending that they get brighter coloring. This is so far true, but I maintain that a better harmony of colors is obtained with slight shading, together with a more luxuriant growth. The growth in the fully exposed plants is apt to be stocky, the leaves smaller, and the colors less defined, especially in the yellow shades, where the green particles also take on a yellowish tint. If shading is overdone, lack of color would, of course, result. A successful compromise might be arrived at between the two systems, by allowing the plants to make their growth under slight shade, affording full exposure after the middle of September when the sun's rays are less burning, but still strong enough to make up any deficiency in coloring.

From a commercial point of view, plants in six-inch pots are the most serviceable, the growing of large specimens being usually left to the private gardener; but I am sorry to say we too seldom see well-grown large specimens, even in private establishments.

Varieties might be enumerated up to, and even exceeding, the century mark, all claiming some special distinction and all worthy of a place in a collection. From this fact it will be seen that it is a hard matter to make a selection, so I will only name a few of the more common and easiest grown varieties of long-standing and proven merit. First then for single stem specimens for table decoration and kindred purposes. As I said before those with long drooping foliage are best, and I may add most graceful. Here might be included such varieties as angustifolia, majesticum, tortile and rosea pictum. Other varieties, though not drooping in habit, which make handsome plants grown in this form, also being good for any purpose, are: Disraeli, Lady Zetland, Daybreak, and Imperator. In a list of good varieties for general use might be included Lord Derby, Queen Victoria, variegatum, Hookerianum, harmonia, interruptum, splendens, Morti and aurea-punctatum. The list might be continued indefinitely, but where only a few are wanted those enumerated may be relied upon, as embracing a good assortment of both color and form.

SCOTIA.

Hardy Perennials in Fall.

A large number of perennials are in full bloom this first week of October, more so than usually, owing to very favorable weather conditions, perhaps. Phlox suffruticosa had a splendid chance for vigorous growth, and the trusses are as large and perfect as on the first crop of flowers. Gaillardias never looked so gorgeous at this date in my recollection. Coreopsis grandiflora is a mass of bloom. Incarvillea variabilis and I. Olgæ make a splendid show. The vernonias are at their best just now, and the hardy asters and baltonias are in perfection. A. nova anglicæ roseus is one of the most noble among them, and the short globular, dense bushes of Mad. Soymier are decidedly most floriferous and lasting. The Japanese anemones have been in flower for a month now, still they hold out, and hundreds of buds give promise for the future if frost does not destroy them before they get a chance.

The beautiful Plumbago Larpentæ, (which the Editor insists is a Summer bloomer), is not past its best yet; it has been flowering scantily since about September 1; but it is only a few days since the patches were fairly well covered with lovely blue flowers, and many are to come yet. Why we should call this a Summer bloomer, I fail to see. Achillea tomentosa has quite a number of trusses scattered over the patch, while A. millefolia rubra holds its own, and will be shown much later in the season. The same may be said of the armerias, Cedronella cana and Centranthus ruber in variety. Chelone Lyoni continues to flower freely. Coronilla varia only changes to a lighter color as the season advances. Dianthus superbus, with its long-fringed petals, has not ceased blooming since August. Eupatorium cœlestinum blooms very freely on a compact plant, also the showy geranium Wallichianum, and the yellow Linum campanulatum. Lobelia syphilitica with the hybrid cardinalis, Œnothera serrulata, Corydalis lutea, Platycodon autumnalis and P. japonicus, Saponaria caucasica, sidalceas, Silene Schafta and quite a number of other plants are still in good condition. The double Tunica saxifraga deserves mention; it is really a fine, hardy plant. The flowers are much larger than in the type, very double, more lasting and freely produced all Summer and Fall. It is a great attraction in our borders at present.

Small Ferns for Fern Dishes.

Read before the Chicago Florists' Club by Andrew McAdams.

Judging from the manner in which the Fall trade is opening, the popularity of small ferns in fern dishes, for table decoration, is to remain. Whether these subjects are as profitable to the florists as cut flowers for a similar purpose, I question. If our customers would allow us to use the more delicate and graceful ferns these plants would be profitable, but purchasers are not satisfied unless we guarantee their ferneries to last from six months to a year. Plant buyers, too, have a habit of putting their ferneries in a darkened dining room, and but few ferns will stand this treatment.

The pteris family is the most useful for the purpose in question. It is a large and varied class, and the plants can be kept in the necessary dwarf condition longer than any others. In addition to the pteris there are only four large fronded ferns which will stand the dry atmosphere of the modern home. First, Asplenium falcatum; second, Lastrea opaca; third, Nephrodium hirtipes, and, fourth, Polypodium carcaranum. These provide a variety necessary to a well-filled dish.

It is well to have some light colored foliage, and for this purpose there are four variegated varieties of pteris to select from. The best, P. cristata variegata, is always scarce. P. Victoria and P. Mayii are rather dwarf in habit. Pteris argyræa is too sensitive to a dry atmosphere. One which I find well adapted to the purpose in view is P. biaurita argenten, the foliage of which is not so light in color as that of P. argyræa, but it is harder and the plant is more compact in growth. We use Cocos Weddelliana for the centers—when we can get the price. The following also can be used for centers: Small kentias, Dracæna Sanderiana, Pandanus Veitchii; also small plants of Nephrolepis cordata compacta, and N. philippinense.

Both varieties of asparagus are good for this work; in fact, too good, as they last too long.

The following are the varieties of pteris which we use the most; there are many more good ones with which I am not familiar; Pteris cretica, P. Wimsetti; P.c. magnifica; P. serrulata cristata; P. s. lacerata; P. s. nana; P. Smithiana, an improvement on P. tremula; P. Ouvrardii, and P. palmata.

I would also mention Adiantum Capillus Veneris.

Interior View of Wholesale Store of E. C. Amling, Chicago.

E. C. Amling's Wholesale Cut Flower Store.

The photograph from which our illustration is made, was taken last month. This large store was originally fitted up for a fancy restaurant, with marble sidewalls, and patent floor, hence is easily kept sweet and clean. The place is very roomy; has fine office, packing room, large, modern cooler, and easy, wide stone steps leading from Randolph Street, making it one of the best for a wholesale cut flower stand in the city. Mr. Amling handles, among others, a fine class of flowers grown in Indiana.

The Market.

Business the past week has shown a slight improvement. The weather has been very disagreeable and entirely unfavorable to trade. Roses continue very plentiful, but the demand for them does not increase much, neither does their quality improve as rapidly as is generally expected at this season. American Beauty are beginning to accumulate on the wholesalers' hands. Prices are held up, however, ranging from $12.50 to $20 and $25 per 100 for fair to fine grades, with smaller sizes at from $4 up to the former figure. Bride and Bridesmaid are coming along fast, but there is not demand enough to use them all. Kaiserin and Carnot are still to be had of very good quality, though the supply of the latter is somewhat limited. Liberty, too, are very plentiful, but are yet small, and prices are correspondingly low, ranging from $1 to $3 per 100, a few making $4.

The carnation market is still heavily supplied by outdoor stock, which is becoming druggy, and prices have fallen a little in consequence.

Chrysanthemums are more numerous, and new varieties are appearing almost daily. Among the whites now on the market are Bergmann and Lady Fitzwygram; yellows, Marion Henderson and yellow Fitzwygram, the latter of poor color; pink, Montmort and Glory of the Pacific. Prices on chrysanthemums vary quite a little; the smaller Fitzwygram fetch $1 per dozen; other sorts $1.50 and $2 per dozen, while a few of the growers have obtained $2.50 and $3 per dozen for the first few dozens of a kind.

Violets are improving in quality quite a little, and are becoming more plentiful, though doubles are still scarce. Singles are plentiful enough, and move only fairly well at 50c per 100.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, had the first pink chrysanthemums of the season in on Thursday, October 4. They were of the Montmort variety. He also brought in his first Glory of the Pacific Wednesday, October 11. Frank T. White is now cutting some very good Bergmann and Marion Henderson chrysanthemums.

E. Allen Peirce started his Fall campaign at the market, Wednesday morning, with chrysanthemums and pinks.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

At the annual election of officers of the society, held on Saturday last, quite a surprise was sprung in the selection of president. The election brought out a very slim vote, and it was a foregone conclusion among his friends that President Francis H. Appleton would be re-elected; but at the eleventh hour an opposition was organized, favoring O. B. Hadwen, of Worcester, for the place, and the opposition ticket won. Mr. Appleton has been president of the society for five years; to him was due much of the credit for the purchase of the land, the site of the society's new building now in the course of erection, and it was the hope of his friends that he might be at the society's head when it removed to its new quarters. Mr. Appleton is secretary of the Building Committee and will probably continue in that capacity. The vice-presidents and various committees were re-elected, almost without change.

There was quite an interesting display at the hall on Saturday, consisting largely of dahlias and orchids. Of the former shown, Lothrop & Higgins made a large display of show, cactus and pompon varieties. C. S. Pratt exhibited a fine lot of cactus dahlias. W. C. Winter's collection included a great many single kinds. Another display, noticeable for the fine condition in which the flowers were received, considering the distance traveled, was that of G. H. Hazard, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

The orchids on exhibition were of a very high standard of quality and in great variety. E. O. Orpet, gardener to Mr. E. V. R. Thayer, received a gold medal for five new seedling orchids, namely, Cattleya Thayeriana (C. intermedia × C. Schroderæ alba); Lælia nigrascens (L. pumila × L. tenebrosa); Lælio-cattleya Bletchleyense (Lælia tenebrosa × Cattleya gigas var. Sanderiana); Lælia juvenalis var. superba, (L. pumila var. præstans × L. Perrinii); and Lælio-cattleya, C. G. Roebling (C. Gaskelliana × Lælia purpurata aurorea). Four of these were grown from seed sown in 1896, and the other from seed sown in 1897. All were shown in flower for the first time. Oakes Ames showed four nice orchids, hybrid Cypripedium media (C. hirsutissimum x C. Spicerianum), hybrid Selenipedium Ainsworthi (S. Roylii x S. Sedenii), Cypripedium Charlesworthii, and an albino plant of a hybrid between C. Lathamianum x C. superbiens).

H. A. Wheeler also staged four very good orchids, Odontoglossum pescatoræ, Peristeria elata, Cattleya Dowiana, and Lælia Dayana.

At the business meeting four new immediate members were elected, and the following were elected to honorary membership: Sir Trevor Lawrence, president of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, and Dr. H. S. Pritchett, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, of this city. President H. H. Goodell of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst; and Dr. B. T. Galloway, horticulturist and superintendent of the gardens and grounds of the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., were elected corresponding members.

James H. Delay, of Beacon Street, has opened another retail store at Washington Street, near the Columbia Theater.

Trade Notes.

This is "Home Week" in Cleveland—a week of carnival promoted by the Business Men's League; a time for all ex-residents of the city to visit the metropolis of the state and view the progress it has made within the past few decades; and the city is at its best, with thousands of flags and banners, myriads of electric lights, and gaily decorated and well lighted stores. The down-town district is in gorgeous attire. Not least among the decorations is the work of the florist; festooning and floral work may be seen on every hand. The occasion has afforded a large amount of work in this line, and for a week past our decorators have been unusually busy. Many of the large retail and department stores have spared no expense in making their establishments attractive. Flowers, autumn leaves, laurel and other evergreens form the principal part of the material used. Store trade shows a vast improvement; orders for funeral work come in freely and counter trade is brisk. With all business is better than it has been at any previous writing since Fall trade opened. Flowers, though limited in variety, continue to improve in quality, and are offered in larger quantities. This is especially true of carnations; the blooms are larger and of better color than they have been. Roses also are of better size and color. Cosmos is offered in large quantities. Prices, however, on all flower stock do not show any change from those formerly quoted, and the rates below obtain at this writing: Carnations, 75c. to $1 per 100; roses, from $2 to $5, according to grade. Asters are about out of the market. Gladiolus, as well, are nearly done. Chrysanthemums are offered in such limited quantities that there is no established price on them.

Retail prices are as follows: Tea roses $1 and $1.50 per dozen; carnations 25c. and 35c. per dozen; chrysanthemums, $4 per dozen; violets, $2 per 100.

An Extensive Funeral Decoration.

The bodies of the five members of Captain James Corrigan's family—wife, three daughters and grandchild—all of whom perished in the wreck of the yacht Idler a few miles above Cleveland harbor, on July 7, last, were buried at Lake View Cemetery, on Tuesday afternoon of this week. A niece of Captain Corrigan, who died early last month, was buried at the same time. The decoration at the cemetery was an extensive one, and was handled by Smith & Fetters. Arbor Vitæ and cosmos were used largely. The floral designs were magnificent, and numbered over 40. These were furnished by many of the local designers. The burial was one of the saddest affairs that ever occurred here. The only two remaining members of the family are Mr. Corrigan and a son 22 years old.

Change in Business.

The business which for many years has been operated by J. M. Gasser, was recently succeeded to by J. M. Gasser Co., the partners consisting of J. M. Gasser, L. F. Darnell, and Isaac Kennedy. Mr. Gasser is one of Cleveland's prominent florists; Mr. Darnell has been manager of Mr. Gasser's retail store for several years. Mr. Kennedy is a prominent grower from the East, and several months ago took charge of Mr. Gasser's greenhouses on Lake Avenue.

This week cards were issued announcing the opening by the new company of a new flower store at 232 and 234 Euclid Avenue (opposite the Stillman Hotel) on Thursday and Friday, October 11 and 12.

This is a spacious double store, 30 feet wide and 70 feet deep. Within the past few weeks extensive alterations have been made, new fixtures added, and the store is to-day complete in every detail, and well fitted for a wholesale and retail floral business. A conservatory 30 x 40 feet, 18 feet high, has been built at the rear of the store. The entire front of the store room (30 x 40 feet) is given up to the retail department; the back part (15 x 30 feet) of the main room, on one side to wholesale flowers, and on the other side a work room, 15 x 30 feet. The retail store is finished in ivory, the fixtures in ivory, the side walls are covered with burlapin Nile green; the ceiling is done in cream yellow, with border of darker yellow. The cove is in tints of Nile green and yellow. The floor is polished oak, inlaid. Two ice boxes, 7 x 8 feet, are conveniently arranged, and will accommodate large stocks of cut flowers. The entire place is lighted with electricity, over 60 incandescent lamps being used. Hot water, under pressure (Scollay system) is the method of heating, both store and greenhouse.

This store will be under the direct charge of Mr. Darnell; the old stand at 99½ Euclid Avenue will not be discontinued at this time; William Kruzen and H. J. Bradbury will be in charge of the lower store.

Notes.

J. Q. A. Turnbull, representing Samuel S. Pennock, was in town the early part of the week.

Charles Erhardt, manager of the floral department of The Hoyt Kent Selton Co., spent the early part of the week at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Frederick Blecker returned from New York City recently, and is now in the employ of C. M. Wagner, the Erie Street florist. Mr. Blecker was for nine years with J. M. Gasser.

The many friends of O. A. C. Oehmler were pained to learn of the death of his little son, as announced in the trade papers by news item from Mount Vernon, N. Y., last week.

State of Trade.

A hot spell of weather for four days last week, the thermometer reaching 86 degrees, something unusual in October in this locality—brought forward roses too fast, lessening the supply of high-grade stock. This temperature was also against carnations in the houses, but again increased the output of out-door flowers, some of the big growers cutting five or six thousand very good blooms a day for several days last week. Good standard carnations range from $1 to $1.50; a few fancies at $2; common sorts 50c. to 75c.

In roses Beauty, if extra, bring $3 per dozen, but the inferior and shorter grades are harder to work off. In teas few reach the $5. The varieties of chrysanthemums coming in are still confined to white and yellow Glory of the Pacific, with a small batch of Montmort. Amling received 500 of the former from Indiana, but they were ordered in advance. Hunt also is receiving shipments, but they are hardly equal to the demand at $1.50 to $2 per dozen.

Violets are slow sellers; fair, double flowers are now in, but are hard to move. Some high-grade gladiolus are yet in the market. At Western Springs several excellent varieties have been flowering lately, also a fine lot of dahlias. Asters are nearing the end; enormous quantities have been sold in this market the present year. Shipping trade is quite a feature. Nick Wietor says he shipped more flowers last week than in any two weeks previously, with orders ahead, away beyond other years. McKellar & Winterson are doing a big business in white doves this Fall, as well as in other lines of florists' supplies.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club on Friday, October 5, was well attended. The following new members were elected: H. M. Bruns, Lewis Wittbold, Otto Wittbold, John Hoft, Park Ridge and August Juergens. A partial list of subscriptions to the Galveston Florists' Relief Fund, amounting to $217, was read. When completed a full list will be published. On motion of W. N. Rudd, a committee of three, consisting of P. J. Hauswirth, W. J. Smyth and C. A. Samuelson, was appointed to confer with the Executive Committee of the Horticultural Society in an effort to make arrangements whereby the proceeds from the usual sale of flowers, during the Fall show, may be turned over to the fund. It is thought that growers will liberally contribute stock for that purpose. W. N. Rudd was appointed a committee of one, to work up interest in a florists' banquet, worthy of the name, to be held at the time of the show.

Andrew McAdams read a paper on "Small Ferns Suitable for Filling Pans, etc," which will be found in another column. This paper was well received and discussed. August Juergens gave a talk on the forcing of bulbs, furnishing lists of those suitable for cut flowers and pot culture.

These short papers and talks by specialists are taking features of the meetings, being preferred to elaborate essays, and affording an opportunity to bring out in the subsequent discussions the ideas of others present.

At the next meeting of the Club, October 19, occurs the election of officers; a large attendance is looked for.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

At the regular quarterly meeting, held October 9, six new members were elected, including Walter Retzer, Oscar J. Freedman and Walter Kreitling, florists. The treasurer reported $1,100 in the treasury, with dues amounting to $200 to be collected. The matter of Robert Kift delivering his lecture here was referred to the Executive Committee, as also was the subject relative to the establishment of a booth for the sale of flowers at the Fall show for the benefit of the Galveston florists.

It is the sense of the club and contributors generally, that whatever moneys are raised should be applied exclusively toward starting the sufferers in business again.

Round About.

Charles Saltwitch, of Vaughan's greenhouses, and Miss Elizabeth Smart, who has been employed in Vaughan's store for nine years past, were married on Wednesday.

H. & R. Hilmers have in process of erection a fine store and conservatory on the old Seward Place, 190 147th Street.

Wietor Bros., as stock increases, are sending in two shipments a day to their store, the afternoon shipment reaching there at 2 o'clock.

Peter Hollenback, seedsman, W. Randolph Street, recently experienced a sad loss in the death of his wife.

The chrysanthemums at Mt. Greenwood are reported by Mr. Rudd as being about ten days later this year.

Walter & Thill are sending to Budlong's a superior quality of Triumph and Flora Hill carnations.

Visitors: George W. Huber and wife, on a honeymoon trip from Indiana; C. S. Ford, representing A. Herrmann, New York; Herbert Hall, South Park Floral Co.

Trade Notes.

Business the past week has been only fair. With some florists, however, especially those on the South Side and centrally located, good funeral orders were plentiful. Roses, particularly Bridesmaid, have been very abundant, but they have got down to near normal again. Colored carnations are plentiful; just now there is a great scarcity of white, which are worth $1.50 per 100; others bring 75c. to $1 per 100. Beauty has been in good supply; the best bring about $2.50 per dozen. Cosmos is in, selling for 25c. per 100.

The displays of cut flowers, floral designs, and table decorations at the recent fair were very good, especially in view of the amount of money offered as premiums. The principal prize-winners were William Schray & Sons, C. Young & Sons Co., and Ellison & Tesson.

The nursery firm of H. J. Weber & Sons Co. formed a combination with some neighboring vegetable and grain growers, under the style of Boles, Reeder & Weber, and nearly made a clean sweep of the premiums in the fruit, grain and vegetable departments, taking over 80 premiums. For display of fruits, they took the sweepstake, amounting to $75, being also second in the vegetable sweepstakes, and others.

About Town.

W. H. Walthers, 3900 Chicago Ave., a new man in the business, has just completed two good houses in which he has some extra fine chrysanthemums and mignonette.

William Schray & Sons have a lot of the best grown cyclamen ever seen in this city.

C. W. Scott, of Vaughan's seed store, has been in town over a week. He reports business more than satisfactory, with a heavy trade in Christmas goods.

Richard Frow, of Natural Bridge Road, has as fine a lot of carnations as anybody in town. They are now furnishing a lot of nice flowers.

C. C. S.

Rochester, N. Y.

E. E. Keller, of Pittsburgh, was in town last week visiting his father, J. B. Keller. Mr. Keeler made the trip to Rochester in his automobile.

J. B. Keller's Sons recently sold off 1,000 kentias, six to eight leaves, of their own growing, at a satisfactory price. They find the growing of palms from seed more profitable than importing, when the check which the plants receive in importing is taken into account. They are now building a new house 20 x 100 feet, for azaleas, to make more room for growing palms.

James Vick's Sons had an opening at their new retail store on Stone Street, on October 4-6. The interest of the large display of bulbs was enhanced by additional labels showing where the stock was grown. The store was handsomely decorated with the products of the firm's trial grounds.

Frank Lavigne's houses on Frank Street, are models of neatness and thrift. The cement walks which he has just laid throughout add much to the general effect. Mr. Lavigne has to carry a large assortment of plants for his retail trade. Plants of Asparagus plumosus well set with seed seemed rather unusual. The flowers were hand pollinated.

George P. Filer, a market gardener on the "Ridge Road," in Greece, has two houses, each 20 x 100 feet, formerly used for vegetables, in carnations. A third house of the same size, under construction, has one side planted to violets; the other will be filled with carnations. The good appearance of Mr. Filer's stock gives promise that his successful experience of two years past will be repeated the coming season. He grows mainly Scott, Daybreak, Flora Hill and McGowan, with smaller lots of new varieties on trial. He also has over 25,000 pansy plants in the field for Spring trade.

Charles E. Fry has rented his nearby farm and is now living on Warner Street, near Otis Station. He has removed his greenhouses to land adjoining the Vick & Hill Co.'s grounds at Barnard Crossing. They are in charge of Jacob Foos. He has 10,000 feet of glass in carnations, principally Daybreak, Flora Hill and Red Jacket. Mr. Fry has found carnations a satisfactory crop when he could give them his whole attention. His stock was planted in early and is now throwing some fine flowers. A house 10 x 100 feet, of Marie Louise violets, has stood the late heated term well, and looks clean and thrifty. He is planting out two large beds of pansies for Spring sales, the stray blooms showing a good range of colors.

George Bennett is another successful carnation grower in Greece. His place joins Mr. Fry's on the west. Mr. Bennett has had about 4,000 feet of glass in carnations for several years, and has a reputation for fine stock. He has just erected two fine new houses, 20 x 100 and 30 x 140 feet, large glass, short span to the north. The plants are exceptionally clean and vigorous. Flora Hill, C. A. Dana and Daybreak are grown largely; but there are good sized blocks of some 20 others. Mr. Bennett finds Dana especially satisfactory where the temperature is liable to drop to near the frost line. He is also well pleased with The Marquis and Ethel Crocker. Governor Griggs, he thinks, will supersede Daybreak. It holds its color better in hot weather. Crane is his favorite in scarlet and Maceo in dark red—the latter being especially free flowering. Mr. Bennett is trying to establish a pretty pink sport of Flora Hill, which showed up last year. As a few of the cuttings held to the type, it is likely that the variation will become fixed. The ground color of the petals is like the Dana, but they are delicately and distinctly fringed and flaked with white. The effect is very pleasing. Except in color of flower the plant is identical with Flora Hill.

A hasty glance at the establishment of the Vick & Hill Co. showed them in the midst of Fall digging of herbaceous and nursery stock. A heavy rain on October 7 will forward this work, and has been of great value to the large nursery interests about Rochester. The company's aster fields were a grand sight the last week of September, and many thousands of blooms were shipped to other markets.

The houses of the late Frank S. Payne have been sold to a market gardener. The stock of flowering and bedding plants was disposed of earlier in the season, mainly to the Vick & Hill Co.

Baltimore.

Trade Notes.

The market is unchanged, with, perhaps, an over-supply of outdoor roses. Dahlias continue scarce. Anemone japonica sell well at 50 to 75 cents a single flower.

A Dahlia Show.

The dahlia exhibition at the club rooms was a success, and in spite of bad weather it attracted quite a number of visitors. Vincent & Son, White Marsh, were the largest exhibitors, their display doing full justice to the remarkable diversity of color and form of the up-to-date dahlia collection. To judge from remarks overheard at the show, and experience in the open markets, the public seems to care more for the old type of flower, than the more elegant Juarez or cactus dahlia. But eventually the cactus dahlia (I regret the misnomer) will no doubt win on its merits. This reminds your correspondent of the great popularity of the cactus dahlia in Germany. Nearly every grower there provides a frost shelter for the plants, in the form of a frame, covered at night with canvas or glass, thus prolonging the cutting period for one or even two months, according to season. Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, exhibited a very interesting collection of nymphæas. The general public as well as the florists appreciate this firm's efforts in popularizing these fine Summer aquatics. John Cook exhibited his new roses, Baltimore and Mrs. Robert Garrett, both in excellent form.

Among Growers.

The Ruxton Nurseries of William Fraser have seen some very substantial improvements this past Summer. A new house 100 x 18 feet, short-span-to-the south, has been erected. The Beauty roses, the best at this time around here, have made very fine growth. Bridesmaid and Perle, old plants replanted, are doing exceedingly well, especially the latter. Golden Gate is a favorite, but Mr. Fraser is not very sanguine about Maid of Honor. From his old city establishment he has transferred his ficus stock plants. He finds ficus a good paying Summer culture, when roses do not monopolize the attention.

"The Florists' Exchange advertisement has, single handed, sold the whole stock much quicker than I anticipated," says Mr. Fraser; "in fact, there are not a dozen plants left on the place."

Halliday Bros.' place, in charge of Mack Richmond, is in very fine shape. Carnations are the specialty; five large houses, each 150 feet in length, being filled with them. Flora Hill, Scott and Mack Richmond are the three standard varieties for quantities of flowers. The last named is of wonderful productiveness. Last year's crop averaged 35 disbudded flowers per plant. The color is a good deep red, even during the Summer months. The calyx never bursts. All the good new varieties are planted in greater or less number. One large house had been planted on May 20; the growth of the plants is excellent. Indeed, some varieties, such as Bradt, seem to do much better under glass than when planted out during the Summer. As a whole, the experiment has proved very satisfactory. Chrysanthemums are grown in large quantities and look well. The firm will give a fine exhibition of these flowers this Fall.

Some 4,000 lilies and 8,000 Romans have been planted; the Dutch bulbs are still out. A large lot of ficus for the wholesale trade are grown and look fine in open frames outside.

Until a few years ago Halliday Bros. grew very fine roses, and it seems almost a pity that with the excellent success they had, they have discarded that culture for carnations. But the place, large as it is, does not nearly supply their stores, and experience has taught them, that it is more satisfactory to get roses from outside the town than carnations, the latter losing their keeping qualities after even a short journey in a light box.

Trade Revives.

There is a very general revival of business, and flowers and plants are beginning to sell well again. During the past two weeks there has been a very considerable quantity of funeral work, and all the stores appear to have had a good share of it. Roses and carnations have been fairly plentiful, but asters and other cheap white stock are nearly used up. Some nice, white and light pink dahlias have been received; and with sprays of smilacina have been found very serviceable. A few fairly good violets are coming in, and really first-class flowers bring a good price, while all offered sell readily. The roses coming in have considerably improved in quality.

The weather has been exceptionally fine; so far we have not had frost enough to touch the coleus, and cannas and geraniums are still in full bloom.

A limited number of chrysanthemums are arriving. Some nice cattleyas are seen. These sell very well this season. There is a considerable supply of the Boston fern around; it is very popular.

T. M.

Montreal.

Trade Notes.

The pleasant weather we are having has kept up an abundant supply of outdoor flowers, consequently the demand for indoor stock is still very limited. The quality of roses is rapidly improving; in Beauty this is especially noticeable. Carnations are fairly plentiful; the quality is moderate only. Chrysanthemums are arriving in limited quantities, and the demand is quite brisk. The quality is about the average, in the early varieties; it will be 10 days before local stocks come in freely.

Plant sales are slow and largely confined to the smaller sizes of ferns. Bulbs of all varieties are now arriving, and are showing a uniform increase in size over former years.

Club Notes.

Monday at the club was chrysanthemum night, and the whole evening was spent arranging the various features of the coming show. Walter Wilshire was appointed superintendent. Alfred C. Wilshire will be again in control of the box office. The judges for the various sections are: Groups and plants—George Copland and Thomas McHugh; cut chrysanthemum blooms—Joseph Bennett and Alfred C. Wilshire; miscellaneous plants—John Eddy and John Stamford; roses and carnations—Fred C. Smith and J. Kirkwood; decorations—James McKenna, Colin Campbell and Walter Wilshire. Judging will be by points. It was decided to abolish the flower table. Our patrons want exhibition blooms for 10c. each, and we find it doesn't pay to supply the same at that rate. The advertising committee will spend a larger percentage of its grant on newspaper advertising than in former years, it being found that this method is the best to reach the club's patrons. A neat card, with a simple announcement of the show dates, is being distributed to the various stores; the florists will enclose these cards in the boxes sent out.

The decorative section is being pushed, and the probability is that the florists will make a much better showing than usual.

Lord Strathcona, our honorary president, being at home at present, a box of choice flowers was ordered sent to him, with a request that he preside at the formal opening of the show on the first evening at 8:30. Should the club be so fortunate as to secure His Lordship's presence on that occasion, the success of the exhibition will be assured.

Joseph Bennett will read a paper next club night, on "My Recent Trip to the West." The coming Winter euchre contests will be inaugurated at the meeting fourth Monday in October; Jim Martell and Walter Whiting will constitute the board of management.

We regret to say that J. S. Murray is not yet sufficiently recovered to resume control of his greenhouses; J. Kirkwood has assumed the management. Mr. Kirkwood's spendid abilities as a grower are so well known here, that his success in his present position is assured. B.

Cincinnati.

Trade News.

Business is satisfactory; stock is getting better, and prices are steadily advancing. Chrysanthemums have made their appearance and sell well, at $15 per hundred. White and yellow Fitzwygram are the varieties. They were grown by E. G. Hill & Co., and have longer stems and better foliage than are usually seen on this variety.

The hot weather last week was very trying on all stock. Roses that this week would sell readily at 4c., we were glad to dispose of at less than half that figure.

Jottings.

The writer has just moved into larger quarters in the same building, 113 East Third Street, where his facilities are much better for handling flowers. The room now is 60 feet long by 30 wide, making it the largest commission house in Cincinnati.

Two new stores have been opened on Fourth Street, those of T. W. Hrdesty & Co. and J. W. Rodgers. Both are nicely fitted up.

Wedding decorations are claiming the attention of several of our florists, and many more such are in sight.

E. G. Gillett.

College Point, L. I.

Aaton Schultheis is making extensive additions to his glass area this season. Three commodious houses of Hitchings' latest improved pattern are almost finished, besides 800 lineal feet of heated frames, built especially for growing heaths, etc. A fine new dwelling house is also nearing completion, and a storage shed, 25 x 50 feet, will be finished before Winter arrives, for the purpose of carrying over the stock of bay trees, of which quite a number of nice specimens are on hand.

Heaths are a specialty here, and the frames are filled with clean, well-grown stock of all the best varieties. The larger sizes of Erica fragrans (E. melanthera) are plunged out-doors, and are a magnificent batch. Some of these are being grown to standard shape and will make an ideal center plant for large baskets. Among the palms, a house of large kentias is in very fine condition, the dark green color of the leaves and the stocky habit of the plants proclaiming them at once to be cool and carefully grown. Another house filled with smaller plants of the same variety of palm is a special feature, and these are all house-grown stock and can be relied upon.

Latania borbonica is grown in very large quantities. One house, 165 feet in length, is filled with this variety only, and they are in excellent condition.

Ardisias and orange plants have their fruit well set; these are all in nice shape, large plants of the former being especially fine. Araucarias, of the three commercial varieties, are grown, and a large batch of medium-sized plants are on hand. Rubbers are in excellent shape and plentiful, as are also Boston ferns, aspidistras, arecas and Asparagus Sprengeri. For cut flowers, roses, chrysanthemums, carnations and lily of the valley are the chief crops cultivated. Mr. Schultheis has devoted an entire house to one of his own seedling carnations; this is a very strong and free-blooming kind, of a deep rose-pink color.

One of the most striking subjects in the establishment is the Peruvian peppers. This is the variety that L. Schmutz, of Flatbush, made such a hit with last year. The plants have made a splendid growth; some of them are as much as two feet across, and are covered almost with their vari-colored fruits. This promises to be a great seller and to have quite a run.

Imported azaleas are arriving and are very satisfactory. Experiments along the line of home-grown azaleas have resulted in a very fine batch of plants, stronger by far than those imported.

Violets of the Imperial and Princesse de Galles varieties are planted in frames, and the present condition of them would indicate that violets can yet be grown on Long Island, if necessary care be given them. The plants there are as thrifty as one would desire to see them anywhere. Hydrangeas are still out in the lot; they are one-year-old stock, and have made big heads, averaging from five to seven leads. Crimson Rambler roses and lilac have made fine stock, but these do not go into the houses for some time yet, and will be heard from later.

Flatbush, N. Y.—The Flatbush boys rolled on their new alleys for the first time on Thursday night, October 5. These alleys are on the ground floor, and are nice and airy. The scores that were made run rather low. Whether this was owing to the strange alleys or the lady spectators in the gallery, is hard to tell. Below are the records of pins knocked down:

Chicago.—The Chicago florists' team has joined the Anson Bowling League, formed to play at A. C. Anson's alleys. A. C. Anson was elected president; P. J. Hauswirth, vice-president; E. S. Winterson, captain. The teams competing are the Star, Lawler, Florists, Anson, Laurel, Standard, Orphans and J. F. Harris. The Florists played their first game, October 8, with the undernoted scores. A large crowd attended the meeting, including many ladies.

Trade Items.

A decided warm spell of nearly ten days has been succeeded by cooler weather, which is expected to enliven trade. Except a limited number of October weddings that called for pretentious decorating, Fall business has thus far been light. Adams' store puts on a changed appearance in the recent installing of an ample-sized ice box. In pattern it is of the five-section front style, that prevails so largely in this city, with white enamel finish of the woodwork.

Flowers are generally rather plentiful for this date. No killing frosts have been experienced as yet. Indoor roses and carnations are improving in quality, but are hardly up to a nice size. The first violets have been received, of course, but of a quality scarce beyond their name. If violet growers would vie in the quality of blooms sent in at some stated time or date after October 15 or 20, instead of the name of first cutting a few malformed flowers of outdoor style of growth, a more worthy mark would be set.

VIDI.

Providence, R. I.

Trade News.

The continued warm weather has a depressing effect on Fall business in general, as owing to the absence of frost plenty of outdoor flowers are to be had. There was an abundance of asters this year; with a few exceptions, they were of good quality. Plenty of stock is to be had for made-up work, but the downtown florists find it difficult to get good long stemmed blooms for cut flower orders.

Chrysanthemums arrive in small lots. E. E. King and Rhode Island greenhouses are bringing the best into this market. Violets are also in and find a ready sale. The quality is poor and the flowers realize but a few cents per 100 wholesale. John A. Macrae is cutting large quantities, and his plants give promise of producing a fine lot of good blooms in the future.

Carnations are showing up well, having improved much in the last two weeks. N. G. Pierson is sending some fine Liberty roses to this market.

Jottings.

E. J. Collamore, for a number of years at Franklin Street, has given up business.

James Pierce, Edgewood, has also given up business and will move from the city.

Lawrence Hay, foreman for T. O'Connor, is soon to launch into business for himself. His place will be located on the grounds used by Brown University for botanical gardens. He will also superintend the care of the gardens. His ability as a commercial grower will assure him of success in his new venture.

M. J. Lench & Son, Pawtucket, report good business. Their stock in the greenhouses never looked better. They are about to erect a water tank to hold about 50,000 gallons of water on their plant.

Hazard & Wood are renovating their store, putting in new fixtures, and making ready for Fall business.

Trading stamps are in vogue in this city, and F. A. Fairbrother, who is the only florist downtown having them, reports an increased business.

George Johnson has returned from a visit to his son in Wyoming, where he has been all Summer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

J. D. Carmody's Paper.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

I am very reluctant to criticise a sage like J. D. Carmody and I have waited thus long for someone else to speak, but as no one has done so, I shall have to myself, or burst. I am alluding to the part in Mr. Carmody's essay on greenhouse building, where he tells us to leave a little hole on either side of each sash bar to lead the condensed vapor that may run down the groove outside. I do not believe Mr. Carmody ever built such a house, nor will any practical florist ever take the advice there given. I will accept that the holes close up with ice, and after that do not let in any cold, although I doubt it very much. There is no ice forming until the temperature falls below 32 degrees, and even then, the holes will not all close up at once. If 16-inch glass is used, there will be, in a 100-foot house, about 250 holes; smaller glass will increase the number. Will Mr. Carmody tell us that he has no trouble in keeping such a perforated house warm when the outside temperature is between 40 and 32 degrees. He is lucky, too, if there be no gale blowing at the time.

FIRST ADVERTISED AS COMMERCIAL PLANTS

THEIR PROPAGATION AND CULTURE.

BY GEORGE W. OLIVER, PROPAGATOR TO THE U. S. BOTANIC GARDEN, WASHINGTON, D.C. AND LATE OF THE ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN, EDINBURGH.

A working Hand Book of Every-day Practice for the Florist or Gardener, and those who intend to grow plants and flowers, in the greenhouse or garden, as a means of obtaining a livelihood. Each and every article is written in concise, simple language, and embodies wholly and solely the experiences of the writer.

The plants dealt with comprise those which are commercially handled by Florists, Gardeners and Nurserymen, and include Florists' Flowers, Stove and Greenhouse Plants, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Annuals, Shrubs, Hardy and Tender Vines, and a chapter on miscellaneous subjects in connection with the above.

This reliable cultural book has been gotten up for use not ornament, therefore the price has been fixed at a figure within the reach of all, while it contains more real practical information for those for whom it is intended than is to be found in much more pretentious works costing ten and twenty times as much money. Strongly bound to stand rough handling and plenty of it. Price, $1.00 by mail, postpaid.

A WEEKLY MEDIUM OF INTERCHANGE FOR FLORISTS, NURSERYMEN, SEEDSMEN AND THE TRADE IN GENERAL.

Vol. XII. No. 42. NEW Y[illegible] 20, 1900. One Dollar Per Year.

SEVERAL very large shipments of JAPAN LONGIFLORUM have arrived in very bad condition—more than half of the bulbs having been lost by heating. This large loss will make a scarcity in this article, and probably many dealers will be unable to fill their orders in full.

If you do not succeed in getting your full supplies, we have still to offer a fine lot of

5-7 Bermuda-Grown LONGIFLORUM

These bulbs are in splendid shape. We can offer them at $14.00 per case. 350 bulbs to the case.

WE ALSO HAVE A FINE STOCK OF

LILIUM HARRISII.

7-9 in. size is generally scarce, but we have a very fine stock of this size still on hand. These are a lot of bulbs that were left in the ground and dug late, and, in consequence, are in grand shape. Bulbs are plump, bright and clean, and are as fine a lot of Harrisii as any one would want to handle. We can supply these as long as unsold as follows:

5-7 inch, 400 bulbs to the case, only $16.00 per case.
7-9 inch, 200 bulbs to the case, only $18.00 per case.

ORDER AT ONCE BEFORE WE ARE SOLD OUT.

We can also offer a fine stock of WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS
Extra quality bulbs, 12-15 ctm., in case lots, 2,100 bulbs to the case, $16.00 per 1000.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS GRANDIFLORA Case lots, about 1,300 bulbs to the case, $7.50 per 1000.

SEED TRADE REPORT

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, O., President; F. W. BOLGIANO, First Vice-President; S. G. COURTEEN, Milwaukee, Wis., Second Vice-President; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer.

Points and information from seedsmen, and all interested in this column, solicited. Address EDITOR SEED TRADE, care of FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, P. O. Box 1697, New York.

Appraisement of Seeds.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

The announcement in the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE for October 6, that I had been called to New York of an interview with the Custom House authorities, on the subject of appraisements of seeds, has brought me so many applications for information on the subject, that it is not possible for me to reply to each one individually; but if you will kindly insert the accompanying circular, which I am sending to the friends who do business with Cooper, Taber & Co., it will furnish all the information desired. Thanking you in advance for your courtesy.

S. B. DICKS.

On October 4, at the request of the Custom authorities in New York, I waited upon them in company with our legal advisers, Messrs. R. J. Godwin's Sons, who have made a special study of this question, to confer with them respecting the appraised values of seeds for the coming season.

As a result of the interview, I venture to suggest that, before making any entries of your imports, you should ascertain, through the courtesy of the Custom House officials at your port of entry, the values at which they are prepared to pass the goods, and to have your entries made in accordance therewith. By this means you will escape the penalty, which is 100 per cent. on the extra duties.

If you are not already aware of this fact, I may point out that the Act of Congress expressly states that the goods must be entered at the market value at the date of shipment.

I may further state that the American Consul in our country will only accept invoices which set forth the actual prices to be paid for the goods.

Respectfully yours,
S. B. DICKS,
Representative of Cooper, Taber & Co., Limited, London, England.

European Notes.

So far as atmospheric conditions are concerned Germany appears to have decidedly the best time, being quite free from either extreme. As a result, the crops which survived the hardships of the Summer, are giving very good results. This is especially the case with respect to flower seeds, the only exceptions thus far being Myosotis alpestris, single wallflower, and hyacinth-flowered kinds of larkspur; the late flowering branching sorts of the latter appear to be all right. Sweet peas seem to have cropped well, but mignonette is not so successful.

Asters promise a fine crop; the weather has been fairly baking them, and although there is a loss from drought in some localities, in dwarf sorts especially there is no fear of a short crop now, if the weather remains anything like it has been. Although at the present there is no complete setting of the seed, we find it so far set and full of body that we feel the crop is safe. EUROPEAN SEEDS.

The clipping of outside branches exposes the inner and weaker ones, which from their confined position have not been able to perfect themselves, and sudden exposure to freezing weather injures them. This is often seen when two evergreens are growing close together. Remove one of them and plant it apart, and where the branches had interlaced injury will occur should sudden cold come. Pruning late in the season acts in the same way. The work should not be done later than a month at least in advance of freezing weather. Early Spring is a good time to prune an uneven evergreen hedge, or one getting too large. But do not prune below live foliage, as it is difficult to induce evergreens to break afresh from old wood. This, and another pruning in midsummer, is usually sufficient, though where bushiness is much desired, two Summer prunings may be given.

Planting Magnolias.—It is recognized among planters that magnolias will not succeed planted in Autumn. Just why is not clear, but both these and the tulip tree, Liriodendron tulipifera, must be set in Spring. These fleshy rooted trees object to disturbance of the root at that season, evidently. Indeed, even in Spring their removal is attended with more risk than most other shrubs run. To obviate this nurserymen are growing them in pots and boxes. In this shape they can be planted at any time, no disturbance of the root occurring, and no risk of dying run.

Hardy Orange.—Were it not for its bitter tasting fruit, the hardy orange, Limonia trifoliata, would be deemed one of the most valued of recent introductions and a ready seller. It is actually hardy, perfectly so as far north as New York City, and fairly so still farther north. Early in Spring it is clothed with large "orange blossoms" which, though attractive, are not sweet scented, or only to a very small degree. Its desirability in the way of ornament comes from its numerous "oranges," which ripen early in October, and last until freezing weather comes. For the ornamentation of grounds in the way of berry-bearing shrubs and trees, there are always inquiries, and among those with beautiful fruit none will be more popular than this orange. The fruit is quite round, or nearly so, and about four inches in circumference. While it would make a most ornamental pot plant, its extremely long, stiff spines might be an objection to this use of it. In the South it is very popular as a hedge plant, because of its rigid growth and thorny nature. There is no doubt, whatever, that it is well adapted for this purpose.

Callicarpa Purpurea.—Among shrubs noted for their beautiful berries in Autumn, it would be difficult to name one better than Callicarpa purpurea. Though rare in collections, it is not a new shrub. It is of a half shrubby nature, its shoots dying back about half their length in Winter. Because of this it has not a nice appearance in Spring, and this is why nurserymen do not sell many of these plants. But the one who understands its nature and cuts it back still farther than it has gone naturally, lays the basis of one of the loveliest of Autumn shrubs. Strong shoots follow the pruning, which bear clusters of quite small, greenish colored flowers in Summer, along the whole length of the shoots. Clusters of berries succeed, which change in time to a violet-purple color, perfection being reached in the early October days. The weight of berries bends over slightly the slender shoots, the whole forming a graceful and beautiful object. If florists would obtain some of these plants in the Autumn, cut them down nearly to the ground, heel them in well in some sheltered place outside and pot them in Spring, they would have lovely ornamental plants by the coming Autumn. No need to force them; in fact, Fall blooming or berry-bearing plants cannot be perfected indoors in Winter. Pot them and plunge the pots to their rims in Spring in the full sun, outdoors. Placed in a greenhouse in August, the berries would perfect themselves quickly, and in a short time the plants would be ready for customers. I am sure it would meet a quick sale in large cities.

JOSEPH MEEHAN.

The Forest Nursery: Collection of Tree Seeds and Propagation of Seedlings.—During the last 12 years the United States Department of Agriculture has received from farmers and other landowners a very large number of letters asking how to procure tree seeds and how to raise seedlings. For the purpose of supplying the desired information the Department has prepared, and has now in press, Bulletin No. 29, Division of Forestry, entitled "The Forest Nursery: Collection of Tree Seeds and Propagation of Seedlings." The bulletin was prepared by Geo. B. Sudworth, Dendrologist of the Division of Forestry.

It gives the regions of seed supply, a list of market prices for tree seeds, names the seeds desirable to collect, when and how to collect them, the manner of storing and the means used for testing their vitality. The propagation of tree seeds is similar to that of garden seeds, and there is practically no difference in the care and soil necessary for the best results from either class of seeds. Given a moderately rich, gravelly, or sandy, porous, moist soil, within the proper range of temperature, any tree can be propagated from the seed and made to live for a longer or a shorter time. Natural seeding is too often uncertain, because the necessary conditions for germination are perfect only by chance, and where the planter's purpose is to produce useful timber without loss of time, natural seeding is not to be depended on. Direct planting of sufficiently advanced nursery stock has the advantage over natural seeding of establishing more quickly and with greater certainty only such timber trees as are wanted. The bulletin shows that planting tree seed with cultivated crops, or sowing broadcast on prepared and unprepared land is uncertain, giving less uniform results than planting nursery-grown seedlings; that seed-bed culture requires the least labor and produces the most and best stock; that the seed bed should be located on a well-drained site, and that a deep, sandy loam soil is preferable. Propagating trees from cuttings, wintering and transplanting seedlings, care of nursery stock and use of wild seedlings, are other matters which receive attention.

The bulletin will contain a list of useful timber trees to plant, and will be illustrated with 5 plates and 11 text figures.

A limited number will be for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, Union Building, Washington, D. C.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—Evenden Bros. are building three houses, each ¾ span 51x155 feet, for carnations; they have several such, and find them ideal structures in which to grow the divine flower. Butted glass is the method of glazing throughout. W. J. Evenden, at time of my visit, had just returned from his first trip to Europe, where he met that grand old man, Henry Cannell, who was delighted to show his magnificent collection of begonias and pelargoniums, but was forced to admit his "pinks" were not in it. Carnations have done splendidly here this Summer, and what stock is left out in the field—Bradt, Scott, Bon Ton, Crane and Flora Hill—is remarkably vigorous. A larger stock of chrysanthemums than usual is in excellent shape and cannot fail to attract purchasers. W. M.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

RICHMOND, IND..—E. G. Hill & Co. are first in the market here with white and yellow Fitzwygram chrysanthemums, being able to cut these on September 25. This firm does not grow so many chrysanthemums as formerly, but what there are look fine. The same remark applies to young roses—a smaller assortment, but in larger numbers. For example, there are about 15,000 Crimson Ramblers in small pots. Liberty is looking as well here as at any place I have seen it in the West. It is a victim to black spot, but seems to improve, and will doubtless come out all right soon. A large collection of begonias, zonal geraniums, etc., for next Spring, gives promise that this part of the business will be extensive, as a commodious office building is under construction.

FORT WAYNE, IND.—W. J. & M. S. Vesey have finished a new range of carnation houses that are models of their kind. They face the south, hardly ¾ span, being 12 feet on one side and 14 feet on the other; each 200 x 23 feet, with four paths. Tile drainage is in every house, each of which is ventilated from both sides of ridge. Tea roses are grown extensively, all on own roots. The grafted idea has not found favor among many of our Western growers. Several beds of Bride and Bridesmaid are being tied down, second year's growth. Chrysanthemums are very strong, but rather late. Some kinds of carnations have not done well outdoors, but seem to have caught on quickly since the cool spell.

At the Chestnut Slope Greenhouses I found Miss Flick overseeing the planting of carnations, which are a grand lot—not a poor plant among them. Several new houses were added during the Summer, it being the intention to enlarge the retail trade, a branch having been opened at Toledo, a handsome corner store finished in white and gold. I noted a very healthy frame of violets, Marie Louise and Lady Campbell, lately lifted from the open ground, (elsewhere Balsley's bottomless pots are largely used, and with considerable success). Part of a bench was planted in a compost of soil and spent hops, which had lain about one year. The plants growing in this mixture were fully one-half larger than those grown in ordinary soil. About one inch depth of compost is enough. Meteor and tea roses are well grown. Miss Flick is a firm believer in butted glass.

LOGANSPORT, IND.—J. A. Newby was finishing the glazing of a new rose house when I called, and says never more will he butt a pane of glass. He has made many changes in his plant during the Summer, and regrets these were not completed in time to plant carnations early. The plants suffered much toward the end of the growing season. To offset this drawback his roses have done splendidly; he is cutting right along. His plan is to grow the plants in three-inch pots from one season to the other, placing them under the bench during the Winter, and planting them out just as soon as the houses are cut over in Spring. This year he planted June 20, and is cutting as good as one could wish. The plants broke away immediately.

PERU, IND.—F. B. Tinker has his houses planted. The stock looks well. Some varieties of carnations have suffered, chiefly whites; Peru came out well. I noticed this variety has stood the Summer well in almost every locality.

LANSING, MICH.—J. A. Bissinger has added to his plant during the Summer, and has everything in running order for an anticipated thriving Winter business.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Currie Bros. report a first-class season right through. The bulb business is larger than ever.

WESTERLY, R. I.—I found S. J. Reuter looking over the started plants of Lilium Harrisii. Some disease is seen but much smaller in extent than last year at this time when the plants were in a similar stage of growth. Several thousands are in 4-inch pots, being held until chrysanthemums are over, when these lilies are planted on the bench. Grown in this way for cutting they are a success.

The best white chrysanthemum is Willowbrook, coming in ahead of Bergmann—a large flower, very free, with fine foliage. Stock is somewhat limited this season, but growers who are looking for a first-class early white should make a note of this variety. Roses are in splendid condition; in fact, with the airy houses, rich soil and careful attention afforded they could hardly be otherwise. The majority are grafted, Mr. Reuter being thoroughly convinced that this method is the best. Both systems are illustrated in the same house. I noted a bench of Bon Silene which was fully double the size, in grafted stock, of that grown on own roots. A practice here is to grow Bride and Bridesmaid one year on the bench, then transplant into solid beds, where the plants are grown for several years. One house, run on this plan, has been in constant crop for three years. The new rose Liberty is a failure on own roots here, but grafted plants are very promising. Sunrise is doing splendidly. Mr. Reuter finds a good demand for it, also for Golden Gate, which as here grown is a fine rose and will be yet more widely known and appreciated.

It seems a sacrifice to throw out a house of Meteor in full crop at this time, but it has to be done to make room for another modern house, 200x22 feet, the regulation size at this establishment, almost full span, 14 feet high at ridge with cement walls for solid beds. Both roses and carnations are being grown by many of our leading cultivators on this plan.

Of the new varieties in carnations Estelle is the finest scarlet; it has done well outside and is very promising. Morning Glory is highly in favor. It is a beautiful pink. Victor is fine. Ethel Crocker bids fair to be all that has been claimed for it. The Marquis and Mrs. Lawson are in the race. Olympia is slow to color up; there is a profusion of bloom, but the color is very pale. Peru is early and free. Elm City is a good white. White Cloud and Flora Hill are standards. A pink sport from the last named, grown three years, is highly thought of here, and in Boston. Daybreak is grown for a standard pink; it is hard to beat as grown by Louis Reuter. Eldorado is best when carried through the Summer in pots.

Mr. Reuter is looking for another site upon which to erect a plant equal in size to that which he already has. One of the principal roses to be grown is Kaiserin, which fairly luxuriates under the conditions prevailing in this well-kept establishment.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—Smith T. Bradley will give his annual chrysanthemum show, and is making preparations for an extensive exhibition, as the proposed show to be given by the Horticultural Society has been abandoned.

John Doughty, the successful gardener to Mr. J. E. Hubinger, has purchased two acres of land, and let a contract to Hitchings for a range of glass, intending to launch out in business. His location is in a desirable section of the city, and his efforts to cater to the retail trade will doubtless meet with success.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—John Spalding has an excellent stock of chryeanthemums in pots and on the bench. He reports a good Summer business. The grand old man is in his 86th year, and apart from an affection of eyesight, is as vigorous as ever. W. M.

New York.—The few enthusiasts who met on the new alleys at the Arlington, on Monday evening last, were quite delighted with them. The alleys are three in number, and the other accommodations are of a superior order, plenty of room for spectators being one of the good features. Monday evening next bowling will take place directly after the special meeting of the Florists' Club, and it is hoped that all the members will avail themselves of the opportunity to try the new alleys, and decide about engaging them for the coming year, as Captain Traendly informs us the alleys, meantime, have been hired for one month's probation only, pending the decision of the members. The alleys are located in St. Mark's avenue, between Second and Third avenues. St. Mark's avenue is one block south of Ninth street and near Cooper Union. The scores made last Monday were as under:—

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—F. S. Folwell is building a violet house 15 x 70 feet.

CHESTER, Pa.—C. W. Loller has completed the erection of another greenhouse.

LEOMINSTER, Mass.—George M. Kendall is building a cucumber house, 250 x 75 feet.

NORWICH, Conn.—Calvin L. Swan has doubled his greenhouse capacity by the erection of an additional house.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—F. W. Busch is erecting two new greenhouses here—one 21 x 200 feet, and one 21 x 100 feet.

BALTIMORE, Md.—John Donn has been granted a permit to erect two greenhouses—one 24 x 60 feet, and one 14 x 65 feet.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—John Doughty will shortly erect two greenhouses, each 100 x 18 feet; also two small houses, one 14 x 25, and one 12 x 25 feet.

Florist Commits Suicide.

Fred Krapf, a florist, 44 years old, of Prospect Avenue and Grove Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. committed suicide with carbolic acid Saturday last. Krapf had been despondent ever since the death of his wife some weeks ago. His body was found by his daughter in a greenhouse connected with the establishment.

Denver.

J. A. Valentine, A. J. Graham, E. A. Mauff, A. M. Lewis and Bernard Beer have been appointed members of a committee of the Denver Florists' Club, to take entire charge of the chrysanthemum show at City Park. The show will begin the second Wednesday in November and continue throughout the remaining days of that week. The park pavilion will be used and music will be furnished by the park commission.

O. B. Hadwen.

Obadiah Brown Hadwen, the newly elected president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, was born in Providence, R. I., August 2, 1824. He removed to Worcester, Mass., with his father, Charles Hadwen, in the Spring of 1835, where he has since lived. He spent a portion of six years attending the Friends' School in Providence, also four Winter terms at the Moses A. Cortland Academy at Weare, N. H., devoting six months to school and six months in each year on his father's farm.

In 1843 he purchased the land, now a portion of his farm. He erected buildings and planted fruit and ornamental trees and shrubs, comprising the most extensive variety to be found in central Massachusetts. The apple trees were set out in 1843, covering 20 acres of land.

Mr. Hadwen spent one season at Renrick's nurseries at Newton, Mass., where he acquired some insight into the nursery business that was of much advantage to him afterward. He became a member of the Worcester County Horticultural Society in 1847, and has since taken an active interest in that body. For 35 years he has been one of its trustees, besides being vice-president, and president, which latter office he now holds.

In 1857 he was elected a member of the Parks Commission of Worcester, and with the exception of three years has held that position ever since. He is a member of the Worcester County Agricultural Society; has been one of its trustees and its vice-president for years. He was for 12 years a member of the State Board of Agriculture, and one of the trustees of the State Agricultural College. In 1884 he joined the American Pomological Society, and for many years has been a member of the Massachusetts Agricultural Club, being now its president.

In 1875 he was elected a corresponding member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society; in 1876 he became a life member and is now its president.

Mr. Hadwen is strong and healthy for a man of his years, and is about his farm every day looking after his work. His farm, near his house, is covered with ornamental trees and foliage plants of every description.

He is a very cordial man and is always pleased to have any one visit him who is interested in tree culture. His residence is on Lovell Street, Worcester. J.

St. Paul.

At this writing, October 15, we have had no killing frost. The lawns and pastures are as green as they usually are in June; geraniums, petunias, pansies, nasturtiums, verbenas, and other annuals in the open ground are in full bloom; the leaves on many of the trees have not changed color the least. A plague of mosquitoes is reported from the interior of the state, deciduous shrubs are blossoming the second time this year, and ripe strawberries are being picked in Northern Wisconsin, a hundred miles or so away. With all of these unusual conditions prevailing, it is not strange that trade should be somewhat erratic. Still sales average up well, and social events are beginning to call for more and more flowers each week.

Chrysanthemums seem to be late in this vicinity. A few Fitzwygram are being cut while Bergmann and Yellow Monarch will be ready in another week. Roses are becoming quite plentiful, wholesaling at 3c. to 4c., and retailing at $1 per dozen. Beauty are in good demand, at 10c. to 15c. R. C. Sieger is cutting some of the finest ever seen in this market. Carnations are rather scarce and short stemmed. A few violets have appeared and sell quickly.

In the line of roses, Liberty, Golden Gate and Dorothea are the new aspirants to public favor with the chances favoring the latter. Liberty is too poor a keeper, Golden Gate too weak stemmed, and the bud too loosely formed; but Lady Dorothea, from our Canadian neighbors, has all the attributes for a first-class commercial variety.

Jottings.

C. F. Haupt has added another carnation house, 120 feet long, to his range.

John Nilsen, doing business on West Seventh Street, near F. T. Snelling, has sold out to Hangen & Swanson. E. F. Lemke has resumed control of his range of houses on Hague, formerly rented by Hangen & Swanson.

L. L. May & Co. have a very nice display of bulbs, jardinieres and fish globes.

There appears to be an unusual demand for choice Boston ferns, palms, rubbers, and araucarias.

FOR SALE—GREENHOUSE PROPERTY AT NYACK, N. Y. A plot 220x125 feet, on which are four Rosehouses, 100x18x6, each house heated by a No. 16 Hitchings Boiler, and seven houses, each about 64x11 feet, heated by flues. This property will be sold cheap to quick cash buyer.

D. O. Pratt, of Anoka, and L. A. Glatiguy of Sleepy Eye, are some of the newer concerns in business in this state, both having erected greenhouses the past Summer.

Carl Johnson, clerk for several years, in the retail store of L. L. May & Co., has accepted a position with S. E. Olsen & Co.'s department store, Minneapolis. It is rumored that this concern will shortly erect an extensive range of glass.

VERITAS.

New York.

The Market.

Cooler weather with slight frosts have been felt in this vicinity the past week, and the supply of outdoor flowers, particularly dahlias, has received a sudden check for the time being.

Chrysanthemums have become overabundant all of a sudden, with a consequent reduction in values. Varieties on the market at present are Glory of the Pacific, Whilldin, Polly Rose, Midge, Sunshine (a new yellow), Merry Monarch, Yellow Monarch, and Mutual Friend. Unfortunately the demand for the Queen of Autumn does not keep pace with the increased supply. Ordinary blooms have been going at 50c. a dozen, while some of the very finest have only realized $2.

Roses are more than plentiful for the needed requirements, and the same condition rules in the case of carnations, violets and cattleyas. The latter have been offered as low as $10 a hundred within the last few days,—not for the best flowers, of course, but for fair-sized blooms. When cattleyas go begging at such a figure, it is apparent that business is in an unsatisfactory condition, or that the out-put is too large for the city's needs.

Violets are in steady supply, and a limited number can be disposed of at from 50c. to 60c. per hundred. The remainder have to be cleared off at whatever figure the peddlers are willing to give; and, by the way, the street men find a better demand for political party buttons just now than they do for flowers.

Roses of special grades are not overplentiful, and prices remain about the same as last reported. When fancy special Bridesmaid have been on hand, it has been possible to realize 8c. each for them. The same grade of Beauty remain at $3 a dozen. Between the prices obtained for this good stock and those received for short and inferior blooms, there is such a wide margin that the discrepancy seems almost inexplicable. The reason, however, is not far to seek. The first mentioned grades are only securable a few dozen at a time, while the latter are to be had by the thousands, if necessary.

Lily of the valley drags as slowly as other flowers, plenty of it being offered at $2 a hundred; there is, however, a limited quantity of a special grade for which $4 can be realized.

As regards smilax, maidenhair fern and asparagus there is no change in values since last report.

Among the retailers business shows a little sign of improvement. The better condition of the violets obtainable, together with the fine chrysanthemums now to be had, help to put a little more life into trade.

Alex. McConnell had a large dinner decoration at the Murray Hill Hotel on Wednesday that called for several hundreds of American Beauty roses.

J. H. Small & Sons' windows have been attractive this week with banks of chrysanthemums and baskets of cattleyas.

Fleischman is showing chrysanthemums arranged in baskets flanked with cattleyas in small clusters.

The Fernery Co. has opened a store on 33rd Street, in close proximity to Fifth Avenue.

Jottings.

Dailledouze Bros. have named their famous big carnation, hitherto known as Number 666, Prosperity. This variety will be sent out the coming Spring.

Speaking of new carnations, Thomas Young, Jr., has two new ones coming regularly to him that are worthy of mention. One named Goethe is of a beautiful pink color, and of good form and size. The other is named Admiral Cervera, a large yellow flower, marked with red stripes. The name is appropriate as the flower embodies the Spanish colors. Chris. Besold of Mineola, L. I., is the grower of both varieties.

The vari-colored pepper plant seems to be quite a fad this Fall. It is heralded as something new, and has various names applied to it. The correct name is Capsicum annuum, and it was cultivated in England as far back as 1548, having been introduced to that country from India the year previous.

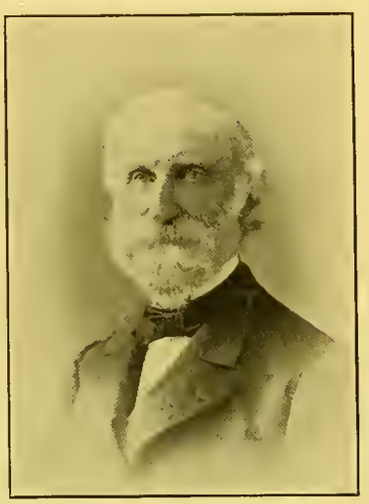
Mrs. R. W. Clucas, after spending the Summer in England, arrived home on Friday, the 12th inst. by the S. S. Germanic.

John Young has received a letter from William Plumb announcing his safe arrival on the other side of the Atlantic.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on Monday evening, October 22, at 8 o'clock, in the club rooms, corner 27th Street and Broadway. It will be preceded at 7.30 by a meeting of the Plan and Scope Committee, for the consideration of matters relating to the proposition to hold an annual horticultural exhibition in this city.

President O'Mara has appointed on the Plan and Scope Committee the following gentlemen: Arthur Herrington, Charles B. Weathered, John N. May, W. A. Manda, Samuel Henshaw, Julius Roehrs, Henry A. Siebrecht, Joseph A. Manda, Jr., Charles Hewitt, William Duckham, H. A. Kettel, N. Butterbach, D. Y. Mellis, C. W. Ward, Alex. Wallace, Walter F. Sheridan, W. I. Brower, J. B. Nugent, Jr., A. L. Miller, J. Dowsett, Henry Hentz and William W. Burnham.

The florists of the city are arranging to be represented in the Sound Money Parade, on November 3. A committee, consisting of W. L. Trumpore, T. J. Lang, and L. D. Brower, met Friday evening last, for the purpose of perfecting arrangements.



O. B. Hadwen,

Pres. elect Mass. Horticultural Society.

No chrysanthemums were presented for certification before the committee of the C. S. A. on Saturday last.

The custom house authorities had an auction sale of damaged Japanese bulbs recently, cases being disposed of to several different dealers.

The affairs of the Bridgeman estate are progressing towards a settlement. The claims have been up before the referee twice this week, and it is expected that a wind-up of the estate will be effected shortly.

Visitors this week were David Gindra, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; William Scott, Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Clara Beckstedt, Oswego, N. Y.; J. F. Sullivan, Detroit, Mich.; H. L. Crandell, Glens Falls, N. Y.; J. E. Beardsley, Malone, N. Y., and J. N. Champion, New Haven, Conn.

Philadelphia.

Business Improves.

All the stores report improving business. This week there were several large weddings, but the quantity of cosmos and other outdoor flowers around interfered with the demand for roses etc., for decorating. The debutante season has commenced; there have been several receptions and teas this week. Flowers are improving in quality every week.

The first frost of the season occurred Wednesday night when the thermometer went down to 33 degrees.

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Tuesday last, was very well attended. The exhibits of dahlias and cosmos were very extensive. William Robertson, gardener to John W. Pepper, Esq., took first prize for dahlias, and F. Canning, gardener to Samuel T. Bodine, Esq., was second. For cosmos W. H. Carey, gardener to Mrs. Allen B. Rorke, was first, and John McCleary, gardener to William Weightman, Esq., second. Alphonse Periant, gardener to Mrs. George B. Wilson, was awarded a silver medal and two certificates, for a new cypripedium and new cattleyas, in order given.

Jottings.

The recent auction sale conducted by John P. Cleary, of New York, at the Stoke Pogis Nurseries was a great success. All the stock listed in the catalogue was disposed of and brought good prices, many things even above regular quotation. Mr. Cleary made quite a hit, and no doubt will be seen in this locality again in the future.

Jacob Becker went to Europe the past Summer to select his own azaleas, and has secured a fine lot of plants of the leading varieties. He finds Simon Mardner the best for early forcing; next he grows Van der Cruyssen and Bernhard Andreas alba, and a few Vervæneana. Mr. Becker has brought over more than he needs for his own trade, and is offering the surplus at special import prices. A house of La France on this place is well worth seeing. The cuttings were struck after Easter and the plants, now in full bloom, are doing well.

DAVID RUST.

Returned from Europe.

Godfrey Aschmann, 1012 Ontario Street, after a seven weeks' stay in Europe, arrived per steamer Servia from Liverpool, October 11. While abroad he secured a large quantity of palms, araucarias, dracænas and Azalea indica, in Ghent, Belgium, Holland and other places in Europe. The steamer Netherland of the Red Star Line, which arrived in Philadelphia October 13, had aboard 82 cases of plants consigned to him, and many more are coming.

Hucksters in New York City the past week were vending, "red, white, and blue grapes."

There are 26 violet-growers at Rhinebeck, N. Y., each with one to six greenhouses from 20x100 to 20x150 feet, the total plant capacity being 192,000 feet.

A Chrysanthemum Poster.

The Courier Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., have favored us with a sample sheet of their chrysanthemum lithograph, new design. Promoters of chrysanthemum shows will find these posters of immense service as advertising mediums in attracting attention to their exhibitions, the lithographs being of such a nature that storekeepers and others would willingly display the pictures in their windows and places of business. These posters can be obtained of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

"Open Thine Hand wide unto thy Brother, and to thy needy, in thy Land."

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have, for the convenience of our readers, decided to receive subscriptions at this office for the Galveston relief fund, which will be at once acknowledged in these columns, and the amount contributed forwarded to the proper authorities as the donations of our trade on behalf of their suffering brethren in the storm-swept sections. Checks and money orders for the Galveston relief fund should be made out in favor of the A. T. DeLa Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., crossed "In aid of Galveston sufferers."

Editor Florists' Exchange:

I beg to inform you that Mrs. F. L. Latour's losses, to the amount of $500, were added to the list at last night's, October 9, meeting of the Galveston florists. We hope to be in a position to report after next Tuesday's meeting the losses of Mr. H. A. Condron, Gulf Coast Nurseries, and those of Mr. L. Margot, in connection with which committees were appointed to invite and investigate estimates.

In the report of Steding Bros.' loss, the estimate ought to read $2,500, instead of $1,500, as previously reported, as Messrs. Charles and Henry Steding were conducting business under the firm name of Steding Bros., jointly, though located in different parts of the city.

We notice in your issue of October 6 further substantial contributions to our fund. We feel especially grateful to the EXCHANGE, not only for aiding us by donating valuable space, but in assisting us financially as well. It may appear to you, as you mention in your last issue, that the contributions have been light so far, but that, we think, is partly due to the fact that we were, in the beginning, so absorbed by the awful calamity, that all of us were, so to say, dazed and could not take any action whatsoever; and partly, as you say, because no outsider can have a proper conception of the extent of the disaster. Nevertheless, we feel assured that, in addition to your valuable paper and the Florists' Review, the Society of American Florists, the Chicago and New York Florists' Clubs will surely come to our rescue.

As stated in our previous letter, no distribution of funds has been made, and will not be until we have our list of losses completed. Meanwhile, as before mentioned, the money collected will remain in trust with Sealy, Hutchings & Co., to be finally distributed according to a complete schedule of all losses, and pro-rated accordingly; and we will furnish you with copy of said distribution list for publication in your valuable paper.

Thanking you very much for your kind assistance in our distress, we are

THE GALVESTON FLORISTS,
Per F. G. LAEVERENZ, Secretary.

[We would ask all contributors forwarding money direct to Galveston, to send same to the firm of Sealy, Hutchings & Co., to be held in trust until such times as distribution of the funds donated shall take place.—Ed.]

Mrs. Chas. Eickholt desires us to correct the published estimate of her losses in plants, florists' supplies, greenhouses and outdoor improvements pertaining to her business, which she places at $2,700 (estimated). She has also requested that any proportion of the money contribution coming to her through the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, or from florists generally, shall be paid over to Mrs. Harris, proprietress of the Beach Nursery, who lost her husband, her home and all its contents, greenhouse, plants; in fact, all that she possessed, and is now thrown upon her own resources to begin life anew.

We feel sure that all contributors to the Relief Fund will commend Mrs. Eickholt for this voluntary act of self-abnegation.

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

As an aid to the Galveston florists in resuming business, we shall be pleased to contribute palms as follows: Phœnix (in variety) in four and five-inch pots, characterized plants, to the number of a couple of hundred; Cocos Weddelliana in 2½-inch pots, to the number of 200. Kindly arrange for distribution of stock and advise when to be shipped.

The above sum has been sent to Sealy, Hutchings & Co., bankers, Galveston, Texas, to be by them turned over to the Florists' Committee, towards re-establishing such as are building up again. EDGAR SANDERS, Treas.

With this issue, Mr. Joseph Meehan, of Germantown, Pa., commences a series of contributions to the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE on nursery topics, in which florists, also, are more or less interested, in continuation of the articles contributed by Mr. S. Mendelson Meehan, that have proven so acceptable to our readers, and which that writer has been compelled to discontinue on account of pressure of other business. The well-known ability of Mr. Joseph Meehan, both as a practical nurseryman and an authority on horticultural matters, is sufficient guarantee of the useful and highly instructive nature of his writings, to which we beg to direct the especial attention of our subscribers.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., register new cannas as follows:

PENNSYLVANIA, orchid flowering canna; color bright scarlet, foliage green, height five feet. An American hybrid.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

American Carnation Society.

NEW CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

PROSPERITY.—Color, white ground overlaid with pink in mottles deepening toward the center. Habit and health the nearest to the ideal yet produced. Flowers four inches in diameter, freely produced on long, stiff, wiry stems, and with a calyx that does not split. (Known under the number 666.)—By Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y.

MRS. PHILIP HEILIG.—Color, cream white ground, with pink markings on the edge of the petals; in size three and one-quarter inches, with a good strong calyx and a stiff, upright stem. Strong healthy growth, with dwarf habit, and can be grown without supports.

GENERAL CHARLES MILLER.—Color, pure white, flowers very large, being three and one-half inches in diameter, October 13; stem 18 to 24 inches long. Flower very full of petals, with heavy high built center, lower petals standing straight out. Habit strong and sturdy; plants free from disease.—By Philip Heilig, Franklin, Pa.
ALBERT M. HERR, Secretary.
Lancaster, Pa.

Rudd's Ratiocination.

W. N. Rudd, of Chicago, is still on the warpath. The acquisition of the scalp of the census man but makes him thirst for others. He is now after our own, and in this wise: He writes to "another paper," which we occasionally read, as follows: "In a recent issue of another paper it is recommended to place carnation blooms in a temperature of 40 degrees after cutting. This is wrong. The temperature should never be allowed to go below 50 degrees, and two or three degrees above that point is better than a like number below." Delightfully emphatic, but not altogether sound doctrine, nor a correct rendering of our statement. What we did say was "a clean, airy flower room with a temperature of about 40 degrees."

Doubtless Mr. Rudd would have expressed himself more correctly on the subject had he known the exact nature of the inquiry demanding the reply given; also, whether the carnations were intended for shipping to market or were grown for home consumption. Where the flowers are grown for home use, as was the case in this instance, the blooms are allowed to remain on the plants until they are fully developed. To cut these and put them in a temperature warmer than the night temperature in which they were grown, would simply be to shorten their existence as cut flowers. The temperature of "about 40 degrees," will keep carnations salable a longer period than will a temperature of "50 degrees or over," because at the former degree of heat, growth will continue much slower than at the latter, and it stands to reason that the longer the ripening of the flower is delayed, the longer the flower will last. As with fruit, so with flowers, "the perfection of ripeness is the commencement of decay."

Anything below 40 degrees should not be maintained, as at that temperature the life in the flower is, we believe, arrested entirely, and when the blooms are brought into a warmer temperature after being thus treated, they soon lose their beauty altogether.

But our best growers and largest shippers in the vicinity of New York, hold their cut carnation flowers in a temperature of between 45 and 50 degrees. The satisfactory condition of these blooms on arrival at the salesrooms, and the big demand for the flowers of these particular growers, prove that the conditions afforded are right.

Willis N., you have discovered this time not a "mangy dog," but "a mare's nest."

Fragrance in the Rose.

From the scale of points adopted by the American Rose Society, and appearing in our issue of October 13, page 975, it is evident that the framers of the scale place but a very small value upon the attribute of fragrance as possessed by novelties in roses seeking recognition at the hands of the American Rose Society. In this particular the association in question seems to be following in the footsteps of the American Carnation Society, which body considers fragrance in the divine flower, one of the least important "selling" factors inherent in the carnation.

It would be interesting to know whether the decision arrived at in this connection by the respective scale-makers is the result of a belief that the olfactories of the present day judges are incapable of performing their natural functions, with a consequent likelihood of injustice being done a flower, so far as awarding points for odor is concerned; or that the smelling organs of flower purchasers nowadays are proof against the delightful impressions made by the odoriferous particles possessed by a rose or a carnation, and which at one time constituted one of the greatest charms of these flowers.

It is, we believe, unfortunate that societies banded together for the improvement of special flowers, should, for the purpose of pandering to the caprice of fashion, imagined or real, encourage the production of a scentless (or nearly so) race of blossoms, to which that attribute has hitherto proved such a magnet, and the charm of which has been lauded in song and story.

We now hope to see the scale "defined," so that it may become "a standard to judge by."

The Gardener.

The term gardener implied much more a few generations ago than it does today. Young men paid heavy premiums to get in as apprentices under learned gardeners, and when at the end of the term they were invested with the "Blue Apron," most of them would compare favorably, in general intelligence, with the graduates of our modern universities. —Meehan's Monthly.

Is not the analogy a little far-fetched, and whether is the joke on the grnduate or the gardener? There are some who yet hold to Burns' opinion of graduates, himself the son of a gardener, that these individuals "go into college stirks, and come out asses." Despite the abolition of the premium system, we firmly believe the average of general intelligence among gardeners is as high to-day as it was two generations ago. The same fountains of learning at which wisdom may be drunk are available; the same indomitable perseverance in the pursuit of knowledge is still extant, and, certainly, in many ways a higher degree of cultural skill has been attained, with attendant improvement in accruing results consequent upon advancement along educational lines. We do not think that the passing years have in any way altered the significance of the term "gardener," accepted in its truest sense, and in countries where a gardener is a gardener. Of course, the world over, there are gardeners and gardeners, just as there are graduates of universities, and graduates, etc.

