HENRY A. DREER, 714 Chestnut St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The carnation is Hartford's favorite flower as the additional glass devoted to it testifies. John Coombs has erected this summer two houses each, 30x150, devoted exclusively to the divine flower. This is in addition to his usual supply. A visit to his place shows everything in a thrifty condition.

George S. Osborn is giving extra space to his specialty, the carnation; palms, etc., having been dropped. He has a few of the Indianapolis seedling, Mrs. E. A. Nelson, for trial; also a batch of the Columbus. Both these varieties will be reported on by him later.

Violets are looking well with the various growers, but George Goodwin still wears the crown of the violet king; his carnations are also in the pink of condition.

A visit to the old veteran, Mr. Whiting, found him on deck in spite of his 78 years and still looking forward to up-to-date methods.

Downtown stores report a very dull summer.

Joe Coombs is back again in his place, after a siege of typhoid, looking thirty pounds heavier.

James Young has opened a store nearly opposite Coombs'.

Trade is starting up with roses and violets too plenty, carnations short and chrysanthemums hardly in. The prospect is bright for a good supply of everything and prices promise to be higher.

The services of Mr. John Thorpe, a man of National Reputation, have been secured as superintendent. The same class of men who rebuilt Convention Hall, the greatest Hall in the world, in 90 days are back of the enterprise. Mr. R. E. Richardson, who "lit the World's Fair" in Chicago in '93, now a resident of Kansas City, will have charge of the electrical effects, and intends to use 2,500 to 3,500 incandescent lights in harmony with the flower effects. Liberal premiums, guaranteed by the Convention Hall directory, will be offered. Premium lists ready in a few days. No grower, exhibitor or lover of flowers can afford to miss the opportunity to "see" and to "show." The entire affair will be distinctively Japanese, and

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The late frosts have about killed all outdoor stock, so demand is brisk enough for all indoor grown to clean up the supply. Good shipping roses and carnations are short of demand, but the arrival of mums will relieve the demand somewhat. Violets have also made their appearance and are selling well. In mums Fitzwygram and Glory of Pacific predominate, and some yellow have appeared in small lots.

Business in general for October is fully up to previous years, especially shipping trade. Golden Gate roses are quite plentiful and seem to drag in sales somewhat, a great many being substituted on orders when Maids and Brides are scarce. It is not much called for by shipping trade, but perhaps as it gets to be better known the demand will increase.

Bowling.

The Bloomer team, composed mostly of florists, leads all the clubs in the American Ten Pin League, having lost but three games in fifteen played, which is a pretty good start, considering the strength of some of the clubs in the league. Many prizes are hung up and the Bloomers are out for the $100 team prize for first place.

CINCINNATI

Various Items.

The past week we had more flowers in this market than we have had at any other time this season. Roses, especially were in large supply and sold at correspondingly low prices. The best grades were held well to quoted prices, for most of the stock was of second and third grade. As usual, Meteors and Beauties were not in great enough supply to fill all orders, especially for the better grades. It seems strange that with the large number of Beauties that are grown this market has never yet been able to get enough to go around. There is always a brisk demand for them, and when they are of good grade they sell at sight.

Violets have made their appearance and are of very good quality. They are grown in the mountains of Virginia. It seems that the high mountain climate is just what the violets need, for they are grown by the same people year after year with uniform results. The blooms bring from 25 to 50 cents per 100.

Some very good valley is to be had at 4 cents. Cosmos, in very good varieties, is being cut by several growers; price, 25 cents per bunch. Smilax is very scarce; in fact, there is none in the market that can be called good. What there is sells at 15 cents per string.

The earlier varieties of chrysanthemums are coming in and sell at from $1 per dozen to 15 and 20 cents each for extra choice, with supply about equal to the demand. Prospects are good for a large cut this season, and Cincinnati will be strictly in it when it comes to getting first-class blooms.

H. M. Altick, Dayton, O., has a white sport from Glory of Pacific which bids fair to be a good thing. It is identical with Glory of Pacific in growth and form, but is pure white in color.

There was only one variety of chrysanthemum judged by the committee on Saturday. This was a large white named C. Holst, which originated with Mr. C. Holst, of New Orleans, and exhibited by E. G. Hill Company, of Richmond; height, 3 1/2 feet; bloom, 6 1/2 inches; form on order of Merry Xmas; first crown bud taken; bloom cut October 11.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society was held Saturday. The principal business was making up a programme for the coming monthly show. Some good prizes will be offered. The first exhibition will be a chrysanthemum show, which will be held in the society's clubrooms some time in November.

Louis Pfeiffer & Sons have closed their Newport, Ky., place and have opened a store here at Race and Eighth streets.

John Evans and E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., and William Lodder, of Hamilton, Ohio, were visitors this week.

C. J. OHRER.

THE GEORGE WITTBOLD CO., Chicago, have just issued a very handsomely illustrated and finely printed retail catalogue that is worthy of special note. The numerous fine half-tone engravings are printed on enameled book paper, with abundance of margin, giving the effect of a portfolio rather than a catalogue.

Mr. KISCO, N. Y.—No exhibition will be held by the local organization this year, but it is expected that one will be held in 1902.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Dahlia Show.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held a dahlia show September 16 in Mission Opera House, Mission street, San Francisco. The show was a small one but a very good one for a starter. The dahlias, doubles and singles, cactus and pompons, were splendidly staged and made a brilliant display. The constant stream of members and their friends who passed in front of the tables were high in their praise of the prize winning exhibits and declared our dahlia show the finest ever witnessed in San Francisco. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Golden Gate Park, first prize for best collection of dahlias; 30 varieties.

Jos. Thompson, first prize for best ten cactus dahlias; and for best six show dahlias, and for best flower in the exhibition.

Wm. Eldred, first prize for best ten decorative dahlias, and for best seedling dahlias.

Wm. Bagge, first prize for best fancy dahlias, and for best double dahlias.

T. Monroe, first prize for best double dahlias.

Exhibits were also made by Mr. T. Seedman, Santa Cruz; C. B. Alexander, San Francisco, and T. Lee, Del Monte.

After the show was over President H. Plath made a little speech on behalf of our society and its first exhibition.

Mr. Jos. Thompson was called upon for a few words and they came gallantly, in his usual style. Mr. Thompson hoped that flower shows such as our dahlia show would be held frequently and reasonable cash prizes offered. He said that the honor of winning a first prize with a well-grown bloom or plant was more to be proud of than the actual cash.

Mr. John MacLaren, superintendent of Golden Gate Park, was the next speaker. He declared the dahlia exhibits the finest he had ever seen and hoped the next show given by the society would be a chrysanthemum show and that it would be a good one and urged every member to do his best to make it such.

Mr. E. Jaeger spoke a few words, from the retailer's point of view, for the dahlia as a store flower. Mr. Jaeger said: "That if the dahlia had the keeping qualities of the chrysanthemum the mums would not be in it with the dahlia as a cut flower." The many beautiful tints and exquisite formation of the blooms, especially in the cactus varieties, Mr. Jaeger thought, ought to place the dahlia on an equal footing with the rose, carnation and chrysanthemum.

Mr. Bagge was next called upon for a speech but he declared that he left his speech at home. If the few words spoken by Mr. Bagge are a sample of the speech left at home he had better bring that speech with him next meeting night. Mr. Bagge made the speech of the evening and gave the members the pedigree of the dahlia as far back as Solomon's time, if I am not mistaken.

Mr. J. M. Duncan, an amateur, gave us a little talk on window boxes. Mr. Duncan believed that passersby on the street took more notice of his window boxes than they did of his wares and was glad that prizes were to be offered for window gardening in San Francisco. Mr. Duncan also spoke of his success as an amateur in the north of Scotland where he first visited a flower show and on seeing the vegetable exhibit declared he had better vegetables in his "ane kale yard." Why don't you exhibit them, said the managers. Mr. Duncan did exhibit after that and won first prizes for cabbages five years in succession.

Mr. Wm. Eldred showed some seedlings from Roemer's Contriti that were much admired. The colors were in pink, some being beautifully marbled with pink and altogether distinct from the white form of that poppy.

Various Notes.

Mr. T. Stevenson, the London florist, sent one of his messenger boys to an undertaking establishment with a floral design a few days ago. When the little chap arrived at the parlors the undertaker told the boy to take the design to the back part of the building and in going through, the inquisitive little fellow took a peep into a casket containing a corpse. Just at that moment escaping gases from the mouth of the dead man caused peculiar sounds to arise from the casket. The boy dropped the floral design and bolted back to Mr. Stevenson's store—"Say, Mr. Stevenson, that dead man up at the undertaker's is alive!" Upon inquiry Mr. Stevenson found that escaping gases were the cause of the boy's fright.

Mr. James Cleary is home from his trip east. It is an hour well spent to listen to Mr. Cleary's description of his reception by eastern florists. The electrical display at Buffalo he describes as fairlyland; also the bedding done on exposition grounds as something he never dreamed of. Mr. Cleary was well pleased with his trip.

Mr. H. G. MacGowan, Peidmont Nurseries, has his place in fine shape. His rose houses never looked better and very little mildew, if any, can be seen.

Mr. H. Prentice, Washington street, Oakland, is the proud possessor of a beautiful little baby boy, which makes four to date. Howard, you are a good provider.

The California Nursery Co. are hauling large quantities of tule from Niles Lake, which is used in immense quantities to pack nursery stock for shipment.

E. Gill, Oakland, is cutting large quantities of outside roses, Kaiserins, Brides, Liberties, Testouts, Sieberichs and La France. He has 30 acres to cut from. The recent rains brought them out nicely.

Mr. Charles Hasselbacher, Oakland, Cal., died on October 11. Mr. Hasselbacher was one of our largest rose growers and I can well remember some fifteen years ago when he began growing roses the immense profits he made in growing La France, that famous rose, and a great seller in those days, bringing as high as $1 per bloom. Mr. Hasselbacher was a native of Germany and leaves a widow; no children.

A report comes from Honolulu that Mr. Joseph Carbone died at that port early in October. Mr. Carbone was at one time a member of the firm of Carbone & Monti, Kearney street, San Francisco. In later years he has been known as the introducer of the famous California violet, from which he cleared over $30,000. Mr. Carbone leaves a widow and one son. J. N.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Charles M. Nuffer has purchased the greenhouses and property of Thomas J. McBeth. He will remodel them at once and build four new houses in the spring.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—Gallivan Bros. have opened a floral store at 70 Dwight street. The firm is composed of Daniel and Dennis Gallivan, both of whom were for years in the employ of E. D. Shaw.

PRINCETON, ILL.—N. P. Colberg has sold his business to Oscar Lindstrum, who will continue it.

PLEASANT HILL, Mo.—Mr. George M. Kellogg's stock is looking fine and he reports business as very good.

TORONTO.

We have been so eager to demonstrate to their royal highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of York, our almost excessive loyalty that business outside of a few funeral orders and a number of unimportant weddings has been at a standstill. The decorations for the affairs gotten up in honor of our guests exceeded by far anything ever before attempted here. Tidy and Dunlop secured the best of the orders.

Roses have been plentiful the past week. Carnations and violets are still scarce.

H. Dale, of Brampton, is sending in some splendid stock at present, notably his Lily of the Valley, which is as fine as ever shown here at this time of the year, and his Morgans and Beauties are exceptionally good.

Mums are scarce, and it looks as if the general crop were going to be late with us this year. Butterworth, though, has some splendid stock well on the road to market.

Asparagus, ferns and smilax are scarce and in good demand.

Sinclair, our new commission merchant, reports good trade, with stock scarce. His stock of supplies has just arrived. C. W.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Lorenzo Snow, fifth president of the Mormon church, died Thursday, the 10th inst. Funeral services were held in the Tabernacle Sunday. The floral offerings were numerous and many beautiful pieces were among them. The Huddart Floral Company, R. E. Evans and Morris Floral Company furnished most of the designs.

The Salt Lake Floral Company has commenced cutting carnations and roses. A house (20x260) of mums grown to single stems is promising a fine cut in the near future; in fact, their place throughout presents a fine appearance for the time it has been in operation. They have just completed a propagating house 8x50. They expect to open their retail store on Main street about November 1. J. H. M.

VANCOUVER, B. C.

Mr. James Pont, of the Vancouver Floral Co. has returned from a visit to his old home in England. He took in New York and the Pan-American on his way back, and looks ten years younger as the result of his trip. His good wife accompanied him.

The well-known firm of Walker & Robinson, of the Georgia street greenhouses, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Walker remaining in business at the old stand, while Mr. Robinson has started a new set of greenhouses at Cedar Cottage.

Your humble servant is busy building another greenhouse and getting ready for another trade. M. J. HENRY.

NEW YORK EXHIBITION.

Mr. John Young offers a silver cup, value $25, for the best display of the carnation, Governor Roosevelt, to be competed for Thursday, October 24, at Madison Square Garden, at the exhibition which will then be in progress, under the management of the New York Florists' Club. JAMES W. WITHERS, Secretary Exhibition Committee.

The Florists' Manual

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Exhibitions.

We are on the eve of all the annual flower shows throughout the country and there is much calculation and anticipation in the minds of many florists. A public demonstration of ability is actually a necessity. To win and keep trade the florist must at all times show, and show his very best, and we wonder why it is that that spirit doesn't more generally crystallize at the annual flower shows where the necessity seems so much greater.

The majority of retailers will go to expense in making up special designs for their windows and often these designs cost more and are prettier than those seen at exhibitions. In this light they cannot be accused of impecuniosity. What, then, is the cause of the seeming indifference toward flower shows? Is there a general understanding that art is not understood by the average judge appointed to dispense honors at these annual events, and that the average retailer prefers to keep out rather than be made a victim? Well, if it be so the remedy is in the retailers' own hands; they are sufficiently strong in any city to dictate the policy and workings of any floricultural club, and their failure to do so is rather a reflection upon their branch of the trade.

It is to the matter of non-competitive exhibits that we would draw special attention. There are so many beautiful things not mentioned in schedules, whereby every retailer can win more than mere cash or cup for a prize. There are designs in plants for instance. With a little timber, cork-bark, green sheet moss and some plants we can make a grotto, or arch, or arbor, or cosy den effect that will attract more attention than all your formal benches put together. Or get a mantel or mirror, and what cannot be done with mirrors? Put one on the floor for water effect and others standing to lend distance. The people look for ideas at a show and it costs less than you imagine to enchant them. It's easy to make a miniature lake. Get a large mirror, lay it flat on the floor, get some sand and pebbles and a piece or two of rock, make an imaginary shore at one end, and fringe all around with Lycopodium denticulata; you can finish off with taller plants, making vistas and attractive little nooks here and there with or without other mirrors. In many cases water can be used instead of a mirror, and it can be made to trickle over and down rocks. Other places there are where electricity can be utilized in many ways.

In the matter of table decorations we have before us now several letters asking for advice as to what to use at different shows, and in all cases we advise a strict adherence to the language of the schedule. Language and intent in many schedules are indeed illogical paradoxes. Quality of course adds value to any design, but there is too much weight given to quality in the case of table decorations. Where a grower happens to be judge he will invariably give the award to size of flower, ignoring the form or finish of your work. In the case of any flower outside chrysanthemums, the finer the better, but especially for small tables, medium sized chrysanthemums are preferable. Harry Balsley or Helen Bloodgood for pink, Bonnafon for yellow, are very good types to work with. The fol-left clear for dishes and service. Don't make your decorations oppressively heavy nor formal; have your flowers arranged unevenly, yet even in outline. No flower should touch the other, and each should be so placed as to show its best from the side. Huge corsage bouquets tied with ribbon are no longer used; just a fine flower for each guest; if it be a chrysanthemum the dense foliage is taken off and a spray of Farleyense is substituted; better to have the gentlemen's flowers pompons.

In the uptodate table decoration the same variety of flower is used for all the guests. Ribbons are no longer used in first class table work unless where velvet is used on the flowers to be worn. The service or dishes count for overmuch at most shows and the rich florist gets a chance to show the power of wealth. Of course a fully finished table is a orage of Acer atropurpureum sanguineum will go best with white flowers and A. atropurpureum dissectum best with yellow. Ferns, such as Adiantum Farleyense will go with any color, but autumn foliage does not go well with reds or pinks.

Always select a round or oval table and everything on it should harmonize. The rule to rigidly observe is that from eighteen inches to two feet should be nice thing, but not all florists can afford to put one up. There should be a class for all where flowers and design alone are considered. The use of flat baskets permits of a more studied or formal style of decoration and it is usually the easiest form to arrange; finer work can often be done by using a large low bowl.

A very important point is to arrange your flowers so they will not obstruct the view. It's the finish that counts for much all the time. It isn't necessary to overcrowd a table to make it look rich; an overcrowded table is vulgar; richness depends on material and form that require delicacy of touch to display them properly.

Chrysanthemums can be used to good advantage in wedding decorations and you can easily arrange an arbor with a few plants and two large vases of these flowers. Often the simplest material can be put to splendid use. At the recent wedding of young Rockefeller, who is considered the richest young man in the world, a large building was specially erected for the occasion; the interior was draped with white cheese cloth and upon this were garlands of wild smilax, the canopy was in the shape of a sea shell and was made of green sheet moss, there was a wealth of flowers used in the room, but the best work was done where brains were used in arranging even commonplace stock, such as wild smilax and green moss, and this will apply to your work at exhibitions. Get in line and show what you can do, whether there is a class for it or not; public appreciation and self satisfaction are worth catering to. IVERA.

ORCHID CORSAGE BOUQUETS.

The two examples of orchid corsage bouquets shown this week were specially made for this department last spring. The larger one is composed of two spikes of Cattleya speciosissima. It shows about the choicest corsage bouquet that can be made.

This size is intended to illustrate what is the proper thing where expense is not considered—at dinner or theater parties. No greens are used, simply cattleyas, with colored velvet ribbon twisted around the stems and tied in a short bow. Greens would destroy the beauty of these flowers and would make them look cabbage when worn. Then again, dresses usually worn at formal dinners or at the opera are so delicate in color or texture that greens both injure the dress and destroy the whole effect. These flowers are Flora's diamonds, and must be so considered and worn.