Worcester, Mass.

The Worcester County Horticultural Society celebrated its 60th anniversary, October 11, with the finest and largest exhibition of fruits, flowers and vegetables it has ever given. The display of fruit was a great tax on the judge, taking five hours to render his just decisions. Palms, ferns and rare plants were also in abundance.

The annual dinner was held in the upper hall, at which the president, O. B. Hadwen, presided. Many guests were present. The past record of this society is something to be proud of. Among its membership have been many prominent men. It has furnished four governors, two United States senators and five representatives, one chief justice, four judges of the Superior Court, three judges of probate, three judges of Worcester police court; and the city with 14 mayors, two city treasurers, and 26 bank presidents. It stands to-day the second wealthiest horticultural society in this country. With this exhibition ends the shows for this year. The society has done much to bring to a high standard the quality of its exhibits, as none but the very best can hope to win here. J.

Boston.

The Market.

General business this Fall is admitted to be later than usual in opening up. This condition is attributed partly to the weather and partly to the presidential election, with its consequent anxiety. The market is very well, in fact, too well, stocked for the demand. Roses continue very plentiful, but the finer grades have not yet materialized, except on American Beauty. The latter sell fairly well. A few Kaiserin and Carnot are also to be had, of very good quality. Bride, Bridesmaid, Liberty, Meteor, Morgan, etc., may be all classed together, in that they are all coming poorer than should be the case at this season of the year.

Carnations under glass are coming along very rapidly. Chrysanthemums, too, are becoming more plentiful daily, and prices are gradually dropping. About the same varieties are seen as those mentioned a week ago. Nicholson brought in a few red ones last Friday. White kinds, mostly Bergmann, bring 75c. to $1.25 per dozen, and pink and yellow sorts realize $1.25 to $1.50 per dozen.

Violets are improving in size and color; they are also more plentiful, meeting with a very good demand at 35c. to 50c. for single and 50c. for double varieties.

Cosmos is arriving of very good quality, selling at 25c. per bunch.

Annual Meeting and Banquet.

The stockholders of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association held their annual banquet and business meeting, Saturday evening last. About forty were present. Among the post-prandial speakers were Messrs. James F. Carroll, Francis J. Norton, E. Allen Pelree, Elisha N. Pelree, Fred R. Mathison, W. H. Elliott, E. Sutermeister, W. W. Tallby and William Nicholson. The remarks made were of a congratulatory character on the wonderful advance of the Association during the past year. The officers elected were: President, William C. Stickel; vice-president, William Nicholson; secretary and treasurer, George Cartwright; board of directors: L. H. Mann, W. W. Edgar, Peter Fisher, E. Sutermeister, John Walsh and E. N. Pelree.

Here and There.

The committee who had charge of the arrangements of the banquet tendered to Fred R. Harris on June 9, have out of the surplus funds presented to that gentleman a prettily embossed list of names of all who contributed to that pleasant affair. About one hundred names are included in the list, which was suitably framed. The committee consisted of Messrs. E. M. Wood, W. W. Edgar, M. H. Norton, F. R. Mathison and W. J. Stewart, and the presentation was made to Mr. Harris at his home.

The greenhouses of E. M. Wood & Co. present a very promising appearance for the Winter. Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Kaiserin, Liberty, Golden Gate and Morgan are in splendid condition, and will throw a fine lot of flowers with the advent of cooler weather. Chrysanthemums, too, are looking very fine; the first cutting was made this week.

Anderson & Williams are cutting some very fine Kaiserin roses. Lawrence Cotter is sending in President Carnot of excellent quality, which find ready sale.

George A. Sutherland is getting regular shipments of good quality violets, both single and double.

Frank Good, who was with Mrs. Fadden at Newport the past Summer, has returned to this city.

President E. M. Wood, of the S. A. F. has received the Democratic nomination for representative to the General Court.

Grand Rapids.

Trade News.

Fine weather continues; we have had no frost yet even to hurt coleus. Carnations are in fair supply and equal to the demand. Some good roses are being cut from old stock—those from young plants being of medium to poor quality.

The first chrysanthemums to bloom were Glory of the Pacific; Kalb and Bergmann being next in order. Kalb is an improved Bergmann; it has a larger, finer flower, and is equally as early, being also a taller grower. Last year the chrysanthemum season was a little earlier than the present.

The Michigan State Fair, held in Grand Rapids, was a financial success. This is the first season in a number of years that the fair has really paid. The floral display was not up to the standard of former years. The amateur exhibit was very creditable indeed and should be encouraged. Some of the plants were better than those that took premiums in the florists' section.

T. R. Renwick & Co., the oldest floral establishment in town, has gone out of business. G. F. C.

OBITUARY.

Henry Butler.

Henry Butler, 918 Broadway, New York, died at his home on Thursday evening last, aged 56 years. Mr. Butler was born in Germany, and came to this country when quite a young man, first securing employment with a grower in Astoria. Afterward he worked for Gabrielson and J. M. Hodgson, retail florists, entering into partnership with J. Fitzgerald in 1874, and conducting a retail store at 936 Broadway. Mr. Fitzgerald sold out his interest to Mr. Butler in 1877 and the latter subsequently operated the business until 1884 when he moved to 918 Broadway. He had been ailing for about two months. He leaves a widow and three children, one son, and two daughters.

(208) Asparagus plumosus nanus.—Please state in your valuable paper the proper distance apart to plant Asparagus plumosus nanus.—C. B. S.

—Have the rows 15 inches apart and the plants 12 inches apart in the row.

(209) Crown Rot of Violets.—All the young center leaves of my violet plants seem to rot off, and black spots on them are numerous. On examining the leaves closely I find a small white maggot, or little white worm. Kindly advise me what to do to destroy the pest, and greatly oblige.—W. S. HEUZOG.

—The trouble with your violet plants is evidently what is termed crown rot, and the white worm is an effect of the rot rather than the cause of it. This rot is usually the result of too heavy syringing, or the drip from old or poorly constructed houses. To check its advances, pull away some of the heavier leaves to allow more air and light to the crown of the plants. Take equal parts of air-slacked lime and sulphur, mix them thoroughly together and dust the mixture well into the center of the plants.

(210) Heating.—I have now one greenhouse 20 x 63 feet, heated by a brick flue, and am starting another house of same size. I want to heat both with hot water, but don't know what kind of boiler is best—the ordinary cast iron, cast iron sectional, or wrought iron tubular. The fuel used will be fine bituminous coal, or what we call "slack." It is very cheap, and is used here almost entirely for steam boilers. Can soft coal be successfully used in a cast iron boiler? Are the cast iron sectional boilers in the experimental stage, or have they been in use long enough to have proved to be a success? They would appear to be an advantage where a greenhouse plant is growing (as I expect mine to), it being claimed that extra sections can be put in at any time. What are the disadvantages of the sectional hot-water heaters? What are the disadvantages of the common cast iron boiler? Which of the three kinds of boilers will furnish the most heat for the fuel consumed, and which is the most easily managed and kept clean? Second-hand wrought iron tubular boilers can be bought here at very reasonable prices.—I. V. KINDER, Pennsylvania.

—For two house like those described, about 1,100 square feet of radiation will be required for 60 degrees, and something over 800 for 50 degrees; but if slack coal is to be used for fuel, it will be well to have a boiler with a grate 50 to 100 per cent. larger than is used with hard coal. Under the conditions mentioned it will be well for inquirer to put in a 20-horse power tubular boiler, with 12 square feet of grate, while a larger size will not be objectionable, especially if it is proposed to enlarge the amount of glass to be heated.

As compared with tubular boilers cast iron heaters are considerably more durable, but at the same time they are more expensive. As a rule, they are not as readily cleaned as the tubular boilers, although many of them are adapted for use with soft coal. Most of the sectional boilers are efficient heaters, but although occasionally desirable, the sectional feature will not be found particularly valuable when the amount of glass is to be increased. Thus, when a plant contains 1,000 feet of radiating surface, and after a few years glass to require 500 to 1,000 additional feet is added, it will be better to put in another heater of the same capacity as the first one, rather than attempt to add new sections to the old one. Although the expense will be slightly more, this will soon be repaid in the saving of fuel, as one heater will suffice for all of the houses in mild weather, while in case of accident to one of the heaters, the other will keep out frost in any weather, while repairs are making.—L. R. T.

I have eight greenhouses, 100×18 feet, heated by a 40-horse-power boiler. The main supply pipe is 2½-inch, and the main return is 1½-inch. In each of the houses there is a 2-inch overhead flow, and four 1¼-inch return pipes on each side wall and partly across one end. The return pipes are about 2½ feet above the water line of the boiler and the main return is one foot below the boiler. Are the main pipes large enough, and how can I improve the arrangement of the piping to maintain 50 degrees?—K. & SON.

—Both of the main pipes are considerably smaller than will be desirable for use with low-pressure steam, as a 2½-inch main is only large enough for two of the houses. Including the mains there will be not far from 3,500 feet of radiating surface, and to secure the best results the main supply pipe should be 4-inch, until two houses have been taken off. The pipe can then be reduced to 3½-inch and further reductions can be made for each two houses taken off. The return can start at 1¼-inch and increase gradually to 2-inch or, better yet, to 2½-inch after the last house has been joined. With mains of proper size the radiation in the houses should easily keep them at 60 degrees except in zero weather. One 2-inch supply, and eight 1¼-inch pipes in the coils, answer very well for an 18-foot house with wooden walls.—L. R. T.

I have two greenhouses with a common wall between them. One house is 17 × 82 feet, 11 feet to the ridge, with a board wall at the back four feet high. The other house is 22 × 82 feet, 9 feet to the ridge, with a brick front wall. Both houses are three-quarter span. How large a boiler will be required to heat these houses to 60 degrees in zero weather, and how should the houses be piped?—W. S.

—The two houses will need about 800 square feet of radiation, and to supply the heat the boiler should have at least 7½ square feet of grate surface, and be rated as able to carry 1,000 square feet of radiation, or 10 horse-power, while a boiler with 12 horse-power capacity will be more economical of labor. For the narrow house one 2-inch supply and ten 1¼-inch returns will suffice, while the other house should have one 2½-inch main with 11 1¼-inch returns. The flow pipes may be on the center posts below the ridge and the returns may be on the walls or under the benches, according to the arrangement of the houses and the uses to which they are to be put.—L. R. T.

I am building a house 22 feet wide, 12 feet to ridge, 18 feet slope to the south, 8 feet to the north side, 8 feet on the north, 5 feet on the south. Kindly tell me amount of pipe, preferable size, and position of heating medium.—L.

—The amount of pipe required will vary with the temperature desired, and the minimum outside temperature that might be expected, while the size of the flow pipes would be larger in long than in short houses. In a general way, it is safe to estimate that for 60 degrees, when the outside temperature is seldom under 12 below zero, a house of the size described can be heated with three 2½-inch flow pipes, and 12 2-inch returns, if the length is not over 100 feet. All of the pipes may be on the walls, or under the benches if preferred, but especially if the top of the boiler is not lower than the level of the walks, a better circulation can be secured if the flow pipes are elevated. In a three-quarter span house it is generally possible to run one pipe on the south plate and the other upon the purlin and ridge posts.—L. R. T.

A Thrifty Scotch Gardener.

James Howie, a Scotch gardener, died at New Rochelle, N. Y., October 5, leaving a fortune of about $90,000. He was for many years employed by the Rev. Dr. Bolton, the historian of Westchester, but when the Bolton property at Pelham was sold seven years ago he went to the New Rochelle Tavern to live, and he worked at any odd jobs that he could get. His rule of living was not to spend more than 10 cents for a meal. One apple was his usual supper.

A week ago Howie became ill, and was taken to the New Rochelle Hospital. He died there of old age and exhaustion.

In the old man's trunk were found nine bags of gold coin, seven savings bank books, showing deposits of $17,000, the interest of which had not been entered in the bank books for 30 years, 60 shares of New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad stock, several real estate mortgages, a lot of bank notes and a gold watch. There were also two wills. By the terms of the first one, dated in 1893, everything was to go to Howie's three nephews in Chicago. The other will, dated in 1898, gives everything to Howie's sister, Mary Scott of Kelso, Scotland.—BOSTON HERALD.

Sterilizing Soil.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

I think I can enlighten "Subscriber" in regard to a cheap and effective method of sterilizing his soil: Place the soil on the benches in the greenhouse. If it is desired to use the old soil over again, work it well over with a spade. Bring in, also, all the manure intended to enrich the soil. Now wait for a bright sunny day. Shut all doors and ventilators, and the sun and glass will give the soil all the sterilizing necessary, if this be kept up for three or four days. If the sun is not thought hot enough light the fires. The soil can be wetted down if steaming is believed in; but it is not necessary.

This is not guess-work, but has been practiced by myself and others, year after year.

Fall Sown Asters.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

The curious fact mentioned in one of your contemporaries that aster plants from Fall sown seed withstood disease better than plants from Spring sowing, is something that seems worthy of further trial. I should be surprised, however, if definite benefits followed the Fall sowing every time.

On two occasions I have seen, late in the season, a well-marked line across a piece of branching asters caused by a few hours' difference in the time of setting the plants. In one case the plants were set in the morning and afternoon of the same day; in the other case, in the evening and the following morning. In each instance the seed came from a single package, and the plants from a single sowing in the same seed bed. The poorer plants showed the diseased condition that follows the punctures of the tarnished plant-bug. Probably one set of plants received more of a check in transplanting than the other; and the vitality was thereby so much impaired that the plants were unable to outgrow the effect of insect injury. Curiously, too, plants left thin in the seed bed have sometimes been the worst of all.

Possibly the success of Fall sowing may be a case of survival of the fittest, the seeds of low vitality that have lain exposed all Winter not germinating in Spring. GEO. ARNOLD, JR.

Rochester, N. Y.

The circumstance referred to by our correspondent is narrated in American Gardening, issue of October 6. We quote from the article as follows:

"We discovered this Spring that the aster withstood the rigor of Winter in our own trial grounds and came up abundantly. The plants were so thrifty and looked so well that we were tempted to use them. At the same time in the regular way, asters of various kinds were sown in the Spring and transplanted. Of these we had a fine stock. They flourished for a while, began to show their blossoms and then began to go off with the fatal diseases. Not so the plants that had been transplanted in parallel rows from the Autumn-sown seed; these grew and flourished, not a single plant has been lost and at the time of writing, October 3, the lateral branches are in full flower.

"In the early part of the season, preference for plant and blooms would go to the Spring sown; they appeared more vigorous and started in to throw much larger flowers. The Autumn-sown plants were sturdy, came into bloom a few days later, and while the blooms have been all the season uniformly good they have lacked the size of well-grown plants sown in the Spring and which have escaped these diseases.

"Anyone wishing to repeat this test will do well to sow seed immediately. We do not guarantee that this is a panacea against stem rot and rust, but simply make the statement that it has been a decided success with us this season."

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

DEUTZIA.—Lift a few medium-sized plants from the garden and pot them. Stand the pots back outdoors, and pack leaves or litter between them to prevent the frost from reaching the roots of the plants. After December comes they can be brought indoors and forced into bloom easily. Where funeral work is done, the flowers can be used to the very best advantage; not as bo y work, but as a finishing touch. For a design made when flowers are rather interior, deutzia sprays are invaluable; and by bringing in a few plants at a time, the supply of bloom can be prolonged, according to the number of plants at command.

DOUBLE SWEET ALYSSUM.—Cuttings should be taken from the strong plants that are yet blooming in the garden. These come in very useful to plant in a corner of a carnation house, and, later, will furnish a supply of cuttings for Spring trade.

DUTCH BULB OUTSIDE.—The planting of these bulbs should be pushed to completion as soon as possible, while the ground is in a favorable condition to receive them.

VERBENAS.—Take cuttings of the best kinds and put them in sand, in a cool house; when rooted, transplant into flats where they may remain until January 1. Then pot them off and start them growing, and they will furnish an almost endless supply of cuttings.

ALTERNANTHERA.—Stock plants of these should be taken into the greenhouse at once, if not already done. Take in enough of them so that there will be no shortage of cuttings when the time comes to propagate.

Raising Palms from Seed.

In the raising of any plant from seed, the first essential is to procure seed which is good and fresh. Though this may look like a stereotyped observation, it is nevertheless necessary here, as, in the first place, palm seed is by no means a cheap commodity, and if it fails to germinate it means considerable loss. In the second place, some of the varieties, being slow to germinate, would be occupying valuable space for months that might be utilized for growing something else. I would suggest to anyone about to embark on this enterprize to arrange with some reliable seedsman to send seeds of the different palms as these arrive (which they do at different times, usually somewhere from October to April), and plant the seeds as soon as they come to hand. We prefer to use seed pans in which to plant, but have also succeeded well with boxes. Either should be about four inches in depth, to allow of liberal drainage, and about two and a half inches of soil. A compost of equal parts of good sod soil, peat, and sharp sand (and finely sifted), with the addition of charcoal, will suit almost any of the varieties of palms.

After ample drainage material has been placed in the bottom, cover with about two inches of soil, pressing this moderately firm. Sow the seed rather thickly, just allowing enough space so that the one seed will not disturb the other in pushing up. This, for the larger seeds, but a little space should be left between the smaller seeds, so that the plants, when started, will not be overcrowded.

The depth of covering must be regulated by the size of the seed. To cover to about its own depth is a pretty safe rule. Press the soil evenly and firmly. Situation just after sowing is not a matter of great importance, so long as a suitable temperature can be maintained. This should not be less than 75 degrees. An ideal place would be a bench with bottom heat, but if the bench is needed for anything else, the seed will start just as well, placed under the benches, if, as soon as the growths begin to show, the seedlings are removed to lighter quarters. But care should be taken to have some arrangement made to insure against the drip from other plants getting into the boxes. These boxes should not be set directly on the floor. It is better to have them raised a little to allow of a free passage of air, and insure the uniform drying out of the soil.

Close attention and good judgment are required in the matter of watering, as either extreme is very apt to result in the loss of the seed, should it occur during the early stages of growth.

The time required for germination varies considerably with the different species. Latania borbonica is about the quickest to come up. Given fresh seed and all conditions suitable, it will take from three to four weeks to germinate. Cocos Weddelliana is about the slowest, taking about two to three months.

Potting up should not be done until after the second leaf is developed. Palms at no stage of their growth will do well if over potted, so it is better to start with as small a pot as possible—one just large enough to conveniently contain the roots being best. Ample drainage must not be neglected. A soil similar to that used for sowing the seeds in will be found suitable for the first potting, but for subsequent pottings a rather heavier soil is better. Less peat and sand had, therefore, better be used. Once well under growth the temperature can be reduced to not less than 65 degrees at night, when fire is employed, allowing a rise of from 15 to 20 degrees by sun heat. Keep the atmosphere moderately moist, and syringe freely during bright weather to keep the plants free from insects. Shading from strong sunlight is necessary, also all the air that can judiciously be given, to keep the growth strong and prevent drawing.

I would not advise beginners to go into growing the choicer varieties of palms until one has gained a little experience with the hardier and easier handled kinds, such as Latania borbonica, Kentia Forsteriana and Kentia Belmoreana. These, especially the latter two, will always find a ready market. Areca lutescens might also be included, being of comparatively easy culture, and usually a good seller. Cocos Weddeliana is a pretty little palm, but one of the hardest to grow and where its cultivation is attempted, I would advise planting the seed in small pots at once, as the plant makes a long tap root which is apt to be broken in potting from a pan or box. The pots can be plunged close together in flats to make them easier handled. Most of the varieties of phœnix are of easy culture, and hardy, but the demand for them is always more or less limited.

SCOTIA.

Cannas at Riverton, N. J.

A walk through the Dreer canna fields at this season enables one to form an excellent opinion of the merits of the various varieties. My guide was James Davidson, who makes this plant his particular study. Appended are his remarks:

"In the front row I place President Meyer, a most floriferous and continuous bloomer, a bright flower, extra large broad petal, foliage dark. Mrs. Kate Gray, a gorgeous flower, scarlet orange, large, solid petal, grand truss, foliage light. Madam Crozy is yet the finest in its class. The lovely sheen and warm color has not yet been imparted to any other variety. President McKinley is a splendid variety; one of the very best. Alphonse Bouvier is not so tall as usual, but is a fine canna. Duke of Marlborough is the darkest crimson in the collection. Souvenir d'Antoine Crozy is a grand gilt-edged variety; but Queen Charlotte is the best and most showy, having more gold in its petals than any other. First Bismark is a bright scarlet that attracts; it is a fine grower of medium height. F. Neuvessel cannot be excelled as a bloomer; while the petal is not very large, it has a leathery texture, which enables it to stand up like a regiment of soldiers. Souvenir du President Carnot is similar to Bouvier, but has dark foliage. Mlle. Berat is the finest carmine, highly satisfactory, unique in its class. Florence Vaughan and Comte de Bouchard are in the same category. Robert Christie is fine. Egandale is the best bronze-leaved variety, and as a bedder stands alone.

"Black Beauty has done remarkably well this season. It is the finest of the kinds with dark foliage, yet sent out.

"Mme. Leon Leclerc is as a butterfly in appearance, a very fancy kind. Italia, as usual, has done well; it is the showiest and most handsome of the species. J. D. Eisele is distinct in having a rounded petal, of great substance, a bright and pretty flower and good habit. Sam Trelease is another of the rounded petaled sorts, a bloom highly attractive, made so by a combination of scarlet and orange in the one flower. Souvenir de Robert Owen is a beautiful orange very free, the best in its class. Mme d'Or is the finest pure yellow; it does not bleach out in the sun."

There are many others, but the list has been considerably curtailed, and those kinds that have withstood the trying season here satisfactorily, are herein noted.

Geranium Trials at Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y.

At regular intervals all through the Summer, Mr. C. W. Ward goes over his geranium fields, and judges each variety as it appears at that time, noting the general habit of the plant, the profuseness of blooming and such other qualities as go to make up the ideal bedding geranium. At the close of the season each variety can be thus correctly estimated by referring to the reports that were made, and filed away.

Through the courtesy of Mr. Ward we recently had the privilege of looking over his records of the different varieties, and we give below a list of such as have proved the best of their kinds during the past Summer. In single pink bedders, the best are Granville, Gertrude Pearson and Millfield's Rival. Double crimsons are Marvel, Richelieu, S. A. Nutt and Lafayette. The best aureole kinds are Mark Twain, Andrew Lang, and Mme. Blanche Jamet. In double scarlets the best four are Le Soleil, John Doyle, Pasteur and Alphonse Ricard. In single scarlets, Universe, J. P. Cleary, Chateaubriands, De La Vigne and Pluton. The best semi-double salmon varieties are Mme. Landry, Beaute Poitevine, Mme. Jaulin, and Mme. Charotte. Single salmons are Mme. Chas. Molin, C. W. Ward, Mme. de la Roux and Mme. J. Cibiel. Double salmons Rena Bazin, Nydia and Mathieu de Dombasle.

The double pinks that have proved the best are Jean Viaud, Mme. Barney, Mme. Phillip Labrie, Miss Frances Perkins, Comtesse de Castris and Mme. Desbordes Valmore.

In the double white varieties, there are four that are very satisfactory; these are Mme. Buchner, Comtesse de Uncourt, Eulalie and Mme Rozain. In single white the two leaders are L. Aube and Mrs. J. M. Gaar.

Show Room of Ed. Jansen.

Our illustration represents the show room of Ed. Jansen, New York, manufacturer of baskets and other specialties for florists' use, as it appeared during the S. A. F. convention in New York, at which time Mr. and Mrs. Jansen tendered a reception to the visiting delegates. The store is located at 112 to 116 West 18th Street, in a new six-story building recently erected by Mr. Jansen. Five of the floors are occupied by this business, two for manufacturing, two for stock, and one as salesroom and office. This place is always worthy of a visit from those in search of novelties in the lines in which Mr. Jansen deals.

Chrysanthemum Committees.

President Herrington has announced committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports on dates as follows: October 20 and 27, November 3, 10, 17 and 24.

BOSTON, MASS.—A. H. Fewkes (chairman), Horticultural Hall, Tremont Street.

CHICAGO, ILL.—J. S. Wilson, care J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the Secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The advantages of a Fall meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, in connection with any one of the large shows, and a good deal along the same lines as the Carnation Society, are obvious. The meeting would be a direct benefit to the Society, and incidentally to the local show in question. It would certainly be a good advertiser, to receive attention from the National Society; at the same it would stimulate interest of general moment in the Society at large.

As with other business matters, the success of the enterprise would largely depend on the executive ability of the promoters. Should such an event be attempted, please eliminate any entertainment provided at the expense of local clubs. Hospitality has its own code of courtesy, pleasant to give and receive; but should not be taxed to any extent that is a strain on the party of the first part, likewise the party of the second part. GROVE P. RAWSON.

Chrysanthemum Primo.
An early white variety.

Chrysanthemum Primo.

Primo was the first chrysanthemum certificated last year, and fulfills all expectations. It was fit to cut as soon as Fitzwygram, under same conditions, but double and treble the size of that variety, with perfect stem and foliage. Its growth is healthy, robust and compact, and the habit all that can be desired. The flower is of the Japanese type, full and deep in color, clear white, not yellowish, like Bergmann.

This variety as it becomes known must certainly come to the front as an extra early white.

Chrysanthemums are all looking well—a remarkably even lot. A house or two of high-grade second year seedlings are especially promising. I confidently expect several of them to rank with William H. Chadwick.

GROVE P. RAWSON.

Keeping Dahlias Dwarf.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

As we have had so many questions asked in explanation of our paper read before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, in regard to keeping dahlia plants dwarf, I send you enclosed copy of a reply sent to one of the inquirers which will serve a general purpose.

L. K. PEACOCK.

"There are different methods of keeping dahlias dwarf without checking their growth. We ourselves follow several, one in conjunction with the other. In the first place, we do not make our ground too rich in the beginning. Secondly, as soon as the shoots appear, we pinch them out. This is known as the single pruning system. Of course, we remove, as stated in our book, all but the strongest. Then we stir, or cultivate, the soil very deeply, in many cases from 4 to 6 inches. This is really root pruning, and while it does not check the growth of the plant, it checks the rapid growth. As soon as the plants commence blooming, we cultivate lightly, only 1 to 1½ inches deep. This gives the full strength of the soil to the plant, and the flowers are, consequently, large, and are produced in quantities. When the flowers commence to get smaller we top-dress the soil with pure bone meal four parts and nitrate of soda one part. This top dressing we renew as often as the flowers show that it is needed.

"In regard to pruning the plants, I would say that all we do is to remove all the shoots but the one strongest in the beginning. You then have but one strong, sturdy stem. All the pruning we do after that is to cut the flowers, and as we keep cutting out the tops of the plants in cutting the blooms on good stems, the lower shoots develop and flower, materially keeping the plants low and dwarf. This, of course, is in open ground, or field culture.

"If plants are grown in a garden, or anywhere where they cannot get plenty of pure air and sunlight, I doubt if this system would be satisfactory. In other words, without plenty of air and sunlight the plants would grow tall, and would have to be staked any way."

Baltimore.

Market Conditions.

Fine weather has at last set in after a period of dull and damp days. The first killing frost happened Wednesday.

An outside bed of heliotrope, covered with a frame and glass, may be kept for two months, and furnish fine flowers. Note how much more fragrant it is when covered than if left in the open air.

Chrysanthemums are very late this year. The best white and pink kinds have been sent in by Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., the varieties being Glory of the Pacific, Willowbrook, George S. Kalb.

Retail trade is spasmodic, but picking up a little.

The absolute absence of the Republican party emblem from the buttonhole of the Maryland voters, seems to reaffirm the historic political tendency of our state; but what an opportunity our florists missed in not urging the American Beauty as the flower of Democracy!

The Park Board is planning new street and park improvements, and City Landscape Architect Seybold is kept busy at his table and desk.

Mr. Hamilton, head gardener of Druid Hill Park, is building substantial additions to his propagating houses. The palms in the conservatory, under the charge of Charles Wagner, have done finely this season.

Mr. Smith is erecting two large houses at his place on York Road, Waverley.

The hot and dry Summer, followed by the late rains, has produced many freaks of vegetation. Some lindens (European) which had shed their leaves, are out in full Spring glory in the parks. Pyrus japonica may be seen in bloom in some of the squares. An early Winter is sure to do considerable harm to ornamental shrubs and trees.

A hint to florists, who want flowers of distinct and pleasing character in February and later; Pyrus japonica (syn. Cydonia jap.) may be easily forced into bloom in a warm and shaded palm houses even the branches, cut and placed in water, will produce their pretty flower; in 75 to 80 degrees of heat. In vases of Japanese design the blooms are very pretty, and should make a becoming decoration for tea parties. The color does not come out so bright as in their natural vegetation, the red variety taking a soft pink tint. If kept out of sunlight the flowers will last four to six days. Plants should be lifted and potted in August, and must, of course, not be allowed to start growth anew; if for cut blooms only they may be taken in direct from the nursery after January 1, and will bloom in 20 to 25 days. T. E.

West Hoboken, N. J.

John Birnie has a fine lot of chrysanthemums in his houses this Fall. Glory of The Pacific, Polly Rose, Ivory, Pink Ivory and Bonnaffon are the principal kinds grown. Cutting of the first-named sort was commenced the beginning of this week.

In one of the carnation houses a batch of The Marquis is planted. They seem to have done much better in the field than has been the case with those of some growers, who are trying this variety. The plants are now well established, and plenty of buds are in sight.

Buffalo.

Trade Notes.

On Tuesday of this week, after a smart shower, the weather turned cooler. The recent warm condition threatened to injure fruit interests sadly through affecting marketing and keeping qualities. W. C. Stroh, a carnation grower of Attica, ventured the opinion of its producing as well a soft growth in carnation wood that is undesirable.

Some wedding work in decorating and bouquets, with calls for funeral emblems, have livened up store trade somewhat. Store decorations for "openings" have been called for some, but inclined to modest expenditures.

Flowers have been fairly abundant in the most needed kinds. Chrysanthemums of good quality are now in regular display in the windows, and orchids are seen more freely than usual.

Jottings.

William Scott has been absent on a Pan-American promoting tour for some time.

A club meeting was announced for Wednesday afternoon of this week at the New Gruener Hotel.

Recent visitors included William G. Bertemann, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; and among travelers, J. L. Killen and S. S. Skidelsky, both reporting fair business, and J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y. VIDI.

Toronto.

We have been having beautiful weather for some time now; with no frost as yet hard enough to cut off coleus. Dahlias are still in full bloom, even in exposed places, and a great many fine flowers are coming in. Business is good with an adequate supply of stock; the only surplus of flowers being in second-class roses and dahlias. There has been a very considerable quantity of funeral work, and quite a few wedding orders. Carnations are fairly plentiful. Violets are also coming in more abundantly, and the quality continues to improve. A few additional chrysanthemums are seen around, but these flowers are by no means plentiful yet. Cattleyas are not abundant, but those seen around are good.

Boston ferns appear to be very plentiful. Dunlop had a fine window decoration of Autumn leaves, berries and Liberty and Meteor roses last week.

Tidy has been showing some very fine early chrysanthemums and good violets; Simmons has some good roses and dahlias.

The marketmen, on Saturday last, did a fair trade in plants and cut flowers. All the growers are thankful for the fine, warm weather, especially when they think of the price of coal. T. M.

Ottawa.

The Fall weather has been the finest ever experienced in Ottawa, October 22, and no killing frost, but grand, sunny days. Good carnations are being picked and roses are also very fair. Liberty is showing all the good qualities claimed for it.

Chrysanthemums, Bergmann and Glory of the Pacific, are just in, and sell well. Graham Bros. are picking some very fair violets. Trade is improving, as our society people are now getting home.

R. Wright, of Aylmer, has rented a good store in one of the best locations in the city, and has nearly completed the decorations therein. He will open up in the course of a week, with a grand show of chrysanthemums, etc. E.

The Liberty Rose at Home.

At the establishment of Ernst G. Asmus, West Hoboken, N. J., large additions to the glass area have been made during the past season. As is well known, roses are a specialty here. Liberty has 12 houses devoted to it, and, with the exception of one house, every plant is in the finest possible condition. Some of the beds are planted with young stock; others are filled with old plants that have been carried over. Raised benches are the rule in a few of the houses, while in others solid beds are employed.

To those growers who have had but indifferent success with this variety, Mr. Asmus' remarks, as follows, will no doubt prove interesting, embodying, as they do, his method of growing Liberty, with attendant satisfactory results. He says:

"I myself have this year planted 12 houses with Liberty, about double what I had last year, and with the exception of one house, all the plants are in the pink of condition, three to four feet in height. The one house, through a little neglect, got a bad dose of back spot, which seems hard to check.

"I plant in good rich loam, or rather sod, mixed with about one-third of good old cow manure, giving the plants at all times a liberal amount of water. Keep all young buds, as soon as they are about the size of small peas, well nipped out, but be sure when nipping out the buds, to do so with about two or three leaves, according to the thickness of the shoots. Liberty is a persistent bloomer, and if you nip the bud alone, the plant will throw other small buds, instead of good flowering shoots. The consequence is, you will not get any wood, only small buds without any stem. By nipping two or three eyes lower, you will avoid that, and get good flowering wood.

"By no means allow the plants to get checked or hard. Do not let them flower before they have obtained a good height, say three or four feet or more, which you can only get by keeping the buds off, before the wood gets hard. This, I find, is the only secret in growing Liberty. If my advice on this point is strictly followed, I do not think anybody need have any fear of Liberty not growing.

"Be careful about details, such as watering and ventilation. The plants require about the same temperature as Bride and Bridesmaid, but can stand a little more water. I give mine a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees, with a 10 degrees increase on bright, sunny days.

"Up to this year the plants have been almost black spot proof with me, but those in one house now show me that this variety is, like most of the hybrid teas, subject to that dread disease. If attacked, be careful that every spotted leaf is removed and that at once. I find carbonate of copper, dissolved in ammonia, and applied at the rate of about one gill to a watering can of water, a preventive, but not a cure. It is used by syringing two or three times a week.

"In conclusion, I would say: Do not look for real good colored Liberty flowers before the weather gets cool. I have never got good blooms before November, and they come a good deal finer in December and January, when Liberty is at its best.

"If I have not made it clear as to how to grow Liberty, I am at all times willing to answer questions upon the subject, and would ask, as a favor, all who visit New York to give me a call and see with their own eyes that Liberty is as represented. My foreman or myself will gladly give all desired information to visitors."

A noticeable feature of the new range of glass is that solid beds are used almost entirely. These are also quite narrow, making the beds easy to work, and bringing every plant within ready reach, also allowing a freer circulation of air and light than can be obtained on a wide bench.

Kaiserin and Carnot have been very fine the past Summer and the latter variety will be carried over to produce extra large blooms next year. Beauty are grown extensively and a continuous supply of blooms seems assured. Other varieties cultivated are Testout, Cusin, Morgan, Bridesmaid, Bride and Watteville.

One house is devoted to seedlings and novelties. Among the latter one named Sunrise, bearing a saffron-colored flower, has been creating quite an impression, and will no doubt be heard from later.

Cincinnati.

Trade Notes.

The unusual demand that generally comes with the chrysanthemum season has so far failed to materialize. Business with the retail stores is not what it should be at this time of year. The call, too, for chrysanthemums is not as extensive as was expected. Of course, we have to find some excuse for this state of affairs, and we will attribute it to the presidential campaign, which always causes a lull in business just before election. One thing the Republican party has done for the florist has been to secure the adoption of the pink carnation as a national emblem. Now, if some good silverite can prevail on the Democratic party to adopt the red carnation, and a good prohibitionist get the white carnation adopted by that party, the florist would surely be in the swim.

Plenty of good flowers are coming in to fill all orders, and prices are very reasonable. Strictly first-class stock is scarce, and more could be sold. Carnations are getting better in quality, and we hope to be able to meet all demands soon, with nothing but first-class blooms. The fancy sorts will be slow in coming forward; dry weather in this section made lifting difficult and retarded housing until quite late.

Club Meeting.

Saturday evening last, was meeting night for the Cincinnati Florists' Society. It was decided to hold exhibitions, as heretofore, at the regular monthly meetings. The first exhibit will be one of chrysanthemums and will occur November 10. A schedule will be mailed in due time, announcing prizes. The December meeting will be devoted to carnations. To all of these gatherings, outsiders are invited to send exhibits.

E. G. GILLETT.

Chicago.

State of Trade.

Not much change can be noted from last week. Shipping trade has been very satisfactory, but local business holds back, and is hardly equal to that of last year at this time. Chrysanthemums are backward. Small supplies are coming in so far, consequently good prices rule and there is an apparent demand. Certainly values are good for the class of stock now in the market. In addition to Lady Fitzwygram, which rarely has good foliage, Glory of the Pacific, Mme. Bergmann, a few dozen Merry Monarch, and Marquis de Montmort are the varieties in evidence. The price runs from $1.50 to $3 per dozen, for the best. It is said that by the 20th better chrysanthemum conditions are expected.

In roses stock has been soft, but the cooler weather now prevailing will effect a change in this direction. The supply of Beauty is increasing, being now equal to the demand. For first-class, well colored stock, $1.50 to $3 per dozen is realized.

Of carnations, probably 50,000, from open ground, came in the past week of very good quality. House-grown stock is improving very fast, but nothing strictly fancy is to be had as yet.

Carnations are much more plentiful than they were a year ago.

Violets had somewhat uncertain sales; the quality is improving. Lycopodium is beginning to show up fine in color, and promises to be abundant. Prices as yet are unsettled and there is some talk of cutting values for future delivery.

Wild smilax is coming in, evidencing some movement in decoration. Ours is a great market for this and other greens. The past week cosmos in big quantities were received; it sells at 25c. per bunch.

Round About.

John Reardon, gardener to Mr. M. A. Ryerson, and George Woodward, gardener to Mr. J. J. Mitchell, will have fine 10-inch specimen chrysanthemums for the flower show, which begins November 6. The judges this year are Patrick O'Mara, president-elect S. A. F.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; and Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.

C. D. Washburn returned from a trip to St. Louis and Kansas City last week.

Arnold Ringler, of W. W. Barnard & Co., is now convalescent, and back at his post after a bad attack of muscular rheumatism.

A banquet was given last week by a few friends to the Chicago bowling team that participated in the New York contest.

Pittsburg.

Business Bits.

Trade, since the first of the month, has been fairly good, and on account of the mild weather, stock held out well until a few days ago, when light frosts caused a little shortening up of some sorts. Asters are past. Chrysanthemums are coming in quite freely, but are a little too high priced to sell readily. Carnations are doing nicely; pink kinds are plentiful, but white is in good demand. Roses have improved much, selling at from $1.50 per dozen up, for good stock. Beauty bring from $3 up per dozen.

Violets go slow; stock is getting better. Dahlias are still abundant and sell fairly well at about 75c. per dozen.

Up to October 17, we have had no killing frost in our vicinity.

Club Notes.

The October meeting of the Florists' Club, held last week, was fairly well attended. One new member was proposed. The meeting did a good thing by passing a motion to contribute $50 out of the funds of the club, for the relief of the Galveston florists, and the secretary was instructed to send the money to THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE Fund. A number of our florists had already contributed to the general fund collected in this city, which to date amounts almost to $60,000.

Jottings.

The plans for the proposed building for a school of botany were submitted to the Director of Public Works, and it is expected to have the structure completed by next May. The building will be erected near the Phipps conservatory, so as to be of easy access to it. It will be two stories in height, containing lecture and class rooms. The cost, $25,000, is to be defrayed by Henry Phipps, Jr., the donor of the fine conservatories in Pittsburg and Allegheny parks.

John Bader received a large shipment of azaleas a few days ago. They arrived in fine shape.

Bulbs are nearly all in, and appear to be good—better than last year. Retail sales are slow yet. E. C. REINEMAN.

St. Louis.

Trade Notes.

Business the past week has been pretty good. Roses are now plentiful, with quality fair. Carnations are very scarce, and in consequence values have gone up a notch. These flowers now bring from $1 to $2. A few white chrysanthemums have made their appearance; they came from Indiana and realized $2 per dozen. The blooms were only medium-sized. Violets are in, and are considerably called for. While they are very small, people seem to welcome them back again. Violets sell at 35c. per 100.

The weather at present is almost hot; so far no frost of any consequence has appeared. Prevailing conditions are good for the coal pile, the price of which commodity has increased considerably.

Notes.

John W. Kunz, formerly manager for the Jordan Floral Co., and later of 605 Oliver Street, left Saturday night for Chicago, having accepted a position with Charles Samuelson of that city. We all regret to lose John, and wish him the best of success in his new field.

J. J. Beneke is suffering from a lame arm. He strained a blood vessel in which the blood clotted, resulting in a very sore shoulder, which will prevent his bowling for a week or two.

Club Meeting.

A well-attended and lively meeting was held on the 11th. The committee on chrysanthemum show reported that the exhibition would be held in the naves of the Exposition building, space therein having been secured at a very satisfactory price. The advertising in the program this year has been given out, the club to get 25 per cent. of the profit, if any. Expenditures have been reduced to the lowest possible figure, in hopes of pulling the show through without loss.

Letters from J. D. Pruessner and Otto Fehrlin of Galveston, were read. A committee, consisting of H. G. Berning and C. A. Kuehn, was appointed to solicit subscriptions for the benefit of the sufferers in that unfortunate town, all funds thus obtained to be divided equally among the florists, only. Mr. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, was present, and told the club what our Chicago brethren were doing for the same good cause.

Applications for membership were received from Theo. Miller, Christ Eichborn and Philip Goeble, and read for the first time.

The essayists were on hand promptly. Mr. Schray read a very instructive paper on "Profitable Winter-blooming Plants." Among them he mentioned begonias, bougainvillea, heliotrope, bouvardia, mignonette, poinsettia, calla, calceolaria, gardenia, cineraria, cyclamen, primrose, geranium, etc., giving also useful hints on the time for starting the plants, and the best way to cultivate them. Mr. Fillmore followed with a paper on "The Best Method of Growing, and the Best Roses for Present Demand." His paper was an exhaustive effort on the culture of the rose. As we all know Mr. Fillmore's ability in growing roses, no mistake can be made in following the lines laid out by him. A vote of thanks was extended to the essayists. The question box brought out considerable discussion on various subjects, and altogether we had a very nice meeting. C. C. S.

Louisville, Ky.

Since last writing there has been a slight increase in the demand for flowers, the variety is very limited. Up to the present time not many violets or chrysanthemums have been brought into the market. Roses are improving in quality. Carnations are not doing so well.

The horse show opened here Monday, and as Kentucky is noted for its fine horses and pretty women, the opening was a grand success. The show created an increased demand for flowers, especially for American Beauty.

J. S.

Peoria, Ill.

The Cora Carnival ended on Saturday. In the industrial parade, Cole Bros. and J. C. Murray were represented by well-decorated wagons.

Plenty of roses are in town, with light demand. Carnations are not over-plentiful, and find good sales. Violets are abundant, though small at present. Chrysanthemums will hardly be in as early as last year.

Kuhl, of Pekin, reports good sales of Boston ferns, of which he has several houses in fine shape.

J. C. Murray has been confined to the house with rheumatism. J. R.

Columbus, O.

The Columbus Horticultural Society held its first Autumn meeting on September 29, at the State University. The regular program consisted of two papers, as follows: Fruit Notes from the Fair, by Prof. Wm. R. Lazenby; Some Notes and Impressions on the Summer's work, by Fred K. Luke.

E. L. Charles is putting in steam to take the place of the flue system of heating.

The City Park will hereafter be managed under a new regime. Heretofore the superintendent had been appointed largely with reference to his political Complexion and qualification. The Park commission now selects this officer by examination. These examinations are open to all who desire to enter. R. G. Ray, the former assistant superintendent, has been appointed superintendent, he having stood the highest in the recent examination. Mr. Ray is well qualified for the position. He is a graduate of Miami University, where he took a special course in botany and chemistry, as well as landscape gardening. He entered upon his duties October 1. FRITZ.

The regular meeting of the Morris County Gardeners and Florists was held in Masonic Hall, on Wednesday last, with Vice-President Totty in the chair. The main business of the evening was detail matters in connection with the show; but this concluded, the Galveston disaster was discussed and by unanimous vote it was decided to do all that was possible to assist florists who had met such dire misfortune. As a preliminary the sum of $50 was voted as a first contribution, and after it was decided to have a number of sub-committees working in their several districts to secure further contributions, either in cash or kind, in case any of our florist friends had surplus stock that they felt disposed to donate for the purpose.

H. W. Gibbons, who was unavoidably absent, wrote to the effect that he would be glad to assist the Galveston florists with plans or suggestions, in regard to heating, etc., gratuitously.

One new member was elected and one proposed. A. H.

Sensible and Solid Business Men...

Invariably give the preference to the best equipped and most reliable houses, for they well know that only in this way can they obtain the best service—and the cost is no greater; in fact, often times less. The argument, so far as it relates to ourselves, is founded upon the fact that through the nature of our connection with the Seed, Florist and Nursery industries, we know their needs and requisites by heart; we are familiar with the technicalities of their catalogue language, and, by long practice, have been made about as perfect as it is possible for fallible man to become in any one direction. We have

Your Catalogue

The Material, the Men, the Experience.

Our prices are reasonable and the work is good and will stand criticism. It is no trouble to us to send estimates to responsible people. Give us all the information necessary on which to base our figures, and your wants will be quickly attended to. The same remark applies to any other form of printed matter of which you may stand in need—now or later. We will be glad to hear from you at any time.

Success with House Plants

BY LIZZIE PAGE HILLHOUSE.

A complete text-book and guide to the care, cultivation and propagation of all plants in the garden and the home.

The volume is written by a woman for women, in plain, concise language, easily understood, and the book has the special merit of giving directions which can be readily followed, the methods prescribed being of the simplest, and the material suggested to be used easily within reach of all.

12mo., 232 pp.; profusely illustrated, with complete and ready reference index to all plants enumerated. Price, Cloth, $1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

To Retail Florists. The old thought, that it was dangerous for a customer to know much about the care of plants, has passed away, being superseded by the newer and more intelligent one, viz.: that the more successful a customer is with plants, the greater quantity will he or she buy.

We offer Special Inducements to all who wish to handle this book. It is a good seller.

Vol. XII. No. 43. NEW YORK, OCTOBER 27, 1900. One Dollar Per Year.

SEVERAL very large shipments of JAPAN LONGIFLORUM have arrived in very bad condition—more than half of the bulbs having been lost by heating. This large loss will make a scarcity in this article, and probably many dealers will be unable to fill their orders in full.

If you do not succeed in getting your full supplies, we have still to offer a fine lot of

These bulbs are in splendid shape. We can offer them at $14.00 per case. 350 bulbs to the case.

WE ALSO HAVE A FINE STOCK OF

LILIUM HARRISII.

7-9 in. size is generally scarce, but we have a very fine stock of this size still on hand. These are a lot of bulbs that were left in the ground and dug late, and, in consequence, are in grand shape. Bulbs are plump, bright and clean, and are as fine a lot of Harrisii as any one would want to handle. We can supply these as long as unsold as follows:

5-7 inch, 400 bulbs to the case, only $16.00 per case.
7-9 inch, 200 bulbs to the case, only $18.00 per case.

We can also offer a fine stock of WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS
Extra quality bulbs, 12-15 otm., in case lots, 2,100 bulbs to the case, $16.00 per 1000.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS GRANDIFLORA Case lots, about 1,300 bulbs to the case, $7.50 per 1000.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, O., President; F. W. BOLGIANO, First Vice-President; S. G. COURTEEN, Milwaukee, Wis., Second Vice-President; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer.

Points and information from seedsmen, and all interested in this column, solicited. Address EDITOR SEED TRADE, care of FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, P. O. Box 1697, New York.

Bulb Trade in New York.—The bulb trade to date has been most satisfactory, the aggregate quantity of stock sold being about 25 per cent. more than last year. The ratio of profits is not the same, for bulbs were handled on a much closer margin, caused partly by higher cost prices, which necessitated increased valuations on which duties were based, while selling values here have not advanced in proportion. Early in the season indications were that Japan longiflorum bulbs would be over pleatiful, but the spoiling of large numbers in transit cut off most of the surplus. Roman hyacinths are not now of sufficient quantity to fill orders, as is also the case with Bermuda Harrisii and longiflorum bulbs in the larger sizes. Some buyers are also unable to secure enough Prosperine and other named tulips, and there is some searching for auratum and speciosum lilies, but the main shipment is not yet in.

Retail trade made a good start during the early cold snap, but this fell off when the weather became warm again. With steady cold weather a revival is looked for in this line, and probably when the season is over there will be considerably less bulb stock left in the hands of the dealers than is usual.

St. Paul.—Excessive rains have interfered with potato digging quite a good deal, but there seems to be no inclination to rot, and the prospects for a good crop are flattering. Onion sets have yielded fairly well, though some fields were badly spotted, owing to the seed not sprouting on account of the excessive drought. Onion seed, which is grown in limited quantities, is an average crop.

L. L. May & Co. have purchased a large warehouse at Lakeland, Minn., in close proximity to their farm, where they will store potatoes, onion sets, corn and root crops. It is located on the C. M. St. P. R. R., convenient for shipping. In the cellar underneath, cannas, dahlias, and nursery stock for early shipments will be stored.

Green from the green district is now being gathered, but the crop is reported short on account of the long, protracted drought, which killled the roots in many localities.

J. M. Kimberlin and grandson were recent callers, en route to the East.

European Notes.

Some nice rains have fallen over nearly the whole of Northern Europe, and although the temperature is comparatively low for the time of year, there has not been any frost as yet, and in the meantime our roots and plants for 1901 continue to make very fair progress. A full development of the plants is almost impossible, but they will be quite large enough to show their true character.

It is in a season like this that the true value of a selected strain becomes apparent; and as, in any case, the plants receive the requisite check to vagrant growth by transplanting, there need be no fear regarding the quality of the crop.

Already there are indications of a good demand from your side for next year, and the practical close of the war in South Africa will add a further stimulus.

As prices are now fairly well established on a more remunerative basis, we anticipate both pleasure and profit in our labors. EUROPEAN SEED.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEODORE J. SMITH, Geneva, N. Y., President; N. W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., Vice-President; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Secretary; C. L. YATES, Rochester, N. Y., Treasurer.

The anniversary number of the Germantown (Pa.) Telegraph, contains an interesting article on the development of the nurseries of Thomas Meehan & Sons.

The will of the late T. T. Lyon, recently probated, provides that, under certain conditions, all of his property shall go to the Michigan State Horticultural Society.

North Topeka, Kan.—Peters & Skinner, nurserymen, have purchased another 87 acres of ground.

Rochester, N. Y.—Harrison A. Lyon, in the nursery business with A. J. Fisk until 1874, died here October 19, aged 85 years.

Lincoln, Neb.—W. R. Harris has sold the Tecumseh Nursery to A. Russell, of Hastings, and will retire from business.

Champaign, Ill.—E. S. Swigart has purchased the John B. Harris nursery grounds and will divide the tract into building lots. It comprises 20 acres.

Germantown, Pa.—To properly accommodate their ever-increasing business, Thomas Meehan & Sons have found it necessary to erect a fine two-story addition to their present offices. This firm reports an excellent prospect for Fall trade.

Nursery Stock for Canada.—A circular has been issued to Collectors of Customs notifying them that nursery stock from countries to which the San José Scale Act applies may be imported and entered at the Customs House at St. John, N. B., St. John's, P. Q., Niagara Falls, Windsor, Winnipeg, and Vancouver, between October, 15th 1900, and December, 15th 1900, upon a certificate of an authorized Government official at one of the said ports that the nursery stock has been thoroughly fumigated with hydrocyanic acid gas, under his supervision. Collectors are to instruct railway officials and others concerned to expedite the fumigation of the stock and its immediate transit after fumigation, in order to protect it from damage, as far as possible.

Mt. Holly, N. J.—Charles B. Hornor & Son, nurserymen, recently disposed of their stock of trees and shrubs at public sale. This firm had been in business for many years. It is rumored that the members of the firm consider that there is more money in Kieffer pear orchards than in the nursery business. The vicinity of Mt. Holly is becoming noted for its numerous Kieffer orchards, as well as for other fruit industries.

James Henry, whose death was recently reported, was the successor of Henry Haines, nurseryman, Germantown, Pa. Henry Haines was the son of well-to-do parents, who encouraged him to start a nursery, more from a belief that employment should be engaged in by everyone, than from any necessity to accumulate money. The young man got together the nucleus of a good nursery, but his mind becoming unbalanced, he had to relinquish the business, and it was leased to Mr. Henry. The stock has been pretty well sold out, and the business is practically a thing of the past. Henry Haines died a few years ago.

P. J. A. Berckmans, Jr., of the P. J. Berckmans Co., Augusta, Ga., visited Philadelphia the past week. Another visitor was A. E. Crouch, of Rochester, Pa., who recently secured a large contract for trees for the Pittsburg parks.

Fruit of Akebia Quinata.

Protecting Rhododendrons in Winter.—Many rhododendrons die in Winter, not because they are not hardy, but because the ground freezes so deeply that the roots are unable to supply the moisture called for by the leaves. Transpiration is very great on a cold, clear day. What the plants need is a good covering of the ground with forest leaves, applied before the ground freezes to any depth to hurt. These leaves should be looked out for now in order that there be no delay in applying them at the proper time. Should it be impossible to get leaves, then coarse manure may be used, but nothing equals forest leaves, an inch or two sufficing for the purpose. Shading of the leaves from the sun is a great help. In fact, it is the sun in Winter which prevents us growing many a nice, broad-leaved evergreen. If rhododendrons could be entirely shaded in Winter, many of the so-called tender kinds would survive. Therefore, evergreen boughs, or even bare twigs, placed over them are a help. Forest leaves may be thrown among the branches, as many of them would find a lodgment, and thus assist in making shade.

Nurserymen find it pays to preserve the foliage intact, not only for the plant's sake, but also that when the leaves are scorched in Winter the plants are not as satisfactory to customers as when they are entirely green and fresh. Keep frost from the roots and sun from the tops, and there are few rhododendrons but will Winter in good condition.

Evergreens for Pots.—Nurserymen near large cities say they find an ever increasing demand for evergreens in pots, or for potting. Many stores, other than those of florists, have taken to keeping these plants for sale, and florists always have calls for them for window-box filling, and hall decorating, from hotels and owners of large dwellings. For either window-box filling or for pots, evergreens of straggling growth are not wanted. For boxes they may be less of conical outline than are required for pots. In the latter case, well developed, shapely young stock must be supplied. Such specimens may be found in the following list, the shape desired being natural, and not produced by pruning: White spruce, Norway spruce, hemlock spruce, golden arbor-vitæ, tree box, Lawson's cypress, evergreen euonymus, junipers, Cembran pine, Japanese cedars, and the various forms of the native arbor-vitæ. There are several varieties of the Chinese golden arbor-vitæ, and they are admirable pot plants. The same may be said of Lawson's cypress. Besides the type there is a variety, Allumii, and another, glauca, both with silvery-green foliage, of much beauty. Of junipers, the Irish, Swedish and Chinese are of upright, pretty growth. The Japanese cedars are retinisporas, and exist in many useful and beautiful varieties; pisifera aurea and plumosa aurea are the best, and each of these can be had in its green form as well. As a guide, it will be found that, of all the sorts named, those of about 2½ to 3½ feet will go into 10-inch pots. It is well to pot, or box, evergreens as far in advance of cold weather as possible after September, that some roothold may be acquired before severe cold weather comes.

The Flowering Paper Mulberry.—A great curiosity in the way of trees exists in the flowering form of the paper mulberry, recently introduced to this country. Until a year or two ago the oldest veterans in the nursery business had never seen this tree in America. One firm imported many plants of it, and its beauty causes universal surprise that it had not been introduced before. Preliminary to flowering a green ball appears, very much like what the common buttonball produces. But very soon this green ball is clothed with fleshy, rosy pink flowers, of great beauty. As the paper mulberry makes a small, spreading, round-headed tree, under which one can walk, the balls of flowers are easily seen. The male form of this tree has been in this country for 50 years or more, and probably all the plants have spread from one center, which happened to have this particular form. The new introduction, the female one, will be a great addition to the list of desirable small trees.

Akebia Quinata.

Our illustration shows a fruit of the above-mentioned, well-known climbing shrub. This plant produces its fruit so rarely in this climate that very few of the many who grow the vine have ever seen a specimen of its fruit. Oliver, in his "Plant Culture," gives the following supposed reason for this: "Although a common plant, we seldom see it in fruit, which is probably accounted for by the fact that the pistilate flowers come into bloom before the staminate ones, thus preventing fertilization; besides, the plants flower at a period when fertilization out-of-doors is a somewhat precarious operation with vines brought from other countries." The fruit in question measured 9 inches in spread over the two lobes, and each lobe was 4½ inches across at the widest part. The plant was grown by Mrs. Chas. E. Ward, Mount Vernon, N. Y. In Japan the fruit is considered of much value medicinally, and is used as an emollient.

Rotting of Greenhouse Lettuce.

In the lettuce-forcing industry, which is of great importance in Massachusetts, much loss is experienced by various diseases of the crop, of which rotting is the worst. The amount of loss due to this cause is very commonly 25 per cent. and occasionally a whole crop is destroyed. This trouble has been prevalent for some time, but its real nature has been very little known. It has been found to be caused by several different fungi entirely distinct from each other, and differing very much in their mode of development and relations to the crop. Botrytis vulgaris, the fungus to which the trouble has generally been ascribed, occurs very rarely upon well-grown lettuce as a real parasite and is of minor importance. It is commonly associated with the troubles known indefinitely as "Damping Off," "Mildew," "Black Root," and "Rot." By far the worst trouble is that characterized by a rotting of the stem and sudden and complete collapse of the whole plant which is known, as the "Drop." This disease has been found to be caused by a fungus called Sclerotinia Libertiana, which has not previously been described on lettuce, but is well known as the cause of many similar diseases of other plants. The spread of this fungus in the greenhouse is almost entirely by growth in the soil, where by means of special organs called sclerotia it is able to exist indefinitely between crops and resist all the ordinary influences of Nature.

Another undescribed disease of lettuce has been found which is caused by a species of Rhizoctonia. This is much less prevalent than the Drop and is characterized by a rotting of the leaf blades.

By sterilizing the soil either wholly or in part, the Drop and Rhizoctonia can be completely eradicated or suppressed. Experiments show that ⅝-in. or ¾-in. surface coverings of sterilized sand or earth gave a reduction of 47 per cent. in the amount of Drop. One inch of sterilized sand or earth gave an average reduction of 87 per cent.; 1½-in. of sterilized soil, an average of 93 per cent., and 2, 3, and 4-inch, gave 100 per cent. reduction or no Drop whatsoever, when not contaminated by infected material.

The treatment of the soil by hot water, which raised the temperature of the surface from 176 degrees F. to 186 degrees F. to a depth of 4 inches, reduced the amount of Drop 76 per cent. and completely killed the Rhizoctonia. Treating the surface with a steam rake raised the temperature of the soil to 168 degrees F. to a depth of 4 or 5 inches. This treatment succeeded in reducing the Drop only 5 per cent.; the Rhizoctonia being reduced 57 per cent.

The amount of heat necessary to kill the Drop is about 160 degrees F.; that for the Rhizoctonia appears to be somewhat less.

This method of treatment possesses no value for such diseases as the Botrytis, Mildews, Bacterial-Rot, etc., which can be controlled by proper management of the crop.

Other than the methods of heating the only alternative is changing the soil.

The application of such substances as lime, sulphur, and charcoal to the surface of the soil exerts no repressive influence on the Drop or other lettuce diseases.

Coatings of sawdust, coal ashes and sand applied to the surface of the soil exert only a slight controlling influence upon the Drop. The last substance, however, showed, generally, less Botrytis Rot.

Sub-irrigation, by reducing the surface moisture, has a tendency to lessen the amount of rot.

Experiments with various gases showed that while some are capable of killing rot fungi when freely exposed to their influence, they are all powerless when the organisms are superficially embedded in plant tissues or in the soil.

Freezing the soil has no detrimental effect upon the Drop; on the other hand the development of the sclerotia is accelerated by freezing.

Desiccation exerts a remarkable accelerating influence upon the development of the sclerotia; in one experiment the amount of Drop was increased 64 per cent.

The period in the development of the crop at which the greatest loss occurs is at about the time of maturity.

The optimum conditions for the development of the Drop fungus are practically the same as those for lettuce.—BULLETIN 69, Hatch Experiment Station, Mass.

Indianapolis.

This has been a remarkably beautiful Fall so far; only once did we have the temperature below freezing point. It is interesting to note the effect of this weather on the tree foliage; some trees show no signs of turning, while others are beautifully colored, mostly all a golden yellow; other trees, again, are denuded of foliage. Very likely the dryness of the ground makes this difference.

The Fall season of activity in the florists' business has started in sooner than usual. Several large receptions and weddings have kept the prominent florists busy. Bertermann Bros., on October 23, furnished a debutante reception and dance with one of the most elaborate decorations ever made in the city. It consisted mostly of greens and electric lights. The effects were light green and pink, with wall pockets of pink roses and pink bows, American Beauty and specimen decorative plants, effectively arranged.

Chrysanthemums and carnations are coming in nicely. Cosmos is about over. Shipped stock is of better quality than usual.

During the carnival week, a week of parades, masquerading, electric illuminations, etc., a floral parade was also held, but the material used was all artificial flowers. In the merchants' parade Bertermann Bros. made a great hit by showing a large float, all of fine greens and fresh flowers. Doves were placed on the corners, and the center consisted of a very large handle basket filled mostly with American Beauty, etc. Satin ribbon was also employed in profusion. A cart filled with palms and other plants, decorated with greens and ribbons, and also a wheelbarrow filled with flowers, were pushed by one of their employes. The attendants were dressed in foresters' green suits.

Henry Weishaar & Co. have given up their greenhouses in Brightwood and bought the greenhouses and heating apparatus belonging to Mrs. Chas. Rieman, removing the same to corner of Dorman and Polk Streets. There are seven houses 16 x 70 feet each.

Martin Nelson, who had leased the greenhouses of Mrs. Chas. Rieman, is now out of business.

Anthony Wiegand & Sons are in splendid shape for their Winter business. By enlarging their store they made a great improvement. A large workroom and a room for recreation were also added.

Bertermann Bros. have rebuilt the conservatory at their store, and secured much more head room and floor space. They also have redecorated their store. The greenhouses east of the city also received special attention in being repainted, etc. William G. Bertermann returned from Germany on October 15, much improved in health. On the way from New York he stopped at Buffalo to visit the Pan-American Exposition grounds. He did not meet the genial William Scott, who was traveling in the East. He found the grounds very much advanced and also the buildings. He predicts one of the most complete exhibitions held anywhere.

Alfred Pahud returned some time ago from a visit to France and Switzerland. He enjoyed himself so well that he expects to go again within the next few years. He is now busy getting his place ready for Winter. W. B.

At Peter Henderson & Co.'s.

The greenhouses of this long-established firm, which are situated on Arlington avenue, Jersey City, have been undergoing extensive repairs after a service of 24 years. The average life of a wooden frame greenhouse is usually estimated at about ten years; here, however, is an example of the endurance of wood, when properly selected.

The renovation of one range, consisting of 16 houses, each 100 feet long and 25 feet wide, is almost completed. New gutters have been installed throughout, a very economical method being adopted. The rafters were cut off about two feet from the plate; the gutters were then built in, and a new section of rafter spliced to the old one, the joining being secured by an iron band, thus giving additional strength. When putting in the new plate, a sufficient width was used to allow of the ends of the sash-bars being shortened just enough to remove the rotted portion at the end, and where a sash-bar was decayed beyond the point to which the new plate would reach, the bar was cut and spliced in a manner similar to that employed in the case of the rafter, excepting that the splicing was done at a point far enough up the roof to allow of the drip falling on the walk, instead of on the bench. The methods used were highly successful, the breakage of glass being next to nothing, the results making the range practically as good as new.

Two new iron frame houses, each 100 feet long by 25 feet wide, have been erected during the Summer. These were built by the Lord & Burnham Co., 16 x 24 glass being used, together with other modern improvements.

Roses for pot sales are grown in vast numbers, there being about 40,000 square feet devoted to them alone. Large areas are also devoted to palms, ficus, ferns, and azaleas. The latter arrived from the other side in splendid condition and are bound to be satisfactory.

Mr. Davis, the manager at the greenhouses, has perfected an arrangement for spraying palms and other plants with insecticides, that for simplicity and thoroughness beats anything we have hitherto seen in the spraying line; and as the device is not patented, we will endeavor to explain how it is operated: A galvanized iron pail has a faucet inserted near the bottom. The insecticide to be used is placed in the pail, and the latter is hung to the rafter of the house, directly over the location where the hose attached to the water hydrant is situated. To this faucet in the pail is fastened a length of ¼-inch rubber tubing. This tubing is tied to the hose pipe, clear along to within six inches of the end of the nozzle. The tubing here is fitted on to a piece of ¼-inch iron pipe, about eight inches in length; this pipe is bent to a curve which brings the discharge from the tube directly on the point of the nozzle of the hose pipe, at right angles. The elevation of the pail containing the insecticide gives just enough pressure to cause the liquid to flow nicely, and, meeting the force of the water right at the mouth of the nozzle, it is mixed and distributed perfectly. The tubing being attached to the hose pipe, it is handled with ease, and by using the Stott nozzle, the spray is distributed evenly over every particle of surface without waste of material. We saw the device in operation with Whale Oil Soap and Rose Leaf Extract. When the former is used, however, it must first be made into the consistency of soft soap, then rubbed through a piece of muslin. If this be not done, the sediment in the soap will prevent the apparatus working evenly. The plants sprayed by means of this device are as effectively covered as if they had been dipped; and a house full of plants can be treated in less time than the dipping overhead of one-tenth part of the plants therein would take.

Near to the greenhouses are planted blocks of cannas. Two of the new varieties are yet in full bloom, although the date is October 23, and are deserving of special mention.

Governor Roosevelt justifies its claim to throwing a red and yellow flower, to the full extent; and where a red and yellow effect is wanted, it can be obtained by planting this one variety. We picked several spikes of bloom and in every case both red and yellow segments were found; some of them of one solid color; others one-half of each color; the effect from a distance appearing as though two varieties, distinct in color, had been planted.

The other canna referred to is a very dwarf one, named Little Gem, reaching a height of 22 inches, of low, stocky habit; with a scarlet flower, having a lace of gold bordering the petal. This is the dwarfest sort yet, and for certain kinds of work will prove an acquisition.

Errata.

In advertisement of Peter Henderson & Co., on page 990, last issue, read price of Lilium Harrisii, $60.00 per 1000, not $6.00 as printed.

The fern picking business has commenced once more in Berkshire and the dealers in Hinsdale and Dalton, Mass., now have all they can do to fill orders. Recently Thomas Collins, of Hinsdale, sent an order of 100,000 ferns to a Chicago firm, and George J. Reuter, of Dalton, has a similar order to be filled at once.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

"Open Thine Hand wide unto thy Brother, and to thy needy, in thy Land."

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have, for the convenience of our readers, decided to receive subscriptions at this office for the Galveston relief fund, which will be at once acknowledged in these columns, and the amount contributed forwarded to the proper authorities as the donations of our trade on behalf of their suffering brethren in the storm-swept sections. Checks and money orders for the Galveston relief fund should be made out in favor of the A. T. DeLa Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., crossed "in aid of Galveston sufferers."

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

We see that we are still further indebted to you for your great kindness shown us. The Chicago Florists' Club has also been doing some noble work for us, according to the EXCHANGE of October 13. The St. Louis florists have, too, made some nice collections, as Mr. H. G. Berning informs us. Will you kindly publish a donation by Denys Zirgiebel, of Needham, Mass., of two ounces of his Giant Market pansy seeds. We received a check to the amount of $50, and a further donation of 10,000 rose plants, and also 10,000 diverse plants from the Good & Reese Co., of Springfield, Ohio, as published in your last issue.

The Chicago and St. Louis florists are acting nobly, and if a like response could be awakened throughout the country our condition could be materially improved. We do not lack in confidence and patience, and know that if everyone could picture to himself our present state, the response to our calls for assistance would be quickly heeded. Your appeal in last week's issue of the EXCHANGE pictures our true condition, and, made with such earnestness, is bound to bring about the desired results. Your recommendation affecting shipment of seeds by Mr. Beaulieu is timely, and these will be equally distributed on arrival. This week we shall write every donor a special letter of thanks.

Pretty nearly every one of the florists is working outside of his line at present to meet the pressing needs of his family.

The loss of L. Margot, at $200, and of H. A. Condron, of $400, were accepted at the last meeting, and ordered added to the schedule of losses. Kindly ask donors of money to send same direct to Hutchings, Sealy & Co., bankers, of Galveston, Tex., and to have the amount credited to the Galveston Florists' Fund. This will save our Honorable Mayor, W. C. Jones, a great deal of trouble.

You might also ask contributors of stock to kindly get the express companies to forward such goods free of charge, as money is a scarce article just at present with us.

We ourselves think that, as you state, the contributions have not been so spontaneous as might be expected, for the reason that a good many believe the vast amount of money which has gone forward will be sufficient to rebuild every destroyed home, and start everyone in business again. You are quite correct in assuming the contrary. The property destroyed represented a value estimated at forty million dollars. The contributions to the general relief fund amount to not quite one million dollars. Our city was not, by any means, on a cash basis at the time of the disaster, and armies of workmen have been employed since to remove the debris, etc., and those people will have to be paid first and above all. The pay roll last week amounted to $17,000, according to the Galveston News, and not nearly as many men are employed now as were in the beginning. All of the above money will have to come out of the relief fund. Our secretary went to see Mr. John Sealy, chairman of the General Relief Fund, and secured the following official data:

For rebuilding homes, set aside $100,000.

For repairing, $50,000.

For temporary shelter (tents, which were largely donated), $10,000.

For implements, $10,000.

Now, how far $150,000 will go when applied to a forty-million-dollar loss is easily figured out. It gives each man who lost $1,000 $3.75 relief.

We have, as told in previous issues of the EXCHANGE, not included our homes, etc., but will apply the above relief to our schedule of losses, and there is many a one who will have to content himself with a $5 home.

Please publish the above, as my information comes from headquarters, and it will give some people, who think that the city and its inhabitants are just swamped with money, a more correct idea of the true state of things down here.

If we could be sure of a similar response to that which comes from Chicago and St. Louis, and get all florists to interest themselves in our cause, in every city where there is a florists' club, our houses would soon go up, and our condition soon be changed.

Again thanking you for the kind attention which you have given our affairs, we are THE GALVESTON FLORISTS,
Per. F. G. LAEVERENZ, Secretary.

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

Enclosed find check for $50 for the Galveston Relief Fund, donated by the Morris County Gardeners and Florists' Society. Kindly forward same to proper destination. I will make a canvass of the members and will send the further amount collected as soon as possible.

WM. CHARLTON, Treasurer,
Morris County Gardeners and Florists' Society.
Madison, N. J., Oct, 20.

Henry W. Gibbons, New York, writes to C. H. Atkins, secretary of the Morris County Gardeners and Florists' Society, Madison, N. J., as follows:

"In the matter of the Galveston florists, if it be practical for me to assist them with plans or other structural or heating information, on behalf of the M. Co. G. & F. S., I will be happy to give my best services without cost."

Editor Florists' Exchange.

We will contribute a few hundred of our Cryptomeria japonica to the Galveston florists. Kindly advise us when to ship. We will be pleased to send a liberal supply to be distributed among those who are resuming business.

E. I. RAWLINGS.
Quakertown, Pa.

[We presume that Secretary Laeverenz will advise all those who have kindly offered to donate stock, when the local florists will be in a position to receive the plants.—ED.]

The New Orleans Horticultural Society has appointed a committee to solicit and receive plants, seeds, etc., for the Galveston sufferers. The members composing the committee are: Messrs. E. Valdejo, J. H. Menard and P. A. Chopin, with the secretary, Dan Newsham, who will gratefully receive any donations of seeds, plants, etc.

Commercial Home Grounds Competition.

Entries in Classes A and B in our Home Grounds Competition close October 31. We hope that many of our readers will take advantage of the opportunity afforded for securing high-class advice, through participation in this contest, particulars of which will be found on page 500, issue of May 12 last.

We beg to acknowledge receipt from Dr. Trelease, Director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, of an invitation to the eleventh annual banquet to gardeners and florists, provided for in the will of Henry Shaw, Esq. The banquet will be given in the Mercantile Club, St. Louis, Mo., November 3, 1900.

Custom House Difficulties.

I made a small shipment of fern balls and Nerine japonica bulbs to show my American agents what I could ship them during the proper season. The shipment was sent per Doric, which left Kobe, Japan, on May 30, 1900, and although I invoiced the goods at more than they cost me, the collector of the Port of New York has raised the value, and requires $119 (gold) to be paid, or a suit will be commenced. The amount was too small to spend $2.50 on for a consular certificate, but on receiving the above advice I at once obtained a sworn statement (before the United States' consulate) from the seller, and sent this to New York. My agents inform me Custom House brokers talk of desiring the Collector to condemn the goods, rather than pay $119. But why should I lose? I am willing to ship similar goods at same prices and commissions as in my reduced invoice, which only amounts to $35. I will ship five, ten, or one hundred times as much at the same rate. Now, by what right are these goods held dutiable at such an enormous advance?

Japan. TRADER.

We have made inquiry at the Custom House here, and the authorities inform us that the consignment of fern balls and Nerine japonica bulbs, mentioned in your letter, were undervalued as invoiced, hence the increased duty, etc., placed upon them.

For your information we may state that wherever goods are entered below the wholesale price of the merchandise prevailing at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which goods have been imported, these goods are appraised, and the Act of Congress says: "There shall be levied, collected, and paid in addition to the duties imposed by law on such merchandise, an additional duty of one per centum of the total appraised value thereof, for each one per centum that such appraised value exceeds the value declared in the entry." In default of payment of duties and penalty, the goods are confiscated by the Government.

It appears that the Custom House authorities took evidence on the consignment in question, and the decision of the Collector was upheld by the Board of General Appraisers.

The object of the Government, as explained to us, is to guard against any undue advantage being taken by parties in a position to do so, of the opportunity to purchase goods at less than the prevailing market price, and to ship them to this country, also under their regular market value, on account of said facilities, thereby cutting under the market price consequent upon similar goods having come forward through regular trade mediums; that is to say, that whatever our importers here find to be the prevailing market price in your country at date of exportation, the goods are valued by the Government accordingly.

To obviate a recurrence, we would advise that you obtain information as to the market price ruling at date of shipment and enter your goods at that figure.

The London Flower "Gal."

The following interesting description of the London flower girl and her methods, is given in a recent issue of the New York Press, being part of an article on Covent Garden Market:

"For the rental of their stalls the tradesmen inside the hall pay from sixpence to two shillings a morning; outside the coster florist, with his humble donkey, sets up his stand, at a rental of 12 cents a day. From his more prosperous neighbors within he buys their second-day flowers, and it is from him that the London flower girl lays in her stock in trade, to be sorted into nosegays, impaled on a sharpened stick and sold from her basket on the street corner.

"She is one of the sights of London, this flower girl, and there is nothing like her in America. In dress she is not fastidious, nor yet in the arrangement of her hair. Her hat is of black straw, and she sports it low upon her forehead. Her ears boast startling pendants, and she wears as much of her hair as possible in two belligerent-looking wisps in front of her ears. Mostly she affects a grimy shawl. The chances are three to five that she weighs 175 pounds at least, and would be an ugly customer in a fight.

"Two specimens of her, who had laid in a part of their stock after protracted alterations and bickerings, interlarded with such phrases as 'My eye, wot a price!' and 'Aw, not two bob fer them things!' consented to pose for their portrait, but did so only after being solemnly assured that there would be no charge.

"Curiosity was expressed as to how the more prepossessing of the twain lived and did business, and she said: 'My place is in Little Queen Street, S'ven Di'ls, but my business perch is in the Straad, near the 'Otel Ceecil. I get here every mornin' about sev'n, and git my flow'rs, and I've been doing it now for six years. I'm one of the oldest gals in the business, not counting the old hags that's been in it since Gawd knows when. It costs me from 18 pence to two or three shillin's to fill up my barsket in the mornin' and I expect I double up on a good day. Rainy days is 'ell with us. Wot do I sell? I sells all the flowers in their sizons. Roses is just goin' out now. Roses sells first clars. Before them comes the pansies, and before them the vi'lets and daffodils.

"'The toffs don't know how we can sell the flowers so cheap,' she went on, with a suggestion of a wink, 'they only know that they kin git the flow'rs at just 'arf the price they pays at the shops—but you see it's the second-day flowers wot we buy, and after they've been sprinkled with water nobody cawn't tell 'em from the genuine article.'

"These flower girls are the feminine counterpart of the New York newsboy, keen as knife blades and soulless as cormorants when ha-pence and farthings are in question. Dirty in raiment and foul of tongue, they herd by themselves, and any man who takes a liberty with one of them would better wear armor. Most of them are poor and their 'barsket trade' is no great thing, but there are aristocrats among them. Three or four of them have pre-empted the edge of the fountain in Piccadilly Circus, and they and the other little coteries that 'work' the corner of St. Paul's churchyard, and the entrance to the Stock Exchange in the city do business on a larger scale, buying every morning over $10 worth of flowers, and selling them again to the 'toffs,' who are quite willing to pay a sixpence for a fetching bud."

FIRES.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.—Fire broke out Thursday morning, October 18, in the greenhouses of Mrs. Olm, on Lanthrop Street, between Pierce and Washington Avenues. The four greenhouses were totally destroyed. Mrs. Olm is the widow of Mathias Olm, who ran the place a number of years ago. It is difficult to give the loss at the present time or the insurance. Mrs. Olm has conducted the place since her husband's decease, and will doubtless rebuild and resume. The cause of the fire was a defective boiler.

New York.

The Market.

Business in cut flower circles was probably never in a more unsatisfactory state than at present. The weather has been unusually warm for the season of the year, and its effect upon the chrysanthemum crop is anything but pleasant to the dealers. The market has become glutted with these flowers. The color in the pink kinds is impaired, and there is not a demand for half the quantity coming in; consequently, they are offered at all kinds of prices in order to be disposed of. The surplus of chrysanthemums has a very depressing effect upon all other kinds of stock. Roses have taken a drop in price, as also have carnations. The latter may be said to have held their own for some time, but the present week, trade has been too dull even to move them, and they are offered at varying prices, the figure depending chiefly upon the quantity wanted.

Cattleyas are not nearly so plentiful as they were, and values have advanced somewhat; the $10 per 100 scale does not hold any longer.

Lily of the valley, when of special quality, will occasionally bring $4, but there is little of that grade seen; ordinary valley is to be had at from $2 to $3 per hundred.

Bride and Bridesmaid roses are almost as big a glut as chrysanthemums. Thousand lots, consisting of all grades, from extras down, have been freely offered at $5 per thousand, and many have been sold at that figure. Violets are bringing prices ranging from 35c. to 75c. per hundred. The street vendors have not yet begun to handle violets, consequently some carried over stock is always on hand, which, if disposed of at all, goes at a very low figure.

The extreme dullness prevailing in this market is a cause of much comment among dealers, and it is generally conceded that we shall see very little improvement until after the election.

Jottings.

The carnation is getting lots of free advertising through the daily press just now, anent its being adopted as an emblem of the Dry Goods Association of the Republican party. According to the reports in some papers fabulous sums of money are to be spent in securing flowers to be worn in some of the big parades occurring before election day. C. W. Ward, who is the prime mover in getting the carnation recognized in this manner, has the promise of about 30,000 flowers already, which are to be used in the parade on November 3.

The New York Florists' Sound Money Club is the name adopted by the florists who met and formed an organization to ensure the trade being represented in the big parade mentioned. The club met on Tuesday night at 1146 Broadway. W. F. Trumpore was elected chairman. A committee was appointed to secure a silk banner, with suitable inscription thereon, to be carried while marching. Another meeting of the club will be held to-night (Saturday), in the same rooms. About 125 members of the craft have signified their willingness to participate in the parade.

The Plan and Scope Committee of the Club met Monday evening last and elected Samuel Henshaw as chairman and John Young as secretary. President O'Mara again urged the necessity of an annual flower show in this city, and the committee will meet again, Monday evening, October 29, in the club rooms, for further and fuller consideration of the matter.

Owing to a lack of particulars regarding certain items the club was unable to dispose finally of Convention accounts, and the subject will come up again at a future meeting.

On Wednesday, at high noon, in St. Agnes' Church, 92nd Street and Columbus Avenue, occurred the marriage of Miss Violet S. Nash (daughter of John Nash) to Arthur Joel, of the firm of Tanner & Joel, dry goods merchants, of Broome Street. The bride carried a bouquet of Bride roses and lily of the valley. After the ceremony an elaborate luncheon was served at the Plaza Hotel. The newly married couple left for Philadelphia and Old Point Comfort, to spend their honeymoon.

On Pier 15, North River, were to be seen last week some of the largest bay trees that ever reached this port. The trees in question were upwards of twenty in number, and were imported by Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.

Visitors this week were A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Carl Jurgens and Son, Newport, R. I., and E. H. Giesy, of the Lockland Lumber Co., Lockland, Ohio.

The Gardener.

Editor Florists' Exchange:

A generation ago a gardener was a gardener. Now, the name is prostituted. See present day advertisement for help—"Wanted, a gardener; one who can drive and take care of horses and make himself generally useful about a gentleman's place."

An old school gardener would have considered himself above driving, or taking care of an old horse, even for Queen Victoria, as much so as any M. A. or M. D.

AN OLD SCOTCH GARDENER.

A Dwarf Boston Fern?

Editor Florists' Exchange.

We would like to ask you or your readers whether they have seen a dwarf Boston fern. We have had plants on the benches for over a year, and they have never grown over 18 inches in height—nice, compact plants, with leaves not so broad as those of the tall variety, but in other respects the same. We noticed this sport about two years ago, and have watched it closely. We have quite a number of plants, and they all retain the same characteristic of dwarfness. We potted one plant to-day that had 35 leaves and none of the leaves was over 18 inches. We would consider this a very handsome plant for table use, as the habit, hardiness and easiness to grow are the same as in the case of the tall variety.

Dahlia Helen Gould.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

I wish to refute the statement made in your issue of October 13 in regard to the new dahlia Helen Gould by the judges of the American Dahlia Society. It is stated they decided among themselves that it is one called "Uncertainty," and yet it is not "Uncertainty," but "the chances are that it would revert back to 'Uncertainty.'" Had the judges taken the trouble to communicate with me, or called on me and seen a patch of 500 plants in full bloom, there certainly would not have been so much uncertainty in their decision.

The new dahlia Helen Gould is a sport from a dahlia grown twenty years ago or more, under the name Maroon and White (I have them both growing side by side). I have been growing it for the past eight years, so I think if there was any uncertainty about its reverting to the parent it would have shown it ere this.

The color of Helen Gould will vary a little, but the majority of the flowers are of the color of the Daybreak carnation. Cut flowers of Helen Gould sold at three dozen for a $1, when for other fancy varieties I could get only 25c. for three dozen, which proves there was no uncertainty in regard to its selling qualities.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CARNATIONS.—There seem to be more plants dying out on the benches this year than is usual, and the cause of it is hard to discover. The spaces where the dead plants occur, however, must be filled in, and, where a surplus of plants has been potted up for the occasion, this work is easy. If no surplus plants are on hand, the next best thing to do is to lift plants from one end of the house and put them in the vacant places, then the bare space will be confined to one spot, and can be utilized for some other crop.

BEGONIA INCARNATA for Christmas blooming should be put into flowering-sized pots now. If manure is used in the potting material, it should be thoroughly rotted.

PRIMULAS will need to have the last shift given them. The Baby primrose, P. Forbesii, is best grown in pans; put the plants, two or three together, in a pan, and they make a very satisfactory flowering specimen.

PREPARING FOR THE HOLIDAYS.—What to have on hand for the Winter holidays should be decided upon now, if possible. Look over the stock at present on hand, compare it with the plants, etc., that were the best sellers last year, and if short on any kind that was a money-maker then, do not fail to replenish the supply of these. Boston ferns, ficus, and palms can all be bought quite reasonably just now, but prices might increase as the season advances.

HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS for flowering next Spring, must be potted along as required for five or six weeks yet. For potting material use a free and open compost affording plenty of drainage in the bottom of the pot. Be very careful in watering, as the plants are now approaching the end of their season's growth, and an excess of water at this time will result in damping off entirely. Green fly must be kept away from the plants. This is best accomplished by filling the spaces between the pots with tobacco stems, changing the stems for fresh ones whenever necessary.

Wittbold's Store Decorations.

At certain seasons of the year decorations for store openings are quite a feature in Chicago. Sometimes large palms, bay trees and such like suitable materials are used, at other times, the decoration is almost exclusively confined to wreathing, lettering, etc. Heretofore, the stiff, formal, white paper wreathing has been largely employed, and while it, perhaps, looked conspicuous, it could hardly be classed as very aesthetic. The Wittbold Co. this Fall, in this work, appear to confine themselves pretty closely to natural products, which, we think, are more appropriate for the purpose.

In the decoration of "The Emporium" shown in the picture, it will be noticed that the embellishment covered all but the window openings, palm leaves being extensively utilized. In another store decoration the work was confined to the two lower stories, and these were treated with much less formality, creating a Fall-like effect. Often "harvest home" material is used, where that thought is uppermost.

In addition to the outside decorations, the store interiors are liberally adorned with palms and decorative plants, asparagus, smilax and other natural greens. Sometimes natural flowers are given away as gifts to those who call.

All this tends to help the grower, as well as the wholesale man and the decorator himself. Ess.

A New Method of Steam Heating.

A method of steam heating, as ingenious as it is simple and practical, has been invented and inaugurated in Belgium. Two amateur gardeners, Messrs. De Meyere and Van der Stichelen, the one a civil engineer, the other an explorer and traveler, have been studying and experimenting for some time to reproduce artificially in our greenhouses those atmospheric and soil conditions which in the tropical countries create the wonderful growth of plants.

The same study has occupied all our practical gardeners for many years; but we know the cultivator is very reluctant to depart from old-established methods, and even slow to appreciate the advantages of new inventions. Still, no other trade needs improved mechanical help more than the gardeners or florists. Now that the work is specialized and large quantities of one and the same kind of plants can be grown in separate houses, and even in the same size of pots and to the same heights and widths, attention should be riveted to every contrivance which tends to simplify the work.

The new method of steam-heating, which your correspondent has had an opportunity of studying under the guidance of its inventors, has been applied to a commercial greenhouse establishment of considerable dimensions for over ten months, and has proven its superiority over older methods in many ways. I shall endeavor to explain the arrangements, but if any point is left in doubt I would be glad to give further information.

The inventors have primarily sought to provide bottom heat to the beds in which palms and foliage plants are cultivated, and they have succeeded, not only in doing so in an economical way, but they have overcome the disadvantage of the drying-out from the bottom, and even supply sub-irrigation along with the heat. The structural arrangement of the benches is easily explained by the two sketches, Fig. I. and Fig. III. The dimensions adopted in this may, of course, be altered according to circumstances to suit the conveniences at hand.

Solid beds are constructed, about 50 feet in length, with brick sides and ends, say 2½ feet high. Up to 16 inches they are filled with dirt, with a layer of drainage material (broken stone) on the top. On this four canals are built, of porous material—soft bricks and tiles. Above the canals enough room is left for the bed (See Fig. III.), and between them a space of about one inch, which is filled with broken stone, bricks, cinders or the like, to provide drainage for the bed. As shown in Fig. I., each two adjoining canals together form a circuit in which steam and air are to circulate. The flow canal is provided with a receiver R (Fig. II.); it consists of four or more concentric rings, which are placed, telescope-like, over one another, so that about ½-inch space is left between each two succeeding ones. Into the smallest one of about ¾-inch internal diameter, the steam is introduced through a very fine mouthpiece out of an orifice of about ⅛-inch. In order to avoid the stopping up of this small aperture by dust, etc., the steam is conducted through a little box (See B in Fig. I.) and there, as the direction of the current is changed, any foreign matter drops, and through a removable bottom the little box can be cleaned whenever required.

The steam is furnished by a conveniently placed boiler under the pressure of, say, 59 pounds per square inch. It can be carried, as is well known, irrespective of direction, a thousand feet or more from the boiler without appreciable loss of heat, and pipes of comparatively small diameters may be used. A ½-inch supply pipe would be amply sufficient for four or even more beds, each 50 feet long.

The steam under the pressure named issues from the small orifice with a velocity of about 1,700 feet a second, and at a temperature of about 300 degrees. In the receiver it expands and mixes with a large volume of air, which it draws through the rings, and only a few inches away from the receiver its temperature is reduced to gentle heat. In the Belgian establishment 80 degrees F. were maintained. In a second, the vapor-charged and conveniently-heated air will have traveled through the whole circuit of 100 feet in length. Thus we find at all points of the canal practically the same temperature, as long as the steam is kept on. The air in the canal is quickly overcharged with moisture, and the surplus of saturation condensing is deposited on the porous walls of the canals; it permeates these, and thus is communicated to the soil and plants above.

The ten months' experience has proved that the results are excellent. Indeed, the fundamental idea of the inventors is that palms and tropical plants in general should be planted out in beds constantly warm, and moist, and be kept growing on the same spot until the marketable size is reached. Then they should be potted, and the pots plunged into the same or similar beds, and finally sufficiently hardened off. Fine, healthy, vigorous plants are the result.

In the canal system there is no loss of calorie, and the heat is given off absolutely uniformly to all parts of the beds. Besides that, the warm vapor arising from the bed and its walls keeps the atmosphere not only conveniently saturated with moisture, but the whole surface of the bed acts like a large radiator and heats the atmosphere in the greenhouse.

In the Belgian climate (the test, Winter 1899-1900, was a very severe one, the temperature falling as low as 5 and 6 below zero) the heat of the bed has in all but the severest weather kept the house temperature at the required point; only in exceptional cases have separate radiating pipes been turned on.

Not the least important feature is the sub-irrigation which is provided by this system. By practical experience it has been found that the moisture derived from the condensed steam of the canals is very nearly sufficient, only occasionally (every week or 10 days), have palms been syringed with the hose to clean the foliage, and that has been the only addition of water that the benches received. The drainage between the canals is provided to carry off any excess of water that might occur from that source.

During warm or Summer weather the steam is not kept on continuously, but two or three hours' heating a day are then sufficient, without causing any appreciable variations in the temperature of the bed, which is not surprising if the large area heated and the absorbing capacity of the material be considered. The actual average cost of heating 10 square feet for 24 hours, to 70 or 75 degrees, has been 150 grams of soft coal, or for a bed 50 x 4 feet, and 6 inches deep, for the whole year a little over one ton.

The value of this new system can hardly be overestimated, even if the method only found application where bottom heat is required. The old-fashioned way of building up hot beds with manure, leaves or tan, has many obvious disadvantages. It is expensive, the heat is not uniform in a bed of same size, and not at all constant, which make a renewal and much work necessary. Here the first cost is small, the installation permanent, and the heat is comparatively cheap and at all times under control.

The degree of heat must be regulated by the quantity of steam discharged into the canal in a given time, and the diameter of the receiver and canal; it is evident, that the less dense the vapor in the circulating air, the lower its temperature will be; thus the pressure, also, though in a lesser degree, influences the temperature.

This same system could, without doubt, be successfully applied to greenhouse heating in general. A sufficient number of canals would require to be built to furnish the necessary radiating surface. As the difference of temperature between the radiators and the atmosphere in the house would be considerably smaller than is the case in the ordinary steam pipe system, the radiating surface would have to be five or six times as large.

For the majority of cultures the system would offer great advantages. It would automatically regulate the moisture of the air, and we would avoid the strong direct radiation from steam pipes, which often have to be placed in proximity to the plants, and which are the cause of disease and insect pests. The new method in a measure combines the good points of the old steam and water systems. The heat can be distributed from a central station over a large area very economically, and the radiators of large surface give out a gentle heat.

Instead of the brick and tile canals, as described above, for the heating of the beds suitably constructed terra cotta pipes could be employed for the house heating, and this would most likely bring the first cost of the installation considerably below either a steam or hot water apparatus. In moderate weather it would be sufficient to turn the steam on for a limited time. The volume of the radiants being large and their material a good absorber of heat, they would continue to give off heat for a considerable time.

There may seem to be a disadvantage in the fact that a certain degree of moisture is always imparted to the atmosphere so heated, and that for some special cultures it might prove an excess and detrimental; but it will hardly prove to be so. If we consider the cultivation of roses, for instance, very little, if any, syringing will likely be necessary after the heating apparatus is once brought into action, and thus a very large amount of water will not be wasted on the walls, in the paths and underneath the benches. Again, if the necessity should arise, glazed pipes could be used for a part of, or the whole, system, and the condensed water could be drained off. It is worth noting, that the air canals or pipes, whichever is employed, may be laid in any direction and inclination; and provided there are not too many bends, the circulation will be perfect.

Showing structural arrangement of Bench. R, Receiver. B, Small Box.

Mr. Eckardt, in response to some inquiries, furnishes the following additional information:

I have your favor of 21st requesting further details concerning the new method of steam heating on which my last article treats. I may state, to start with, that I had little confidence in the practical value of the new system when I was first asked to give my opinion on it. I was convinced to the contrary, however, after I had seen it and thoroughly considered its different features.

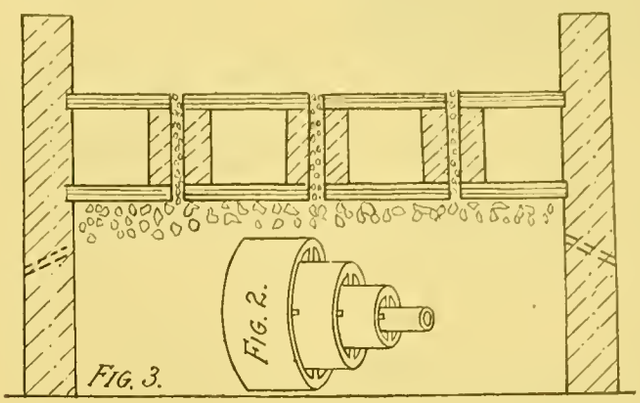

FIG. 3. Showing Bench Construction. FIG. 2. Receiver formed of Concentric Rings.

The dimensions of the canal are given by the two sketches which accompany the manuscript. In order to insure a given temperature in the canal, a certain proportion between the cubic capacity of the canal and the steam issued in a second has, of course, to be established. That is to say, if the steam pressure is given at 59 or 60 pounds per square inch, and if the size of the canal is given by the size of the bench which is to be heated, the temperature is regulated by increasing or diminishing the diameter of the orifice from which the steam is supplied. In the Belgian establishment an even temperature of 86 degrees was obtained in the canal, and a few degrees less throughout the bed. To nicely determine the size of the orifice, practical tests will have to be applied; at least your correspondent does not know of any previous experiments by which the calculation could be made. But with the sizes given in the article, it would not be difficult to come to precise results.

The concentric rings may be made of any metal—sheet iron rivetted, or better, cast iron or brass. They should be inserted into the flow canal to their entire length, or nearly so. Similar contrivances are in use in steam injectors, and where steam is issued into water in order to heat the latter without causing noise.

The little box B, the only function of which is to receive the deposits of dust or rust which the steam may have carried along, could, cheapest, be cast of iron, I suppose. A removable bottom would have to be held in place by bolts, clasps, or the like.

As to the transmission of the heat generated in the canals to the atmosphere in the house, of course, the soil and the heated parts of the bench walls become mediums of radiation. But there is a vast difference between this system and the old one of burying hot water and steam pipes in the bed. I may take, as example, one of those tan beds heated by hot water, which were a feature of the cycas houses in Europe, 12 or 15 years ago. The hot-water pipes were buried in the tan, and in order to prevent any damage to the roots by an excess of heat, the pipes had to be kept low enough so that the heat would arrive at the plants considerably moderated—100 degrees was considered the maximum limit. Now, after the pipes had been in contact with the nearest layers of tan (or soil, or any other material), for a while, these would completely dry out, and thus become an insulator for the pipes, and stop the diffusion of heat. At best, the radius of diffusion would become a small one, and the rooting space above would be heated very unevenly; for the same reason the bed surface, under this old system, cannot be counted upon as a radiant of heat of any consequence and the atmospheric temperature has to be taken care of separately. Steam pipes applied in the same way would, in a measure, accentuate the disadvantages.

A better though rather costly arrangement, to supply mild and constant bottom-heat, is the water bench system. It may be briefly described as a water-tight bench, immediately over which the bed to be heated is built. The water in the lower water bench is heated by hot-water, or steam, pipes, and the heat transmitted by radiation and the water vapors to the soil in the bed above. During the experimental period of orchid-growing, these contrivances could be found in the East India houses; they are still in use and give excellent results in palm culture, in the stimulation of root action. Here the bed need not be very deep, and as the bed material can be kept in a state of constant humidity, it becomes homogeneous, a much better conductor of heat, and a medium for its transmission, absorbing it from below.

There is a certain analogy between this and the new system. By the diffusion of the steam in the canal in the rapidly circulating air, the temperature of the former is reduced, and as long as the steam is kept on the same temperature prevails at all points in the canal. The temperature practically does not rise or fall any more. The bottom heat is thus kept constant, and is perfectly evenly distributed all through the moist bed material. This again becomes a good accumulator and comparatively a good conductor of heat. Its surface temperature will be but little below the temperature of the canals. As the exposed surfaces are very large, a considerable amount of heat is thus radiated by the bed and the bench wall, besides the warm vapor that constantly rises from it into the atmosphere. Of course, in severe weather separate heaters will have to be provided for the atmospheric temperature.

This new system has many features which do not present themselves until it is practically tested. While the bed heat directly warms the atmosphere, the plants growing on a warm bed will indirectly influence the temperature by absorbing but a limited amount of heat, or even by becoming radiants themselves; for they will derive a good supply of heat from their roots.

Prof. Taft comments on the foregoing article as follows:

I have read with much interest the manuscript of Mr. Eckardt, and while I cannot be very enthusiastic about anything that I have never seen, I am of the opinion that such a system as he has described will be of value, not only for tropical plants, but for many commercial greenhouse crops that are benefited by bottom heat and sub-watering. I have had excellent results with these and with aeration, both singly and combined, and I have every reason to believe that if a circulation of warm, moist air can be secured in our greenhouse beds, in canals such as are described by Mr. Eckardt, or through porous drain tiles, a marked benefit can be secured with most greenhouse crops. Such a system could undoubtedly be arranged to provide all of the bottom heat and water that would be required by any crop, but it seems best adapted merely as an adjunct system so far as providing the heat needed by the house is concerned, in cold weather at least. The principal drawback to its use seems to be the requirement of a high-steam pressure for its successful operation, while low pressure is ordinarily used for greenhouse heating; but in large establishments a special boiler could be installed to provide the bottom heat, and low-pressure steam could be used in the coils. If the merits of the system have not been overstated, it might be feasible in small ranges of houses to use a high-pressure boiler, and reduce the pressure of the steam used for the coils.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America has appropriated $20 to be used for the purpose of purchasing a cup, to be competed for and awarded under the joint auspices of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, and the Chicago Horticultural Society, for the best 10 blooms of any variety of chrysanthemum. The judges appointed by President Herrington to pass upon same are as follows: John N. May, Summit, N. J.; Patrick O'Mara, New York, N. Y.; and E. Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill.

Complete committees, as appointed by the president to examine and pass upon seedlings and sports at the various centers, are herewith announced as follows:

BOSTON, MASS.—A. H. Fewkes, chairman, Horticultural Hall, Tremont Street, E. A. Wood, J. H. Wheeler.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—E. Dailledouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Co., 119 West Twenty-third Street; James W. Withers, A. Small.

PHILADELPHIA PA.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1514 Chestnut Street; Wm. K. Harris, John Westcott.

CINCINNATI, O.—R. Witterstaetter, chairman, care Jabez Eliott, Flower Market, (care janitor); James Allen, Albert Sunderbruch.

Remaining dates on which chrysanthemum seedlings and sports may be examined are as follows: October 27, November, 3, 10, 17 and 24.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2, should, when possible, be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.
Wyndmoor, near Philadelphia, Pa.

Work of Committees.

October 20, 1900.

BOSTON, MASS.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Michigan, exhibited Iolantha, a Japanese incurved pink variety, which scored, according to commercial scale, 85 points. Tendency of the petals to drop may injure it as a shipping variety. The extreme earliness of the variety was taken into consideration in making the above judgment.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Iolantha, shown by Nathan Smith & Son, scored—commercial scale, 82 points; exhibition scale, 80 points.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The above variety by the same exhibitors scored 77 points, commercial scale.

CHICAGO.—The chrysanthemum committee, consisting of Messrs. J. S. Wilson, George Stollery and E. Wienhoeber, did their first work, October 20, in examining half a dozen flowers from Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Michigan. The color of the blooms was a lively puce pink. The parents of the varieties were Marquis de Montmort and a pink seedling of 1896, Mrs. Bergmann and Perrin. Planted June 21, crown bud taken September 10; flowers cut October 15; height, 4 feet; foliage fair, neck rather long, incurved center, outer rays spreading, a few inclined to be spoon-shaped, increasing the size of the flower to about 7 inches over all; the bloom flat—a pink, certainly superior to any of the earlies in that color seen in this market. ESS.

NEW YORK.—Before the committee of the C. S. A. on Saturday, October 20, there was but one new chrysanthemum up for certification. The variety was sent by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich. It was named Iolantha, being a cross between Bergmann and Mrs. Perrin, Jr. The type is Japanese incurved, and the color a rose pink.

Coming Exhibitions.

NEW YORK, March, 1901.—American Rose Society, Leonard Barron, Secretary, 136 Liberty street.

The Chicago Horticultural Society has issued the following information regarding the time of staging exhibits for its forthcoming show: First day, Tuesday, November 6, 1900; Classes 1 to 57, inclusive. Second day, Wednesday, November 7, 1900; Classes 58 to 76, inclusive. Third day, Thursday, November 8, 1900; Classes 77 to 112, inclusive. Fourth day, Friday, November 9, 1900; Classes 113 to 119, inclusive. The competition for the Chrysanthemum Society Cup will also take place on this day. Fifth day, Saturday, November 10, 1900; Classes 120 to 131, inclusive.

The class numbers above are those of the preliminary list, which was mailed early in the season. Additional copies may be obtained from the Secretary, Room 1002, 185 Dearborn Street. Exhibits must be in the hall before 9.45 a. m. and must be staged by 10:30 a. m.

A suitable sum of money will be set aside to be given in premiums for the exhibition of interesting novelties, pertaining to plant life, that may prove attractive to the public. This is not intended to cover anything mentioned in the within enumerated classes, but may include well-grown specimens of some of the most commonly known flowers. There are many things which may come to the minds of the exhibitors, that might prove interesting, and the Society stands ready to award suitable premiums for exhibitions of this character.

(211) The Banana.—The banana plant will start suckers from the base, providing it be shaken out of the pot, part of the old roots taken away and plunged into a good bottom heat.

(212) Fumigating Palms.—In a house with all kinds of bedding plants, I have to store a few palms. Will fumigating do them any harm?

—Ordinary fumigating will not injure the palms.

(213) Planting Sweet Peas Outdoors in Fall.—Sow the sweet peas two inches deeper than when sowing in the Spring. Do not put on any mulch until the weather opens up next Spring, then a mulch may be applied to protect the plants from late frosts.

(214) Pruning Shrubs.—What is the best time to prune shrubs—bacharis, tamarix, weigela, etc? Has anything to be done in the way of pruning to an Aralia japonica?

—Prune the shrubs in the Spring time, and let the pruning consist of merely cutting out the weaker parts of the shrubs. The aralia named does not need any cutting back.

(215) Mealy Bug on Bouvardia.—The insect on the bouvardia is evidently mealy bug. If the plants are in pots it will be best to dip them overhead in a strong mixture of Fir Tree oil. Procure a can of that insecticide and mix the substance according to the directions on the label. If the plants are in the bench the mixture, of course, will have to be applied with the syringe.

(216) Center Leaf of Latanias Rotting.—What causes the center leaf of Latania borbonica seedlings, out of 2½-inch pots, to rot? The roots of the plants are in a perfectly healthy condition. I send you specimens of the young plants referred to.—G. J., Florida.

—From the appearance of the two seedling latanias submitted, we believe the trouble arises from their having been potted too deep in the soil. Burying young palms below the "neck" in the soil will cause decay in the center, and the roots will appear to be perfectly healthy for a long time after the rest of the plant is dead.

(217) Fumigating Roses in Pots.—Kindly explain whether rooted rose cuttings in pots should be wet or dry when fumigating with tobacco for aphis; also state whether the soil should be on the wet or dry side? I have been unable to exterminate the fly without taking off the leaves of some varieties. On one side of the walk we had about twelve thousand Gontier with new growth well started; and on the opposite side about eight thousand Marechal Niel, same condition. The Gontier lost all the foliage, and the Niel were uninjured. Can you give reason of this?—C. W. H.

No. 1—The foliage of the roses should be dry. If the soil in the pots is not so dry that the plants are in a wilted condition, it matters little whether the soil is on the dry or wet side.

No. 2—We cannot explain why the Gontier roses lost all their leaves while the Marechal Niel remained uninjured. The tobacco must have been burned in too large a quantity to cause the loss of any leaves, and we would advise a more moderate fumigation, repeated every other day, until the fly is destroyed.

(218) Surplus Roses.—We have a surplus of Bride and Bridesmaid roses left over after filling our rose houses. How would it do to put these plants in cold frame, and use them either as plants for Summer cutting, or hold them over until next June, and place them in the rose house for forcing? Also, how would it do to take them out of the pots and heel them in cold frames for the purposes mentioned above?—L.

—Take the roses out of the pots and plant them in the cold frame. Bank the outside of the frame with litter to protect the plants from being frozen too severely, but let them remain dormant through the Winter. In the Spring they can be potted up, brought into flower, and sold as pot plants; or they may be planted in benches in the house, where they will do excellently for cutting from through the Summer.

(219) Violets.—Is it advisable to remove leaves from violet plants in the bench, with the object of affording strength to roots, for the producing of bloom? Also, should the first flowers that appear be removed for the same purpose? How long, or how close, should this practice be observed? On lifting my single violets from the field I found numerous pods, same as sample enclosed. Are they seed pods from blooms that have matured while the plants were in the field, and were seeding? If so, should they all be removed? I have Princess of Wales and Farquhar.—SUBSCRIBER.

—As long as the leaves are in a perfectly healthy condition, they should not be removed from the plant. Blooms should be picked off as fast as they appear until such time as the market is ready for them, or until the flowers are of good enough quality to be useful. The specimens enclosed were abortive buds and should not be allowed to remain on the plants. Full information regarding violets can be found in Prof. Galloway's book on "Commercial Violet Culture." We would advise inquirer to procure a copy of this book from the publishers of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE.

(220) Qualifications of a Landscape Architect.—It is quite important that a landscape architect should appreciate nature and natural conditions, and have a thorough knowledge of native plants as well as a knowledge of cultivated plants and cultivated conditions; for in many cases the treatment to be given a problem in landscape design will be determined more by such existing natural features, as a fine growth of trees, an interesting ledge, a thicket of shrubbery or a broad stretch of meadow, and they will often determine the extent, character and position of the gardens and lawns. He should learn to appreciate plants for their value as elements of landscape even more strongly than as individuals, or as rare and curious specimens. Not only must he have an intimate knowledge of all plant life that is likely to be found, or that is likely to be used in landscape work, but he should also have a knowledge of engineering that will enable him to prepare topographical plans (which are necessarily the basis of all accurate plans and estimates), make estimates of earth, cut and fill, lay down a system of drainage, establish grades upon roads and walks, and fix upon these grades in such a manner as to secure a reasonably close balance between cut and fill as a measure of economy. He should also have a knowledge of drainage and sewerage disposal, as these questions are likely at times to be presented for consideration. He should have a good general knowledge of architectural design, for the architect and landscape architect should work together in sympathy, in order that there may be a close and proper union between their work. He should have the capacity to study and draught his plans in such a manner that his ideas may be clearly conveyed to those who are responsible for their execution upon the ground. He must have an intimate knowledge of the character and cost of all material that enters into the construction of grounds. He must have a knowledge of contracts and specifications for the execution of the many classes of work that must be carried, and he must have the capacity to deal with contractors and others in such a manner as to secure good results. He should have an opportunity to study existing examples of landscape problems that have been executed by the best designers in this country and abroad, and should gain an insight into the reasons that have led them to select the adopted design.

The only place where such a training can be secured under thoroughly competent instructors who have successfully executed important problems of this character, is in the course of landscape architecture which has recently been established in Harvard College. In addition to this course it is extremely desirable that a young man who intends to take up the profession should have such practical instruction as can be gained in the greenhouse, the nursery, the engineer's office, and finally in the office of some landscape architect where he will have an opportunity to study the actual planning and execution of various undertakings.

If a young man cannot take a thorough course of study, then the only alternative would be to find a place as a student in a large office. WARREN H. MANNING.

(221) Dahlias Coming True from Seed.—In some cases where the flowers have been protected from outside pollenation in every way, varieties have come absolutely true from seed, but never more than one to ten per cent. have ever done so, even in such cases, as it is the nature of the plant to "break." William F. Bassett, of Hammonton, N. J., one of the oldest dahlia growers in the country, has also had a few experiences where the plants came true from seed. For instance, the past Summer he showed me "Ami Barrilet," as he supposed true from seed. On careful examination, I called his attention to the fact that while the foliage was the same, the flowers were inferior. We tried seed from the new single "St. George," but the seedlings came nearly all colors, and not one of the seedlings, although several were yellow, were as fine as the parent. I would, therefore, say that, in our experience, while dahlias may in some cases reproduce themselves, or in other words, produce seedlings almost identical with the parent, generally they vary in some respect, and after 16 years' work among these plants we have given up all attempts to grow dahlias from seed, except for the purpose of securing new varieties.

In connection with this, I would say that it would be possible to grow single dahlias from seed, of pedigree stock, by having the type fixed by years of selection. Then they will come true to color, but will vary in size and shades. This has been our experience from sowing seeds of "President Carnot" and other French varieties which were sent out guaranteed to come true from seed. We gave these kinds extended trials, and only a percentage came true to color, while very few were true to type.—L. K. PEACOCK, Ateo, N. J.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

WATERVILLE, Me.—R. H. Mitchell & Son have removed their office to the J. P. Merrill store. A. R. Bixby will be in charge.

LORAIN, O.—M. A. Wilhelmy has retired from business. He will be succeeded by his sons.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—H. J. Millatt has opened a florist's store at 406 East Ninth Street, this city.

DES MOINES, Ia.—Morris, the florist, has leased the building at 609 West Walnut Street, and will occupy it after November 1.

NORTHFIELD, Mass.—James Field and Frank Perould have rented the greenhouse of Mrs. John Morgan.

NORFOLK, Va.—The Lauterbach Co. was incorporated September 28. The new firm is building three houses, one 100x20 and two 60x18 feet each. Three more houses will be built after New Year's—one three-quarter span, 100x24, one 100x20 and one 160x24 feet. A nursery business will also be conducted. Landscape work is satisfactory.

He Had Feared the Worst.

"Are you able to stand a terrible shock?" asked the rich broker's gardener, as he rushed into the former's private office.

"Heavens! What is it? Speak, man! Don't keep me in suspense! I can stand anything better than your terrible silence."

"Your—your wife eloped, this forenoon, with your automobile driver."

"Oh! By George, you had me scared for a few seconds. I thought something might have happened to that new orchid of mine."—Chicago Times-Herald.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

CHICAGO, ILL.—Sam Pearce was one of the earliest with chrysanthemums here, having some fine Bergmann. His plants were attacked by a worm that secreted itself in the epidermis of the leaf and ate through the foliage. He has much improved his place by adding a show house and office.

CINCINNATI, O.—J. A. Peterson, whose store was in the direct course of the recent parade, had a window handsomely dressed with cattleyas, Adiantum Farleyense and Dieffenbachia Bauseii—the most striking in town and greatly admired, Mr. Davis, the decorator, coming in for his meed of praise. A. Sunderbruch's Sons, G. Brunners' Sons, and George & Allen did much of the work upon the rigs. Sunderbruch had a team which attracted much attention.

I noted at the Peterson Greenhouses that Liberty rose is doing splendidly, sending up strong shoots full of promise. The black spot seen in the first growth has disappeared. Part of the house is planted with Bride and Bridesmaid, which, while in prime condition, do not surpass the new candidate for honors. In addition to Adiantum Farleyense, a house of fancy dracænas, chiefly Lord Wolseley, is grand. Could it be transported to Chicago, or an Eastern city, the plants would be taken up quickly.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—The Good & Reese Co. have made considerable additions to their establishment of late. Up-to-date houses are filled with enormous stocks of roses, the extent of which makes one marvel, and the disposition of which is not less wonderful.

McGregor Bros. are also large raisers of tea roses, besides a miscellaneous stock, which is being distributed at a rapid rate. A busy season is predicted by this enterprising firm of young men.

ASHTABULA, O.—Herbert Tong finds the demand for smilax as good as ever. He has the local appellation of "smilax king," he growing nothing but that useful article. His plant establishment is at Erie.

COLUMBUS, O.—Underwood Bros. have about 50 seedling carnations, of which Flora Hill is a parent. Some of these are highly promising, especially a bright pink with a trace of scarlet. The habit of the plant and size of the bloom are very satisfactory at present. Their chrysanthemums are in fine shape.

Franklin Park Floral Co. have a house planted with a pink seedling that puts the other varieties in the shade, a striking instance where a plant raised at home thrives better than does a stranger. This variety is a cross between Daybreak and Scott, almost identical with The Marquis, yet quite distinct. This is its third year, and Mr. Knoppf intends watching it very closely during this season. Hitherto, it has been all that could be desired. Many changes have been made in this progressive establishment. A handsome office, with show house, sets off the block to fine advantage. The neatest thing I have yet seen is the ice chest which forms a counter that is zinc lined. The chest is fed from the back, the center space being reserved for the ice, while on either side of this compartment, which is separate, are others for the flowers, which are placed in the front through plate glass doors. Roses and chrysanthemums are in fine condition, and with the promising state of business will bring good prices.

WARREN, PA.—W. M. Lott has had an excellent all-round trade, and is preparing for a record-breaker this Fall.

W. M.

The local papers of Cleveland, O., speak in laudatory terms of the floral work designed by Mrs. Ella Grant Wilson in connection with the flower festival at the conclusion of the "home week" celebration.

Philadelphia.

The Market.

Most persons who handle cut flowers have been rather gloomy the past week, owing to large production and only a fair demand. The extreme warm weather is making everything bloom profusely, and the same conditions are keeping most of the flower buyers at their suburban residences. Some stores have been doing a fair business on orders for teas, etc., with a few wedding decorations, also.

A few weeks ago we were lamenting the late appearance of the chrysanthemums; now we have them galore. Prices range from $1 to $4 per dozen, a few selling at the latter price late in the week. Some Robinsons brought that figure, but they were good.

The demand being light, already we see many chrysanthemums on the street, mostly short-stemmed Glory of the Pacific. Everyone is hoping for colder weather, and then better conditions all round.

Roses, too, are away ahead of the demand. Beauty is piling up on the commission men; prices need not be quoted until better days come. The same may be said of all roses, excepting, possibly red, which are going well, the supply being small.

Carnations are selling fairly well, and the crop, so far, is not ahead of the market. Many growers around this locality have lost a great many carnation plants this season from stem rot, a few weeks after planting inside. Can any of our readers write a few lines on this subject, giving the chief cause of stem rot, and conditions to be guarded against, also suggesting any remedy to apply when the disease first makes its appearance among the plants? The varieties mostly affected are Flora Hill and White Cloud.

Notes.

W. P. Brinton, of Christiana, Pa., was in town the past week keeping in touch with the wholesale market, and learning the demands of the stores.

The Florists' Club bowling team defeated the strong Century Wheelmen bowling team on the florists' alley, Tuesday night, by 22 pins. It was a rattling good game and full of excitement until the last ball was rolled. DAVID RUST.

Boston.

The Market.

The cooler weather experienced the last week has been followed by unusually warm days, the first part of this week. Stock has been rushed along, until everything seasonable is in overstock, and the quality of the flowers is very poor. On Tuesday the thermometer reached 80 degrees, which is the highest ever recorded by the Weather Bureau for October 23.

Roses are very plentiful, but generally of poor quality, and move very slowly, the only outlet in any quantities being through the street men. Beauty fetch from $2 to $8 for smaller to fair grades; $8 to $12.50 for next sizes, and from $16 to $20 for finer ones, extras bringing $25, but the demand for them is light.

Bride and Bridesmaid continue small and rather poor, the latter losing its color, which was just getting to be what it should be, before this hot spell. Meteor, Morgan, and Liberty are in about the same conditions, and move slowly at 50c. to $3 per 100. Kaiserin and Carnot are of pretty good quality, but even for them the demand is not heavy, and prices run from $2 to $6 per 100.

Chrysanthemums are now very plentiful, and prices have suffered in consequence, Bergmann now average from $3 to $6 per 100. Pink, yellow and red sorts are not nearly so plentiful as white, and prices are slightly higher. Glory of the Pacific is the only variety in abundance, and these fetch from $4 to $6 per 100, extras making $8. In yellows, Marion Henderson is still the most plentiful, though Gold Lode and J. A. Lager have appeared. Robert Halliday, a fine newer variety, has been brought in of excellent quality in limited numbers by E. N. Pierce & Sons. The latter sold easily for $3 per dozen, but other yellows make but $10 per 100, or possibly $12 for finest flowers, with smaller sizes fetching from $4 to $8 per 100. Red ones are still scarce. William Nicholson is cutting a few nice ones.

Carnations are in good supply and are moving a little harder this week at prices ranging from $1 to $1.50 per 100 for good flowers, a few extras making $2; poorer grades sell at 50c. to 75c. A few good G. H. Crane, and some excellent Ethel Crocker, are being received.

Violets are becoming more plentiful, but the weather is against the quality, the double varieties are of poor color yet; they are moving much more slowly, at an average price of 50c. per 100 for finest grades, smaller and poorer ones selling at 35c.

News Notes.

The Horticultural Club held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening this week.

"Ned" Welch, of Welch Bros., has returned to his post after three weeks' illness with sciatic rheumatism.

Welch Bros. are receiving daily shipments of cattleyas. These are a staple article with this firm this season. It is expected that a better demand will be experienced here than heretofore. The trouble in the past has been that the supply was not steady.

Many expressions of sympathy have been heard from the numerous friends of the late Henry Butler, of New York. Mr. Butler was widely known in this city, and the news of his death was received with sorrow on all sides.

Hitchings & Co. have completed the work of putting in their larger tubular boilers at the Botanic Garden, Cambridge; H. H. Hunnewell's, Wellesley, and at the Bradley place at Hingham.

F. J. N.

Grand Rapids.

Frost has at last arrived, destroying all outdoor flowers, and in consequence trade is much more steady. Of late there has been considerable funeral work, which with a continuous shipping trade has kept a surplus from accumulating. Carnations are a trifle scarce. Roses are plentiful, while violets are blooming profusely. Their quality will improve when cooler weather sets in. Chrysanthemums are somewhat backward. The larger varieties will not be fit to cut for a week yet. Single stem plants, in 6-inch pots, will hardly be out in time to stage at the Chicago show; they are being hurried along as fast as possible.

If the Chicago exhibition could be postponed a week it would suit some exhibitors first rate. We expect to be well represented there. Crabb & Hunter will exhibit caruation Irene. The same firm will also stage another light pink seedling of great merit, No. 2. It is in its third year.

Carnations sell at 25c. per dozen; roses 75c. and $1; Beauty, $1.50 for medium to $2.50 for long-stemmed flowers. There are not many of the latter. Violets bring 20c. per dozen; quality is fair. Chrysanthemums run from 50c. and $1 to $1.50. When the larger varieties come in they will sell at 50c. to $1 more per dozen.

Three weeks ago Henry Smith started a carnation house 174 x 20 feet. It is now finished and planted to carnations, excepting one bench. G. F. C.

Denver.

Trade the past week has shown an improvement. Chrysanthemums are in pretty good supply, but they seem to go off fairly well, Robinson particularly; Beauty hold their own, notwithstanding the quantity of chrysanthemums. Liberty promises to be a favorite here; only a few are grown, but it takes. Carnations perhaps might be styled a little scarce, though each day the market is better stocked. Violets are plentiful, and the quality very good for this time of year.

A large church wedding on Wednesday last called for an elaborate decoration, the feature of which was an arch of white chrysanthemums. Honolulu pocket baskets were used on two large pillars on the chancel; they were filled with chrysanthemum plants and vines. The effect was very pretty. The job was handled by the Park Floral Co. DENVER.

Weather and Trade News.

The weather here is still comparatively warm; no hard frosts have been experienced, and lots of outdoor stock make business rather inclined to drag. Wedding decorations seem now to be the principal work of the retail florist.

The past week roses were a great glut on the market. They were selling as low as $5 per 1,000 in large lots, and even at that figure were not all disposed of. The quality is not extra, considerable mildew being seen on many of the flowers. The supply of carnations has increased, and is now nearer equal to the demand. These flowers still sell at 1 to 2c. Violets are plentiful, also cosmos; chrysanthemums are coming in more freely; the best bring 15 to 25c. down to as low as 6c. Beauty roses are in supply sufficient for the present demand; highest price realized is $2.50 per dozen.

Notes.

Walter Krausnick, one of the latest to enter the business, has already outlined his policy, which seems to be to cater to the wants of the masses. With this end in view, he has, we hear, opened a stand in two of our large department stores, with more to follow. These cheap places may be good for working off a lot of stock that otherwise would be thrown away, but they certainly demoralize the business in general. For instance, at one of those stands roses were marked at 50c. per dozen, last week, quite a difference between that figure and $1 per dozen, which is the lowest price at which some of our best florists ever sell roses, no matter how low the wholesale price is.

Invitations are out for the show banquet, which takes place on November 3.

Chicago.

State of Trade.

There is an abundance of stock of all kinds, but excepting in cosmos or something of that kind, most of the dealers manage to clear out; we wish we could say at satisfactory prices to growers, but on all sales except the highest grades concessions are made, or the fakirs would not expose as good stock as can be seen on the street.

In roses, good Beauty are now obtainable; choice long-stemmed flowers, realizing $2.50 to $3 per dozen.

Carnations are abundant, and the quality is improving.

Some Soleil d'Octobre chrysanthemums were received by Kennicott on the 16th—the best up to that date. At first they sold at $4.50 to $5. Heavier stocks have arrived this week, including Yellow Queen and white and yellow Robinson, and very fine flowers have been sold at $3 to $3.50. Lots of the early varieties are still around, the price for same ranging from $1 to $2. Heavy shipments are expected from this on.

Club Meeting.

It being the annual meeting, a goodly attendance was present on the night of October 19. The following new members were elected: Paul Retzer, W. G. Retzer, Frank Wieners and C. Nielson. The thanks of the club were passed for the presentation, from the New York Florists' Club, of a copy of the S. A. F. souvenir. The executive committee was instructed to try and obtain a suitable room for the club for Tuesday, instead of Friday, which was considered a more favorable night to secure attendance at the meetings. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Andrew McAdams; vice-president, George Woodward; recording secretary, Charles A. Hunt; financial secretary, Edgar F. Winterson; treasurer, Edgar Sanders; executive committee, Ernst Wienhoeber, G. L. Grant, John Reardon, Willis N. Rudd, and John Degnan.

Ernest Weber read a paper on "The Violet." J. S. Wilson's deferred paper on "The Boston Fern" will be given at the next meeting. The installation of officers takes place same night.

The treasurer reported having transmitted draft for $286.90, to Sealy, Hutchings & Co., bankers, Galveston, Texas, being contributions from the craft here to the relief fund of the Galveston florist sufferers; and that he had opened a second list since for additional subscriptions. Of these Adolph H. Poehlmann had given $5 and Miss Christopherson $1.

After the meeting quite a number adjourned to the bowling alley.

Auction Sales.

It is thought by many that the time is ripe here for the inauguration of auction sales similar to those held in New York and elsewhere. As a beginning, on Wednesday and Thursday, the Harms Park Floral Co. sold at auction without reserve, 29,500 palms, 5,000 Asparagus plumosus and 1,875 Boston ferns, at McKellar & Winterson's rooms, 45-49 Wabash Avenue.

This firm in question is a new one, which commenced business September 1. It is composed of A. B. Everett, E. R. Tauch, Louis Gregor (the two former were with Walter Retzer & Co.) and William Everett as partners.

Round About.

A. H. Poehlmann, whose greenhouses are at Morton Grove, opened a wholesale store at 49 Wabash Avenue, October 18, with Charles S. Stewart as manager.

Vaughan's seed store window is gay with all kinds of vegetables, a veritable harvest scene just now.

The Wittbolds have a reception decoration for Mr. A. M. Rothschild that, among other material, will take 1,000 Beauty roses. They also have the decoration of the Coliseum Building, where 3,000 are to banquet after the prosperity parade on Wednesday next.

Arthur H. Luck, with the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Iowa, is in town, and reports good business. Ess.

Pittsburg.

Trade Notes.

The week just past was a fine one as regards weather—real Indian Summer; for several days, the thermometer being in the eighties. At last we had a pretty good rain, the first one of any account since June. Stock is abundant, and trade satisfactory. Chrysanthemums are plentiful, and some very choice blooms are coming in. Wholesale prices range from 5c. to 20c., and retail values at from 75c. to $4 per dozen. Roses are doing well, and are in fair demand, particularly Beauty. White carnations are a little short. Dahlias are done; many have been used the past few weeks. Smilax is rather scarce.

Here and There.

L. I. Neff has about finished the improvements in his storeroom.

During the past year almost every florist's store in the city has undergone changes for the better, and all are now up-to-date.

C. T. Siebert has a fine lot of young palms coming on; his carnations and roses are in fair condition. Siebert's glazing points have taken a firm hold with the trade; everyone who has tried them will have no other; they certainly fill a long-felt want.

The Phipps conservatories in Pittsburg and Allegheny Parks are preparing for the annual chrysanthemum shows which promise to be better than ever.

Carnations in Vermont.

Carnations grew nicely in the field during the past Summer, and are now well established in the benches. Mrs. Lawson, Ethel Crocker, Morning Glory and Glacier take the lead for large, well-formed stocky plants. The Marquis grew well, but looked rather unhealthy when housed, the leaves being somewhat spotted. The plants seem to have outgrown the trouble. G. H. Crane died out badly in the field—I suppose from stem rot; but I have hardly lost a plant of any other variety. Scott and McGowan have done their best to prove themselves worthy of a place alongside the newer varieties. Bradt and Maceo are rather small, but the former is growing well, and already is showing some fine blooms. I learned last Winter that Maceo would produce more flowers, according to the size of the plants, than any other variety I have tried. It blooms from the time it is housed until thrown out next Fall. Daybreak, Gomez and Gold Nugget are very good. White Cloud is large, but I have not housed many, as my experience with it last Winter was a great deal of plant but not many blossoms. I think it may do better the coming winter in a lighter house. Glacier is short-stemmed at present, but will improve in this respect later. I think it a very profitable carnation for a grower who has a retail trade.

H. J. BALL.

Cleveland.

Trade Notes.

The weather for the past ten days has been mild, and at this writing, October 23, it is more like a May day than an October day. Little rain has fallen so far this Fall, and a warm shower October 22 seemed to revive all kinds of vegetation. We have had but one frost so far, and that so slight that it did little damage.

Trade is reported brisk and most satisfactory. The demand among the growers and wholesale dealers is good and the supply quite equal to present requirements.

Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful, and the blooms of some varieties are very fine. The best flowers bring 35c. each at retail, and prices per dozen range from $1 to $4, Bergmann of inferior grade going at the lower figure.

Roses seem to be in good supply, but the blooms are small yet, and prices for common stock do not vary from rates quoted in my former letter. Some very good Beauty are received every day, and fetch from $5 to $20, according to grade.

Carnations show a marked improvement in quality of late, and best flowers command $1 to $1.50 per hundred.

Violets are getting more plentiful, and 50c. per 100 seems to be the outside figure for local grown stock. Retail prices are $1 and $1.50 per 100. Dahlia blooms and a few spikes of gladiolus are still in evidence. Cosmos are offered in large quantities, and the blooms were never finer; the price has dropped from $1.50 to $1 per 100.

Notes.

C. M. Wagner, Erie Street, has been making some alterations and improvements in his store. The addition of a new wall case, the entire refinishing of the fixtures in Ivory and gold, the sidewalls in Nile green, and ceiling in a yellow tint, give it a very pleasing effect, and an attractive appearance.

One of the closing features of the "Home Week" program was a Floral Festival and Promenade, in the spacious storeroom in the Rose Building, at Prospect and Erie Streets, on Friday and Saturday evenings, 12th and 13th inst. The floral decorations were extensive and consisted of wild smilax, palms, laurel wreathing (2,000 yards being used), and immense quantities of cut flowers. The affair was a complete success, and attracted thousands of people. The decoration was in charge of Ella Grant Wilson.

Smith & Fetters' fourth annual opening occurred on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, and an elaborate announcement that had been issued a few days previous served to attract hundreds of people. Their store was resplendent in an array of electric lights among banks of choice ferns, palms and cut flowers. Table and wedding decorations were among the features of the display.

Weather and Trade.

The first actual frost of this season showed up on Wednesday morning, October 17. The weather has warmed again since, and Tuesday of this week brought a desired rain.

Aside from carnations being a bit scarce, the supply of flowers at present seems to fully meet all needs. Good Bridesmaid retail at from 10c. to 15c. each, chrysanthemums in smaller size, $1.50 per dozen, with $3 to $4 per dozen asked for select ones. Orchids have been seen in window displays, quite ample of late for this town.

The retail trade for October is reported good from most all sides. Charles D. Zimmerman is practically the only retail man so far making a display of Dutch bulbs, for which he mentions active demand. The local nursery trade is a feature of his business. In this he says the demand seems more active than in some years.

With Palmer & Son repainting and enamelling their store furniture has been a recent process. A carte-blanche wedding decoration was executed by this firm on Wednesday of this week. Yellow and white was the general color scheme employed, largely done with chrysanthemums and Perle roses, over eight hundred of the latter being used.

Jottings.

W. F. Kasting has removed his office to the extreme rear of his store, thereby giving more working space in front, where it is much needed.

A slender attendance was the existent feature of last Wednesday's club meeting, and an aim will be made to act locally on 1901 convention details at a later meeting. Meanwhile, the executive committee of the club, with some additions, has been directed to meet with the view of recommending general outlines of action.

Pan-American matters take on increasing interest daily. The weather has favored progress on all work, and the leading buildings for the most part are now roofed in. Some surprises await the eye there now. One is the large size of the Horticultural Building, now well under way. Outside scaffolding has been removed from portions of several of the large buildings, and a foreknowledge of the color scheme to be generally employed is noticeable.

Some excellent lawn has been grown from the early Summer seeding. The hardy rose exhibits have finished up a good growth in canes, varying from 3½ feet to a foot higher. Considerable planting of hardy perennials has been done here and there, and shows a fairly established look.

R. L. Greenlaw, of Boston, was a caller on Saturday last. VIM.

Toronto.

A Killing Frost.

We had a very sharp frost here early last week, which cut off nearly all outside flowering plants.

Large quantities of bulbs for Spring flowering have been planted this Fall.

Business is fairly good, with stock getting plentiful. Roses are coming in freely, chrysanthemums are also becoming both good and abundant, but are still bringing satisfactory prices.

Club News.

The October meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Association was held Tuesday. The chrysanthemum show and its management took up most of the time of the meeting. George Mills will again be superintendent; Messrs Ewing, of Berlin, and W. Scott, of Buffalo, will be the judges. The dates fixed for the show, November 7, 8, 9 and 10, are thought by some to be too early, but others consider it would be a mistake to postpone the exhibition to a later period, for the weather often turns very cold after that time, and few growers like to take the risk of moving their stock to the hall.

Large quantities of Japan longiflorum bulbs arrived here this Fall, also a very large stock of azaleas. The latter generally are very fine plants. There is also a considerable quantity of hedge plants being set out, privet being much in demand. T. M.

Hazleton, Pa.

Councilman Howard Smith, florist, has put in operation a new delivery wagon which is the admiration of the town.

MARRIED.

A Smoker.

The club smoker was the event of the week. It was given in honor of Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., who came over to consult with his fellow officers of the American Carnation Society as to the arrangements for the February convention. Mr. Herr made a graceful address referring to the large representation which Maryland has on the rolls of the Carnation Society. Richard Vincent, Jr., in an able speech, demonstrated the importance of the national societies, and their influence on the development and elevation of our profession and trade. President Halliday also spoke a few words. The committee on arrangements for the convention, submitted very favorable reports.

As an entertainment the smoker was a success, and as a manifestation of interest in the carnation convention it argues well indeed; for the event had rallied every member and friend to greet the guest, and to show his allegiance to President Bob Halliday, whose best efforts are being given looking to the successful consummation of the forthcoming gathering.

Trade Notes.

The market remains in about the same condition as last week. Cosmos and dahlias still come in. Chrysanthemums are getting more plentiful. Carnations seem to be scarce.

The Hardy Orange.

Apropos of hardy oranges, which Mr. Meehan recommends as perfectly hardy, some eight or ten years ago quite a number of these hedges were planted in this neighborhood, but the late severe Winters have hurt the plants to such an extent that your correspondent has not seen any one hedge the past Summer in good shape. In specially sheltered positions they do well; indeed, we have a fine example at the Hampton estate; but as a hedge plant for general planting the Citrus trifoliata is a failure here.

An Accident.

Ed. Montgomery met with a driving accident while returning from the market on Tuesday. The left side of his face was badly bruised. T. E.

Springfield, Mass.

Charles R. Miller, who retired a few weeks ago, has left the city. It is possible that he may locate in Providence, R. I., where he was formerly in the florist's business.

John Donaldson, who has been associated with Mark Aitken for several years, has opened a florist's store in Holyoke, under the style of John Donaldson & Co. It is understood that Mark Aitken is the partner.

Lewis Robinson, Jr., has just completed a new greenhouse of sufficient size to double his plant. He will make a specialty of carnations and bedding plants.

T. C. Austin, of Suffield, Conn., an old nurseryman and florist, died at his home very suddenly, October 20, in his 82nd year. Years ago he carried on an extensive nursery business, and grew lilies and other bulbs in quantity for the late B. K. Bliss. Of late, the farm and greenhouses, which have been devoted to cut flowers, have been under the management of his sons, who will continue the business.

This has been a remarkable Autumn; no frost until October 18. All the stores are showing good chrysanthemums, the truly fancy blooms coming from Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. J. W. Adams & Co. are showing some popular sized plants that find a ready sale. Mr. Dickinson, of the B. L. Bragg Co., is also exhibiting some fine large plants.

The retail bulb business has been very light; the weather continues so warm that bedding plants have bloomed up to the last, and the number of tulips and bedding bulbs put out is very small. Now that frost has come it is hoped that this class of stock will take a start.

G.

Milwaukee.

Roses the past week took a tumble, and considerable difficulty was experienced in keeping even good stock moving. Other flowers suffered in consequence. Chrysanthemums are coming in, and the quality is superior to that of former seasons, for the early varieties. Carnations are about equal to the demand. The political disturbance seems to affect trade to some extent.

FIVE REASONS Why You Should Place Your Orders for .... AZALEAS With Us At Once.

BECAUSE You can still take advantage of the mild weather, and have the plants come through safely by freight.

BECAUSE We are the largest buyers of Azaleas in the world, and make personal inspection of the stocks before they are shipped to us, and buy for spot cash, which enables us to secure lowest prices, and you the benefit in quality of the plants.

BECAUSE Our importations are all repacked at our own nursery. Plants that have suffered in transit, and which are not well set with buds being discarded, you receive nothing but first-class stock, which is certain to give satisfaction.

BECAUSE We can give you any special assortment of varieties that you may wish. This is a great advantage over the usual assorted case lots, sent over from Belgium, which invariably contain many varieties not at all suited to the American market.

BECAUSE We wish to convince you, as we have convinced many of the leading florists of the United States, that you can buy Azaleas from us to better advantage than if you make your own importations.

Vol. XII. No. 44. NEW YORK, NOVEMBER 3, 1900. One Dollar Per Year.

SEVERAL very large shipments of JAPAN LONGIFLORUM have arrived in very bad condition—more than half of the bulbs having been lost by heating. This large loss will make a scarcity in this article, and probably many dealers will be unable to fill their orders in full.

If you do not succeed in getting your full supplies, we have still to offer a fine lot of

These bulbs are in splendid shape. We can offer them at $14.00 per case. 350 bulbs to the case.

WE ALSO HAVE A FINE STOCK OF

LILIUM HARRISII.

7-9 in. size is generally scarce, but we have a very fine stock of this size still on hand. These are a lot of bulbs that were left in the ground and dug late, and, in consequence, are in grand shape. Bulbs are plump, bright and clean, and are as fine a lot of Harrisii as any one would want to handle. We can supply these as long as unsold as follows:

5-7 inch, 400 bulbs to the case, only $16.00 per case.
7-9 inch, 200 bulbs to the case, only $18.00 per case.

We can also offer a fine stock of WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS
Extra quality bulbs, 12-15 ctm., in case lots, 2,100 bulbs to the case, $16.00 per 1000.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS GRANDIFLORA Case lots, about 1,300 bulbs to the case, $7.50 per 1000.

New York.—Two shipments of Japan bulbs arrived in New York this week, consisting chiefly of auratum, speciosum album and S. rubrum; also some Melpomene. About 40 per cent. of the auratums had spoiled in transit, but the loss on the other kinds was not nearly so large.

Toronto, Ont.—Messrs. Steele, Briggs & Co., have purchased the stock and good will of the late Robert Evans, of Hamilton, Ont., for $16,000.

San Francisco, Cal.—Eugene Germain of this city, ex-Consul to Switzerland, has made arrangements to introduce in California a new variety of melon known as Germain's Autumn musk melon. The new variety is produced from seed secured in Switzerland. The melon is said to be of an unusually fine flavor. It matures very late in the season, and is very prolific.

European Notes.

Everything moves along swimmingly, and if we only knew some way of multiplying our plants without the trouble of raising them, we should be quite contented with the outlook. Everyone of us recognizes that looking backward is an unprofitable game, for this year at least.

Catalogue compilers are now busy getting ready for 1901, and the hunt for novelties is at its height. The following are among the most valuable which the German growers have, thus far, brought under our notice. Of Benary's novelties the new white sweet pea, Mont Blanc, easily takes first rank, and should be especially valuable on your side, where the forcing of these lovely flowers has been carried to a high degree of perfection. In petunias, Benary easily leads, and a lovely rose-colored, very dwarf, large-flowered, fringed variety will fully justify this reputation. The Iceland and Alpine poppies do not, at present, appear to be very highly esteemed in America, but when they do become better known the new Papaver alpinum laciniatum will be accounted a beautiful and valuable introduction. It is an open secret that Benary has also on hand for future use some beautifully striped and mottled forms of Papaver nudicaule, but sufficient unto the year is the novelty thereof.

The most valuable of Haage & Schmidt's introductions is the lovely Arctotis grandis, previously referred to in these notes as A. candidissima. It is not possible to praise this too highly, and those who do not include it in their new catalogues will regret it in the very near future. A new variety of godetia, named Rosamundi, also deserves special mention. Some very pretty forms of erigeron have lately emanated from this house, and E. aurantiacus hybridus is a welcome addition. Asperula azurea setosa, introduced by Veitch many years ago, should have a new lease of popularity, now that a pure white variety is offered. Ageratum Princess Victoria Louise (Lorenz), is a decided acquisition. A quilled form of Chrysanthemum carnatum (Chrestensen) is also to be recommended.

Of white Comet asters we have enough and to spare, but there is yet room for such a sterling novelty as Chrestensen's "Express." Roemer will introduce a new dwarf form of Helianthus cucumerifolius, which, as seen by the writer in the month of July, was a veritable Mont d'Or. It is valueless for cutting purposes.

Some other meritorious introductions must be held over until next week. In the meantime a new (?) red named "Athlete" known in Germany as "Riesen Kind," appears to be our old and discarded friend the "Mummy" under a new name.

Since our last report on German crops, two weeks ago, we have had some good rains, which, although arriving late, have benefited things generally. Asters, double wallflowers, and annual stocks were never more promising than now.

As regards the latter article, visitors to Germany in recent years have noticed with some concern, that the numbers of plants grown in pots, do not increase at the same ratio as those grown in the open ground. The increased demand for seed of the cheaper grades does not fully account for this, and those of us who are old-fashioned to believe that pot-grown seed yields, other things being equal, a larger percentage of double flowers, would like to see a closer adherence to the rule that made Germany famous for English stocks. Private Competition.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

One of the most elaborate wedding decorations ever executed in Taunton, Mass., was that for a wedding in one of our wealthiest families, in the Episcopal Church, on Wednesday last. The work was done by the gardener, the large quantities of flowers used being furnished by a leading Boston wholesale house.

The trade in the smaller cities near the Hub have a serious condition to face when private individuals can buy flowers at wholesale as cheaply as the stock is supplied to the florists, and with undertakers furnishing galax and ivy wreaths, roses, etc., and getting their supplies at the same prices and of the same parties as the florists do.

That all wholesale houses do not practise this, and that none should, is the sentiment of the trade in this and neighboring cities, as such a condition has a demoralizing effect generally. W.

Dahlias Coming True from Seed.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

In the 15 years that I have been growing dahlias, in quantities of from 300 to 1,000 each year, I have never seen a duplicate. The most that I could say of some of them would be, that they were "similar" to some other one produced. I used to grow a strain of single ones a few years ago, which we called the Butterfly dahlias; these produced seedlings that were often similar to the parent. But, as stated above, I have never produced a dahlia but could be easily distinguished from all others.

Does anyone claim to have a strain that will come true from seed?

Denver, Col. W. W. WILMORE.

Dahlia Helen Gould.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

The dahlia Helen Gould is nothing but a run out Marie Eustace, which is the proper name for it. Marie Eustace was brought to this country 25 to 30 years ago, as far as I can trace it. In Massachusetts it is called Mrs. Roth; in Pennsylvania, Uncertainty; but its correct name is Marie Eustace. During the past Summer I personally visited the establishment of O. B. Coomes, Jr., in Queens, and I told him right away the variety he had was Marie Eustace. In this case the color is almost similar to that of the red Bradt carnation. Some growers keep it red, and with others it sports backward and forward. I think Mr. Coomes has selected the light colored flowers for a few years, so that the majority of his blooms come light colored. ERNEST GRANZ.

Hicksville, L. I.

In reply to a communication by O. B. Coomes, Jr., in your issue of October 27, I would like to state a few points in connection with the variations of the dahlia "Uncertainty," "Floral Park Jewel," "Emperor," "John Thope," "Mary Eustace," "Maroon and White," etc. All of the above names are applied to the same dahlia, and now Mr. Coomes wishes to add another, that of "Helen Gould." We have no doubt that Mr. Coomes grew the dahlia under the name of "Maroon and White," 20 years ago. This variety was afterward named "Floral Park Jewel." The variation, (for that is all it is) is not entitled to a distinct name as a new variety on these grounds, the American Dahlia Society declined to certificate as such. The same variation which Mr. Coomes wishes to introduce as a new variety under the name of "Helen Gould" was introduced a number of years ago as "Mary Eustace."

In regard to this multi-named dahlia, I would like to describe it briefly. It varies from pure white, faintly flushed blush to solid dark crimson. The intermediate variations are a Daybreak pink, striped pink, striped and mottled carmine, striped and mottled crimson and maroon. All of these variations are found on the same plant. Sometimes nearly all of the flowers on a plant run dark; but it is always the same thing.

Now the question arises, did the Dahlia Society overstep its bounds? It did not attempt to inform Mr. Coomes what he should do, or what he should not do, but simply confined itself to its legitimate position by declining to certificate as a new variety, not a sport, but a variation of an old sort. In this respect the position of the American Dahlia Society is unassailable. I make the assertion that I purchased the very identical variation, so-called "Helen Gould," a number of years ago, under the name of "Mary Eustace." Mr. Coomes admits there is a variation in the color. Of course there is, as a selection will not change a variety permanently. It is a well-known fact among dahlia growers that all fancy varieties will vary and sport, the latter permanently, but the former is an essential part and characteristic of the variety; and too much confusion has already been caused by confounding the two, as can be shown in the present instance, where, as above stated, we have one variety under six names, and a seventh proposed.

It seems to me it is time some stand was taken. I would like to hear what some of the leading horticultural societies have to say on the question of variations and sports. I claim that a sport is undoubtedly entitled to be ranked as a new variety, because it is a permanent change. When the flower varies, however, and could not, at the most, be called more than a strain of the variety, it is not entitled to a distinct name.

Now, in regard to selling qualities; dahlias were sold regularly at from $1 to $5 per 100 right in Philadelphia, and Mr. Coomes' price of three dozen for $1 is about $2.75 per 100. Evidently, the other fancy varieties he grew and for which he could get only 25c. for three dozen, were not grown with the same care as the light blooms of "Floral Park Jewel," as 25 cents for three dozen is a little over 73 cents per hundred, and is lower than the average price for common assorted dahlias.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., Philadelphia.—Advance Price List for 1901, particularly of Vegetable Seeds and Sweet Peas, including Novelties. Among the latter, in Sweet Peas, are enumerated four new Cupids—Apple Blossom, Stella Morse, Royalty and Captain of the Blues. The list in question gives also some advance information regarding the forthcoming "Quarter-Century" Edition of Burpee's Farm Annual for 1901. This book will contain over 200 pages. It will be entirely new. Every description of Vegetables, Flowers and Grains has been rewritten, from latest notes, taken during growth at Fordhook Farms. At the head of each species will be given useful directions for culture, also entirely rewritten specially for this "Quarter-Century" Edition. A record of Horticultural Progress during the last quarter of a century just closed will be printed on enamelled paper, and enlivened by photogravures of trials and crops at Fordhook Farms. The Color-Work promises to be particularly fine. There will be four colored plates, painted from nature, of Novelties in Vegetables and Flowers; while the cover (in 10 colors and gold) will be very attractive.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Nurserymen throughout the country report an active demand for stock of all kinds, particularly ornamentals. This indicates general good times. When trade is poor, fruit trees are mainly called for.

Kieffer pear seedlings are having quite a boom. They grow very fast, soon making a stout enough stock for budding or grafting, and are, besides, fairly blight proof. Its use as a stock is in the experimental stage as yet, but it promises well, and should it prove as successful as anticipated, it will partly revolutionize the pear seedling business, as nearly all the stocks now used are imported.

What Shrubs Flower Memorial Day.—Noticing what several florists have said in regard to flowers found in most demand on Memorial Day, it lends me to give the experience of many years in the way of shrub flowers useful for the same purpose. My experience is not only that of a grower, but I have "detailed" myself for many years to overlook the filling with flowers of the wagon which our local G. A. R. Post sends for them. There are but two or three sorts available and desirable, and these are snowballs and weigelas, principally, with, perhaps, a little spiræa and exochorda. But snowball and weigela are the old reliables. Let me add, however, unless one has the old snowballs as well as the Japanese, the "snowball" supply may fail. Having in mind the vicinity of Philadelphia, the snowballs are usually a little ahead of time; rarely behind it. The old sort, Viburnum opulus sterilis, precedes the other by nearly a week, and it is nearly always out of flower at the period named, as was the case last May. The Japanese, Viburnum plicatum, is usually just in time, though I have known it, too, to be too early on one or two occasions in the last ten years. Thus, the Japanese is much to be preferred to the other, both as a beautifully-shaped shrub and for its flowers. Weigelas rarely entirely fail, and where two or three varieties are grown, there need be but little fear of lack of flowers, as there are a few days' difference in their time of blooming. Because of the long branches of flowers which may be cut from them, they are just what are wanted by the ladies who make up the bouquets for the Posts, and the same is true of the Japanese snowball. The early spiræas, Reevesii, and Van Houttei, prunifolia and Thunbergi, are nearly always past flowering; sometimes the double Reevesii is still available.

May I call attention to the error of so many who write "Decoration Day." The G. A. R. authorities have often called attention to this. It is "Memorial Day."

A Beautiful Autumn Vine.—There are many things that conduce to the charm of Autumn, not the least being the display made by the numerous trees, shrubs and vines of berry-bearing fame. In certain sections the variegated grape, Vitis heterophylla variegata, is well known, but that it is not generally so is evidenced by the surprise many express who see it for the first time. In early Summer the variegation of its foliage is the chief attraction—white, with a tinge of pink showing with the green. But it is in late Summer and Autumn that its chief charms develop, reaching their height in October. The little clusters of greenish-white flowers give way to berries, which from green change to reddish purple, and from reddish purple to deep blue. The combination of foliage, variegation and varied colored berries is unique. The vine has the habit of growth, somewhat, of the Virginia creeper, and its numerous small clusters of fruit are produced as on that vine. In like manner it is best displayed when running over some low-growing shrub. I have seen a heap of brush set for it to run over, and a lovely display followed. This very desirable vine is perfectly hardy here, as so many plants from China prove to be. At this season of the year it is among the most ornamental of its kind.

Shrubs for Forcing.—Near all large cities nurserymen find a good demand for shrubs for early forcing. Everyone likes to see the early flowers of Spring, and those of the first shrubs to bloom are always doubly welcome. Besides the selling of the shrubs direct from the ground to florists, there would be a good business done in the way of disposing of the plants already potted. Florists often inquire for such plants, and usually when it is too late to obtain them, because none has been prepared, and Winter weather prevents this being done. The early flowering shrubs are the ones to force; it is of no use trying the late ones. The following list comprises the sorts mostly available for the purpose: Flowering almond, Juneberry, Chimonanthus fragrans, Daphne cneorum, deutzias in variety, Exochorda grandiflora, golden bell, bush honeysuckles, mock orange, Pyrus arbutifolia, sweet brier, spiræas, lilacs, snowballs, weigelas, and, for its purple leaves, purple barberry. The chimonanthus is a Chinese shrub, bearing deliciously scented, yellow flowers. It is a favorite South, but not so much so North, because it bursts into bloom in late Winter as soon as a few warm days come, and the occasions when the blossoms are not destroyed by freezing later are so rare, that it is hardly worth growing as a hardy shrub. But place it inside, and, if but a single flower expands, its delightful odor will fill a room. Although a few Northern nurseries keep the plants, the Southern ones are to be looked to for the main supply. Deutzia gracilis is the most satisfactory to force, or has been, but those who have tried D. Lemoinei say its flowers are more lasting. It is a stronger grower than D. gracilis. Pyrus arbutifolia is much like the Juneberry, amelanchier, in its inflorescence. The beautiful white flowers are in small racemes. Later both are showy with berries, the Juneberry soon after the flowering, the pyrus not till late Autumn. Lilacs always sell well; they are good things for both the nurseryman and the florist to handle. To have these plants flower well when small, they have to be stunted in some way. This can be accomplished either by keeping them in pots, or having them budded on privet. Either way dwarfs them and produces early flowering.

The Japanese snowball is most beautiful and forces well, as does the typical form, tomentosum. These are much to be preferred to the old snowball, being superior in both growth of bush and beauty of flower.

Young plants with a good supply of shoots made the past Summer are the ones to secure for forcing. This is the wood that gives the flowers. Procure the plants at once, pot, or tub them, and keep them in a cool place until the time comes to start them into growth.

The third annual meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society is to be held in Baltimore, December 20-21. Mr. Willard of Geneva, New York, J. H. Hale of Connecticut, and other well-known horticulturists are expected to attend.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Cumberland nurseries have been incorporated with a capital of $100,000. Incorporators: J. I. Newson, A. W. Newson, W. F. Davis, all of Nashville, Tenn.; J. W. Avery, of New York; H. G. C. Thornton, of Cranford; Daniels & Co., attorneys, New York.

Wichita, Kan.—The business of the Wichita Nursery Association has increased until their old quarters on North Emporia were too small for them, and they have erected a large building at the corner of Lawrence and 21st Street, which has just been completed. The building is 40 by 120 feet. In the front part are fitted up elegant offices, and the tool room and grafting rooms are also here. The back part is devoted to the packing and shipping room. The large basement story, or cellar, will be utilized for storing trees, having a capacity of 40,000 trees. Mr. W. F. Schell, the manager, is highly pleased with their business.

The nursery business seems to be booming. By a recent purchase, Thomas Meehan & Sons, the nurserymen and landscape engineers, of Germantown, Philadelphia, acquired two extensive properties adjoining their Dreshertown nurseries. These will be added to the already large acreage and planted immediately with the better class of hardy ornamentals. It is evident that this firm believes in the policy of expansion.

Pruning Evergreen Hedges.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Referring to Mr. Joseph Meehan's remarks, I think Mr. Meehan is wide of the mark in his statement about pruning evergreen hedges in your number of October 20. Hedges formed of conifers should be pruned in May, when it can be seen which branches are alive and which are dead; the dead ones must be carefully removed and the living ones tied in the bare places, then the hedge can be clipped, and as soon as the plants have made their first growth during the Summer, in August or September, they must be clipped again so that they do not gain too much in height. An occasional leader, which sometimes sprouts out near the top of the stem, can be removed at any time, to keep the hedge in perfect shape; otherwise not much pruning is necessary. When two evergreen plants (they need not be evergreens, but when any two plants grow) too close together, the branches at the point of contact will die, simply because they suffocate from want of air; and when the coming together has happened only for a little time, so that the branches are not dead, but look faded, they can sometimes be saved by exposing them to the air. But warm or cold weather has not much to do with the matter.