The smaller bouquet is one spray of Cattleya Trianae, and is intended to show what can be offered and worn at any time or occasion. The baby ribbon used is the exact color of the petals; it is just a little too long in the streamers. This size bouquet looks very pretty when worn as a shoulder spray. It is more generally used to extend the frontage of décolleté dresses, but it can be worn on the street. Where specially choice flowers are wanted, or the dresses are of an expensive kind, florists should recommend cattleyas; they will be very stylish this winter, and it is hoped the growers will assist in keeping the flower popular by putting a steady and reasonable price on them.

The flowers in the illustrations were grown by Arthur Herrington, Madison, N. J., and were kindly loaned to us for this purpose by Thomas Young, Jr., who wholesales them. The photographs scarcely do the flowers justice, as they were some of the finest seen here. IVERA.

ROSES.

Style of House.

The best style of a house in which to grow roses has been a much debated question which is apparently still unsettled, some growers preferring long-span-to-the-north; some long-span-to-the-south, and there are others who claim an equal-span to be best.

The object desired by a grower being a maximum of sunshine with a minimum of shade seems to be easiest obtained with a three-quarter-span, long-span-to-the-south. This is the style adopted by the majority of growers who want winter blooms. For summer roses an equal-span house running north and south answers the purpose better, the sun being on the end of the house during the hottest part of the day, the sash bars afford quite a bit of shade to bud and leaf, giving them more time to develop. Winter crops in such houses, while of excellent quality, are slower and more irregular than in houses with a southern exposure. A good, up-to-date grower will soon adapt himself to the conditions and produce good roses from any of the existing styles of modern houses.

Benching.

The most common style of bench used is table-bench, which can be of any width to suit the requirements of the house, with side boards 5 inches deep and board bottoms. The boards for bottoming should be 5 or 6 inches wide and a space of one inch left between each board for drainage. This is the easiest and quickest to build and taking first cost into consideration, the cheapest. The one great drawback in this kind of a bench being the everlasting repairs it entails, which needs to be done at the season when there is least time to attend to it.

Tile-bottomed benches do away in a great measure with repairing. In the construction of a bench of this kind there is little difference from the other; simply substituting tile or half-tile for boards and filling in between the shoulders of the tiles with coarse gravel; this, after being covered with sod or litter to keep the soil from running, makes the most perfect drainage that I know of. We have been using such a bench for the last four years and while the initial cost runs considerably higher, the repairs, up till now, have amounted to absolutely nothing. The stock is more vigorous and the cut much better than on benches with board bottoms in the same house.

Soils.

Good stock can be successfully raised on many kinds of soil from black muck to that yellow, fibry loam so much sought after. To get soil in good condition for planting it should be collected some time previous to using. The top spit to a depth of 6 inches from well-sodded pasture land, put in a neat pile with one-fifth well-rotted stable manure added and allowed to stand for two weeks before being chopped and then turned over in another week and the manure thoroughly incorporated with it will make it ready to put on the bench.

This work can be done in the fall or early in the spring; the soil collected in the spring is less liable to grow green scum on the surface than that which has been in the pile all winter. RIBES.

BEDS OR BENCHES.

Which is better for two-year-old dormant roses, beds or benches? Should they be cut back when planted or after they commence to break? The roses to be planted are Beauties and Kaiserins, own roots. M.

American Beauties will succeed best if planted on a table bench. If planted in solid beds they are apt to run to wood, and having no control of the roots it would be a hard matter to get them to bud during the winter.

Dormant stock should be planted without being pruned; the pruning to be done after the eyes have started. If the tops are too heavy they can be reduced but not too near the eyes you wish to break. Give one good watering after planting, then allow the bench to become medium dry; syringe every bright day, and keep the temperature at 50 degrees till the eyes break; after that give water more freely and gradually raise the temperature till 58 degrees is reached.

It is now either too late or too early to do much with dormant Kaiserins. The stock can easily be kept dormant till after the middle of January, when they can be planted in solid benches and treated in the way recommended for Beauties. If planted and started now the growth will be weak as at its best it is but a poor winter grower, but when started early in spring it makes one of the best early summer roses and continues to bloom till late in the fall. RIBES.

CARNATION NOTES.

Firing.

The season is here now when fire will be needed almost regularly and great care and judgment is required from the man who runs the place through the nights. During October and early November there is perhaps more danger of ruining the season's prospects than there is at any other time after the plants are housed. It takes careful watching both day and night now so that there is fire when it is needed, and no artificial heat when it is not needed. One night is liable to be warm enough to keep the ventilators up a foot or more and the next night is likely to see the mercury hovering around the freezing point, so you must be ready to fire up at any time and when it is warm enough you should have the ventilators up. Carnations like a fresh bracing atmosphere above all things, but if the wind is high and raw you must keep the ventilators low enough to prevent cold draughts from striking the plants.

Watering.

You are most likely to be cutting some blooms by this time and the temperature should be kept as regular as possible to keep the calyxes from splitting. If there are no signs of red spider we syringe less frequently after about the middle of October, once or twice each week is enough if it is done with good force and whenever possible syringe the plants from both sides and only do it on bright days. Water is also given more sparingly at the roots, especially to those varieties which are subject to bacteria. You want to work toward keeping the grass of such varieties firm at all times and right at this time is when the damage is most often done. If you notice the soil getting too wet dust the plants and the soil with lime.

Small Corsage Bouquet of Orchids.

Disbudding.

If you have all the supports in place and the benches clear of weeds and other litter you have the greatest part of your work done and from now on it takes brain rather than muscle to insure success. Keeping the plants within their allotted spaces and keeping the flower stems disbudded should be looked after right along and don't wait until the plants lay all around the bench before you put them into place and don't wait until the main bud is about ready to open before you do the disbudding, but go over them every few days and the faster they grow the oftener you must go over them. Disbudding should be done as soon as the buds are large enough to handle without injuring the main bud or the stem.

Propagating.

You can save all the good strong cuttings of such varieties as F. Hill, E. Crocker, Wm. Scott, G. H. Crane, and perhaps a few other varieties, and put them in sand. They will make fine stock for blooming next summer if planted out of 3-inch pots in the spring and pinched several times during the winter. But keep only strong cuttings and throw out all those thin small ones from near the top of the stem.

If you have any plants left in the field which were too small to plant in the benches they can be potted now into 4-inch and wintered in a cold-frame and planted out again in the spring when they will begin flowering earlier than cuttings which were struck during the winter. A. F. J. BAUR.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Once more the season of the fall queen is well under way; and while the poet is sadly talking about "The melancholy days, the saddest of the year," and so on, the mum grower is making his pilgrimage of love to his brother growers, to see what is new and what the harvest will be.

The days are not "melancholy days" for him. He finds too much to interest him comparing the new varieties with the old and watching the fruition of his labors and hopes and fears of the past few months. The "melancholy days" come later when he makes elaborate preparations to beat everybody at his local show and the other fellows get in just a little ahead of him and scoop all the prizes.

How many men I wonder can view with equanimity their pets being ruthlessly turned down! Is it to be wondered at that the judges' decisions are questioned sometimes? I wonder sometimes they don't get mobbed. I never heard of a judge getting hung; but any hotel proprietor in the immediate viciniity of the exhibition hall will testify to the fact that the rank and file often make frantic efforts to drown the judges' decision, if not the judge himself. And a florist never takes water—his life is too strenuous for that.

I should like to see a chrysanthemum exhibition in every town throughout this broad land. The mum is a cheap flower, it is the flower of the people; even the poorest can raise a few in their back yard, if they can raise nothing else.

The mum is a great educator. If you can get people interested in an easily grown flower it will not be long before they are wanting to grow other kinds and the possibilities of extending the florists' business in this direction are boundless.

Therefore I say let every town get up a flower show, no matter how small the town or the show. "Great oaks from little acorns grow." I know that the standard of quality of cut flowers has been raised immensely in my own town since the yearly exhibition has been held.

Competition is the life of trade. Competition also means effort and continued effort always means progress. The florist is almost the only tradesman that is content to hide his light under a bushel. In any other business the manufacturer is always trying to bring his wares before the public. He will spend enormous sums in advertising and rarely makes a mistake in so doing. Many a florist when he is asked to help out an exhibition will tell you that it wont pay him. Yet what better advertising could he get?

While it is a sorrowful fact that exhibitions rarely show a balance on the right side of the ledger it does not follow that conditions will be always thus.

The only trouble with us at the present time is that as Mr. Dooley remarks, "We ar-re a great people. We ar-re that. An' the best iv it is we know we ar-re."

When we are willing to take pattern from older countries in some things we may even yet see a crowded flower show. But it will never be until the common people become flower lovers and flower growers.

Flowers intended for exhibition should be very carefully packed if they have to travel any distance, as they bruise easily, particularly the whites. If the heads are protected with tissue paper to keep them from rubbing against one another and are then tied to slats nailed across inside the box they will travel a long distance without injury.

It is a poor policy to pack the flowers one row above another in a box without any means of keeping the top layers from bearing down on and crushing every semblance of shape out of the lower tier. A double layer is all that should ever be placed in a box unless the slat method is followed.

A point that should always be observed in shipping the flowers in a cut state is to see that they stand from twelve to twenty-four hours in water before being packed. They will then fill up the stems with water and will arrive at their destination in a perfectly fresh condition.

We shall endeavor to compare some of the new varieties with the old, as they have behaved with us this year, but we will leave it until the season is at its height. Some of them have done splendidly while others I am afraid will not live up to the promise of their youth.

BRIAN BOU.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Hardy Plants.

From now till freezing up time is the best season for transplanting nearly all the best hardy perennials. I know of no important exception except the pyrethrum, which should have been propagated in May or June and planted out in September. Mr. Charlton, of Rochester, N. Y., and there are few better authorities than he on herbaceous plants, as well as being an all round gardener, remarks that the tenuifolia type of paeonias should always be transplanted in the fall.

Although most of our hardy perennials are very hardy a protection of some litter or leaves will well repay the labor. Remember that you do not divide or transplant every year and with some not oftener than in five or six years, therefore the soil cannot be dug too deeply or too well enriched. Most of us have more time for the next two or three weeks than we have in the spring, so make use of it now and although few act entirely up to the old axiom, it is still good advice to never put off till tomorrow what can be done today.

Wintering Bulbs and Tubers.

When you lift your dahlia roots cut off the tops seven or eight inches above the ground, shake the soil off the tubers and store in some cool dry place. Beneath a bench in a cool house will do, but put them on boards and avoid drip. On shelves in a root-house is the very best place but we don't all have root-houses.

Medialous corms keep very well in any shed where it is above freezing. I am sure I have seen gladiolus bulbs frozen in the ground and being undisturbed come round all right, but when out of the ground they want no frost.

We used to think it scarcely worth while to keep over the Caladium esculentum bulbs. They are certainly very cheap, but as we lose none now we think it worth while to dig them up, cut off the tops and lay them on boards beneath a rose or carnation bench. Treated in this way you will lose none.

Bananas are now largely grown for tropical beds. It is the Abyssinian species (Musa ensete) that is most suitable. You can not winter them in a growing state. They would take up more room than they are worth. They get covered with thrip and red spider unless constantly syringed, and even if you did produce fine leaves during winter they would be blown to pieces when first put out. Trim off the leaves and some of the roots and store away in some shed with their roots covered with soil and only enough moisture to keep them alive.

Araucarias.

You will be getting in some plants of Araucaria excelsa about now. They don't want a warm, moist house unless you want them to make a quick, soft growth, which is not at all desirable. After a week or two of careful treatment, avoiding draughts and with an occasional syringing, they will do well in a light house, medium temperature and plenty of fresh air. They are most assuredly a good plant for the dwelling house with anything like decent care.

Boston Ferns.

If you planted out a lot of young Boston ferns in June to make plants for winter sales you should now get them established in pots. The best plants are grown entirely in pots but planting them out is a quick way to get a plant. Give them the fullest light after they are established in pots; they want no shade.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The white and yellow Fitzwygram, being one of the earliest varieties grown, we commenced cutting from the bench the 1st of October and they were all gone by the 15th. We then reserve our stock plants, both for making our own stock for another year and such as we would wish to sell, from the best and healthiest plants as well as those that produced the most perfect flowers. And in that way we think we keep our grade of flowers better than in keeping "any kind" of stock plants.

Lady Harriett and Primo have all been cut and sold by the 20th. Bergmann being planted on the bench come earlier, I think, than those in pots, grown in the same house, so that the Bergmann in the bench have been cut, while those in 6 and 7 inch pots, grown mostly to cut them on a plant, expecting to cut them, have not all matured yet. They will last a week or ten days. The Glory Pacific are in full sway, there being quantities of them at this season of the year and will be until the 1st or 15th of November; then there will be less.

Glory Pacific to be grown at its best, I think, needs a north and south house where it does not get the direct rays of the sun, and being grown cool, develops the flower much more perfect and a good clear pink in color. And they can be grown with three to four flowers to a plant as well as one to a plant; as the foliage is so heavy they require more space on the bench between the rows than the other early varieties. We are able to wholesale the best Pacifics at from $1.50 to $2.00 per dozen, while the smaller ones go at $6, $8 and $10 per hundred.

Robinson will be ready to cut by the first of November, from present indications. We think this a good mid-season white. But they are only at their best and most profitable we think, by growing one to two flowers on a plant. In fact I prefer two, as with only one on a plant the neck grows too long and the plant too heavy, while with two to a plant the strength is divided between the two blooms so they are not so large nor the stems so long and they develop sooner. They are developing fast and are about the size of a saucer.

Mrs. E. D. Smith has promise of being a fine deep, rich yellow. The foliage is everything that could be desired. A beautiful cut leaf, foliage well up to the flower, and stems from half to three-quarters of an inch thick, and from three to four feet long. They will be ready to cut in time for the flower shows, as the blossom is about six inches across now. M. S. Vesey.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is becoming active. October weddings have been numerous to the extent of making Bride roses almost scarce at times. The supply has slightly decreased, thanks to cooler weather, and most varieties of flowers show far less waste than a week ago. Shipping orders consume many of our choicest flowers; this city is fast becoming a great center of distribution for cut flowers, which are sent from the New England states to Florida and far west of the Ohio, in satisfactory condition.

Beauties, for which this city is famous, sell well at from 75c to $3 a dozen, a few selected $3.50 a dozen. Tea roses are moving better than at any time this fall; $3 to $5 a hundred is the price. Carnations are coming in more freely but there are not enough good ones in the market. White is especially scarce. The buyers complain that in many cases the stems are cut too short; $1.50 to $2 a hundred is the ruling figure for select stock. Violets are improving and sell well. S. S. Pennock sent some fine doubles to New Haven for the Yale Bi-centennial this week. They bring 50 to 75c a hundred, singles 15 to 25c a hundred. Valley, what about valley? Why, this city will soon become famous for its valley as it now is for its Beauties.

A. J. Pennock has fairly earned the title of the Valley King, he is sending his brother the finest sprays of this flower ever seen here; great long stems, bearing a profusion of large perfect flowers with deep green foliage, that has made at least one of the New York valley specialists marvel. The price for this special stock is $5 a hundred as they run, with the selected held at $6. Asparagus is moving well at 35 to 50 cents a bunch. Smyth ditto at 12 to 15 cents a bunch. Chrysanthemums are only selling fairly well; the price has fallen, $1.50 will buy pretty nearly the best dozen offered.

Caspar and Geo. L. Pennock are sending in some Golden Gate to their brother that readily bring 8c. The roses are superb with thick stems and luxuriant foliage.

Cosmos is good and plentiful. Dahlias are becoming poor.

Notes.

Leo Niessen put a fine new wagon on the street last week. His name is in small letters on the side, the idea being that the retail florists prefer an inconspicuous looking vehicle in front of their stores; not one whose splendor might out rival their own.

Geo. M. Moss received his first shipment of valley this week.

house makes a pleasing impression with its effects in green and white. Business is improving here.

Charles Mecky, 17th and Erie avenue, has turned nearly his entire place into chrysanthemums. A conservative guess would credit him with from 15,000 to 20,000 pots of this queen of autumn. The plants are in sixes and eights, limited to from half a dozen to a dozen flowers each. All are clean and vigorous. The varieties grown are White, Mme. Bergman, Ivory and L. Canning, a fine pot sort. Pink, Glory of the Pacific, Pink Ivory and Maud Dean, Yellow, a sort called Jones, Major Bonaffon and W. H. Lincoln. One bench is devoted to plants for cutting. Mrs. Henry Robinson (white) and Philadelphia (lemon yellow) are the varieties. No reds or fancy colors are grown.

A bench of Kaiserin planted out for stock are growing freely. Stevia serrata, azaleas, and poinsettias are being brought forward for Christmas. The place is well worth a visit. The flowers are of excellent quality and are expected to be as good or better throughout the season.

E. R. Robins, for over fifteen years in charge of the landscape gardener's office at Horticultural Hall in Fairmount Park, is dead. A worthy man who will be missed.

John and W. H. Westcott have two houses of rubbers that have proved excellent stock.

Edwin Lonsdale has shipped many of his best crotons to New York.

Wm. J. Baker has been receiving some fine Glory of the Pacific.

Charles E. Mechan is confined to his home by illness.

Though informed of the fact at the time the announcement of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kift on Oct. 7 was inadvertently omitted from this column.

Flowers and Glass.

I don't know that there have been many social events calling for a lavish display of flowers, but flowers for sadder occasions have been in great demand. Some real good roses are now to be had, Bridesmaids and Brides and Beauty being 90 per cent of all sold. I don't remember that American Beauty was ever in better demand. Golden Gate we hear little talked about. I think if our customers saw more of it there would be a great demand. From the quantity grown in the east, particularly round Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, there must be a good demand somewhere.

We have had rather an extra fine lot of cattleya blooms and they have not gone to waste, yet outside of good design work there is not yet a demand for them and 99 out of every 100 flower buyers see more beauty in a rose. There has never in previous years been such fine carnations at this season. How strange it would be not to have Lawson, Crocker, Prosperity and Morning Glory just now. I mention these varieties because whatever their merits later they are now giving us grand flowers and Mrs. Lawson is the king, queen and czar of them all.