Mr. Meehan says "do not prune below live foliage, as it is difficult to induce evergreens to break afresh from old wood." That brings us back to the point from which we started. What is meant by, and what is the purpose of, an evergreen hedge? If the hedge is to be used as a windbreak for a country garden, the strong growing spruces and pines only can be employed, and these have to be trained for that purpose by pruning, every Spring, the leader of every outside branch so that the branches do not spread much, otherwise the hedge will soon grow too broad and not proportionately high. And when we cut the branches shorter later on, we will find only green, live branches on the tops, and if we cut these, the bare old wood will not make any new branches, so that holes are formed in the hedge. If the hedge is to be used as a fence, from three to ten feet in height, varieties of Thuya should be planted. These can be cut at any length, as the old wood breaks easily, the habit of all Thuya occidentalis varieties being the same as that of deciduous shrubs; they form buds, not in the axils of the leaves, but on the sides of new branches, where they remain dormant until they have a chance to break and form new shoots.

Hedges of Cupressus Lawsoniana, Retinospora obtusa, or R. pisifera are not to be recommended, as when they are exposed to wind and Wintry weather, some of the branches may die, and it is not easy to fill the holes again, as the old wood will not make new shoots; and as, usually, the hedge has to be kept at the same height, the continual clipping at the same, or nearly, the same place makes the branches crowded and on that account, tender, so that a strong Winter may do harm to hedges, when single plants would go unharmed. Small, low hedges of Retinospora plumosa varieties are pretty, but we will have the same trouble when the hedges get older; the clipping makes the branches tender, and sometimes whole plants die apparently without cause. With boxwood hedges, of course, the esse is different, the buxus being a hardy shrub which retains its leaves during the Winter. These plants have to be treated as deciduous subjects.

Chicago.

State of Trade and Weather.

The warm, balmy Indian Summer weather is responsible for an enormous stock of roses, so unwieldy that it is hard to get rid of the gluts except at very low prices. These conditions can hardly improve while such weather lasts. As yet we have had no killing frosts, right up to November. Even cannas are flowering where left undisturbed, and cosmos are a blaze of blossoms. If we are to have our usual foggy, cloudy weather during November, the question is what affect will it have on rose stock, that can hardly, with present conditions, make good sturdy growth?

As usual, about this time, heavy shipments of chrysanthemums are going to New Orleans, which helps to relieve the market of quite a number. E. H. Hunt and E. C. Amling alone shipped 2,000 blooms there the past week. A few dozen extra choice flowers have reached the $4 mark; but the prevailing price is from $2 to $3.50 per dozen for extra good stock.

The end of last week trade was fairly brisk, owing to the big "Prosperity Parade," when each of 36,000 marchers wore either a yellow chrysanthemum or a carnation (mostly white) as a boutonniere.

The Flower Show.

The eleventh annual show of the Horticultural Society opens in the Auditorium for the second time, on Tuesday, November 6, which, by the way, is election day. As usual, the press committee, for a week past, has been given liberal space in the daily papers. We learn from Secretary Rudd that entries and inquiries so far look very favorable. The schedule for cut blooms and plants does not greatly vary from that of other years, except in the elimination of the international contest for chrysanthemums.

On Friday, November 9, the Chrysanthemum Society of America offers the following trophy to be competed for at this exhibition: A silver cup for the best 10 blooms of chrysanthemums of any one variety. This contest is also expected to call forth strong competition and bring out some grand flowers. The judges this year are P. O'Mara, New York; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; and Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill. C. D. Peacock offers a silver vase for the best new rose not heretofore exhibited in this country. It is expected many prominent growers will enter for this competition.

The Auction of Palms, etc.

The Harms Park Floral Co.'s auction sale, on Wednesday and Thursday, of Chicago grown palms and other decorative plants, may be looked upon as a success, and the firm is satisfied.

Jottings.

Anton Lisl, a florist employed in Brant & Noe's greenhouses, Forest Glen, was murdered Saturday night. He had been married only three months. One George Dolinski, who worked for George Reinberg a brother-in-law of Lisl, has been arrested as the supposed murderer.

E. E. Pieser had a bad attack of tonsilitis that kept him abed the past week. He is now at the store again.

J. B. Deamud received a consignment of 123,000 hardy ferns from the East.

McKellar & Winterson have received a lot of fancy basket work the past week.

Arnold Ringler reports that the quality of lycopodium will be unusually fine this year owing to seasonable rains. Picking did not begin until late, and the supply now depends upon the weather holding open late enough.

Ed. Marriott, of Woodland Park Floral Co., Seattle, Wash., is in the city and reports trade good there.

W. E. Lynch has retired from the wholesale business and engaged with E. H. Hunt, to handle the cut flower branch of that firm. Ess.

Philadelphia.

The Market.

Many of the retail stores have been busy with wedding orders and decorative work, but, as a general thing, none of the stores is busy; and from all indications the season will be late before the flower business gets on full swing. The weather keeps altogether too warm for this time of year, and the quantity of cut flowers increases every day. Fair roses can be bought at $1 per 100. Nothing but the very best stock of anything is bringing a fair price. As reported last week, the busiest people are the street men, who are reaping a good harvest, being seen on every prominent street loaded down with trays of flowers. Even several growers have the past week found these parties a good means of getting rid of the surplus stock. While the street men are selling lots of flowers, the commission houses are throwing a great many in the rubbish barrels.

Club Meeting.

Tuesday next will be club meeting and coming on election night a large crowd is anticipated.

Chrysanthemum Show.

Entries for the chrysanthemum exhibition, which opens on Nov. 13, are now coming in by every mail. From present indications there will be some grand plants seen again this year. One old-time exhibitor has plants six feet in height, and as many feet through, carrying from 120 to 140 flowers. On account of the humid weather much trouble has been experienced with some varieties damping off around the outer petals. Madeira has been the worst seen. Commercial growers have been greatly troubled with this, and more so where the house had no side ventilation.

American Carnation Society.

Secretary Herr says December 1 will be the last day on which special premiums or advertisements can reach him for insertion in the premium list. He adds that subscriptions toward the permanent fund can be made in any amount, from $1 up to $25. This fund is for investment to give the Society financial backbone. Baltimore, with but two members a year ago, has increased that membership to almost fifty at the present time. A little similar enthusiasm on the part of the rest of us might add considerable to the membership. Baltimore wants every one interested to attend the meeting next February, and it is none too early to try and get a few carnation enthusiasts to go along.

Write the secretary if you want information, or have any suggestions or complaints regarding the Society.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL.—The Inter-Mountain Flower Co. is the name of a new concern here, inaugurated by William Gibbons and family. It is the intention of the company to have stores in all the promising towns of Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Montana, with the main office in this city.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

"Open Thine Hand wide unto thy Brother, and to thy needy, in thy Land."

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have, for the convenience of our readers, decided to receive subscriptions at this office for the Galveston relief fund, which will be at once acknowledged in these columns, and the amount contributed forwarded to the proper authorities as the donations of our trade on behalf of their suffering brethren in the storm-swept sections. Checks and money orders for the Galveston relief fund should be made out in favor of the A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., crossed "in aid of Galveston sufferers."

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

Your welcome remittance came through in due time and will be further acknowledged through our chairman. We received of Mr. John F. Rupp, of Shiremanstown, Pa., some very fine primrose, cineraria and pansy seeds, which were distributed at our last meeting. Some of Mr. Beaulieu's seeds came through also, and were divided. Further offers of stock were received from Mr. John H. Ley, of Washington, D. C., Mrs. E. Louise Leonard of Seguin, Texas, and the New Orleans Horticultural Society has promised us some aid. Some of the plants previously donated were called in. The grand total of losses was added and gave the sum of $20,200. Of the money so far received $500 was ordered set aside and distributed according to the schedule, because some of the florists were in immediate need.

THE GALVESTON FLORISTS,
Per F. G. LAEVERENZ, Secretary,

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Herewith please find check for £5 for the fellow members of our trade who have suffered so dreadfully at Galveston. All honor to you for so nobly championing their cause. We think the trade generally should give liberally to such a cause.

Trusting you will be cheered in your work by hearty responses,

Yours faithfully,
J. PEED & SON.

ST. LOUIS.—The Eggeling Floral Co. has been incorporated to conduct a general floral business. Capital, $3,000. Incorporators: F. W. Eggeling, Maggie Eggeling, E. G. Eggeling, all of St. Louis; H. H. Furth, attorney, St. Louis.

The Chrysanthemum Society Meeting.

We had hoped to see greater enthusiasm exhibited and a larger amount of discussion follow on the proposed change of date for the annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America than has yet materialized. That the Society is in need of support, and that even its present efforts on behalf of the chrysanthemum cult demand a recognition far superior to that now accorded them, is apparent not only to its officers, but to all who have but the merest spark of interest in the Society and its work. Just why this is not forthcoming seems a matter worthy of investigation by those most concerned in the furtherance of the Society's welfare.

It may be that the confining of the Society's energies along one particular line has dulled, to a greater or less extent, the trade's interest in the association, and its affairs; and that the makeshifts which have hitherto been characterized by the name of annual meetings, holding forth as they do but little inducement for active participation therein, have blunted an enthusiasm, that, were matters otherwise, would be demonstrated. Certain it is, that the present apathy is discouraging, from the standpoint of the Society itself, and a decided deterrent to its usefulness and progress.

We firmly believe the inexplicable disinclination to change the date of the annual meeting to a more opportune chrysanthemum period, so to speak, is largely responsible for the existing regrettable conditions; and that such a change would inure very much to the desired betterment of matters all round. Think you that the same interest would be exhibited in the Carnation Society were its annual convention held when but poor specimens, or none at all, of the flower it supports were only available; as is displayed under present arrangements? Would an equal enthusiasm have been shown as characterized that gathering during its seasonable assembling had the recent sweet pea conference been held in January? Certainly not!

And there is so much that is beneficial that the Chrysanthemum Society, with proper support, could undertake and satisfactorily perform. Almost a decade has passed since any attempt was made at a classification of the flower in America, and the list of kinds then compiled is now all but obsolete, at least of very little value except as a matter of historical record. To discover varieties that have appeared in the interval, or are at present in vogue, one has to wade through a host of documentary evidence, incomplete in its information. Take, as an example, the latest report issued by the Society on the "List of Awards for 1898" (P. 126 S. A. F. proceedings for 1899). The name of the variety only is given; its type, color, introducer, and other data are lacking. Surely such a slip-shod production is unworthy a national society! True, we are helped out of the dilemma slightly by the list of "plant introductions" issued by the S. A. F., in which chrysanthemums are included; but that list also, while arranged alphabetically, is a conglomeration of types, without any attempt at classification. Is there not great need of a change in this one direction alone? Should we not have method even in our madness?

One would think that the compilers of these "official" lists had, too, lost heart, and consider any old thing good enough for those interested in the chrysanthemum, but uninterested in the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

We would suggest a tentative gathering of chrysanthemists at Chicago, during the exhibition there, and where the Society's cup is to be competed for, looking to a change of date of the annual meeting, and doubt not that the success attending this assembly would be convincing of the efficacious nature of such a change; even if only a program were outlined for the next annual meeting in New York, during that city's great annual exhibition in 1901—perhaps.

Rudd's Further Ratiocinations.

Willis N. Rudd, of Chicago, still considers himself the "whole bunch," and with characteristic tenacity holds to his emphatic assertion that "50 degrees is the best temperature for storage" for cut flowers of carnations. It would be unjust to endeavor to deprive a man of the right to stick to his own set opinions; but we subjoin a few remarks from modern growers of carnations, just to convince Mr. Rudd, if that be possible, that "there are others." While the statements of these growers do not accord in toto with our own advice, and which has called forth such an excellent example of Mr. Rudd's "dry humor," they by no means endorse that gentleman's view, so dogmatically expressed, that "the temperature should never be allowed to go below 50 degrees, and two or three degrees above that point is better than a like number below."

We would just like to state again that our advice to hold the cut carnation flowers at a temperature of "about 40 degrees," (which, waiving the quantum of the sin, may with equal fairness be accepted as 42, as it may be 38 degrees), was given to a small grower whose flowers were used in "home consumption," and were not for shipment.

In conclusion, Mr. Wallace desires us to say that there are three very good reasons known to him (there may be others) that preclude him from becoming a good foot-ball player, as Mr. Rudd predicts. These are: Sparsity of hair; an acute disinclination for hard work, equal to that of the colossal Pym of Barrie; and the fact that he has not reached the necessary stage of the chronic kicker which the prophet in question himself seems to have attained. The latter fact, Mr. Wallace adds, probably accounts for "why he never seems able to kick a goal," as Mr. Rudd views it. Now for the information we have gleaned for the benefit of Mr. Rudd and others.

Dailledouze Brothers, of Flatbush, N. Y., say: "We keep our flower room at between 45 and 50 degrees as long as weather will permit, and cut the blooms the day before shipping, when possible."

John Birnie, West Hoboken, N. J., says: "I run my carnation houses from 50 to 54 degrees at night, excepting in the case of Flora Hill and Daybreak, which give better results at 48 to 50 degrees. My flower cellar I keep as near 50 degrees as I can. I have done so for the past 12 years and the result has been satisfactory. I keep the flowers in the cellar for about 20 hours."

Chris. Besold, of Mineola, N. Y., says: "The average temperature in my carnation houses is about 50 degrees at night. We cut all our flowers from 15 to 24 hours before we ship them. They are kept in our flower room at a temperature just a trifle lower than our houses are held at, say from 45 to 50 degrees."

J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, Pa., remarks: "We grow carnations in a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. We find they vary somewhat, some varieties standing more heat than others. C. A. Dana and William Scott require the lowest temperature, and Buttercup and McGowan, 55 degrees. We keep the temperature of our store room at about 40 degrees, but seldom keep carnation flowers over, as we try to pick them early in the morning and ship them out before night. My experience is that carnation blooms soaked full of water do not keep as well, after being shipped, as those picked early in the morning and shipped immediately."

C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., says: "Our method of treating cut flowers of carnations is to pick them in the coolest portion of the day. We place the stems in water about the temperature of the greenhouse from which the carnation flowers came. We then place the flowers in our carnation room, the temperature in which is usually about 50 degrees during the day time, and allow the flower room and water to cool down together to a temperature of about 45 degrees. The flowers remain in this room usually over night.

"I have sometimes thought that the best temperature at which to keep flowers was about 10 degrees below the average temperature in which the flowers were grown throughout the day and night, as, for example, carnation flowers grown in an average temperature of 60 degrees would keep well at 50 degrees, those grown in an average temperature of 55 degrees at a temperature of about 45 degrees; and if any grower should keep the average temperature of his greenhouses down to 50 degrees, I should think that his flowers would keep well at 40 degrees in the flower room. I think that a great deal of damage is done to carnations by taking them from warm temperatures, plunging the stems in cold water and putting the flowers immediately into a cold icebox where the temperature ranges, say, from 35 to 40 degrees. In the growing of carnations we would scarcely subject the plants to such violent changes of temperature. I am aware that if flowers be put into an icebox they will maintain their form and shape while they remain in the box; but when taken from the cold box and brought into a warm temperature, the damage that has been done appears for the first time."

We consider these gentlemen all up-to-date growers. We have not solicited the opinions of any wholesalers or retailers, as we hardly think it possible that the ice-boxes of these gentlemen are held at a temperature of "50 degrees" or more.

OBITUARY.

Clinton S. Miller.

Clinton S. Miller, florist, Bradford, Pa., died at his home, October 21, of typhoid fever. A local paper says: Mr. Miller had been a well-known figure in Bradford, on account of the fact that he did not wear a hat. When a lad he discarded head covering and from that time he never wore or possessed a hat, and gave as his reason the fact that nature had provided a head covering which was sufficient protection without the addition of any artificial headgear. Mr. Miller was an expert gardener and a good citizen. During his illness he refused to employ the services of a physician, being a firm believer in the curative power of faith.

Frederick Dellert.

Frederick Dellert, Great Barrington, Mass., dropped dead at his home, October 25. Apoplexy was the cause of death. The deceased was born in Germany 67 years ago, coming to the United States in 1863. Thirty years ago he moved from Canaan, N. Y., to Great Barrington. He had charge of the laying out of some of the finest properties in Southern Berkshire and for a number of years had been a florist. A widow and five sons and five daughters survive him.

Firms Who Are Building.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—Otto Tietbohl has secured a permit to erect a greenhouse at Chambers and Thirteenth streets.

ADAMS, MASS.—A. J. Boothman & Sons have installed a hot-water heating plant.

ITHACA, N. Y.—Foote & Co. have built a new greenhouse, 70 x 18 feet.

KEENE, N. H.—Louis P. Butler & Co., of 103 Winchester Street, the florists and seedsmen who recently bought out the seed and plant mailing department of Ellis Bros., have nearly completed two large greenhouses with a commodious office and storage building, a potting shed and other facilities which will enable them to handle an extensive business.

The Market.

Although there is as yet no material increase in the demand for flowers, the supply is most lines has shortened up to such an extent that there is a somewhat better feeling in the market; and when the quality is there, prices are a trifle firmer. The week commenced with a very full market; by Wednesday, however, the glut seemed to have run its course, and trade assumed a more even shape. Special chrysanthemums are selling freer than they were, and from 30c to 40c. each has been realized for them. Mrs. Trenor L. Park is coming in from Dailledouze Bros., and has sold at the top figure. Some Bonnaffon have also begun to arrive, and although neither extra large, nor long-stemmed, it has been possible to realize 10c. each on them. Ivory also is now on the market, and, thus far, is fetching 75c. per dozen.

Roses have decreased in quantity to a marked degree; and out of the supply there is a large percentage of soft flowers. American Beauty of the highest grade occasionally reach $3 per dozen, but they have to be very select to fetch that figure. In Bride and Bridemaid $5 per 100 is the top value obtained.

Liberty is bringing from $10 down to $2, according to grade. Meteor are coming in very fine now, and clear out satisfactorily.

Lily of the valley is meeting with a poor demand, and the extra quantity thrown on the market the past week from various sources, has had the effect of pushing the price down.

The supply of cattleyas is steady, with prices somewhat firmer than have prevailed for several weeks.

Carnations have shortened up in supply the last few days. This may be caused by the anticipation of advanced values on Saturday, owing to the number required for the Sound Money Parade.

Callas are now on the market in limited numbers, as also are yellow and white marguerites.

Among the retailers a little more life is found in business, owing to the demand made by several large weddings. Alex. McConnell provided decorations for a Brooklyn marriage on Wednesday, that necessitated the use of four van-loads of plants, etc. The bridal bouquet was composed of lily of the valley and white orchids, the latter being Dendrobium formosum.

Wadley & Smythe, in addition to their retail business, have been supplying plants and trees extensively to the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo. Early in the Summer 200 cedars, averaging 25 feet high, were dug from the woods, planted in boxes and shipped to the Exposition grounds. The trees have all thriven in the best possible manner, and 400 more are to be boxed and forwarded in a like way.

Charles Thorley opened his new branch store at 543 Fifth Avenue, corner 45th Street, on Wednesday. The store is elegantly furnished throughout. The ceiling is a splendid piece of painter's work, and represents a blue and white sky effect. The side walls are of white, trimmed with grey. The store is 75 feet deep and 40 feet wide, and six show windows are available. Mirrors adorn the walls, and the heavy pillars that stand through the center have also four-sided mirrors attached to them. Marble topped counters range on one side the full length. The ice box is lined with mirrors, and is made like a room. Intending customers, instead of having flowers brought out for their inspection, step right inside, where all the stock can be viewed without disturbing it. The work room and packing room are in the rear, to which an entrance is made on 45th Street.

At the dinner tendered to W. J. Bryan in the Hoffman House, Saturday, October 27, the table and the interior decorations of the ballroom, in which the dinner was served, were of a very elaborate order, costing $1,000. J. Fleischman, the Broadway florist, had the decorations, and they were done in his usual up-to-date style. Specimen palms were the chief features in the plant line, and the flowers were American Beauty roses.

Jottings.

Owing to Young & Nugent requiring the room for their own business, Harry A. Bunyard moved, on November 1, from 42 West 28th Street, to No. 38, same street, in the store of Tmendly & Schenck.

J. K. Allen is receiving a new carnation from R. P. Jeffrey & Son, Bellmore, L. I., named Meadowbrook, that is taking very well as a light pink variety. It originated as a sport from Flora Hill.

The chrysanthemum show at the Central Park conservatory was opened to the public on Wednesday, October 31.

The carnation Prosperity, heretofore known as No. 666, has had another name given to it by the daily press, the last one being "Fall Dinner Pail."

The Morris County Gardeners and Florists' Society hold their fifth annual exhibition in the assembly rooms at Madison, N. J., on Wednesday and Thursday, November 7 and 8.

Walter F. Sheridan has been appointed chairman, and Alex. Wallace, secretary, of the Plan and Scope Committee of the New York Florist's Club, having in hand flower show matters.

The Fall show of chrysanthemums and other flowers of the American Institute will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum Building, 19-21 West 44th Street, on Fovember 14 and 15. Intending exhibitors should give early notice to Dr. F. M. Hexamer, 52 Lafayette Place, or to James Withers, 136 Liberty Street.

Auction Sales.

Owing to the election next week the sales in both Elliot & Sons' and Cleary & Co.'s rooms, will be held on Wednesday instead of Tuesday.

Tarrytown, N. Y.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting on October 25. Business pertaining to the forthcoming exhibition, which will be held in the Music Hall November 7, 8 and 9, was the chief work accomplished. The services of the following gentlemen have been secured as judges: W. Gomersall, M. Lynch, E. Dailledouze, D. Little, G. Hale, R. Williamson and J. Duncan. William Turner showed a vase of fine Liberty roses. Wallace Clark and Thomas Lee were elected to membership. R. A.

Lewistown, Ill.

Pan-American Progress.

The accompanying photographs of portions of the Pan-American Exposition grounds were taken on September 13. The picture on the lower left-hand corner is a view from the forecourt looking westward, and includes a part of the grounds set aside for exhibits. To realize the progress that has been made it must be remembered that the whole surface of this portion has been raised over three feet from its natural grade since the first of last May. The clay was excavated from one of the Mirror Lakes on the right of the picture. The trees and shrubs were planted about the first of June, large quantities of good soil being used, then the whole surface was covered with four inches of good loam, with a surface covering of fine manure and sand. The sowing of grass seed was continued without interruption every day during the Summer, and with the constant use of the hose it has been a phenomenal success; in fact, the grass over this portion of the grounds is a most excellent lawn and has the appearance of having been down several years instead of only three months. There are several hundred beds, of all dimensions, which do not show in the picture. Wherever a bed was designed the clay was excavated 15 inches, and in many cases 18 inches, and strong, heavy loam, with about one-third of manure filled in.

The beds of dark foliage in the foreground are hybrid perpetual roses from several exhibitors. There are also many more of these that cannot be readily seen. These plants were taken from a root house between the 1st and the 10th of June, six or seven weeks later than is usually the time for planting.

With a severe pruning and a liberal use of the hose they made a good start and in most cases have made a wonderful growth. Beds of Ulrich Brunner, Paul Neyron, and other varieties containing 500 of each variety, have in some cases reached a height of five feet.

Many large exhibits of tulips are now being planted. There will be no vacant beds on the first of next May. In all there will be upwards of 100,000 tulips and hyacinths, Spanish iris and other bulbous flowers. A few dozen small beds will be left for masses of pansies in different colors. This section of the grounds, entering from Elmwood Avenue, must make a grand display.

Mr. Ulrich, the landscape architect, is also planting in the grand court a very large exhibit of bulbs. Long panels of 400 feet by 12 feet are filled with tulips and hyacinths in geometrical designs. In many places, surrounding the grand basin, will be a brilliant display of bulbous plants.

A great deal of work has been done on the southeast section of the grounds and on the Islands. Thousands of shrubs are being planted and there are no bare spots. In every available place where it is too shady to have grass thrive, the surface is covered with Vinca minor, money vine, and other creeping plants.

The Indian mound is a source of great attraction to visitors, and is approached by a broad walk, on each side of which will be a fine display of flower gardening.

Though not in the horticultural line, the writer cannot refrain from mentioning the beautiful appearance of the buildings, now that the coloring is going on. Instead of being a "white city" the eye is charmed with the most exquisite blending of colors, and this is to be carried out on every building. The Horticulture Building will soon be completed, also the conservatories leading to the Mines and Graphic Arts Buildings. The conservatories will be heated by the first of the New Year.

It is very pleasant to have gentlemen who have just returned from Paris tell us that in all things the Pan-American will be more beautiful than that much advertised affair, and in horticulture we shall be lengths ahead.

Several carloads of plants have lately arrived from California to be used in the adornment of the grand court. They consist of yuccas, dracænas, bamboos, pampas grass and many large palms. The Department of Works is propagating many thousands of plants to be used in vases, hundreds of which will be distributed over the grounds, and also boxes which will be lavishly used at the base of many of the buildings.

All visitors are delighted, and I can only repeat what I have frequently said before, that in point of beauty, if not in size, this Pan-American Exposition is going to be the most charming exposition ever held.

The banks in the foreground are the west side of what is known as the forecourt, from which a fine bridge will pass over to where you see the unfinished retaining wall. The building in the distance is the only one left standing on the grounds that existed when the ground was acquired, and is the most unpretentious of all. It was formerly the Country Club and after a suitable embellishment it will be handed over for the Women's Building. The building in course of construction to the right is a portion of the Mines Building, which is now complete. WILLIAM SCOTT.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CARNATIONS.—As the chrysanthemums have the call chiefly as cut flowers just now, there is no need for trying to hurry along the carnations. There will be a better market for them in a few weeks from now, and cool temperature, in the greenhouses with free disbudding, will result in both better plants and flowers. Keep the surface of the benches clean by rubbing over the soil with the hands occasionally. If a green scum forms on the top of the soil readily, it is well to give a sprinkling of air-slacked lime; this will prevent, to a great exteat, the scum or algæ from spreading and covering the entire surface. Do not attempt feeding the plants with liquid manure for some time yet, unless the soil in the benches was purposely left without fertilizer with the intention of supplying food later in liquid form. In that case weak applications once a week may be given. If green fly appears, get rid of it at once by fumigating.

FERN DISHES.—The filling of fern dishes is beginning to be in order, and where varied effects are wanted small-sized crotons can be used advantageously by intermixing a few of these among the ferns. Do not use the croton as a center plant for the dish. A small dracæna, or a cocos, is the best for that purpose. Just put a croton here and there among the small ferns in the body of the dish, and the little added color they give enhances much the beauty of the whole.

CANNAS.—After the frost has touched the cannas, and made them look unsightly, dig them up and lay them on the floor of an outhouse or shed, and let them dry out gradually. Cut away as little of the top as possible until the roots are thoroughly cured, when the stalk may then be cut well down and the clumps or tubers stored away for the Winter.

(222) Forcing Lilium auratum.—Can Lilium auratum be forced in pots, like the Easter lily, and in the same temperature? If so, will the bulbs flower in the same length of time? Can the bulbs be planted out in the Spring to flower next Fall? If set out in the ground this Fall, what protection do they need?—A SUBSCRIBER.

—Lilium auratum can be grown in pots in the same way as the Japan longiflorum is grown, taking the same length of time to finish the plants. The bulbs, if planted outdoors in the early Spring, will flower in the Fall of the same year. If the bulbs are planted outside in the Fall, a slight covering of leaves, or litter, is the only protection needed.

(223) Callas.—P. Olsen.—To insure a cut of 200 callas a week throughout the season would require a stock of at least 1,400 plants. At 50 degrees night temperature, the plants would not do well at all; the temperature maintained would have to be 58 or 60 degrees.

(224) Sow Bugs in Violet Beds.—I have two 100-foot violet houses, solid benches, board sides, that are badly infested with sow bugs (sometimes called wood lice). I have tried Fir Tree Oil, oatmeal with poison, etc., and have destroyed a great many, but there are plenty left. Can some of your readers give me a remedy?—INQUIRER.

—To clear a house of wood lice, the first thing to be done is to take out all the rotten woodwork, and replace with new. If this is not practicable at this time, then trying to kill the pest with poison must be resorted to. We would advise a trial of Hammond's Slug Shot, used according to directions given on the packages.

Growing Fancy Caladiums in Florida.

The growing popularity of the fancy-leaved caladium as a bedding plant, an embellishment to window and piazza-boxes, lawn-vases, etc., its adaptability in the tuber state to the needs of the catalogue trade, and especially the ready sales of it in the guise of a pot plant, has encouraged the Jessamine Gardens, Jessamine, Pasco Co., Florida, to engage in its production on an extensive scale. And judging from the quantity and the quality of the tubers which they are producing, it need no longer be necessary to import tubers of the standard varieties of this plant.

The firm has this season about 20,000 square feet devoted to the purpose mentioned, on which are grown upward of 80,000 caladiums in some 30 varieties; but a good many of these are varieties under trial, and the collection which the firm is at present offering to the mail trade, consists of 10 of the standard and freest growing sorts. The location of the plot is on a deep, sandy black-jack oak, and yellow pine ridge, where the plants are grown in beds and shielded from the full force of the sun by means of burlap screens overhead, placed on stringers nailed to live-oak posts set in the ground. The plot is so piped that with a 25-foot piece of hose any part of it may be watered.

Last Spring I was at the Gardens while the caladiums were being planted out, and secured from the manager, W. J. Ellsworth, the following facts concerning their methods of growing, harvesting and keeping the tubers: The small tubers are potted up in January, or any time thereafter desired, and given bottom heat, potting on as fast as necessary to have them well established for planting out as soon as all danger of frost is past, which is after the middle of March. The plat receives some time in advance of the planting season, a heavy application of stable manure which is at once plowed in. When ready to plant a light application of a suitable, balanced chemical fertilizer is made to quicken the start of the plants. The burlap screens, while admitting considerable sun, serve to break the fierce rays, and are placed at the time of planting, so as to admit of one-third full sun; later, when the plants are well established, the screens are placed further apart, so as to admit one-half full sun.

During the growing season the plants receive an abundance of water, the natural rainfall—of which there is usually a great deal during the months of June, July and August—being supplemented by the use of the hose when necessary, and are kept thoroughly free from weeds. In the latter part of the season, before the plants slacken growth, an application is made of a fertilizer containing a liberal percentage of potash to secure a firm tuber.

Usually the tubers are ready to dig from the 1st to the 15th of December, and range in size from ¾ of an inch to 4 inches in diameter, dependent on variety, and conditions from time of planting to harvesting. After curing—to which special attention is given—they are ready for shipment or storing. In storing to keep over Winter they are placed in boxes of convenient size, and sand, or any fine material that will exclude the air and easily maintain uniform moisture, sprinkled among and over them; then set away in a temperature that will keep gloxinia or begonia tubers. The sand, or other packing material, is kept slightly damp, so that no moisture will be absorbed from the tubers.

When treated in this manner, Mr. Ellsworth states there is no difficulty in carrying properly grown and matured tubers through the Winter with practically no loss from decay. Wherever there have been complaints on this score he has found on investigation that tubers have been packed in some dust-dry material, and in addition, in some instances, have been stored over steam pipes or in other situations where the temperature was too high. When packed and kept in material drier than the tubers are, the moisture in the tubers will be gradually absorbed until in the Spring, it will be found that many—and especially the smaller ones—have succumbed to a dry rot.

ON SERVER.

A Visit to Carlton Hill, N. J.

The long ranges of greenhouses at the establishment of Julius Roehrs are just now replete with all that is choice in the way of palms, ferns and decorative plants in general. To say that all the stock carried is in the pink of condition is almost unnecessary, as the excellent quality of the output of this place is too well known. The sheds, in which are carried quantities of bay trees and phœnix palms, are a veritable forest in appearance. Here is probably the biggest collection of specimens of these two subjects to be found on this continent. In the house devoted to specimen palms entirely, the height and spread of the kentias are something immense, and one wonders where a market is found for all this magnificent stock.

Coming down to ordinary sized stock, kentias are to be seen in abundance, and are in excellent condition, both as to color and shape. The same remarks are also applicable to a good-sized stock of Areca lutescens. A batch of Livistona rotundifolia, each plant showing almost a dozen character leaves, is of exceeding good quality, as also are large collections of the same plant in smaller sizes.

Boston ferns are cultivated extensively, the larger sizes predominating, while of branching rubbers there is also a big collection. A feature in one house is a fine stock of Caryota magnifica. This variety is, in appearance, more decorative than C. urens; a closer jointed palm, it has the effect of being better furnished. These plants are grown two in a pot, and are of a very useful size, ranging in height from three to four feet.

Fancy Caladiums as grown in Florida.

In dracænas some fine collections are in evidence. D. Sanderiana, of which there never seems to be too many in the market, is represented by a large well-grown stock, as also is D. amabilis. Dracæna Lord Wolseley is grown in large numbers also. This is an improvement on D. terminalis; it has about the same colorings in its foliage as that variety has, but they are brought out more vividly. Besides this advantage in color, it is less liable to disease of the lower leaves than is D. terminalis. There is also a splendid bench of D. Massangeana; these are large, well-colored plants, and perfect in every detail. While on the subject of vari-colored foliage plants, we must make special mention of the crotons. These are grown extensively, and are to be seen in various sizes. The croton is becoming a more prominent factor each year as a basket plant, or used in a young state for intermixing with ferns for table work. The collection here is replete with the best varieties, and all are colored to a nicety.

A house of finely formed araucarias shows that there is still a lively demand for this beautiful decorative plant. Adiantum Farleyense has a house to itself, and speaks wonders for the care in its culture. Oranges and ardisias in preparation for Christmas are coming along in grand style. Both are as full of fruit as it is possible for plants to carry, while the shape and size of the plants are all that could be desired. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is showing flower nicely. These are being brought along without any undue forcing, with the result that they are hardy, cool grown plants, that will not go to pieces on being taken from the greenhouse, as is the case when this subject is forced too rapidly.

A house of cyclamens, just coming into flower, presents a striking effect in color. The strain grown has, in most instances, prettily marked foliage, while the whole stock has that low-growing habit that makes the leaves seem to cling evenly around the edge of the pot—much to be preferred over cyclamens that have a tendency to send out their foliage in a straggling, drooping manner.

Azaleas are being forced into flower for the holidays, and there is one large house devoted entirely to them. These are all plants of this year's importation. Mr. Roehrs says he gets better results from forcing newly imported plants, than from those that have been carried over from last season. The look of this house justifies the statement; buds are developing evenly, and every plant will undoubtedly fulfil its mission.

Orchids are grown here extensively. In a Western contemporary, recently, mention was made of a Cattleya labiata throwing six flowers from one spathe. Six flowers on a stem is not rare here by any means. We ourselves counted eight elegant blooms on one spike. Nineteen or twenty (we forget the exact number) houses are devoted to orchids. Oncidiums are a sight just now with their long drooping sprays of pure yellow blossoms. Dendrobium formosum are also a mass of flowers; but the cattleyas—well, these must be seen to be appreciated. Talk about a scarcity of these flowers in the near future! It does not seem possible after viewing the immense stock here. C. labiata have still hundreds of flowers in sight, and that there will be no break in the supply of cattleyas is shown by the numerous buds of C. Trianæ that are plainly visible through the transparent sheaths in which they are held. A batch of Cattleya Dowiana is throwing out some exceedingly fine flowers for the first time since they were imported, two seasons ago. The plants have made remarkably strong growth, and the flowers, with their beautiful yellow upper petals, and the purple lip, will no doubt command admiration on the market. There is also another bench full of plants, flowering now, that are not often seen, these are Zygopetalum Mackayi, large spikes of flowers of which fill the house with a delicious fragrance.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

UTICA, N. Y.—C. F. Seitzer has given up the culture of violets which have not been satisfactory the past two seasons, and filled space with carnations. Oneida is grand, growing in a house facing north and south. This position is the best. Alaska is his choice for an all-round white. Red Jacket and Daybreak do well in the same house. He will hold a chrysanthemum show as usual, and has some fine blooms. Goldfinder is a seedling of great merit, of vigorous habit, blooms large; very solid, of a bright gold color.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y.—J. C. Hatcher & Son will give a chrysanthemum show in their beautiful store. George Hatcher, having returned with the latest Eastern ideas, intends to excel all previous efforts in this direction. Merry Monarch is their earliest white. The Perle rose is grown extensively, being as popular as ever for design work. I noted a departure in bench construction in two houses lately completed. Cross pieces are placed on inch piping, being much easier to replace when boards rot. A new range is under consideration; glass will be butted, as the elevation is above the reach of dust and smoke. The residence of the head of the firm adjoins the greenhouses, and commands a grand view of the magnificent Valley of the Mohawk.

ALBANY, N. Y.—H. G. Eyres has some heavy orders booked in anticipation of the election of Governor Roosevelt to the vice-presidency, and is busy conjuring up new ideas in the decorative art.

F. A. Danker reports a busy time, and is looking around for an opportunity to expand, his space being too restricted for his increasing business.

John Dingwall has a batch of lantanas which at this season of the year find ready sale as used in fern dishes. He intends raising them in large numbers. He finds White Cloud carnation a good second to Flora Hill.

Fred Goldring has a fine crop of Marie Louise violet in prospect; the plants have made excellent growth, and are full of vigor. Though growing roses on a more extensive scale than formerly, considerable space is devoted to the raising of palms and ferns, as Fred is a strong advocate of home-grown stock.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Chrysanthemums are a strong feature with Mark Aitken this season. He is justly proud of the grand lot he has been cutting for some time. Glory of the Pacific was never finer, and sells at sight at $3 per dozen. He intends giving a show at an early date.

J. D. Robinson has added a house for carnations. He is the latest addition to the ranks, and is much encouraged by the success already met with.

F. Knapp Vetter has rejoined the staff of Mark Aitken as assistant foreman.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—E. H. Howland found a white Cattleya labiata among an importation from Lager & Hurrell, to whom he has resold it for a good round figure.

PEABODY, MASS.—J. M. Ward & Co. were cutting white Fitzwygram as early as August 24, and have supplied the Boston market with some of the finest early blooms this season. Two new houses are so constructed that ice cannot form in the gutters, the ends being raised on sills. As fine a lot of cyclamen as one could wish to see for the holidays is found in this place.

SALEM, MASS.—McGee, Geary & Co. are preparing, between the lull in funeral work, for their annual chrysanthemum exhibition, which will be under the charge of William Hallahan. John Walk has his new box ready and John Galloup will supply the designs for this occasion.

WAVERLY, MASS.—W. W. Edgar has his new houses filled with some of the finest specimen plants of azaleas and Easter stock, such as acacias and metrosideros, he ever handled. The space devoted last season to Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is given to ferns, one house of Adiantum tenerum being a veritable Klondike just at this season. Mr. Edgar's son Robert, who is with Sander at Bruges, says there is nothing like it over there.

W. M.

Buffalo.

Prevailing weather conditions seem scarcely promotive of good business, and with political issues in the question also, trade is but moderate. Flowers are amply plentiful for all needs inclined to low prices at wholesale. Chrysanthemums are now in fair abundance, and wholesale prices are fast dropping.

Recent visitors included C. S. Ford, Jr., Philadelphia; E. B. Sage, Red Rock, Pa.; L. B. Burr, Darien, N. Y.; George Staffinger, Springville, N. Y.

BOSTON.—George Hollis, South Weymouth, Mass., exhibited Peerless, a white Japanese variety, scoring, commercial scale, 85 points. This variety was judged as an early one, as the flowers shown could have been cut a week or two weeks earlier, or as early as Bergmann.

CINCINNATI.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Omega, a canary-yellow reflexed Japanese variety, which scored, commercial scale, 79 points; exhibition scale, 81 points.

The scale of judging plants and blooms of chrysanthemums, in its entirety, is as follows:

Scale A—Scale of points for bush plants and standards, single specimen, or any number up to six, in an exhibition where CHICAGO.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., sent Omega, George F. Kalb × Mrs. Jerome Jones. Planted June 20, bud taken September 15, cut October 25; color, a straw yellow; broad, open rays, in some of the flowers sent; others inclined to curve; size, 7 to 8 inches; a striking flower, but, possibly, the florets too sparse.

Name of pink exhibited October 20, Iolantha, not given in my last report.

Trade Notes.

Chrysanthemums are now with us in quantity, although the variety is still rather limited. Bergmann is just about over; Lager, Henderson, Glory of the Pacific, and its white sports, constitute the major part of the cuts. The quality is just about the average. The main crop generally is 10 to 14 days later than usual. The retail demand is very fair. We have been favored with phenomenal weather—more like Summer than very late Fall. Carnations are coming along very fast, and unless cooler weather comes soon the crop will be over before Christmas.

Show Postponement.

November 7 being the day set for the Dominion elections, it has been thought advisable to postpone the show until Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the following week, i. e., November 12, 13, 14. Prospects for the exhibition are reported bright, and great competition in the cut flower section is predicted.

In answer to a letter accompanied by a box of American Beauty, Lord Strathcona, our honorary president, expressed the pleasure it would give him to open the show on the date given. His Lordship's letter was accompanied by a second check for $100 towards the funds of the Club. The music at the exhibition will be supplied by the concert orchestra of the First Battalion, Victoria Rifles of Canada. B.

Market News.

Last week's trade was fair; not much improvement is expected until the presidential election is over. From present indications the month of November promises well. There is an abundance of stock of every kind; the warm weather, which still continues, being largely responsible for this. Chrysanthemums are doing well; fine blooms are coming in and prices are more reasonable—6c. to about 15c. for good blooms, at retail $4 per dozen; seems about the best price obtainable, while medium sized flowers bring from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen, and sell the best. Roses are abundant, values low. Carnations hold their price at from $1.50 up; pink kinds are plentiful; white is in good demand.

L. I. Neff has a new pink seedling carnation which he will likely put on the market the beginning of next year. It certainly looks to be a good one. The color is a soft pink. The plant is a profuse bloomer and makes good growth; the keeping qualities of the flowers are of the best; blooms five days old looked as fresh as if newly cut.

Brieabaugh Bros. are still adding to their plant, being about ready to glaze a very large house.

Thousands of people visited the exhibition of chrysanthemums in the Phipps conservatories last Sunday. The show is a success, but next week it will be still better, as more varieties will be in bloom. Superintendent Falconer and his assistants deserve much credit for their efforts to please the people, and no show held anywhere in the country is better patronized.

H. C. Frick's private conservatories in the East End were also open to the public, and will be so for several weeks. Several thousand blooms are on exhibition, among them some new ones of last Spring's importation from England. David Fraser, who has charge of the conservatories, is taking great pleasure in showing visitors through the different houses.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club takes place Thursday, November 8, in the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.'s store room, at 8 p. m.

The Market.

Business moves along rather slowly and there is not that weekly improvement noted which is usual at this season of the year. Two main causes are given for this condition; first, the absence of seasonable weather, and, second, the approaching election, with its consequent uncertainty.

The market is well supplied, but outside of chrysanthemums there would be a scarcity of really good stock, were the demand normal.

Roses are in good supply, but are generally of poor quality, excepting Beauty, which hold out very well. The call, however, is light, and the flowers move slowly, at about the same prices as have prevailed for some weeks back. Bride and Bridesmaid are of second-class quality, a very few being really fine. Kaiserin and Carnot are better, but are not up to the usual standard for this season. Liberty, Meteor and Morgan, too, move rather slowly at $1 to $3 per 100.

Carnations are in good supply, but the demand is limited since chrysanthemums have become more plentiful. Prices have dropped, No. 1 stock now bringing but $1 per 100, while extras and fancies go at $1.50; and once in a while $2 per 100 is realized.

Chrysanthemums are now abundant in all colors but red, which latter maintain good prices, owing to the extra demand last Saturday for the football game at Harvard, and the anticipated call this week (Saturday) when the last big game is played here. In white klads Ivory has now become quite plentiful, and seems to be the favorite white. Prices range from $3 to $6 per 100. In pink Mrs. Perrin and Viviand-Morel have appeared this week and supplant Glory of the Pacific. Pink ones now range in price from $4 to $6, while extra choice Perrin make $8, $10 and $12.50 per 100. In yellow Major Bonnaffon was brought in this week, and with Marion Henderson, Gold Lode, Robert Halliday, Mrs. O. P. Bassett and others, furnish quite a variety in shades of yellow. Flowers of this color fetch from $4 to $8 per 100 for smaller and ordinary grades, while the fancy varieties realize from $10 to $16 per 100.

Violets are improving in quality somewhat, and are coming along very fast, fetching from 35c. to 75c. per 100.

The cattleya supply is very heavy, and the blooms are moving rather slowly, causing a decrease in prices so that now good ones sell for $2 per dozen.

W. H. Elliott is bringing in a nice lot of that handsome yellow chrysanthemum, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, which realize $2 per dozen.

Thomas Roland had the first Major Bonnaffon, on Monday.

The Waban Rose conservatories are now cutting their large fancy exhibition chrysanthemums, which are fully up to the high standard of this establishment's productions. F. J. N.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

SOMERVILLE, MASS.—E. B. Wallace, of the firm of Pote & Wallace, has sold out his interest in the business to his partner.

FIVE REASONS Why You Should Place Your Orders for . . . AZALEAS

With Us At Once.

BECAUSE You can still take advantage of the mild weather, and have the plants come through safely by freight.

BECAUSE We are the largest buyers of Azaleas in the world, and make personal inspection of the stocks before they are shipped to us, and buy for spot cash, which enables us to secure lowest prices, and you the benefit in quality of the plants.

BECAUSE Our importations are all repacked at our own nursery. Plants that have suffered in transit, and which are not well set with buds being discarded, you receive nothing but first-class stock, which is certain to give satisfaction.

BECAUSE We can give you any special assortment of varieties that you may wish. This is a great advantage over the usual assorted case lots, sent over from Belgium, which invariably contain many varieties not at all suited to the American market.

BECAUSE We wish to convince you, as we have convinced many of the leading florists of the United States, that you can buy Azaleas from us to better advantage than if you make your own importations.

Trade Improves.

Business is steadily improving, in a wholesale way. Plenty of stock is coming in to fill all orders. Chrysanthemums are moving fairly well, Robinson being by far the best seller of any of the varieties. Glory of the Pacific is good in its way, but only for the want of something better does it sell.

By the way, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., had a seedling before the committee here on October 20, that looks like a good early pink. It is an incurved sort, the color not unlike that of Perrin, with good stem and foliage. The parentage is Marquis De Montmort and Bergmann, and Mrs. Parker, Jr. It is named "Iolantha," height four feet, crown bud taken September 10, flowers cut October 15. The variety scaled 85 points, thereby gaining a certificate. There is certainly a place for this early variety, and if it is an easy grower it will be much sought after by all growers of the Queen of Autumn.

We are still having unusually warm weather for the time of year, which is a great detriment to the florist's business; in fact, it affects nearly all classes of trade.

Carnations are improving in quality very slowly, and very few are coming into the market that will fetch over $1.50 per hundred; most of them being sold at 75c. to $1. Ethel Crocker seems to be one of the best of all the new introductions, with Genevieve Lord a close second. Other sorts are growing nicely, but are not far enough advanced to allow of much being said about them.

Exhibitions.

The first of a series of exhibitions given by The Cincinnati Florists' Society will occur November 10, in the club rooms, and will be a chrysanthemum show. The people of Cincinnati are very much interested in these monthly shows, and thousands will visit the exhibition rooms during the season. These rooms being situated over the flower market proper, the people must pass through the market to get up stairs; therefore, the shows are of great benefit to the standholders, bringing many buyers to the market that would not otherwise come.

Fred Lemon, of the E. G. Hill Co., was in the city during the week, as was also John Lodder of Hamilton, O., and John Evans and brother. E. G. GILLETT.

Columbus, O.

The Market.

Fiue chrysanthemums are coming in now; they bring $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen and sell very well at those figures. Roses are rather slow, at $1; the continued warm weather keeps them a little soft. Carnations are going fairly well at 50c.; some very fine flowers are in the market.

In the way of plants chrysanthemums in pots go at from 15c. to 25c. each.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The meeting of the Columbus Horticultural Society, October 27, at the State University, was well attended. Prof. Osborne passed around some figs sent him from California. They were samples of the first Smyrna figs grown on a commercial scale in this country. Fred K. Luke reported a successful attempt to ward off frost. He arranged his hose and spray nozzles to, as nearly as possible, equally wet all the plants in the bed, and kept it up while the frost would take effect. During one of the nights of the recent frosts the temperature sank to 28 degrees F. Where the plants were under the influence of the spray they are as bright as at any time during the Summer. The plants thus treated were canna, caladium, ageratum, nasturtium, geranium, celosia, achyranthes, and salvia. To do this one needs to go to a little trouble, and perhaps has to sacrifice a little sleep; but the beds can be enjoyed several weeks longer.

Various Notes.

Messrs. Breece, of West Berlin, O., Killen of New York, and Bell of Cincinnati, were among the recent callers.

On October 17 and 18 we had frosts which practically finished the flower beds. Since then the weather has been perfect. On the whole, but very little firing has been necessary.

Affleck Bros., after rebuilding, remain in the flower business. Rumor was current that they would grow vegetables.

Mrs. S. F. Stevens started for New York, October 27, whence, after a few days' sojourn, she will sail for Europe.

Ed. Evans, who for the past two weeks was quite sick, is able to attend to business again. FRITZ.

Up to the present, October 30, we have not had a killing frost and most of the time the temperature has been at Summer heat. This weather is the cause of a slowness in the demand for flowers. Roses are plentiful and of good quality, retailing at $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Beauty bring $2 to $4 per dozen. Carnations are improving slowly, and sell at 35c. to 50c. a dozen. Chrysanthemums are now coming in in greater variety and of better quality, and are retailing at from 50c. to $4 per dozen. J. S.

Baltimore.

The Cut Flower Market.

Business is fair, with a tendency to improve. Chrysanthemums predominate and wholesale for from $1 to $2 a dozen. Roses sell slowly and the supply is rather large. In the markets chrysanthemums sell well, but realize only from 10 to 25c.

Personals.

Mrs. Schuler, of Saratoga Street, will sell her store. Having married again she will go out of the flower business.

Mr. Holden, the manager of Mrs. Robert Garrett's estate, has returned from a trip to England.

John Cook showed your correspondent 500 feet of hardy orange hedge, in fine condition. He thinks that the failure of this plant at other places is due to a lack of good drainage rather than to a severe Winter.

T. E.

St. Louis.

The past week was noted for the great amount of stock received, roses principally, which has been difficult to dispose of, and the wholesale men did a lot of work for a small profit. Violets are also blooming out of proportion to the demand, and lots of them go to waste. Receipts of chrysanthemums of the better grades are not heavy and good flowers are snapped up at prices ranging at present from 20c. to 25c. per flower. Rather indifferent blooms of Glory of the Pacific and Bergmann bring only 6c. to 10c. Carnations are plentiful, and, owing to roses being so cheap, are a little lower in price.

Business is none too good, and is not expected to improve much until the weather changes and the election is over. The weather is still almost hot, with heavy rains; if it keeps up, it will likely set things growing again outside.

The nursery business is starting up late on account of the hot weather and no frost. Prospects are not over bright for Fall trade, in the ornamental lines, as, just now in this city, there seem to be no park trade or large plantings contemplated. C. C. S.

SEVERAL very large shipments of JAPAN LONGIFLORUM have arrived in very bad condition—more than half of the bulbs having been lost by rotting. This large loss will make a scarcity in this ... probably many dealers will be unable to fill their orders in full.

If you do not succeed in getting your full supplies, we have to offer a fine lot of

These bulbs are in splendid shape. We can offer them at $14.00 per case. 350 bulbs to the case.

WE ALSO HAVE A FINE STOCK OF

LILIUM HARRISII.

7-9 in. size is generally scarce, but we have a very fine stock of this size still on hand. These are a lot of bulbs that were left in the ground and dug late, and, in consequence, are in grand shape. Bulbs are plump, bright and clean, and are as fine a lot of Harrisii as any one would want to handle. We can supply these as long as unsold as follows:

5-7 inch, 400 bulbs to the case, only $16.00 per case.
7-9 inch, 200 bulbs to the case, only $18.00 per case.

We can also offer a fine stock of WHITE ROMAN HYACINTHS
Extra quality bulbs, 12-15 ctm., in case lots, 2,100 bulbs to the case, $16.00 per 1000.

PAPER WHITE NARCISSUS GRANDIFLORA Case lots, about 1,300 bulbs to the case, $7.50 per 1000.

Platte County (Neb.) Seed Industry. The seed industry in Platte County, braska, is assuming large proportions is year, being profitably engaged in by er a dozen farmers, though on a larger ale by the Emerson Seed Company an by any of the others. The success- operation of the enterprise is made ssible by the Nebraska central irriga- on ditch, which passes through the unty, furnishing an abundant water pply. The Emerson Company bought e 400-acre farm of H. J. Hendry near onroe last Spring, and have raised cumber seed by the car load this year. ac Kenyon has 17 acres of Hubbard nash, from which he got 300 pounds seed to the acre. This he sells to the M. Ferry Seed Company. The squash lls are found to be one of the best foods r sheep and cattle and sell for $1.25 a ad. H. E. Babcock has 110 acres of veet corn, which yield from 45 to 60 shels an acre. William Webster, David nkins, Thomas Hill, Robert Anderson, W. Mannington, Charles Chapin, rant DeLoome and D. W. Murdock have so found seed raising profitable.

European Notes.

Although snow has fallen in some parts of Germany, the weather generally remains fairly favorable for Autumn work. At the same time we sadly need more rain, for the many showers that have fallen have not penetrated more than one foot below the surface, and the subsoil remains hard and quite dry. Cabbages develop very slowly and root crops remain practically stagnant for lack of moisture.

While these conditions prevail in Northern Europe, the reports from the South are far more cheerful, and the brilliant sunshine now prevailing has materially increased the crops of balsams, zinnias, salvias, celosias and dahlias. In Italy, the plantings of onions and cauliflowers for next year's crop are practically completed. The acreage of each that has been planted is the smallest for many years past, and there can only be a full supply if we have an exceptionally favorable season. In any case prices for both articles will be considerably higher.

As regards southern-grown vegetable seeds most of the leguminous and cucurbitaceous plants have been badly injured by tree bugs, which came in such quantity as was never recorded before.

In England the root shows are now in full swing. Among items deserving special mention are the Sutton Crimson Globe beet, a variety fully described by the name, which is rapidly supplanting all the other round varieties, by the handsome form of the root, and the rich deep color of the flesh. Its cooking qualities are of the first order. Brown's Universal Swede was favorably spoken of in these notes when it was first exhibited. The past Summer has thoroughly put its mildew-resisting qualities to the test, and the results far exceed our most sanguine expectations. No other variety has done so well, or yielded as large a crop by fully 50 per cent. As the root shows no sign of coarseness, and is of excellent keeping quality, it would prove a great boon for cultivation in hot climates. The Smithfield Club Show, in December next, may have other surprises in store.

As regards the present season's crops of beet and carrot, if they all turn out on the same lines as those we have already threshed, the yield will not be one-half as much as our lowest estimate.

W. B. Hoyt, of the Cleveland Seed Co., is in England soliciting contracts for peas. EUROPEAN SEEDS.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

The firm of Meehan Brothers have lately added to their nursery at Dreshertown, Montgomery Co., Pa., over 100 acres of land, giving them 85 acres, including their former nursery. A commencement will be made to stock it with trees and shrubs at once, as the old portion is entirely filled. The firm consists of the three sons of Thomas Meehan, viz., Thomas B. Meehan, J. Franklin Meehan, and S. Mendelson Meehan. These three sons are also, with their father, the members of the firm of Thomas Meehan & Sons, of Germantown, Pa.

Though the Dreshertown nursery is an entirely distinct firm, as already stated, it is really an auxiliary of the Germantown one, which of itself consists of 75 acres. The additional land now acquired by the sons practically give the firm of Thomas Meehan & Sons the control of 260 acres for nursery purposes.

George H. Brown, of the Department of Public Buildings and Grounds, Washington, D. C., who many years ago resided in Philadelphia, paid a welcome visit to his friends here recently. He speaks favorably of the appearance of the trees and shrubs of Washington, and of the improvements in his line which have been made there.

Hardiness of the "Hardy Orange."—I am glad to notice what your correspondent, T. E., says of the behavior of the hardy orange, at Baltimore. That it should prove less hardy there than here is not strange. It is very well understood that it is the hot Winter's sun that determines the hardiness or otherwise of certain plants, and the further south one goes, the less hardy are other things as well, if where hard freezings occur at night. The Magnolia grandiflora is a case in point. This is considered a hardy tree in Philadelphia. There are some very large specimens of it here. They Winter better here than they do in Cincinnati, and in the adjacent towns of Indiana, though much further south than we are. And I have seen this tree at Arlington, Va., looking much worse in Spring than our Philadelphia trees do.

Another thing bearing on hardiness is the locality from which the seeds come, from which the plants are raised. Our hardy orange plants are from seeds obtained from trees fruiting here, just as the most of our Magnolia grandiflora trees are, and I believe plants so raised are much hardier than those from seeds emanating from the far South. Many of the orange plants are from Florida-grown seed, and I would not look for such seedlings to be as hardy as those raised from Philadelphia seed.

Ampelopsis Veitchii Japanese Ivy.—There is an ever-increasing demand for the Japanese Ivy, despite the far greater number sold every year over the preceding one. Much of the improved look of many residences is due to the use of this vine; besides, for the covering of boundary walls, outbuildings, and other objects, there is no other one that could take its place. In all cities this vine could be used to plant to the walls of dwellings. It would completely change the aspect of cities, and decidedly for the better. Many a poor dweller in a city would see a wall of green for the first time, were the houses to display this vine on their walls. Some of our churches and large manufacturing establishments have used it, and much to their betterment.

This vine varies much in character. The young leaves are usually much more divided than old ones. As the vine gets older, its leaves become of a less divided nature. Often two plants, side by side, will show marked differences for a long time, even in their Autumn coloring, but there is but one species, though attempts to keep separate, what seemed marked varieties, have been made.

There are various modes of propagating this vine, grafting on the Virginia creeper, cuttings and from seeds, being the chief ones. Vines of some age seed so freely that this is the favorite way of increasing them. The seeds are collected in November, and are kept in slightly damp earth till Spring, in a cool cellar, having been first washed free of pulp. Or, sowings may be made in beds outdoors, in the Autumn, as soon as the seeds are gathered, and without washing off the pulp. If kept in a cool place inside till Spring, the soil in which they are placed should be just moist enough to sustain the seed without shriveling. On the advent of Spring, sow the seeds in the open ground, or in boxes in a greenhouse.

Early Autumn Planting.—It is somewhat late in the season to speak to your readers in the North on the benefits of early Autumn planting, but it will not be so to those of the South, as the planting commences at a much later period than ours of the North. It is not so many years ago that it would have been deemed rank horticultural treason to have spoken of planting deciduous trees before the fall of the leaf. Now, it is a safe assertion that one-half of what are planted in Autumn are set before the leaves fall. Those who have not attempted it should make a trial of it and be convinced. Nurserymen start the planting of their own stock in September, setting out evergreens first, following with deciduous trees. The success is better at that season of the year than at any other. In ordinary seasons the functions of the leaves are practically fully performed by that time, and so there need be no hesitation in stripping them from the trees. This has to be done to have success; and though it makes transplanting more costly, it pays to do it and go on with the planting. Those who have not tried this system of planting would be interested in witnessing the numerous new roots one of these early planted trees would display if dug up in a few weeks after being planted. The ground being warm in early Autumn, it acts as a hotbed does on cuttings, and fibres start out in profusion. I have often witnessed it, having had occasion to lift again such trees. It is these fibres which assure one that the tree is safe, as they are working to provide the tree with what it requires for Winter. After many years' experience in this work, I am satisfied that better results follow the early planting, than by waiting for the leaves to fall before commencing.

I do not share in the doubt expressed by J. H. Higginbotham, of St. Louis, recently reported in the Tribune, as to the success of the Scotch heather—Calluna vulgaris—under ordinary conditions in the middle and northern section of this country, especially in favorable situations where normal conditions for the growth of the plants obtain. There are many varieties of the Erica in commerce in Europe, and they are now being included in some of the planting lists for parks and other ornamental grounds in this country. As the plants are comparatively inexpensive, and can be obtained here in good condition for a few dollars a hundred, there would seem no occasion for hesitancy in their use or in experimenting with them, unless in situations where there are unfavorable conditions of soil and climate; such possibly as may be found in localities about St. Louis, and other interior semi-southern points, where drought in Summer is frequently trying for any of the evergreen shrubs. By any one having seen the Scotch heather growing in its native habitat in Scotland and Northern Europe, I think the impression naturally formed would be that the plants should succeed with ordinary treatment here.

New York. FREDERICK W. KELSEY.

—There is no reason to doubt that the heather is well adapted to the greater part of our country. I have not the authorities by me, but am sure it is reported in a semi-wild state in the vicinity of Boston, and also at Egg Harbor City, New Jersey. It has been under my personal observation here for over twenty years, and in all that time has stood all kinds of weather in all seasons, uninjured, and it is growing in shallow, stony soil. The plant is not only native of England and Scotland, but of the whole of Northern Europe, as Mr. Kelsey says; and its home is in bleak and barren places. It has been at home in Philadelphia for 30 years, as have been two Ericas—vagans and stricta. All ericaceous plants have fine, hair-like roots, and in common with all plants with roots of similar character delight in light soil. They are well suited in soil containing many small stones, and of a sandy nature. The stones keep the soil open, which is what the roots desire. Such soils are often poor. Because of this it is inferred by many that the plants referred to, do not care for better soil, but this is a mistake. The roots are suited in such situations, but the plants will show a marked improvement in growth, if a mulching of good soil be given them.

FIVE REASONS Why You Should Place Your Orders for . . . AZALEAS

With Us At Once.

BECAUSE You can still take advantage of the mild weather, and have the plants come through safely by freight.

BECAUSE We are the largest buyers of Azaleas in the world, and make personal inspection of the stocks before they are shipped to us, and buy for spot cash, which enables us to secure lowest prices, and you the benefit in quality of the plants.

BECAUSE Our importations are all repacked at our own nursery. Plants that have suffered in transit, and which are not well set with buds being discarded, you receive nothing but first-class stock, which is certain to give satisfaction.

BECAUSE We can give you any special assortment of varieties that you may wish. This is a great advantage over the usual assorted case lots, sent over from Belgium, which invariably contain many varieties not at all suited to the American market.

BECAUSE We wish to convince you, as we have convinced many of the leading florists of the United States, that you can buy Azaleas from us to better advantage than if you make your own importations.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Phillips and Weir were last week victimized by a party who proffered bogus checks purporting to be signed by a customer of each of the firms named, in payment of orders for cut flowers, amounting in Phillips' case to $19, and to $16 in the case of Weir. The forged checks represented an amount of $25, and the swindler got the change in both instances. He has been arrested.

The wholesale houses report fair business right along. When gluts appear the surplus is easily disposed of in large lots to the street men. A. H. Langjahr put a nice new wagon into service recently; he has been handling the cut of the Walter Molatsch chrysanthemum, grown by the originator, and reports good sales thereof.

Hicks & Crawbuck have also added a new wagon to their equipment, and report a steadily increasing business.

At the department store of A. I. Namm, the bulb and plant counters are in charge of Ambrose Cleary, who also is the buyer for this department.

Newport, R. I.

After what is considered a fair season's work, the New York City florists have closed up their stores here, our local dealers being well able to care for what trade there is. Chrysanthemums are in and are of better quality than usually seen at the opening of the season. The flowers were over a week later than ordinary in making their appearance.

Arrangements are being completed for the Horticultural Society's Fall Show, which is to be held in Masonic Hall, November 13-15. Judges have been selected from out of town, and the indications are that the dates fixed on will be about right.

Carnations on the benches are looking well, but owing to the dry Summer are dwarfer than usual.

V. A. Vanicek is doing a large trade in nursery stock, shipping most of it away from here. The stock this Fall, notwithstanding an unusually dry Summer, is in prime condition. The demand for climbers is good, and Mr. Vanicek is raising Rambler roses and Clematis paniculata in large quantities. MAC.

Ottawa.

Business is fairly good. The past few days all was excitement over the home-coming of the soldiers from South Africa. The Ottawa Company arrived Saturday, and the arrival was an occasion of record-breaking crowds and decorations. The florists kept up their end. C. Scrim had in his window a large floral cannon and carriage; Wright had, as a window decoration, a tent, camp fire, and stack of arms; Graham Bros. also had a pretty window display.

R. Wright, of Aylmer, took advantage of the gala day to open up his new store, and he certainly got a grand send-off, for his bright, new shop, military window, and fine display of chrysanthemums made it a pleasant refuge from the over-crowded streets.

Crops generally are good, and ought to be with the present weather. Carnations are very good. Evelina has been giving a continuous yield, and the plants up to date are healthy. If it had not the habit of going back on us in Winter, it is certainly one of the most profitable varieties for early flowering. Ethel Crocker is giving some grand flowers, and Crane is away ahead of America, the latter being the only one affected with rust. Roses are all right. E.

At several social functions occurring in New York, election night, the table decorations were composed wholly of Roosevelt carnations.

The articles of incorporation of the El Paso County Horticultural Society were filed with the county clerk of Colorado Springs, Col., October 25. The directors are named as Harry C. Harris, E. W. Giddings, Jr., D. A. Russell, William Clark, Edgar King, H. I. Bennett and Charles Craig.

The exhibits to be made by school children at the forthcoming show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, at Orange, N. J., Wednesday, November 14, are creating a great deal of interest locally. Secretary George Smith has already received 900 entries. Displays will also be made by the members of the Society.

The florists of Hartford, Conn., and vicinity are considering the advisability of inaugurating a florists' club. This is a step in the right direction; and we hope the promoters of the movement will meet with such a measure of encouragement as will ensure the formation of such an institution. Every city and town should have its florists' club.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

"Open Thine Hand wide unto thy Brother, and to thy needy, in thy Land."

The publishers of the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have, for the convenience of our readers, decided to receive subscriptions at this office for the Galveston relief fund, which will be at once acknowledged in these columns, and the amount contributed forwarded to the proper authorities as the donations of our trade on behalf of their suffering brethren in the storm-swept sections. Checks and money orders for the Galveston relief fund should be made out in favor of the A. T. De La Mare Printing and Publishing Co., Ltd., crossed "In aid of Galveston sufferers."

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

At the last meeting of the Galveston Florists an offer of stock was received from William E. Hall, of Clyde, O. W. J. Ellsworth, of Jessamine, Fla., also renewed his offer of stock. Some more pansy and onion seed came through from Mr. Beaulieu. We received to-day, November 1, from St. Louis a remittance of $92, from the florists there. There now remains to the credit of the fund $263.-90, which will be left there for final distribution. We have spared no pains to get every florist on the loss schedule, which may be considered practically complete. THE GALVESTON FLORISTS,

NEW VARIETIES REGISTERED.

Rose (H. P.) President McKinley.—Saved from a promiscuous lot of seedlings, raised from seed saved from our collection of roses. It is a strong growing variety having large, attractive, fine foliage. It makes strong shoots which are quite spiny, and it is entirely hardy. Its color is deep rose-pink and is quite persistent. Entered by John Charlton & Sons, Rochester, N. Y.

LEONARD BARRON, Secretary.

Horticultural Society of New York.

A regular meeting of the Society will be held in connection with the American Institute Chrysanthemum Show, on November 14, 1900, at the American Institute Rooms, Berkeley Lyceum Building, New York City, at 4 o'clock p. m. The temporary council will also meet on that date and at the same place, 15 minutes earlier.

The society offers silver vases, value $25 and $20, for the best and second 50 blooms of chrysanthemums, respectively, also a silver vase, value $15, for best six varieties, six blooms of each, in connection with the above exhibition.

A carnation seedling with a double calyx was recently found by Mr. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, Queens.

Owing to pressure on our columns through flower show reports, this week, some interesting articles are held over to a future issue, including Mr. S. S. Pennock's paper, read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, and the paper of Mr. W. S. Heffron, read before the Chicago Florists' Club, and others.

The Flower Show Catalogue.

The value of an artistically gotten-up catalogue as an important and necessary adjunct to our flower shows, is not appreciated by exhibition promoters and managers to its fullest extent. In the great majority of cases, the catalogue, or program, is constructed simply to serve a temporary purpose, very much as does the theater or concert program, and its get up is of the most flimsy and uninviting character, quite in consonance with the conception of its supposed transient usefulness. This is all wrong. Properly manipulated, the flower show program can not only be made permanent, attractive, useful and interesting, but also a source of revenue to the exhibition funds, the latter characteristic depending wholly on the former.

There are, of course, some who have grasped the correct mission of the flower show catalogue, and the evidences are not wanting that their forethought has proved remunerative. We have before us one of the neatest pamphlets in this line that has come to our desk this year. It is the program for the fifth annual exhibition of the Bedford Flower Club, to be held in Mount Kisco, N. Y., November 8 and 9, next. This program is well-printed and bound in Italian grey, Boscowen linen, a material that stands plenty of service. A useful article is furnished on the "Care of Plants in the Home," and throughout the well-filled pages of advertisements is interspersed the list of premiums to be awarded, together with numerous illustrations.

A catalogue of this kind, being of handy size, is sure to be retained by every one receiving a copy, instead of meeting the fate of its fleeting purpose confrère, and its profitableness to the society issuing it is apparent. The success which has attended this pamphlet has no doubt been attained after much hard work, but then the reward has been ample.

In connection with this matter, we have often wondered why space has never been provided in flower show programs for the insertion of the names of the winners in the various classes, both with respect to varieties and exhibitors. This is information which many visitors to exhibitions faithfully record on the spot; and to utilize the schedule for such a purpose would add materially to its permanent value, besides furthering, to a marked degree, the interests of the exhibitors themselves.

Field Notes on Sweet Peas.

We acknowledge receipt of a very interesting pamphlet on the subject of sweet peas, from C. C. Morse & Co., Santa Clara, Cal. The firm has the following to say on the subject of classification:

"The most natural classification of the sweet pea is that according to color, and most of the seed catalogues recognize such an arrangement as will put pink shades in one class, for instance, and mauve and blue shades in another and so on, with some disagreement usually as to the class claiming the lighter and more delicate shades.

"Another classification almost as important as color is that of form, by which we mean the size and shape of the standard. There is usually a corresponding variation affecting the wings when the size of the standard is noted, but we confine ourselves to the standard when we mention form.

"For purposes of a satisfactory classification it is necessary to sub-classify form into hooded and open, and to divide each into three sizes—large, medium and small. We can better understand this arrangement by illustrations, and we have chosen the following well-known varieties to represent the several subclasses.

"Hooded Form.—Large, Aurora; medium, Countess of Radnor; small, Blushing Beauty.

"Open Form.—Large, Triumph; medium, Blanche Ferry; small, Crown Princess of Prussia.

"Even the open form varies in distinct shapes and a special shape occurring in a large number of varieties is represented in a standard narrow at the base and indented on the top as illustrated by: Large, Emily Henderson; medium, America; small, Vesuvius.

"These varieties, it must be understood, still come under the class of open form. The preference of either form is largely a matter of personal choice, some preferring the open form and some the hooded. A great majority, however, seem to prefer the large and medium hooded form, especially of those varieties which do not curl at the edges a great deal, or rather those which are most shell shaped."

A classification of varieties by color is also furnished, as well as a complete descriptive list, and some notes on the Cupid and Bush sweet peas, together with a full explanation of the color scheme adopted in the descriptions.

Storage of Carnation Blooms.

The following additional light on this subject is submitted for the information of Mr. Rudd, and others interested:

Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, Pa., says: "It is impossible to name a uniform temperature for nights and the successful growing of carnations with regard to the older sorts. Carnations of the Daybreak type, or blood, will do far better in a temperature of 45 degrees than in one higher. Carnations of the McGowan type will do best in a temperature of 50 or 55 degrees at nights. A little observation will soon disclose the right temperature for the novelties, as they are offered. I have found that, in growing an assortment of carnations, they can be divided into about three classes: those requiring 40 to 45 degrees nights; those requiring 50, and then another class that will do best at anything from 55 to 60 degrees. Ethel Crocker I find gives the best results in a night temperature of about 50 degrees and needs to be cut before the flowers are fully opened; in this way they will keep as long as two weeks, if kept out of ice-boxes. We cut our flowers in the morning, put them into water not too cold and in a partially lighted cellar, with a temperature ranging from 40 to 50 degrees. About 3.30 o'clock they are packed up and shipped, reaching their destination the next morning; and unless the packages happen to get a little too near the steam pipe in the express car, the flowers arrive in strictly first-class shape.

"All of our carnations are, as far as practicable, cut before they are fully developed. This, of course, to some extent interferes with their size; but if they are held out of the ice-boxes they are sure to keep, will develop for the purchaser, and give satisfaction instead of disappointment.

"Packing has a whole lot to do with the condition of cut carnation flowers on arrival, and it is a wonder that many of the carnations shipped reach their destination fit for selling at any price. A little care used, to prevent the flowers bearing on each other, and so that they cannot possibly jostle in the handling of the box, is time well employed. Expressmen are often rushed with work on the arrival of a train, and if the train happens to be a bit late, are not going to handle your box of cut flowers, with its red label, as carefully as it should be handled; so it is best for the shipper to prepare against such contingencies, and pack so that the contents of his boxes can stand a little roughness without injury to the flowers."

John N. May, of Summit, N. J., says: "My experience teaches me that the finest flowers are produced in a night temperature averaging between 52 and 54 degrees, in conjunction with an abundance of pure air on all favorable days. For the store room we prefer an average of 50 degrees, or as near that as we can keep it, with a dry, healthy atmosphere, and find the flowers are much more satisfactory to our customers if kept at least 12 hours in clean water before shipping. Then, if carefully packed, they will travel any reasonable distance, in good condition."

The Market.

We have had very favorable weather this week, and, since election, business seems to have taken a turn for the better. There are no shortages in the flower line, excepting in the higher grades of roses, and these may be said to be not quite equal to the demand, more especially in the white kinds. Of the poorer quality of roses, although the supply has shortened up considerably, there is still enough to go round. Prices may be said to remain practically as they were one week ago, with the possible exception of those on special Bride, which have, in some instances, reached $6 per hundred.

Chrysanthemums are plentiful, and there is a majority of very fine blooms in the market. While fancy prices are rarely recorded, a large portion of the stock brings from $2 to $3 a dozen.

Lily of the valley is not quite so plentiful; yet there are several grades of it on sale, and values may be said to range anywhere from $2 to $4 a 100.

Carnations were thrown upon the market in huge quantities last Saturday. It was quite evident that holding back had been practiced, growers, no doubt, anticipating an extra demand, owing to the big parade. If the flowers had been sent in on Friday good sales might have resulted; as it was, the blooms were too late, as Saturday proved to be a very quiet day, so far as the flower business was concerned. This week carnations are plentiful enough, and move fairly well, though prices do not advance materially.

Cattleyas are about holding their own, little, if any, change being noted since last week. Cypripediums are in the market, and are quoted at 12c. straight.

Violets are doing fairly well; the supply is not so large as might be expected, seeing that the output capacity was almost doubled in some localities; and, while fancy prices are seldom reached, the average will turn out better, probably, than it has before since the season opened.

Jottings.

In the sound money parade last Saturday many paper carnations were used as bouttonieres. It is said that one firm in Brooklyn alone supplied 5,000 of these. The absurd prices quoted by the daily papers for carnations were, no doubt, the cause of paper flowers being used to such an extent.

The New York Florists' Sound Money Club made one of the most striking features in the parade. The club mustered 135 strong. Each man carried a four-foot dahlia stake, with a large yellow chrysanthemum tied on top, and each wore a pink or a red carnation. The Club's splendid showing has been very favorably commented upon by the leading daily papers of the city.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club takes place on Monday evening, the 12th inst. Nomination of officers will take place, and a good social time is promised. The Bowling Club will meet at 3 p. m. on that day, on the alleys at the Arlington, St. Mark's Place.

A chrysanthemum show is advertised to open on the 15th inst. in the Eden Musee under the charge of John Condon of Brooklyn.

Firms Who Are Building.

CAZENOVIA, N. Y.—F. G. Lee is making extensive additions to his greenhouse, including the building of a new vegetable house, equipping the whole with a system of hot water heating.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—Leo. Wellenreiter has purchased a new boiler, and intends making an addition to his greenhouse.

LEOMINSTER, Mass.—Joseph Fuller recently erected a house, 150 x 40 feet, to be devoted to carnations.

YORK CORNER, Me.—W. G. Moulton & Son are making a large addition to their greenhouse.

LYNN, Mass.—Smith & Dolarsky have been obliged to add another greenhouse.

BROCKVILLE, Ont.—R. B. Heather has erected two greenhouses, each 25 x 100 feet. Next season he proposes making further improvements.