Chrysanthemums are selling almost as fast as they are fit to cut, and at quite as good prices as last year. Speaking about prices should we not get at least 25 per cent more for all our flowers and plants than we did two years ago? Labor has been high; hard coal with us is $5.50 per ton and hard coke $4.50. And how about glass? Ordinary double thick such as greenhouse men use is $6.00 per box for 16x24. It is almost impossible for anyone but a capitalist to build just now and demand for greenhouse products will soon overreach the supply. I would like to see the glass trust put it up to $17.50 a box and that might convert one or two of our hard shell protectionists that trust made articles that can and are sold in foreign markets at much less than in our domestic markets, need little protection. Then there is the man who says: "Keep up the price of glass and that will stop building and we will get better prices." That's too barbarous a proposition to need comment. Glass can be made and sold at $3.00 per box with a good profit for all and the other $3.00 is robbery which breeds honest indignation and worse.

I received from the Pittsburg and Allegheny Gardeners' and Florists' Club a copy of the resolution they were so kind as to pass on my efforts in the horticultural department of the Pan-American. As it was an entire surprise to me it was all the more appreciated. I have thanked them most sincerely. Such words and actions as theirs will always make me look back at my work here with the greatest pleasure and I hope, pardonable pride, and any worry or friction (and there was only a little) is already forgotten, and I am happy and grateful to the florists of the country one and all.

Pan-American.

Hard frosts have at last taken the color from our grounds, and cannas, geraniums, salvias and other gay flowers are now but a memory. Yet we are not looking shabby. The gladiolus, tritoma, anemone, phlox and a few other perennials are still holding up against the coming winter and these beautiful autumn days, the pleasantest of all the year, is yet a good time to visit the dying exposition. I am thankful to you and the other floricultural papers for publishing in full the premium list of the chrysanthemum show, which opens next Monday, the 28th.

Mr. Burt, of Taunton, Mass., has made another grand display of cactus and show dahlias. This is the fourth trip Mr. Burt has made with his wonderful flowers and we sincerely hope it has paid him to do so. Mr. W. P. Peacock, of Atco, N. J., also sent another fine lot, embracing all classes. The Henry A. Dreer firm has kept their booth very gay for weeks past with a fine collection of hardy perennials, and the display of James' Vicks' Sons has been very attractive the entire summer with wares of their specialties, gladiolus, asters, dahlias, lilies and many herbaceous plants.

The display of fruit has been for some weeks past not only great in quantity but marvelous in quality. Apples from Wisconsin and Michigan are wonderful to look at. Nova Scotia is showing a splendid lot of apples and it carries us back to schoolboy days to see Ribston Pippin and Blenheim orange again. Of all the wonderful fruit for size and color the state of Washington takes the bun. But there are other states making magnificent displays. Nebraska, under the care of that most estimable man, J. H. Haddonson, has been a thing of beauty for months. New York state has tons of native grapes. A very attractive exhibit is a fine lot of exotic grapes grown by D. M. Dunning, of Auburn, N. Y., and most attractively arranged by Julius Heinrich, the representative of Peter Henderson & Co. Mr. Heinrich has a genius for this sort of thing and seems in his glory when getting up something original.

Some people who have been working for the exposition for the past two years will let out a sigh of relief when the last canna root is shipped to its owner. Yet it is sad to think that in two weeks this beautiful spot will be pandemonium let loose. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The recent warm sunny days and cool nights have resulted in very considerably increasing the supply of roses and the quality has improved, too. All other stock is being received in large quantities, the only item that is not in sufficient supply to more than meet all demands being white carnations, and there is no important scarcity in these.

In roses excellent stock can now be had for $4 and only a very few extra select bring as high as $5. Ordinaries go at $2 to $3 and job lots of poor grades are cleaned up at about the buyers' own figures. Shipping trade holds up very well but local demand is decidedly light for the season.

On carnations $1.50 is practically the top price now, only a very few specials reaching as high as $2 and the great mass of poor stock being jobbed off at very low figures. Chrysanthemums of the best grades are moving very well but small stock and poorly colored Pacifics do not sell. Some very extra Robinsons have brought as high as $4 a dozen but they were phenomenally good. Really good mums can be had at $2 to $2.50, with first class ones at $3, and many are sold at $1 to $1.50.

There is an abundance of good stock of all kinds in the market now and buyers should be in luck.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening the annual election of officers resulted as follows: E. F.

Winterson, president; John Reardon, vice president; Geo. W. Wienhoeber, recording secretary; C. J. Reardon, financial secretary; Edgar Sanders, treasurer. Trustees: Geo. Woodward, Jos. Reeve, G. L. Grant, F. F. Bentley, W. N. Campbell. Treasurer Sanders' annual report showed a balance of $182.78 on hand.

The sum of $50 was appropriated for a special premium at the coming exhibition. Reporting regarding the exhibition Mr. Kudd said the arrangements for tickets for club members were more satisfactory than last year. The president was appointed a committee of one on transportation for the year. The new officers were constituted a committee to arrange for the annual banquet to be held flower show week. Arthur O'Brien and C. J. Reardon were elected to membership.

Mr. Sanders said he had left his sporting paper at home but endeavored to give the substance of it. He urged the necessity of members getting their wives and sweethearts interested in the entertainment features and suggested a ball as a start in this direction.

Mr. John Thorpe was present and told of the preparations for the big exhibition in Kansas City. Among other big premiums he mentioned one of $500 for the best seedling chrysanthemum. The cordial good wishes of the club were extended by vote. Messrs. Risch, Campbell and Hauswirth were appointed a special finance committee to audit the treasurer's report. W. L. Rock, Kansas City, was present as a visitor.

After the meeting the entire assemblage adjourned to a neighboring restaurant on the invitation of President-elect Winterson and things happened for an hour or so. A feature of this session were the songs by Charley Balluff assisted by the chorus.

The next meeting will be held Friday evening, Nov. 1.

The Annual Exhibition.

Arrangements are practically completed for the annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society, to be held at the Auditorium, Nov. 5 to 9. The revised premium list is about complete and copies may be had by addressing Edwin A. Kanst, assistant secretary, 5700 Cottage Grove avenue.

Among the new features this year will be an additional competition in table decorations, the prizes for which will be contributed by the lady judges, with Mrs. J. J. Glessner as chairman. Their idea is to encourage florists to produce and customers to buy inexpensive decorations and to place especial importance upon skill and taste in arrangement. These prizes are as follows:

On Wednesday—For table decorations in flowers that the exhibitor would furnish to any customer for a price not exceeding $12. 1st prize, $20; 2d prize, $10; 3d prize, $5.

On Thursday—For table decorations under same conditions, the price not to exceed $10. 1st prize, $20; 2d prize, $10; 3d prize, $5.

On Friday—For table decorations under same conditions, the price not to exceed $8. 1st prize, $25; 2d prize, $10; 3d prize, $5.

On Saturday—For table decorations under same conditions, the price not to exceed $5. 1st prize, $25; 2d prize, $10; 3d prize, $5.

EDGAR F. WINTERSON.

We present in this issue an excellent portrait of Mr. Edgar F. Winterson, President-elect of the Chicago Florists' Club. "Ed" Winterson has a host of friends in the trade and all will be pleased to know that he has been honored by the Chicago florists with the chief office in the local club.

Mr. Winterson was born in Bristol, England, June 21, 1869, but his parents came to America when he was only a year old, and his recollections of his

E. F. Winterson, President-elect Chicago Florists' Club.

English birthplace are somewhat obscure. His parents settled in Chicago and the subject of this sketch attended the public schools until he was 11 years of age when he had his first experience in floriculture at the private place of Dr. W. Clarke, on the west side. At the age of 13 years he entered the employ of T. J. Corbrey, then in the retail business, and when the latter started in the wholesale line at the old Cut Flower Exchange Mr. Winterson was transferred to the wholesale trade, and in it seems to have found his best hold. After leaving Mr. Corbrey he was with E. H. Hunt for a year and then in 1895 he and Charles McKellar started the business now carried on by the firm of McKellar & Winterson. He is married and has two children.

Mr. Winterson is always enthusiastic in any movement looking to the advancement of the general good and is a worker, and his administration as president of the Florists' Club will undoubtedly be a live and progressive one.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade continues fair with white flowers of all kinds in good demand. Chrysanthemums are beginning to come in freely but are mostly Glory of Pacific and Bergmann; fancy varieties are as yet scarce but will soon be as plentiful as the common sorts. The retailers are all carrying a good stock of these flowers but the demand is slow.

In roses the demand for Beauties is steadily increasing. First grades have advanced to $2.50 and $3, and from that down to $6 per 100 for shorts. The smaller varieties are beginning to feel the increasing supply of chrysanthemums, still prices are about the same as last week's quotations. There are plenty of Maids, Brides, Meteors, Gates and Perles coming in and they are selling at about $10 per 1,000 for fair stock; good firsts bring from $3 to $5 per 100. A few Greeks from Chicago are in town and are buying up all the surplus stock in 1,000 lots.

Carnations are in good steady demand (none to be bought up by Greeks in 1,000 lots) and anything good brings $2, but the bulk of the stock is sold at $1 per 100. Violets are coming better each day and with good color but rather short stems; 20 and 25 cents per 100 is the price. Cosmos is now very fine with good long stems at 50 cents per 100. Some very fine valley brought $3 and $4 the past week; demand fair. Outdoor stuff is now over, several frosts having killed everything.

The wholesalers say that the shipping trade has started off satisfactorily and quite a large number of shipments have been made the past week.

Chrysanthemum Show.

The chrysanthemum show next month promises to be a good one. Quite a number of special prizes came in this week from society people. The programme is now in the hands of the printer and the committee expects by the end of the week to send them out among the growers. Chairman Meinhardt and the rest of the committee expect to make some money this year as the show will be larger than last year and the location better. Prof. Rantenberg's band has been engaged to furnish music for the occasion.

Notes.

Mrs. Sarah Young, mother of John, James, Harry, William and Charles Young, Mrs. Wm. Ellison and Mrs. Henry J. Helwig, died last Saturday at 7 a. m. The funeral took place Monday at 2 p. m. at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Ellison, 5423 Vernon avenue. Many floral designs were sent by friends in the trade and nearly all the florists went to the house to pay their last respects, and to extend their sympathy.

John M. Hudson, once prominent in florist circles in St. Louis and Philadelphia, is now proprietor of the Livertome Water Co., 18th and Olive streets.

Mr. J. E. Windt, the Bayard avenue florist, will this year have some extra fine chrysanthemum plants. The cut flower business is also on the increase and he expects to have a prosperous season.

Oscar Heile, South Broadway, reports that the cut flower business is very good with him, especially in funeral work. Oscar and his famous dog "Lump" can be seen at the wholesale houses every morning.

Charlie Juengel, South 14th street, has just finished building a fine residence on his place. From the looks of things about the place, Charlie will do a good business this season.

Bowling.

The florists bowled three games Monday night with the great World's Fair team, which is captained by the world-famed Martin Kern, and won all three. This gives the boys 11 games won and only one lost, which gives them a strong hold for first place. Quite a number of florists were on hand to see us bowl. Beneke was high man with an average of 193 2-3, Ellis coming in second. The scores were:

Trade Conditions.

We are in statu quo—wherever that may be! Roses, pinks, violets, in fact everything but chrysanthemums and candytuft have been trying to shorten up a bit, but the two exceptions more than overcame the threatened dearth of flowers so that prices are lower upon everything now than ever before at a corresponding date. Early varieties of the "Queen of Autumn" are excellent in quality but $1 per dozen is the limit upon them and $2 per 100 is sometimes accepted upon small sizes. Pinks rarely get above the two-cent notch and ordinary roses more rarely reach ten cents. A few choice three-foot Beauties are bringing $3.50 per dozen, and smaller sizes of all kinds of red roses are very plentiful.

Well, what is the news, anyway?
J. S. MANIER.

NEW YORK.

The Exhibition.

The great Madison Square Garden flower show held under the auspices of the New York Florists' Club, was opened to the public at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon. There was some misunderstanding between exhibitors and the management as to the time of opening the exhibition. The schedule called for all to be finished by 6 p. m., consequently there was some confusion when the doors were opened. However the boys soon got their material in shape and from one or two points it is the best show we have had here in years. There are more orchids on exhibition than have ever been seen before at an American show; the variety is somewhat limited, but the quality of bloom is great, and they are well arranged. Then again this show excels all others in the size and quality of palms. There is a scarcity of flowering plants and cut flowers such as chrysanthemums, roses, etc., but no doubt there will be a fine showing of these by the end of the week. The competition is not very keen, and many of the classes have not been entered for, but nevertheless there is sufficient to make it interesting.

The hall is decorated with flags and bunting and a little roping. A military band dispenses music and 50 cents admission is charged. An old time newspaper man, Mr. Charles Chamberlain, is in charge of the press room, and he is ably assisted by Harry Bunyard, who has done great service in supplying the papers with information and illustrations. One new feature, and one worthy of highest praise, is that the club has engaged a photographer to take views of all the exhibits, copies of which are supplied to the press gratis, and there is a regularly equipped reception and writing room where newspaper men can partake of the club's hospitality. The result of all is that nearly all the daily and Sunday papers have given much space to this show. As we are writing this on Tuesday morning we cannot even venture a prediction as to the financial success, but are sure it will be a success from a plantsman's point of view.

As to the individual exhibits William Duckham, gardener to D. Willis James, Madison, N. J., has a magnificent lot of plants in the several classes. In class 185, group of foliage plants covering 150 square feet, he has staged many beautiful palms and some highly colored foliage plants. The gem of this group is a nice piece of Phoenix Roeblinii in class 25, table of decorative foliage plants to occupy 15x3½ feet, he put up a finely grown lot of plants among which were several new dracaenas and new crotons, the prettiest of which was a narrow leaved variety called "Her Majesty." This lot was edged off with Adiantum rhodophyllum and Selaginella Martensii, making a pretty finish. For 12 stove and greenhouse plants Mr. Duckham exhibited grand specimens of Dracaena Godseffiana, Ludovia erenifolia, Maranta San- deriana, Curmeria Leopoldii, Calamus Jamesi, Maranta virginialis major, Dracaena Sanderiana, Cyanophyllum magnificum, Carludovicia atrovirens, Rhopaloblasta species, a great beauty and destined to be popular; Kentia Sanderiana, and Araea Alivica. Some of these are new and the only ones of their kind in the country. For specimen Dracaena he put up the finest piece of D. Sanderiana ever seen here.

Arthur Herrington, gardener to H. McK. Twombly, Madison, N. J., exhibited the largest palm that was ever put up at a show in New York. It is a superb specimen, Latania borbonica, over 30 years old, about 20 feet in height and covers about 350 square feet. It required twelve men with blocks and tackle to put it in position, and we regret to say that the veteran James Dean came very near being seriously hurt in helping with this plant. His little finger was nearly cut off and his left side is injured, only slightly we hope.

Mr. Herrington is the only exhibitor of chrysanthemum plants. They are all in 6-inch pots, single stems and in boxes. In class 51 for 25 one variety he put soliel d'Octobre; in class 52, 12 whites, Mrs. H. Robinson; six plants, one variety, Col. Appleton; 12 plants, one variety, Mrs. H. Robinson; six plants, distinct varieties, with Robinson, Mutual Friend, Iora, Henry Hurrell, Harry Sun-derbruck and V.-Morel; in the several classes calling for six and twelve plants in a box Mr. Herrington entered with Mrs. Robinson and Henry Hurrell. They were all fine blooms considering the season. The same exhibitor staged six elegant pieces of Cattleya labiata in class 33, and five bunches of Gros Colmar and Black Alicante in class 151, greenhouse grapes.

Geo. Hale, gardener to E. D. Adams, Scabright, N. J., exhibited in several classes. For six ferns he had very fine specimens of Weymogrannum chrysophyllum, Davallia Fijiensis, Polypodium aureum, Nephrolepis exaltata Bostoniensis, Blechnum brasiliense, Nephrolepis rufescens tripinnatifida, the latter the best plant in this section. For 12 stove and greenhouse plants he arranged Maranta regalis, Cycaus revoluta, Asplenium nidus, Maranta nitens, Dion edule in flower, Maranta zebra, Pandanus Veitchii, Alocasia violacea, Maranta princeps, Anthurium crystallinum, Dracaena Massangeana, Schismatoglottis crispa and Heliconia aurea striata. In the class for specimen cycaus he had an exceptionally fine C. revoluta.

William Anderson, gardener to F. A. Constable, Mamaroneck, N. Y., exhibited the largest Boston fern ever seen here. It had an extended spread of 12 feet, a gigantic specimen, entered for the specimen fern, and he also showed grand specimens of Davallia Mooreana, Davallia Fijiensis and Nephrolepis exaltata Bostoniensis.

In the class for three ferns Lehnig & Winnefeld of Haackensack, N. J., were the sole competitors. In the classes for cyclamen, the plants shown were very good for the time of the year; those entered for the 12 plants were well in bloom, and those for the 6 plants were the new fancy leaved sort originated by this firm.

W. Brennecke, Hempstead, L. I., was alone in the classes for geranium plants. He showed nice plants of the varieties John Doyle, Caesar, Beaute Poitevine, Mme. Landry, C. Morel, J. B. Varonne and Jean Vivaud.

A. L. Miller, of East New York, made an extra fine display of his beautiful white dahlia Camelliflora; his table was a mass of white flowers and showed that Mr. Miller knows how to grow dahlias.

H. Beauieu of Woodhaven, displayed his seedling and fancy dahlias, many showing considerable merit, and J. L. Childs made a great showing of Tritoma Pfitzeri. G. H. Fleming and L. A. Martin also showed several vases of dahlias.

Lager & Hurrell, the orchid specialists of Summit, N. J., exhibited a magnificent table of orchids. The center was a branched tree about 12 feet in height, covered with great sprays of growing Oncidium varicosum. The table beneath was a mass of elegant Cattleya labiata, C. Gigas, C. Bowringiana, many of this firm's new hybrid cattleyas, and some very fine cypridifloras, Vanda caerulea, in fact specimens of all the orchids at present in flower. It was a splendid exhibit and attracted great attention.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., put up a very choice lot of orchids, among which was a specimen of Cattleya St. Ledgeriana, said to be the first blooms of that variety seen hereabouts.

Siebrecht & Son, of New Rochelle, came out heavy in several large classes. Their table of orchids was very grand and was beautifully arranged in natural rock work; it was a mass of floral gems comprising Odontoglossum crispum, the only piece at the show, O. grande, Oncidium varicosum, a superb Oncidium crispum and a great showing of Cattleya labiata; they had 47 varieties of orchids in this collection.