STILLWATER, Me.—W. J. Clement will put an addition to his greenhouse, and install a new boiler.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

MENOMINEE, MICH.—The greenhouse and stock of Louis Zechetto have been purchased by F. C. Nowack, who may continue the business.

ATTLEBORO, MASS.—King, the florist, has opened a store at No. 3 Park Street.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—The New Jersey Large Tree Co. has been incorporated to conduct a gardening business. Capital $50,000. O. P. Vreeland, of Jersey City; J. G. Hocke, of Bayonne; J. C. Purdy, of Brooklyn; Wallis, Edwards & Bumstead, attorneys, Jersey City, are the incorporators.

LYNN, MASS.—E. A. Richards has removed his business to larger quarters, located at the corner of Summer and Ashland Streets. He is making a specialty of carnations for the retail trade.

OBITUARY.

Lucius D. Davis.

Lucius D. Davis, one of the prominent citizens of Newport, R. I., died October 30, from inflammatory disease of the brain and spinal cord. He was born at Jerusalem, Yates County, N. Y., in 1825. The deceased was deeply interested in agriculture, horticulture and arboriculture, and his writings on tree growing, plant culture and insect life were widely read. He was the author of several books, among them "Ornamental Shrubs," which was published last year. Mr. Davis was also an active worker in the Newport Horticultural Society. A widow and two daughters survive him.

(225) Fumigating Carnation Houses with Sulphur.—K. Bros.—Fumigation with sulphur will kill both the red spider and the plants, and must not be resorted to. Clear water applied with strong force, through the hose pipe, will keep down red spider.

(226) Rust on Carnations.—A. F. D.—Pick off all the affected leaves, and give the benches a thorough cleaning; then dust the plants with finely sifted air-slacked lime. Let this stay on about a week, then clear it off with a fine spray, and repeat the operation.

(227) Rust on Outdoor Chrysanthemums.—J. L. O'Quinn Co.—The leaves are affected with the chrysanthemum rust. There is no remedy for this trouble, except to pull out every diseased plant and burn it. To burn up every particle of the plants is absolutely necessary, if it is intended to grow chrysanthemums on the same spot another year with success. If this be not done, there will be spores enough left around to again insure the plants being attacked.

(228) Fire Insurance on Greenhouse Property.—What is the average premium per annum paid for fire insurance on greenhouse property? Will companies give policies to cover both the buildings and plants? THEO. ECKARDT.

—Greenhouses are rated at from $1.25 to $2.50 per annum per $100 of valuation. Contents are prohibited by a large majority of companies, and when taken are rated at nearly double the rate charged upon houses. Nearly every department of underwriters fixes a different rate, but $1.25 is the minimum and $2.50 is the maximum. Had the Florists' Mutual Fire Insurance Association been properly supported by the trade the indications were that greenhouse insurance would not have cost more than $1 per annum on the highest classification, with less cost to the better class of risks. Plant insurance was prohibited. If insurance companies do not classify greenhouse risks the rates will eventually become prohibitory, and co-operative insurance will be the only remedy.

The co-operative purchase department of S. A. F. might make a study of this subject with a view to action when the underwriters' rates become so exorbitant as to become prohibitory.

JOHN G. ESLER.

(229). Crawfish Cutting Dam of Lily Pond.—I have recently completed a pond of about 14,000 square feet for water lilies, using an old dam that has served for ice pond. A small branch supplies this pond, and crawfish seem to defy its filling in a most stealthy manner. No traces of the leads can be found on inner side of dam, nor on the outer, in less than 20 feet from the base, where trees, roots, etc., prevent following up the escaping streams by digging on through dam. Long trenches have been dug lengthwise, on top of dam, where the fish were supposed to interrupt the tunnels, and subsequently puddled; but all to no purpose. Is there a crawfish trap in existence, or a means of poisoning or driving away the pests?

Under best conditions, what per cent. of increase are goldfish supposed to make in a year, in ponds?—J. L. C.

—In reply to J. L. C.'s inquiry respecting the incursion of crawfish in his lily pond, the only known remedy is to poison them. Use scrap meat chopped moderately fine, and sprinkled with Paris Green. Lay the scraps near the edge of the water, or in the places where the fish frequent.

Goldfish increase at a very rapid rate under fair conditions, in ponds; but their enemies are so numerous that if the fish are left to take care of themselves not 10 per cent. will develop, or attain maturity.—W. T.

(230) To Grow American Beauty Roses.—I should be much obliged if you could give me a few cultural instructions on the growing of American Beauty roses, as I am not succeeding well with this variety. I am using raised benches, and light soil, with proper proportions of rotted manure and bone meal. The plants are grafted on manetti. I do not seem to get any root action; the shoots are thin and watery, and the plants are much troubled by spot and leaf drop. I keep them thoroughly moist, but never very wet. The house was planted on August 16. Should they not be ready for Christmas?—W. T. T., Brampton, Ont., Can.

—The fact that inquirer is keeping his roses thoroughly moist all the time is the cause of the shoots being watery and of the trouble with black spot. Being planted on the date mentioned, a crop should have been in for Christmas; but as the plants are at this time, it is much to be doubted whether or no a crop can be had at that period. The grower, however, will soon be able to determine what chance there is of a Christmas crop, as the buds that form from the 20th to the 25th of this month can be had in all right for that holiday, provided the plants are treated right. There can be no hard and fast lines set down for the culture of American Beauty roses, whether grafted or otherwise. The operator must study the needs of the plants, and observe the nature of the soil as to its character for retaining moisture, etc. Give the plants water only when the moisture in the soil has become exhausted. This is one of the chief factors in rose growing, and can be learned only by close observation. By waiting until the foliage begins to wilt before watering one will not succeed any better than by keeping the soil soaked all the time; therefore, watch the plants closely, and give water when it is needed. Keep the night temperature at 60 degrees; give air gradually in the morning, as the temperature begins to rise. Do not wait until the thermometer registers 75 or 80 degrees, and then open the house up to the full extent; put on the air gradually, and reduce it in the afternoon in a similar manner. Syringe the plants freely on bright, sunny mornings; never do the syringing late in the day, as the foliage will then not have a chance to dry out before nightfall.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

CRIMSON RAMBLER and other roses that are to be forced for next Spring, and which are yet in the field, should be lifted and potted up during the next few days. Use a well-enriched soil in which to pot them; provide good drainage in the bottom of the pots, and pot firmly, after which a good watering should be given. It is not necessary to do any pruning at this time, except to cut out any weak canes that have been made. After the plants are potted they may be stood outdoors until severe weather comes, when they should be removed to a light shed; or a deep cold frame will answer just as well. As Easter falls on April 7 next year, the roses needed for that date should be put into the greenhouse the first week in January.

AS THE EARLIER CHRYSANTHEMUMS are cut and got out of the way the benches should be cleared and made ready for a successive crop. Plants for stock should first be chosen and boxed; the others pulled out and thrown away. Fork over the soil on the bench, and let it dry out before they are potted, then there will be no danger of their not starting evenly when put into their growing quarters. A place under a bench in a cool house is as good as any for them, for some time yet.

NARCISSUS FOR CHRISTMAS FLOWERING should be brought into the greenhouse and given full light. Put them in a moderately cool house where they can come along gradually, and they make better plants than if forced into flower more hurriedly. Roman hyacinths need not be brought in for a week or ten days yet.

SPIRÆA CLUMPS are arriving now, and it is far better to pot them up immediately than to let them lie in the cases and dry out too much. Immerse the roots in a pail of water for a few seconds before potting.

Schiller, the Florist, Chicago.

The city store and greenhouses owned by Schiller, the florist, on West Madison Street, Chicago, have, the past Summer, been reconstructed in a very clever way, to make the most of the land, 42 x 150 feet. The store and show house, as seen in the engraving, occupy the entire front. In the remodeling, however, the conservatory front is some eight feet higher than the picture shows, with broad plate glass. The dwelling house is back of the store. There is a greenhouse in the rear of the conservatory, 125 feet in length. The house, stables and greenhouses cover every available foot of the land, save one walk, absolutely necessary, to the rear.

Mr. Schiller has a branch store on Jackson Boulevard, and rents another lot of ground, where he stores upward of 100,000 tulips alone, besides other bulbs for forcing. These he arranges to have come in from November until Summer. All this immense stock is necessary mostly for use in his own retail stores. Of general cut flower stock Mr. Schiller is a heavy buyer in the wholesale market. Formerly he was a big and successful grower himself. His right-hand man, whom he values highly, is George Asmus, one of our team bowlers, and formerly of Buffalo.

Steam is used for heating the dwelling, greenhouses, and store, two of Wilks' upright boilers being employed. These have been refitted with coil piping of Schiller's own design. He says everything works like a charm with the least possible attention.

The supports for the benches in the show house are constructed of iron pipe, the benches being a granolithic composition of Schiller's own invention; all like a solid block of stone, and self-supporting, excepting at the edges, thus giving full space underneath to bring forward bulbs, etc. The floors, also, are made of the same material, everything being solid and substantial. Over the center walk in the greenhouse is a bench suspended from end to end, planted with Asparagus Sprengeri—a place where this plant grows freely. To still further husband room, brackets support nice, young otaheite oranges ready for the holidays.

Mr. Schiller has a good stock of palms and other ornamental plants for use in decorating; in fact, an up-to-date retail place.

Herman Schiller was born in Pomerania, Prussia, November 2, 1851, coming to this country in 1881. About this time Mr. Kuske, of Stielow & Kuske, the Bowmanville florists, accidentally shot himself when out hunting. By order of the Probate Court Stielow's half interest in the concern was sold. Herman Schiller, a nephew of Mr. Kuske, purchased same by cablegram. Mr. Schiller proved a good grower, and in those palmy days for the florist, made money easily. Through an affliction of that dread disease, locomotor ataxia, Mr. Schiller has been handicapped for 16 years, yet showing indomitable courage and perseverance almost inconceivable. Fancy a man with paralyzed limbs, driving in all weathers, every day, save Sundays, to Bowmanville and back—a distance of 38 miles. Yet he did this for four years. On account of his affliction Mr. Schiller finally decided to devote his attention to the retail business, as being less trying, and to that end bought out Thomas J. Corbrey's store at 897 West Madison Street, his present place, about eight years ago. Had it not been for the rascality of Otto Mailander, his one-time partner, Schiller's lines would have fallen in pleasanter places; but he has struggled on with his load. He sold out his Bowmanville greenhouses to J. Brod, a few years ago, and now has but the retail interest to look after. Mr. Schiller has six children, the oldest 21, the youngest 12 years of age; and all but the latter now helping in his stores. Ess.

Boston Fern as a Pot Plant.

My method of culture is as follows: First: I plant up a house of young plants from three to four-inch pots, about December 1, using rather stiff loam, one-fourth rotten cow manure, with sprinklings of bone meal. As the plants begin to grow, I tie the fronds of each plant loosely to a light cane stake, so as to keep the leaves off the soil and to let light and air reach the soil between the rows, which makes the young plants, that begin to appear about February, dwarf and stocky, such as this sample runners have here. Such runners, when potted into 2½-inch pots, never wilt or lose a leaf, effecting a saving of six to eight weeks' time over long-drawn-up runners, which, when potted, lose their leaves or must be cut, leaving eight to twelve inches of the fronds.

As the benched stock, or mother plants, as they may be termed, get larger, thin these out by cutting out the largest old fronds, leaving only sufficient fronds to sustain the action in the growth of the runners. After each batch of runners is taken off, retie the old plants, and give them a top dressing of fine, sifted soil, with a good sprinkling of fine bone meal mixed in. Then the bench is in good shape for another crop.

When the runners have made two or three leaves and are about six to ten inches high, they are pulled up with a nice bunch of roots and potted into 2½-inch pots. In three weeks' time they are rooted through, and ready for a shift into 3-inch, and then into 4-inch pots, and so continue, never permitting the growth to become checked. In potting, use the same kind of soil.

METHOD OF POTTING.

When the plants reach a 4-inch pot, and are ready for a shift into 5 or 6-inch, there are a number of air roots extending over the side of the pot. I am always careful of these roots, and in shifting to a larger pot, twine them around the ball about ½-inch under the soil, around the rim. They soon take root and send up young growth, which makes the plant full and bushy, such as the 10-inch size I show here.

You will note the bushy, compact growth of this plant, and I am often asked how they are kept to this shape. In the first place, my benched stock plants are never shaded. The runners, after potting, I shade a little, and after a few days give them the full sun. This, I believe, accounts for the sturdy, compact growth so much desired by buyers of this popular fern.

I am aware that a great many writers and florists advocate and grow these ferns by planting them out in benches, keeping the plants there until the required size is attained, then lifting and potting them. I do not approve of the plan, and claim a first-class plant cannot be produced by this method, because you only have the old mother plant to lift. The cutting away of all the runners leaves nothing but the old plant, which soon becomes hard stemmed and leggy, with no foliage around the top of the pot; unsatisfactory to handle and unsatisfactory to the buyer.

The pot I use is the azalea or half pot, in size from 6 to 12 inches. The plants grow better, throwing out runners and forming young plants much sooner than when planted in the old deep pot. Besides, they look much better, and are not so clumsy to handle, while the retail store men like them much better for counter trade.

I have seen the statement that the country is being overstocked with the Boston fern; the same cry has been often applied to Beauty roses, carnations and cannas. The fact remains, that the demand for this fern was never so strong as to-day, while well-grown, shapely plants, of the best selling sizes, are continually scarce, and often out of stock for weeks at a time.

Import and Export Statistics.

The dutiable imports of plants, shrubs and vines amounted to $318,118 in September, 1900, against $276,852, in the same month of last year. The free imports of seeds amounted to $82,824, against $34,862, the value of the imports of September, 1899. The dutiable imports of seeds amounted to $12,530, against $31,954 in September of the previous year.

The exports of seeds to other countries amounted to $652,086, against $423,822 in the same month of 1899. The countries to which the United states exported seeds were: The United Kingdom, which received shipments to the value of $119,447 in September, 1900, against $154,779, in the same month of 1899. Shipments to France amounted to $47,161, against $13,574 in the same month last year. Germany imported seeds from the United States in September, 1900, to the value of $92,945, against $57,496, in September, 1899; $313,636, in September, 1900, against $73,307 in the corresponding month of 1899. A decrease is noted in the exports of seed this September, to British North America, being $75,286, as against $120,929, in September of last year.

September Photographic Contest.

We present herewith illustration of the Music Pavilion in Forest Park, St. Louis, reproduced from a prize photograph sent by Rudolph Windt, in the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE Photographic Contest for September. Mr. Windt informs us the exposure given was 1-5 second; stop 32. The picture was taken at 1.30 p. m., in sunshine, the camera facing east.

BOSTON FLOWER SHOW.

The annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society opened on Tuesday, November 6, at noon, with both halls well filled. It is the opinion of many that had the show been a week later, a finer exhibition would have resulted. Still it would indeed be hard to improve on the magnificent display presented.

The plants exhibited by John Barr, gardener to Mrs. B. P. Cheney, were undoubtedly the finest chrysanthemum plants ever shown in the hall. Never before was a collection so uniformly fine, or so well timed for exhibition.

Five of the Society's large china vases were filled with magnificent blooms by Col. Charles Pfaff, Mrs. A. W. Spencer Miss E. J. Clark, estate of John Simpkins, James Comley, N. F. Comley, W. J. Clemson and Mrs. E. M. Gill. The four first named received the four awards on Wednesday, but in order to assure the maintenance of a high standard in these vases, the committee makes the four awards each day, and at the close of the show, the exhibitor having the largest number of firsts will be given a silver medal, while the one having the second highest award will receive a bronze medal.

Quite a little competition occurred in the classes under the Josiah Bradlee Fund, for 25 blooms of 25 distinct varieties, and for six vases of six named varieties, 10 blooms in each. In the class for 25 blooms Mrs. B. P. Cheney captured first prize, and Miss E. J. Clark, Col. Charles Pfaff, and James W. White, second, third and fourth prizes, respectively. In the class for six vases of 10 blooms each, some fine flowers were staged. Mrs. A. W. Spencer captured first with Pennsylvania, Mrs. George West, John Shrimpton, Inter-Ocean, Eureka and Viviand-Morel. Mrs. Cheney was second with Mrs. Jerome Jones, John Shrimpton, Lady Hanham, Peter Kay, Inter-Ocean, and Mutual Friend. Norris F. Comley received third award with Vivi-and-Morel, John Shrimpton, Charles Davis, Golden Wedding, Major Bonnaffon, and Mrs. Philips.

Under the Henry A. Gane Memorial Fund, the prizes for 12 blooms of any seedlings originated by the late Henry A. Gane, Mr. Charles D. Sias was first with Mrs. Jerome Jones, and Mrs. A. W. Spencer, second, with the same variety.

For the Society's prizes the greatest competition resulted in the classes for vases of 10 blooms, on long stems, of listed colors, as follows: Pink, red, white, yellow, and "any other color." For 10 pink Robert Laurie won first with Vivi-and-Morel; Mrs. B. P. Cheney, second, with the same variety, and Mrs. A. W. Spencer, third, with Mrs. F. Perrin. For 10 red, Mrs. A. W. Spencer took second, with John Shrimpton, and Charles D. Sias, third, with the same variety. In the class for 10 white, Mrs. A. W. Spencer was first, with Eureka; Robert Laurie, second, with Mme. Carnot, and Miss E. J. Clark, third, with Mrs. J. W. Lewis. Mrs. Spencer won first for 10 yellow, with Modesto; Robert Laurie, second, with Peter Kay, and Col. Chas. Pfaff, third, with the same sort. For 10 "any other color," Miss E. J. Clark captured first with Kate Broomhead; Mrs. B. P. Cheney, second, with the same variety; and Mrs. A. W. Spencer, third, with Chas. Davis.

Among the many other classes the same exhibitors generally divided the prizes.

In the seedling class John N. May, Summit, N. J., was first, for the best seedling red, not yet disseminated, with Brutus, and for the best seedling, any other color, with Yauariva.

In the upper hall in the competition in plants, Mrs. B. P. Cheney had everything her own way with the plants before mentioned. Among the kinds capturing first prize for 12 named plants, distinct varieties were Louis Boehmer, Peter Kay, Lady Isabel, Mutual Friend, The Bard, Kate Broomhead, Red Warrior, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mrs. E. B. Freeman, Mrs. J. G. Breer, and Silver Cloud. In all Mrs. Cheney staged 27 plants, which nearly filled one-half of the hall, so large were they. A lion's share of the prizes for single specimen and three specimen plants was also captured by this grand collection. In the class for three Japanese incurved, the winning varieties were Louis Boehmer, Mrs. H. Weeks and Miss Georgiana Pitcher, and for three reflexed Mrs. J Lewis, Marion Henderson and Mrs. J. G. Breer.

For a single specimen, incurved, Mrs. Cheney won first with Golden Trophy, and third with Mongolian Prince, for a single specimen, reflexed. She also was first with Lady Hanham, and third with Arethusa.

E. S. Converse also had a nice collection of plants arranged on the opposite side of the hall, including many fine varieties.

In the classes for plants grown to one stem and bloom, some fine exhibits were made by Dr. C. G. Weld, E. S. Converse, N. Dumaresq and James Nicol, who divided the prizes.

Mrs. J. L. Gardner showed a group of chrysanthemums arranged for effect, with palms and decorative plants; and W. W. Edgar made a small display of ferns, crotons, and other decorative plants, also showing a few cut blooms of a sport from Ivory chrysanthemum, the flower being not quite so compact in form. The new rose, Queen of Edgely, was well staged. Robert Montgomery exhibited his new rose, Mrs. Oliver Ames, a sport from Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, which showed up in fine form.

R. & J. Farquhar staged their new begonia, Caledonia, "the White Gloire de Lorraine," with a few Lorraines, receiving a first-class certificate of merit.

A. Roper, of Tewksbury, exhibited a lot of very promising seedling carnations, and M. A. Patten had a fine lot of the newer varieties of carnations, including Ethel Crocker, J. Whitcomb Riley, Genevieve Lord, Peru, Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, Morning Glory, Olympia, White Cloud, The Marquis, G. H. Crane, Mrs. G. M. Bradt, and Flora Hill. Dailledouze Bros. exhibited their Prosperity.

J. W. Howard, of Somerville, staged two vases of roses of excellent quality, one of Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, and the other of Bride, Bridesmaid and Golden Gate.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., made a nice display of orchids, comprising cattleyas, dendrobiums, etc., and a handsome Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, which, placed on the wall, showed the heavy sprays of flowers to excellent advantage.

MADISON (N. J.) SHOW.

The fifth annual exhibition of the Morris County Gardeners and Florists' Society opened under most promising auspices in the Assembly Rooms, Madison, on Wednesday, November 7. The cut chrysanthemum classes showed a marked advance upon previous years, and the groups were up to the usual standard. Roses, however, showed a great falling off. The growers say the weather conditions have prevailed against them, but we would like to ask some Madisonians if they are not living upon past traditions. Certainly they have done very little on this occasion to justify Madison as the "Rose City," when eight classes, with substantial prizes offered, only show 25 exhibits in all.

The chrysanthemum men have had their troubles, too, this season, but they made a brave showing. The H. McK. Twombly prize for six varieties, six of each, was won by W. Duckham, gardener to Mr. D. Willis James, of Madison, with a wonderful exhibit. He showed Nellie Pockett, a graceful cream white, T. Carrington, magenta rose, Mrs. H. Weeks, Mons. Chenon de Leche, May flower, and Jennie Falconer. Peter Duff, gardener to Mr. J. Crosby Brown, Orange, N. J., was second, his exhibit having a good vase of Col. Appleton.

The D. Willis James prize, for three sixes, was won by Peter Duff, with Weeks, Morel and Trenor L. Park. A. Herrington was a very close second. The Fair Oaks prize for 12 in three varieties, went to A. Herrington, who showed Merza in superb form, Col. Appleton, H. Hurrell and Morel. G. Bird, Morristown, was first for six yellow, with Pennsylvania; H. L. Hand, gardener to G. Kissel, second, with Bonnaffon. For six pink, H. Hentz, Jr., of Madison, won with Helen Bloodgood, and G. Bird and H. L. Hand, were equal seconds, with Morel and Iora. F. Burnett, of Madison, was first for six white, with Robinson, and J. Anderson, gardener to Mr. P. Farelly, Morristown, second, with fine Frank Hardy. The special prize for 12 blooms of Col. Appleton was won by W. Duckham, with a magnificent dozen.

For a group of chrysanthemums and foliage plants, J. Davies, gardener to Mrs. A. R. Whitney, Morristown, was first, and A. Cover, gardener to Mrs. Julius Catlin, Morristown, second.

In roses L. A. Noe and H. Hentz, Jr., were first and second for 18 Beauty, and H. Hentz, Jr., first, and the only exhibitor for 12 Beauty. Mrs. F. Burnett was first for 18 Bridesmaid, and Righter & Burton, second. H. Hentz, Jr., was first for 18 Bride, with F. Burnett, second. For six Bridesmaid the prizes went to F. Burnett, D. Falconer, and Righter & Barton; and for 6 Bride, to F. Burnett, D. Falconer, and T. Kelly. E. Brant was the only exhibitor of Liberty.

Messrs Robert Craig & Sons, Philadelphia, made a nice exhibit of Queen of Edgely rose, which was much admired.

J. Jones, Convent, was first for a group of foliage plants, W. Charlton Madison, for specimen flowering plant, and G. Bird for specimen chrysanthemum. J. Davies won first for 100 violets.

Vegetables and fruits made a fine display, the two chief exhibitors in vegetables being W. Duckham and J. Davies, who staged superb collections.

Non-competitive exhibits helped to swell the volume of the show, especially noteworthy being an immense group of foliage plants and chrysanthemums, staged by W. Duckham, in his usual excellent manner, and a fine exhibit of flowering and foliage plants, adorning the platform, contributed by A. Herrington. John N. May made a nice exhibit of pompon chrysanthemums in pots, and a new pink chrysanthemum, Yanariva. Dean & Parse, of Summit, staged a nice group of Adiantum Farleyense, and the Dalliedouze Brothers sent 50 nice blooms of carnation Prosperity.

VISITOR.

THE CHICAGO FLOWER SHOW.

The opening of the show on Tuesday, November 6 and the presidential election, came together, a not very favorable combination. As usual, it was a five days' show, beginning on Tuesday and ending Saturday night.

This is the tenth Fall show of the Horticultural Society, without intermission, with varying success, frequently with some unique and supposed attractive feature outside of the flower show proper. This much can be said, however, that, so far, all premiums and expenses have always been met and paid, with usually a respectable balance in the treasury. This has not been accomplished on its merits as a show, by door receipts taken, so much as by wealthy patrons of the Society each year donating liberally towards the premiums offered. The cut bloom class this year was away below the usual Chicago standard, both in quantity and quality exhibited, as well as in the number of exhibits staged. Outside of the stands of 25, 12 and 6 blooms, there were but 200, all told, in the single bloom class. Another important exhibit, absent this year, was that of E. G. Uihlein's orchids, and even the heretofore noted exhibits of 12-inch zonal geraniums, shrank to three entries.

For the second year the expensive Auditorium, with $1,000 a night hall rent, was used.

The main exhibit hall, really the parquet and stage of the theater, 90 x 180 feet, was by far too small of itself, hence the exhibits had to be divided between it, the large entrance foyer, and loggia above.

Last year the cut blooms were exhibited in the entrance foyer; this year they were in the main hall, the foyer being taken up with exhibits of dwarfer plants.

On entering, the groups of geraniums were the first thing to attract attention. Fred Bahr's exhibit of cyclamen, groups of ferns, palms, and other plants of J. C. Vaughan. Anton Then occupied a corner of an alcove with very neat marketable plants of all kinds; the George Wittbold Co., an alcove floral display, including plants and flowers, and a very pretty treatment of a decorated stairway. E. Wienhoeber had a handsome pair of palms—Kentia Forsteriana, and K. Belmoreana. Crabb & Hunter showed the only exhibit of single-stem, pot-grown chrysanthemums.

Among the chrysanthemum plants staged by John Reardon, gardener to Mr. M. A. Ryerson, Golden Gate, Louis Boehmer, The Bard, and May Foster, were well done, and in half standards Mayflower, Sunstone and The Bard. In the 10-inch class, Mrs. Perrin was particularly fine.

Mr. Reardon's zonal scarlet geraniums were composed of the variety S. A. Nutt. George Woodward, gardener to Mr. J. J. Mitchell, had Mme. Bruant.

John Algots, gardener to Mrs. Pullman, staged again his noble group of palms and ferns; a sabal palm, a Caryota urens, a Kentia Belmoreana, and Cybotium princeps being particularly fine.

In J. C. Vaughan's display of 14-inch pot chrysanthemums, Miss Georgiana Pitcher was a perfect specimen; grand G. W. Childs, Marie Louise, and S. T. Murdock, being also worthy of all praise, also, a well-grown plant of the pæony-flowered Descartes, and Chito. There were 10 charming pompons, well grown, and flowered, comprising Blanche Douglas, red; Atlas, blush; Viola, reddish purple; Martha, a beautiful white; Attila, Mrs. Astie, canary, Zenobia and Angelique.

In tall standard chrysanthemums, shown by J. C. Vaughan, Mrs. Murdock, Lenawee, and Oakland, were well grown. In the five-specimen class, pæony-flowered, Mary Stewart, Delicatum, Surprise, Descartes, and Garza, were the cream of the lot. From the same grower, the best five specimens, five varieties, not over 10-inch pots, were John K. Shaw, Beauty of Truro, The Bard, Snow Queen, and Mrs. T. L. Park. Mr. Vaughan also had a glorious group of the pompon Mizpah, the plants ranging from two to three feet across, and two feet in height. R. F. Chandler, Geneva Lake, Wis. (M. Lentschg, gardener), had a well berried coffee tree, a group of 21 well grown crotons, and a batch of cockscombs, a handsome specimen of the pretty shrub-like greenhouse plant Phyllanthus nivosus, surrounded at the base by a fine lot of dwarf decorative plants.

In the chrysanthemum class in collection, one bloom each, not less than 40, the best flowers in J. C. Vaughan's lot were Modesto, Autumn Glory, Mrs. L. Pape, Mrs. Murdock, Mrs. Robinson, Pennsylvania, Chito, Halowarden, and Goldmine. In Nathan Smith & Son's, best 12 blooms, were Col. D. Appleton, Mrs. M. A. Ryerson, Charles Davis, H. J. Weeks, Merza, Mrs. Coombs, and Yellow Carnot.

In Henry Weber & Sons' 12 varieties, one bloom each, were H. W. Longfellow, Mme. Bruant, Yellow Mme. Carnot, and Viviand-Morel. In this exhibitor's collection of not less than 40 varieties, the best were Sunstone, Bonnaffon, Mrs. Constable and Modesto.

J. C. Vaughan had a grafted chrysanthemum with 51 separate grafts, a perfect gem of a plant of which we shall give a full account in our next.

In the floral display, by retail florists, plants, flowers, floral arrangements, and the usual accessories admissible, the judging to be done each day, premiums of $100 and $70, for total highest points at the end of the week, the scheme embraced the decorations of the boxes of the theater. John Mangel and A. Lange each had spaces, the Wittbold Co.'s entry being in the alcove in the foyer. E. Wienhoeber also had a fine decoration of the boxes, not entered for competition. The president of the society is W. H. Chadwick; secretary-treasurer, Willis N. Rudd; superintendent, N. A. Miller. The judges of the general classes were P. O'Mara, president-elect of S. A. F.; John N. May, Summit, N. J., and Emil Buettner, Park Ridge, Ill. Ess.

Forty Perle. First, Bassett & Washburn; second, South Park Floral Company.

MOUNT KISCO (N. Y.) SHOW.

The fifth annual chrysanthemum show of the Bedford Flower Club was held in the Opera House on Thursday and Friday, November 8 and 9. The decorations of the hall, and the staging of the exhibits, were done by the officers and members of the Westchester County Horticultural Society.

The quality of the chrysanthemums shown here was of the highest, although the number of entries was not so large as might have been expected from the liberal prizes that were offered in the schedule.

In the class calling for 75 cut blooms of chrysanthemums, the first prize was won by A. L. Marshall, gardener to Mr. J. B. Dutcher. The varieties were Mrs. Pullman, Nyanza, Lenawee, G. J. Warren, Pres. Nonin, Mme. Carnot, and Mrs. H. Robinson. The second prize went to G. Barton, gardener to Mr. J. T. Layng. A. L. Marshall also captured the first prizes in the four classes, calling for six blooms of white, pink, yellow and any other color, winning with Autumn Glory, Mrs. H. Robinson, Bonnaffon, and Chito, respectively.

The F. R. Pierson prize of $10 for the best 12 blooms of Col. D. Appleton was also won by Mr. Marshall, the second going to J. Barton. The same donor also offered a prize of $5 for the best six blooms of Col. D. Appleton, which Mr. Marshall also secured.

Mr. Howard F. Bailey's prize of a $100 silver cup for the best 24 cut blooms was won by Andrew Grierson. This exhibit was remarkably fine. The winning kinds were Mme. Deis, Swanley Giant, Mrs. Mease, a seedling yellow, Mme. Carnot, Chatsworth, Mrs. T. Carrington, Australian Gold, Col. D. Appleton, Duke of Wellington, H. J. Jones, and Nellie Pockett. W. Duckham was also a competitor in this class, and staged some elegant flowers.

For the best 25 plants in pots, the first premium went to G. Barton. There was another exhibitor in this class who would no doubt have taken first honors, but his exhibit had to be disqualified owing to some of the pots having more than one plant in them.

For the best collection of decorative plants Herbert Spavins was first, with a group of mixed plants, containing palms, crotons, pandanus, etc. The same grower also took the honors for the best plant of Asparagus Sprengerii.

For the best collection of decorative plants, open to amateurs only, J. E. Gorham was the winner. In this group was a plant of Cocos Weddeliana, that for size and gracefulness could hardly be beat.

In the class for the best pair of adiantums, and that for specimen plant, A. L. Marshall took firsts. He was also first for cut blooms of cannas; and received a certificate of merit for a new orange-scarlet canna, named Howard F. Bailey.

For the best 50 blooms of violets, the prize went to Herbert Spavins.

The prize for best single palm, open to amateurs only, was won by William Mason, with a plant of Latania borbonica. For the best six plants, dissimilar, A. L. Marshall won with ficus, nephrolepis, two varieties, kentia, Pandanus Veitchii, and anthurium.

Herbert Spavins took first for best pair of araucarias, and A. L. Marshall was first for best collection of geraniums; William Willis, second.

A. L. Marshall was first for collection of Rex begonias, also for 12 seedling carnations. The best seedling carnation prize went to Herbert Spavins, with A. L. Marshall, second. A special prize was also given to Herbert Spavins for his scarlet carnation, J. W. Bowron. In the class for best collection of cut carnations, there were two competitors, and both were disqualified, for not staging according to schedule.

For the best 12 carnations, one variety, A. L. Marshall, won with General Maceo.

A collection of stuffed birds and animals was an interesting adjunct to the show. Dunne & Co., of New York City, had a display of rustic work, such as lawn settees, vases, etc., also a full line of insecticides and fertilizers.

George H. Hale, of Seabright, N. J., was one of the judges, and, while on the train going to New York, in the evening, after the show, someone stole his overcoat from the rack. The conductor was notified, and promised to do what he could toward recovering the missing garment.

POUGHKEEPSIE (N. Y.) SHOW.

The Dutchess County Horticultural Society held its annual exhibition, November 6, 7 and 8. In some features the show was better, and in others, not so good as last year. The display of cut blooms was not equal to last year's, either in quality or quantity, while the groups of palms and tables of orchids, were better competed for than before. William G. Saltford exhibited a fine table of cypripediums, for which a special prize was awarded.

The first prize for group, 100 square feet of chrysanthemums, was awarded to F. W. Vanderbilt, Hyde Park, gardener, U. G. Agor. For specimen foliage plants, F. W. Vanderbilt, was first; F. R. Newbold, second, gardener, Louis Eisenlohr. For six decorative foliage plants, Archibald Rogers took first, gardener, Samuel Horn; F. W. Vanderbilt, second. For six ferns, F. R. Newbold was first. For table of orchids, W. B. Dinsmore estate was first, the second honors going to Archibald Rogers. For the best table of decorative foliage plants, W. B. Dinsmore estate was first. For specimen Asparagus Sprengerii, Winthrop Sargent, Fishkill Landing, was awarded first prize. For specimen fern, the first honors went to Winthrop Sargent; second, to W. G. Saltford.

The Dieterich prize for 36 blooms, chrysanthemums in six varieties, brought out three competitors, the first honors going to Hon. L. P. Morton (gardener, Thomas Talbot); second, to Archibald Rogers. Among the best blooms of these two exhibits were Mrs. Peabody, Frank Hardy, Minerva, Col. D. Appleton, and Mrs. Perrin. For the best 12 blooms, white, Paul Gindra was awarded first; also first for 12 yellow, and second for 12 pink. The varieties of this exhibitor being Niveus and Modesto. First prize for 12 pink went to F. W. Vanderbilt, with well grown Mrs. Perrin. For 12 blooms any other color, F. W. Vanderbilt was again first. This exhibitor also took the prize for the best bloom in the exhibition, with a very fine flower of G. J. Warren.

The Morton prize, for 24 blooms, chrysanthemums, in four varieties, was won by F. W. Vanderbilt; Archibald Rogers, second. The best blooms in this class were G. J. Warren, Silver Wedding, Mrs. H. Weeks, and Viviand-Morel. For 25 blooms, arranged for effect, Charles De Rham, Cold Spring (gardener, Richard Grigg), was first. For 24 blooms, chrysanthemums, on boards, the first honors went to Winthrop Sargent; second, F. R. Newbold. First for 12 blooms was awarded to Talbut J. Taylor, Cedarhust, (gardener, Alexander McKenzie); second, Winthrop Sargent. The best blooms in these classes were Mons Chenon de Leche, Autumn Glory, T. Carrington, Mme. Carnot, Mme. Henry, Mrs. Mease, Anita de la Agriculture Noville, and Black Hawk. The Sargent prize for 24 blooms, yellow, in six varieties, was won by Archibald Rogers (gardener, Samuel Horn).

The Mills prize for 20 blooms, American Beauty, went to W. B. Dinsmore, estate (gardener, Thomas Emerson); for 12 Bridesmaid roses, Samuel Thorn, Millbrook, took first honors; L. P. Morton, second. For 12 Bride roses, Samuel Thorn was again first; W. G. Saltford, second. For 12, any color first went to W. B. Dinsmore with a very fine lot of Morgan.

For the best collection of carnations the Ward cup first honors went to Brincliff greenhouses, P. M. Pierson manager. The same exhibitor also took first for 36 blooms, carnations, three varieties, and first for 36 blooms carnations, three varieties, red, white and pink; W. G. Saltford being second in both classes.

There was a very keen competition for the Mayor's prize of $25, for 200 violets. The contest for this prize was, like all the violet competitions of former yenrs, exceedingly difficult to decide. The prize was finally awarded to C. F. Bahret, Poughkeepsie.

The Loring prize, for window box for indoor, was won by W. G. Saltford. The Loring prize for window box for outside was won by Winthrop Sargent (gardener, W. G. Gomersall).

The Newbold prizes for best dinner table decorations, for two days, was awarded to Charles de Rham, Cold Spring. The Burnham prize, for the best arranged center piece of chrysanthemums was won by Winthrop Sargent, (gardener, W. G. Gomersall), with a pretty arrangement of Silver Wedding and Davallia fijiensis, and Ampelopsis Veitchii sprays.

The Pierson prize for Col. D. Appleton, chrysanthemum, was awarded to Archibald Rogers, first; Winthrop Sargent, second.

Certificates of merit were given to John N. May, for chrysanthemum Yanariva, and to Clarence Lown, for fine specimens of platycerlums.

F. R. Pierson Co. was highly commended for fine collection of bay trees.

The Annual Visit to Waban.

A party of about fifty accepted the invitation of Edmund M. Wood, to visit the Waban Rose Conservatories at Natick, Mass., on Thursday, to inspect the chrysanthemums, which are so finely grown there. In the party, besides the leading florists of this city, were the following from out of town: D. Frank Lewis, Lawrence; W. P. Craig, Philadelphia, Pa.; Joseph Fuller, Leominister; P. J. Donahue, Lenox; William Appleton, and William J. Pierson, Providence, R. I.; Hermann Thiemann, Manchester, N. H.; Robert Peterson, Portsmouth N. H.; John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J.; Carl Jurgens, Jr., Newport, R. I.; W. H. O'Connor, and E. J. Johnston, Providence, R. I.

The chrysanthemums were in excellent shape. There were no new varieties, but the best of all the newer introductions of recent years were to be seen, noticeable among which were Mrs. Jerome Jones, and its yellow variety, Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Mrs. F. Perrin, Viviand-Morel, Elma, Peter Kay, Mrs. Trenor L. Park and Western King. The rose-houses, too, presented a very good appearance; Bride, Bridemaid, Kaiserin, Beauty, all looked very well. The two new 700-foot houses attracted general attention, and all agreed that they were marvels of construction.

At the Woodland Park Hotel, Auburndale, Mr. Wood provided an excellent dinner, where the speakers called upon complimented him and Mr. Montgomery, on the excellent appearance of the houses and stock. F. J. N.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

October 27.

November 3.

PHILADELPHIA.—John Cook, Baltimore, Md., exhibited a blush white Japanese reflexed variety, scoring 89 points, commercial scale; 87 points, exhibition scale. Name will be furnished next week. Ernest Shrelber, gardener for William L. Elkins, Esq., Elkins, Pa., exhibited an incurved Japanese pink variety, which scored 79 points commercial scale; 76 points, exhibition scale. William Kleinheinz, gardener for P. A. B. Widener, Esq., Ogontz, Pa., exhibited D. Josephine, a bright yellow incurved Japanese, scoring 89 points commercial scale; 88 points exhibition scale.

NEW YORK.—William Kleinheinz exhibited D. Josephine, which scored commercial sale 83 points. John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited a terra cotta red variety, Japanese reflexed, scoring commercial scale 87 points. A very light pink Japanese reflexed, by same exhibitor, scored commercial scale 74 points. Names of these varieties will be furnished next week.

Wyndmoor, near Philadelphia.

Work of Committees.

NEW YORK.—Three varieties were before the committee here on Saturday, November 3. Only one of them was certificated—Brutus,—a Japanese reflexed; color, a terra cotta red, sent in by John N. May, of Summit, N. J. It scored 87 points. This variety will no doubt make a good commercial sort. No. 56, a large yellow flower, was sent by Wm. Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener, Esq., Ogontz, Pa. This is of the Japanese incurved type, of good size, and very pleasing shade. It failed to score the requisite number of points, however, its principal defect being a lack of fullness in the center of the flower; 83 points was the best the judges could do for it.

Yanariva, a very pale pink variety, of the Japanese reflexed type, was also sent in by Mr. May. This was a good sized flower, but it only scored 74 points, losing chiefly on color and foliage.

Philadelphia.

Club Meeting.

The election on Tuesday last was no doubt responsible for the only fair attendance at the Club meeting; but, then, for the past six months, the meetings have not reached the usual size. Surely with a list of over 200 members, at least half of these could come to the monthly meeting. Come next month and hear all the latest facts about new carnations. Albert M. Herr, of Lancaster, will read a paper on this subject.

The club room committee has been instructed to have something in the way of a smoker on Wednesday, November 14, on the occasion of the chrysanthemum show. The object of this is to entertain visitors from a distance. Samuel S. Pennock, read a paper on chrysanthemums from a commission man's standpoint, which was much appreciated. In answer to a question as to how many new chrysanthemums of the past two years were considered good ones, Mr. Pennock replied that not many were good commercially. Among desirable kinds he mentioned Florence Harris, but Wm. K. Harris remarked that not much could be said about this variety, as he had not disseminated it, finding it a paying variety, if only a limited number of blooms were grown. He preferred to keep it himself.

Trade Notes.

Cut flower conditions are a little improved over last week, but there is still too much stock around for the amount of business.

Bulb trade with the seed stores is now very dull.

The Chrysanthemum show promises to be a good one, entries are coming in well, and there are some very fine plants in sight. DAVID RUST.

Pittsburg.

The Market.

Last week's trade was very satisfactory. The many political parades, the founders' day celebration of Carnegie Library, with its reception to the honored guest, Minister Wu of China, and a number of smaller events caused a good demand for flowers, principally chrysanthemums. Stock is in fine shape, chrysanthemums particularly are at their best. Among them is a good dark-colored variety, grown by Fisher, of Castle Shannon, named Dr. Jacquet. Murchie, of Sharon, is also cutting good stock. Roses are rather abundant. Carnations are equal to the demand. Double violets are scarce, with little demand. Prices on all stock remain about the same.

Quite a novel funeral piece was made by Gust & Julius Ludwig, the past week. It represented a weeping willow tree, which stood on a base of flowers. The stem, or trunk, was made of immortelles, and the drooping branches of Asparagus Sprengeri.

E. C. Ludwig's new delivery wagon is a nice piece of work. On either side is a large rose leaf, with his name thereon in gold letters.

No killing frosts up to November 7; the thermometer, however, went as low as 34 degrees. E. C. REINEMAN.

Orange, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held on Wednesday evening last, was devoted chiefly to final preparations for the forthcoming show, on the 14th, when the work of 800 children is expected to form the principal part of the exhibition. Owing to the difficulty of transporting so many plants with incidental breakage, each child is expected to bring his or her plant to the hall on the morning of the event, which, perhaps, unfortunately, is for only one day and night. The mayor of Orange has been asked to grace the occasion. Additional premiums were provided of $1, $2 and $3, to those already offered last June, at the time of distribution, and Dr. J. M. W. Kitchen, in behalf of Mrs. Kitchen, donated a handsomely framed oil painting for the best display of any amateur or private gardener. A. D. Rose gave $2 to be awarded for the largest chrysanthemum bloom exhibited by any private gardener. Joseph A. Manda was made manager of the show.

The question box was again made a feature of the evening, and many slips were dropped in the box. One inquiry, however, baffled all present, viz.: "What remedy is there for the violet disease?"

J. B. D.

Hamilton, Can.

The weather here has been very fine, with the exception of a couple of cold rains and three or four light frosts. Outside flowers hung on for an unusually long time this Fall, the first killing frost being on October 17.

Roses, violets, and carnations are all looking splendid. Chrysanthemums are now very plentiful; few new varieties are seen this year, but the standard kinds are coming in in greater numbers than ever. There is a much larger demand for loose flowers and bunches.

E. G. Brown has a fine bench of chrysanthemums grown on single stems, as also has T. V. Kilvington. By far the greater part of the chrysanthemums produced here are grown and sold in pots, however.

Webster Bros. have shipped a large number of pot-grown roses this Fall, mostly teas.

The seed business of the late Robert Evans is being continued under the old name. The business is managed by Mr. Hogg, lately from Chicago, and connected with the Steele Briggs Seed Co., of Toronto.

Frank C. Bruce, of John A. Bruce & Co., is a candidate for parliamentary honors. Mr. Bruce is a very public-spirited gentleman, and would no doubt do the city as good service in Parliament as he has done in the capacity of citizen.

BEAVER.

Ithaca, N. Y.

Trade here is very good, and the prospects for a large Winter's business are quite bright. In spite of the heat and long drought, carnations made a good growth, and excellent crops may be depended upon.

The Bool Floral Co. have greatly improved their store, by having a fine solid plate glass front put in. H. Y.

Providence, R. I.

Trade Report.

The florists are finding business very quiet this season. There is scarcely any demand for cut flowers, and as the chrysanthemum is the flower just now, these blooms are giving poor satisfaction because of their inferior quality, owing, no doubt, to the unseasonable weather we have been having. We have had but little frost to date, and there is quite some out-door stock to be had yet. Cosmos are now at their best.

There is an abundance of all kinds of stock, particularly of chrysanthemums, but retailers are complaining of poor sales. No doubt, with the coming of cold weather, business will be better. Carnations are improving in quality, some very fine Crocker and Lawson varieties are seen in the store. Olympia, The Marquis, and other new sorts are not much in evidence yet. There are a number of local sports and seedlings that promise well, one of the finest being N. D. Pierce's Beau Ideal, of Daybreak color, large full flowers, beautifully fringed, good stem. It is to be placed on the market the coming Spring.

Violets are plentiful, but not yet quite up to the standard. Most of the growers report them looking well.

Jottings.

T. J. Johnston's store is replete with fine looking palms, ferns, etc., for the Fall trade.

Wakefield, R. I.

James A. Tefft, the florist, has been seriously ill and several times reported dead, but he still lives and gives considerable evidence of getting well again.

Santa Monica, Cal.

A local paper says "E. J. Vawter is making Ocean Park famous as a carnation center. There are a few other growers in that neighborhood who are following suit, and as a consequence Ocean Park carnations have already attained a reputation rivaling those of Redondo."

TARRYTOWN (N. Y.) SHOW.

The second annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, was held in the Music Hall, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. Seventy-eight classes were scheduled, and in almost every one of them there was competition. The body of the hall was not large enough to contain all the exhibits and the stage and front of the balconies were also utilized.

Among the plants and flowers shown, not for competition, was a bunch of the Prosperity carnations from Dailledouze Bros.; a bunch of Governor Roosevelt carnations, from the Cottage Gardens; and many specimen palms, a group of palms and foliage plants, a group of Pandanus Veitchii, vases of Beauty and Morgan roses, and an extensive exhibit of carnations from F. R. Pierson Co., who also staged several vases of chrysanthemums, among which were Thorneda, Intensity, Col. D. Appleton, and several others.

In the section for cut roses there were some very fine exhibits. For the best 12 Liberty, William Turner, gardener to Mr. William Rockefeller, took first; George M. Hay, gardener to J. I. Williams, Esq., being second. For the best 12 Perle, A. A. Taaffe, gardener to Mr. J. O. Matthieson was first and A. Fallon, gardener to Mrs. J. H. Whitehouse, second. For the best 12 Bride, James Nicol, gardener to Mrs. George Lewis, was first, and A. A. Taaffe, second.

James Nicol took first for 12 Bridesmaid, and A. A. Taaffe, second. For the best American Beauty, the first prize went to W. H. Waite, gardener to Mr. S. Untermeyer; William Turner being second.

For the best three dozen blooms of carnations, William Turner was first; George M. Hay, second. William Turner also took first for white carnations, with a fine bunch of White Cloud; first for scarlet, with G. H. Crane (George M. Hay being second), and first for yellow with Gold Nugget.

In the class for 12 pink, Joseph Dexter was first, with some well-grown Ethel Crocker, the second prize going to George M. Hay. In the striped class George M. Hay was first, and William Turner second. For the best three varieties, six blooms each, the winner was Robert Allan, gardener to E. C. Benedict, W. H. Waite taking the second. In the class for seedlings not yet disseminated, Dailledouze Bros. received a certificate of merit for Prosperity.

For the best six blooms of pink chrysanthemums Wm. Nye, gardener to Miss Blanche Potter, took first with Viviand-Morel. For the best 12 distinct varieties, the first went to William Scott, gardener to Mr. Joseph Eastman, the second to Andrew Grierson. The winning varieties were Swanley Giant, Col. D. Appleton, Frank Hardy, Minerva, S. Carrington, Mrs. J. M. Lewis, Golden Wedding, Mme. Carnot, Henry Hurrell, Anita de la Agricultural Noville, G. J. Warren, and Emily Salisbury.

In the class for 25 blooms, distinct varieties, William Scott was also first, Andrew Grierson, second. For the best 36, six varieties, six blooms of each, William Turner was first with Jerome Jones, Col. D. Appleton, Mrs. H. Robinson, O. P. Bassett, Bonnaffon and Viviand-Morel; Andrew Grierson, second, with Australian Gold, Purple Empress, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. James Lewis, Col. D. Appleton and Duke of Wellington.

For a table of decorative plants covering a space of 12 x 3½ feet, the first honors went to W. H. Waite; Howard Nichol, gardener to Mr. J. B. Trevor, second. In the class for six table plants, William Anderson, gardener to Mr. J. M. Constable, Mamaroneck, was the winner, with some nicely grown Pandanus Veitchii, Draceena Godseffiana, and crotons in variety, the second prize going to W. H. Waite.

In the class for best group of chrysanthemums in pots, occupying 100 square feet, first prize was won by Thomas Cockburn, gardener to Mr. Louis Stern; L. A. Martin, gardener to Mrs. C. Worthington, second. The competition between these two was close, both exhibits being very fine.

For the most effectively arranged vase of chrysanthemums, A. A. Taaffe, was first. William Scott second. Autumn foliage was used in both these vases to good effect.

For best specimen palm, W. H. Waite took first, with a fine plant of Kentia Belmoreana. For best bush-grown plant of chrysanthemum, William Turner took first, for white, with a plant of Ivory, first for yellow, with Marion Henderson' first for a plant of any color with G. W. Childs; first, for pink with Viviand-Morel. He also took the first premium in the class for three bush plants with Walter Molatsch, Marion Henderson and Ivory.

For group of palms and foliage plants covering 100 square feet, W. H. Waite was first, and H. Nichol second. For best two pans of selaginella, William Scott was first, Howard Nichol second. For the best pair of Adiantum, other than Farleyense, William Scott was first, James Nichol, second. William Scott, also, was winner in the class for three specimen ferns, the second going to James Nichol. Howard Nichol captured first for best Adiantum Farleyense, and second for specimen fern, the first prize in the latter class being won by William Anderson. For best fancy foliage plant, W. H. Waite was first, William Turner, second.

For best six blooms of crimson chrysanthemums, Andrew Grierson was first with a vase of E. M. Bigelow.

In the class for best six pink chrysanthemums William Nye, gardner to Miss Blanche Potter, was first; and for the best six yellow, William Turner won with Bonnaffon, the second going to William Anderson. William Smith, gardener to Mr. Robert Mallory, was first, for best six white, with Mrs. H. Weeks, William Turner being second.

For the best 12 plants grown to single stem, Joseph Hauworth was first, and William Scott, second. William Turner took first for best standard, with a well-grown plant of G. W. Childs.

For the best 12 blooms of Col. D. Appleton, William Smith was the winner, capturing the Pierson Cup. The second prize went to William Turner. These were two very fine exhibits.

For the best arranged centerpiece for table, John Fursey, Yonkers, N. Y., took first, with a basket of Beauty roses and adiantum, the second going to A. A. Taagge.

The new chrysanthemum, sent by John N. May, and named Yanariva, received a certificate of merit.

For the special prizes offered by John N. May, for the best 25 blooms of Olympia carnation, George M. Hay was first; William Turner, second. The prizes offered by J. H. Troy, for the best 25 carnations, any color, were won by George M. Hay, who took first with G. H. Crane, and William Turner second. The E. G. Asmus prize, for vase of Liberty rose, was captured by William Turner.

Spoffard's prize for Lady Campbell violets, was won by L. A. Martin. William Turner took first for single violets. C. H. Bahret, Poughkeepsie, staged a nice bunch of Marie Louise violets, but not for competition. A bunch of white violets was also shown by Jos. Boschard, gardener of Mr. George E. Dickinson.

In addition to the many exhibits of flowers and plants there was a fine showing of fruit and vegetables.

The judges later reconsidered their decision on the awarding of the Pierson Cup, for the 12 best blooms of Col. D. Appleton. A protest had been made by some of the competitors, and the final rendering, gave the cup to William Anderson, the second prize going to William Smith.

Worcester, Mass.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society was held Wednesday, November 7. It was one of the largest meetings that has been held for a long time, on account of a desire manifested by a few members to elect a new secretary. But the opposition amounted to but little, as the old officers were re-elected as follows: President, O. B. Hadwen; secretary and librarian, A. A. Hixon; treasure, Nathaniel Paine. J.

Trade the past week has been good; chrysanthemums are being received in large quantities, and sell readily. Roses are not as plentiful as heretofore, and are not so much in demand, since the advent of chrysanthemums. The supply of carnations is equal to the call. Violets were never better in this section. They are very abundant, and sell extremely well for this time of year.

Boston fern, rubber plants, and palms have sold well this Fall, and more bulbs were disposed of than ever before.

Nearly 250 florists and nurserymen participated in the Sound Money Parade here on Saturday last. J. F. Coombs was major. A florally decorated banner, and each parader wearing a yellow chrysanthemum, made an impressive appearance.

Market Notes.

There is nothing new to report in the way of business hereabouts. The market is continually well supplied, the receipts being very heavy, compared to the sales. In roses, Beauty are coming in of very good quality, and meet with a little demand, being nearly the only fine rose on the market. Kaiserin and Carnot, too, are of fairly good quality, and do pretty well at from $3 to $6, the latter variety making $8 and $10 for fancy stock. Bride and Bridesmaid are still poor, and move slowly at the prices that have prevailed for some time past. Meteor, Liberty, Morgan and such kinds are small yet, and prices are correspondingly low.

Carnations are plentiful, moving very slowly at $1 per 100, for good grades, extras going at $1.50 and $2 per 100.

Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and include many varieties. Friday and Saturday of last week quite a demand for red chrysanthemums was occasioned by the Harvard-Pennsylvania football game. The finest red varieties brought $3 per dozen, other grades, $1.50 and $2, which latter price is the outside figure for best grade, at present writing; many selling for $1 and $1.50. In pink, yellow, and white kinds, prices range from $3 to $6 per 100 for ordinary grades, finer ones fetching $8 to $12.50, and fancies $16 per 100.

Violets continue very plentiful, and the quality is fairly good. There was a little extra demand for violets, on Saturday, but plenty were on hand to go round. Valley is plentiful and generally of very good quality, but the demand, though fair, is not heavy. Usual Winter prices prevail. Pansies are now coming better, though still short stemmed, selling at 35c. per 100.

Jottings.

It is understood that there are a few interesting election bets to be paid in the near future, among "the boys." More than one bet provides for "dinners for ten," more or less.

The friends of Edmund M. Wood regret his defeat for the Legislature, after a very close balloting.

The Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, with a few friends, made a visit of inspection to the chrysanthemum house of Col. Charles Pfaff, at South Framingham, on Wednesday, October 31. The finest of the old favorite varieties were seen at their best, and the newer ones also showed a high standard of cultivation, reflecting credit on the gardener, George Melvin. Among the newer sorts noticed were: Mrs. J. Lewis, white; Col. Appleton and Phœbus, yellow; J. P. Verlot and Lady Isabel, pink; Hodgson and Mrs. E. M. Bigelow, red.

Colonel and Mrs. Pfaff lavishly entertained the party.

On Thursday the Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of Mrs. A. W. Spencer at South Framingham, where Alex Mackay is head gardener. At this estate, as well as others visited by the committee, the chrysanthemums were developed to a high degree of cultivation, and it will be a difficult matter for the committee to make its awards. Over sixty varieties were grown by Mr. Mackay, including many fine sorts, noticeable among which were Mrs. Jerome Jones, Frank Hardy, Inter-Ocean, Silver Wedding, Eureka, Maud Dean, Viviand-Morel, Autumn Glory, Pennsylvania, Modesto, Leonidas and John Shrimpton. Mrs. Spencer entertained the party at her fine residence.

At Horticultural Hall on Saturday, October 27, M. H. Walsh showed his new hybrid tea rose "Flush o'Dawn," a light pink, changing to white, resembling President Carnot somewhat, but more double.

The Windmill High-Low-Jack Club, comprising the party which has been so often entertained by Edward Hatch at his cottage, "The Windmill," at Wenham Mass., tendered to Mr. Hatch a dinner at the Quincy House, on Thursday of last week. Fred R. Mathison was chairman, and had the arrangements in hand, which were carried out very successfully. A very pleasant evening was spent.

Trade News.

Business for the past week has shown some improvement over last year at the same time; we have handled many more flowers, and sold them at cheaper prices. Warm weather has been the cause of this. Chrysanthemums have lost none of their prestige, and at this season of the year nothing will take their place. Robinson is by far the best of all chrysanthemums for general business, and it sells for most money. Not only that, but it is more profitable for the grower, as it can be cut when half open, and still commands a good price. It is also a variety that lasts all through the season.

Chrysanthemums at Theodore Bock's.

Friday afternoon the writer visited the establishment of Theodore Bock to view his improvements, and likewise his chrysanthemums. In his collection I found such varieties as J. K. Shaw, pink, which is very fine for early; Georgiana Pitcher, yellow; Xeno, pink, also good; Mrs. Bassett, a sport from Robinson, lemon yellow, and a good one; Walter Molatsch, yellow and early, a very fine sort; R. Hooper Pearson, a new English sort, of a deeper yellow color than Golden Wedding, fine in foliage, growing three to four feet in height. The latter I consider the finest of all the yellows. H. J. Jones is an English production, red, and not unlike Fisher's Torch. It looks as though it would be all right when fully developed. Pluma is a hairy variety, and in its class is good, but there is not much call for this kind of a chrysanthemum. Goldmine, as its name implies, is yellow, and there is a place for it. Arab is a seedling of Mr. Bock's, bronze in color, and for a bronze is all right. The foliage is good, the plant growing to a height of about four feet.

Mr. Bock grows the older varieties as well as the new ones, and he sells all he grows right at home for $3 per dozen.

He has lately made many improvements in his place, having erected a new greenhouse 125 x 25 feet. This he has planted to carnations. In front of this house, and facing the street, is his office and sales room. This is a building 12 x 25 feet, of pressed brick, with glass front, and fine show windows. The offices is handsomely furnished in black oak, including desk, chairs, counter, and ice-box.

Mr. Bock extends an invitation to all his friends to come and see him.

At this writing, November 5, on account of All Souls' Day, the ice-boxes of the wholesalers are cleaned out. This will now give us a chance to start with clean, fresh stock, and, as many flowers are off crop, the market will stiffen up.

The residence of Sherman Thomas, florist, near Fort Thomas, was recently burglarized. A gold watch, pair of bracelets, ring, necklace and several minor articles being taken.

E. G. GILLETT.

Kansas City, Mo.

October weather in this city has been remarkably clear and warm, and with the abundance of good stock produced, the numerous wedding and party decorations have been handled in A No. 1 shape. The weather is too warm for the chrysanthemums, nevertheless some good ones are to be had at $4 per dozen. Beauty roses fetch $3 to $5.

H. J. Millatt has opened a retail store at 406 East Ninth Street, where he hopes to catch the east side business.

James Hayes, of Topeka, Kan., A. Newell and Samuel Murray spent a day this week inspecting the large establishment of George M. Kellogg, at Pleasant Hill, Mo. Mr. Murray will give a chrysanthemum show at his spacious Broadway conservatory, about November 10. A splendid lot of specimen plants will be seen.

Trade Still Bad.

There is no change for the better in sight as yet. Last week was a record breaker all along the line. For this condition the long period of hot weather was in part responsible, its harmful effects being noticeable in roses and chrysanthemums particularly. Then, the demand generally seems away below the average for the time of year, the best retail dealers buying very sparingly.

The rose glut is away beyond all precedent, with short supplies of really fine stock. When at the end of October roses are sold on the streets at 5c. per dozen, there is something wrong somewhere.

Chrysanthemums, from the effects of the heat, come imperfect. In large shipments it is often hard to select a few dozen without a flaw. A limited number of Col. D. Appleton have reached $5 to $6 per dozen. The very best of the others have sold at $2 to $3. Ivory is coming is as good as any; even the old favorite, Bonnaffon, seems in trouble. Some good Viviand-Morel are visible. Other kinds in quantity are Mrs. Murdock, Maud Dean, Mrs. Perrin, Golden Wedding, Mrs. Jerome Jones, the Robinsons, Wanamaker, Mayflower, Charles Davis, with some good Moravia, the latter from Indiana.

On Monday of this week, with cooler weather, the quantity of stock was much diminished, but there has been no improvement in quality.

Evea carnations are hardly up to the mark. Last year we had touched $4 per 100 for extras, but the value does not go above $2 this year. Usually show week boosts prices a little, and we hope, with election over, that things will mend.

Chrysanthemum plants are now around, but like everything else, sales of them are declared poor, so far.

Club Meeting.

A well-attended meeting of the club was held the first Friday in November, when retiring President Hartshorne made a few timely remarks, in introducing his successor, President McAdams asked the aid of all members the coming year to make the club the success it ought to be. Charles Grabey and Charles A. Johnson were elected members. The regular annual banquet to visiting florists, it was announced, would take place on Thursday evening, November 8, in the banquet hall of the Auditorium Hotel.

J. S. Wilson, of Vaughan's greenhouses, at Western Springs, read a paper on the Boston fern as a pot plant. He illustrated his remarks by a noble specimen, grown in a 10-inch half pot, and others. A paper was also read by Walter S. Heffron, manager of the cut flower department of McKellar & Winterson, on "How to Ship Cut Flowers to Market." This was a very thoughtful paper, and was well received. Both essayists were tendered the thanks of the meeting.

The treasurer's report showed a balance in the treasury. The sum of $50 was appropriated for the purchase of tickets for the use of members to the flower show. The president appointed Messrs. Hauswirth, Amling and Wienhoeber, a finance committee.

A communication was read from J. D. Pruessner, Galveston, Texas, acknowledging receipt of the Chicago Florist Club's donation, to the flood sufferers.

Round About.

John R. Fotheringham, of F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., was in the city this week. P. O'Mara, one of the show judges, arrived on Monday morning, having come by way of St. Louis, where he attended the show banquet.

M. Olson, several years with E. H. Hunt, is now with J. A. Budlong, whose increasing trade makes additional help necessary. J. N. Jacobsen, formerly partner of Fred Hills, of Maywood, but later of Denver, Col., is again in this city.

A. Dimmock, of St. Albans, England, was also in town the past week.

Harrisburg, Pa.

The weather here continues very mild; no killing frosts yet, and the gardens are gay with the blooms of chrysanthemums, geraniums, cannas, etc. Business is remarkably good. Of course, chrysanthemums have first call in cut flowers, although carnations sell very well also.

Grace, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Macklin, of the Melrose Floral Co., was married on November 1, to H. Robinson, a prominent lawyer of Denver, Col.

Trade News.

The market is still unsettled. Chrysanthemums are the only flowers that sell and they seem to be rather an open-market-flower than a store flower. Prices average low. Among the novelties Mr. Cook's seedling deserves mention. Of roses and carnations there is a surplus everywhere.

As a whole, the retail trade has not developed up to expectations. Politics and warm weather may be the reasons.

An Economical Park Board.

The Park Board has again inaugurated a few changes in accordance with their economy policy. The district superintendents have been discharged, their offices being abolished for good. The four park superintendents have been given charge of all the city squares. Nobody doubts the good intentions of the gentlemen constituting the board, but the expediency of their policy seems at best questionable, for every practical gardener must fear the bad effects of frequent alterations, such as the city's park department has experienced. One of the main faults is undoubtedly in curtailing the wages. The city is building new propagating houses in all the parks, and the Park Board intends to raise all the bedding plants required, nevertheless they are reducing the wages and the superintendents have to content themselves with a lot of laboring men to do the work.

Greenhouse Work.

This work seems to be well in hand in the commercial places. Mr. Walter is still waiting for his new boiler, and had to make emergency arrangements for the frosty nights, which may now be expected at any time. Roses are looking fine in nearly all the houses about here. Migonette is scarce, the Summer having been too hot and dry. Carnations are, in many instances, disappointing. A few large lots, which have been bought from the West, are a dire failure. Your correspondent saw some of the shipments arrive and cannot but regret the absolute lack of the least attention to proper packing. But even home-grown plants are suffering from stem rot in different places. It cannot be too much recommended in this connection, that only from the very best and healthiest plants should cuttings be taken. T. E.

Syracuse, N. Y.

All outside flowers are killed and the florists are feeling the effects in an increasing demand. The Marquis carnation has been a great favorite with Society people. H. Y.

St. Louis.

The Market.

Judging from the reports of the wholesale men, business must be pretty fair; they say stock is nicely used up in almost everything. There is no shortage and no great quantity left over. Roses have shortened up in supply to a very marked degree, and the present receipts are of rather poor quality; being the last of the crop, the flowers are short and weak-stemmed. The poorest quality bring about 2c.; better grades, 4c. to 5c. Beauty is in short supply, selling at about 15c. for medium grades.

Carnations are fully up to the demand at from $5.00 per 1,000 in large lots to, for a few, as high as 2c. Chrysanthemums so far have gone right well and still bring fair prices; good ones realizing 15c.; medium grades, 10c. Smilax and valley are at present rather slow.

Annual Shaw Banquet.

This very pleasant event took place on the night of the 3d, at the dining hall of the Mercantile Club, and was attended by one hundred and ten nurserymen, florists, market gardeners and invited guests. Among the florists were President-elect S. A. F. Patrick O'Mara, of New York, and William Scott, of Buffalo; also Ex-Governor D. R. Francis, Norman J. Colman, former Secretary of Agriculture; J. C. Birge, J. C. Smith and Geo. E. Leighton, of St. Louis; Professor Trelease, Director of the Garden, acted as toastmaster. Mr. O'Mara responded for the Society of American Florists, and in a splendidly-worded and humorous speech told of the growth and importance of the society, from its inception to the present day, not forgetting to pay tribute to the trade press, which, he said, was an important factor in the success of the society, and was now a necessity for the welfare of both the trade and the society. He spoke eloquently of our common benefactor, Henry Shaw, and the monument he left to St. Louis and the country in the Missouri Botanical Garden, also of the hospitality of the people of St. Louis.

"The Man With a Home" was responded to by J. C. Birge, of St. Louis, in a graceful and touching manner. He portrayed the importance of the adornment of a home by means of the beautiful in flowers and trees. J. C. Smith, formerly first assistant at the Garden, now in charge of the seed and plant importations at Washington, D. C., was next on the programme, his subject being "The Man from the Garden." He told of the benefits that were derived from an education in the lines taught at the Garden, and of some of the graduates who had since acquired fame in the field of horticulture.

J. J. Beneke followed on "The St. Louis Chrysanthemum Show." In his remarks he poured hot shot into the local florists who not only failed in their duty in helping sustain the show, but who in every way worked against it, and predicted that the coming exhibition, with a pull together, would be a success.

William Scott, in a clear and witty address, gave us full particulars of what had been done in horticulture at the Pan-American Exposition. Judging from his description, the fact is, as he insists it should be, that horticulture and kindred displays go to make up the principal features of these exhibitions. Buffalo, he said, will eclipse anything of the kind ever attempted before. It was quite evident that Mr. Scott's remarks were fully appreciated by those present, as we are on the eve of a like exhibition and desire to learn.

A. Warner had a paper prepared, which was read by his son, the topic being "Missouri at the Pan-American Exposition." Ex-Governor Francis spoke about our World's Fair, after which the company drank to the memory of Henry Shaw and left for home, having spent one of the most pleasant evenings since these dinners were first given. COL. D. APPLETON

This variety, which we introduced last spring, has proved to be a prize-winner in every respect, and is undoubtedly the finest yellow chrysanthemum grown to-day, either for commercial purposes or for exhibition. If you failed to secure a stock of it last spring, let us book your order at once, while you think of it, for a stock of this for next year. This is not a variety that can be grown only by experts, but it is one of the healthiest growers and the most easily grown of all the varieties. It is a wonderfully healthy grower, with the most perfect foliage, and can be grown to perfection under ordinary culture. It is as easily grown as any variety that we know of. It has a magnificent flower of large size, and meets all the requirements of a commercial and exhibition sort. Let us book your order at once for Spring delivery. We can furnish fine plants of the true stock. Plants ready February 1st, 1901.

PRICE, $8.00 PER 100

LILY OF THE VALLEY

Has now arrived, and we have filled all orders in hand, and have a small surplus. Advices from Europe are to the effect that the crop runs very much shorter than expected, and that prices have advanced, and it is doubtful if all orders will be filled in full. If you have not already secured your supplies, we would advise you to place your order without delay.

We offer extra quality three-year-old German Pips, first-class quality. $22.50 per case, 2500 pips; in smaller quantities, $10.00 per 1000.

Our PIERSON'S PREMIER is a fine selected Valley for those who want a superior article at a moderate price. This is a grade that we sell largely. $27.50 per case, 2500 pips; in smaller quantities, $12.50 per 1000.

PIERSON'S PERFECTION, an extra selected grade for those who desire the very finest Valley obtainable, and a grade that should be used for very early forcing. No better Valley can be supplied than this grade. It will produce the largest spikes, with the greatest number of bells, and will give the very largest percentage of first-class flowers; can be forced earlier than any other quality. $32.50 per case, 2500 pips; in smaller quantities, $15.00 per 1000.

We are also in receipt of our importations of

SPIRÆA

Stock is in fine shape. We have a small surplus, and offer it as long as unsold at the following prices:—Extra fine, strong clumps, especially grown for forcing — JAPONICA, $8.00 per case, 250 clumps; less quantities, $4.00 per 100. COMPACTA MULTIFLORA, $9.00 per case, 250 clumps; less quantities, $4.50 per 100. ASTILBOIDES FLORIBUNDA, $9.00 per case, 250 clumps; less quantities, $4.50 per 100.

New York.—Lily of the valley pips are now arriving. Stock is reported short across the water. Vaughan's seed store reports large, early sales of XXX holly, bouquet green, and other Christmas goods.

European Notes.

The great value of a showery June has a perfect exemplification in the seeds we are now engaged in cleaning. The development of the ovary is almost entirely dependent upon a fair supply of heat and moisture combined. Without either of these essentials, the seed pod will be found to contain a large percentage of imperfectly developed seeds, which the fan or winnowing machine will take out in the dressing. The loss occasioned in this manner fully accounts for the excessive reductions with which we are confronted, and which some people who have no practical knowledge of seed growing find it difficult to understand. All our crops, from turnip to Windsor beans, are affected in the same manner; and the report reaches us from your side that peas are in the same condition with your growers. The waste is simply alarming, and even at the high prices that purchasers are willing to pay, will not leave any profit to the grower.

The shortage on broad beans is very serious, and is giving very great trouble to some who "counted their chickens before they were hatched." All samples are very small, and in many instances are discolored by the late rains.

EUROPEAN SEEDS.

Botanical Specimens.—Following is a recent decision of the general appraisers: "Evergreen seedlings," grapevines, are specimens of botany or botanical specimens, and, when imported in pursuance of the purpose of conducting such experiments in forestry as may "be deemed most advantageous to the interests of a state and the advancement of the science of forestry generally," by developing them in connection and comparison with others, and with a view to making a collection of this and various similar vines for a scientific and public collection by a public institution, such as the Forestry College of Cornell University, are entitled to free entry under paragraph 666, act of July 24, 1897, providing free entry for "Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for scientific public collections, and not for sale."

Des Moines, Ia.

The employees from the various departments of the downtown business of the Iowa Seed Company attended a Hallowe'en social given by the greenhouse force of the company employed at the greenhouses near Greenwood Park on Wednesday evening. The large potting rooms where the guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Rennison and Mr. and Mrs. Kurtzweil were a veritable fairy land. Later in the evening refreshments were served. Many of the guests were dressed in unique costumes, which added much merriment to the occasion.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

The past week saw the disappearance of the greenhouse structures of John Kinnier, Germantown, Pa., florist and landscape gardener. Mr. Kinnier gave up the florist department of his business some years ago, leasing the premises to another, but conducted the landscape gardening division continuously. The greenhouses were old and unfit for the business of a florist as now conducted, so the structures have been demolished, and the ground cleared for other purposes. A famous old rose bush was in one of the houses, which Mr. Kinnier thought so much of, that he sought and found a purchaser for it. It was a Niphetos grafted on a Banksia. From this rose bush he was accustomed to cut thousands of buds annually. Mr. Kinnier has practically retired from landscape gardening, having, it is believed by his friends, a comfortable competence, which all that know him agree he has well deserved.

The Last Shrub to Flower.—There are many aspirants for the place of being the first shrub to flower in Spring. Daphne mezereum and Lonicera fragrantissima are pretty well up in the front, and there are others close by. But there are none who would wish to dispute with the witch hazel the position of being the last of the season. This shrub is Hamamelis virginica, native of the Middle States, and valued for its medicinal qualities, as well as for its utility as a shrub. Its flowering period is through October and early November, the blossoms lasting well into the latter month if freezing weather holds off, as it is doing this year. The flowers of this shrub are of a light yellow, not over showy, but when the leaves fall, as they usually do before the blooms fade, it is far from being an unattractive shrub. The seed pods mature the following Summer. When they burst, the shiny black seeds are propelled many feet. The Hamamelis japonica, from Japan, flowers in Spring, instead of in the Autumn, and it is a desirable species.

Japanese Blood-Leaved Maple.—The Japanese blood-leaved maple, which doubtless reaches tree size in its native country, makes but a large spreading shrub here. Because of its blood-red foliage in Spring, it is among the most popular of shrubs for early Spring effect. The unfolding leaves display a good red color, but as the leaves develop, so do the rich colorings, until, when fully expanded and of full size, there is a blaze of deep red. At this stage of development its brilliant display attracts everyone, and those not fortunate enough to possess a plant hasten to the nearest florist or nurseryman in search of what they want. Unless the plants are in pots, the would-be customer has to leave his order for Autumn filling. For some years past some nurserymen have been preparing for business by potting a number of these blood-leaved maples in the Fall. Young plants of good shape and of about 18 inches in height make desirable subjects. These will go into eight to ten-inch pots. It is much better to secure and pot them in the Fall, as the plants become settled by the time Spring comes. There is no need to force them. Any cold pit or other structure will do for the plants, so long as they do not freeze, to crack the pots. One or two plants may be advanced into leaf, to become a "show card" for the others. A plant or two set out on one's own ground, that passersby may see them, will be sure to attract attention. There are perhaps a dozen varieties of Japanese maple having in mind A. polymorphum, but none is the equal of the one spoken of—the blood-leaved, or A. polymorphum atropurpureum, as it is called. Perhaps the next best are the A. pinnatæfolium and its variety atropurpureum. These have finely divided leaves and are possessed of a fairly vigorous habit, which all kinds do not seem to have. The A. atropurpureum is also a blood-leaved variety, but the leaves being so finely divided the color is not so effective as in the case of the common blood-leaved sort. But this, the cut-leaved one, is a most desirable variety, and possessing as it does a somewhat drooping habit, it is finding a place in cemetery lots, a position it fills to great advantage. These three kinds are really the best of all, both for beauty, and for selling purposes.

Green-leaved Trees of Autumn.—The fact that almost all European trees hold their leaves green to the very last days of Autumn, is of importance to those who have the planting of grounds. The trees and shrubs of our own country change to beautiful colors, almost without exception. When amid a group of these an English beech, oak, or some other European tree, is set, its deep green color is a welcome addition, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the whole. Among the number of these green-leaved trees, there comes to mind as I write, the English beech, elm, oak and ash, Turkey oak, Hungarian oak, Norway maple, European field maple, sycamore maple, white birch, elder and alder. At the present writing all our native trees are changing, some are losing their leaves, but none of the European sorts gives evidence of much change. The Norway maple is showing a little yellow, but hardly noticeable alongside the sugar maple, which is now attired in bronze and yellow. The Turkey oak is a particularly beautiful tree, both for the reasons already given and for its handsome outline. The use of these green-leaved Autumn trees is well worthy the attention of planters. Nurserymen say customers often inquire for these trees.