There were several new plants of American origin entered for the medals offered by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists (wish that name was shorter for the sake of the time it takes to write it). Arthur Herrington entered three plants of a new Adiantum after the form of A. Williamsii. E. Dressel offered three new dracaenas of the amabilis and terminalis types. W. A. Manda put up a new hybrid begonia, a cross between the Rex and flowering kinds, with very pretty foliage, and a new broad leaved pandanus of very striking form. William Duckham staged a new dracaena named D. Curtisii, with fine broad and highly colored foliage.

Mr. Duckham entered for 6 specimen dracaenas with D. Youngii, D. Lenting-iosa, D. Charles Dissel and some fine seedlings.

Siebrecht & Son showed a grand specimen of Cycaus circinnalis, and in class 20, six palms, entered with Caryota urens, Latania ruhra, Latania aurea, Chamaerops staurocantha, Thrinax radiata and Crocyloxon niveum. For specimen palm they staged Thrinax argentea and Phoenix Roeblinii, the latter the largest specimen of this grand palm at present in the United States. For three ferns they offered Davallia Fijiensis, Nephrolepis cordata compacta and N. Washingtoniensis.

There was a splendid exhibit of evergreens. W. A. Manda staged 130 varieties; Siebrecht & Sons, 90; W. H. Moon Co., 60; Samuel Parson & Sons and Bobbinck & Atkins immense groups. This was the finest show of evergreens ever put up at a show in the United States, and the nurserymen mentioned deserve great credit for their spirit of enterprise.

W. H. Waite, gardener to Samuel Untermeyer, Yonkers, N. Y., did himself proud with the many fine exhibits he arranged, and Julius Roehrs staged some of the finest palms and foliage plants to be seen anywhere; his orchids were very fine and artistically arranged.

W. A. Manda filled an immense space. We were informed he sold his specimen Kentia Forsteriana for $300; it had 22 leaves and was 16 feet high. Among his stove and greenhouse plants was a gigantic Encoplyrtus - pungens glauca, a cover 100 years old, and a Dion edule the oldest in the country. He showed a fine Kentia Belmoreana 12 feet high, with 25 leaves.

J. H. Troy, New Rochelle, had the prettiest arranged group in the show. It was of bamboos and he deservedly got first for it. He also showed a group of dwarf Japanese plants.

There was the keenest competition of all in the vegetable classes. Messrs. Duckham, Taaffe, Scott and Counce deserve special praise for these exhibits.

R. & J. Leach, Jersey City, made an exhibit of chrysanthemums in pots to cover 100 square feet.

Superb specimen bay trees were shown by Julius Roehrs and Bobbink & Atkins. Prospect Park, Brooklyn, N. Y., and W. A. Manda made very creditable exhibits of cacti, among which were many rare varieties. L. Schmutz, Flatbush, N. Y., and Fred Dressel showed groups of branched rubbers.

W. W. Edgar, Waverly, Mass., sent a fine specimen adiantum and a nephrolepis of splendid growth.

C. W. Ward exhibited a very dainty group of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and a group of Canna Black Beauty, which showed up finely. He also exhibited vases of his new carnations. Gov. Roosevelt and Viola Allen, the latter a gem in pink and white. We must leave a fuller description till next week.

Bowling Match.

Monday night was a gala night on the New York alleys. The match between the New York and Philadelphia teams was rolled off and the New Yorks won the first two games. The return match will take place on the Philadelphia alleys on the evening of November 12, which is the opening night of the Philadelphia show. The highest total in the six games is to decide the winner and the Philadelphians vow to get even on their own alleys. Sorry we haven't time now to describe this affair properly. BALTIMORE.

Various Items.

We have had another week of ideal autumn, the atmosphere like crystal and the sky bluer than Naples. In some localities frosts have destroyed tender vegetation, but in the hills and in the city the heds and foliage plants are untouched. Those florists who retail their stuff gain by the delay which affords them ample supplies of outdoor flowers, but such as buy are anxious for a cessation of those materials. Trade to this date (Oct. 21) keeps fairly up to the average season. The supply and quality of roses improve; carnations continue short of the demand, dahlias are about done. Fine mums so far are not abundant—inferior stock is more plentiful. Weddings are numerous.

The Florists' Exchange, which is the clearing house here for growers and buyers of cut flowers, and which has steadily increased its business, has long found its present quarters on Park avenue inadequate to its operations, and the management has at last found a new location. This is a store of such size on N. Eutaw near Franklin street, as to afford ample accommodation for the trade and much greater convenience and comfort to the patrons of the house, and its employees as well.

Messrs. C. E. Smith & Co. (Mrs. Eicher, manager) had an opening a few days ago of their large new store on Liberty street near Fayette; the display of plants and cut flowers being very effective. These premises give the largest area of space on one floor of any florist here, and the firm does a large and ever increasing business.

In these notes of last week the printer's types, or a bad pen, transformed the Sunrise rose into Sunshine—a slip readily perceivable. Sunrise, a sport from Perle, shows so distinctive a character that in the bud it cannot fail to be popular, though of course its scarlet and copper color will not admit of its use for funeral work, which in this section is now mainly the employment found for the Perle.

Progress is being made with the investigation by committee of the city council of the Park Commission's books and accounts, and when that is completed other branches of the inquiry will proceed. The employment of counsel for the board was not allowed by the committee.

CLEVELAND VISITS DETROIT.

On a recent Saturday evening a bevy of Cleveland florists took the boat for Detroit with a view to a peaceful invasion of Michigan. There were Adam Graham, J. M. Gasser, Herman Hart and Benny, that mountain of good nature, Bro. Kennedy, of the Gasser Co., Mr. Gibson, of the Lake Shore R. R., and by a special providence the "wandering minstrel," whose mission it is to record the event.

At precisely 11:59 Saturday evening the festivities on the boat ceased and the travelers "turned in" (but what they had already turned in before that hour it is unnecessary to mention). The promised storm did not materialize, the "sleep of the just" was not disturbed and at 8 a. m. the weary mariners came to anchor at Phil. Breitmeyer's city haven.

A little bird had carried the news of our coming and "Phil" was up bright and early with his usual hearty welcome. Mr. Dilger, of the new "Cut Flower Exchange," was also awake and the day's "services" at once began. Under the master guidance of Mr. Breitmeyer the procession started and when it ceased to "proceed" the foot of the boat summoned the Clevelanders to return, long after 10 o'clock p. m.

The first visitation was at Bro. Rackham's, where the carnation king had everything in apple-pie order. Adding his presence to the regiment the Mount Clemens special car was "held up" and the 20-mile journey to the city of sulphur began. The balance of the forenoon was devoted to the great Breitmeyer plant, one of the largest in the country, and a most thorough investigation of every part of it was enjoyed, the genial Fred leading the way. Of especial interest were the three immense new Beauty houses, the stock in which was simply perfect. Such color and stems and profusion of bloom can be found nowhere else in Michigan, and Mr. Gasser thought they "couldn't grow such Beauties anywhere else on the continent."

Fred's supply of "home-made wine" never gives out—though Fred gave out a good deal of both colors while "the bunch" were visiting Grandma Breitmeyer, whose good health and cheery welcome never seem to decrease. "Justice" is a weak word to express what was "done" to the elaborate Sunday dinner, which Mrs. Fred Breitmeyer gracefully presided over. An early and somewhat "cramped" breakfast on the boat left lots of room for appreciation of the chickens and "tue like mother used to make" and the cheers and tiger given in honor of the fair hostess were loud and hearty. A graceful speech by the genial Scotch orator of the party and an eloquent reply by Phil closed the happiest hour of the day.

The "violet king" was next visited and his fine new houses are indication enough of "prosperity." Klegg's violets are known all over the west. Already he is cutting an average of 5,000 daily and the anticipated yield for the season he safely places at a million. At every place the crowd grew—and the "visited" joined the original, until after an afternoon call on John Carey and Jas. Taylor, the necessity for a special car developed and the return to Detroit was made. The Carey and Taylor "plants" were found to be up-to-date, including Mrs. Carey and the children. Sullivan's home and greenhouses, looking "spick and span," were passed on the way, but he was invisible.

After a call at Breitmeyer's city greenhouses it was intended to visit Gus Taepke and Bro. Schroeter, but the shades of evening were falling and another visit will have to be made to do the boys justice.

In fact the Clevelanders were so well treated they actually hinted at their willingness to make the voyage every other Sunday if they could get Detroiters to reciprocate.

At a "summer resort" the closing ceremonies began at 6 o'clock and another elaborate banquet consoling the inner man. Over the coffee and cigars occurred another "violet of reason" interspersed with Adam's Bible stories. This was followed by an hour at the delightful home of Mr. Phil. Breitmeyer, where his charming wife did the fare-well honors so generously that a hustle was necessary to catch the boat for home.

AUSTIN.

MORRIS CO. GARDENERS' AND FLORISTS' SOCIETY.

Messrs. Moore, Hentz & Nash, wholesale commission florists of New York, being of the opinion that the actual growers of any flowers that take a prize should be recognized and rewarded in some way as well as the owner and exhibitor, have offered four handsome medals for that purpose to be competed for at the sixth annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society, November 5 next. They elect that the prizes shall be awarded as additional prizes as follows: One to go with the first prize for eighteen American Beauties; one with first prize for twelve Brides; one with first prize for twelve Bridesmaids; to be grown on commercial establishments only; and the fourth to go with the first prize for best exhibit of chrysanthemums, open to both private and commercial growers. In the event of anyone being both grower and exhibitor taking the first prize he shall also be entitled to the medal offered in that class.

Messrs. Moore, Hentz & Nash hope by these means to create a spirit of competition among the actual growers of flowers that may lead to good results in future as the possession of the medal will be good evidence of ability in the holder's favor when seeking another position.

The society has very gratefully accepted this offer and by so doing endorsed the sentiments contained therein.

Philadelphia, October 19.—Wm. Paul Binder, Rider, Md., exhibited No. 10, a white Japanese variety scoring commercial scale 81 points.

DENVER, COLO.

Various Notes.

The Denver Florists' Club decided on Friday, the 11th, that they would abandon the proposed fall mum show. It will be a great disappointment to many.

We visited several establishments and found everything in good shape for this time of year.

A. Balmer, of Montclair, has had good success with his asters this fall, both as to quality and for the sale of them. His carnations are in good condition, but a little late coming into bloom. We find that a good many florists have their hobbies, and that of Mr. Balmer is taxidermy. Of birds he has a fine collection. They embrace so many varieties and are mounted so naturally that one nearly forgets to think of his flowers.

We next stopped at Fred Hall's, but only got a glimpse of what was in his houses, as he was going to church and told us he had to lock up. Could see, however, that he was growing mostly roses.

Our next stopping place was at C. J. Hurts' place, in Harmon, which is mostly in roses, which were in splendid condition.

Then we came to Newlander & Rollins'. We never saw their place look so clean and businesslike as it does this fall. Their new house is planted in carnations, the finest plants we saw on the trip. They believe in late planting. They were lifted and planted about the 20th of September.

The wholesale greenhouses of Mrs. R. Mauff were our next objects. There we found they had added several new houses, all of which were planted to carnations. Several of their houses have last year's plants of roses, which are looking pretty good at the present time. Their asparagus house is looking especially fine; part of it is newly planted; and, by the way, this is the only house devoted to asparagus that there is in the city.

At the Park Floral Company's place everything is in fine condition. They are cutting mums that are good. In carnations they are growing largely of Lawson and Marquis, which at present, owing to short stems, bring the same price as the other varieties. They had a display of Liberty roses in their window last week which attracted the attention of all that passed.

The mums now coming in will relieve the strain on carnations, of which there has not been enough to supply the demand. Carnations are retailing for 50 cents a dozen. Roses, of which there is now coming in some elegant stock, run from $1 to $2.50 a dozen; mums from $1.50 to $3.50 a dozen. THORNE.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Various Notes.

Business is picking up some and occasional funeral work keeps the florists of this good city drifting along to better times. Violets and chrysanthemums have made their appearance, though the first of the mums came from Boston and at a stiff price. Carnations are rather scarce at present, especially Daybreaks and whites.

Most of the florists are growing the Imperial violet this year, only a few having the Campbell and Marie Louise. All are fairly clean and ought to produce good crops.

Some building and changes have been going on this summer. H. A. Jahn has moved some of his houses so that he now has his whole range connected. His carnations and violets are in fine condition and they will have to yield to their fullest capacity in order to keep "Jimmy" at the store in supply the coming season.

E. Y. Pierce has built a new rose house about 75x20, and the stock is doing fine. Mr. Pierce is the introducer of the Imperial violet in this city. His stock did remarkably well last season and this induced everybody to get stock of him for this season, and judging from appearances all will have good results.

The greenhouse formerly owned and run by Charles Waite has been sold and removed and is to be used for growing vegetables.

Kraber has rented Holcomb's greenhouses on Walnut street again and will run them in connection with the place on Tremont street.

William Pierce, Jr., has had his store remodeled and painted and is ready to do a rushing business the coming season. All the greenhouses except two belonging to the late William Pierce, Sr., have been torn down and sold; the remaining two are being run by his son, William Pierce, Jr.

The city has built another large greenhouse at Oak Grove Cemetery, so George Brennan, the gardener, will have enough to keep him busy. Mr. Brennan passed through a severe illness a short time ago, but is now well and about again.

The commons have looked very bright the past season both with cannas and showy annuals, thanks to the good care of George Smith, who grows most of the stock used for this purpose in hotbeds and cold-frames.

Fred Levigue, of Fall River, was a recent visitor. X.

PATCHING BROKEN GLASS.

Correction.

In the notes appearing on page 581 of our issue of October 10 an unfortunate error was made in preparing the copy for the printer in which the name of G. M. Naumann was omitted and through this blunder the credit of being the annual winner of the first prize at the Sheriff Street market was given to another grower, who was probably much surprised at the honor thus thrust upon him.

Mr. Naumann was the grower mentioned as the prize-winner by our correspondent and the error in print was ours, not his. We tender our apologies to both growers and to our correspondent.

SPRINGVILLE, N. Y.—Geo. Staffinger has purchased the entire range of glass of L. D. Chandler, amounting to about 4,000 square feet, which he is removing and will re-erect next to his own range. Mr. Chandler is old and in poor health and will retire from the business. Edw. Wyatt has gone out of the florist business, growing only vegetables, for which he uses one greenhouse 10x60 and six acres of land. His sales are local. Mr. Staffinger makes a specialty of carnations and they are looking well. We had our first snow of the season Oct. 16, two inches, but it lasted only a day.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Exhibition.

"Everything pertaining to the progress of the coming great flower show is working to the satisfaction of those in charge of the arrangements," said Director General Taggart last Monday. The various committees have been appointed and are made up of the leading business men of the city, who have assumed their respective duties with the enthusiasm and determination so characteristic of the western man. The premium list will be issued in a few days and is to be absolutely free of advertisements. The yellow mum will be the official flower of the show. Several hundred badges designed in the shape of the chrysanthemum flower will be worn as a novelty for advertising the show and "Mum's the word" will appear on the badges.

An interesting feature of the show will be a carnation contest. The red carnation was the favorite flower of the late President McKinley. In order to perpetuate that fact in the floral annals of the country, a special prize of $100 has been offered by Mr. F. D. Crabbs for the best red carnation plant exhibited at the show, provided that it be a new bloom and that it be named the McKinley carnation.

An effective way of keeping the matter before the public is the offering of premiums to the downtown merchants for the best decorated windows in floral and electric displays, during the week preceding the show. This plan is a happy idea originating with Mr. Taggart and the merchants are responding enthusiastically. Premiums for the window displays were solicited from the florists, and Arthur Newell, Samuel Murray, W. L. Rock and G. M. Kellogg each gave $50, Alfred Broman $25, Miss Dalley $25, and Mrs. E. Edgar $10.

Business.

Business is coming on very nicely. Weather is quite Indian summer-like, which is hastening the supply of roses. No good violets in this market yet. Mums are coming right along and are quite popular with the patrons of the horse show this week.

R. S. Brown & Son are cutting some fine five-foot stemmed Yellow Monarch. Asparagus, smilax, and, in fact, all green stock is decidedly scarce here this fall. With the use of autumn foliage, and flowers plentiful, the storekeepers are able to make attractive window displays. H. J. M.

FALMOUTH, MASS.—H. V. Lawrence has added a new carnation house 21x100.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

The market is starting off this week in a manner that is all that could be desired. On Saturday nearly everything was cleared up, but prices were pretty low. There was an unusual supply of roses, especially pink, and they were inferior in quality. Mildew has hit a few of the boys and, though they are trying hard, it is not easy to be got rid of this kind of weather.

As usual Beauties and Meteors of good grade sold well with scarcely enough to go around. They are selling at same prices as last reported. Some very good Liberties are coming in, but the majority are short stemmed. As yet this variety does not sell up with Meteor in this market. They seem to be soft, wilt easily and are not very good keepers. A cool snap may change all this, though.

The demand for violets is picking up rapidly and prices are consequently on the rise. Some very good Lady Hume Campbell are coming in and sell for 35 to 50 cents per 100. Some Princess of Wales have also made their appearance and are very good, 50 to 75 cents per 100 is the price.

The mum is now able to say, "Go way back and sit down," to most other varieties of flowers. They are with us in full force and other flowers are obliged for the time being, to take a back seat. The demand is all that could be desired, but the price is hardly up to other years, especially for the smaller sized varieties; $1.50 to $2 per dozen seems to be about all the retailer is willing to pay.

A few Robinson are making their debut but they are scarcely fit to be cut as yet. Right here I would like to caution the grower about cutting his mums before they are done. Of course there is such a thing as letting them hang too long. But it is so discouraging to receive a consignment of half-open chrysanthemums, which if left on the plants a few days longer would have sold for almost double the money.

Various Items.

Mrs. Underwood, of Ludlow, Ky., has gone to Little Rock, Ark., where she will start a store. Her daughter-in-law will continue the business at Ludlow.

Mr. Phillip Vilmorin, of France, was the guest of J. Chas. McCullough on Sunday last.

The schedule for the chrysanthemum show to be given on November 9 by the Cincinnati Florists' Society, is out. This show is the first of the monthly exhibits to be given by the society. Prizes are offered and a first class show is expected.

C. J. OHMER.

We have received a copy of the final official premium list of the Indiana Floral Festival and Chrysanthemum show to be held at Indianapolis Nov. 5 to 9. Some very attractive premiums are offered. Copies may be had by addressing Wm. G. Bertermann, secretary, 241 Massachusetts avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

You will find an adv. in the annual Thanksgiving Number of the Florists' Review a paying investment.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We are having as fine a spell of Indian summer weather as one could even pray for. It did not arrive, however, until after there was a killing frost which gave business a decided impetus. Weddings and receptions are in full blast. Most of the principal ones are booked as far ahead as December.

Shipping is not so brisk as it was during the summer and up to about October 8, for the reason that most of the retail growers are now cutting enough of their own stock to meet the light demand.

Carnations are coming along finely, although, as a rule, of rather poor quality. But little first class stock is being cut with the exception of the Irene, which is the best carnation on this market.

Prices remain firm. Early mums, $2 per doz.; Robinson, Morel, etc., just in, at $3 per doz. Carnations, 25 to 35 cents per doz. Violets, 20 cents per doz. Icauties, $2 to $3 per doz.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

Between wedding decorations and funerals the week has been a busy one and nearly all of us have had a fair share of the work. White roses have been very scarce, the demand for them being greater than for any other white flower. Chrysanthemums are keeping up their prices. Fancy blooms bring as high as $3 per dozen; outside mums are coming in more freely and are mostly pink and white. Some pretty Vivand-Morels are in the market. Violets are plentiful and are improving in quality as the weather is getting cooler, which suits them. Lily of the Valley is becoming more plentiful.

American Beauties, $1.50 to $2; Brides, 25 to 75 cents; Bridesmaids, 25 to 50 cents; Meteors, 35 to 50 cents; Ceil Brunners, 10 to 15 cents; Kaisers, 25 to 75 cents; Perles, 25 to 35 cents; Carnots, 25 to 50 cents per doz. Carnations—Hobart, $1; Crocker, 25 to 50 cents; Prosperity, 75 cents; Lawson, 25 to 50 cents; Triumph, 35 cents; mixed fancy, 25 to 50 cents; Hill, 25 to 35 cents; Scott, 15 to 25 cents; Portia, 10 to 15 cents per doz. Chrysanthemums—Madame Bonton, $1 to $3; Bonaffon, $1 to $1.50; Queen, 50 cents to $1.50; Vivand-Morel, 75 cents to $1 per doz. Outside chrysanthemums, 10 to 25 cents per doz. Lily of the Valley, 50 cents per doz. Princess of Wales violets, 75 cents to $1.50. Smilax, 5 cents; asparagus, 12½ cents per string.

Chrysanthemums have been in the market since August 1. A. Galloway, of Fruitvale, brought in the first yellows, for which he received $2.50 per doz. Pottet was next with some beautiful whites. At present the market is well stocked with all grades and colors and prices range from 10 cents to $3 per doz. Some nice Queens and Bonaffons can be seen at the stores. Sweet peas are almost gone and what few are coming in are very poor. The same may be said of asters.

P. Hyashi, Alameda, is cutting some nice Queens and Bonaffons.

Pacific Coast Hort. Society.

A meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held on October 7 at Mission Opera House, Mission street, San Francisco. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, H. Plath; vice president, Wm. Eldred; secretary, T. A. Munroe; treasurer, P. Cauhape; financial secretary, M. Borkheim; librarian, J. W. Bagge; ushers, J. Epstein, G. Gagne; trustees, J. Milne, E. Serveau, C. H. Baker.

With the above set of officers our society ought to run along very smoothly the coming year for all the gentlemen elected are workers and have the good of the society at heart. A chrysanthemum show may be held some time in November; but the question whether we shall hold one or not was left over till next meeting, the third Monday in October.

Various Notes.

Mr. E. Gill (I don't mean the old man), our enterprising young Oaklander, has just finished planting his new carnation house, which 2,000 plants fill nicely; they are mostly Flora Hill, Lawson and Bradt. Ed speaks of erecting a large house for chrysanthemums, and a lath house for asters next year.

Chas. F. Fick has moved to San Mateo and seems to be well satisfied with the change.

Mr. Geo. Hansen, the well known landscape gardener of Berkeley, is on the sick list.

Mr. Chas. Hasselbacher, who has been sick for some months past, having failed to get relief through six white doctors, tried a Chinese doctor who claimed he could cure him in three weeks. The three weeks are up but no cure has as yet been effected. Stomach trouble is the cause of Mr. Hasselbacher's illness. It is hoped he will soon get well.

Mr. Sam R. Love, lately with H. M. Sanborn, Oakland, will open a store at 1153 Washington street, Oakland, about October 14. This location will place Mr. Love right alongside a sister florist, Madame P'rentice. Sam called in to see the madame a few days ago and informed her that he was not opening up alongside her place of business for meanness. "Oh, no," replied the madame, "I know you would not do that; I think it's for love." I might add that this store will be used only by Mr. Love can find a better one. It is to be hoped that he will make a success of his first venture in business, as he is a popular young man with an excellent disposition.

A few days ago one of our cheap, outside carnation growers dropped into a downtown retail store while the proprietor was in the act of showing a customer a vase of carnations at 75 cents per doz. Turning to the grower, who carried a basket, the customer inquired what he was selling. "A sella da pinka," replied the grower. "What do you ask for them," queried the customer. "Twelve dozen fora da fifty cents," said the grower. The would-be customer took a couple of dozen carnations and handing the grower 25 cents left the store. Wouldn't that jar any man paying $150.00 a month for rent?

Mr. Thomas H. Stevenson had a vase of the new white sport from Vivand-Morel, Mrs. Ritson, in his window this week. The bud on opening is a lemon yellow but as the petals expand it fades to a beautiful white. It is a good thing and no doubt will be largely grown next year.

Mr. John Carbone, Berkeley, is cutting some very fine Prosperity carnations which bring 75 cents wholesale.

Mrs. P. Fredricks has opened a florist's store on Post street near Grant avenue.

N. Symmacoplus, Oakland, has made a contract with the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. to decorate with plants a number of south and eastbound cars, by the year. The contract calls for $5 per car.

The Shamhan Floral Co. has had a very busy week in making funeral work. Among the pieces made by this company and which is worthy of mention, was a design made for the funeral of the late Mr. Mark Thiall, the owner of a local theater. The piece represented a stage, 10x2 feet and 7x6 feet which was made entirely of white stock. The boxes were finished with Brides and orchids; the curtain was made of violets, Princess of Wales, bearing the word "Finale" done in stock. The design was a splendid piece of workmanship and a good proof that our San Francisco florists are strictly up to date on any kind of work.

Mr. Thomas H. Stevenson did over two hundred dollars' worth of work this week in the way of church wedding decorations and funeral designs.

One of our leading clothing establishments on Market street has been making a show of dahlias in a couple of their show windows the past few days. The blooms are staged in true exhibition style and do not fail to draw crowds.

Mr. G. N. Tyler, Alameda, is cutting some very nice Queens and Bonaffons, and sprays of Asparagus Sprengeri.

J. N.

DETROIT.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club, Oct. 16th, there was as usual a large attendance. President Holzmaek makes an efficient official and Mr. Sullivan performed his duties as secretary before taking the midnight train for Philadelphia and the flower show in New York. Detroit will also be represented there by Mr. Phil Breitmeyer.

The approaching flower show in Detroit was the principal matter discussed and complete arrangements have been made, that indicate a great success. The subscription list is remarkably free and generous, the prizes numerous and liberal and the interest about universal.

Business, too, is booming and all the retailers are busy, and everywhere there is evidence of cheerful expectation.

After the meeting, a dozen of the old bowler guard endeavored to score the averages of other days, but we cover the results with the mantle of charity.

AUSTIN.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

Business is booming and flowers are plentiful. The Texas Seed & Floral Co. are now cutting outside Beauties with stems two to five feet long and flowers perfect. Brides and Maids, and in fact all of the ever blooming class, are producing fine flowers outside. Ten acres of roses in full bloom is quite a sight.

Carnations inside are coming on finely and they will soon be cutting a fine crop. Two houses, each 20x150, of mums are in perfect condition, two flowers to a plant. A house of rose cuttings, largely from outside wood, is in fine shape and the cuttings are about ready for potting off, with hardly a miss. Many of the everblooming varieties root as freely from outside grown wood as from that grown inside.

No frost as yet and the days are warm and balmy while the night temperature drops to about 65 degrees. F. W. B.

RED OAK, IOWA.

The C. J. Anderson Company has completed its new range, which is located almost in the center of the city. They have put up about 15,000 feet, installed a 50-horse power boiler and added a good sized potting shed and dwelling. Their stock of roses, consisting mostly of Maids, Brides, Meteors and Golden Gate, is in fine condition, also carnations, such as Crane, Flora Hill, Ethel Crock-

Various Notes.

Trade during the past month has been steady with a fair demand for good stock. The supply of Beauties and Meeters has been good and quality fine. Carnations are becoming more plentiful every day and the quality is improving. Mums are getting more plentiful, the supply easily keeping pace with the demand.

Mr. Sam Batson, who grows carnations exclusively, has his place in fine shape. Stock strong and healthy. He has added a new supplementary boiler to his place this year.

The Dunkley Floral Co. have remodelled some of their old carnation houses; they are proposing to remodel the rest of them next summer. The new roofs are constructed on much the same plan as Michael Wimandy's new range. Their stock is in fine condition; they are cutting some fine Beauties and Kaisersins.

"Jack" Calder is cutting some nice carnations from his new house; he says they are the best in the city.

The Van Bochove Bros. are cutting very fine carnations and roses for which there is a good demand. They are also cutting some nice mums of the earlier sorts. The later sorts will be ready in about two weeks.

The Calder alluded to in my last report was not "Jack" Calder, the East Side florist, but another Calder to whom the local papers gave the same initials.

TORONTO.

The Market.

The demand for cut flowers this past week has been a considerable improvement on the trade of previous few weeks. Stock has been more plentiful with more of it than for some time back, the quality also being improved. Mums are just nicely starting, most of the early varieties coming in fairly plentiful. Roses have been good, not an over supply, though, Brides and Maids particularly being fine, of which both Dunlop and Dale are about equal as far as quality goes.

There are still a few nice dahlias being brought in by Tattle, his plants being protected from the frosts of the last week by orchards in which a number of his dahlias are planted. Some nice Meteors have been sent in by Walter Muston.

We noted some splendid specimen Boston ferns grown by Mr. Geo. Hollis in some of the down town stores. Mr. Hollis can grow ferns all right.

A Visit.

I had the pleasure of visiting the conservatories of Messrs. Grobba & Wandrey of Mimico, and seeing their array of bulbs for winter forcing. Just four years ago, about this time of the year, I paid a visit to these same men and found their establishment consisted of a single house half buried in the ground, 100 by 18 feet; today they have by faithful adherence to business and careful and scientific growing of stock increased their glass to over 50,000 square feet. They have been undoubtedly the most thrifty (call it lucky if you wish) growers in the close vicinity of Toronto within the past few years. Their bulb list will include 300,000 tulips, 32,000 daffs, 12,000 hyacinths (Dutch), 15,000 Romans, 15,000 paper whites, and 20,000 freesia. The latter bulbs are raised by themselves from seed.

Club Meeting.

The Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association met last Tuesday evening, the principal business being connected with the mum show next month. Committees were appointed to look after the different arrangements necessary, etc. C. W.

FT. WAYNE, IND.

Trade for the past week has been remarkably good. A number of weddings having occurred and the weather being fine has made a good demand for flowers. For as a rule trade is much better in the fall of the year if we have bright days. The cool nights have improved the quality of the flowers, especially roses and carnations.

Carnation plants have picked up and are in a better condition this fall than usual for this season of the year.

Recent visitors: Mr. Noll, of the Dayton Folding Box Co.; Mr. Byers, of the Dayton Paper Novelty Co.; Wm. Trilow, representing J. C. Vaughan.

M. S. V.

RICHMOND, IND.—A brand new $2-pound challenge boy has arrived at the home of Mr. John A. Evans. John's advent into the nursery business seems to have met with as brilliant success as his ventilators.

This special offer is made to reduce our stock to a certain limit of space which we can devote to this plant, and will be withdrawn as soon as reduced to this limit. Without a doubt, the demand for this, the most important and valuable of all winter flowering plants, will this season again be far in excess of the supplies now in sight.

While all the Lorraine Begonias are difficult plants to handle during the spring months, we know of no other soft wooded plant which grows so freely at this season of the year, and with the most ordinary facilities you will have no difficulty in successfully growing now, and flowering it at a handsome margin of profit for the holidays.

To give best results, the larger sizes, above three-inch, must be shipped in pots.

WILLIAM SCOTT

Florists' Publishing Co., CANTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

CARNATION NOTES.

Diseases.

I have never had carnations to act in the manner described by Mr. H. J. G. and I am unable to state with any certainty just what the trouble or the cause of it could be. Perhaps if I had a diseased specimen before me and a record of the treatment the plants have received I could tell more about it. It is quite evident, however, that part of the trouble is simply a case of stem-rot. Although this disease most commonly attacks the stem at the base of the plants its operations are by no means confined to that part of the plant. You will often find that certain stems and the foliage thereon are so constructed that they will hold considerable water at each joint and that after each syringing those places are filled with water, which remains there until it evaporates. If syringing is too frequent these places are wet constantly and often stem-rot results, causing the top to die off. It more frequently attacks the branches down close to the main stem, though, because the growth is more dense and cannot dry out so well there as it can up higher.

We find that when a plant once begins to die off that way it may just as well be pulled up at once and burned, as the balance of the branches will die off one after the other. The proper thing to do in that case is to burn the affected plants, discontinue syringing for a time, water sparingly at the roots and when you do water run the end of the hose between the rows close to the soil, dust the plants with lime and give all the air you can at all times.

I cannot account for the turning yellow of the tips unless it is caused by greenfly or thrips. Either of these if allowed to multiply will cause the tips to come yellow and deformed. This turning yellow is also aggravated by too liberal a supply of water at the roots or by excessive feeding at a time when the plants are in poor condition to even take up a normal supply of food and water. They get a sour stomach, so to speak. Run them a little on the dry side and fumigate every other night for two or three weeks to rid them of aphid or thrips, as the case may be. Would also advise cutting off all the badly affected shoots, as they will produce no decent blooms, and allow the plants to make a new growth, which will be healthy if fumigating is kept up regularly and the watering is done carefully. It is very early in the season and they can be gotten into full bloom again by January, and if they are not badly affected a Xmas crop can perhaps be had.

New Varieties.

Already there are some varieties being advertised for dissemination next spring and of course each one is the best that ing a very good plan we find is to notice what varieties are exhibited in good shape at the fall shows and then keep sharp lookout for reports on those varieties all through the season. In that way you can at least learn whether a variety is an early and continuous bloomer. For instance, if a variety is shown in good shape at the fall shows and then again at the February meeting of the Carnation Society you may depend on that variety being a money maker and you are safe in investing your money. We avoid as much as possible those varieties that are not heard from at all until mid-winter unless the blooms are extra fine.

The fall shows are being held right along now and nothing will pay you better than to take in one or more of them. You can afford to go several hundred miles for the sake of gaining information which you cannot obtain in any other way. You will not only see new carnations and old ones, but you will see many other beautiful blossoms which will make you forget for the time being all about rust and stem rot and all your other troubles at home. If you do attend any of these shows try and take along something good of your production to show what you can do and that you are alive and doing something. A grower always respects another grow-has ever been offered, so they claim. The disseminators in most cases are honest and conscientious men and they really believe their varieties to be just what they claim for them, and in fact most every variety that is sent out gives promise of a great future while it is growing on the originator's place. But in spite of all that and the fact that we are willing to accept the originator's statements as correct, yet we want to satisfy ourselves by having a look at the plant and bloom before we invest heavily. When we cannot make a journey to the homes of the candidates in order to see them grower who can do a few things just a little better than he can. It does not need to be a mum or a carnation or a rose but any kind of a well done plant or bloom is always gladly received and given a good position on the exhibition table. If you have a carnation seedling I hope you have been wise enough to get it into good shape for exhibition this fall and you should show it now to show its earliness.

Packing Blooms.

Don't spoil a lot of good blooms by careless packing, as one often sees, but pack them so that each bloom will come out of the box as fresh as it went into it. The best way we have found is to pack in layers and lay each row of blooms on a pillow about $\frac{1}{2}$ of an inch thick, placing the pillow, which is made by rolling up a sheet of paper, just beneath the calyx. Pack only one layer in each box, unless you can put in a false bottom and cleat them so that no bloom can move around and work loose. Place plenty of damp tissue paper between the stems, but do not sprinkle water on the blooms, as that takes the lustre off of them. The bloom should be cut and the stems stood in water at least 12 hours before packing and in many cases it is better to allow the blooms to develop their size in the cellar instead of on the plants at this time of the year.

Cutting.

Some of the pink and red varieties fade quite badly before the blooms attain their full size in this warm sunshine of early November, and these best growing season. If sales are good at this season the temptation is strong to take another crop from the plants before throwing them out, but it is more profitable to plant a house for summer blooming than to curtail the growing season of the winter bloomers. Young stock also is sure to suffer considerably by standing in the pots during the hot weather, however carefully they may be attended to.

The soil being now in fit condition to be placed on the benches, the benches, if old, should be thoroughly cleansed by playing the hose on them with sufficient force to remove all old soil from joints and cracks, and given a good coating of hot lime wash; this, while acting as a good preservative, also destroys insects and their eggs. Some growers recommend mixing sulphur with the wash to prevent fungoid growth. Whether there is any efficacy in this I do not know, but the experiment is cheap and quite harmless to the plants.

The spaces left in the bottom of the

it through the soil, as the act of planting leaves as much around the ball as is needful, and the subsequent stirring of the surface and watering will carry the rest of it deep enough into the soil for the young roots to find. The bone should be specially prepared for greenhouse work, and not the coarser kind used by farmers, which is in many of the cheaper kinds cut with acids. It is also better to have the bone in stock some time before using, giving deleterious gases time to escape. In planting the ball should be disturbed as little as possible, simply rubbing off a little of the old surface, and plant no deeper than just sufficient to cover the ball. This will leave a little depression around the plant, which should be left in that way till the bench requires stirring. Water each plant carefully and slowly, only around the ball, and continue this individual watering for the first ten days after planting; syringe twice every bright day, but never so late in the afternoon that the plants will not have time to dry before night. There is no necessity of shading young stock that has been properly handled, however hot the weather may be. Careful and judicious watering and syringing, with all the air they can get being all that is needful. If cared for properly they will start into growth at once and make quite a growth in the first ten days.