Clematis paniculata.—Besides those grown in the field, nurserymen are adopting the plan of growing many vines and other plants in pots. Not only does this afford the chance to dispose of the plants in Summer, when there is often a quiet demand for them, but at all times the pot plant is much more sure to grow. The honeysuckle, for instance, if it has a heavy top, is much the better for a heavy pruning if dug from the ground. The pot plant needs no cutting back. Clematis paniculata is now well known, and known, too, as one of the most useful of the genera. The large-flowered kinds will always be in demand for their lovely blooms, but when a vine for shading is required, we turn from them to the division so well represented by C. paniculata. The latter may be termed a much improved C. flammula. For years the last named was the only kind that could be sold as sweet-scented. It is sweet scented, but it has not the bushy growth, lustrous leaves and profusion of flowers that characterize C. paniculata. More than one person has remarked to me that there is not the perfume to C. paniculata flowers that those of C. flammula possess. I am not prepared to decide this. I do know that C. paniculata is so nicely scented, that if a plant of it is in bloom in a garden near a roadside, the sweet odor can be detected by one driving by. C. flammula is not so surprisingly sweet. I have not a plant of flowering size now, but my recollection of a large one, which for many years covered a trellis by the side of the dwelling, is that the flowers are no more odoriferous than are those of C. paniculata. C. paniculata is a wonderful seller, as it really excels all the others of the small-flowered section. It grows readily from seed, sown in boxes in mid-Winter, and kept under the greenhouse stage till Spring, then brought up to the bench. Seedlings are better grown in pots the first year, then planted out, except those intended to be grown permanently in pots. C. paniculata flowers late in Summer, after C. flammula, C. virginiana and C. vitalba, which are of somewhat similar character. In addition to the fine display its fleecy white flowers make, the misty looking heads of seeds which follow are far from being unattractive. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Burn Fruit Trees to Destroy Scale.—In the New York Times of Saturday last appears the following item from Atlanta, Ga.: "The Department of Entomology burned 30,000 trees from a Nashville nursery yesterday, which, it is alleged, were infected with San José scale. State Entomologist Scott left this morning for Woodbury to destroy 20,000 more trees which he had collected there. The trees, it is said, have been shipped into the state without the proper certificate."

Pruning Evergreen Hedges.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

In your issue of the 3rd inst. I notice Mr. Ouwerkerk's article on "Pruning Evergreen Hedges," in which he says he considers my notes on the subject in a previous issue, "wide of the mark." Reading Mr. Ouwerkerk's article through carefully, and finding that on points I had touched upon, he quite agreed with me, I surmised that in my hurry I might have written something I did not mean to be so "wide of the mark." Turning to my own notes, I fail to find any words not intended. A perusal of my former article will show my points to be as follows:

1. Not to defer pruning until the approach of cold weather.

2. Clipping hedges at that time exposes the inner and weaker shoots, and sudden exposure injures them.

3. Prune twice a year, once in Spring, and again in mid-Summer.

4. Do not prune evergreens below the live foliage.

As Mr. Ouwerkerk endorses all these points in his article, excepting that he would omit arbor-vitæ from the list of evergreen hedge plants, which should not be pruned below the live foliage, it follows that if one of us is "wide of the mark," both must be. To say, as he does, that my notes are wide of the mark, and yet endorse them, is certainly paradoxical. JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Greenhouse Building at Montreal.

The large amount of added new commercial glass around this locality this year is now nearing completion, and an estimate of its possibilities can now be made. In general appearance, as well as in size and equipment, Mr. Bain takes the lead. One house, 200 x 30 x 25 feet high, is most certainly the finest example of greenhouse building in this neighborhood. This house will be used for decorative stock; this year one-half is planted with smilax, in splendid condition, the balance being filled with chrysanthemums. Two smaller houses, each 200 x 20 feet, built on the ridge and furrow plan, without partitions, are filled with roses, which despite late planting, are in a very healthy condition. A three-foot pane of glass in the outer walls of all these houses adds greatly to their appearance. Heat will be supplied by two steam boilers. The condensed steam will all drain into a central reservoir, and will be returned to the boiler by a handy little pump working at a steam pressure of four pounds. Much annoyance has been caused by the non-delivery of the ventilating apparatus, for which the order was placed with the representative of a firm across the border in the early Summer.

Bertie Graves has just about finished this year's section, consisting of three houses, each 120 x 20 feet. These houses are built on the ridge and furrow plan, but with dividing walls. The heating apparatus consists of two Daisy hot water heaters, the piping used being 2-inch malleable iron. Two of the houses are planted with carnations, which are in the very best condition. One house filled with America and Crane is a revelation. A bench of Jubilee are also good, but cannot compare with the first-named varieties. The third house is this year filled with pot plants, but will in future be planted with roses. The soil, a very rich fibrous loam, in the immediate vicinity, can be obtained in unlimited quantities. To this excellent material Mr. Graves attributes his success with carnations, and anticipates even greater success with roses. He has erected an excellent dwelling in connection with the greenhouses.

James McKenna at Côte des Neiges, has, with the exception of the ventilating apparatus, which was ordered from the same parties as Mr. Bain's, completed the first two of his new range of houses. These, too, are built on the ridge and furrow plan, and are undivided. The first house facing south has the short span in that direction; this span is pitched at a very high angle. Mr. McKenna expects that this will prevent any lodgment of snow during the Winter. These houses are each 141 x 16 feet. More of the same size will be added next year. The old place, on the roadside, will also be shifted next year to the rear of the new range, and the houses utilized for growing bedding plants for which Mr. McKenna has a very large demand. The new houses will be heated by hot water, two No. 16 Buffalo heaters working at a water pressure of 25 pounds, are already installed, and are doing excellent service. The houses are planted with carnations and chrysanthemums; considering the lateness of planting these look fine.

Logan Girdwood, the violet expert, is still very busy with the first section of his new place at Kensington, on the upper Lachine road. Mr. Girdwood has had considerable difficulty in procuring workmen, or his place would have been completed some time ago. The houses under construction are: One rose house 117 x 18 feet, three violet houses, each 117 x 10 feet; one connection house across the end, 100 x 12 feet. Next year three additional violet houses will be built. Mr. Girdwood's violets, at present out in the field, are a splendidly healthy lot of plants. They are a mass of fine flowers. The morning of my visit 20 bunches had been picked off three rows, 10 feet long, and little difference could be seen, even then, from their neighbors. Mr. Girdwood could give no explanation of his exceptional success with this specialty. He takes his stock in early Spring from both the cuttings and divisions, but will in future use cuttings exclusively. He thinks divisions are more likely to make runners than flowers. He plants them out in the field the end of June, and will in future lift and plant inside the middle of September. The varieties grown are largely Marie Louise and Imperial, with a good quantity of Lady Campbell, which variety is not profitable; also princess of Wales, California, La France and Luzonne with Admiral Avellan, a single of a reddish color. Two coil boilers supply the steam heat deccessary. B.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

ROSES.—The main feature in caring for these plants at this season of the year is to keep them clean, and to exercise care in the watering of them. To keep the fly down, there is no better plan than to have chicken wire hung along the sides of the benches, and doubled up so as to form a bag, as it were, in which can be placed fresh tobacco stems. This receptacle can be hung just inside the posts, where it is out of the way. Keeping close watch on the ventilating of the houses, and having a dab of sulphur painted here and there on the heating pipes, will keep mildew in check. Buds that form this week will make available blooms for the holidays, and, if any extra forcing is likely to be needed to have a good crop at that period, it is better to commence now, and do the forcing gradually, as running the houses at a high temperature for just a few days before Christmas is sure to result in a weak growth afterwards.

CYCLAMENS, as they come into flower, may be given a slightly cooler house, and their period of flowering lengthened thereby. If liquid manure be given at all, it must be very weak. If the plants are doing all right and throwing up flowers freely, it is better to leave well enough alone, and not attempt to feed them at all.

ROMAN HYACINTHS intended for Christmas should be brought in this week. Place them in a light shed, or in quite a cool house, for several days before putting the plants in the warm greenhouse. If the soil in which they are shows signs of worms, these can easily be got rid of by watering once or twice with lime water.

POINSETTIAS.—To keep all the leaves intact, never allow the plants to become dry. Once they wilt, some of the lower leaves will never recuperate, and the plant's beauty as a pot subject is gone. When these pots are filled with roots, they dry out very fast, therefore need looking over twice a day. Liquid manure once or twice a week will help them make large heads, and give the foliage a good color.

The Visit to Waban.

The writer having received an invitation that intimated that the chrysanthemums were in their glory at the Waban Conservatories at Natick, Mass., we in due time found ourselves in the genial company of the host of the occasion, together with Boston wholesalers, retailers and growers, with a liberal sprinkling of ex-officials of the Massachusetts commonwealth, together with a contingent from Rhode Island and New Hampshire. With Thomas Galvin, Sr., as the "grand old man," and Lawrence Cotter, as chief mourner over the remains of the late lamented W. J. Bryan, the party was a lively one.

The Waban Conservatories, taken as a whole, are no doubt the best appointed in the country, the heating system being especially complete; 1,500 tons of coal are used annually. Everybody pronounced the two new 700-foot houses—models. The chrysanthemums were there in endless variety, great frowsy headed beauties on six-foot stems, the perfect type of health and strength, and living examples of the skill of Alexander Montgomery as an expert plantsman.

Admired? You bet!! Roses? Yes, by the acre—Beauty, Kaiserin, Morgan, Liberty, Meteor, Testout, Bride and Bridesmaid, all in the pink of perfection and pride of health. The host told an illustrative story of how the roses were sometimes appreciated by unappreciative people. A party of Wall Street men were being escorted through the houses by Mr. Montgomery, when one of them observed "What a fine lot of briars you have." Tradition says that Mr. Montgomery was so disgusted with the tribute that he turned the party over to a coal heaver on the first opportunity.

A journey by stage and trolley landed the party at the famous Auburndale hotel, where the host dispensed profuse hospitality, and W. J. Stewart efficiently enacted the role of toastmaster. Eloquence was profuse, and the host was voted "all right," and they all said in song that he was "A jolly good fellow." "I tell you," said one of the party, "E. M. Wood is one of the largest hearted men in Massachusetts. Why, if he belonged to a target company, and they were out for a day's sport, and the target had been left at home, Wood would offer himself for a mark, rather than not have the fun go on." This illustration was caught on the fly as it floated through the chrysanthemums, but it may be put down as the expert opinion of a gentleman who has known the present president of the S. A. F. long and intimately.

With Us At Once.

BECAUSE You can still take advantage of the mild weather, and have the plants come through safely by freight.

BECAUSE We are the largest buyers of Azaleas in the world, and make personal inspection of the stocks before they are shipped to us, and buy for spot cash, which enables us to secure lowest prices, and you the benefit in quality of the plants.

BECAUSE Our importations are all repacked at our own nursery. Plants that have suffered in transit, and which are not well set with buds being discarded, you receive nothing but first-class stock, which is certain to give satisfaction.

BECAUSE We can give you any special assortment of varieties that you may wish. This is a great advantage over the usual assorted case lots, sent over from Belgium, which invariably contain many varieties not at all suited to the American market.

BECAUSE We wish to convince you, as we have convinced many of the leading florists of the United States, that you can buy Azaleas from us to better advantage than if you make your own importations.

The Chrysanthemum—From a Commission Man's Standpoint.

Read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, November 6, by Samuel S. Pennock.

The value of the chrysanthemum for all purposes is well recognized. As a showy and handsome decorative flower, the Queen of Autumn has no peer. No flower can be had that will make the elaborate display and give the value that the chrysanthemum does in decorations generally. Every one waits anxiously for the first bloom of the season to arrive. Each dealer tries to outdo his neighbor in securing the first cut and, naturally, pays an extra price for it. Blooms that will hardly be noticed later in the season bring fancy prices. Some one color, owing to a temporary demand for it, will cause the price to advance, while some particular occasion, such as an important football game, will produce a similar result. With the advent of October we look for the first blooms. The season, which runs for two months, is generally terminated by the Thanksgiving trade, which is improving each year.

Some authorities claim that the best paying varieties are the early ones, while others contend the late kinds are preferable. Solid colors, not mixed ones, are the best sellers. Among these the yellow and white predominate, with pink coming next. The best results can be obtained from a limited number of varieties, say six or a dozen, giving a succession of bloom throughout the season in the colors mentioned. The incurved varieties are the best commercially, as they stand more abuse and do not drop their petals, or wilt so easily. With the most careful handling the ragged ones do not carry at all well.

Both as a cut flower and as a pot plant, the variety Ivory has no equal as an all-round commercial sort. There are hundreds of varieties that might be mentioned. Among them are the following: Willowbrook, an early white; Lady Harriett, an early pink; October Sunshine, a very pleasing yellow, blooming about the same time as Whilldin; R. Hooper Pearson, fine, large, stiff-stemmed yellow, following Whilldin; Mrs. Trenor L. Park, a fine yellow; Florence Harris, a very pretty shade of yellow, good size, with long, stiff stem; Mrs. Geo. W. Childs, a good red; Pink Ivory, Major Bonnaffon, Maud Dean, Jerome Jones, Robinson, Viviand-Morel and Modesto. Maud Dean is certainly about the best all-round pink as a money earner. Mrs. Perrin, for a pleasing and beautiful shade of pink, cannot be equaled; but it is not profitable, from a grower's standpoint, on account of a large percentage of the blooms coming disfigured in spite of all the grower can do.

Well grown stock is ofttimes spoiled by being cut prematurely or allowed to remain too long on the plant; and the same difficulty results from improper care in handling between the time of cutting and delivery to the dealer. The attention of growers is particularly called to both of these difficulties, for in them lies a prolific source of the causes leading to poor returns.

All flowers should be put in water immediately after cutting, and set in a cool place for from three to eight hours previous to packing and shipping. This treatment will harden the blooms with far better and more lasting results than if they are placed in water some time after being cut. A flower is always in better condition to absorb water at this than any other time. If once allowed to wilt, it will never quite regain its original beauty and its keeping qualities will have become very much impaired.

An equally important matter is that of proper packing. Here the grower will ofttimes endeavor to save expressage by crowding the flowers into a box not large enough to properly accommodate them. This is always a short-sighted procedure, for the damage resulting therefrom will often amount to several times the expressage.

A great source of comfort to the flower man is cool weather. There is then much more satisfaction in handling the cut blooms. They are more crisp, are firmer in texture and give better results in every way.

One objection that is often advanced against the chrysanthemum is that so much is given for value received, and that this lessens the demand for other flowers, roses, carnations, etc., often going begging during the reign of the autumn beauty. Those who grow other flowers, either from preference or force of circumstances, are more than satisfied when the chrysanthemum season has drawn to a close. Indeed, there are often other people who are also glad when the end is in sight. Both retailers and wholesalers have been known to express their views in this respect very decidedly, wishing the "mums" had never been "invented." But for all this, the flowers have their place and are here to stay.

It may not be amiss at this point to note that the facility with which the purchaser may reach a large stock of the flowers is, from all points of view, a very important consideration. This purpose is best served by the accommodation, room and ease of distribution with which the wholesaler can supply, together with his ability to have the flowers always on hand. In the matter of distribution, attention is properly called to the fact that the location which he is able to and does invariably select, is one that is within easy reach of the grower and retailer alike, both at home and abroad. This benefit cannot be overestimated and vastly exceeds any which could possibly be the outcome of conditions from which the presence of our commission man would be eliminated. The chrysanthemum, being large and bulky, necessarily requires ample room. In the wholesale establishment can be congregated large quantities of bloom of every kind sufficient to meet all demands on short notice. To it can come the purchasers, who, for these very reasons, can invariably find what they wish, when, did the commission man not exist, it would be impossible on many occasions for buyers to be satisfied. The commission man is the agent of grower and purchaser, and it is to his interest that both parties should be properly served. His ability in this direction also largely arises from the fact that he possesses peculiar advantages in the matter of keeping in touch with the market, and such ability as he has must, from the very nature of his business, be absolutely at the disposal of those for whom he acts.

Having considered the Queen of Autumn from these various points of view, we come naturally to the question, "What means are we to employ in the proper placing of our product before the public for the purpose of sale?" The answer is plain: "By judicious advertising and display." This is to-day largely accomplished by business cards and descriptions inserted in the papers and periodicals so as to quickly catch the eye and appeal to the intelligence of the reader.

Another source of success in this direction are the store and window decorations, which are used to such good effect by the dealers, who are constantly exercising that keen intelligence and artistic taste for which they are noted.

We have brought to our minds very forcibly at this season of the year the fact that this purpose is also accomplished in a most admirable manner by the chrysanthemum show, which presents to view all the bravery of resplendent color and beautiful form, attracting the people as no other display of flowers can. What grander and more picturesque sight is there than our annual fall show? This institution is a wonderful benefit to the flower interests in general. It induces curiosity, starts the community to talking, is educating in its effect, and leads to purchases which otherwise never would be made. Each and every florist should do all in his power to foster and encourage these exhibitions. A successful show means far more to the flower trade than can be estimated. Judicious advertising by this means is a paying investment, and is sooner or later sure to be productive of good results.

As to the advancement made in the cultivation and perfection of this flower, we now have varieties of size and quality of which we never dreamed fifteen years ago. As time goes on we shall all be striving and struggling as we have heretofore done. As the past has been so full of benefits unforseen, may we look forward not only to retaining the glory which we have won, but to the winning of new laurels in fields ever new and broadening. The bloom which now is receiving our tenderest care has returned to us full benefits. Let us not be slow in recognizing the goodness of a beneficent Providence and in return show our appreciation by adding to the talent with which we have been entrusted.

THE CHICAGO FLOWER SHOW.

(Concluded.)

The exhibition improved from day to day by the additions of the various specialties for which prizes were offered and which are absolutely necessary where a five-day show is held. Then, again, the custom in these Chicago exhibitions of re-arranging, and changing the smaller exhibits from place to place, no doubt adds greatly to the general effect.

ROSES.

Wednesday was rose day. Although the competition was smaller than it should have been, the exhibits staged were particularly fine. The South Park Floral Co., of Marion, Ind., and Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, were the largest exhibitors. For some time past in this market, a new French rose, under number 19, of the Beauty type, has created some stir. It was staged at the show, by E. G. Hill & Co., Bassett & Washburn, and the South Park Floral Co., and has been christened Marquis de Litta. The vase of Bassett & Washburn won the special prize of a silver cup, offered by Mr. C. D. Peacock, of this city. The variety looks as though it would be a good market rose. It is lighter in color and longer in bud than Beauty, the petals spreading in the bud, and being of a slightly crinkly character. Some contend it is more like the old Jacq.; but we ourselves fail to see it in this light. The vase of Liberty, shown by Bassett & Washburn, had three-foot stems, and were good.

The new rose, Queen of Edgely, was staged for display only, by the Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, and was an attractive exhibit throughout the entire show.

CARNATIONS.

Thursday was carnation day, and proved a hummer, there being 74 vases of flowers, all of good exhibition quality. Bassett & Washburn, the Chicago Carnation Co., and Anton Then, were the largest exhibitors. R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., staged for exhibition only, 100 blooms of Enquirer. There is no question about this being a grand variety. Some immense long-stemmed White Cloud and G. H. Crane (the cream of the flock, both with 4-foot stems) were exhibited. Other notable carnation flowers were: Flora Hill, Triumph, Mrs. George M. Bradt, Chicago, The Marquis, the pink sport of Armazindy, from Wietor Bros., and the Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum; Chicago Carnation Co.'s new variety J. K. Robinson, of the Bradt type, but lighter; Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. James Dean, a glorious vase of Dorothy, from its originator, Mrs. E. T. Graves; Maceo and Gomez. A fine vase of the dark variety Governor Roosevelt, from the Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., found many admirers. Mary Wood was good among whites. Gold Nugget was the only yellow.

SPECIAL EXHIBITS.

For Friday the special exhibits added greatly to the display. In the class for best vase of roses arranged for effect, three noble 5-foot vases of American Beauty were staged.

The three entries for best vase of chrysanthemums arranged for effect, were also excellent. John Mangel had yellow J. Jones, A. Langes' vase contained Golden Wedding; Anderson Floral Co.'s the same variety.

THE C. S. A. TROPHY.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America's prize of a silver cup, for the best 10 blooms of chrysanthemums, any variety, brought out quite a competition. The Hindsdale Rose Co., showed Jerome Jones; Anton Then, a canary-yellow sport of Frank Hardy, well done; John N. May, Yanariva, a very delicate pink, of the Morel type, quite distinct from anything else. A. Herrington had an immense 13¾-inch flower, incurved, white, named Mme. Dels. Otto Spiedel, gardener to Mrs. P. D. Armour, Jr., showed Mrs. John J. Glessner very well done. It was left to Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Canada, with their new incurved white, Timothy Eaton, to carry off the honors. This is a highly finished flower, of the keeping type, 13½ inches over all, with a depth of six inches. It deservedly won the C. S. A. trophy. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited an incurved yellow, of the Bonnaffon type, pressing hard on the heels of Col. D. Appleton; parentage, George W. Childs, under No. 53-1. Gunner Thellmann staged some splendid Major Bonnaffon.

John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited 10" seedlag pompons, of very beautiful types and markings, named Nydia, white; Zero, Nita, a fine pink; Vico, another shade of pink; Dazzle, Elko, small white; Zenta, deep red; Utan, splendid shade of pink, with white center; Yerza, shade of delicate pink, Garda, daisy-like white; Orea, Novia, Acto, the best of the lot in pink, and Vera, a white.

THE SEEDLINGS.

Saturday was seedling day, but did not bring out a very extensive exhibit. Among chrysanthemums there came from Lincoln Park three varieties not for competition—Mrs. F. H. Gansberger, whorled white, Mrs. P. W. Woodworth, reflexed Japanese pink; and Mrs. J. H. Charman, broad petalled, reflexed pink. J. C. Vaughan staged three flowers of Halowarden, a broad petalled Chinese, reddish pink, that seems to have merit. May's, Yanariva, and Mirabeau, a straw yellow of the Bonnaffon type, were also shown. Fred J. Wells, of the C. B. & Q. greenhouses, at Aurora, Ill., had a delicate incurved white, of the Bonnaffon type, but the flowers were better earlier.

In carnations Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, staged a light pink, and, for exhibition only, a fine vase of Irene. H. Weber & Son sent No. 11, a most delicate bright clear pink. Mrs. Graves exhibited Dorothy. A vase of Prosperity was shown in good form, by Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush.

MISCELLANEOUS DISPLAYS.

J. C. Vaughan had a vase of new cannas, Ch. Molin, a salmon pink; Red Indian (his own seedling), brick red; Harlequin, Souv. de Mme. Nardy, very conspicuous, of the Florence Vaughan type; La Patrie, light brick red, Victory, his own seedling, deep pink, splashed on edges with yellow, and others. Bassett & Washburn had a fine palm, Chamædorea Giesbreightii; Mrs. P. D. Armour, a very fine Acalypha Sanderii; Anton Then, a bush of California navel orange, with several full sized fruits; the Witthold Co., a pair of elegant hanging baskets of the Boston fern, eight feet high and through. E. Wienhoeber, had a splendid vase of chrysanthemums in his exhibit.

The concession for sale of cut flowers was placed at the disposal of the Chicago Florists' Club, the proceeds going to the Galveston Florists' fund. P. J. Hauswirth was in charge of the booth, and was ably assisted by Mrs. Hauswirth, Miss Annie Kreitling and Phil's staff. All the flowers were donated by the growers. The sales netted over $260 for the fund.

The retail floral displays were extremely attractive. The contestants were E. Wienhoeber, A. Lange, J. Mangel and the George Wittbold Co. Not less than $50 a day, each, was spent in these displays, in plants and flowers, which included the best of everything used.

The judges appear to have given general satisfaction.

Visitors to the show were numerous, among them, Arthur Newell and Sam Murray, Kansas City, Mo.; J. C. Rennison, Sioux City, Iowa; William Dittmann, New Castle, Ind; Henry C. Geiger, Philadelphia; W. G. Crowe, Utica; John Fotheringham, Tarrytown; Patrick O'Mara, New York; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; H. Weber, Oakland, Md.; Fred Lemon, Richmond; H. Twenty blooms pink carnations lighter in color than Wm. Scott. H. Weber & Son, Oakland, Md., silver medal.

DECORATIVE COMPETITIONS.

In the box display competition, which has proved to be one of the most interesting features of the week at the show, E. Wienhoeber was awarded first prize, $100; and J. Mangel, second, of $70.

The ladies' award committee, which judged the table decorations, decided that the Anderson Floral Co. was entitled to first prize, a sterling silver service valued at $125; A. Lange, second, cut glass florists' vase valued at $90; and J. Mangel, third, cash $60.

A Grafted Chrysanthemum, with fifty-one Sorts.

The illustration herewith is an excellent representation of the prize grafted chrysanthemum staged by J. C. Vaughan, at the late Chicago flower show, and the best plant of its kind ever exhibited in that city. The stock plant, grown to single stem, in a 10-inch pot, is the variety, The Bard, which had ingeniously been left with shoots enough to form a ground work into which were grafted the varieties named below. The plant showed, one face, in half balloon form, seven feet wide by about five feet high, and a foot above the pot, showing single stem.

The varieties grafted were: Beauty of Truro, Black Hawk, Enfant des Deux Mondes, Geo. W. Childs, Chito, Golden Hair, Harry Hurrell, Ivory, John K. Shaw, Major Bonnaffon, Mayflower, Mrs. Wm. H. Rand, Mrs. A. J. Caton, Mrs. H. Robinson, Evangeline, Miss G. Pitcher, Miss Agnes L. Dalskov, Mrs. C. B. Freeman, Pennsylvania, Shavings, Snow Queen, The Bard, Viviand-Morel, Yellow Ivory, Mrs. S. T. Murdock, Mrs. H. C. Weeks, Mrs. J. J. Glessner, Jeannie Falconer, Robert Craig, Lenawee, Beaute Lyonnaise, The Queen, Intensity, Zenobia, Angelique, Viola, Magnificus, Surprise, Ada Strickland, Descartes, Garza, Mary Stuart, Black Douglas, Antoine de Noel, Mizpah, Mrs. Astic, Canary, Daisy, Martha, Halcyon and Shilowa.

PHILADELPHIA SHOW.

The annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held November 13 to 17, inclusive, in Horticultural Hall. The main floor was devoted chiefly to plant exhibits. Around the sides the decorative plants were grouped at intervals, while the central floor space held the specimen pot plants of chrysanthemums. Among the latter some very well grown specimens were shown. The best of them were of the following varieties: George W. Childs, Garden Queen, Mutual Friend, Rustique, Irving Clarke, Mrs. Peabody, Ivory, Mrs. Murdock, Leonidas, and Minerva.

In the displays not for competition were a fine collection of fancy leaved caladiums, from Joseph Hurley, gardener to James M. Rhodes, Esq., Ardmore, Pa.; a table of plants of Begonia roseum giganteum, from Rudolph Barth—a very free flowering variety; and a plant of begonia Gloire de Lorraine, from Edwin Lonsdale.

J. Kift & Son made an artistic display with their vases and vase holders; and the Floral Exchange had a nice showing of Queen of Edgely rose, over-hanging which was a silk banner inscribed with the record the rose had made at the various shows at which it had been exhibited.

H. A. Dreer made a very extensive display of flowering and foliage plants, among which were about 50 varieties of pompon chrysanthemums, the white begonia Gloire de Lorraine, and another type of this begonia, named B. erecta compacta, showing a tendency to throw the flowers well above the foliage. The same firm also had a beautiful aquatic exhibit in another part of the hall.

Chrysanthemums Plants.

In the classes for the best chrysanthemum plants for two plants, two varieties, in not over 10-inch pots, the first prize was won by William Robertson, gardener to John W. Pepper, Esq., Jenkintown, Pa., with Rustique and George W. Childs. Joseph Hurley, gardener to James W. Rhodes, Esq., Ardmore, Pa., was second.

The Pembroke prize, offered for four plants of Japanese varieties, went to Joseph Hurley with excellent specimens of George W. Childs, Mutual Friend, Garden Queen and Minerva; Gordon Swirl, gardener to George W. Swinott, Esq., Rosemont, Pa., second.

The Euy-s-dell prize, offered for the best four plants in not over 14-inch pots, was captured by Joseph Hurley, with the same four varieties as shown in the class above mentioned, Gordon Swirl again taking second.

The Wootton prize, offered for three pink varieties, went to Gordon Swirl. He exhibited Leonidas, Mrs. Murdock, and Garden Queen. Joseph Hurley was second.

The Sinnott prize for three new varieties of 1899 was won by Gordon Swirl, with Pembroke, Yellow Mayflower, and Meta. For specimen plant, yellow, Gordon Swirl was first, with a fine Miss Georgiana Pitcher; Joseph Hurley, second.

For specimen plant, white, pot not to exceed 14 inches, William Robertson was first with a specimen of Mrs. Peabody, the second going to George W. Brown, gardener to Robert M. Carson, Esq., Chestnut Hill. In the class for specimen plant, any other color, Joseph Hurley won with George W. Childs, William Robertson second. The Alburgers, East Park Nurseries, showed a collection of standard grown plants, not for competition.

For the best six plants, pink, in not over 6-inch pots, the first went to Joseph McGregor, gardener to Mrs. Theo. A. Scott, Lansdowne, Pa., for Pembroke; the second to William H. Carey, gardener to Mrs. Allen B. Rorke, Lansdowne, Pa. For six plants, any color, Mr. Carey was first with Rustique, Joseph McGregor, second, with Silver Cloud. In the class for six plants, white, six-inch pots, Mr. Carey was also first with Mrs. H. Weeks, the second going to J. T. Whittaker, gardener to Chas. F. Lewis, Esq., Andalusia, Pa., with Mrs. H. Robinson. For six plants, yellow, the winner was Francis Canning, gardener to Samuel T. Rodine, Esq., Villa Nova, Pa., with Major Bonnaffon, William H. Carey second.

For the best specimen plant of new variety, not disseminated prior to 1899, William Robertson took first with Goldmine, the second going to Gordon Swirl for Soucie. The Cockerhill prize, for best plant of Miss Annie Thompson in pot not over 14 inches, was won by Gordon Swirl.

For specimen plant of Mrs. Frank Thompson, Joseph Hurley took first, and Gordon Swirl second. For one plant of variety not yet disseminated, Alex. Kerr, gardener to Mrs. Phillip J. Walsh, Burmont, Pa., was the winner, with a pink Japanese variety, unnamed. The Pencoyd Farm prize for two plants in 12-inch pots, two colors, was won by Gordon Swirl, with elegant specimens of George W. Childs and Mrs. H. Weeks.

Chrysanthemums—Cut Flowers.

In the class for vase of 20 blooms, yellow, John Ruhin, of Philadelphia, took first, with Pennsylvania. Three vases, 12 blooms each, one white, one yellow, and one any other color, the first went to Joseph Monahan, gardener to Charles W. Trotter, Esq., Chestnut Hill, with Bonnaffon, Viviand-Morel and Mutual Friend; the second premium was won by William Robertson. For best vase of 20 blooms, one variety, John N. May, Summit, N. J., was the winner with Panariva.

The Fair Acres Prize, offered for five vases, five blooms each, was captured by William Kleinheinz, the varieties being James Paul, Philadelphia, Mayflower, Golden Wedding, and Helen Bloodgood. For best six blooms of William L. Elkins, William Kleinheinz was also first, William Robertson second. The first prize for best six flowers of Mrs. Frank Thompson, went to John Cullen, gardener to Percival Roberts, Esq., William Kleinheinz being second. In the class for six blooms, any other color, John Ruhin was first, with Philadelphia; William Kleinheinz second, with Mrs. Davis. For six blooms, crimson, George W. Brown, gardener to Robert Carson, Esq., was the winner with Mrs. Bigelow. Six blooms, yellow, Joseph Monahan took first, with Bonnaffon, and John Ruhin, second, with Pennsylvania. Six blooms, pink, Joseph Monahan was first with Viviand-Morel; William Robertson, second with H. Mrs. George Magee.

In the class for six white blooms, Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Ontario, were first with Timothy Eaton, a Japanese incurved variety, of immense size and fine form. Joseph Monahan was second, with Mrs. H. Weeks.

Six blooms, crimson, John Cullen took first, with Mrs. Bigelow; William Robertson, second, with Fisher's Torch. Six blooms, pink, John Mitchell, gardener to Pennsylvania Hospital, was the winner. For six blooms, white, William Kleinheinz was first, with Gladys Vanderiblt, the second going to John Mitchell, with Mrs. F. A. Constable.

In the class for 12 blooms, 12 varieties, the first went to Frank Gould, gardener to J. T. Morris, Esq., Chestnut Hill; John M. Cleary, gardener to William Weightman, Esq., being second. For 25 blooms, 25 varieties, John Cullen was the winner. His varieties included Inter Ocean, Mrs. H. Robinson, Goldmine, James Paul, Colonel Smith, Charles Davis, Niveus, Autumn Glory, Leonidas, Mrs. Chamberlain, Minerva, Mutual Friend, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. F. Thomson, Col. D. Appleton, Mrs. Cutting, Mrs. Egan, Black Hawk, Bostou, Modesto, Thordeua, Mayflower, and two Japanese seedlings, one a bronze and the other a yellow. The second prize was won by John Mitchell.

For the best American variety, pink, not yet disseminated, John N. May was the winner with W. B. Chamberlain. For the best American white variety, not disseminated, Miller & Sons captured the premium with Timothy Eaton.

For best American variety, any other color, not disseminated, John N. May took the honors with Yanariva. Best yellow American variety, not disseminated, John Cullen was first with Chestnut Hill seedling, a Japanese incurved variety. For the best 20 flowers of one variety, pink, Ed. A. Stroud, was the winner. John W. Cleary was first for 12 anemone-flowered in both classes, and second for 12 sprays of pompon blooms; Frank Gould being first for 12 sprays of pompons, 12 varieties.

For the best 12 blooms, 12 varieties, John Cullen won with Mrs. West, Yellow Carnot, Boston, Viviand-Morel, Col. D. Appleton, Eureka, Modesto, Mrs. R. Cuttiug, Mutual Friend, Mrs. Paul and the two Japanese seedlings before mentioned. The second prize went to John Mitchell.

For the best eight plants of geraniums, William Robertson was first. Best specimen palm, George W. Brown was the winner with a fine plant of Licuala grandis.

Jos. Kift & Son took the prizes for the best arranged window box—crotons, dracænas, kentias and English ivy being the principal plants used. The prize for best plant of Asparagus Sprengeri was captured by Joseph Hurley.

Robert Craig & Sons were the prize takers in the class for 12 cyclamen. For the best display of flowering and foliage plants arranged for effect, John Hobson, gardener to Edward A. Schimdt, Esq., Radnor, Pa., was first. This was a specially well arranged group; the use of bouvardias among the crotons and palms enhancing the general effect. John H. Dodds, gardener to H. L. Hopper, Esq., was second, with a nicely arranged group. For the best specimen Boston fern, Joseph Hurley was first with a magnificent plant measuring about seven feet across. Best six ferns, the first went to John Thatcher, gardener to Edward L. Boutillier, Esq., Wynnwood, Pa. For the 12 best crotons, John Hobson was first, and William Robertson second. Both these exhibits contained well colored plants.

For the best six dracænas and the best six marantas first in each case went to John Thatcher, the second for marantas going to John M. Cleary, who also took second for the best 15 ornamental foliage plants.

First, for specimen croton, went to John Hobson; second, to Joseph Hurley; the latter also taking first for specimen foliage plant, with a fine croton; John Thatcher, second, with Panax Victoria. For the best Dracæna Sanderiana, John Thatcher was first and William Robertson, second. For the best six foliage plants, palms not allowed. John Thatcher was first, and William Robertson, second. The winning plants were Panax Victoria, Costus mosaicus, Dracæna Rothiana, Aloeasia Sanderiana, Helleonia aureo-striata, and Pandanus Veitchii. For the best 20 ferns, the first prize went to Thomas Long, gardener to George W. Childs-Drexel, Esq., second to John Hobson. John Thatcher took the Hopper prize offered for the best six ferns. In the class for six Rex begonias, J. T. Whittaker was first, and John M. Cleary second. Six flowering begonias John Thatcher, first, Joseph Hurley, second.

Among other groups not for competition were new red coleus by George E. Campbell, and a group of well-grown palms from Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa.

An exhibit of orchids and cut chrysanthemums came from Hugh Graham. This was located in the center of the hall, and was very attractive. An exhibit of orchids and plants was also made by Mrs. George B. Wilson, West Philadelphia., among which was a cycas, said to have been once owned by George Washington. A large group of crotons from Joseph Hurley, and collection of evergreen trees from the William H. Moon Co., Glenwood Nurseries, Pa., were also shown.

In the vegetable and fruit department, in the lower hall, Henry F. Michell had an extensive exhibit of bulbs, implements, pots, fertilizers, etc. H. G. Faust showed a full line of bulbs, mushroom spawn, etc. H. Waterer also showed bulbs in variety, and clumps of Japanese iris. H. A. Dreer had a complete exhibit of almost everything needed in the trade—spawn, bulbs, jardinieres, glass bowls, and vases, sprayers, hose pipe, mole-traps, plant supports, etc. W. S. Beasley, gardener to Mr. J. W. M. Cardeza, Germantown, showed a section of a Barbarossa vine, only one year old, with six elegant bunches of fruit. D. Landreth & Son had an extensive exhibit of insecticides, fertilizers, bulb glasses and jardinieres, also pumps, sprayers and incubators. Part of this exhibit was arranged inside a rustic fence and was quite attractive. The Roxborough Rustic Work Manufacturing Co. displayed a line of rustic settees and a summer house of rustic style, thatched with straw. The Watson Seed Store had on display samples of their Perfection Flower Box. This box is made of wood and bound at the corners with tin; it should be a serviceable box.

Fred Ehret, wholesale florist, showed a vase of elegant American Beauty roses, not for competition; the flowers were grown by John Andre, of Doylestown, Pa.

Great credit for the smooth arrangement of the show is due to David Rust, the energetic secretary to the Society.

Judging commenced at 2 p. m., and by 6 p. m. the awards were all in their respective places.

Certificate of Merit for culture to Jos. Hurley for a magnificent collection of caladiums.

Certificate of Merit for culture to Jos. Heacock, Wyncote, for well-grown collection of palms.

Special mention to Geo. E. Campbell, Philadelphia, for new coleus.

Special mention to John Thatcher, for collection of well-grown foliage plants.

Special mention to Wm. Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener, Esq., Ogontz, for new chrysanthemum D. Josephine.

Cultural recommendation to Robert Craig & Son, West Philadelphia, for well-grown plants of begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE SHOW.

Though quality, not quantity, was the object of the promoters of the show given by the American Institute in Berkeley Lyceum, New York, on November 14 and 15, the limited space at the disposal of the Institute was taxed to its utmost to contain the exhibits sent, all of which were of a very high order of merit. The schedule provided for groups, and plants in pots. Two of the former were on display and only a limited number of 'mum plants was exhibited. The greatest interest centered in the classes for chrysanthemum cut blooms, the chief feature of which was the competition for the best 50 blooms arranged in a large Japanese vase, for a prize of $25 offered by the Horticultural Society of New York. There were three entries in this class, the first prize going to the variety Timothy Eaton, exhibited by Miller & Sons, of Bracondale, Ontario. This variety attracted many admirers on account of the well-grown specimens shown. Mr. Miller informs us that it is a Wanamaker seedling, but it is without the defect of an eye seen in that variety. The flower of Timothy Eaton, an incurved Japanese white, is well filled in the center and of great depth. A. Herrington, of Florham Farms, was second in this competition with a splendid display of Golden Wedding. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., exhibited Nagoya, a yellow variety.

William Scott, of Tarrytown, took first prize for 25 cut blooms, distinct named varieties, George Hale coming second. In the class for 12 cut blooms A. Herringon was first, his collection including the varieties Bonnaffon, Jeannie Falconer, W. H. Chadwick, Solar Queen, Mutual Friend, Mrs. Trenor L. Park, Chenon de Leche, G. J. Warren, Frank Hardy, Golden Wedding, Mayflower and Merza. John McNichol, gardener to Mr. G. C. Rand, Lawrence, L. I., was first for six incurved, his varieties being Col. D. Appleton, Good Gracious, Margaret Jeffords, Adula, Modesto and Jeannie Falconer. For six blooms, reflexed, G. Hale, gardener to Mrs. E. D. Adams, took first. Among his varieties were W. H. Lincoln, Mutual Friend, Inter-Ocean, Viviand-Morel and Chas. Davis. For 10 blooms, red, McNichol was first, with George W. Childs. For 10 blooms, white, William Scott, Tarrytown, was the winner with Mrs. Weeks; W. Brennecke, of Hempstead Gardens, coming second with Mrs. Jerome Jones. There were seven entries in the class calling for 10 blooms, yellow, William Scott, of Tarrytown, taking first with Golden Wedding; A. Herrington second with the same variety. In the class for ten blooms, any other color, William Duckham, gardener to D. Willis James, Esq., Madison, N. J., was first with the variety T. Carrington; A. Herrington second with Alberta L. Albertas. Mr. Herrington also took the New York Horticultural Society's prize for the best six varieties, six blooms of each, with Chenon de Leche, Bonnaffon, Madam Deis (a monster white variety), Golden Wedding, Helen Bloodgood, and Merza. George Hale was second.

John N. May, Summit, N. J., had a collection of pompons, and also showed his new seedling, Yanariva.

There was a nice display of carnations, the first prize for the best and largest collection going to Briarcliff Greenhouses, Sing Sing. This firm was also first for the best six varieties, and second for the best three varieties, the first prize in the latter class going to George M. Hay with Mrs. Bradt, Lawson and Crane. The Cottage Gardens, Queens, had an excellent vase of Governor Roosevelt; also one of yellow seedlings comprising some promising varieties. Chris. Besold, Mineola, L. I., showed Goethe and Admiral Cervera. Weber & Sons exhibited Genevieve Lord and Seedling No. 11, the latter being certificated, and considered by the judges an improvement on the first named variety. This firm also staged a seedling, white, No. 110, and a crimson, No. 176, both showing good promise.

J. W. Feeter, of Highland, N. Y., took first prize for 50 blooms violets.

Nathan Smith & Sons, Adrian, Mich., exhibited a most interesting collection of seedling cypripediums of the concolor and insigne types. Julius Roehrs, Carlton Hill, N. J., had an excellent group of foliage and flowering plants, the latter comprising, among others, well grown cattleyas, oncidiums and dendrobiums. Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., also put up an excellent display of orchids.

The Rosary Co. (J. H. Troy, manager), made a very interesting exhibit of bamboos in pots. This firm was also awarded first prize for the best table centerpiece of chrysanthemums in oval basket, without handles. The judges were William Turner, A. Grierson, and J. W. Withers, assisted by Albert Staall.

William Turner, Tarrytown, showed a vase of Liberty rose in excellent condition.

George F. Hale, Senbright, N. J., staged a nice collection of ornamental foliage plants and Howard Nichol, gardener to Mrs. J. B. Trevor showed a splendid plant of cycas.

Siebrecht & Son had fine exhibit of foliage plants, not for competition which received a special award.

C. B. Furman. For eight named plants, eight distinct varieties, Thomas Dryden was also first. His best varieties in this class were Minerva, Chadwick, and Merza.

For specimen Japanese, named variety, Thomas Dryden took first with Viviand-Morel; also for specimen Chinese with C. W. Ward. In the class for specimen standard, Hamilton Scott was second; and first for best specimen plant, not disbudded.

For ten cut blooms, ten distinct named varieties, Hamilton Scott took first; William Angus, second, Thomas Dryden, third, John Coombs, and the Rev. Herbert Macey, specials. Among the best blooms in this class were Major Bonnaffon, The Queen, Nesota, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Capt. Gridley, Minerva, Nesota, Baron Rothschild, and Peter Kay.

In the class for best collection of cut blooms of novelties not catalogued previous to 1899, William Angus secured first.

Best collection of miscellaneous plants, other than chrysanthemums, E. M. Francis, first.

Best 15 blooms Eldorado carnations, George Osborne, first.

The exhibit of 18 blooms of the new rose, Queen of Edgely, attracted much attention and was greatly admired. This exhibit, through some misunderstanding did not arrive until the last day of the show.

William Angus received a diploma for two bunches of Gros Meroc and Gros Colmar grapes, which were the largest hot house grapes exhibited before the society in years. Mr. Angus also received a diploma for his exhibit of cut blooms of chrysanthemums.

The judges were C. H. Pember and Chas. Peterson. J. F. C.

HARTFORD FLOWER SHOW.

The annual chrsyanthemum exhibition of the Connecticut Horticultural Society opened Tuesday, November 6, and continued three days. The show, taken as a whole was very good, but much smaller than in previous years. The attendance was somewhat light, owing, perhaps, to the first day being election day, and the inclemency of the weather on the last day.

The principal exhibitors were Walter Angus of Chapinville; Thomas J. Dryden, Hamilton Scott, gardener to Mrs. Samuel Colt; John Coombs, of Hartford, and Rev. H. Macey, of Newington. The Elizabeth Park greenhouses made a fine showing of nearly 200 blooms, among the best varieties being Pride of Ryecroft, Mrs. Egan, Philadelphia, Col. D. Appleton, Sunderbruch, The Queen, William Simpson, Mrs. Robinson and Ivory. This exhibit reflected great credit on L. Frey, the gardener at the Park.

There were no seedlings exhibited.

For the display of 12 named plants, 12 distinct varieties, Thomas J. Dryden was first, his best plants being Viviand-Morel, Mrs. H. Weeks, Black Hawk, and Mrs. stable, Peter Kay, Maud Dean, Viviand-Morel, and Belle of Castlewood. For 12 specimen blooms, Major Bonnaffon, William Angus, was the winner; also for 12 blooms Ivory. For 12 blooms, yellow, one variety, Hamilton Scott, was first, with Georgiana Pitcher, John Coombs, second, with Mrs. Bassett. A special prize in this class was awarded to William Angus. He showed a vase of G. J. Warren.

For 12 blooms, pink, one variety, Hamilton Scott took first, with Viviand-Morel; John Coombs, second, with Mrs. Perrin. William Angus was awarded special prize for the last named variety. In the class for 12 blooms, white, William Angus scored with Mrs. Weeks, John Coombs being second, with same variety. A special prize went to Hamilton Scott for The Queen.

For 12 blooms, red one variety, William Angus was first, with Black Hawk; John Coombs, second, with same variety. For best specimen bloom, T. J. Dryden, took first with Chadwick; William Angus, second, with Mrs. Weeks; special prize to John Coombs, for Mme. Carnot, and special to George Osborne.

In the class for 25 cut blooms, 25 distinct named varieties, William Angus took first. Among the best varieties exhibited in this class, were Mrs. F. A. Constable, Capt. Gridley, Minerva, Nesota, Baron Rothschild, and Peter Kay.

In the class for best collection of cut blooms of novelties not catalogued previous to 1899, William Angus secured first.

Best collection of miscellaneous plants, other than chrysanthemums, E. M. Francis, first.

Best 15 blooms Eldorado carnations, George Osborne, first.

The exhibit of 18 blooms of the new rose, Queen of Edgely, attracted much attention and was greatly admired. This exhibit, through some misunderstanding did not arrive until the last day of the show.

William Angus received a diploma for two bunches of Gros Meroc and Gros Colmar grapes, which were the largest hot house grapes exhibited before the society in years. Mr. Angus also received a diploma for his exhibit of cut blooms of chrysanthemums.

The judges were C. H. Pember and Chas. Peterson. J. F. C.

ORANGE (N. J.) SHOW.

In making a feature of school children's work at their exhibition held in Orange, Wednesday, November 14, the New Jersey Floricultural Society, alive to the tendency of the time, demonstrated that expansion might be applied to floriculture. While not entirely original, the feature was quite new to this section, and the stream of people from the hour of opening to late at night, attested to the popular reception of the idea.

The exhibits of between nine hundred and one thousand children, from 24 different schools, besides the usual work of the members, made it necessary to secure a larger place than that commonly used by the society.

The children's plants, chiefly chrysanthemums, were arranged in groups, each individual exhibit being separated by a palm, and the name of the school being prominently displayed on a card over each group. Each pot bore a number.

At the time of distribution a book of cultural directions was given, and its instructions seemed to have been faithfully followed. Three plants which showed evidence of expert assistance were thrown out from competition. Pompons predominated, but Ivory, Bonnaffon, and other popular favorites were to be recognized. Most of them had been loosely planted, and showed a rank growth of stem, but the foliage of many was good. Disbudding had been frequently attempted, and the potting, while not at all in the interests of the grocery trade, indicated a previous use in that line. One proud plant occupied an old oaken bucket which had once hung in a well, but only one occupied a paper bag.

Joseph A. Manda was manager, and his skill was severely tested, not only in disposing of so many exhibits in a limited space, but in placing them to the best advantage. The room presented a beautiful appearance. Cash premiums were given, besides a number of plants donated by W. A. Manda. The judges were John N. May, W. A. Manda, and A. D. Rose—the three men who had showed the most interest in the scheme, and had furnished most of the plants.

In the exhibit of gardeners' work the commercial, the private gardener, and the amateur, were all represented.

The place of honor was given to President Duff's display of fine greenhouse plants, comprising a wide and choice selection from the Brighthurst greenhouses. George Smith made a display of chrysanthemums, single blooms in six-inch pots, which secured a first-class certificate, and two trained exhibits of the variety Lincoln, which also received certificate. He, too, received the special extra premium for largest bloom. The remainder of the display of the private gardeners was quite up to its usual merit, and among the names appeared those of Dieterick Kindsgrab, Malcolm MacRorie, George Von Qualen. One new name was that of Peter McLaughlin, successor to Alex. McPherson, at Mrs. John Burki's place in Llewellyn Park. His Cycas circinalis attracted attention, as did a specimen Phyllanthus rosea variegata.

The commercial growers were represented by John N. May, who was awarded first-class certificate for new chrysanthemums, and also pompons; W. A. Manda, who had a large pyramid of greenhouse plants, receiving first-class certificate; Popkin & Collins, who got a certificate for a display, comprising a varied selection of plants and chrysanthemum blooms; Bonnaffon, Ivory, Maud Dean, Philadelphia, and Pennsylvania, attracted attention by the beauty of the form and foliage. J. C. Williams, Montclair, exhibited pompons, receiving a certificate of merit; Paul Wilcox, of Montclair, had four cycas and three variegated pineapples, obtaining first-class certificate, the work of Oscar Carlesen.

All of these, in size and beauty, were close to the exhibits of the private gardener, the result of just such shows, where they have appeared side by side.

The novelty of the exhibition and scheme attracted many visitors from a distance, even from Georgia. Among the craft were Thomas Gray of Boston, and James Kidd, and James I. Donlan of New York.

NEWPORT (R. I.) SHOW.

The ninth annual Fall show by the Newport, (R. I.) Horticultural Society, was opened at Masonic Hall, Tuesday, Nov. 13, at 2 p. m. The exhibition, as a whole, was superior to any yet given. The novelties, although not a large class, contained some good things, among them being the new rose Queen of Edgely, showa by R. Craig & Son, which was considered well worthy of the certificate awarded it. The new ten rose, Sunset, exhibited by G. Foster, Esq. (E. Jenkins gardener) Lenox, Mass., also obtained a similar award. The color of this rose is hard to describe, it being apricot, shaded bronze. The foliage is also of a dark bronzy color. A new pink carnation of about the same shade of color as that of Morning Glory, but of different form of petal, and a fuller flower, also obtained a first-class certificate of merit. This variety was exhibited by N. D. Pierce, of Norwood, R. I.

The tested seedling chrysanthemum wianing the silver medal, is a dark variety of the Shrimpton type, but a smaller flower, having heavy deep green foliage. It has been named General Maceo, and was exhibited by President Robert Laurie. Chrysanthemum Col. Appleton was shown here for the first time, winning first premium in the class calling for 10 blooms, yellow; it was really one of the best new varieties seen here. The flowers were grown and exhibited by Farquhar Macrae of Providence, R. I.

In the class for group of palms and foliage plants to cover 100 square feet, there were three entries, R. Laurie winning first, with a group of very fine quality and good arrangement; the coloring of the crotons and dracænas being fine, and the pots very effectively hidden by a bordering of Carex japonica and Adiantum Victoria. The second place was taken by Andrew S. Meikle, gardener for Mr. W. S. Wells, with a group scarcely one whit behind the other; Richard Gardener was third, his group being hardly full enough. In class for palms, ferns, and chrysanthemums, Robert Laurie was again the winner, a group staged by Harry Westter, gardener for Mr. I. Townsend Burden, taking second place. Both groups were good in quality and arrangement. For specimen chrysanthemum plants, white (Mutual Friend), grown by James Garthley, gardener for H. H. Rogers, Fairhaven, Mass., secured first; John Barr, South Natick, Mass., second, and R. Laurie third. Specimen yellow, first, J. Barr, with Golden Trophy; second, Robert Laurie; third, Andrew Ramsey, gardener for Mrs. Edward King. Specimen pink, first, J. Barr, with variety Louis Boehmer; to this plant was awarded the silver medal, as the best specimen plant on exhibition; second, R. Laurie; third, Andrew Ramsey. Specimen, red, first, J. Barr, with The Bard; second, James Garthley. Specimen anemone, first, James Garthley; second, R. Laurie. Specimen pompon, J. Barr. Six specimen bush plants in pots, not exceeding eight inches, first, R. Laurie, with varieties Mutual Friend, Joseph H. White, Marion Henderson, Mrs. H. Weeks, Peter Kay and Mrs. Henry Robinson. Six plants, white, single stem, in pots not exceeding 6 inches, first, Alex. Frazer, gardener for Mr. H. McK. Twombley, variety, Frank Hardy. Six plants, yellow, first, R. Laurie, with Peter Kay; second, H. Westley. Six plants, pink, first, R. Laurie, with Viviand-Morel; second, Andrew Ramsey. Six plants, red, first, R. Laurie, with variety General Maceo. Six plants, any other color, first, R. Laurie, with Inter-Ocean.

Specimen areca, first, R. Laurie; second, H. Westley; third, Arthur Griffin, gardener for Mr. E. T. Gerry. Specimen, kentia, first, R. Laurie; second, Andrew S. Meikle. Specimen, any other variety, first, Andrew S. Melkle; second, Robert Laurie.

Specimen Adiantum Farleyense, first, Andrew S. Meikle. Specimen nephrolepis, first, Harry Westley; second, Frank Brunton; third, Robert Laurie. Best specimen, any other variety, Frank Brunton.

For 25 blooms, distinct named varieties, first, J. Barr. His varieties were M. Jeffords, Philadelphia, Charles Davis, Eureka, Australia, Peter Kay, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Pennsylvania, Oakland, Mrs. George Magee, Modesto, Maud Dean, Good Gracious, W. H. Warren, Mrs. M. A. Ryerson, Shenandoah, Lady Hanham, Mutual Friend, Viviand-Morel, Frank Hardy, Kate Broomhead, Mrs. Peabody, Mrs. George West, Golden Wedding and Mrs. Carrington. Twelve cut blooms, distinct named varieties, first, John Barr. About the only variety seen in this class which was not represented in the foregoing, was Mrs. Trenor L. Clark; second, Alexander Frazer; third, R. Laurie. Six cut blooms incurved, first, R. Laurie, with Mrs. Weeks, Major Bonnaffon, W. H. Chadwick, Peter Kay, O. P. Bassett, Rustique; second, J. Barr; third, James Boyd, gardener for Mrs. William Astor. Six cut blooms, reflexed, first, R. Laurie, second, J. Barr; third, Alexander Frazer. The winning varieties in this class were: Charles Davis, Viviand-Morel, The Gladys, Mutual Friend, Inter-Ocean and Major Bonnaffon. Best vase, 10 blooms, red, first, John Ash, Pomfret, Conn., with John Shrimpton, very fine blooms; second, R. Laurie; third, Alex. Frazer. Ten blooms, white, first, Alexander Frazer, with Jerome Jones; second, John Ash; third, Waldemar Barth, gardener for Hon. Perry Belmont. Ten blooms, yellow, first, Farquhar Macrae, with Col. Appleton; second, John Ash, with 10 fine blooms of Peter Kay; third, Alexander Frazer. Ten blooms, pink, first, R. Laurie, with superb blooms of Viviand-Morel; second, Alexander Frazer; third, John Ash. Ten blooms, any other color, first, R. Laurie, with Inter-Ocean; second, James Boyd. Vase of not less than eight blooms, tested seedling, first, R. Laurie, with General Maceo.

Best centerpiece of chrysanthemums, first, R. Laurie, with a basket of Bonnaffon, loosely arranged, and having no other foliage than their own; second, Waldemar Barth, for a basket of Ivory, arranged with the bronzy foliage of Japan maples; third, Andrew Ramsey. Fancy basket, any flower other than chrysanthemum to be used; first, Harry Westley, for large basket, exquisitely arranged, of Allamanda Hendersonii, the greenery being Asparagus plumosus and Adiantum cuneatum; second, Arthur Griffin. His basket consisted of Cypripedium insigne, cattleyas and phaius; third, Andrew S. Meikle with a basket of orchids and pancratiums, the orchids being cattleyas and calanthes, the garnishes Asparagus Sprengeri, and Adiantum cuneatum.

The entries in the above two classes were large and some of those not gaining premiums were almost equal to those that did.

Twelve blooms, American Beauty, first, Edward Jenkins, Lenox, Mass., second, Waldemar Barth. Twenty-five blooms, tea scented pink, first, E. Jenkins; second, W. Barth. Both parties exhibited Bridesmaid, the premium winners being extra well grown, as were those in class 36, the premium being awarded to the same parties in the same order for Bride.

Four vases, carnations, in four colors, as follows: Twenty-five blooms, red; 25 blooms, white, 25 blooms, pink; 25 blooms, any color, first, Waledmar Barth, his varieties being Ethel Crocker, Morning Glory, Crane, Hill's Sport; second, John Mahan, gardener for H. D. Auchincloss, Esq.

For violets, Alexander Frazer, was first, John Mahan, second. George A. Weaver Co. received a certificate of merit for display of bulbs.

The amateur classes were not competed in to any great extent.

Best chrysanthemum plant on exhibition, the Society's silver medal, went to John Barr, Natick, Mass.

Special prizes were awarded to Arthur Griffin for group of Acalypha Sanderi, arranged with ferns, pandanus, etc.; to Frank Brunton, for collection of ferns, a certificate of merit; to Harry Westley, for superior culture of Microlepia hirta cristata, a certificate of merit.

There were many visitors from abroad among them being W. R. Smith, Washington, D. C.; William Craig, Philadelphia; W. J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.; Kenneth Finlayson and James Wheeler, of Brookline, Mass.; Messrs. Keith and Garthley, of Fairhaven, Mass.; John Ash, and others from Pomfret, Conn.; also a large delegation from Providence, R. I., including Macrae Brothers, Messrs. Johnson, Miller, Canning, N. D. Pierce and others whose names I do not remember.

MAC.

DENVER FLOWER SHOW.

The exhibition opened on Thursday, November 8, and continued through the following Sunday night. A great crowd was in attendance every day; and on the last day it was so large that it was thought advisable to run the show over another day, but the matter was dropped, as growers didn't like to leave their stock any longer, the show having already run four days.

The pavilion in which the exhibition was held was thought to be large enough, but by the second day it was seen that it was much too small, and it was with difficulty that the crowds were properly handled. On Sunday afternoon the grand crush occurred and railings were put up, so that the visitors came in one way and passed out another. Besides a grand orchestra that was playing rag time in the pavilion, the city band gave a sacred concert out in the stand on the lake, the benefit of those that had to wait for their turn to see the flowers. This was on Sunday afternoon only. On Friday the directors of Chamber of Commerce attended the show in a body, and went away well pleased, for it was through their efforts that the exhibition was held.

The judging was left to local men entirely, and the point system was a little new to them, but though a few decisions were a little off color, very little kicking was heard.

The display of pot chrysanthemums was very creditable, those grown by the Park Floral Co. especially so; Mrs. Weeks and Miss Georgiana Pitcher being well done. In the cut chrysanthemum classes, some grand blooms were staged. The new ones were absent, but some standard sorts were shown that were hard to beat. The Colfax Ave. Floral Co. exhibited a vase each of Niveus, Viviand-Morel, and Bonnaffon that were extra fine. A vase of Pennsylvania, shown by the Park Floral Co., was about the finest thing in the show in the line of cut chrysanthemums. A beautiful silver cup was offered by Senator Wolcott, for vase of 12 chrysanthemums, scoring highest number of points, and this vase took the prize.

The display of roses was grand, Bridesmaid and Bride being particularly well done. Two vases of Liberty were staged, and caused enough comment to guarantee that this rose will take, when it can be had.

The competition in carnations was extensive, and close. The Park Floral Co. showed vases of Lawson, Crocker, Olympia and The Marquis, that scored. The Colfax Floral Co. had fine vases of Mary Wood, Bradt and Triumph. Of all the carnations at the end of the show, Lawson stood out the best. It's a beauty any way you take it.

In arrangements the display was good. Both the Park Floral Co. and the Colfax Floral Co. showed good mantels. The former made a neat job in which a perfect color scheme was carried out. The Colfax mantel was rather heavily trimmed, but altogether it looked good for what it was intended, a "bridal mantel."

In the table decorations there were four entries, and here the judges had a hard time; and their decision caused quite a little dissatisfaction among the public. The Colfax table, which took first prize, was an arrangement of baskets of pink roses, with an extra amount of ribbon, which when completed, was altogether too heavy for the size of the table. The Park Floral Co.'s table which took second, was an arrangement with a low flat basket of Gloire de Lorraine begonia, that looked very new. Ethel Crocker carnations were used as favors on this table.

On the Clark (of Colorado Springs) table a centerpiece of Lawson carnations was used, with favors of the same flower. This table was thought by many to have a chance for first.

The show of miscellaneous stock was above the ordinary, and the groups of decorative plants were also good, and well put up.

The exhibit that caused the most comment was a group of 12 geraniums, shown by the Park Floral Co. As one paper remarked the next day, "Some kind gardener took pity on the poor old geranium, and nursed him along as he would something better, with the result that he stood out as proudly as anything in the show," and this is about right, for seldom is such fine stock seen.

One exhibit which attracted a great deal of attention was a reproduction of the floral decorations around the grave of Robert Burns, the Scotch poet, made by Andrew Haig, a Scotch florist of this city.

Altogether we have had a very successful show and one that gives ambition to start on a better one next year.

The Awards.

Best four 12-inch chrysanthemum plants, Park Floral Co., first, with Mrs. Weeks, Mutual Friend, Georgiana Pitcher and Lincoln. Six white, 6-inch, Park Floral Co., with Weeks.

Six pink, 6-inch, same exhibitor, with Iora, who were also first for six yellow, 6-inch, with Georgiana Pitcher; 20 single stem, 5-inch; flowering begonias, six varieties; 12 geraniums.

In potted carnations there was no competition, the Park Floral Co. winning first with Lawson, Crocker, Olympia, Marquis, Flora Hill and White Cloud.

The Park Floral Co. were the only exhibitors in the collection of blooming plants. They made a very creditable display of primulas, cyclamens, browallia, cattleyas, Begonia Gloire de Lorrine, stevia, poinsettia and Roman hyacinths in pans.

In the classes for 12 palms, for 12 ferns, and for six rex begonias the Park Floral Co. was awarded first. Emil Forter, gardener to C. B. Kountze, with Latania borbonica, was first for best decorative plant, commercial growers being excluded from this competition.

For decorative group arranged for effect, 100 square feet, Colfax Avenue Floral Co. took first, Park Floral Co. second.

In the competition for cut blooms chrysanthemums, Colfax Avenue Floral Co. won first with 12 blooms of Niveus, which were unusually well done; F. F. Crumb, of Colorado Springs, second with The Queen, Colfax Avenue Floral Co. also won first in pink with Viviand-Morel, and won in the class for six vases, six varieties with Iora, Weeks, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Niveus, and Bonnaffon. In the class for 20 single blooms the Colfax won first, Bonnaffon, The Queen and Philadelphia being noticeably well done. The Park Floral Co. was first with Pennsylvania, and this vase carried with it the Wolcott Cup given for the vase of 12, any class in the show scoring the highest number of points. The Park Floral Co. also won first in the "any other" class with Xeno, one of last year's novelties. As shown here, it would seem likely to become a standard sort.

The Williams Cup of sterling silver, offered for the best seedling chrysanthemum, was not competed for and will doubtless be put up again in the same class by the society next year. Seedling growers; please take notice.

The roses and carnations staged on Saturday were a grand display and we wish they might have been seen by that class of Eastern growers who appear to think that nothing good can come out of the West. Al. Mauff was easily cock of the walk in the rose competition with swards of first in Beauty, Wootton, Bride and Bridesmaid. He was also awarded second in the any other class for a vase of Mermet which, to most observers, was a better vase than almost anything else in the show. The Colfax Company were first in this class with a vase of very fair Liberty. Colfax also won first for Perle; F. F. Crump being second in this class and also in Wootton. The Park Floral Co. were first in Kaiserin, and ran second to Mauff in Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid.

In the carnations the competition was lively and, in a good many instances, close. The Park Floral Co. were first with Crane The Marquis, Lawson, Maceo and Olympia, and in the seedling classes won first, second and third. Colfax was first with Mary Wood, and with Scott.

In violets, J. W. Smith, of Colorado Springs, won first for 100 double, with an exceptionally well-colored bunch of Marie Louise. Lyle C. Waterbury was first in singles, with Princess of Wales.

For best hand bouquet, Gallup Floral Co. received first prize on a pretty shower, and Scott Anthony, second, on an old-fashioned round bouquet. For the best funeral bouquet, The Floral Park Co. received first prize with a bunch of chrysanthemums; Gallup Floral Co., second. For best basket of chrysanthemums, The Park Floral Company were also first with an arrangement of chrysanthemums and Autumn leaves; John Berry second with a basket of pink chrysanthemums and asparagus. For the best basket of flowers, other than chrysanthemums, The Park Floral Co. was first; Gallup Floral Co. second. In the mantel decoration, The Park Floral Co. was first; Colfax, second. In the table decorations, The Colfax Avenue Floral Co. received first prize; Park Floral Co., second; Wm. Clark, of Colorado Springs, third.

DENVER.

Andover, Mass.

The Gardeners and Florists' Club held a very successful show, November 8 and 9. The principal prizetakers were, for chrysanthemum blooms, J. A. Playdon and George Millett, who divided honors in all the classes. Mr. Playdon was also successful in the class for violets. Mitchell Bros. took first for pansies. George Piddington carried off the honors in the rose classes. Messrs. Ripley, Piddington and Millett had the best displays of chrysanthemum plants. H. H. Tyer took first for collection of evergreens, suitable for indoor decoration. Mr. Ripley had the best specimen geranium.

The judges were Messrs. Farquhar, Boston; Wheeler, Brookline, Mass., and Angus, North Andover, Mass.

TORONTO FLOWER SHOW.

The eleventh annual chrysanthemum show of the Toronto Gardeners and Florists' Association was probably the finest exhibition we have ever had; but it was the worst patronized of any of them. There were several reasons for this. In the first place, the executive committee have not put in so much real work as usual; next, the weather, on two nights during the show, was very unfavorable, and the exhibition opened on the day of the Dominion election. Then, on Monday last, the soldier boys returned home from South Africa, and our people were out for fun and holiday making on that day. So that, altogether, circumstances were against good financial returns.

The hall had been decorated for a banquet to Lord Strathcona, the week before, and a considerable part of the decorations was left. On the stage was placed the finest group of orchids and nepenthes that has ever before been shown in Canada. Several of our wealthy visitors claimed that, although they had viewed many flower shows both in Europe and America, they had never seen such a fine collection staged before. The groups of foliage plants, etc., were also very good, some of the plants being exceptionally well grown and colored. Excelent music was provided, and on the night of the opening, the election returns were given, a special wire being put in for that purpose. But the people would not come.

The specimen chrysanthemums were rather better than usual, the one taking first prize being a very pretty plant of Ivory, shown by Horticultural Gardens. The specimens grown in pots, not over eight inches, were all good stock, the prizes being taken by the Horticultural Gardens and Exhibition Park. The plants shown by the latter were a little late. The best standard plant was grown at Exhibition Park, and was a good plant of Bonnaffon. The single stemmed, and single bloom plants were a very fine lot. They were shown by the Horticultural Gardens, Exhibition Park and Grainger Bros. In the chrysanthemum plants, and group of foliage plants and chrysanthemums, the Horticultural Gardens took most of the first prizes.

Grainger Bros., William Day & Sons, and Manton Bros., also staged good exhibits of chrysanthemums and commercial plants. Manton Bros. also had a nice little exhibit of orchids and foliage plants. Messrs. Grobba & Wandrey, staged some of their fine cyclamens. The exhibits of small ferns were very good, and made a nice show around the tables, on which the cut blooms were placed.

The class for six flowering plants, distinct varieties, brought out some fine plants, and though none of them was extra well grown, they were good enough to show what might be done with some of them.

The display of cut chrysanthemums was quite up to the standard, most of the varieties exhibited being well known ones. Mrs. Weeks was, to my mind, the finest white; Bonnaffon, and Golden Wedding being the best yellows. Black Hawk was the favorite dark variety, while the best pinks were Mrs. Perrin, H. Bloodgood, Morel, etc. J. H. Dunlop, Miller & Sons, J. Gammage, London, Grainger Bros. J. Jennings, George Hollis, and Dale, and the Horticultural Gardens were the exhibitors, and all the blooms were good.

The roses shown were of extra quality Dale came out very strong; his bunch of Beauty being very fine; while his Liberty, Sunrise, Morgan, etc., were splendid flowers. All the stock from this establishment proved that Ned Dale is a worthy successor to his most respected brother, Harry. Dunlop had also some very fine roses. His Bridesmaid and Bride were very fine, also Liberty, Meteor, Beauty, and Lady Dorothea, etc. William Lawrence also staged some very good roses in several classes, holding his own well with the larger growers.

The carnations exhibited were extra fine, and the judges must have had considerable trouble to decide the best. Dunlop, Dale, Lawrence, Gammage and Miller & Sons, all exhibited fine flowers in this class. Many of the varieties shown were of recent introduction.

Princess of Wales was the best single violet, but some of the California were very good. The double ones were not quite up to the usual standard here.

George Hollis staged a vase of seedling chrysanthemums, of which I will send an account later. Messrs. Miller & Sons did not stage any of their Timothy Eaton this year; but we are pleased to hear that they won a silver cup at Chicago with this variety.

The show of designs and baskets of flowers was extra good; and here again the judge had his work cut out for him. The floral designs were shown by Tidy, Brown, Gammage, Dunlop, and Simmons. All but Gammage used orchids in their work. The pieces were all good, and but little fault could be found with any of them, either for the quality of the work or of the flowers used.

The judges were: For plants and cut chrysanthemums, A. H. Ewing, Berlin, Ont.; other cut flowers and designs, William Scott of Buffalo. Both gentlemen have many friends here; and though, in many of the classes, competition was very close, I have heard but little grumbling at their decisions. Mr. Scott was in fine trim, and if the Pan-American exhibition is half what he cracks it up to be, we'll all have to go and see it. His descriptions of the grounds and buildings are always given in his best style, and generally wind up with "but you must come to see it." T. M.

MONTREAL FLOWER SHOW.

The thirteenth annual chrysanthemum show, held under the auspices of the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club, opened in the Windsor Hall on Monday evening, November 12, under what would have been most favorable conditions had not the wretched weather spoiled everything. Lord Strathcona, the club's honorary president, presided, and was supported by ex-Mayor Wilson Smith and several of our leading citizens. His Lordship was enthusiastic in his praise of the exhibition, and assured the club of his continued support.

The exhibition, as a whole, was decidedly in advance of its predecessors, and in no section was this more pronounced than in the specimen plants. The Challenge Cup for six specimens was captured, after very keen competition, by C. A. Smith, with Geo. Pascol second. The cup for twelve blooms fell the third time in succession to W. J. Wilshire, gardener to R. B. Angus, Esq. The cup is now Mr. Wilshire's property. Fred. C. Smith captured first place in groups of chrysanthemums and foliage plants. W. Whitman first place in chrysanthemums only.

First place for mantel decoration fell to Wilshire Bros., Jos. Bennett taking second. Wilshire Bros. also took first for design of cut flowers and basket of flowers; Jos. Bennett first for wreath of chrysanthemums and basket of chrysanthemums.

Financially the show promises to be a failure, owing solely to the wretched weather. Full particulars in our next issue. B.

New Rose Baltimore.

The new rose, Baltimore H. T. (John Cook, 1900—(see illustration), is a hybrid between Rivoir and Mary Fitzwilliam; both parents are hybrid teas. It is vigorous in growth, each shoot terminating in a flower. Plants propagated in Spring and planted on benches out of 3-inch pots in June, have at this time (November) made from five to seven strong canes from 2½ to 4½ feet in height. The leaves are thickly set, leathery and dark green. The flower is large, globular, in form, and especially beautiful when fully open. The color is a soft pearl white, with a faint suffusion of yellow and a pretty tinge of pink in the center, which gradually fades toward the border of the flower. The color recalls that of Captain Christy rose, but it is somewhat softer. The flowers are cut with absolutely stiff stems of 2 to 3½ feet. The foliage, continuing well up to the flower, makes a most pleasing contrast. In artificial light the pink of the flower gains in intensity, and is of fine effect with damask cloth and silver.

The photograph gives a fair idea of the beauty of this new rose. In every respect it seems to be equal to American Beauty; the flower is quite as large, if not larger; in form it is similar, but more full. The stems carry the flower well erect, are well furnished with fine foliage, and are 2 to 3 feet in length.

In productiveness the Baltimore is at least equal to Beauty. Mr. Cook grows the new variety in about 70 degrees, and the benches are a picture of health and vigor. T. E.

Toronto.

Business has been fairly good, but stock is so plentiful that even extra good trade makes but little impression on it. Good violets are a little scarce.

Fred Brown is opening a fine store on Yonge Street, this week. T. M.

Our Supplement Illustration.

The chrysanthemum blooms shown in the illustration, represent the standard varieties on the New York market during the week ending November 10, 1900.

Major Bonnaffon was grown by H. Ramm, Secaucus, N. J.; and sold by G. E. Bradshaw, 53 West 28 Street.

Modesto was grown by A. C. Zvolanek, Grand View, N. J., and handled by Edward C. Horan, 47 West 28th Street.

Mrs. H Weeks was handled by John Young, 51 West 28th Street, and grown by Leach Bros., of Jersey City.

Col. D. Appleton was grown by Mrs. Weaver, Bloomfield, N. J., and sold by William Ghormley, No. 57 West 28th Street.

Pennsylvania was grown by A. Herrington, Madison, N. J., and handled by Thomas Young, Jr., 43 West 28th Street.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

The Galveston florists, at their last meeting, ordered a letter of thanks to be sent to John N. May, of Summit, N. J., for a donation of 1000 roses, and to John Peed & Son, West Norwood, London, Eng. Mr. Pruessner was instructed to call in the balance of the stock previously pledged.

Florists and Advertising.

In his very practical paper, copy of which we publish elsewhere in this issue, Samuel S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, gives some pertinent advice as to the means to be employed by the florist trade in bringing the products of the craft before the public for the purpose of sale. Briefly put, Mr. Pennock sums up the whole matter in five words: "By judicious advertising and display," and testifies to the efficacy of the flower show along these lines.

It is a well-known fact, and one that is often commented upon adversely, that the retail florist is slow to recognize the importance of advertising his wares in a public medium, being content to abide by the pulling results of the "window display." In no other line of business is this antipathy and short-sightedness prevalent to the same marked degree as it exists in the florist trade, and there is none where publicity is of greater necessity than his. The very nature of the industry, and its present status in the community—the florist's products being yet regarded as a luxury—demand that these products should at all times and on all occasions be brought to the public's notice in order that the greatest possible advantage may be reaped and progress achieved.

Not only in the matter of newspaper and periodical advertising is there a wrong conception prevalent, to a greater or less extent, but also in the factors which now form a partial substitute therefor, viz.: the exhibitions. There exists by far too much apathy in regard to flower shows, and too great an ignorance or misconception of their trade-drawing influences. The very fact that the holding of these exhibitions is the only method of public advertising in vogue, generally adopted by the trade, is a very sufficient reason why they should be more liberally supported, and greater interest in them taken by florists, and why every city and town should have its flower show and as often during the year as practicable. As Mr. Pennock rightly says: "A successful show means far more to the flower trade than can be estimated. Judicious advertising by this means is a paying investment."