BRIDES.

PACKING AND DELIVERY OF PLANTS.

Faulty packing has been the subject of various comments by correspondents of THE REVIEW, and the lapses of shippers have been criticized more or less caustically, and doubtless this has not been done without reason.

Such mistakes as that of using an extremely heavy box, the freight or express charges on which may nearly amount to the original cost of the order, are sometimes made even by large shippers, and especially so where the custom prevails of using any old box, instead of adapting the package to the order. This practice is a prolific source of extra costs and aggravation to the consignee, and certainly may be avoided in very many instances, and it is a much more business-like method to adopt some regular system of having cases made for the purpose.

But the lumber bill on account of packing cases is no small item to the shipping florist, and the customs of the trade in our country do not at present allow of any charge being made for cases and packing, such as is looked upon as perfectly proper among the European trade, and also among nurserymen in our own country.

The shipping of plants in pots also makes some addition to the expenses of the shipper from the fact that a much greater area of box space is required and also a greater quantity of packing material. During warm weather the cost of packing is naturally much less than it is in winter, for at the latter season all boxes must be made as nearly airtight as possible, and also carefully lined with many thicknesses of paper or with one or two layers of felt paper, such as builders use for lining, and in addition to this a good layer of excelsior is placed all around the plants.

This extra material with the extra time that is occupied in doing the job brings up the cost of winter packing of tender plants to nearly 10 per cent should be cut as soon as all the petals are unfolded and put in a cellar where the temperature is between 45 and 50 degrees, where they will keep growing for a week or more. Remember, too, that you should show them when they are at their very best. Last year at one of the shows I saw two vases of red carnations; the one lot was just about as large and fine as those blooms were ever to be while the other lot was evidently picked about a day before the exhibition and of course the first mentioned lot won. I saw both lots the next day and when I saw about one-half of the prize winners asleep I had learnt a lesson. It makes no difference how fine they were or will be, but you want them to be their very finest when the judge is at work. A. F. J. BARR.

Planting.

To secure the best results planting should be commenced in May and be all finished by the middle of June, thus giving the young stock the full benefit of the bench for drainage ought to be covered over to prevent the soil from running through. Thin sods, or, what is better, wheat or rye straw, spread on the bottom, will answer the purpose. Spread the soil evenly, keeping the rougher parts near the bottom; fill the bench flush, then mark off along the sideboard the distances the lines are to be apart, allowing for Brides, Meteors and varieties of about the same growth one square foot to each plant. Beauties will require one and one-half feet. To give each plant an equal amount of space and light they should be planted so that the lines will run either diagonally across the bench or staggering; this also facilitates staking, syringing, etc.

If bone is to be used as a fertilizer now is the time to begin it. To get the immediate benefit the bone ought to be cut fine. To some soils it is absolutely necessary, and, in fact, all soils are benefited by its use. Twenty pounds to a bench 100x44 feet seems to be about the requisite amount to use at this time. Spread it evenly on the surface and proceed to plant. There is no need to stir of the wholesale value of the plants, so it will be readily seen that this is a subject of considerable interest to the man who does a large shipping business.

The average freight-handler does not display much respect for packages, whether they contain malleable iron fittings or plants, and it therefore becomes necessary to make packing cases strong enough to bear rough handling, and with this in view the greater number of plant cases are made of either half-inch or five-eighths-inch yellow pine lumber for the sides, top and bottom, and either three-quarter or one-inch lumber for the ends, lumber of this kind being perhaps the strongest for the purpose among the cheaper woods.

In some localities poplar boards may be had for a very low price, and is a much lighter wood for box-making, but has the fault of twisting or warping badly as it dries out, and does not furnish as good a hold for the nails as the pine. But in making the boxes one should use enough judgment to have the box of the right size for the lot to be packed, else the receiver of the goods is likely to show some righteous indignation on having to pay large freight charges on a half-filled box.

Another matter that may be worthy of consideration in our box-making is the fact that extra heavy packages are liable to be more roughly handled than those of moderate weight, and consequently, it is better to avoid as far as possible making cases that will weigh more than 400 pounds each when filled with plants.

The use of excelsior as a packing material has been already hinted at in these notes, and while its use is probably more general now than that of any other material for this purpose, yet it may be well to remark some of the reasons for this fact.

In the first place, excelsior is a clean material to use about our plants; in the second place, it is a good non-conductor; thirdly, it is not given to heating in the box, as does hay, when exposed to the moisture from the plants, and, finally, excelsior is readily procurable at a moderate price, say, about $13 to $15 per ton in single ton lots, and somewhat less than this in carload lots.

And another general remark in regard to the packing of plants is to pack them tightly in the boxes and to fasten them in place securely by means of cleats, so that when the box is dropped down on end suddenly there may be no disturbance of its contents.

The question of injury to stock in transit is one that comes up occasionally in the experience of every extensive shipper, and among the possible dangers are the rats that abound in many freight warehouses and on various steamship lines, some recent instances of injury of this character having been reported among some of the exhibitors at the Buffalo convention of the S. A. F.

This is rather a difficult matter to deal with during warm weather, from the fact that it is absolutely needful to give the plants as much ventilation as possible then, and in winter there is much less complaint from this cause on account of the boxes being nailed up tightly. But it is certainly safer in the case of a long-distance shipment in warm weather to fasten some screen wire over the openings in the boxes, in order to discourage the visits of rats and mice.

Of course, it is assumed by many people that a common carrier has some liability for goods in transit, though it sometimes seems as though this idea might be classed among popular fallacies when we note the results in the case of many efforts to collect damages from railroad and steamboat companies for plants damaged in transit.

The dislike of many buyers to having their plants turned out of pots for shipment may be readily understood when we take into consideration the many patterns of pots that are in use in various parts of the country, and the consequent difficulty of re-potting without using a larger size; and, in addition to this, there are many of the retail dealers who have not all the facilities for re-potting, or even space that may be conveniently used for such purpose. There have been in the past many slipshod methods in vogue in our business, but improvements are constantly being made in the packing and delivery of plants, not only in regard to shipments sent to a distance, but also in home deliveries, for example, in sending plants from the grower to the various retail dealers in his own home city.

The elaborate delivery wagons are not all in the hands of the dealers, though up to the present time the writer does not know of any liveried drivers in charge of the wagons of growers, a clean pair of overalls being, perhaps, the nearest approach in the matter of dress so far. But, possibly, the humble grower may rise even to that height sometime in the future. In the meantime he is paying much more attention to various details connected with the proper delivery of his stock. Plants that need tying are carefully staked, and not with a section of pine board split off with a hatchet, but with neat cane stakes, or else the painted article.

Decayed leaves are all removed, and pots are scrubbed clean, and the last is by no means the least improvement that is noted, for though the plant may be intended to be placed in a jardiniere, yet that is no sufficient reason for a filthy pot, that detracts several points from its selling value and makes it an unpleasant object for the prospective buyer to touch.

It takes some little time and labor to scrub the pots of a wagon-load of plants, but still there is a good deal of satisfaction in the appearance of such a lot and also in the fact that you are placing in the hands of the dealer stock that is really saleable and that is likely to encourage another order in the near future.

W. H. TAPLIN.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The finest chrysanthemum on our benches now, that is fully ready for market, is R. Hooper Pearson. It is a finely formed incurving variety of a delicious golden yellow color. The foliage perfect, down to the bench, with leaves deeply cut. Nearly all are perfect flowers and reach full development about the same. First flowers cut Oct. 25, last will be cut Oct. 30. Wholesale price, $4 per dozen.

Mrs. E. D. Smith, while promising fine flowers, is now showing a tendency to decay, if any dampness is present.

for two weeks. Its only fault is that it is too common, and does not sell as well as its size, form and color would seem to indicate, as the best wholesale at $3 per dozen. The most forward of Ivory and Dalskov are now ready. While they are small compared with the newer ones, the delightful form and pure color keep them still for the best ones and they bring the highest market price for their class. The best wholesale at $2 per dozen.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

New Early Chrysanthemum Opah.

We are growing Eaton and Appleton. The earliest of each are assuming form. Appleton is certainly the finest mid-season yellow yet offered. A little too late for convenient handling, but its large size and fine stem and rugged qualities indicate it the leader of its color.

Timothy Eaton, may be long survive and each day grow more portly. No flowers are yet developed. The most forward one tonight measures two feet in circumference, 17 inches from tip to tip over the top and 8 inches straight across. Its depth will still increase, but its circumference little if any.

Mrs. Robinson is now in and will be ram and Marquise de Montemort. The blooms are $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter, and can be cut as early as October 4. Buds taken early in August give white flowers; those taken after the 20th are bluish white with deeper center.

PROPAGATING CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

The importance of careful selection of the cutting was strongly impressed upon me by an experience two seasons ago. All our stock had the same treatment but some stools that had come from a very careful grower and had been benched with our own produced flowers very much superior to those on our own. And the present season I notice that cuttings that were not up to the standard at planting are the same now and that the largest buds are on the plants that were thriftiest at planting.

My plan is to grow plants in the field in summer, dig and carefully heel in in a well protected cold-frame or cold house until just before the time to start propagating. They are then planted out on a bright sunny bench, or for later work planted outside in April. J. O. E.

MARSHALL, TEX.—The first annual flower show of the East Texas Flower Association will be held in this city November 14 and 15. Mr. Homer Edgar is president and F. S. Riggs is secretary of the association, both of this city. F. W. Beach, of Dallas, will be the judge at the coming exhibition.

WEEDS IN LAWNS.

Will some reader of the REVIEW who has had experience in the matter tell through the REVIEW what is the best method to clear a lawn of chickweed? The lawn was made about fifteen years ago, part shaded and part open to the sun. Reasonable expense no object.

It is mown close with horse machine all the season. I will be glad to take advantage of anything that has a reasonable show of success and will report result. SUBSCRIBER.
Conn.

The best and cheapest plan, in the long run, to eradicate chickweed from a lawn, is to plow and give clean cultivation for one summer; and, seeing that the location is Connecticut, seed down in the latter part of August or beginning of September. There are advantages in the plan—it permits of enriching the lawn, and regrading, if such may be necessary. J. A. PETTIGREW.

NYPHAEAS AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

In referring to nymphaeas in a recent article Mr. Scott inadvertently states that the collection of nymphaeas are my own hybrids. He is aware that I have raised and disseminated several nymphaeas, but not being familiar with these, nor the varieties in our collection at Buffalo, he has sadly mis-stated the facts, as he only mentioned hardy varieties, having omitted altogether the tender ones.

In justice to our late and lamented friend and co-worker, James Brydon, who did so much to improve and popularize these and other flowers, allow me to state that Nymphaeas Wm. Falconer, Wm. Doogue and Jas. Brydon were raised by him, and the latter is named in his honor.

The following are of French origin: Nymphaeas gloriosa, sulphurea, sulphurea grandiflora, lucida, Robinsoni, Andreana, Aurora, fulva, Laydekeri purpurata, Marliacea chromatella, Marliacea rosea, Marliacea rubra punctata, Marliacea flammae and Marliacea ignea. Honor to whom honor is due.

A LEASE QUESTION.

I am leasing a greenhouse, plant, and finding it small to accommodate growing business and not being able to induce owner to build, I have put up two houses on the property myself.

At the expiration of the lease will I have the right to remove the houses, or part of them, or must I leave it as it stands? O. S. Y.

An answer to the question cannot be given without an inspection of the lease. Some printed forms have a clause requiring that all improvements and additions shall accrue to the lessor.

If the matter is not covered in the lease then the lessee can remove the greenhouses he built providing they are not on brick or stone foundations and are not attached to the original buildings. Your correspondent had better consult his attorney. W. H. B.

OBITUARY.

William G. Storrs.

William G. Storrs, one of Painesville's most prominent and respected citizens and owner of large interests in the Storrs & Harrison Co., of which he was vice-president and general manager, died Tuesday, October 22, at 12:30 o'clock.

Mr. Storrs was held in the highest esteem by all with whom he was associated, and his untimely death is generally deeply regretted. He was sixty-one years old and leaves a wife and four daughters.

Mr. Storrs was born in Courtland county, New York, January 19, 1840. In 1854 he came to Lake County, Ohio, with his brother, the late Horatio Storrs, and his father, Jesse Storrs, who founded the Storrs & Harrison nursery. He was educated in the Painesville high school and spent his early life here assisting his father in the development of the new enterprise.

August 22, 1861, he enlisted in Company G, Second Ohio Cavalry, and served until September 17, 1865, when he was honorably discharged. The early part of his service was in the western army at Fort Scott and at Indian Territory. He returned to Ohio in December, 1862, and recruited through the winter at Columbus. Leaving April 6, 1863, he went to Kentucky and joined the army of the Cumberland, operating through that state until fall, when he went with Burnside to Tennessee, being among the first to occupy Knoxville. Later he engaged with Longstreet's forces in Virginia, suffering many hardships. In April, 1864, he joined the army of the Potomac, and in May was with Grant's army in the battles of the Wilderness, Spotsylvania and Cold Harbor. In August, 1864, Mr. Storrs became blind with crabs, and after much difficulty secured his removal to Cleveland, where he recovered.

Then in December, 1864, he again joined his regiment and continued in the service until the close of the war.

The marriage of Mr. Storrs and Mary E. Post, of Painesville, was celebrated September 2, 1868.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The chief feature of the market this week is the improvement seen in the quality of chrysanthemums. They are now at their best in yellow, white and pink, with a probability that good reds and fancies will appear in a few days. To show that these choice blooms are appreciated it is only necessary to say that they bring from $2 to $2.50 a dozen readily. The finest yellow, Miss Florence Harris, a seedling variety of Wm. K. Harris, is bringing $3 a dozen and is easily the finest sort coming in at present. L. Hooper Pearson, J. E. Lager, October Sunshine and Mrs. Whilldin are other good yellows.

Various Items.

Independence and the other city squares have given away their summer bedding plants to many eager amateurs, who came in numbers and carried off geraniums and other plants in baskets. The work of cleaning up is nearly finished and the city forester will now plant the bed with bulbs. It may interest our readers to know the varieties and quantities used. All the bulbs furnished are named sorts and of good quality. Here is the list: Dutch Hyacinths—5,500 Gertrude, 1,500 Grand Maitre, 4,500 Alba Superbissima, 2,500 Charles Dickens, 500 Czar Peter. Single Tulips—1,200 La Reine, 6,000 Belle Alliance, 1,200 Keizers-Kroon, and 8,000 Narcissus Von Sion. Three-quarters of these bulbs are used in Independence Square, the remainder elsewhere. The firm of Henry F. Michell has filled this entire order, and also an order from Baltimore for 198,000 bulbs. In Baltimore also only the best named varieties are used, the cheap mixtures being found unsatisfactory.

time with them than in past years. The only point in favor of the above statement is that the centralization of large quantities of cut flowers causes greater depression in times of over-production, such as we naturally have in the fall, as the market grows larger. Of course, as an offset to this, prices in winter are higher than they used to be. Again, poor stock becomes less and less valuable year after year and is undoubtedly grown at a loss. The market is more critical and only good flowers pay; but good stock does pay better than it used to.

The neighborhood of Wilmington, Del., is supplying this market with quantities of fine carnations.

How is your arm?

Did it take?

George D. Clark, of the H. A. Dreer Co., is authority for a curious bulb story. His firm once sold a lot of Murillo tulips which the buyer flowered under glass; they came white and he insisted that they were La Candeur. He planted them outside and the same season they produced a second crop of flowers, this time pink, so he admitted that the variety was Murillo.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week were the three heaviest shipping days in the history of the Dreer place at Riverton. The freight shipping season is nearly over. It is an interesting fact that this firm systematically go over their daily weather reports, marking off each section unsafe for freight shipments as soon as it freezes up.

As an illustration of the appreciation in which good stuff is held, one of the street men paid $3 for one dozen chrysanthemum Miss Florence Harris this week, and he paid it willingly, too.

A number of prominent persons have visited this great shipping center during the past two weeks, among them Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit. PULL.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

Chrysanthemums: Plentiful and cheap. Best of them have been selling at $1 per dozen until very recently, when probably as high as $2.50 has been realized in a few cases. Early varieties going out and later kinds crowding in close behind.

Roses: Plentiful enough and cheap enough, although nearly all growers are cutting about as few as they expect to at any time during the season. A few best Beauties are worth $4 per dozen and are nearly three feet long. Smaller red roses continue to be very small indeed, but are good for their size. Extreme pink ones have brought $1.50 per dozen, but it takes a very good rose of any kind to command half that sum. There is also a grade that sells at only 50 cents per 100. All kinds and colors are now represented in the markets.

Pinks: Just about enough to keep things along. Best Lawsons, 3 cents, and the financial procession of prices has been filled all the way down to 1 cent or less.

Violets: This modest little atom of fragrance has been quite aggressive, selling rather the best of anything lately. Thirty-five, 50 and 75 cents per 100 and quality getting very good.

Candytuft still only a weed. Dahlias still coming in. Old Jack still being very dainty in his touches. Outdoor pansies and other quite hardy blooms quite Specimen Latania Borbonica, Exhibited by A. Herrington at the New York Show.

The best white is Mrs. Henry Robinson, which is superb. Leo Niessen had a great many of this variety on Monday and could have sold many more at $2.50 a dozen. Ivory, the best commercial white for every-day use, has just come. Willow Brook is another white. In pinks Glory of the Pacific and Pink Ivory are most frequently seen. The medium and poorer grades of chrysanthemums do not sell as well as the fancy blooms; 50 cents to $1 a dozen will buy this sort of stock anywhere.

The other changes noticed since last week are the very heavy shipments of choice lily of the valley coming in, the prevalence of outdoor flowers due to the long delayed frost and the brisk demand for white carnations, much more popular just now than colored varieties.

The American Rose Co., of Washington, D. C., have offered $25 in prizes for twenty-five blooms of Golden Gate rose to be shown at the chrysanthemum exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, which opens on November 12. It is probable that the roses entered in this competition will have to be staged at noon on the following day, November 13.

A local writer is authority for the statement drawn from a member of the trade that there is something wrong in the Philadelphia cut flower market. The same person goes on to say that the era of prosperity so noticeable in other lines of business is absent in ours. Several of the leading men in our business were questioned on this point; they all agreed that business was equal or better at this in evidence. We are evidently a warm community!

Mr. J. Geist takes the prize on first Harrisii lily of the season, one bloom which scores well on all points but stem. But E. N. Pierce & Sons are after him with 55,000 bulbs.

The stockholders of the co-operative market have finished their annual meeting, which was held on the installment plan. The second and last evening was entirely spent in consideration of the report of Messrs. Pierce, Elliott and Mathison, committee on new constitution. This went right along stitch by stitch just like an old lady knitting a mitten. Two stitches only were dropped in the whole fabric as knitted by the committee, which thereby felt much complimented, especially after a delicate vote of thanks had also been carried. The only other point taken up was when the gifted auctioneer of the corporation blithely Carroll-ed forth the oath of office to the newly elected officers. It was not very profane, no florists ever indulging in anything of that kind since Mr. Knapp's arraignment at the banquet, but it is hoped it will have the same general effect on the officials that the old fashioned swearing at might produce.

Of course a man who wields a public pen must wear a skin so thick that nearly all arrows of criticism will glance off into space, but if one whizzes by barbed with the diamond of reason and sent by a man whose mental and moral strength is worth considering, he must hold his ear close enough to hear it sing. Two or three of my chrysanthemum friends tell me I have quoted their wares too low in figures; that they have had some of the later varieties coming in now for some time, for which they have been getting good fat terms, sometimes as good as $3 per dozen. Well, we are all glad to learn of their prowess and hope their shadows and those of their goods may never be shorter. It is well, however, for one who is interested in my figures to remember that the REVIEW is published away off in the bounding west and gets around to this part of the geography a week late, by which time a little mental calculation is sometimes necessary.

J. S. MANTER.

NEW YORK.

The Exhibition.

We regret to say the flower show was a financial failure, to what extent cannot be ascertained at this writing. The reasons assigned are various, the fact alone is sufficiently lamentable. The palm, foliage plant, orchid and conifer displays at this show could not be excelled; they were extremely good, so were the carnations for the time of the year, but the display of roses—and we refer to quantity, not quality—would scarcely have represented an American village, and the retailers seemed to have almost unanimously agreed not to do anything but criticize. The chrysanthemums were exceptionally good, what there were of them.

The making of the show seemed to have depended on a few men. Julius Roehrs, W. A. Manda, Lager & Hurrell, C. W. Ward, Howard Nichols, Arthur Herrington, Wm. Duckham, W. H. Waite, Siebrecht & Sons, W. Anderson, Geo. Hale and Bobbink & Atkins are those who made this show, and they deserve the very highest praise for all they did. As to Manager Plumb, if there was anything to criticize about him it was the over abundance of good nature; he had a hard place to fill and he acquitted himself nobly. Walter Sheridan, James Withers, P. O'Mara, Harry Bunyard, John Young and a few others devoted nearly all their time to the services of the show and members of the club and florists in general should not think lightly of the herculean work they did. We, ourselves, must not forget to mention such men as Charlie Atkins, C. H. Totty, Vincent Fans; we regret we know not the names of the others, but they are the foremen, the men behind the guns, as it were, the actual growers of the flowers and plants shown; they may find some gratification at seeing their pets win, but they deserve recognition and praise.

There is always a thick rind growth of critics at a flower show, and though those who represent the press may be legitimate ones, we have no desire now to say anything except to, for the thousandth time, repeat that flower shows given and arranged from a cultural or trade standpoint will not attract the public. These shows must be more attractively put up and it is a question of either giving the people what they want or going on forever meeting disappointments.

We may have overlooked some name or exhibit in connection with this show; it is difficult and means hard work to cover all. Many a little gem of a plant is hidden and ignored, but it is not the reporters' fault.

Among the visitors in addition to the Philadelphia bowling team mentioned last week there were Robert Craig, William Craig and Walter Mott, of Philadelphia; Phil Breitmeier and J. F. Sullivan, Detroit, Mich.; J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; J. N. Champion, New Haven; James Roland, Nahant, Mass., and many others we unfortunately missed.

There were a few exhibits we must not forget. One was a fine display of pompon chrysanthemums from John N. May, Summit, N. J., and seed and bulb displays from Wm. Elliott & Sons, Clucas & Boddington and Weeber & Don.

Again let us thank the Florists' Club and Messrs. Chamberlain and Bunyard, of the press room, for the photographs and assistance rendered. Following is a list of the awards. Monday was plant day, Wednesday roses and violets, Thursday carnations, Friday made up work, Saturday cut chrysanthemums.

The handle was trimmed with great masses of Oncidium varicosum. Very broad cattleya ribbon was used for embellishment. It was very attractive and in addition to the prize was awarded a certificate of merit.

On dinner table decoration for 12 persons first prize was not awarded. Second was awarded to Bloomingdale Bros., whose table was decorated with Adiantum Farleyense and the new rose Mrs. Oliver Ames, and Mme. de Watteville. It was illuminated by electric fairy lamps. On bridal bouquet H. Hession was first and the Rosary Co. second. Both bouquets were of valley with cluster of Dendrobium formosum, with shower effects in ribbons. On best filled epergne W. The certificate of merit went to Wm. Duckham for Dracena Curtisii. Mr. May's rose attracted much attention and was praised from all. It is a sport from Mrs. Morgan and it is a beautiful delicate pink. It keeps very well and should be very popular.

The Market.

There is very little to record in the general news line. Business is in the half way stage. Mums are pouring into the market. Prices on the various established grades are as follows: Beauties, 30, 20, 15, 8 to 10, 3 to 6, 1; Brides and Maids, 8, 4 to 6, 2, 1; Meteors, 12, 10, 6, 3, 1.50; Victorias, 12, 8, 4, 2, 1; Gates, 6 to 8, 4, 2, 1; Carnots, 8, 4, 2, 1; carnations, 1.50 to 3; violets, 1.25 to 1.50; gardenias, 10 to 20; smilax, 8 to 12.

The flower shows at Madison, N. J., Poughkeepsie and Tarrytown, N. Y., are expected to be exceptionally good this year and growers of novelties should have their pets represented there.

BUFFALO.

Pan-American.

On Saturday at midnight the bugle will sound "lights out" from several parts of the ground and the most wonderful illumination the world has ever seen up to this day will give place to darkness. But the morning light will find again the fairy scene in all its beauty of color and architecture and then a few short hours and destruction will commence. We shall not take a hand in its destruction and are heartily glad of it. For the past twenty months our efforts here have taken our best thoughts and energy and it has not been in vain. Any one who fills the position

Carrington), 50 blooms one variety (with some grand Robinsons), and the Chrysanthemum Society's silver cup for 10 blooms of any one variety with Mrs. H. Robinson, the best ever shown in New York. Wm. Duckham entered with Mrs. J. R. Trainor, the largest blooms ever put up on this continent, but it lost on color. Middleton staged Appleton, as did also Herrington and Anderson. Brennecke and Powell showed Robinsons. They were all grand.

Wm. Duckham was first on 6 each of 6 varieties (with Yellow Carnot, Appleton, Robinson, Mme. Carnot, Mrs. J. B. Trainor and Soliel d'Octobre). Richter & Barton were first on 6 yellow (with Appleton). I. L. Powell was first on 6 pink (with Glory of the Pacific).

Ogontz, Pa., for the variety Josephine, a yellow, which scored 87 points.

J. Fay won the silver medal for 100 double violets, Thos. Devoy & Son second. F. Boulon won first on 100 single blue. The special of $50 for 600 Marie Louise was won by Stanton Rockefeller, Rhinebeck, N. Y., and he deserves special praise. The special for 25 Beauties was won by A. Farenwald, Hillside, Pa.

Certificates of merit were awarded to Geo. Field, Washington, for best exhibit of cut orchids (a splendid lot of blooms showing exceptional culture, the Vanda carulea being the best seen here this season); to L. Schmutz for large group of fine rubbers; to J. M. Keller, for group of stove and greenhouse plants; to H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, for a fine group of Clibotium Scheidei; to D. Clark & Sons, for two large Rhipis labelliformis; to Cottage Gardens, for Canna Black Beauty, Begonia Rex and Adiantum Charlotti; to W. H. Brower's Sons, for three plants of Ficus nidus;

Group of Orchids by W. A. Manda at the New York show.

I have, on any position connected with a great exposition, must not expect that it is all smooth sailing. There is sure to be lots of little kinks and friction, but the many kind words that have been received and above all the blossoms that have been the result of your work, has far outweighed all unpleasantness, and nothing but sunny memories of the Pan-Am. will be our inheritance.

These are the last notes, Mr. Editor, that I will have the pleasure of writing from this office and I have little time just now, for breaking up is a serious job and not half as pleasant as installing.

The chrysanthemum show with which we wind up the final week has been a decided success, and based on the only principle that every flower show should be, viz., cash premiums and competitive. A list of the prize winners is enclosed. The finest vase was fifty blooms of "Robert Halliday," the splendid yellow from E. G. Hill & Co. John Rudy, gardener to Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, of Elmira, sent twelve blooms of a grand yellow which he calls "Moon's Seedling."

Grove P. Rawson helped us out finely. His white "Egandale" is a beautiful flower, but his great attraction was a plaque about 8x6 feet. The groundwork was green moss, on which was a yellow vase in flowers and springing from it a beautiful lot of bronze and yellow flowers. The frame was bordered with ivy leaves to the breadth of a foot. On the ground on each side was a beautiful vase of flowers mixed with branches of our northern deciduous holly. A cluster of incandescent lights illuminated this picture finely at night, and what gave it all the best of setting was the large collection of palms of Henry A. Dreer in the background.

The local men came out in good form. W. J. Palmer & Son, S. A. Anderson, C. D. Zimmerman and W. Scott all competing in several classes, and it paid them for their trouble, and those that did not join in have themselves to blame, for there was money waiting for them.

Following are the awards: Fifty blooms yellow, first, E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., with Robert Halliday; second, Gunnar Teilmann, Marion, Ind., with Monrovia.

Fifty blooms pink, first, S. A. Anderson, Buffalo, with John N. Shaw; twenty-five blooms white, first, Gunnar Teilmann, with Evangeline; second, Grove P. Rawson, Elmira, N. Y., with Egandale. Twenty-five yellow, first, Gunnar Teilmann, with Col. Appleton; second, Charles Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y., with Robert Halliday. Twenty-five pink, first, W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, with Vivand-Morel; second, Grove P. Rawson, with John N. Shaw. Vase of fifty blooms arranged with autumn foliage, first, William Scott, Buffalo. Vase of twenty-five arranged with autumn foliage, first, Grove P. Rawson. Twelve blooms, new variety, John B. Rudy, Elmira, N. Y., with Moon's Seedling.

Plateau, first, C. D. Zimmerman, Buffalo; second, William Scott. Basket, first, S. A. Anderson, Buffalo; second, William Scott. Wreath, first, C. D. Zimmerman; second, William Scott. General display, special prize, Grove P. Rawson. W. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Cut flowers came in in great quantities the past week, and, although business is not booming, quite a number of flowers were disposed of at low prices. The market is overstocked with roses of all kinds and the common sorts of chrysanthemums. Southern grown mums are selling very cheap, with sales slow; the home grown stock, large blooms, brings from $2 to $3 per dozen, and the sales on them are reported as slow. Yellow mums had the call last week, and not enough in the market to supply the demand.

In roses Beauties are very fine, and some extra long stemmed ones came to this market the past week, which sold at $3 per dozen, and from that down to 60 cents, with more than enough to supply the demand. Brides, Maids, Meteors, Perles and other roses are fine, but the demand is slow, and they can be bought at low prices; $10 in 1,000 lots and $2 and $3 in smaller lots.

Carnations are not so plentiful as roses, and the demand is better. Our shippers are now sending in some very fine blooms of all kinds, for which they obtain a fair price; $2 for first grades and from $1.50 to $1 per 100 for seconds. Henry Ane's new white, St. Louis, brings $2.50 and is the best white in the market. The other growers are sending in good Scotts, Daybreaks and Flora Hills.

Violets are in fair demand, and quite a lot of them are coming up from the south. The home grown bring 35 cents, while the southern are selling at 20 and 10 cents per 100.

Some good valley is needed in this market, and some good valley growers would do well to make shipments to this city, as the demand has been good for these flowers the past week.

In spite of the dull business last week the wholesale men look pleasant and feel sure that trade will be better soon.

World's Fair Notes.

A few thousand men are now steadily at work in Forest Park clearing away the underbrush and fine large trees on the World's Fair site. By the end of this week ground will be broken and grading commenced on a large scale. Director of Works Taylor says that everything is now in shape to begin active operations on the grounds. The Agricultural and Horticultural buildings will be combined and will be the largest building of the exposition. The building will be partly on the Tesson estate, which belongs to Mrs. Tesson, mother of R. F. Tesson, the well-known florist of our city, whose large plant is on the property.

Visitors in Town.

Arnold Ringier, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., Chicago, is in town looking after his firm's interests. Arnold looks well and his trip to Europe did him lots of good.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., was in town Saturday buying supplies. Mr. Johann is sending some fine carnations to this market.

Mr. August Schuerman, of the Schuerman Floral Co., was hard at work all of last week decorating the large coliseum in the exposition building for the horse show, which opens tonight (Monday). Mr. Schuerman says the decorations are finer this year than ever before, owing to the fact that double the amount, or nearly $2,000, was appropriated this year for decorations.

We saw in the last issue of the Review a splendid picture of our friend Ed Winterson. It was an excellent move on the part of the Chicago club to elect him its president. He will, no doubt, make bowlers out of the whole club, including Edgar Sanders. The St. Louis boys unite with me in congratulating Mr. Winterson and the Chicago club.

Bowling.

The florists ran up against the real thing Monday night and lost three games to the strong Imperials. The boys seemed to be all out of form. They now have a lay off for ten days before the next match game with the Exchange team. Kuehn and Ellison were our high men and the following scores tell the tale.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The unseasonably warm weather has considerably increased the supply, especially of poor grade roses, and as the same influence seems to have curtailed demand to a marked degree the market is not in a very satisfactory condition. Local demand is very light for the season and this condition promises to continue until we have settled cold weather. With most of the retailers September averaged better than last year, but October promises to run behind. A good start for the season is hoped for next week when the horse show and the flower show will be held.

This week there has been considerable shipping to southern points, notably New Orleans, on account of All Saints' Day, but aside from this, outside demand has been rather light. As a result the market is full of stock, the best of which moves very well, but the great bulk of medium and poor grade roses are sold at very low prices. We hear of clean up sales of the latter and held over roses at as low as $2.50 to $5.00 per 1,000. At the same time the best selects will bring the quoted figures, $3.00 to $4.00 per 100. Owing to the open weather outdoor carnations are still coming in and they help to swell the cut of poor grade flowers.

The extra select chrysanthemums of fine varieties move very well at good prices, the best Appletons bringing $4 a dozen, but on medium grades prices are not as high as last year on the average and poor stock is jobbed off at any price offered.

Buyers will have no difficulty in securing an abundance of good stock in this market at present.

Various Items.

The annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society opens at the Auditorium next Tuesday. Every florist in Chicago and vicinity should be represented by an exhibit of some sort. The exhibition is a benefit to the whole trade and each one should do his share toward making this exhibition an advance on its predecessors. Among recently received special premiums is one of $25.00 from the American Rose Co., Washington, D. C., for the best vase of twenty-five blooms of Golden Gate rose. In class 185 best display of violets, Mr. E. E. Pieser offers an additional premium of $25.00, making the first premium $40.00. This violet competition takes place Friday, Nov. 8.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held tomorrow (Friday) evening. The new officers will be installed and final arrangements will be made for the annual banquet next week.

John Richter, of Duluth, has been in the city several days buying supplies for the store he is to open in Duluth next week.

Walter Kreitling & Co. arranged a very handsome decoration last Tuesday for a banquet at the Chicago Club, tendered to Mr. Schwab, of the Steel Trust. Orchids and choice greens were the materials used and $100 was the price.

The fakers have been offering pretty fair roses on the streets at 15 cents a dozen.

Bowling.

In the three games held last Tuesday evening the Totators won two from the Wheelabouts and the Growers from the Miscellaneous. Following are the scores:

CINCINNATI.

Trade Items.

The weather in this vicinity is having a slight depressing effect upon business. It is entirely too warm. Great quantities of stock are still coming in, especially is this true of roses. The past week saw more roses in this market than at any other time this season. Though the market was finally cleared up on Saturday it could be done only by putting the price way down. Even carnations which have been so scarce all this season made their appearance in greatly increased numbers and for the first time some were left over after the morning business. The price suffered in consequence and some very good ones went at $1 per 100. Fancies still held at from $2 to $2.50 per 100.

The supply of chrysanthemums is now equal to all demands made upon it. The warm weather is opening them very rapidly and this tends to have a demoralizing effect upon prices. From 75 cents to $2.00 per dozen according to quality are the ruling prices, and but few bring the top figure. The demand for mums is hardly up to the standard so far this year. But I believe this is caused more by the warm weather than by a lack of popularity of the flower. A good hard freeze is what we want most at present and I believe it will help things wonderfully. Some extra good Robinson are coming in and 20 cents is asked for them, but sales are slow at that figure. Small mums in sprays cut from plants are to be had now at $3 to $4 per 100 sprays. This is fine stock for funeral work and meets with a ready sale. Shipping trade is first class, showing that the smaller towns are awake and doing business.

The dry weather has caused the water supply of several of the boys to be very low. Wm. Murphy, who gets his supply from a large pond, reports that the pond is almost dry. Geo. Murphy, who takes his supply from a well, says that for the first time in his experience he has been able to pump the well dry. Rain is greatly needed and it can not come too soon. A good soaking rain followed by a cold snap is what we want most now. Then both growers and retailers will be happy.

Personal Notes.

B. P. Critchell is cutting some of the best mums to be seen in this market. Among them are a few Col. D. Appleton, one of the finest yellows I have seen, and is a mum that will bring a top notch figure at all times.