But the influence of the window display and the flower show being necessarily limited, these business makers should be supplemented by continuous advertising in some public medium or manner in order that this means of drawing custom may be far-reaching, with accompanying advancement and benefit.

Hydrocyanic Acid Gas.

The use of hydrocyanic acid gas in greenhouses for the extermination of insect pests has not become general, owing to the highly dangerous nature of the substance in question, as at present applied. At the recent meeting of the Association of Economic Entomologists, the objection to the use of this gas by florists was discussed by the learned professors there present, and the necessity for extreme care in the application of the substance generally emphasized, although one of the delegates remarked that "the fear that exists in the East over the use of hydrocyanic acid gas was looked upon by many Californians as very funny. In that state the greenhouse man will pick up his material in his hands, charge his vessel, walk out deliberately, and close the door after him." One delegate suggested the use, in cases where only a small amount of the gas is required, of gelatine capsules, which require about one minute to be eaten through by the acid. Another suggestion was to have a small lead tube leading from the outside of the house, the vessel containing the cyanide being placed under the tube, the greenhouse door closed and locked; the water and acid freshly mixed, being poured in through the little funnel or tube and the aperture closed.

The efficacious nature of hydrocyanic acid gas as an insecticide is generally admitted by all who have experimented with it, and we hope our scientific men will discover some easy method of applying the substance, which will minimize or entirely remove the danger to human life, consequent upon the operation.

OBITUARY.

E. Pynaert.

Edouard Pynaert, a well-known Belgian horticulturist and author, died October 28. Deceased was head of the establishment of Pynaert Van Geert of Ghent.

R. Homeyer.

Richard Homeyer, who for almost four years has been a faithful employe of James McManus, wholesale florist, New York, died at the Post Graduate Hospital on Wednesday night last. Deceased was only 21 years old and succumbed after being operated upon for the removal of a tumor. His home was at Newtown, L. I. He was much respected by his employer and all who came in contact with him. The funeral will be held to-day (Saturday).

H. W. Leiderley.

Herman W. Leiderley died suddenly at his home in Troy, N. Y., Nov. 9. Though Mr. Leiderley had been complaining recently of stomach trouble, it was not supposed that his illness was of a serious nature, and his death was a shock to his many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Leiderley were contemplating a trip to Europe in the near future. The deceased was 53 years of age. He conducted for many years a florist's business at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Third Street, Lansingburg, and had also greenhouses in Troy. He was born in Berlin, Germany. His widow survives him.

Henry Miller.

Henry Miller, one of the oldest and best known florists of the 26th Ward, Brooklyn, died after a short illness, Sunday, November 11, 1900, at his home, Jamaica Ave., at the age of 78 years. Mr. Miller was born at Alzey, Germany, February 19, 1823. Coming to this country in 1841, he secured a position as gardener with Ex-Governor Morris, at White Plains, for three years. Leaving this place he started in business for himself in the old town of New Lots, now 26th Ward, Brooklyn, and had conducted a florist's establishment until three years ago when he retired, and was succeeded by his son, A. L. Miller.

New York Florists' Club.

The monthly meeting of the club was held Monday evening, November 12, President O'Mara in the chair.

The committee on testimonial to Mr. Plumb, submitted a set of resolutions testifying to that gentleman's loyalty and unselfish devotion to the organization, and to his manly qualities, which had endeared him to all his confréres. The committee regarded Mr. Plumb's departure from America as a great loss to the horticultural fraternity. The resolutions were ordered suitably engrossed and forwarded to Mr. Plumb.

The Plan and Scope Committee reported progress. President O'Mara again emphasized the necessity of the club holding an exhibition in New York City, either under its own auspices, or in conjunction with some of the societies already organized and giving shows in the city.

Samuel Henshaw was elected a trustee to serve for the unexpired term of Mr. Plumb, resigned.

Silk "fingers" for encasing the stems of bride, corsage, and other bouquets, shown by W. I. Brower, were given an award of merit by a special committee. These "fingers," Mr. Brower says, are in great requisition by his customers.

The nomination of officers resulted as follows: For president, W. F. Sheridan and Frank Traendly; vice-president, Julius Lang, C. G. Weber and Alex. Wallace; for secretary, John Young; for treasurer, C. B. Weathered, and Alex. Burns.

President O'Mara and Vice-President Herrington received the largest number of votes for their respective offices, but, while thanking their friends and appreciating the compliment, positively declined to stand for re-election.

The president gave a very interesting account of his recent trip West. He attended the annual Shaw banquet, at St. Louis, as representing the Society of American Florists. He spoke of the great progress that had been made in the Missouri Botanical Gardens since 1893—the date of the visit of the S. A. F. to that city. New glass had been added, and the collection of plants was larger, and generally in much better condition. A hardy herbaceous garden, 20 acres in extent, is being laid out much on the lines of a similar garden at Bronx Park; surrounding that garden is a border of shrubs, necessitating the planting of 20,000 subjects. Advantage is to be taken of a stream of water running through the center of this plot, to plant aquatics. Mr. O'Mara also visited the establishment of the Michel Plant and Bulb Co. One thing that interested him there was the fact that a special shed had been built for keeping "boarders." The shed was constructed with just enough sash in the roof to afford light, and the firm was receiving very fair prices for the storing of these plants, and at present believed it had solved the boarder problem.

At E. G. Hill & Co.'s, Richmond, Ind., roses and carnations were notable among other interesting features. One new rose that attracted attention was the Marquis de Litta, a variety that had been given the highest award at the recent Chicago Show. This variety was likely to give much satisfaction as a Winter bloomer.

Speaking of the great "plant factories" at Chicago, Mr. O'Mara said that some of the conceit was taken out of him when he viewed the immense establishments of Reinberg Bros., Wietor Bros., Bassett & Washburn, and others, and the excellent quality of the stock in these houses was an agreeable surprise to him. There was hardly a symptom of black spot on American Beauty roses, which, considering the warm Fall weather, was a matter for congratulation. Mr. O'Mara thought that the Chicago florists were able to produce stock at a lower cost than it was possible to do in the East. This was owing to the small amount of help employed, the less cost of construction and the cheaper price at which coal could be purchased. He characterized the establishment of Bassett & Washburn, with its 600,000 feet of glass, mainly devoted to roses and carnations, as a commercial establishment pure and simple, every available foot of space being taken advantage of. He never saw a finer lot of carnations in his life than he witnessed here. Every bench on the place was planted on the top of tiles; that is, a false bottom is first put on, then tiles are placed side by side, and on top of that the same depth of soil as is used generally, in which the plants are placed. The president was particularly interested in furnace blowers, used in the boilers of this firm, the object of which is to consume all the smoke and gases, so that soft coal can be employed without any of the deleterious effects which generally result from its use. Mr. Washburn assured the speaker that by these blowers he effected a saving of 25 per cent. annually on his coal bill, in addition to the enhancement of the quality of the stock grown through the removal of the disadvantages which follow upon the use of soft coal.

The Chicago Carnation Co., at Joliet, was also visited by President O'Mara and his party. Here mostly seedlings of the firm's own production are grown.

Speaking of the late Chicago Show, where he was one of the judges, Mr. O'Mara said he had been informed that it was not up to the standard generally, largely owing to the fact that some florists, for some reason or other, did not compete; men who had promised to send stock had not sent it. The interest seemed to be flagging. This was certainly not on account of the premium list, which was an extremely liberal one. Mr. O'Mara said he was particularly struck with the violets exhibited at the show. He candidly believed that if such violets as were shown there, had found their way into the markets of the East they would have been consigned to the rubbish heap. He was astonished at the miserable quality, but was told it was about as good as the Chicago market received. Considering that that city was only 900 miles from New York, he believed that the violet surplus accumulating here at times, could find its way out there at a profit. A bunch of 25 of our Eastern blooms would be as big as the best 100 put up there. One astonishing feature was the immense territory that Chicago drained for cut flowers. Chrysanthemums came from as far away as Toledo, Ohio; in fact, blooms from that city were as fine as any arriving at the Chicago market at the present time. Indiana was also a contributing source, and the Chicago market acted as a center of distribution for the same territories from which the supplies were received, as also for further West, and as far South as New Orleans. With the increased amount of glass going up around Chicago, and in other Western cities, it appeared to him that a serious problem would arise as to the disposition of the flowers; still, if the population increased in the same ratio, an outlet might be found.

He spoke highly of the interest taken by the directors of the Chicago Horticultural Society in their exhibitions. These gentlemen, who were all monied people, seemed to feel that Chicago needed a horticultural show to maintain her position. While New York was really more metropolitan than the Westerncity, he believed that a similar interest to that exemplified in Chicago could be aroused among our wealthy people, and he again urged on the members the necessity of trying to create that interest.

In closing, Mr. O'Mara paid a high tribute to the hospitality of the Western florists, particularly those of Chicago, who did everything in their power to make their visitors feel at home. He also said that he was impressed by the enterprise and push found among Western florists. As a matter of fact, they were a pushing, enterprising and energetic lot. Though we did not lack these qualities in the East, there is a breeziness out there which is not found on the average here.

During the evening ex-Alderman Morris sought to introduce a resolution expressing the Florists' Club's disavowal of any matters having politics as their object, but the resolution was not entertained, the president stating that never at any time had the club countenanced or lent its aid to any political movement, that being entirely outside of its province.

The entertainment committee did the honors of the evening in its usual acceptable manner.

New York.

Market Notes.

Business in certain lines shows a marked improvement this week. Several important functions have called for large quantities of the choicest flowers, and this fact, taken with the material decrease in the supply of roses and violets, has had a very beneficial effect, giving both these products a good push upwards in value. Violets are very scarce, and with the Horse Show coming upon us next week, there is likely to be some hustling among the growers to meet the then demand for these flowers, and the price will probably reach the $2.50 mark. Since last Monday there has been a gradual advance daily on violet values, and by Thursday they were bringing $1.75 and $2. The crop seems to be off, however.

Roses appear to be in about the same condition as violets, so far as the supply is concerned; where there were hundreds coming in a few weeks ago, there are not dozens to-day, though those arriving are of good average quality. Special Bride and Bridesmaid are eagerly sought, and $8 per 100 is willingly paid. A few very choice blooms of the latter have realized as high as 10 cents each. American Beauty went up to 35c. each, for the very top grade; and other grades felt a proportionate rise in value. Meteor, of good quality, are coming in, and some have brought from $8 to $10 per 100.

Lily of the valley has been in good demand, and a fair increase in value is noted, a few of special grade having fetched $5 a 100.

Chrysanthemums, of ordinary size, are selling very slowly, especially yellow varieties, and prices have a downward tendency. Good blooms have gone as low as $3 per 100. Fancy grades have done somewhat better, and the price per dozen keeps between $2 and $3. Special fancy blooms have the best demand of all, and many of these have brought 50c. each when bought in quantity, even. The supply of cattleyas has shortened up considerably, C. labiata is about over, and when obtainable, fetch 50c. each.

Carnations are not selling so freely, excepting good white kinds, which go all right. Crimson varieties are very plentiful, and the demand just now does not seem to lean towards the deeper colored varieties. That General Maceo is maintaining its reputation for producing plenty of flowers, is seen by the enormous quantities of blooms of this variety that daily are sent in to the market.

Among the retailers several notable events have happened this week that have called for large displays of flowers, chiefly the funeral of Marcus Daly, the copper king. The orders for this occasion were on a large scale, and were furnished principally by Alex McConnell and J. Fleischmann.

Jottings.

A committee appointed by President F. Lehnig, of New York Florists' Market Association, will call on Mayor Van Wyck on Monday afternoon next at 1 o'clock, to confer about matters pertaining to the plant market. Others interested are cordially invited to join the committee.

S. H. Waterbury & Co. have opened a commission florist's store at 48 West 30th Street.

T. H. Dick, of the firm of Baker & Dick, 42 Park Place, contemplates taking a trip down to the moss country to arrange for the proper handling of the firm's increasing shipping business in this line. As the Cedar Swamps, where the moss is gathered, abound with game, Mr. Dick will combine business with pleasure, by taking his gun along and enjoying some hunting.

The council of the Horticultural Society of New York held a meeting in the rooms of the American Institute, Berkeley Lyceum, on Wednesday last, Dr. Britton presiding. A report by temporary Secretary Barron showed that the membership had reached 110, with additions expected. Considerable interest in the society is being taken by some of the best city people, and also those in the trade, and with proper support it is expected that the association will accomplish some very useful work the coming season. The next meeting will be held in the same place the second Wednesday in December.

Cleary & Co. announce a sale of cattleyas, and many other orchids, for Friday, November 23. The plants are offered by eastern and western growers. The popularity attained by orchids during the past few weeks will undoubtedly attract many of the growers to this unusual sale. The catalogue is most complete, and also includes several very choice varieties of exceptional rarity. Many of the plants are sheathed for flowering during the coming season.

Henry Dreyer, who for the past 12 years has been with A. Herrmann, is now in the employ of L. J. Kreshover, importer and dealer in florists' supplies, 112 West Twenty-seventh Street.

Dr. Britton, director of the New York Botanical Garden, returned from Europe last week after a seven weeks' trip. He visited the Paris Exposition, the large botanical gardens and museums of France, Germany and England, and the International Congress of Botanists held at Paris, where her epresented the Garden, being also an official delegate from the United States. The doctor, while abroad, secured many valuable specimens for the Garden.

Dahlia Helen Gould.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

The committee of judges representing the American Dahlia Society decided on the exhibit of dahlia blooms staged by O. B. Coomes, Jr., that the variety was not entitled to the name of Helen Gould, on the ground that it was simply a duplication of several known varieties: Uncertainty, Mary Eustace, Floral Park Jewel, and Miss Roth. The committee was anxious to avoid the creation of still more synonyms for the same variety. Five different men were present, and the vote was unanimous that Helen Gould was one and the same thing as Floral Park Jewel, Mary Eustace and Miss Roth. The name Uncertainty appears first in the official notice sent out on the score that Uncertainty is the fixed name by which the variety is known.

Mr. Coomes seems to avoid the full issue, and quibbles on the name Uncertainty, yet he admits that the color of Helen Gould will vary a little, but that the majority are of the color of the Daybreak carnation; and that is just the point. The blooms were carefully examined and evidences were present proving conclusively that the distinctive features of Uncertainty were strongly apparent in his variety. Mr. Coomes himself admitted to me personally that the growth and habit of the plant were the same as those of Floral Park Jewel. There seems to be nothing further to be done in the matter than to stand by the decision of the committee, which was composed of some very eminent dahlia growers, men of large experience, who, without any hesitation or equivocation, decided, in response to the several protests, which had been handed in, that the dahlia in question was not entitled to the name of Helen Gould.

JAMES W. WITHERS,
Secretary American Dahlia Society.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

In your issue of November 3, Mr. Granz states: "The dahlia Helen Gould is nothing but a run out Mary Eustace," and that he visited my place personally, and told me the dahlia in question was the variety Mary Eustace. He also says in this case, the color is almost similar to that of the red Bradt carnation, and he thinks I have selected the light colored flowers for a few years, so that the majority of the blooms come light colored. Now, if Mr. Granz knows anything about the dahlia Mary Enstace, he knows very well that it reverts to the dark and not to the lighter color, which anyone who has ever grown it will tell him.

When he visited my place my dahlias were not in condition for anyone to judge them. They had just started to show bloom. I had not cut any flowers yet, as on my whole patch of about 2,000 dahlias, of different varieties, one could not cut 25 blooms. The plants were covered with thrips, which made the foliage look sickly. Mr. Granz informed me at the time that the plants were diseased and advised me to throw them out, as they would never amount to anything. But I did not take his advice, and I never had dahlias do better than this year in their season. He also said that the dahlia looked like Mary Eustace. (He did not see anything but light-colored flowers; he imagined the dark ones would come later); but I told him it was not that variety, which I know, by having grown it. When he says the color is similar to that of the red Bradt carnation, this assertion itself proves that he is not acquainted with the dahlia Helen Gould.

The first and the last portions of his letter do not agree. In the first part he asserts the variety is Mary Eustace run out, and in the last part he thinks that I have selected the plants. Now, if they run out, as he states, there would be no need of selecting the plants.

I would inform him that the flowers all come light colored, and that the stock of Helen Gould all came from one plant.

Referring to Mr. Peacock's letter, appearing also in your issue of the 3rd, according to his way of judging, he can tell all about a dahlia that he has never seen growing, by seeing 25 blooms, and imagining the rest. He gives a description of Floral Park Jewel, and tells me to tack on to the same the name of Helen Gould, where it don't fit. He never saw any dark flowers of this variety at the Institute Show; nor in my letter is there anything to lead him to believe one plant will produce six different colored flowers.

He says: "Now the question arises, did the Dahlia Society overstep its bounds?" I claim they did when they judged the dahlia, not by what they saw of it, but what they imagined, which the wording of their report, ("The chances would be that the stock would revert back to the deeper color by which 'Uncertainty' is known)," proves.

Mr. Peacock makes the assertion that he "purchased the very identical variation, so-called Helen Gould, under the name of Mary Eustace," when according to his own description the varieties are not the same. If he will read my letter again he will see that I made no statement that would lead him to believe there is any such variation, as he asserts.

He says: "It is a well-known fact among dahlia growers, that all fancy varieties will vary and sport, the latter permanently, but the former is an essential part and characteristic of the variety." I agree with him there, for if he takes Floral Park Jewel, the many colored flowers on one plant characterize the variety; but when he takes Helen Gould, the light-colored blooms characterize it as a variety entirely different from the former. In closing Mr. Peacock states: "Dahlias sold regularly in Philadelphia at from $1 to $5 per 100." I can only find dahlias in Philadelphia quoted once this season in the FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, and that is in the issue of October 6, where it states: "Quite a number of outdoor flowers are still coming in, the bulk of which are dahlias. Some colors of these sell fairly well, but the demand generally is light." By going back over the issues of the EXCHANGE, for eight years, I find dahlias in Philadelphia quoted nine times, and the highest quotation given is $1.50 per 100. When Mr. Peacock tries to belittle the price that Helen Gould brought, it is very evident he is not posted on the prices of dahlias in New York. I grew dahlias before I ever heard of Mr. Peacock (and I am quite young yet), and have sold more at 50c. and under per 100, than I have above that figure, and they were not what is known as dirt either,

O. B. COOMES, JR.

Stem Rot in Carnations.

Editor Florists' Exchange.

Responding to your Philadelphia correspondent's request about stem rot in carnations, my observations, extending over several years past, indicate to me that climatic conditions, rather than anything else, are the chief causes of the trouble. I would advance the opinion that the fungus development is rather a result of the condition than a cause. I have no doubt of one thing, however, which I believe to be the chief cause, and that is, I always look for (and never fail to find) stem-rotted plants after any high ranges of temperature; and whether the plants are in the cutting bench, field, or planted out in the houses, the results are the same, the quantities varying with preceding conditions. Thus, after heavy rains inducing soft growth, a rise of temperature into the nineties is, I find, a capital condition for the development of stem rot, the damage getting smaller as the wood was harder previously, yet there always appears to be some rot after each and every hot spell. Some varieties are also more susceptible to attack than others; the woodier ones being able to withstand it more than those of soft growth. These being the natural conditions in the field it follows, therefore, that first surroundings after planting in are in fine shape for a plentiful crop of stem rot, unless the weather be exceptionally favorable and cool. Usually, however, we get several spells of hot weather after planting in, and as there has been the additional drawback of disturbance of the roots, the results are more fatal. As the weather grows cooler, and the plants become established, it consequently follows that losses through the Winter are very few.

I have not yet been able to discover that deep planting had any bearing at all on stem rot, or that lime, salt, or anything else I have tried, had a deterrent effect. I have simply found the trouble after every hot spell whether indoor or out in greater or less degree, according to the previous circumstances.

I have not any suggestions to offer as to a preventive, but the rules I myself follow are to propagate only from the best selected plants I have, early; to plant out early, and to plant in medium early. I aim to get moderate sized plants, of stocky growth, and to have enough to fill the blanks either in pots or in a bench. Moreover, I don't disturb my beds till the plants are well established, simply contenting myself by picking off the weeds. By following these rules I don't think I suffer as much as I might otherwise do. S. B.

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—At time of writing (November 1) geraniums are a blaze of color. I saw the finest bed of double petunias this morning I have seen the entire Summer. This mild weather seriously affects the sale of plants, particularly chrysanthemums in pots, which are fine in this city—a show in themselves. At the Gasser greenhouses the best kinds are Helen Bloodgood, Viviand-Morel, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Ivory, Golden Wedding. Mrs. Conover makes too soft a growth in this latitude near the lake. Roses look vigorous, particularly Beauty and Cusin. Mr. Kennedy has plans made for two houses, each 240x25 feet, for roses for Summer blooming.

Herman Hart grows Bergmann and Glory of Pacific for earliest chrysanthemums. Mrs. Perrin, Bonnaffon and Morel constitute his best kinds. He grows single blooms and three and four to a plant to accommodate all classes of buyers. Just so soon as the benches are cleared hydrangeas take up the vacant space. A fine lot of stock may be seen at this place. With carnations, Victor and The Marquis bunched together, it requires an expert to tell them.

A. Graham & Son are not growing many large chrysanthemums. Three to four blooms to a plant find the readiest sale. Ivory is a leader. Carnations are looking well; Ethel Crocker is a favorite. While agreeing it is premature to pass judgment on the varieties of recent introduction, this sort shows up best of all for freedom and earliness of bloom.

August Schmitt plants his chrysanthemums in a unique way, each bed of one color. Ivory, Bonnaffon and Mrs. Perrin are his best and leading kinds. Some grand stock may be seen here—bold stems, leathery foliage, no sign of disease or that pesky worm that attacks plants of sickly growth or constitution. His new carnation houses are producing some fine blooms, which find ready sale, even at this rather dull time.

Smith & Fetters report brisk business in the decorative branch, and the advent of a cold snap would make them more than busy.

Wm. Brinker reports a first-class bulb season, which cleaned him out of stock. He is busy with tree planting in conjunction with Storrs, & Harrison Co., whose stocks, both in the nursery and under glass, never were in finer shape than at the present time.

UTICA, N. Y.—Wm. Mathews will have a fine lot of Cattleya labiata at Thanksgiving and C. Trianæ at Christmas. He holds his plants back. They are vigorous and full of promise.

Springfield, Mass.

Your correspondent was misinformed about the source of the fine chrysanthemums mentioned in a former letter. Frank Burfett, in charge of Mark Aitken's greenhouses, was the grower. He has had the best grown flowers raised in this section for some time.

D. J. Murphy, who has been in the growing business near Boston for several years, has leased the Eastern Avenue greenhouses formerly managed by C. F. Fairfield, and will grow for the trade. He gave a chrysanthemum show at the greenhouses, November 3, that was well attended. Some well-grown plants were shown.

William Wilkinson, who has been at the Boston and Albany greenhouses for some time, is now in the employ of Mark Aitken. G.

Boston.

The Market.

Business maintains its even condition. Roses have shortened up somewhat in supply, but there is still a sufficient quantity of all kinds, daily. With an increased demand the curtailment would be more felt, and prices would benefit. Beauty were held at slightly higher prices for a day or two this week; but these could not be sustained. Bride and Bridesmaid have improved in quality, and values on them are a little better. Carnot are in fair supply and meet with a ready sale at from $4 to $12.50 per 100. Liberty are scarce, but when procurable sell very well at from $4 to $8, for ordinary grades, extras going at $10 and $12.50, while a few fancy specials make $16. Morgan, Meteor, etc., are still small and move slowly.

Carnations continue very plentiful. Chrysanthemums are as abundant as ever. White varieties now most prominent are Ivory and Wanamaker. In yellow, Bonnaffon, Peter Kay and Rieman are coming best; and Mrs. Perrin and John Shrimpton are the most popular pink and red kinds, respectively. Prices (up to Wednesday) ranged from $3 to $6 for ordinary sizes, while fancies of all descriptions made $8, $10 and $12.50 per 100.

Violets have commenced to shorten up in quantity, but the quality is very well maintained, and prices hold steady. Valley is plentiful, at usual figures. A few Paper White narcissus and Roman hyacinths are in, and make about $2 per 100.

Jottings.

The Garden Committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the greenhouses of Edmund M. Wood, the Waban Rose Conservatories, at Natick, on Thursday, November 15.

Welch Bros. are receiving a very fine lot of American Beauty roses.

A change was made in Edmund M. Wood & Co.'s corps of salesmen last week. Duncan Robertson, who had one of the teams, returned to Scotland, and Del Cartwright, who had been at the stalls in the Flower Market, succeeded him. Mr. Donahue is now looking after the business at the Market.

H. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, brought in the first Harrisii lilies of the season on Tuesday.

J. W. Tailby & Son have been cutting some very good Paper White narcissus, and Roman hyacinths for so early in the season.

William H. Elliott is cutting some of the finest Liberty roses on the Boston Market, and finds the demand in excess of the supply, very good prices being realized.

William R. Smith, Washington, D. C., was in town last week.

Chrysanthemum Exhibition.

In the class for best vase of chrysanthemums arranged on long stems in the Society's large china vases, the medals, one of silver and the other of bronze, were awarded to Col. Chas. Pfaff and Est. of John Simpkins, respectively. Robert Montgomery received a bronze medal for his rose, Mrs. Oliver Ames. F. J. N.

Market Notes.

There has been a decided improvement in business since last writing; the cold weather stimulating a demand for cut flowers, combined with several weddings of note, and an unprecedented demand for design work. The sound money Republican parade Saturday evening, November 3, called for several thousand yellow chrysanthemums; several automobiles, and carriages were lavishly decorated for the occasion. Retailers report good trade ever since the election. Violets are the only Fall flowers that are scarce. The plants look healthy, but are not producing blooms. Good stock, however, can be had from Boston at 50c. per 100.

Chrysanthemums sell well, the medium sized blooms going best. Among the largest growers of these is Farquhar Macrae, whose new range of houses is in excellent condition, filled to overflowing with chrysanthemums, roses and carnations. Among the finest chrysanthemums seen in this section is Col. D. Appleton. This variety, exhibited at Newport this week, by F. Macrae, took first prize for vase of 10 yellow. Farquhar and John Macrae, Alex. Miller, J. B. Canning, N. D. Pierce, E. J. Johnston and a few others from this city, visited the show. The Newport boys provided an excellent dinner for all the visitors.

Club News.

The meeting of the Florists and Gardeners' Club, held last week, was largely attended. It being election night at the club, the following were the officers chosen for the ensuing year: William Hill, president; M. Sweeney, vice-president; F. Macrae, treasurer; Alexander Rennie, secretary. It was voted that the annual dinner be held on the second Thursday in January. At an early hour the meeting adjourned, as many of the members wished to call at the home of Mr. Sweeney, and extend sympathies to him in his late bereavement by the sudden death of his daughter, Elizabeth.

Jottings.

Hazard & Cutler, of Woonsocket, have recently moved into their new store. It is one of the best equipped in town.

H. W. Pierce has been very ill with a complication of diseases; last reports we are glad to hear, announce that he is improving. His friends wish him a speedy recovery. James McKenna of Providence has charge of the work for the present.

The chrysanthemum show now going on bids fair to surpass that of last year. A. M.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

ERIE, Pa.—S. A. Baur has added a house 145x25 feet, planted with McKinley, a bright orange chrysanthemum; very fine, sturdy habit, one of the best plants on the place. Glory of the Pacific was immense. Hydrangea otaksa is grown in large numbers and is doing well. I was shown a seedling carnation—a beautiful type of Daybreak. At present a halo of mystery surrounds it, but more will be heard of this gem in due season.

Herbert Tong is picking some of the finest Marie Louise violets seen outside of the Hudson River district. They find their way further, perhaps, as the bulk are shipped to Washington, where, also, some of his grand chrysanthemums, Mrs. G. M. Pullman and Mrs. Robinson, go.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Vice-President Kasting intends keeping, not open house, but open commission store all night to accommodate patrons residing out of town; also for the purpose of handling consignments arriving late in the day in better shape.

Wm. Scott is receiving fine pickings of the new carnations from Corfu. As growing there Lawson, Crocker and The Marquis are perfectly satisfactory. Chrysanthemums at Cold Springs are selling at a lively rate. Polly Rose, Yellow Monarch are the earliest and are past. Glory of the Pacific, Ivory and Golden Wedding are now in perfect condition to cut.

W. J. Palmer & Son are as strong as ever on Daybreak carnations, which, with Meteor rose, are two of the chief items grown extensively at Lancaster. A feature in window decorations is a large basket of Cattleya labiata, lily of the valley and adiantum.

I ran out to South Park and interviewed J. F. Cowell, who tells me that by the time the Pan-American throws open its gates the grading required to finish the grounds surrounding the noble block of houses under his charge will be completed. Without a doubt, the most complete collection of palms and stove plants possessed by any institution can be seen here. The professor is justly proud of his charges from Cornell, Albright, and gathered by himself in the southern zone. All are in a flourishing condition.

Those who contemplate a visit to the Bison City next year—and that means every one—must not fail to make the trip to these young, but perfectly formed and conducted, botanic gardens and park.

Pan-American business is tersely given us by Superintendent Scott in his periodical bulletins. The season has been very favorable to planting, which goes on merrily. Buildings are going up rapidly. Some are almost completed, and the various tints being used, together with ornate architectural designs, are producing the most beautiful effects, never before seen.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—J. B. Keller's Sons have a batch of chrysanthemums that are peerless. One can hardly realize that plants raised from seed sown in September a year ago can be grown to such mammoth proportions.

State of Trade.

Since the weather has become cool and more seasonable, there is a decided slackening up of the supply of stock sent in, especially roses, and if the demand did not keep below normal for this time of the year, prices would surely advance to more reasonable figures, which condition at time of writing is not much in evidence. It is, however, the general feeling that in a week, or by Thanksgiving, and with the settling down to business after election, a better state of things will prevail. This is sincerely to be hoped, as certainly, so far, prices are below those of a year ago, which, by the way, is especially true of the chrysanthemum sales. Even the flower show, this year, contrary to custom in this city, does not seem to have had any beneficial effect in booming values. There are very few sales made at $3 per dozen, and the blooms must be fancy to fetch that figure. Good flowers, like Bonnaffon and Ivory, are sold at from $1 to $1.50, while $2 to $2.50 may be considered top notch for extra fancy blooms. Even the Greeks offer good stock on the streets, when they can get it, at $1 to $1.25 per dozen, while very good common flowers may be bought at from $3 to $6 per 100.

Carnations are not so over-abundant and sell as well as anything; the pick of the market at from $2 to $3—a slight advance over last week's figures.

For violets, there is only a moderate demand. Romans and Paper White narcissus are dull at $2 to $3. The supply of valley is about equal to the demand, at $3 to $4.

The Annual Club Banquet.

The annual banquet to the judges and visiting florists was held at the Egyptian Hall, Auditorium Hotel, on the night of Thursday, November 8, about 75 being present. The tables, as befitting the occasion, were elegantly decorated. The banquet was a brilliant success in every way, and Willis N. Rudd, as a committee of one, did all he promised to do.

On cigars being lighted the president in a few well chosen words of welcome, appointed J. C. Vaughan as toastmaster. Mr. Vaughan, with sundry happy remarks, introduced the president-elect of the S. A. F., Patrick O'Mara, New York, who, in his usual pleasing manner, told of what the society had done for the florists, and of course interspersed his remarks with several of his good stories before he got through.

What Mr. O'Mara did not think of, the two ex-presidents of the society—John N. May and E. Gurney Hill—when called upon, did, referring especially to the wonderful progress in the florist's business made since the society's inception. Other speakers were W. N. Rudd, John Thorpe, G. L. Grant, for the trade papers, G. A. Rackham and Harry Balsley, J. C. Rennison, C. C. Pollworth and George A. Kuhl. The Florists' Club quartette rendered a number of songs, being encored every time; and Fritz Blumenschneider sent one of his comical letters, through C. Colbrand. Balluff told a big story of the "banan" and George Washington and his little hatchet, the affair winding up with the singing of Auld Lang Syne, led by Edgar Sanders and the quartette.

On Dits.

It took eleven of the George Witthold Co.'s wagons, and one large van, to carry the firm's exhibits to and from the flower show.

Some of the chrysanthemum plants, from J. C. Vaughan's exhibits, were sent to Milwaukee, at the close of the exhibition.

Nick Wietor says that while roses are partially off crop, he thinks they are just right for Christmas trade.

McKellar & Winterson are handling a fine grade of Christmas greens, and have begun winding, rather early. Ess.

CHESTNUT HILL (PA.) SHOW.

The first annual exhibition of the Chestnut Hill (Pa.) Horticultural Society was opened November 7, continuing three days. The entire space of Joslin Hall was given to the show. On the lower floor were the vegetable exhibits, very attractive displays by Messrs. Dreer, Michell, Landreth and Waterer; a fine group of palms, ferns and foliage plants from the Mermald Greenhouses, and a water garden, with aquatic plants and water lilies in bloom, every one of which was cut from the outdoor ponds at the Dreer nurseries, Riverton, on Nov. 7.

The judges for the plants and cut blooms were Robert Craig, George Sibson, Paul Huebner and John Hobson.

The prize winners for cut chrysanthemums were John Cullen, gardener to Mr. Percival Roberts Pencoyd, first for 25 blooms, 25 varieties; 12 blooms, 12 varieties; six blooms any other color; six blooms American seedling not disseminated; six blooms red and six blooms yellow. J. A. Monahan, gardener to Mr. C. W. Trotter, Chestnut Hill, for best six blooms, pink. The awards for potted plants were: Best two plants, one white, one yellow, in not over 14-inch pots, to William Robertson, gardener to Mr. J. W. Pepper, Jenkintown. Best specimen plant, white, in not over 19-inch pot, to Mutual Friend, shown by W. Boyce, gardener to Mr. Randall Morgan, Chestnut Hill; second to Mrs. Weeks, exhibited by George W. Brown. Best plant, yellow, in not over six-inch pot, to W. Robertson, for Peter Kay; second, G. W. Brown, for Georgiana Pitcher. Best six plants, yellow, to Minerva, shown by Robert G. Carey, gardener to Mr. T. C. Price, Chestnut Hill. Best plant, any other color, in not over 10-inch pot, to George W. Childs, exhibited by W. Robertson; second, R. G. Carey, for Garden Queen. Best six plants, white, in not over six-inch pots, to Mayflower, shown by W. Robertson.

Awards in other classes were: Geraniums—Best three plants, to W. Robertson, for Mrs. Hay; Richard Bradt and Helianthus.

Violets—Best 50 single, Frank Gould; second, Richard Moore, gardener to Mr. James Cheston, Jr. Best 50 double, W. Kleinheinz. Best 50 Luzonne, Richard Moore. Michell's prize for best 50 single to Richard Moore.

The winners for 12 blooms of roses were W. Kleinheinz, first, for American Beauty and Liberty, second, for Bride; W. Robertson, second, for American Beauty; Robert Forrest, gardener to Mr. B. Boric, Jenkintown, first, for Bridesmaid, Bride, and any other variety.

There were 32 exhibitors in the classes open to school children, and the exhibit was highly commended, as a whole, by the judges.

George W. Brown was awarded the Landreth prize for the best collection of foliage plants, with a display that attracted much attention in the splendid condition of the entire showing. Also, the prize for the best ornamental foliage plant, this going to Licuala grandis. Michael Punch, gardener to Mr. R. Le Boutillier, won the prize for the best specimen fern—a fine Adiantum Farleyense.

The new pepper, "Improved Celestial," which was exhibited by Robert G. Carey, attracted considerable attention and was awarded a special mention. A new seedling canna, exhibited by the same gentleman, was also given special mention, the judges stating that it exceeded anything in dark red foliage that they had ever seen.

An exhibit made by H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, of 31 varieties of pompon chrysanthemums, was considered to be a most magnificent collection, and was made a special article of mention by the judges.

Frank Gould, gardener to Mr. John T. Morris, also had a very fine exhibit of pompon chrysanthemums, receiving a special mention. The Andorra Nurseries of Chestnut Hill, were awarded special mention for a similar exhibit.

John McElroy, gardener to Mr. Wm. G. Steel, of Mt. Airy, was given special mention for a vass of chrysanthemum blooms.

William Vanderveur, gardener to Mr. Wm. J. Latta, of Wissahickon Heights, had a very fine collection of crotons, which were given special mention.

Harry Harris, gardener to Mr. Robt. G. Fell, exhibited two fine yellow chrysanthemum plants, which were awarded special mention.

Edward Cox, gardener to Mr. Joseph Bromley, also got special mention for two specimen plants of the Boston fern.

Certificates of merit were awarded as follows: William Boyce, gardener to Randal Morgan, Esq., for a group of palms and araucarias; Henry A. Dreer, for Japanese anemones and Aster grandiflora; Frank Gould, for collection of flower and foliage plants; Henry A. Dreer, for new begonia, "Caledonia"; Robert Craig & Sons for new rose, Queen of Edgely.

Special premium was awarded to Percival Roberts, Jr., Pencoyd, Pa. (John Cullen, gardener), for a magnificent display of cut chrysanthemum blooms, which were not entered for competition; also a certificate of merit for six blooms of "Chestnut Hill" chrysanthemum, entered in the class calling for six blooms American seedling never disseminated. This seedling was raised and is controlled by Robt. G. Carey, gardener to Mr. Thomas C. Price, of Chestnut Hill.

A certificate of merit was awarded to Henry F. Mitchell for his complete and tastily arranged display of seeds, bulbs, implements and poultry food, etc. A certificate of merit was awarded to Albert Woltemate for his group of ornamental foliage and flowering plants, and to Henry A. Dreer for display of bulbs, seeds and horticultural supplies. A similar award went to Albert Schmidt for his display of rustic summer house and settees. A certificate of merit was also awarded to Henry A. Dreer for his display of palms and foliage plants, and great praise was given for his interesting display of aquatics. A certificate of merit was awarded to Chas. A. Knapp for his group of ornamental foliage plants; to Messrs. D. Landreth for their tasty display of rustic work and general garden supplies, and to H. Waterer for his exhaustive display of bulbs, mushroom spawn, imported orchid peat.

The school children of Chestnut Hill were given a cordial invitation to attend the show, which was taken advantage of by several hundred children, accompanied by the teachers.

SHOWS AT BALTIMORE.

The Gardeners' Club held a free show at the club rooms on Monday last, and the attendance was gratifying in a high degree. Fully 4,000 visitors enjoyed the creditable though comparatively small display. President Halliday was the soul of the organizers, and sent a fine group of palms, which formed a pleasing background for the three long tables on which the specimen flowers were arranged. There was just enough material to nicely fill the table space without crowding, and to create a handsome ensemble.

Ann Arundel County was an easy first in excellence of exhibits. G. D. Lotze had the finest vases: one of Major Bonnaffon, one of Col. D. Appleton, and one of Trenor L. Park, which were in every respect prize-flowers. Lehr Bros., with Col. D. Appleton, and Mayflower, were very close seconds. The variety list of the choicest of the specimen flowers was a rather small one. Besides the four varieties named the following were the most remarkable: Mrs. Perrin, Georgiana Pitcher, Niveus, Quito, Modesto, G. W. Childs, Mrs. T. S. Carrington, The Queen, Maud Dean, etc.

Delivery Wagon of A. H. Langjahr, Wholesale Florist, Brooklyn.

Jacksonville, Fla., is to have a factory for the manufacture of artificial palms. Scrub palmettos are mostly to be used for the purpose. The factory will employ 100 men or more.

J. Hay & Sons, Brockville, Ont., gave a three-day chrysanthemum show, November 15-17, inclusive.

If you can t give some good reason for the purchase of your goods, you had better shut up shop and go out of business.

If you can give a reason, the oftener you give it, the more people you impress with it, and the more goods you will sell.

Thats all advertising is—simply explaining to people why they should buy your goods, instead of some other fellow's.—Agricultural Advertising.

There are many ways of giving this information to possible buyers but noneso effective as through the advertising columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE.

Mr. Binder sent his long list of original varieties, and a few very fine new English sorts. John Cook showed his new white, Joseph W. Cook, which at the last C. S. A. committee meeting at Philadelphia scored 87 and 89 points in commercial and exhibition classes.

Of roses, Mr. Fraser, of the Ruxton Nursery Co., had a fine collection. His Liberty were much admired; the flowers are undoubtedly the finest in this vicinity. His Bridesmaid were notable for good color. John Cook had two new seedling roses on exhibition—an American Beauty hybrid, and his Baltimore. The flowers of the last named were rather too open to give an adequate idea of their great beauty; nevertheless they were the center of admiration.

Carnations were represented by only two lots. Mr. Cook showed his seedling, Scott, an exceedingly fine flower. The color is considerably deeper than the original (or better the present day Scott.) The flowers are more double, having nearly twice the number of petals. The plants are of vigorous growth and consequently remarkably floriferous. Henry Fisher sent a collection of this year's seedlings, among which a large white one, and a red one, deserve special mention.

A private chrysanthemum show of great popularity was held last week in the department store of Posener's. Messrs Feast & Sons had the order, and executed the task of decorating the store with much taste. Some twenty cases of wild smilax were used in festooning the pillars, around the bases of which specimen blooms of chrysanthemums were grouped in huge vases. As several thousand large flowers were used, quite an extra demand was created. Messrs Feast grow quite a large quantity of chrysanthemums in their own houses, but their crop is exceptionally late.

Our daily papers, it is very pleasant to note, are showing increased interest in flowers and horticulture in general. This, as well as the interest of the public, as manifested at this last show, seems to indicate that the club's untiring endeavor to attract the public's attention to the advancement of floriculture, has not been lost. Of all professions and trades, the florist's is perhaps the most popular in our city, and the club's members deserve great credit for their liberal support of the free shows, which have now repeatedly been given under the club's auspices, and where the individual sacrifices valuable material for "the glory," pure and simple. T. E.

In the report of the Tarrytown show in last week's issue, the Spofford's prize for Lady Campbell violets was credited to L. Martin, when it should have been credited to Wm. Nye, gardener to Miss B. Potter, Sing Sing, N. Y., Mr. Martin taking second.

J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.

In a recent illustrated supplement to "The Daily Nonpareil," of Council Bluffs, Ia., are given several views of the mammoth establishment of J. F. Wilcox, of that city, together with a brief description of his business, from which we make the following extract:

"This plant, owned and controlled by Mr. Wilcox, comprises the largest greenhouse establishment in the West and one of the largest in the United States, and combined with the fruit, plant and vegetable farms belonging to the premises represents a mammoth investment. In walking through the houses from end to end, one would cover a distance of five miles. An average of 125 people are employed the year around and 20 wagons and 30 horses are in use all the time. In the cut flower department alone, 5,000 tons of coal are used annually. Mr. Wilcox, who is the exclusive owner of this large establishment, is a young man of exceptional ability and is thoroughly conversant with his line of business. Besides his large trade in Council Bluffs and Omaha, he ships his flowers and vegetables into every Western state, and to many of the larger Eastern cities. His store is located at 521 Broadway, where he supplies the local demand for flowers, and plants of every description, and where he also conducts a fruit and confectionery department. A department of Mr. Wilcox's business that has immensely grown in importance during the last few years is his horse-radish factory. Thirty acres of ground are devoted exclusively to raising horse-radish, which is grated by steam and specially prepared and bottled for him. This product, like his flowers, is shipped all over the country."

Langjahr's Delivery Wagon.

That the wholesale florist's business in Brooklyn, N. Y., is in a prosperous condition, is evidenced by the new turnouts which those engaged in this particular trade are putting into service. The wagon shown in the illustration is that recently purchased by A. H. Langjahr, 19 Boerum Place, who was the first to engage in the wholesale line in the City of Churches.

ALLIANCE, NEB.—A. J. Mahler has opened a florist's store here.

GREAT BARRINGTON, MASS.,—Theodore Dellert has leased the Raifstanger greenhouses.

MITCHELLVILLE, IA.—W. L. Morris has leased a building on Walnut Street, and will take possession November 1.

PARSONS, PA.—Gomer Thomas has bought a tract of land two miles east of Parsons along the Bear Creek Boulevard that he will clear and erect thereon a greenhouse. He expects to have a Wilkes-Barre store in which to sell plants and flowers.

BROOKLYN.—G. Fischer has purchased property on Coney Island Avenue, between Webster and Washington Avenues, and has just completed a range of glass consisting of about 10,000 square feet. Mr. Fischer will grow for the wholesale trade, making a specialty of palms. A general stock of flowering plants will also be carried.

Baltimore.

Trade Notes.

Chrysanthemums, fern dishes, and a few house plants are all that move at present. The pick of the chrysanthemums sell at wholesale for $12 a hundred. The average this year is rather below the standard of perfection of former seasons.

Personals.

The marriage of Henry Fisher and Miss Carrie Schwartz has been announced. The ceremony will be celebrated at the home of the bride on the 15th inst. Mr. Fisher is one of the most successful of the younger florists of this town, and the best wishes of the craft go forth to the couple. T. E.

STUDER'S PRICE LIST,

Which please keep for future use, as I do not issue a catalogue, and this advertisement, which appears only once, contains all I have to offer. In thus saving expenses I am enabled to sell first-class stock at moderate prices. My aim is to grow the best plants possible in the smallest pots possible to save freight charges. Below I give a condensed description of my plants, for if depending on size of pots only you might be deceived. I quote here prices, the lowest possible for the quality offered, per single plant, so the small buyer will get stock as cheap as the larger one. I always add extras to help pay freight. This offer is good as long as stock lasts, which is crowding at present a bench space of over 20,000 square feet.

Market Items.

Some of the craft call trade good, and others say it is dull. The weather is aught but pleasant now, as rain and flurries of soft snow, with brisk breezes, make untoward conditions. Social affairs are evidently not exciting; and the call for funeral flowers has been comparatively light of late. Stock is amply plentiful and qualities now good. Some good violets are seen. Roses are of substantial character and coloring, and it seems to us that chrysanthemums in the store windows never looked as sturdy and fresh in quality; $4 per dozen seems the limit of retail prices here for the best of these handled.

S. A. Anderson had a very fair wedding order for Thursday of this week at Mount Morris, N. Y., which called for the use of palms—just their speciality—and a free arrangement of blooms generally.

William Scott seems to be indigenous to various sections of this great country, this Fall, in the interests of the Pan-American exhibition, and is hard to find at home.

No chrysanthemum show here this Fall, not even any talk about one. We apparently are too much engrossed otherwise. Incidental to this negative condition, a similar state of lethargy seems to go with the certain florists, who, when shows were undertaken under organized auspices in past years, were wont to hold aloof entirely from lending assistance or influence, but with a splurge would make headline affairs of exhibitions in their own places of business. If any such private enterprise is afoot this Fall, we have not heard of it.

The executive committee of the Florists' Club held a session on Tuesday of this week, for furthering 1901 S. A. F. convention interests. VIDI.

St. Louis.

The Market.

The cut flower trade has been rather quiet the past week, although we have had our long expected heavy frost. Roses are in fair supply, ranging in price, in large lots, from 1½c. up to 5c. or 6c. for something very fine. Beauty bring from 5c. to 25c. for the choicest. The supply of carnations is about equal to the demand; they sell at 75c. to $2 per 100.

Violets are scarce just now, at 35c. per 100, with a higher price looked for. Chrysanthemums are in good supply in the common grades; $2.50 per dozen is the top price realized, down to as low as 6c. for the poorest. Valley is selling well at 4c.

News Items.

Our show opens on Wednesday next. Indications point to a successful exhibition; although the entries are not as numerous as we would like to see them. The expenses have been kept down to the lowest possible point, and we hope to pull through all right.

Frank Ellis, for a long time head man at Henry Bernings, will shortly leave his position. It is understood he will open up in the wholesale business on his own account.

John W. Kunz has taken the place vacated by Mr. Ellis.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting took place on November 8, the attendance being only fair. A letter was received from the Galveston florist sufferers, in which they acknowledged in a very grateful manner, receipt of the money raised for the fund by the St. Louis florists.

The names of Theo. Miller and Chris Eichhorn were read for the second time, and the gentlemen were declared members of the club. The application of Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., for membership was received. A vote of thanks was tendered C. C. Sanders for his paper on "Profitable Hardy Flowers for Florists' Use." H. G. Ude exhibited a new seedling carnation that has several good points. The color, between a salmon and red, is rather undecided, but we think its other good qualities will overbalance this, as on stem, fragrance and size, it is first class, besides being very productive.

There are several delinquent members on the books, as usual, and they are invited to pay up at their earliest convenience, as non-payment of dues denies them tickets for the show. The treasurer made a report to the effect that the club has some money to its credit. C. C. S.

DETROIT, MICH.—J. Breitmeyer & Sons are cutting some of the new rose, Liberty, and are pleased with it. They will still grow Meteor, which does grandly with them; for richness of color and size of bloom it has yet to be beaten. They also run a house for Safrano, Isabella Sprunt and Bon Silene, finding them very useful in a retail store. I noted a bouquet made for a debutante, which consisted of orchids and lily of the valley, with a shower of buds of the aforementioned roses—one of the richest and daintiest designs conceivable. Carnation Ceriae Queen is grown extensively and finds ready sales.

Gus. Taepke has some fine chrysanthemums, also several houses of the new carnations, that look first-class. Some one, who evidently knows a good thing, stole the entire stock of Witterstaetter's introductions, leaving a few Estelle, which will no doubt help console our justly indignant fellow-craftsman.

Speaking with Robert Flowerday, of the Detroit Floral Co., regarding the scarcity of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, he is of the opinion that only a few growers can do this plant successfully. I have seen but few plants of it West, but in the East it is done well. I noted hundreds with Thos. Roland, Nahant, Mass., who grows for a New York house. Dan. Murphy, of W. E. Doyle's, at Cambridge, Mass., is also very successful. He grows the plants on a north bench, with plenty of light and air; gives them, about every eight days, an application of Bordeaux mixture to keep down rust. Cuttings taken in December last have made plants that now fill an 8-inch pan—splendid stock for the holidays. Farquhar & Co. have also some well-grown stock of this plant.

AUBURN, N. Y.—Alfred Patrick has overcome the eelworm nuisance by the adoption of grafted stock. His roses are in fine shape. His carnations got a touch of stem rot which is attributed to insufficient watering when first planted in the bench; but Prof. J. F. Cowell is positive it is a fungus which attacks the plant in the field and is brought into the house. One grower in the East lost one-half of a large house in this way. W. M.

Cincinnati.

Trade Notes.

Business during the past week has been very satisfactory. Stock is rapidly improving in quality, especially carnations. Roses are now off crop nearly all over the country, and the supply has slackened up considerably. Chrysanthemums are still selling well.

Owing to the inability to arrange the schedule in time, the chrysanthemum exhibit at the flower market, under the auspices of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, will take place Saturday afternoon, November 17, instead of on the date previously given.

Seedling Chrysanthemums.

Several seedling chrysanthemums were before the C. S. A. committee November 10. Mirabeau, yellow, color near to that of Bonnaffon, but not so good, was shown. Yanariva, flesh color, flower shaped like that of Viviand-Morel, is certainly very handsome; stem is a little weak, but can probably be improved. The variety is a medium grower, and, I think, is quite an acquisition to the pink family. These two sorts were grown and exhibited by John N. May, of Summit, N. J. Henry Riemann, of Indianapolis, Ind., had a creamy white variety, very heavy, stiff stem, and fine foliage. Flower resembles that of Jerome Jones, incurved and nicely built. Not a large bloom, but will make a good commercial sort. Theo. Bock staged Arab, bronze, good stem and foliage, a medium-sized flower, and, for a bronze, is very pretty.

Jottings.

The first snow of the season arrived during the past week, and we are now having seasonable weather, which will materially help the quality of stock all along the line.

Plant thieves have commenced their work upon private citizens. Their manner of procedure is to find out who have their plants wintered by the florist, and in some way they also discover who the florist is taking the contract. They then go to the parties, and say they were sent by florist So-and-So for the plants, and, in most cases, the plants are delivered. You can guess the rest. Herman Schlachter, of Winton Place, was victimized in this manner. The party who called for the plants drove a black horse attached to a covered wagon. The man was tall, of dark complexion, black mustache, and shoulders slightly stooping. Florists of Cincinnati should be on the outlook for this fellow.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and Ed. Helfrich and sister of Washington, C. H. O., were in the city Saturday. William M. Goodloe of Paris, Ky., called Sunday. E. G. GILLETT.

Albany, N. Y.

The store of F. A. Danker, florist, at 40 Maiden Lane, was visited by thieves October 25. Entrance was effected through a transom. The thief or thieves secured $8.30 from the cash register.

Firms Who Are Building.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—Herman H. Appledore will erect a new greenhouse.

WHITMAN, MASS.—Robert Moir has added another greenhouse to his plant.

TOPEKA, KAN.—George Skinner will erect a greenhouse for vegetable growing.

BAY CITY, MICH.—Julius Schulz has completed the erection of a new greenhouse.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J.—E. A. Palmer's new greenhouses are nearing completion.

RACINE, WIS.—A. J. Fiddler is adding two new greenhouses, one 22 x 100 feet; the other 35 x 125 feet.

JOHNSTOWN, PA.—Adolf Stahl has built this Summer one rose house, 20x100 feet; one house, 10x100 feet and a shed 18x85 feet.

PEABODY, MASS.—J. M. Ward & Co. have just completed the erection of two new greenhouses. An additional boiler has also been installed.

QUESTION BOX

(231) Time to Flower Spiræa japonica.—If the night temperature is kept at about 60 degrees, spiræas will require 12 weeks to get them into flower; and the first three weeks of that time they may be kept underneath the benches.

(232) Pruning and Moving Hardy Roses.—Which is the best time to prune and move hardy rose bushes, in the Fall or early Spring?

—Transplanted in the Fall and pruned in the Spring will be found the best, though the bushes can be transplanted in the Spring successfully, if the operation be done early enough.

(233) Dutch Hyacinths for Easter.—What time should Dutch hyacinths, planted in pots the first of this month, be brought into the house to be in good shape for Easter, the temperature of the house ranging from 50 to 55 degrees night, and 65 to 70 degrees day time.—W. W.

—Easter falls on the 7th of April next year, and the bulbs should be brought in on the 15th of March.

(234) Longiflorum Lilies for Easter.—Our Lilium longiflorum, with the roots showing through the ball of soil, are now in a frame outside, covered with glass, a hot water pipe running through the frame; night temperature from 45 to 55 degrees. We desire to get the plants in for Easter without any extra forcing. What would you advise us to do—leave them out for a while yet, or bring them in to a house? What temperature would you suggest?

—To have the longiflorum lilies for Easter, which falls on April 7, next year, bring the plants into the greenhouse at once, affording a night temperature of 55 degrees; and when the plants are 10 or 12 inches in height, increase the night temperature to 60 degrees.

Cleveland, O.

Trade Notes.

The weather during the entire Fall has been warm and bright, and without frosts to do any serious damage until last Sunday night, when it turned suddenly cold and killed all tender stock that was exposed. Up to that time cosmos, outdoor chrysanthemums, cannas, etc., were still in bloom, and in such quantities as to affect quite materially the sale of cut flowers at the flower stores.

Business among the florists at this time is quite brisk; the retail men report a good store trade, and the growers find sale for the principal part of their products. There is no shortage in stock except in carnations; the blooms of which offered are quickly picked up. Extra grades are much sought, and the supply in these is not equal to the demand. Common grades sell at $1 and $1.25 per hundred; while the best flowers fetch $1.50, and in some cases as high as $2.

Roses are small, the red varieties especially. This is due, perhaps, to the dull weather of the past few days. Ordinary stock holds at the prices formerly quoted, viz., $2 and $4 per hundred. There is no change in retail values.

Chrysanthemums are plentiful, and some very fine blooms are seen. Growers realize as high as $1.50 per dozen for extra flowers, while the smaller blooms of the early varieties do not bring over 60c. and 75c. Choice stock averages $1 per dozen. Philadelphia, as seen among local growers, is very weak in stem, although the flowers are large, well filled and of fine form.

Notes.

The first snow fall occurred on Tuesday night, when a regular blizzard struck us.

Martin Renkauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor during the early part of the week.

Wm. F. A. Kendel, of A. C. Kendel, seedsman, returned a few days ago from an extended hunting trip through the West.

Wm. Kruzen, in charge of Gasser's lower store, is on the sick list.

Your correspondent, in his travels among flower shops, has seen many inscriptions on funeral designs, but one in particular which recently came to my notice, on a design executed by a local florist, was the inscription "Promoted."

Oceanic, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society took place in Red Men's hall, Oceanic, N. J., November 8. An exhibition was held on the same date, free to the public. It was unfortunate that the hall was not larger; the exhibits of groups and specimen plants were too crowded. Some of the first prize-winners were: H. A. Kettel, N. Butterbach, H. Birch, W. Kennedy, G. Kuhn, Robert Murphy, and others. H. A. Kettel exhibited a yellow chrysanthemum, a seedling of E. D. Adams / Miss Hartshorn, which promises to be a great acquisition. A very good white seedling was shown by N. Butterbach. Hugh Birch displayed a fine collection of vegetables, including 17 kinds, among which were very fine peas, something rare at this time for this part of the country. Wellington Kennedy also exhibited a collection of vegetables, containing 18 distinct kinds, very fine. The judges were: Thomas Macintosh, J. T. Cruser, and Albert Brighton. The election of officers took place, those of last year being re-elected. According to the report of the Auditing Committee, the funds of the Society are increasing steadily. Three new members were proposed. It was decided to have the annual dinner on the occasion of the installation of officers at our next meeting. B.

Huntsville, Ala.—The five fruit nurseries around Huntsville are at present enjoying the greatest prosperity in their histories. New Orleans, La.

At last we are having a little cold weather. The past Summer has been a long, trying one, in more ways than one. We had heavy rains for three or four months; October was dry and hot, the thermometer going up in the nineties almost every day. Outside stock has not grown extra well; there has been too much rain for most of it. Roses and carnations, inside, are looking a little weak on account of the unfavorable weather. Palms and all kinds of foliage plants have grown well; this class of stock always gives satisfaction here in Summer. Annuals have not been a success this Fall, most of the early sowings damping off.

Chrysanthemums have been almost a failure in most places. Some growers shaded the plants, just as the buds commenced to show color. This year the midseason varieties are about two weeks later, and the early sorts one week. All Saints' Day used up all the good flowers obtainable, in and about the city. C. Holst, as usual, had his seedlings all in for the first. He has raised varieties, of full size, and good color, that will stand 90 degrees of hot sun, without burning. These have been grown by him six years, and have never failed yet. Mr. Holst never covers his flowers. We hope to see these varieties on the market next year. They will be a boon to our florists. Abele Bros. had in a good lot of Robinson and Troy, nice flowers, all grown under glass.

M. Cook & Son had a bed of Robinson under canvas, very good blooms; also a few seedlings, including one from the popular single variety, Silver Thimble. John St. Mard had a large bed of Kate Brown, extra good, grown under canvas, very clean stock. He found no trouble in disposing of it. His Robinson were burned; some of his Lady Playfair were good.

Frank Faessel had about 1,000 large plants of Kate Brown, that sold well; these were not disbudded and came in just right.

Victor Ansemau had about 4,000 plants of Mrs. Robinson, which were about 10 days too late He had several thousand dahlias, white, red and yellow, that sold well, at wholesale, for $3.50 per 100. Mrs. J. Muller's chrysanthemums were all late. Her dahlias were good. E. Valdejo said he never had such fine roses as this year; they sold at 50c. per dozen. His chrysanthemums were only second class. P. A. Chopin reports a good trade in his new store on Magazine Street. Francois Gruza did a large trade; but having to buy everything, and half of the flowers received being rotten in the boxes, the profit was cut down more than 50 per cent.

Dried work is going out of date very fast, specimen flowers, of chrysanthemums and roses, in loose bunches, with ferns and asparagus, taking its place. Chicago furnished most of the stock, a great deal of which arrived in miserable condition.

U. J. Virgin reports a very large business, as usual. He cut a great many roses from plants in his houses. C. H. Eichling had three stores going. J. H. Menard, F. B. Faessel, Charles Ebele, M. Cook & Son, Schindler & Van Geffen had a great show of dried and metal work. William Rehm had one of the best displays on Canal Street. R. E. Simon, on Magazine Street, did well.

Large chrysanthemums sold at from $1.50 to $5 per dozen; roses, $1.50 to $2; carnations 75 to $1; dahlias, 50c. per dozen.

Roy McGregor, of Springfield, Ohio, was here recently. J. B. Helss, of Daytona, Ohio, is with us now, with samples of everything in the plant line. He is doing a large trade.

Read the Report of the Judges Appointed by the Philadelphia Florists' Club to Examine This New Rose:

We are convinced that the variety is a valuable addition to the list of forcing roses, being in every respect, except color, the exact counterpart of the American Beauty. The color is a beautiful bright pink, which is good even in the full flowers. The fragrance is also as fine as that of American Beauty, and the exhibited blooms showed remarkable vigor.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

ALBERT MCCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, O., President; F. W. BOLGIANO, First Vice-President; S. G. COURTEEN, Milwaukee, Wis., Second Vice-President; S. F. WILLARD, Wethersfield, Conn., Secretary and Treasurer.

Points and information from seedsmen, and all interested in this column, solicited. Address EDITOR SEED TRADE, care of FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, P. O. Box 1697, New York.

Providence, R. I.—A. M. Rennie, seedsman, has been confined to his bed the past week, suffering from malarial fever.

Bulb Growing in Washington State.—C. T. Canfield, proprietor of the Fort Bellingham bulb garden, has just finished planting 30,000 tulip bulbs and 3,500 hyacinth bulbs. This year's crop of bulbs numbered about 30,000. These are select stock, and will be shipped to Chicago for the market.

St. Paul.—Seed is now coming in quite rapidly, and every day adds to the apparent shortage in certain lines. Prices are well up, higher in many instances than for several years, and are still soaring upward. Corn seems to be the one exception to light crop reports, and will probably not be "bulled" on the market to any great extent.

L. L. May & Co. have been making extensive improvements in their main warehouse down town, and also in their storage branch on Como Avenue. In the former place, the packets filled by three Brown filling machines are dropped on to an endless belt, and conveyed to their proper bin, and there dumped automatically. A circular railway surrounds the bins on which run small trucks with cases standing on them. A girl pushes the truck with the case in front of her, filling in the proper varieties from the bins, and when the circuit is completed, the case is ready for the packer to nail it up.

At the Como Ave. warehouse a new engine and dynamo have been installed. The engine runs an elevator which takes the peas and beans to the mill on the second floor and runs the picking machines, 20 in number, which are operated by girls. The dynamo furnishes light for the warehouse, and the large greenhouse range adjoining. Bouquet green is a scarce article again this year, and high prices are now ruling in this market.

Recent callers on the trade were: J. M. Kimberlin and grandson, and J. B. Agnew, of California; W. H. Small, of Evansville, Ind., Henry Nungesser, of New York, and a representative of Vilmorin Andrieux & Co., of Paris.

VERITAS.

European Notes.

The much needed rains, which are falling with great persistency, have put a stop for the moment to our seed dressing operations, and enabled us to examine the conditions of trade in Dutch and other bulbs. On all hands the report is that the demand has been very much smaller than last year. In some respects the higher prices of hyacinths and tulips may account for this; but, as the greater falling off is in the demand for crocuses, which are not only good, but cheaper than usual, there must be some other reason, which is at present unknown. It is possible that the long delayed frosts, may, when they arrive, help to revive the business; if not, there will be a lot left on the dealer's hands.

The fine dry October has enabled the bulb growers to plant their beds for next year's supply, in the best possible condition. The prospects for next year are better than for several years past.

Although the expert appointed by the growers to discover some means of eradicating the destructive "yellow" disease, has only thus far been able to report upon the characteristics of the disease itself, the persistent removal of the decayed leaves by the growers themselves has in a great measure checked its ravages, and as a result the planting stock is better developed, and more healthy than it has been since the disease first made its appearance. The outlook, therefore, is of a very hopeful character.

Hyacinths have been planted largely, but some of the staple red varieties, such as Gertrude, will be scarce for another year or two. Whites will, of course, not be overabundant for the next two years.

In tulips, the scarcity of scarlet and brilliant red varieties will, in part, continue; rose and pink sorts will still remain overabundant. Yellows promise to be in fair supply, but of the more popular varieties there will not be any surplus.

Narcissi are grown in so many places that no scarcity need be anticipated. If it were possible to get rid of the "rot," some of the new large-flowered varieties might soon find their way into the dealers' hands.

Crocuses are not likely to be much higher in price. They are an outside article anyway, and almost beneath the notice of the regular growers.

EUROPEAN SEEDS.

BRIEFS FOR BUSY FLORISTS.

ORANGE TREES AND ARDISIAS.—As the fruit on the oranges and the ardisias begins to show color, no efforts should be spared to keep the foliage perfectly clean without injuring the fruit. Syringing may be done when the weather is bright, but, on dull, cloudy days, this work had best be omitted. Ventilate at every opportunity, and avoid leaving the house moist over night after the fruit begins to color.

MIGNONETTE.—To have good spikes for the Winter it is necessary to disbud, that is, to remove all the lateral buds that form along the whole length of the flower stem. The soil in the bed should never be allowed to get very dry. Lime should be used frequently, sprinkling it on the surface of the soil. A night temperature, ranging from 45 to 48 degrees, suits mignonette admirably—anything higher will result in weak, spindly growth.

EASTER LILIES—Perhaps if greater care were bestowed upon the greenhouse culture of the Harrisii bulbs we should hear less of the disease that annually is held responsible for a goodly portion of the bulbs proving worthless. There are growers who, when the bulbs arrive, pot them up in any soil that happens to be handy, placing the pots on a wet bottom under a greenhouse bench, and then covering them with fresh litter from the stable. When this material is watered a rank smell of ammonia proceeds from it; the pots being on a wet bottom, cannot dry out; the bulbs are thus kept in a sodden, stinking condition; and, should the lilies not thrive, the fault is blamed on the disease. Given a dry place, with one good watering to settle the soil, and a covering of paper, or some clean material, the bulbs will always start more satisfactorily. When they have reached the stage when they may be placed on the greenhouse bench (where they should be at this time), see that none of the holes in the bottoms of the pots is clogged up, as it is imperative that the water should pass away freely, after each watering. The prevailing idea among some growers, that lilies need to be soaking wet all the time, is altogether wrong.

Longiflorum lilies when brought on to the benches need not have a very warm house for some time yet. A night temperature of 55 degrees will be sufficient for them. By the middle of December, 60 degrees should be afforded, maintaining the same temperature right through till flowering time.

Hartford, Conn.

A meeting of about ten or twelve florists was held in John Coombs's office, Monday evening, November 12. The first steps toward forming a florists' club were taken. Another meeting will be held in December. The movement began in consequence of the support given by florists to the recent sound money parade.

(235) Dahlias from Cuttings.—A. F.—Start the dahlia tubers in heat at the beginning of January and make cuttings of the young shoots as soon as they are large enough. They root as easily as do coleus, or any other soft-wooded plants.

(236) Geraniums from Seed.—All conditions being favorable, it takes from four to six months to raise geraniums from seed and get them in 4-inch pots and in flower. Much will depend upon the habit of the variety. Some are more rapid in growth and freer bloomers than others. W. H. MUNGER & Co.

(237) Chrysanthemum Mrs. Robinson coming with weak neck.—What causes chrysanthemum Mrs Robinson to have weak neck, or stem? The chrysanthemums were planted in with my violets in good soil, manure and bone. I did not feed them one drop of liquid manure, and I think that may have caused the trouble. I had fine, big blooms, but the stems were weak. The flowers were all from crown buds. Is hen manure good for liquid with which to feed chrysanthemums; also, is it good to use in violet houses? How much should be afforded and how often applied?—A. B. C.

—Weak stems can result from so many different causes that it would be impossible for us to tell why the stems were weak in this particular case unless we had fuller information as to how the plants had been grown. Seeing that the blooms were of good size, it does not appear as though the trouble arose from the plants not being fed with liquid manure.

Hen manure makes a good liquid solution, but it must be used with great care, and given only occasionally, say once in two weeks. The quantity to apply should not exceed five pounds to 50 gallons of water.

A Western Establishment.

Among the many enterprising and energetic Western florists may be mentioned the name of James C. Murray, of Peoria, Ill. His large and well regulated plant consists of 12 greenhouses, containing over 35,000 square feet. Within the last two years he has added five new houses, each 100 x 25 feet, three of which are entirely devoted to growing American Beauty roses. The plants are of very vigorous growth, and must a little later turn in the shekels in good order. Mr. Murray is also very successful with the rose Souv. de Wootton. This variety is not grown so extensively now, but here it seems to luxuriate, for the stock is extremely healthy and is full of buds, showing good size and color. A large portion of this stock has been carried over for two and three years, and from the excellent growth observed the plants will well repay the trust reposed in them.

Among the carnations, all of which are the picture of health, may be mentioned Genevieve Lord, Pern, The Marquis, Annie Enstburne, Daybreak and G. H. Crane. There is also a fine lot of miscellaneous well grown stock, such as poinsettias, palms, and other decorative plants, all in good healthy condition, and ready to meet the steady and increasing demand therefor.

The nursery grounds are replete with well grown shade and ornamental trees and shrubs, and hardy roses, among which may be mentioned a fine lot of Crimson Rambler. The establishment in general reflects great credit upon the foreman, Joseph Reeves, and his staff of assistants.

Mr. Murray has added to his business a full line of seeds, both for the farm and garden. For this department he has secured the services of Mr. Cox, of Boston, Mass., who has had a very wide experience in this line. ADVANCER.

Greenhouses Wrecked by Snow.

A snow storm which visited Watertown, N. Y., last week, wrecked the greenhouses of W. H. S. Keele, causing damage to the extent of from $1,500 to $2,000.

Greene & Underhill report that they suffered some little damage by reason of glass being broken in the roofs of their greenhouses.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THEODORE J. SMITA, Geneva, N. Y., President; N. W. HALE, Knoxville, Tenn., Vice-President; GEORGE C. SEAGER, Rochester, N. Y., Secretary; C. L. YATES, Rochester, N. Y., Treasurer.

Easton, Minn.—James Stroman will enter the nursery business here.

Sac and Fox, Ok.—John Walters, a farmer living south of here, on Deep Fork, has a grove of persimmon trees that bear fruit entirely seedless and of an unusual flavor.—Dallas News.

Independence, Ia.—The pumpkin seed industry has reached considerable proportions here, and indications are that it will develop still further.

The old Kieffer nursery, at Roxborough, Philadelphia, made famous as being the birthplace of the Kieffer pear, is not a thing of the past. Since the death of the father, Peter Kieffer, the son has not kept up the business, but has given attention to truck farming. The elder Kieffer was a Frenchman, and from his relatives in the old world used to receive many new plants, some of which were introduced first by him. Whether his being French instead of German, as many suppose, made the difference, I do not know, but his pronounciation of his own name was "Ki-fer" and not "Kee-fer," hence the pear which he raised and which is named after him is the Ki-fer pear. Away from Philadelphia, one always hears "Kee-fer."

Wistarias.—The Chinese wistaria is the most beautiful of all the species, but it cannot always be used for porches or similar structures, because of its very strong growth. In this respect our native variety, W. frutescens, and the hybrid one, W. magnifica, are much superior. But there are none making the display at flowering time that the Chinese wistaria does. This is the W. sinensis, and besides the normal color—purplish white—there is a white one, and also a double white. When the Japanese species, W. multijuga, was introduced, much was expected from it, as it was announced as producing racemes two feet in length. This it does, but the flowers are much more scattered, and make really less display than the Chinese, with its shorter racemes and flowers much closer together. Still W. multijuga is an admirable sort, and all might not agree that the Chinese variety is the better one. As with the latter, W. multijuga has varieties; one, a pure white, is well known in commerce. The two species, and their varieties above named, flower about the middle of May in the Northern States; when they are about over, the American and W. magnifica commence. That this difference in the time of flowering exists is well to remember. There is a wide difference in the appearance of the Asiatic and the American and W. magnifica. The latter sorts are much more vine-like in growth, and not so heavily wooded. The racemes of flowers are shorter and more numerous in proportion to growth. The Chinese, W. sinensis, can readily be transformed from vine to shrub, by tying it to a stout stake for a few years. As soon as the tied shoot becomes stout enough to stand by itself, which it will do in two or three years, the change is accomplished. In this shape, lovely lawn specimens are formed. Nurserymen or florists with a home trade find a good demand for wistarias in pots; so many admire them when in flower and becomes anxious to possess one at once. Old vines of wistarias usually seed freely. These seeds sown in April outdoors will readily germinate, and in this way a supply of plants can be had.

Manuring in the Hill.—In the preparation of a plot of ground for the planting of trees or shrubs, it will be found better for the trees to place manure directly in the trenches, or holes, than to scatter it promiscuously over the ground. Nursery trees are not supposed to remain in one place long—no more than two or three years—and manure placed where the roots can reach it quickly inures to their advantage. Where large numbers are to be planted, long trenches are opened, and, when to their proper depth, manure is scattered along the bottom, and the trees set on it; the soil is then thrown in and stamped in well about the roots. Just as soon as fibres are formed they find this manure, and for that year and the succeeding one, the growth is good, and much better than when manure is scattered broadcast.

Where both systems have been tried, the one which calls for manure in the row is given preference in the end. The feeding of trees pays as well as anything a nurseryman can do. The trees are salable in much less time; they are vigorous and will endure removal better than starved trees. It is the experience of all planters that a tree in poor condition is less apt to do well than one that has been well fed.

The Holly.—Because of the beauty of the holly when in berry, and the many associations connected with it, it is a bush desired by everyone who has a garden, yet how very few places can boast of one! That so many grounds are without a specimen, is not that their owners do not plant one, but because they fail to make it live. The holly is naturally hard to transplant. To do it in the ordinary way in which a tree is moved, usually results in a loss. Nursery raised specimens are the best, as having more roots, but wildings can be made to live by pruning them severely. Whether wild or cultivated, the secret of success is to give the plants a good pruning, and cut off every leaf. Taking off every leaf is very important; there is not then nearly the demand on the roots. Instead of hollies being hard to transplant, but few fail to grow when so treated. Besides ensuring the growth, the pruning makes a more bushy specimen of what may have been a spindling one. It is not well known that all holly bushes do not bear berries. Some bear male flowers only, some female, and others, perfect ones; therefore, to be sure of having a fruit bearing kind, one must be selected which has already borne berries. As many plants bear berries when but three feet high, it is not difficult to transplant a berry-bearing specimen. The English holly, Ilex aquifolia, has brighter green foliage than our native one, and were it hardy enough to stand the cold of our northern states, it would be by far the more desirable. As it is, it is not nearly as tender as many suppose. It is hardy enough about Philadelphia, though from a common belief that it is not, it is seldom seen. Occasionally a fine specimen is met with. Both Woodland and Laurel Hill Cemeteries had fine ones a few years ago, and probably have to-day. The glossy foliage of this species adds greatly to its worth. Within a few years past a new hardy holly has appeared, Ilex crenata, from Japan. This variety has quite small, myrtle-like foliage, grows quickly, and seems in every way desirable. So far, I have not seen it fruit. It is to be hoped its berries are pretty, as this would make it a doubly valuable addition to our broad-leaved evergreens.

Hawthorns.—It is not uncommon to hear it remarked that hawthorns will not thrive in this country. It is the experience of those who have had these shrubs under their charge that it is a mistake to suppose there is any difficulty in growing these plants. The hawthorn is not a rapid grower anywhere, and appears to grow as quickly here as elsewhere, and quite satisfactorily when in good soil. The memories clustered about the hawthorn, the praises poets have sung of it, together with the beauty of all the sorts, call for a proper understanding concerning its availability for ornamental planting. The English hawthorn, Cratægus oxyacantha, exists in pink, scarlet, and rose-colored sorts, as well as in double forms of nearly the same colors, besides the common one itself. While flourishing in any ordinary situation, these bushes seem most at home when near a dwelling, or some object which affords them partial shade and coolness. There is an enemy of the hawthorn, of which mention should be made, that it may be watched for, to prevent injury from its attacks. This is the hawthorn borer, as great a pest in its way, as is the apple tree borer. If not prevented it will girdle a stem quickly. There is no better way than to make a memorandum concerning it, in one's calendar book, and twice a year, in June and September, examine the bushes for the borer. Washes and other things are often recommended to keep away borers, but, as in the case of fruit trees, an examination, such as recommended, is as good a way as any to preserve trees and bushes. One must not think that the hawthorns already mentioned comprise the list. While our native sorts have not been improved, or varieties of them discovered, as they exist in their primitive forms, many of them are most desirable. The C. coccinea, with its early clusters of large white flowers, followed by haws as large as small crab apples. C. crus-galli, with its foliage of lustrous green; C. cordata, with its late flowers, and lovely clusters of small scarlet berries; C. æstivalis, the fruit of which is so large that in the South it is used for marmalade; and many others, make up a list of native sorts, some of which should appear in all collections of large shrubs.

JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Parties who have no New York office and who contemplate arranging for one should correspond with Robert G. Perry, No. 271 Broadway, New York City, N. Y. The office is in a modern fire-proof building and has every improvement, including long-distance telephone in outer office. The location is a superb one, being centrally located near Brooklyn Bridge and only a few blocks from Jersey City ferries; it is on the boundary between the uptown and downtown business districts.—Adv.

Detroit.

On Monday, November 19, thirty-five members of the Detroit Florists' Club went to Mt. Clemens to pay their annual visit to the florists of the "Bath City." The large establishment of Breitmeyer & Sons was first on the list, and the unanimous opinion of the visitors was that the condition of everything was far superior than at any previous visit, the chrysanthemums being especially fine. Some of Smith's new ones were in splendid form, notably Arline. Robt. Klagge's was the next stop, where the finest house of Daybreak carnations that it has ever been the writer's privilege to see was found. Violets grown in bottomless pots were also fine; but Mr. Klagge would not as yet say whether the growing in such pots was any advantage.

Jas. Taylor's and John E. Carey's plants were also found in the usual good condition. Each of these growers has added more glass this season, Mr. Cary having built a house for Beauty, but could not complete it in time to plant this year. After a wind-up at the Monsor bowling alleys the party came home, all well-pleased with the outing.

The club has arranged a program for all its meetings until June, and President Rackham has partially arranged with Professor L. R. Taft, of the Agricultural College, to give a lecture to the club in March. Several applications for membership are to be balloted on at the next meeting, so we are in a prosperous condition, so much so that we think we would like to have the Carnation Society come here in 1902, that is, if Messrs. May, Hill, Craig and Weber will let us have it. We will promise to keep the ladies out of the balconies at the banquet.

Oh, this Summer weather—60 degrees out-of-doors, at 9 p. m., November 20, and the florists are expected to pay their bills.

Mr. Rackham's oldest son, while out hunting, had the misfortune to have his middle toe shot off, through the carelessness of his comrade. RAG.

IMPORTED DIRECT FROM THE GROWERS IN GHENT, BELGIUM AND OTHER PLACES.

Having been to Belgium again myself, I am well posted on their system. As the growers there are all syndicated, I can assure you no one can obtain cheaper rates than I.

ARAUCARIAS

We are headquarters and can give you more value than any house in America can Order quickly before stock is all gone, and while the weather is not too cold. This is a rare chance. I have only about 1000 left.

These I purchased myself and they are of my own selection during my trip to Belgium in September, and I can offer you special prices. No seedlings; raised from top cuttings only.

Liberty Hyde Bailey, the most celebrated living horticulturist, professor of general and experimental horticulture in Cornell University, has, says the Los Angles Times, been secured for the faculty of the next summer session of the University of California. Professor Bailey will lecture on horticulture.

S. A. F. Proceedings, 1900.

The proceedings of the sixteenth annual convention of the S. A. F. held in New York City, August 21-24 inclusive, have been distributed by Secretary Stewart. As usual, the pamphlet is replete with valuable information. Innovations this year are the records of the bowling tournament, and the report of the manager of the horticultural exhibition.

GALVESTON RELIEF FUND.

Publishers Florists' Exchange:

Will you please announce in your paper that I received from the Florists' Relief Fund of Galveston $18.57; also $32.18 from Mrs. Chas. Eickholt, her share of the fund, which she was gracious enough to turn over to me, although herself a very great loser during the storm. To the contributing florists and Mrs. Eickholt of Galveston, I tender my most heartfelt thanks and best wishes for a successful future.

New York's Plant Market.

The plant growers for the New York market, represented by delegates from the New York Market Florists' Association, waited upon Mayor Van Wyck on Monday afternoon last, with a view to furthering the project of transforming old Clinton Market, Canal and Washington Streets, into a properly constructed mart for the disposal of their products. The Mayor listened with great attention and evident interest to the statements of the plantsmen setting forth the immense development of the industry within the past half century, and the necessity of providing suitable market accommodation for the carrying on of their business; and he promised to investigate the matter and give a decision later. In the meantime a petition will be drawn up and presented to the Mayor, outlining the requirements of the marketmen; and photographs will also be submitted to his Honor showing the now dilapidated condition of the building, and its present utter unfitness for the purpose in view. It was stated that an appropriation of about $250,000 would be required to erect a suitable structure.

As we have before pointed out, the establishment of a recognized plant and flower market in New York City is a matter that concerns not only those who are now agitating the scheme, but every florist in the city and contributing to its supplies of these products. It is generally admitted that existing conditions militate against the material welfare of the trade, and anything calculated to improve these conditions should be heartily supported by every one interested. Only by concentrated and united effort will any tangible results be achieved along this line, and the importance of the subject to the florist trade of New York and neighborhood, demands that this should be afforded.

Flower Show Programs.

Since our remarks on this subject appeared, we have received additional show catalogues, demonstrating that the system endorsed by us, viz.: to make the program an asset for the exhibition, is followed more or less fully by some societies. The program coming nearest to our ideal is that of the Chestnut Hill (Pa.) Horticultural Society, which not only contains complete information regarding the various classes in which competition occurs, and prizes are offered, numerous well-filled pages of advertisements, and some data regarding the society, and its work; but affords blank spaces on which memoranda may be made regarding the subjects exhibited. If these facts had been supplemented by one or two brief cultural articles, suitable for amateurs and plant lovers, the program would have had a still more permanent value. The catalogues for the Chicago and Tarrytown (N. Y.) shows also contain numerous advertisements.

American Carnation Society.

Messrs. Fick & Faber, San Francisco, Cal., register the following:

MISS LOUISE FABER.—Bright pink, two and one half to three and one half inches in diameter, occasionally reaching four inches. Flowers well formed and fringed, borne on stems from two to three feet in length. A continuous bloomer.

PURITY.—The purest and largest white yet introduced; flowers three to four inches in diameter; finely fringed, and well formed. Stems from eighteen to thirty inches in length, and very wiry. Both are good healthy growers.

Lancaster, Pa.

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., register new fern Nephrolepis Piersoni, a sport from the type of Nephrolepis exaltata known as the Boston fern. The pinnæ are subdivided so that each has the appearance of the full frond in miniature, giving a beautiful crested effect; otherwise the plant is identical with the Boston fern.

Cincinnati Florists' Society.

This society has issued its schedule of premiums for the monthly exhibitions to be held at the club rooms, Jabez Elliot Flower Market, Cincinnati, during the coming season. On December 8 there will be a special exhibition of carnations; the show on January 12, 1901, will be devoted mainly to violets, roses, and carnations; that on February 9 to roses and carnations. On March 9 carnations will be the leaders, and on April 13 bulbous and market plants. The secretary of the Society is George S. Bartlett from whom copies of the premium list may be obtained.

The Jurisdiction of the C. S. A.

There recently appeared before one of the committees of the Chrysanthemum Society of America for adjudication a bunch of pink pompon chrysanthemums of, supposedly, a new variety. The committee, however, "considered they had no jurisdiction over this type, and did not pass any judgment upon them." We believe that such an interpretation of the province of this Society, correct enough, no doubt, so far as the committee is concerned, is a very unfortunate one, and in direct opposition to that for which the Society was created, viz.: The advancement and improvement of the chrysanthemum generally—not of any particular type of the flower. Writing in "The American Chrysanthemum Annual" of 1895, President-elect S. A. F. O'Mara made the following remarks regarding this very point which are as pertinent today as they were when first written, and to which we beg to refer the Chrysanthemum Society for its earnest consideration. He said:

"Too much stress has been laid, I think, on the fitness or unfitness of certain varieties for cut flower purposes. The Chrysanthemum Society of America, being composed mainly of men who are growing the chrysanthemum for cut flowers, is prone to regard new varieties from one point of view only. This I regard as a mistake. Horticulture is broader than the cut flower market, and there is room without crowding for the cut flower varieties, the pompons, the anemones, the singles, the tasselled, and all the other quaint forms.

"If, then, the committees of our Chrysanthemum Society cannot see merit in any variety unless it is of a stated size and shape, or without certain lines of color, they should state distinctly that they speak only from the standpoint of the cut flower grower. This would clear up a wrong impression which obtains in some quarters, viz.: that they constitute the last court of appeal on everything connected with new varieties of chrysanthemums. We want greater variety both of form and color in the flowers, if this plant is to retain its hold upon the people."

But there should be no grounds from which any wrong conclusion can be drawn regarding the object of the Chrysanthemum Society, neither should its work be differentiated. The society should take cognizance of everything appertaining to the chrysanthemum cult. Just why it doesn't is another of the inexplicable things which attach to this well-meaning, but lily-supported body.

The Gardeners' Chronicle in its issue of November 10, last, publishes the American Rose Society's scale for judging roses, and comments thereon as follows: "The relatively little importance assigned to fragrance is very remarkable. Next to form we should consider it of greatest consequence."

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

November 10.

November 17.

NEW YORK.—H. A. Molatsch, Brooklyn N. Y., exhibited No. 19, a bright yellow, Japanese incurved variety, which scored 87 points, commercial scale.

E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., exhibited Malcolm Lamont, crimson, reflexed, scoring 85 points, commercial scale.

John N. May, Summit, N. J., exhibited Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, light pink, reflexed Japanese, which scored 85 points, commercial scale.

PHILADELPHIA.—Miller & Sons, Bracondale, Ontario, Canada, exhibited Timothy Eaton, white, Japanese incurved, which scored, commercial and exhibition scales, 92 points.

E. G. Hill & Co. exhibited Malcom Lamont, which scored 90 points, commercial scale; 91 points, exhibition scale.

Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, exhibited by John N. May, scored 83 points commercial scale; 85 points exhibition scale.

No. 112, by the same exhibitor, a chrome red, Japanese reflexed, scored 84 points commercial scale; 85 points exhibition scale.

Ferdinand Heck, gardener to George F. Baer, Esq., Reading, Pa., exhibited a yellow Japanese incurved variety, which scored 84 points, commercial and exhibition scales.

BOSTON.—Nathan Smith & Son exhibited Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, scoring 94 points, commercial scale; 87 points, exhibition scale.

Mrs. Ritson, a white sport from Viviand-Morel reflexed, by same exhibitors, scored 90 points exhibition scale. The flowers arrived in poor condition, but, judging from the excellence of its parent—V. Morel—we consider this sport worthy of this score.

John N. May exhibited Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, which scored 88 points, commercial and exhibition scales.

Exhibitors should make an effort to mail to the undersigned the name of the variety or varieties, legibly written, which they have sent for examination to any of the committees in ample time, so that they may be correctly spelled when reported to the horticultural press.

The announcement has already been made that November 24 would be the last day that the various committees at the different centers would be on hand to examine seedlings and sports. To judge late seedlings it has been the custom for the committees to meet on following Saturdays when requested. Arrangements can be made for those having late blooms to show, if a letter to that effect be addressed to any of the following chairmen in good time to give them an opportunity to get their committees together.

A. H. Fewkes (chairman of Boston committee), Newton Highlands, Mass.

E. Dailledouze (chairman New York committee), Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y.

R. Witterstaetter (chairman Cincinnati committee), Sedamsville, O.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.
Wyndmoor, near Philadelphia, Pa.

Work of Committees.

NEW YORK.—Three new varieties were granted certificates by this committee on Saturday, November 17. These were; Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, a light rose pink variety, of the reflexed Japanese type, sent by John N. May, of Summit, N. J. It scored 85 points. This is a nice pink kind, having a shade of color that will command the admiration of flower buyers in general.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., sent a good crimson variety named Malcolm Lamont, Japanese reflexed, having good color, and excellent stem and foliage. This variety also scored 85 points.

H. A. Molatsch, Brooklyn, N. Y., submitted a fine pure yellow variety of the Japanese incurved type, and grown by A. Welsing. This is a beautiful clear yellow, and almost perfect in its solidity; its stem was its weakest point, yet the variety scored 87 points.

New Chrysanthemums.

YANARIVA reflexed, Viviand-Morel form, deep blush pink in center gradually decreasing in color to the outer edges to a pale blush, quite distinct from any known variety, and a grand acquisition, 7 inches through by 5 to 5½ deep. Terminal buds. In season from October 30 to November 15.

BRUTUS. Bright orange red, reflexed, dense foliage, heavy stem, flat petals, the whole forming a handsome flower, of glowing sunset red. Average, 6 inches through, by 4½ deep. Height, 3 feet. Crown or terminal bud. Season October 20 to November 1.

Both of the foregoing varieties were raised by John N. May, Summit, N. J., and have been certificated by the committees of the Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The Original Chrysanthemum.

We reproduce on page 1128 from the Gardeners' Chronicle, London, an illustration of Chrysanthemum indicum, the original type from which the florists' chrysanthemums have been obtained. The specimen from which the picture was made, was collected in the wild state in the far interior of China, whence it was communicated to the Royal Gardens, Kew, by Mr. Grant Birch. The plant was exhibited at the recent flower shows in London. The flower heads are little more than half an inch across, and of a pure yellow color. As shown, all the shoots bore terminal buds, and none of the lateral and axiliary buds had been thinned out.

At the recent chrysanthemum show held in connection with the Paris Exposition, M. Foukouba, head gardener of the Emperor of Japan, exhibited thirteen plants of chrysanthemums of thirteen different varieties, each plant about five feet high and ten feet in diameter, carrying from 180 to 240 flowers. These were grown in France under the direction of M. Foukouba. In an interview published by a Paris newspaper, that gentleman is reported to have stated that in Japan he at one time raised a variety named Reiyo which produced 800 flowers. Being questioned as to how such results were obtained, M. Foukouba replied that in Tokio, rape cake is used as a manure with great satisfaction, also the chemical fertilizers recommended by M. Cordonnier, an eminent French chrysanthemum grower, and those of M. Georges Truffaut, the well-known agricultural chemist.

The Japanese are getting away from growing the very large flowers.

The thirteen plants exhibited were grown from cuttings purchased from Vilmorin Andrieux & Co., in February last.

OBITUARY.

Frederick Danker.

Frederick Danker, father of Frederick A. Danker, florist, died November 16 at his home, 242 Hudson avenue, Albany, N. Y., in the 73d year of his age. He was one of Albany's best known citizens and was prominent in business circles, although for several years he had not been active. His death is mourned by many friends who extend their sincere sympathy to the family in their bereavement.

Henry Heepe.

Henry Heepe, of the firm of A. Heepe & Sons, Akron, O., was found dead in his greenhouses, November 13. Heart decease was the cause of death. He was 51 years old.

U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Four divisions of this department have been affiliated under the name of Office of Plant Industry, with B. T. Galloway, superintendent of Gardens and Grounds; Albert F. Woods, chief of Vegetable Physiology and Pathology; F. Lamson-Scribner, chief of Agrostology, and G. B. Brackett, chief of Pomology. The plan is to bring about closer union and co-operation in these several branches, with a view to developing the work along the broadest possible lines. Horticulture will be made a special feature in future, and particularly the intensive lines of work, especially that of growing vegetables and flowers under glass.

Firms Who Are Building.

TOLEDO, ILL.—W. A. Brewer is building a greenhouse.

LEWISTON, ME.—F. H. Peckham has added a greenhouse, 71x24 feet.

SO. FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—C. H. B. Chapin & Co. have build another greenhouse.

STOCKBRIDGE, MICH.—C. A. Skidmore has been building an addition to his greenhouse.

OWOSSO, MICH.—Herb. Deal has now completed the office for his greenhouse on Comstock Street.

CINCINNATI, O.—George & Allan, Hyde Park, are erecting a structure for the accommodation of "boarders."

GRAND ISLAND, NEB.—Ellsworth, the florist, has just completed a hot water heating apparatus for his greenhouse.

EAST GREENWICH, CONN.—William Crompton has added an office and delivery room, and otherwise improved his greenhouse plant.

NORTH TOHONTO, ONT.—The greenhouses of W. Muston, Davisville, have been largely increased of late and another boiler added to the heating arrangement.

DELEVAN, WIS.—F. T. Mannhan, proprietor of the Williams Bay Floral Co., is making extensive improvements to their property—adding another large greenhouse, putting in the heating apparatus, the work of which has just been completed, painting the buildings, and making other permanent improvements.

CHANGES IN BUSINESS.

LEBANON, PA.—R. W. Wynings will open a flower store on Eighth St.

LOWELL, MASS.—James Walsh has opened a store at 23 Merrimac St.

GREENCASTLE, IND.—A. M. Troxell has started in the florist's business here.

ALBANY, N. Y.—George H. Grey has opened a flower store at 256 South Pearl St.

HOLLIS, L. I.—Wm. Stuppe has removed his florist business from this point to Englewood, N. J.

FINDLY, O.—E. R. Barnd, who moved to Florida a year ago, has gone to Mount Clare, where he will raise vegetables for the northern market.

OIL CITY, PA.—J. T. Gestinger, of Wisconsin, was here recently looking over the ground with a view of locating and engaging in growing roses and carnations on a large scale.

FORT DODGE, IA.—H. E. Mitten, of Morris, Illinois, formerly connected with the Morris Floral Company, has purchased an interest in the Kellenberger greenhouses in this city, and is now engaged looking after the interests of the business.

MARRIED.

Rudolph-Wilson.

In Montgomery, Ala., on November 14, at 7:30 A. M., Thomas Rudolph was married to Miss Lucy Cary Wilson at the home of the bride, Rev. Stewart McQueen officiating. After a trip to, and short stay in, Nashville Tenn., the couple will return and be at home to their friends at 217 Mildred St. No cards.

Business Difficulties.

BOSTON, MASS.—Edward F. Costeller' florist, 159 West Springfield St., this city, is a bankruptcy petitioner. Liabilities $3,066.67; no assets.

PERU, ILL.—H. S. Hackman, florist, is reported to be seriously ill.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Greenwood Florists Employees' Association held its annual entertainment and reception in Prospect Hall, Brooklyn, Wednesday evening, November 21. The membership of the association is made up principally of the employees of florists around Greenwood Cemetery.

Cleveland, O.

The May Co. has opened a flower department in their retail store.

THE ELMIRA (N. Y.) SHOW.

The Elmira chrysanthemum show, taken as a whole, was satisfactory. Some features, however, were lacking—notably the usual Cornell exhibit that was "non est." If the high-lights gradually drop out, what will be the fate of poor chrysanthemum? Undoubtedly purely exhibition blooms will be grown more by private gardeners than commercially, for the prices at present obtained do not warrant the extra expense entailed, and growers, generally, realize this fact, together with other factors involved. Successful exhibitions must, therefore, depend largely on private places for display.

Strathmont (Hon. J. S. Fassett, John B. Rudy, gardener) helped out the Elmira show, with grand blooms. His William H. Chadwick won on white; Colonel Appleton for yellow, Helen Bloodgood, pink, and T. H. Spaulding red. Goldmine was a good exhibition flower, but not nearly the equal of Colonel Appleton, either commercially or for exhibition. F. R. Pierson Co.'s Colonel Appleton were next to Rudy's, those from Strathmont being exceptionally fine. N. Smith & Son's Lavender Queen is good, and Rawson's Bronze Beauty, an immense perfectly incurved bronze, with fine stem and foliage to the bloom, is altogether the finest thing in this line of color. An accident to the house of seedlings deprived Rawson of bringing several of them before the committees. A severe wind and rain storm broke open the roof and badly damaged the blooms at a critical stage, but they will be heard from later.

The silver cup for the best seedling was awarded Timothy Eaton. This high grade gentleman from Canada is not disbarred for weak stems, amply supporting a heavy full bloom of dull white florets; still, it is not the equal of William H. Chadwick in color, symmetry and form, although earlier.

Other good seedlings were shown from N. Smith & Son, John N. May, Moon, Ward, and Rawson. Hoffman had Eureka in excellent form, and Rawson's Philadelphia and Pennsylvania were the best in their class.

The sports from Viviand-Morel, Chas. Davis, Lady Hanhan, Mrs. Ritson and Lady Anglesey, in Nathan Smith & Son's collection, are particularly pleasing in color tone, though varying much as to cultural conditions.

N. Smith & Son made a creditable display, but did not gain any firsts at Elmira. Mrs. F. A. Constable, Chito, and Rustique were among the firm's best blooms.

John B. Rudy, Strathmont, showed Mrs. F. A. Constable, Adula and Lucy Faure in extra fine shape.

Rawson had the only pompons and Chinese section, and these are certainly needed for variety.

Rawson secured first on roses, also for large vase of 100 blooms, chrysanthemums, arranged for effect. This was the most noticeable, one exhibit occupying the center of the hall. A long table of pots and pans of growing chrysanthemums for the retail trade, short and stocky, with nice blooms, was another of Rawson's specialties. This display was not for competition.

Hoffman had the only vase of Mrs. Lawson carnation, C. W. Ward showed Colonel Roosevelt, and yet the premium for best red was awarded ordinary blooms of America; Witterstaetter's Enquirer, second; Mrs. Lawson first, for dark pink or cerise.

Prosperity carnation, from Dailledouze Bros., arrived on second day of show, and was a stellar attraction. Queen of Edgely was present, but the rose, unfortunately, was "off" color, and looked like a faded Beauty.

There were other exhibits from local growers, Mrs. H. D. Wells, La France, Orvis and Lewis.

William Scott, P. A., was judge (P. A. stands for Pan-American).

GROVE P. RAWSON.

THE PARIS (FRANCE) SHOW.

The London Garden in its report of the chrysanthemum show, held at the Paris Exposition, October 31 to November 5, says:

"An important feature was made by M. Aug. Nonin. An effective group was set up by this exhibitor, composed entirely of novelties for next year. Mme. Camille Blanc is a Japanese incurved, with medium-sized grooved florets, and the color a fine shade of pure, clear buttery yellow; M. A. Charvet is a Japanese, with long florets, color deep velvety bright crimson, reverse golden; Fin de Siecle, an immense Japanese, with long drooping florets, color pure deep golden-yellow; Sada Yacco, Japanese, with long twisted curly grooved florets, color creamy white, tinted green in the center; Ceres, large globular Japanese, with grooved florets deep and compact in build, color very pale yellow.

"Another fine lot of new seedlings was staged by M. Ernest Calvat. A noble-looking flower of colossal dimensions is Calvat's Sun. It was the finest new seedling in the show, and would undoubtedly have been awarded the special prize of the American Chrysanthemum Society but for the fact that the raiser had already been awarded the large gold medal of the English National Chrysanthemum Society, for the finest exhibit of seedlings. The color is a most intense deep golden-yellow and absolutely pure in tone. Others were Rol Soleil, a large Japanese of a fine pure golden-yellow color; Croix du Sud, immense in size, a Japanese, with pure white grooved florets; Paolo Radaelli, a large globular flower, with groove twisted florets, color a curious shade of pinkish mauve; Brunchild, an eccentric-looking Japanese, with a central whorl of florets, color pale purple-amaranth, reverse silvery; Regina, pure paper white, etc.

"The American Chrysanthemum Society offered a prize of the value of 125 francs for the best new seedling, which was awarded to M. Liger Ligneau for an excellent Japanese incurved with narrow florets, very deeply grooved and pointed at the tips, called Mdlle. Marie Liger. The color is a dull shade of pink, but clear and pure. Some other interesting exhibits of cut blooms included a very good collection from M. Charmet, of Lyons, and also one from M. Molin of the same place, who had a Japanese anemone, very curious and distinct in build, called Torlada, of large size with very long tubular guard florets, open and curly at the tips, the color being white with a disc of yellow. M. Charmet had an excellent exhibit of large blooms in good condition, comprising Charles Davis, Soleil d'Octobre, the Convention, Nyanza, Mme. Lawrence Zede, Mme. Gustave Henry (very fine), Australie, etc.

"The other large greenhouse was almost wholly devoted to an immense display of plants in pots. These were all arranged in beds of various shapes, with an edging of grass. Close to the entrance was a very fine group by M. Lemaire, each plant carrying a good number of large-sized blooms; those in front were arranged in a line of color by themselves, there being one of purple, one of crimson, one of yellow, and finally one of pink blooms. Behind these were mingled President Lemaire, a beautiful crimson chestnut Japanese with golden reverse, having very broad-grooved florets, M. Fatzer, Paul Oudot, Mlle. Gabrielle Deone, Ed. Andre, and a very bright Japanese, not inappropriately called Globe de Feu.

"Standards in pots were shown by M. Gouleau. The varieties consisted of Fair Maid of Guernsey, President Nonin, Mme. Ed. Roger, Mme. Calvat, Mme. Carnot, Surpasse Amiral, Mme. Gustave Henry, Viviand-Morel, Gloriosum, and many others not quite so well known on this side of the Channel.

"Messrs. Levequeet fils filled up a large rectangular bed with blooms of almost every well-known Japanese in cultivation. The best we saw were Fred Bauer, Colonel W. B. Smith, Princesse Alice de Monaco, Wonderful, Mme. Ed. Roger, Beauty of Teignmouth, Gloire du Rocher, Lydia, M. Farrer, Salome, and many more of the same kind.

"Standards in pots were also shown by M. Patrolin. Although these were rather loosely flowered, the blooms were of very good size, but the great majority of the varieties were quite unknown to us by name. We, therefore, only mention W. Tricker, Australian Gold, Mme. Calvat, Mrs. C. J. Beer, Mme. Ed. Roger, Viviand-Morel, Charles Davis, General Paquie, and Charles Albert, a very fine shade of warm terra cotta.

"Messrs. Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co. had several large and important groups. One of these contained plants in pots, bearing from four to six blooms on each. It was prettily arranged with a border composed of turf and an inside edging of golden pyrethrum. We could not fail to be impressed with the immense numbe of 1900 novelties, which appeared to have come from every available source. Another group from the same firm was arranged in the middle of this great conservatory, around the statue in the center. They were freely-flowered, single-stem plants, with good heads. The names of the best must suffice, viz.: Le Taker, Orquell, a new yellow, Banquise, a fine white, M. Chenon de Leche, Mrs. Weeks, M. L. Remy, President Felix Sahut, white, Pride of Madford, Viviand-Morel, etc.

"M. Aug. Nonin's collection of pot plants, every one of which bore from three to ten immense exhibition blooms, was a sight to remember. M. Raymond Desforets, a deep, old-fashioned incurved of perfect form and build, having broad florets of good substance, the color being a beautiful rich old gold, inside which is scarcely visible chestnut, was a grand flower. Mme. Ph. Roger is a grand Japanese incurved, chestnut crimson with bronze reverse. Other good ones of more than ordinary merit were Phœbus, Volcan, Myrto, Orquell, Dr. Roche, a beautiful pink, Etoile de Feu, dazzling fiery crimson, Oceana, M. Farzer, W. Seward, President Felix Sahut, white, Jules Bernard, fine purple, President Lemaire, Colonel W. B. Smith, Lady Hanham, etc."

THE INDIANAPOLIS SHOW.

In place of the former celebrated chrysanthemum shows of the Society of Indiana Florists, the now State Florists' Association of Indiana held a one day free exhibition at the State House, on Wednesday, November 14. The show was a success in quality and quantity. The best exhibits were the chrysanthemum blooms, while carnations and roses came next. The out-of-town florists were represented in larger numbers than the home craft, which is usually the case. Why, I cannot understand, as a show is the cheapest advertisment for any firm.

The attendance of the public was unusually good; it seems the people are again taking more interest in floral exhibits; or was it because admission was free.

Among the noticeable exhibits were those of J. W. Barnard and G. Teilmann, both of Marion, Ind.; South Park Floral Co., Newcastle, Ind.; H. W. Rieman and Bertermann Bros., Indianapolis. The latter's exhibit consisted of specimen foliage plants, cattleyas and cypripedium plants, also American Beauty roses and chrysanthemum blooms, not for competition. In H. W. Rieman's display, some Begonia Lemoinei plants attracted a great deal of attention, also several good seedling chrysanthemums. South Park Floral Co. showed some extra finely colored Beauty, Bridesmaid, and the new rose Marquis de Litta, a French hybrid tea of a much lighter shade than that of Meteor. This display was also not for competition. Among Teilmann's flowers 25 Bonnaffon were remarkably well done. J. W. Barnard showed some excellent carnations. A vase of pompons, May Williamson, shown by John Hartje, was fine. This is a good commercial variety and received special mention. A seedling carnation, shown by Bauer & Smith, labeled Elma, a light pink of fair quality, also got special mention, as did the following displays: R. A. McKeand, for four seedling canna blooms; Stuart & Haugh, for carnation Avondale, a pink sport of Armazindy; R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, O., for Enquirer carnation. John Heidenreich showed some very good market plants.

Among the most noticeable blooms were a vase of Golden Gate roses, and in chrysanthemums Mrs. Perrin, Mrs. F. A. Constable, Zeno, Wm. H. Chadwick, Orizaba, Golden Wedding, Lavender Queen, Thoraden, Viviand-Morel, Merza, Mrs. O. P. Bassett, Mrs. H. Weeks and Evangeline, a splendid white, globular-flowered variety, which should be in every collection.

A shipment of Queen of Edgely roses was received too late for exhibition. The flowers were exhibited in Bertermana's store and attracted a great deal of attention; they arrived in good shape. The color, while it is pleasing, cannot be compared with that of a good American Beauty.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Three market chrysanthemums in 6-inch pots—H. W. Rieman. Ten single-stem chrysanthemums—E. Huckriede & Son. Six white chrysanthemums—West View Floral Company, Knightstown, first; E. The auction in the evening brought very good results; the prices obtained were better than usual.

A short meeting of the society was called, with Vice-President W. W. Coles in the chair. J. W. Barnard and Fred. Herlemann, of Marion, were elected members. Invitations from Wm. Langstaff, City; Mrs. Graves, Richmond, and Herbert Heller, Newcastle, were received and the same thankfully accepted. A suggestion that the next Legislature be asked for a $1,000 appropriation for the use of the association to continue the big chrysanthemum shows was doubtfully received; it is hardly possible that it could be accomplished. Among the visitors from out of town were J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; Herbert Heller, Newcastle; Chas. Knopf, Richmond; W. W. Coles, Kokomo; E. C. Bissel, J. W. Barnard and F. Herlemann, Marion.

THE MONTREAL SHOW.

The thirteenth annual chrysanthemum show held under the auspices of the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club, was, like its predecessors, a splendid success from a horticultural standpoint, and a financial failure, the door receipts being under $200. The wretched weather prevailing throughout was no doubt in a large measure responsible.

The arrangement of the hall was good, although the general effect was not so fine as a large pyramid in the center gave to a former exhibition. The appearance of the specimen blooms, too, would have been greatly enhanced had lower tables been used.

The specimen palms and ferns, scattered around near the entrance, gave a very good first impression. Two very pretty mantels were put up. The first prize winner, by Wilshire Bros., was a handsome arrangement, in which a large quantity of Liberty roses were used. This rose was throughout the show one of its most admired features. The second one, by Joseph Bennett, a very pretty and inexpensive arrangement of green, with a few yellow chrysanthemums, was much admired for its very simplicity. The funeral designs, with the exception of a very pretty arrangement by McKenna & Sons, were on the old lines, but were all very fine pieces of work.

Following a discussion on the appropriateness of funeral designs in the main hall of the exhibition, your correspondent took a position for half an hour, where comments of visitors on this section could be heard. No written record was taken, but trying to be on the safe side, about 30 per cent. made no comments whatever, about another 30 per cent. made some trifling remark of appreciation, such as "how pretty," or "what nice flowers;" probably 25 per cent. made disparaging remarks of varying degrees; certainly, not more than 15 per cent. made any close examination, or seemed to thoroughly appreciate the display.

The section where the judges were called on to do the most careful work was that for 12 specimen blooms of chrysanthemums, and even after calling in two extra judges, it took half an hour to decide between W. J. Wilshire and Tom McHugh's collections. Finally, the cup was awarded to W. J. Wilshire by one-half a point. It is but fair to say that McHugh's blooms were considerably damaged by rough handling while in charge of the express company. Considering that the winning flowers were grown in the city, and in a position completely overshadowed by big shade trees, Mr. Wilshire's success is phenomenal. The winning collection contained three of the new varieties that have a future. Colonel Appleton was, no doubt, the finest incurved yellow in the hall, surpassing even that grand old favorite, Minerva. Intensity, grown to a terminal, is without a peer in its color. Mrs. F. A. Constable (white Iora) is a valuable addition to its particular section. The balance of the exhibit was the old favorites, of which Morel, Iora, Mme. Carnot, and Minerva were superb. The second 12, also, had the above, with the addition of G. J. Warren, (yellow Carnot). This variety, though very fine, cannot compare with Mme. Carnot for exhibition purposes. A most beautiful pink when grown from a terminal, Autumn Glory, took the first in three pink. Minerva captured the three yellow; both were grown by McHugh. Black Hawk, grown by W. Horobin, was first for crimson.

In the class for specimen plants, the Challenge vase fell to C. A. Smith, with Mrs. Weeks, Mrs. Perrin, White Ivory, Pink Ivory, Harry Hurrell, and Shrimpton. George Pascoe came second with a lot of plants that were, to a casual observer, absolutely perfect; but which on the judges' scrutiny fell off on size of bloom, size of plant, and foliage. Mr. Pascoe was the recipient of many congratulations on the splendid success he had attained, with the very limited means at his disposal. George Robinson came third, with a lot of plants that would have been looked at here in amazement a few years ago.

The plants in 6-inch pots were of inferior quality, as compared with former years, and the single stem flowers, "5-inch," were plants in name only.

The collections of small ferns were far ahead of former years, and the pans of mixed ferns were a most instructive and interesting feature. In this section Wilshire Bros. came first, with a tastefully arranged pan, in which only iron-clad varieties were used. Overcrowding was the cause of failure in the majority of the entries in this section. A large table of orchids contributed from the collections of Sir W. C. Van Horne (Fred C. Smith, gardener), and R. B. Angus, Esq., (W. Wilshire, gardener), came in for the usual amount of praise.

A growing basket of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, and several fine plants in pots, were shown by Fred C. Smith, who also put up the most artistic group in the show. All the other groups contained splendid stock, but it was overcrowded. Tom McHugh exhibited three plants of gesneras, grown in his usual style, for which he was awarded a certificate of merit. This plant is a beautiful species, for a private conservatory; but judging from the specimens exhibited it will not stand sufficiently rough treatment to be of commercial value. Several fine plants of Acalypha Saaderi were shown. This subject here has proved an eatire commercial failure; so far as is known, not a plant has been sold, and florists are throwing their stock away as useless.

Exhibits of roses and carnations were the poorest on record. An unprecedented number (5) of certificates of merit were given: one, to George Pascoe, for best specimen plants in 10-inch pots; one to George Pascoe, for special specimen chrysanthemum plants; one to Tom McHugh, for best bloom in the show; one to Fred Smith, for basket of Gloire de Lorraine; one for five plants of gesaera, to Tom McHugh.

The judging on the whole, gave excellent satisfaction. The judges were all local men, and their work was, throughout, of the most thorough and conscientious description. B.

THE ST. LOUIS SHOW.

The tenth annual exhibition is now a thing of the past. From a financial standpoint we are at preseat uaable to say how successful it has turned out Certain it is that it will not prove very profitable, and may disclose a deficit. The show was not nearly as large as in the last few years on account of many of our growers refusing to put up a display. This was caused by our inability to pay premiums in full, the past three years.

The exhibition was held in the naves of our Exposition Building, a long hall about 75 feet wide, but not continuous, so we had to go around the corners to get enough room. Consequently, the whole show could not be seen at one time, which detracted from the general effect, and the hall was not wide enough for artistic arrangement. Still, we had a very presentable show, as many of our visitors from other cities will, and did admit. Indeed, some who had seen the Chicago show, said that in palms and other decorative stock, we had a higher grade of plants than was there shown.

In attendance we ran a little behind that of some exhibitions of a few years back, when we made money. We would have been all right this year, had the weather been good all through the show. The press gave us liberal mentions through a regular press agent, and the exhibition was advertised about as much as usual.

Thanks to the generosity of Messrs. Caldwell, Carter, and other southern dealers, who donated a lot of smilax and pines, the hall was nicely decorated, adding greatly to the general appearance.

By the will of the late Henry Shaw, $500 was left to the St. Louis florists to be distributed at a regular flower show; indeed, this is the incentive that keeps up the St. Louis affair. These prizes were all well contested for, as they have to be paid in full, thus showing that we can make a good display when money is in sight. The premiums awarded were as follows: For best display of palms, not less than 12 varieties, William Schray & Sons, first; Carl Beyer, second; Michel Plant and Bulb Co., third. Best and largest display of named begonias; Schray, first; Michel, second. Best and largest display of named ferns, Michel, first; Schray, second. Best and largest display of named foliage plants, with variegated leaves, Schray, first; Beyer, second; Michel, third. Best 25 blooming house plants, Schray, first; F. J. Fillmore, second; Sanders' Nursery, third. Best 12 geraniums, named and in bloom, Fillmore, first; George Windler, second. Best and most tastefully arranged fernery, 12 inch, Michel, first; Sanders, second; Schray, third. Best pair climbing plants, Schray, first; Beyer, second. Best pair Asparagus Sprengerli, Beyer, first; Schray, second; Fillmore, third. Best pair Nephrolepis bostoniensis, Sanders, first; Michel, second; Schray, third. Best and largest collection of hardy evergreens, and evergreen shrubs, Sanders, first; Theo. Miller, second. Best araucaria, Fillmore, first; Beyer, second; Schray, third. Areca lutescens, Beyer, first; Sanders, second; Schray, third; Howea Belmoreana, Beyer, first; Schray, second; Sanders, third; Howea Forsteriana, Beyer, first; Sanders, second; Schray, third; Livistona chinensis, Beyer, first; Sanders, second; Schray, third; Pandanus utilis, Beyer, first; Schray, second; Fillmore, third; 12 named cyclamen, Schray.

The display of specimen chrysanthemum plants was very limited, most of them being made up plants, still they made a very good showing, everything considered. Prizes were awarded as follows: Pink, Beyer, first; Windler, second; Schray, third; white, same exhibitors; yellow, Schray, first; Beyer, second; Windler, third; any other color, Beyer, first; Windler, second; Schray, third.

In specimen plants, grown to one flower, Carl Beyer took all the prizes, except one, and in this class he did not enter. The public missed a good display of these, as they are always popular; but the plants were not grown this year. For best specimen pink and white, Beyer was first. Pair specimen palms, Schray, first; Boston fern, Sanders, first; specimen fern, Beyer, first. Twenty-five carnation plants in bloom, Fillmore, first; Schray, second; best palm, Schray, first.

In cut chrysanthemum blooms, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., helped out the show wonderfully; without their exhibits the display would have been a rather slim one. In this class, the awards were: Best 48 blooms, six of a kind, Smith & Son, first, with Mayflower, Rustique, Modesto, Lady Hanham, Mrs. T. L. Park, Idavan, Mrs. M. A. Ryerson, and Chito. Hill & Co., second, with Nyanza, Mrs. Perrin, H. Bloodgood, Calvat, 1899, Lord Cramer, W. H. Lincoln, M. A. Ryerson and Queen of Portugal; Sanders, third, with standard kinds.

In the class for 25 white, Smith & Son were first, with a vase of Merza, that was exceptionally fine; Vesey, second, with Mrs. Robinson; Hill, third, with the new French variety, Prince Bassaraba. This latter we think should have taken second prize, as it is a very large and fine white, on the order of Morel. This is the first time it has been exhibited, and from the few plants Hill had, the variety must be a very uniform and strong grower. We think it will be heard from next year. For 50 blooms quality and arrangement to be equally considered, Vesey was first; with a splendid vase of Major Bonnaffon; Hill, second, with Mrs. Ritson. The special prizes for 25 white and pink, respectively, were awarded to Smith & Son, with Glessner and Morel.

For best 50 blooms Smith, first; Vesey, second; 25 yellow, Sanders, first; vase of blooms, not less than 12 kinds, Vesey, first.

The Shaw prizes for cut chrysanthemums were won as follows: Twelve blooms, Mayflower, Vesey, first; G. Teilmann, Marion, Ind., second; Sanders, third. Twelve blooms, Major Bonnaffon, Teilmann, first; Vesey, second; Sanders, third. Twelve, any other yellow, Vesey, first, with Sunderbruch; Teilmann, second, with Daly; Sanders, third, with Golden Wedding. Twelve, any other white variety, Vesey, first, with Mrs. Robinson; Michel, second, with F. Pullmann; Sanders, third, with Jerome Jones. Twelve pink, Teilmann, first, with Bloodgood; Sanders, second, with Murdock; Michel, third, with Mrs. Perrin. Twelve blooms of a variety introduced in 98-99, or 1900, West End Floral Park, of Belleville, Ill., first, with Pride of Belleville. This is a good sized reflexed, nicely built flower, creamy white in color, and was raised by Henry Emmons, of Belleville, Ill. Second prize was won by Michel with Liberty; third, by Teilmann, with white Bonnaffon. This latter is a very beautiful pure white, but is almost too small to take a place of prominence, in our estimation. In the cut rose classes, for 25 Souv. de Wootton, Sanders, was first; 25 Bridesmaid, Vesey, first; 25 Bride, Fred Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., first; Vesey, second; 10 Beauty, Ammann, first; Kellogg, second; 25 Perle des Jardins, Ammann, first; Fillmore, second; Sanders, third; 25 Meteor, Vesey, first; Kellogg, second. 25 Kaiserin, W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind., first; Kellogg, second; Vesey, third.

Prize takers in the carnation classes were: Fifty Ethel Crocker, Vesey, 50 Daybreak, Schray; 50 variegated, Vesey, with Bradt; 50 white, Vesey, first, with a magnificent vase of Mary Wood, Hill, second, with Flora Hill; Fillmore, third, with same variety. Best vase pink, Vesey, first, with Lawson, extra fine; Ammann, second, with Scott. Best vase red, Vesey, first, with Jubilee.

The premium for best collection of double violets, was won by John Steidle, of Central, Mo., and for best vase mignonette, by Schray.

Considerable dissatisfaction was caused by poor judging, though the men selected were supposed to be competent. We know of several decisions that were really rank, and which caused lots of unfavorable comment, both in the plant and cut flower classes.

The club certainly has one staunch lady friend. Besides giving a handsome prize, she insisted on presenting the club with an additional check for $20 towards the expenses. Words of ours fail to express our gratitude and admiration for this lady.

Hill & Co. placed on exhibition the new roses, Queen of Edgeley and Marquis de Litta. Each of these called forth much favorable comment. The red one, we think, is especially valuable.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) SHOW.

The annual exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held in Tillinghast's Hall, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week. The quality of the flowers was far superior to that of last year. The best blooms were shown by John Barr, gardener for Mrs. B. B. Cheney, of Wellesley, Mass., who, with a few exceptions, captured all the first prizes. His collection was as fine as any ever exhibited. The honors for cut blooms were about equally divided between him and F. MacRae.

The displays of carnations and roses were by no means over-shadowed by the chrysanthemums, although the latter were by far the most conspicuous. S. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., and John MacRae, exhibited the largest number of carnations. The seedling, Bean Ideal, grown and staged by N. D. Pierce, of Norwood, was awarded a certificate of merit for the best pink, lighter than Scott; and a silver medal for the best seedling. It has to its credit, up to date, four certificates of merit, with two silver medals, and it is quite worthy of all the honors bestowed upon it. It is a large, handsome flower, with strong stem, and is an excellent keeper.

S. J. Reuter's exhibit consisted of Lawson, Olympia, Crawford, Morning Glory, Joost, Victor, Daybreak, Flora Hill, Mary Wood, Elm City, Bradt, and, for red, Dexter Pierce and G. H. Crane; also The Marquis and a sport from Flora Hill, a beautifully mottled pink.

Mr. Reuter also exhibited an unusually fine lot of roses, on which he took most of the first prizes, among the best flowers being Bridemaid, Bride, Bon Silene, Sunrise, and some of the finest Liberty shown about here this season.

R. Craig & Son, Philadelphia, exhibited the new rose, Queen of Edgely, in charge of W. Craig. It was awarded a certificate of merit. William Hill took first prize for best potted chrysanthemums; E. J. Johnston capturing first for best arranged group of foliage plants.

There was the usual large exhibit of fruit, and a new feature was that of canned fruits.

Financially these shows are not successes. This year, a number of charitable institutions visited us in a body, but it seems impossible to interest the general public. A. M.

The Market.

This has been a week of disappointment to cut flower dealers. The brisk demand and curtailment of supply chronicled last week, proved of short duration, and we are again in the midst of a very slow market. The Horse Show no longer makes any impression on the flower business of the city, except by creating a little spurt for violets; and this is only felt on the opening days of the show. The inflated value placed on these flowers for the occasion, resulted in the retailers turning them down after the first day; consequently instead of maintaining the $2 and $2.50 mark, they have, the middle of this week, been going begging at from 75c. to $1.50, except for a few of special grade, which have brought $2. Last Saturday a limited quantity of violets touched the $3 mark, and those have no doubt been responsibile for a good many hundreds being turned down since then.

Roses are coming in more abundantly than they were, but about half of the supply is soft and too far open. These are hard to dispose of, and have to be sacrificed. A limited number of special Beauty have brought 40c. each, but the general price for this grade has been about $3.50 per dozen. Special Bride and Bridemaid are bringing 8c. and 10c., extras and lower grades are not doing so well, proportionately, owing to the greater supply. Carnot and Liberty, when first class, are fetching good figures; the former have realized $2 per dozen, while the latter brings from 15c. each, down, according to quality.

Chrysanthemums are very plentiful, and there is no marked change in values. The proportion of fancy blooms seems to be much larger than has been the case in other seasons. Yellow varieties move the slowest; the best demand at present being for the large pink kinds. Some very elegant blooms of Maud Dean are now to be had.

Cypripediums are becoming quite plentiful, but there is no particular rush after them as yet. Cattleyas are a little short in supply; not many are needed, however, and no advance in price is noted.

Harrisii lilies are in, and meeting with fair demand. Paper White narcissus also is arriving, but does not move so easily, fetching anywhere from $2 to $3 per hundred. Carnations are plentiful and move very slowly; prices have dropped considerably, and the general tone of the carnation market is unsatisfactory.

Jottings.

Gus. Bergmann, salesman for John Young, is again able to be out, after a long serious illness.

Some elegant plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, grown by C. W. Ward, are on view at John Young's store.

Nice blooms of the new pink carnation, Sir Thomas Lipton, grown by H. B. McKnight, were seen in G. E. Bradshaw's this week. This is a medium sized flower of a rose pink color.

A special meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on Monday evening, November 26, in the rooms, corner 27th Street and Broadway, at 8 o'clock. The Plan and Scope Committee will meet in the rooms one hour earlier. All members are requested to attend the special meeting, as business of urgent importance connected with the proposed flower show will be up for consideration.

L. J. Kreshover obtained a judgment against Albert Girard, wire frame maker, Staten Island, on Friday, November 16, for $499.73, and costs.

Mr. Kreshover has opened a branch store at 173 Greenwich, under the firm name of L. J. Kreshover & Co.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., and Robert Craig, Philadelphia, Pa., were in town Saturday last, attending a meeting of the American Rose Society, looking to the March show.

Signs of Christmas.

C. H. Joosten has just received a lot of holly trees from Holland, for the Christmas trade. These are in fine condition, with nice foliage, and well berried.

The New York Market Florists' Association met Thursday night last and affixed their signatures to a petition that ex-Judge Lynn had prepared to be submitted to the Board of Apportionment. The petition calls for a three or four-story building to be erected on the site of the Clinton market; and will also be signed by the property owners in the neighborhood, as well as by those of the florists in the city who can be seen. President Lehnig appointed committees to canvass the trade for signatures. The Association also decided to secure a suitable room for headquarters, and to hold regular meetings on the first Tuesday of every month. Membership dues were fixed at $3 per year, and all present helped to swell the treasury by paying their dues in advance. The secretary will notify all the members of the place and time of the next meeting.

Philadelphia.

Trade Notes.

All the retail stores are doing good business. Transient trade has been very satisfactory, and still keeps up. The supply of cut flowers is just about right to keep the market good and healthy. Roses are a little scarce, but other flowers are in plentiful supply. First-class chrysanthemums are still selling at from $2 to $3 per dozen. The market is overstocked with cheap grades. All the growers are now rushing in pot plants; many of these are cut down and the flowers sold to the street men.

Pink carnations are in brisk demand for Saturday. President McKinley will be in this city on that day to attend the annual banquet at the Union League, and from present indications several thousands of pink carnations will be used.

From present advices the Winter season will be a good one. During the past two weeks many large balls have been arranged for, and the number of these events seems likely to eclipse that of last season.

Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held on Tuesday last, and consisted entirely of routine business, pertaining to the late show, and nominations of officers for 1901. The old officers are all renominated. The only contests are for vice-presidents, there being seven nominees for four appointments, and for executive council there are twelve nominees, seven to be elected.

The show held last week was the best in many years, both as regards the general satisfaction of the exhibitors, and financially, there is a nice, healthy surplus, above premiums awarded, and expenses. Not in years was such good weather known during the annual exhibition; it was clear and cool. The good condition of all plants and flowers at the close of the exhibition was a surprise to many, the more so when one takes into consideration the unusual warm weather which prevailed for three weeks previous. It is not possible to enumerate all the exhibits as to keeping qualities, but a few of the new things might be of interest.

New rose, Marquise de Litta, shown by E. G. Hill & Co. The flowers were cut on November 11, and not a petal had fallen November 17. The blooms were 36 hours packed in a box coming here. New rose, Queen of Edgely, shown by the Floral Exchange, kept well. Fresh flowers were brought in daily, but the old ones were retained and cards put on stating "five days," "four days," old, etc. New rose, Robert Scott (Robert Scott & Son), also proved a splendid keeper. On Friday a new lot of flowers was brought in, but as the old ones were so good, another vase was made up with the fresh blooms. The ones staged on Wednesday were good Saturday night.

The new chrysanthemum, Timothy Eaton (Miller & Sons), proved a spendid keeper. The flowers were cut November 11, and after being on exhibition all week, were kept, and examined on Monday, the 19th, by the National Chrysanthemum Committee, being still in first-class shape, and I am able to say that to-day, the 22nd, 10 blooms out of 12, have not dropped a petal.

The feature of the show for Thursday was the floral arrangements; but none materialized, beyond a few plateaus, handle baskets, and one table decoration. The retail florists will no longer compete. Everyone wants first prize, and some other method will no doubt have to be resorted to in this line.

Jottings.

Charles B. Stahl has a new wagon. In addition to his increased facilities for handling cut flowers he now sends out a price list announcing the fact that he is also prepared to fill orders for some of the staple lines of florists' supplies.

Julius Kohler & Son had a bad fire at their greenhouses out in Frankford, on Saturday morning, last. A large shed over the boilers, caught fire, and was entirely destroyed, with contents, including a new wagon. The ends of five houses adjoining the shed were burnt out, much stock being ruined, and glass broken.

Chrysanthemum Peter Kay was labeled Peter Quay at the late show. Pennsylvania stands solid yet.

J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., showed a large bunch of the new white carnation, Queen Louise. R. Witterstaetter, Sedamsville, Ohio, had a vase of Enquirer, for exhibition purposes only.

DAVID RUST.

Thanks to Secretary Rust.

At the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society meeting, Tuesday night, a special vote of thanks was tendered Secretary David Rust, for efficient service during the past exhibition, the mover of the resolution stating that the grand success of the show was due to Mr. Rust's energetic work for the Society. There is a balance of $355 above expenses and prizes awarded—the best showing in many years.

Trade News.

Since election business has taken a steady drive ahead, and the retail stores are now all more or less busy with wedding and funeral orders. Stock is readily cleared up, especially if good; but, unfortunately for both grower and wholesaler, supply of the percentage of good stock is small in comparison with that of seconds and thirds. Roses are improving in quality faster than carnations, although the crop of the latter now coming in is much better. Roman hyacinths and narcissus have made their appearance, and the outlook for good cuts Christmas is very encouraging. Violets are gaining ground, with a much better demand and improved prices. Chrysanthemums are still leading, and will probably hold their own for a few weeks yet, at least.

An Exhibition.

Saturday was first exhibition day of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, and was styled chrysanthemum day. The exhibits were very creditable, and were viewed by thousands of people. E. G. Hill & Co., of Richmond, Ind., had the best display, capturing three out of four prizes, taking first on best vase of yellow, with Lincoln; first on best 12 varieties, and the Gillett prize for best vase, any color, with Mayflower, white. J. W. Rodgers took first for best vase of pink, with Perria. George Bayer, of Toledo, O., captured the $10 prize, offered by Albert Sunderbruch, for best 25 Bonnaffon. These flowers were certainly beautiful, being well finished. R. Witterstaetter and J. W. Rodgers also had vases staged for this prize and their blooms were much above the average. George & Allan carried off the prizes for Bride, Bridesmaid and Meteor roses, and J. R. Goldman, of Middletown, O., for yellow roses.

The Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, Pa., sent their Queen of Edgely rose, which for a pink Beauty is all right, and is the best rose in its class; but it will never take the place of the American Beauty. It was awarded honorable mention. At the close of the exhibition the blooms were taken in charge by Fred Lemon of E. G. Hill & Co., who are Western agents for the originators.

Marquis de Litta is another new rose that was staged by E. G. Hill & Co., and was awarded a certificate. This rose can be called very dark pink, or light red; the stem is good, but is heavily covered with thorns, which will militate against the variety in a retail way. Possibly this can be remedied by culture.

Seedling Chrysanthemums.

Several seedling chrysanthemums were before the committee here. E. G. Hill & Co. had two—Mary Hill, which is an improved Perrin, larger than that variety, a much better built flower, and just as good in color, the bloom being more durable. This variety was originated by Henry Rieman, of Indianapolis, Ind., who sold the stock to E. G. Hill & Co. Growers will make no mistake in buying this sort. Malcolm Lamont is a deep red, broad petalled sort, and a decided acquisition to the red family. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., staged a yellow variety, on the order of Bonnaffon, named Mrs. Elmer Smith. The foliage is much more graceful than that of Bonnaffon, but the flower, I do not think, is any better. The parentage is Thornden × George W. Childs. H. L. Ragan, Springfield, O., staged a sport of President William R. Smith, which is a splendid bloom, and good in every way. The color is a salmon.

Witterstaetter was the only party to show carnations; these were Enquirer, Mrs. Lawson, Estelle, Elinore and No. 723a, a white. These varieties will all be seen in better shape at the December meeting.

Visitors present were Frank McGregor and H. L. Ragan of Springfield, O., and Fred Lemon, of Richmond, Ind.

News Notes.

The recent looting of the German National Bank of Newport, Ky., caused Uncle Sam to take hold of the bank. Nearly all the florists of Newport, Ky., were depositors, and John Freis was a director. It is to be hoped that arrangements will be made whereby the depositors will be paid dollar for dollar, although at this writing matters look very dark and gloomy. E. G. G.

Anderson, Ind.

Mrs. Charles Farmer, wife of the well-known florist and a resident of Anderson for 35 years, died, November 16, of heart disease. She leaves her husband and four children.

Louisville, Ky.

The demand for good cut flowers continues fairly good, and the supply is about equal to the call, with the exception of violets, which are very scarce. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and good. The demand for them does not seem as brisk as in other seasons, and the prices have not been as good as usual.

The Florists' Club having decided not to hold a show, Nanz & Neuner, and Jacob Schulz held individual exhibitions at their respective stores. Both displays were excellent.

The Floral Exchange, Philadelphia, sent a bunch of the new rose, Queen of Edgely to the local society to be exhibited. The flowers were displayed in the window of Jacob Schulz, where they attracted much attention from the public, and the florists who called to see them. The blooms arrived after their long journey, in first-class condition, and lasted the entire week, which proves the variety to be an excellent keeper. From the comments heard I think it will be a good seller.

F. Walker & Co. have leased the establishment of Ed. Morat on Third Avenue, and will run it in addition to their New Albany place.

Leo Zoeller and Miss Eva Ehret were married during the past week. Mr. Zoeller has been with Jacob Schulz for the past seven years. The congratulations of the trade are offered. J. S.

Pittsburg.

The Market.

At last we have had a touch of Winter weather, and it has helped trade to a certain extent. Stock is abundant, with prices a little higher. Roses, particularly, have advanced in value; Beauty are in good demand. Chrysanthemums are yet very plentiful; fine stock was handled the past week, at moderate prices. Violets are in requisition, with the quality much improved.

Jottings.

A. W. Smith recently disposed of a batch of potted chrysanthemums to one of our large department stores, that made a display of them, and sold them at a moderate figure.

F. Burki visited the chrysanthemum show in Chicago.

John Bader took a flying trip East to look up stock.

J. W. Ludwig is suffering from a bad cold, and has been confined to the house for several days.

No quorum was present at the November meeting of the Florists' Club.

The Market.

The retail trade was very good the last week, but with the returning warmer weather the general store trade has fallen off again. The colder weather shortened up the supply of roses and carnations early last week, changing the aspect of the wholesale market. At present the supply and demand seem to be well balanced again. There is a decided improvement in carnations. The later chrysanthemums are coming in very fine and the sales are satisfactory, though the average price keeps down to between 6c. and 12c. wholesale, and 15c. to 25c. retail, with very few exceptions.

Seeing an ad. is not necessarily believing it, but if it is not seen, all the convincing quality in the world will not make it effective.—Printers' Ink.

If you want your advertisement to be seen by every likely trade buyer in the country place it in the Florists' Exchange Christmas Number, December 8th.

St. Paul.

Trade Notes.

The sudden transition from Summer mildness to Winter coldness had a very gratifying effect on sales, and trade for two weeks has been exceptionally good. Chrysanthemums are plentiful, but the quality is hardly up to the high standard of former years, the necks being weak, and the petals dropping quickly. This condition is most likely due to the warm Fall weather, which induced a weak, soft growth. The best seen to date are Golden Wedding, Bergmann and Rose Owen. Mrs. Robinson, which in former years has held its large head up so proudly, is this year very weak necked, but few of the stems being strong enough to hold up their enormous load of bloom. Western King, another most beautiful variety, sheds its petals as soon as fully developed.

In the line of roses there appears to be just enough good stock to go round, with the exception of Beauty, which are quite scarce, and for which there is an unusually good demand.

Carnations are still in great demand, with a local shortage reported. Some very fine blooms are shipped in from Joliet, prominent among which are Mrs. Lawson, Maceo, Gomez, and some other choice varieties, including several very promising seedlings. There is a large number of violets planted here this season, but so far very few good flowers have been picked. This condition has caused a great shortage in the local market.

Romans have made their appearance and are in good demand for funeral work, etc.

There is a good call for palms, ferns, etc., and sales in this line have been very brisk for several weeks. Chrysanthemum plants sell slowly, though better stock might create a better demand.

News Jottings.

R. C. Seeger has completed his new range of houses, and now has a nice up-to-date establishment in every particular. In roses he is growing some choice Bride, Bridesmaid, Meteor, Golden Gate and Perle, while his Beauty are among the best ever brought to this market. Liberty, which is grown quite extensively, has so far been quite disappointing. There are a great many short-stemmed blossoms, but with more vigorous growth of plant this will be obviated. The flowers as seen on the plants here are certainly handsomer than the Meteor, and are not inclined to bullheadedness. Mr. Seeger has a fine lot of violets, but they are late, though giving promise for a good crop at Christmas.

In Minneapolis, John Monson is now erecting 10 large houses, in addition to his most complete range built the past season, making a total of over 40,000 square feet of glass. These houses are of the most improved style, and as the location on a side hill will give them plenty of light, even on the shortest days, he should produce some choice blooms.

Fred Busch has rebuilt several of his old houses, and is better prepared than ever to produce cucumbers, beans, lettuce, tomatoes, radishes and other garden truck for which he has become famous.

Holm & Olsen have recently purchased a new up-to-date wagon, which is very handy and showy, and quite in keeping with the rest of their business.

Otto Hierschorn has closed up his Fourth Street store, and will hereafter devote his entire time to his Seventh Street establishment.

E. F. Lemke has gone on his annual hunting trip in the northern part of the state.

A. H. Bunde and wife and A. S. Swanson were visitors at the Chicago chrysanthemum show. VERITAS.

The Market.

Business moves along in the same lines with a little something going on all the time. The supply of good Bride and Bridesmaid has shortened up, but the long looked for improvement in quality has not as yet materialized. Beauty are in good supply, meeting with a fair demand. Prices range from $4 to $8 for small grades; $10 to $12 50 and $16 for medium to fair grades, and $20 to $25 for best and fancies.

Carnations are still plentiful and feel the effects of the heavy supply of chrysanthemums. Some fine flowers of the latter are now in the market, and are selling at low figures, considering the quality. Select blooms of Bonnaffon, Wanamaker, Maud Dean and such varieties are sold at $1 per dozen, with smaller grades of all kinds at from $3 per 100 upwards. A few extra quality, Western King, white Bonnaffon, etc., make $1.50 and sometimes $2 per dozen, but they are necessarily very fine flowers.

Violets are scarce, that is, good ones, and good prices are realized. No. 1 stock brings 75c. per 100, while a few fancies realize $1 per 100. It is said that violets may be very scarce by Thanksgiving Day. Valley is plentiful and does fairly well at the same prices as last week. Harrisii lilies are now a staple article, being received of good quality and in goodly numbers. They fetch $8 and $10 per 100. Paper Whites and Romans are becoming quite plentiful, and move slowly at $1.50 to $2 per 100.

There is now every indication of a good supply of nearly all kinds of flowers for Thanksgiving Day.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. held a very successful sale of evergreens, etc., from Holland, on Tuesday, very good prices being realized for nearly all the stock disposed of.

Judge Hoitt is a candidate for Speakership of the New Hampshire House of Representatives, and it is understood that he has a very good chance of election. His many friends wish him all the success possible.

William E. Doyle, who had been a candidate for Mayor of Cambridge, found that it was impossible for him to devote sufficient time to both politics and business, and he has decided to abandon the former.

Richard H. Kidder, of Waltham, has made an assignment.

Another retail store has been opened at 987 Boylston street. Lawson & Taylor is the firm name. Both parties are from Worcester, Mass.

The Horticultural Club held its regular monthly meeting at the Quincy House, on Thursday evening, with Hermann Thieman, Manchester, Mass., presiding.

Charles Evans, who was confined to his house a few days last week, is again about.

J. Tailby & Son and William Nicholson are bringing in white Bonnaffon to the Flower Market. F. J. N.

Indianapolis.

Trade Notes.

Ed. Smith, a florist on Virginia avenue for some years, has gone out of business.

John Heidenreich has added one house, 10 x 80 feet, to his establishment.

The warm weather has advanced flowers, especially chrysanthemums, so that a glut has been in the market for some time. Fear is expressed that stock will receive a setback when the real cold weather arrives. Business for about three weeks past has been below the average. W. B.

Providence, R. I.

Violets have become very scarce here, and also in Boston, the past week. John MacRae's violets are the finest to be seen in this section, and thus far he has had more blooms than all the other growers together, with promise of a fine crop for Christmas. A. M.

Chicago.

State of Trade.

The expected has happened—an unmistakable shortage in the cut of roses, as compared to that following the protracted warm Fall. If the general business could be called brisk, there would be a strong advance in prices, but that can hardly be said as yet, except in the case of American Beauty, and very high grade tens. To be able to clean out reasonably at quotation prices, is change enough to begin with. Chrysanthemums, of course, are the great feature, and some very good stock is in the market. These flowers will last some time yet, as there are more than the average of late blooms to come in, especially of the medium and lower grades.

Carnations, at writing, are not over abundant, but sufficient to prevent any marked advance in selling rates.

Thanksgiving prices will likely rule at not far from the following figures: long-steemed Beauty, $4 to $5; medium, $2 to $3; short, 75c. to $1, per dozen. In teas, special fancies may reach $8; extras $4 to $6; common, $2 to $3, per 100. Carnations, fancies, $3 to $4; standards, $1.50 to $2; common $1 per 100. Chrysanthemums, extra choice, $3; good stock, $1.50 to $2; common grades, 50c. to $1, per 100. Violets, extras, $1 to $1.50; common, 75c. to $1.

Good Paper White narcissus has been selling at $4 to $5. A very good quality of bouvardia in the market is bringing $1.50 per 100.

Florists' Club Doings.

At the regular meeting of the club, November 16, Frank Oechstein and John Maugel, were elected members. W. N. Rudd stated that he could not give an exact report on the door receipts at the recent show; but enough was known to indicate that so expensive a hall could not be made a paying success. As a partial reason for the poor exhibits in the way of cut chrysanthemums, he stated that the exhibition was too early for the best blooms. Chairman Phil. J. Hauswirth reported the total net proceeds of the flower booth sales, in aid of the Galveston Florists' Fund, as $260.20, which sum was turned over to the treasurer. A vote of thanks was exteuded to him for his gratifying success. The secretary was instructed to send a letter of thanks to the following firms: Mrs. E. T. Graves, Richmond, Ind.; George Engel, Xenia, Ohio; Samuel Batson, Kalamazoo, Mich.; John Bauscher, Jr., Freeport, Ill.; George A. Rackham, Detroit, Mich.; George Harrer, Niles Center, Ill.; Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; W. J. and M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, and Gunner Teilmann, Marion, Ind.; J. C. Vaughan, Edwin Eagle & Co., Anton Then, N. P. Miller, John Feike, P. J. Hauswirth, Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum, Walter Retzer & Co., Emil Buettner, Johnson & Carlson, A. McAdams, J. T. Anthony and August Juergens of Chicago.

Some little discussion was had relative to shows, and a determination manifested not to give them up, even if the Club had to take hold of them again.

Jottings.

Robert Johnstone, of Norwood Park, has been sending in some good wallflowers and expects to keep up the supply all Winter. The stock sells fairly well at $1 per 100 sprays.

Henry Hilmers, Blue Island, grows a lot of chrysanthemums, several to a stem, and claims that for his store use these pay better than fancies.

Thrips on Beauty roses is causing some trouble, being also hard to get rid of.

Christmas greens, as yet, are short of the demand. The price asked at first hand is $100 per ton, at time of writing. Parties just returned from the woods, who know what they are talking about say the supply this year is comparatively small, and unless unusually open weather prevails, (not likely at this late date), greens are to be extremely short in this market. Ess.

St. Louis.

There has been little change in the general market. Supply and demand are nearly equal. Carnations sell at 1c. to 2c.; roses, 1c. to 4c., according to quality and quantity. Violets have gone up a notch, being now worth 60c. per 100. Chrysanthemums have not come in very plentifully, though choice grades would sell.

A. Ringler, of Chicago, was a visitor.

Trade Items.

Business has continued fairly good; the Dominion Election did not appear to affect trade. Not many carnations are coming in locally, as most of the growers plant late. E. Walker is handling a large quantity of fine stock.

Chrysanthemums in pots are selling very slowly. Those growers who have grasped the situation are cutting the blooms and selling them in loose bunches. The prediction is, a better quality of flowers will be produced next season and better prices asked. Bench culture will be more popular.

A fall of snow and a sharp freeze on the 13th inst. put a stop temporarily to outside work; milder weather again prevails, however. The Hamilton Horticultural Society met on the 19th inst. Mr. Shuttleworth, from the Ontario Agricultural College, addressed the meeting on the subject of manures. Though the membership of the society is entirely satisfactory, the attendance was small. An effort will, no doubt, be made this Winter to increase the attendance.

San Francisco.

The recent flower show held under the auspices of the California State Floral Society was a big success financially, according to the report of the treasurer, which was made at a meeting of the society held November 9. It was decided to hold a rose show next May. The advisability of increasing the number of vice-presidents from one to two and the board of directors from two to four was discussed and the plan will probably be carried out.

After the business meeting O. V. Lange, of Berkeley, gave a half-hour's talk on "Flower Photography," using a number of cleverly taken pictures prepared in his own art gallery. In the case of highly tinted flowers, the speaker said, it requires most delicate shading on the part of the photographer in order to bring out a faithful reproduction of the subject.

Steven Ferreri, a flower grower, was robbed recently of $970. He kept his money in his greenhouse. A former employee is supposed to be the culprit.

A very successful chrysanthemum show was held here from November 13 to 15. The affair was under the auspices of the Civic Club, which is composed of the most influential people of the city. The local florists did nobly and deserve the warmest praise. The quality of everything shown was of a high order. Among the largest prize winners were George Gurgiest, gardener to F. C. Bosler, Esq.; W. S. George, gardener to Mr. J. W. Wetzel; florists, John Robbins and J. Dewall. One of the great attractions was a flower shown for a special prize; it measured over 12 inches in diameter, and was grown by W. S. George. The judges were W. S. Macklin and J. Lohan, of Harrisburg, and Mr. Byer, of Chambersburg. Their decisions gave general satisfaction. H. Y.

FIRES.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—On November 16 fire broke out in the packing house attached to the greenhouses of John Koehler & Sons, Bridge Street, near Frankford Avenue, doing damage to the amount of $5,000. While fighting the flames Mr. Koehler was overcome and fell unconscious shortly after the excitement was over. He was carried to his residence and the physicians pronounce his condition critical. The packing house was a two-story frame building about 125 feet long.

New Chrysanthemums, etc. at Summit, New Jersey.

With the present high standard of chrysanthemums in general, a new variety must, of necessity, show distinctive merit, before a certificate is awarded it, and to bring a flower up to the requisite certificating point requires considerable skill and ability. Mr. May has been successful in having three seedlings certificated within the last few weeks, and a recent visit to his establishment enabled us to obtain a few notes relative to the respective merits of these varieties. Yanariva is a mid-season sort, of the Japanese reflexed type, of a very delicate pink color, sometimes called a flesh pink. The flower is of good size, and the foliage carried is not very heavy. This variety is a descendant from Mrs. Jerome Jones, crossed by an unnamed seedling. Flowers of it were sent to four of the committees of the Chrysanthemum Society, and a certificate obtained from three of the committees. We were informed that this variety is one of the best, and most free growers it is possible to find. Brutus is the name of a good sized flower, of a regular sunset red color. The type is Japanese reflexed. It is of the same parentage, on the maternal side, as is Yanariva. The stem and foliage are all that could be desired, and Brutus will, no doubt, became a valuable acquisition to existing red kinds. Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain is also a Japanese reflexed. The color of this variety is a light rose pink, very pleasing, and, from our point of view, the more likely to win favor with the buying public. It is a good clear shade, one that is sure to show up well under artificial light, and is absolutely free from salmon or magenta effects. The stem and foliage of this variety are well up to the standard, and the shipping qualities of the blooms are excellent. This latter remark applies equally to the two varieties previously mentioned, and these three certificated kinds will no doubt find a prominent place among our commercial chrysanthemums in 1901.

Mr. May is also a great enthusiast in the pompon section, and is continually working towards improvement in this class. A steadily increasing demand for them is noticed, and, although at the time of our visit it was too late to see the flowers at their best, we observed a few excellent varieties. Two yellows were very noticeable, one named Klondike, the other a seedling numbered 80 and a trifle darker in color than the former. A clear pink variety named Aileen is very pleasing, as also is a white variety named Lula. Miss Ada Williams is a fine white, just tinted with pink, and one of the best of the set.

Chrysanthemums, however, fill but a small portion of the numerous greenhouses here, and under the guidance of Mr. May's son, Harry, we saw the many clean, well cared for houses of roses and carnations. Of the former, the Bride and Bridesmaid are simply grand. Much of the stock has been carried over, and the length of stem and size of bloom leave nothing to be desired. Morgan and Kaiserin are also very fine. Liberty, of which there are two houses planted, are just recovering from a severe attack of spot. During convention week these two houses were the admiration of many visitors, the plants at that time being remarkably vigorous. Since then, however, black spot has appeared; but the rose seems to have great recuperative qualities, and is now rapidly outgrowing the effects of the disease. Other varieties of roses grown are Beauty, Hoste, Sunrise, Bon Silene, Golden Gate, Mrs. Robert Garrett, Lady Dorothea, Admiral Dewey and Testout.

One of the finest sights is the house of mignonette. The earliest sown bed (sown about the middle of July) is magnificent, enormous spikes being now ready for the market.

A beach of cypripediums, in another house, are also very fine; this batch, of several hundred plants, averages about 15 flowers to the plant.

Among the seedling carnations, several have decided merit; as yet they are unnamed, and can only be referred to by their numbers. No. 515 is of a light crimson color, medium size, and is a splendid grower, having a good stem; the plant is a most persistent bloomer. Two white ones, Nos. 3,125 and 4,540, flowering for the first time, are also very fine, the blooms having good stems and the plants a vigorous constitution. No. 2,960 is a clear bright scarlet, a very large flower, carried on a superb stem. This is considered an exceptionally fine variety. No. 3,456 is a good long-stemmed crimson, of medium size, and splendid habit of plant. No. 4,959 is a large kind, an absolutely pure yellow, no tracing of any other color whatsoever being found on the flower.

Other varieties grown are The Marquis, Peru, Genevieve Lord, G. H. Crane, White Cloud, Estelle, Lily Dean and Olympia. Lily Dean has a house to itself. Although other growers have been disappointed with the behavior of this variety, it is certainly producing a heavy supply of very fine blooms here, being looked upon as one of the best paying carnations on the place.

Olympia has had a house built expressly for it, which at this writing presents a perfect picture. The house is even span, 100 feet long, and 34 feet wide. Five beds or benches are used, those on the sides being quite narrow. That this variety has a great many admirers is attested by the enormous sales of the plants last Spring. It has been written about so often, that no further mention of it is needed here.

All the carnations at this place are in the finest possible condition. There has been no filling in required since the houses were planted from the field, and stem rot has not manifested itself, except in one or two instances, and among stock brought in from outside sources.

In closing we cannot refrain from adding a word upon the clean and well-kept condition of every bench and walk in the whole establishment, which reflects great credit on the foreman, S. Henshaw.

Newport, R. I.

The attendance at our Fall show was rather light, except in the evenings, when a good many were on hand for the dancing. The weather being poor was in a measure responsible for this result. Then, on the opening night, a celebration by the Republicans over their recent victories at the polls scarcely left enough people around to guard the hall. But, as a whole, the affair was a grand success, well managed, and of the awards made we have heard no complaint. The judges were Messrs Wm. J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.; Kenneth Finlayson and Jas. Wheeler, of Brookline, Mass.

In last week's report I omitted to give the name (Beau Ideal) of Mr. Pierce's new pink carnation. And, by the way, the blooms, as far as we could see, were as fresh on the last night as they were on the first day, thus proving the value of the variety as a keeper.

Naturally, a few errors and some omissions occurred in our hurried report. In the class for best specimen chrysanthemum plants, any other color, the honors should have been given, first to John Barr, second to Robert Laurie. In class for best specimen palm other than kentia or areca, first place was taken by Robert Laurie, second by Andrew S. Meikle.

In the class for cut blooms of chrysanthemums, 25 blooms distinct named varieties, there were three competitors—John Barr, Robert Laurie and John Ash, of Pomfret Conn., the premiums being awarded in the order named. In addition to those noted last week, special awards were made to D. T. Roy, gardener for Hon. E. S. Converse, of Malden, Mass., for general comprehensive display of chrysanthemum cut blooms, some of the Chinese and anemone varieties being much admired; to John Allan, Caswell Greenhouses, for collection of cut blooms, carnations; to Andrew S. Miekle for specimen plants, dieffenbachias; to Geo. A. Weaver Co. for display of seeds, bulbs, etc. MAC.

Lynn, Mass.

For the past few weeks trade has improved greatly. Faneral work has beea very good. Stock on the whole is looking very well. Carnations are a little soft, on account of the mild weather. Chrysanthemums are moving fairly well; there being more call for the medium size blooms. The days of very large flowers are nearly over in this city.

Smith & Dolanski went heavily into chrysanthemums this year. Sims, of Cliftondale, has a grand house of Mrs. Hayes, a fine pink, as grown by him. It commands the highest price in Boston market. His violets and carnations are also in good shape.

Roland, of Nahant, has still a very large stock of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in excellent shape, in all sizes. His Marie Louise violets are the best the writer has seen for a long time.

Building operations are still going on. Blaney is erecting a large house for bedding stock; he intends to build a rose house next year.

Smith & Dolanski are building a house for violets.

Miller has purchased a 10-acre farm four miles from the city and intends to build and plant a small nursery.

E. A. Richards has changed his location to a more populous part of the city.

Birmingham, Ala.

At the recent exhibition held here Mrs. Ella Smith, 2106 First Avenue, secured the following premiums:

First prize for best collection of 50 chrysanthemums; first, for 20 white; first, for 20 yellow; second, for 10, any color; first, for best and largest collection; first, for best single plant, any color; first, for collection of foliage plants; first, for collection of ferns; first, for general collection of greenhouse plants, first, for collection of begonias; first, for designs, and first for best and most artistically arranged mantelpiece.

Wilmington, N. C.

At the chrysanthemum exhibition, held here November 17, Miss Lucy Moore was awarded premiums for handsomest display of growing plants; also for display of chrysanthemums, grown outdoors. J. H. Small & Sons, Washington, D. C., received a prize for display of cut chrysanthemums; and Mrs. H. Rehder, one for best display of cut flowers. In latter class, L. Williams, of Wilson, was a close second.