A. R. Aldrich, Springfield, Ohio, is sending in some very nice Robinson. For some reason Robinson does not seem to be taking the hold on the public that it did in seasons past. We can only attribute this to the weather and hope for better times.

Fred Gear had five baskets of flowers, over three feet across, for an actress who is playing in this city this week.

H. H. Ritter, Dayton, Ohio, and C. B. Dietrich, Maysville, Ky., were callers. C. J. OHMER.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Exhibition.

Next week the great flower show is to be held and nearly every florist in the city is preparing to show something and a great show of both plants and cut flowers is expected. This city has had no show during the last two years and the public seems to be deeply interested in this one. The papers are doing all they can to make the people want to see the show and if the weather is fit there will be great crowds at the Tomlinson hall. The state society has arranged to take good care of all visiting out-of-town florists and all such should report to the secretary immediately upon arrival.

Trade Conditions.

Business has been very good all around and good stock brings fair prices. Mums of course are in the lead just now and no good blooms are going to waste. The second carnations are now being cut and some very fine stock is being sent in by several growers. Robinson, Bassett and Perrin are the best just now, but in another week there will be a good assortment of midseason varieties in the market. The great Timothy Eaton seems to be late with everybody around here, and from present indications will be about right for Thanksgiving.

Carnations are improving rapidly and some very good blooms are seen, especially of several promising seedlings which are growing at several places either in second or third year.

Most of the rose growers have more or less mildew, which makes the stock look bad, although the buds are of good quality. Cyclamens are going to be fine this season, especially at H. W. Riemann's and at Baur & Smith's. The latter firm has some grand plants in 8-inch pots which should find ready sale during the winter. A. B.

MONTSORE, COL.—W. H. Franklin is starting in the business here. He is a brother of the senior member of the firm of Franklin & Crosby, Brooklyn, Conn.

Chrysanthemums at the Phipps Conservatory, Schenley Park.

Every year a chrysanthemum show is gotten up at the Phipps Conservatories and each succeeding year the exhibition is greater than before. This year it is grander than ever. About 12,000 plants, in 350 varieties, and all in pots, are grown for this show. The plants are mostly single stemmed and perfect in flower and foliage. They occupy an immense conservatory and are arranged for effect as regards grouping, color and display, and the varieties are all named with neatly written card labels tied on the stems near the flowers. This show is a gala season for Pittsburgh. It opened last Sunday (the 27th) and will continue for two to three weeks. Ten thousand people visited it the first day, and next Sunday between 30,000 and 40,000 visitors are expected to see it. Every newspaper in the city devoted much space to it, the Sunday papers giving long illustrated articles to it.

Besides the chrysanthemums special features are made of other plants, particularly of aquatics, economic plants, and orchids, and all are arranged and named and shown in a manner to attract the notice of the most uninformed as well as the learned. The pathways are so arranged that visitors must all go one way so there is no jamming or blocking and when a person makes the circuit of the main conservatories he has walked half a mile through the exotic treasures under glass. Altogether these Phipps Conservatory flower shows are a very pointed example of give the people something worth looking at and they will crowd to see it and the newspapers will give it unstinted notice.

Various Items.

The weather is fine and there seems to be plenty of roses; also mums, of which you can see quite a show at the two Ludwig stands in Allegheny market.

The mum show at Schenley Park conservatory is good and well arranged. Some extra large flowers of Simpson, Bryant and many other varieties are shown, which draw many visitors from among the florists.

Business at the stores is a little slack yet. Funeral work with some and decorations with others just about keep them busy.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Company is receiving a good deal of stock, principally roses. Carnations seem to be a little late with the growers this season, but they promise well.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Company, Incorporated, at Crystal Farm, Bakerstown station, P. & W. R. R., have been sending in fine roses and Beauties for some time now, shipping every morning. Messrs. Breitenstein and Langhans have been out to see the place and are well pleased with the looks of things there.

Fred Burki, at Bellevue, has been shipping a great many carnation plants the last few weeks. The plants are strong and healthy. He is well pleased with Lawson and Morning Glory. His thirty-six houses are well filled; early mums cut out and the space planted to smilax and sweet peas.

BAER.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Trade has been very quiet the past ten days. Nothing doing to make a demand for flowers except now and then a little social gathering, a small wedding decoration or an occasional funeral. Chrysanthemums are coming in slowly, but are inclined to be a little soft; demand for them is not brisk. American Beauties are very good for the season; Brides and Maids fair and demand hardly equal to supply. Carnations are scarce and short stemmed. Violets are small and the demand is not great. Weather almost like summer and outdoor flowers still blooming.

No chrysanthemum show here this fall, but all the boys expect to take in the big flower show at Kansas City.

Mr. Kidd's chief lady clerk ran off on short notice and entered the "United States" (got married) before Mr. K.'s return from Colorado.

Mr. Stuppy's roses and carnations are looking very fine. The latter are a little late in blooming but will have a big cut later.

A Meeting.

In order to give the florists an opportunity to meet Uncle John Thorpe, and to discuss flower show matters, a meeting was called by Mr. Taggart for that purpose last Saturday night, and we met, fifteen of us, in the reception room at Convention Hall. Mr. Taggart occupied the chair and opened the meeting by stating that $2,500 in premiums had been received and prospects were favorable for raising $1,500 more in the next two weeks. Communications and inquiries from prospective exhibitors were then read and acted upon.

Uncle John was asked to describe the most interesting features of the Chicago shows and to make a report on the progress resulting from his trip east. He was then given instructions to go and invade Indiana and Illinois for additional exhibits, and will not return here until Nov. 10.

The plans for fitting the immense hall for the exhibition as formulated by Mr. Taggart and Mr. Thorpe and the novelties they propose to introduce, all of which was approved by the florists as being in perfect harmony with a floral display, were next brought before the meeting. If these new features are carried out according to the present plans Convention Hall will on Nov. 18 be a veritable fairy land.

Mr. Geo. Kessler, our able park superintendent, very generously consented to assist the management in arranging the architectural effects.

Mr. Albert Barbe gave $25 to be added to the window decorating prize money.

Out of town florists are asking who is "the director general?" Mr. Taggart is a member of the firm of the Nebraska Clothing Co. and is rigidly a business man. He has the snap, the vim, and the magnetism and is persistent in all his undertakings. When he announces to the public that something more is needed in order to make his scheme a success he usually gets it. Mr. Taggart admonished us for not working together more harmoniously and urged the florists to organize a florists' club at once.

Visitors.

Kansas City sheltered thousands of visitors last week. The attractions were a horse show and a cattle show. The horse show was held in Convention Hall and drew an attendance of 60,000 people. Surely there are as many admirers of floriculture as there are of fine animals. Now, with finances plenty, and with brains and energy pushing the flower show, failure seems impossible.

Arnold Ringier, of Chicago, and Alfred Broman, of Independence, Mo., were visitors here last week.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its regular meeting October 21, President H. Plath presiding. The attendance was fair. The constitution and by-laws were read and passed after a few corrections. One section of the by-laws providing for the admittance of ladies to the society as honorary members was knocked in the rear. Mr. Jos. Thompson jumped to his feet and said that no one would let the ladies more than he did (no one doubted his word) and spoke at some length on the great good the ladies of San Francisco had done for floriculture but thought our society would flourish much better if composed of gentlemen only.

A chrysanthemum show will be held November 18 at the society's rooms, Mission Opera House. Our members are hardly prepared to make a show of chrysanthemums this year but the eagerness of a few to have a show has prompted the society to bang up a reasonable sum of money for a small show.

Mr. James Niven, of Thermal Vale Nurseries, exhibited a vase of his new white seedling chrysanthemum Dr. Curry, a fine incurved of the best of purest white; also a vase of Mrs. Ritson, the white sport from Cuyahoga-Morel. Both vases were much admired by the members. J. N.

THE KANSAS CITY SHOW.

The premium list for the big exhibition to be held in Kansas City, November 18 to 23, has been issued and it contains a long list of premiums of generous size. It is certainly a very attractive list to the exhibitor. One remarkable rose prize is for 100 American Beauties, 1st, $150; 2nd, $100; 3rd, $75. A special premium of $100 is offered for the best pink seedling carnation, which is to be named McKinley. Another special, not yet in the premium list but announced by Mr. Thorpe, is $200 for the best seedling rose produced in America. Copies of the list may be had by addressing F. J. Taggart, Convention Hall, Kansas City, Mo.

The chairmen of the committees on awards have been selected and are as follows: James Gurney, St. Louis; J. F. Cowell, Buffalo; Edwin A. Kanst, Chicago.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The florists of this city are being persecuted to some extent by an over zealous fruit pest inspector. We are told that we must comply with the horticultural law and give bonds the same as a nurseryman. The law also requires that we shall give 24 hours notice before we ship a consignment to any point within the state or import any nursery stock, roots, scions, plants, cuttings, flowers, etc., from any point without the state.

Are the florists of any other state subject to such laws? And will not such laws have a disastrous effect upon the business? The Commercial Horticultural Club of Seattle is considering ways and means of securing immunity for florists from the operation of this law. Any information or suggestions addressed to the secretary, Mr. J. Hopkins, this city, will be thankfully received.

A GLADIOLUS SALE.

The sale of the entire stock of gladiolus bulbs of M. Crawford Co., Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, to Betscher Bros., Canal Dover, Ohio, which was made last week, is a deal of considerable magnitude, there being involved in the transfer over 2,000,000 bulbs, over 50 bushels of bulbs and the correspondence and good will of the Crawford bulb business. Of this stock nearly three-fourths is standard mixtures, and most of the remainder is Groff's hybrids, this being, with one exception, the largest collection of this strain in the United States. There are a few thousand seedlings, some named varieties and part of the choice private collection Mr. M. Crawford has been making for years past.

Under the terms of sale the Crawford's future actions in regard to selling bulbs are entirely unrestricted. Betscher Bros. already owned a stock considerably larger than that included in this purchase, consisting of named varieties, fine hybrids and bulbs under color and mixed, and are now placed in a very prominent position among American gladiolus growers. C.

RICHMOND, VA.

The dull days are not quite over, but trade has kept up well and prospects for a good season ahead are bright.

There are some changes. John Toler's establishment has been pulled down and sold piecemeal to make way for a church building. Mr. Toler has gone to work for Jollywood cemetery. Harvey's houses have been through the auction mill and advertised, but not sold yet. Harvey bought two of the houses and is taking care of the others until a tenant arrives. John Laird has gone to Norfolk, Va., and Mr. Jones, Hammond's store man for so many years, has also gone to same place and opened up a store. Julius Froehner, another old land mark in the trade, is pulling up stakes to quit the city. His stock has been purchased by M. A. Whitty. This same concern has also bought the old Catlin greenhouses and removed them to their Brook Road property. Mann & Brown have made considerable improvements in their greenhouses and Hammond has added two more houses to his range. V.

TOPEKA, KANS.—The Colorado Nursery Co., which brought suit against J. W. Taylor for $4,000 damages, obtained a verdict for $795. The Colorado company claimed that it had a contract with Taylor for 50,000 trees and that between the time the contract was made and the time for delivery the price went up about 150 per cent, and that then Taylor claimed he had no contract and did not deliver the trees. Taylor claimed that he had some correspondence with the Colorado company, but that he had no contract.

WE HAVE received from A. Dietsch & Co., Chicago, a copy of their new catalogue of greenhouse building material and a folder containing illustrations of the Dietsch construction, patented by them. This substitutes two or three short spans for the usual wide house, there being no dividing walls and the gutters over the walks.

THE seed crops in Germany are reported to be very poor this season with the exception of pansies.

DO NOT fail to have a strong special adv. in the Annual Thanksgiving Number of the FLORESTERS' REVIEW, to be published Nov. 14, just two weeks before Thanksgiving.

BEGONIA LORRAINE.

The trade tells us that Begonia Gloire de Lorraine has come to stay, and we hope it has, for there is nothing lovelier in midwinter than this beautiful plant. So far, the most successful handling has been along the lines of a complete winter and early spring rest and June propagation.

We got our plants along in the latter part of June, and they are now in five-inch and some in six-inch, the picture of health and beauty. A medium loam (not very heavy, nor very light) with a sixth of leaf mould and rotted cow manure and a little charcoal has suited them finely.

They had scarcely any shade, were placed a foot from the glass, and had good ventilation at all times. They were plunged in sphagnum moss and the moss was occasionally sprinkled with nikoteen. Under these conditions they have thrived well, and will certainly be large plants by Christmas or before. J. O. E.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Violets have been in good demand, being used in New Haven on the occasion of Yale's bi-centennial.

Large quantities of first-class flowers were used at the funeral of Admiral Huxce last week.

President Roosevelt was a visitor last week in Farmington, a suburb of this city. A slight flurry in the trade was the result; however, Hugh Chesney was equal to the occasion. Mr. Chesney is the only grower of American Beauties in this section and he does them well.

Carnations are troubled by a small green worm eating holes through the young growth. Marquis seems to suit their palate about right, but tobacco dust liberally applied holds them in check.

Connecticut has sent to Buffalo this week 800 chrysanthemum blooms; 400 being sent on the 28th inst. contributed by the following:

Mrs. Elizabeth Colt, John Combs, Geo. S. Osborn, Alfred Whiting, G. W. McChmie, Thos. Dryden, Elizabeth Park Nursery and J. E. Huns, gardener for Jas. J. Goodwin. Special mention should be made of Mr. A. X. Pierson's contribution consisting of 200 specimen blooms.

Pres. T. J. McReynold, of the Hartford Florists' Club, has been the prime mover in Connecticut's exhibit at the Pan-American and certainly deserves great credit for his earnest work. O.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

Business is still active, especially in funeral work. Had a large funeral order from our Kentucky neighbor yesterday which kept all hands busy the whole afternoon. Would like to be kept just as busy every day during the winter.

Roses are looking well. Brides, Bridesmaids, La France, Perles and Golden Gates are just humping themselves, so to speak. The hold-overs are doing well in the way of bloom and growth; better than the young stock. Carnations are holding their heads up—seem to be slightly gone of themselves. Well, they are not to blame, as nearly everyone you see these days is troubled in the same way. Chrysanthemums are coming on nicely. The earlier varieties will be in bloom the early part of next month and possibly a few the latter part of this month.

Julius Niednagel has given up his store in town and moved his establishment to the corner of Lincoln and Kentucky avenues. He has four houses and his stock looks well.

Ben F. Kramer, at the corner of Eighth and Walnut streets, is doing a good business. He has one of the best stands in town in a good residence neighborhood and close to the union depot.

Wm. Blackman has one of the finest city stores in Indiana; everything is up to date. It is near the corner of Fourth and Main streets, a splendid location. He is always busy, as he desires to be. His greenhouses are on Slaughter avenue about three miles from the city hall.

J. H. Wade & Co. have moved from 124 Main street to 221 Upper Second street which is just around the corner from their former location. They are nicely located and expect to do a big business.

This special offer is made to reduce our stock to a certain limit of space which we can devote to this plant, and will be withdrawn as soon as reduced to this limit. Without a doubt, the demand for this, the most important and valuable of all winter flowering plants, will this season again be far in excess of the supplies now in sight.

While all the Lorraine Begonias are difficult plants to handle during the spring months, we know of no other soft wooded plant which grows so freely at this season of the year, and with the most ordinary facilities you will have no difficulty in successfully growing now, and flowering it at a handsome margin of profit for the holidays.

To give best results, the larger sizes, above three-inch, must be shipped in pots.

The Florists' Manual

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CANTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Exhibitions.

There were quite a few prominent florists who traveled long distances to visit the New York show for the purpose of seeing what was worth emulating, but it was a case of sad disappointment to all. The retailers left the show seferely alone. The principal reason the New York retailers didn't compete at the show, as given in personal interviews, is that the system of judging here is such as to be ignored by every man whose ability is worth considering. In several instances at the recent show the three judges had no less than twenty volunteer judges assisting them; even exhibitors "touched up" and arranged their exhibits whilst judges were passing on them. There may not have been anything amiss in the awards made, but the system is faulty.

We note in the classes for table decorations at the Chicago show a set price is put upon the materials to be used. That's very fine in theory but scarcely practicable. There is no one able to put a set price on this kind of work, because in every city there is a vast difference in price. How can a Bowery florist expect to get Broadway prices? And doesn't the same thing apply to all other cities? The only way to test ability and one that should be adopted at all shows, is to provide or confine all to the same amount or class of material and judge the arrangement.

In this week's issue you will notice illustrations of the work done at the New York show. There was only one table shown. The flowers were arranged just a little too high, there were too many cut ferns on the table, and the fern plants were too abrupt. All this is easy to avoid. You should always sit down and size up your decorations and be able to see over them or under them. The table was illuminated by electricity. This manner of lighting up tables at the present time is confined to club or stag parties; it is not yet adopted in first class private houses. We only mention this in answer to inquiries. You are at liberty to choose your own method at exhibitions, but every dinner table should be illuminated.

There were four bridal bouquets shown—all on the shower style. You will notice an abundance of ribbons on the prize winner. One had broad cream satin and narrow gauze, which makes a much lighter effect, another had white satin and same in narrow ribbon; it was too dense and would have hidden any dress. This ribbon business is sadly overdone. You need not consider this as the prevailing style of New York bridal bouquets. We have others more ideal on which ribbons play a very subordinate part. In fact if you want to do the right thing now, tie your bouquet with lace to match or harmonize with that on the bride's dress. Thorley is introducing chiffon lace over taffeta ribbon on fine work. He had some in his window last week embellishing chrysanthemums.

The basket of orchids shown would have been nigh an impossibility twelve or fifteen years ago. The handle was twisted with tissue paper, then bound in mauve ribbon. The sprays on the handle are Oncidium varicosum, the rest is Cattleya labiata and A. Farleyense. All the orchids were stemmed on sticks with wet moss; glass tubes might have been used to better advantage inasmuch as the basket had to stay on exhibition several days.

Notes.

Some very pretty window decorations are occasionally seen these days. In one more than twenty four hours and you can stick a few in almost anything. There are of course occasions where strict orders are given not to use these flowers, but the small retailer can use an immense quantity if there be any trade at all.

We know hundreds of cases where small growers retail their stock and often these men and women worry themselves over their inability to make things up equal to city styles. They will go to the village or travel to the city for ribbon, or to buy things inferior to what they have under their nose at home. You need never bother yourself about ribbons if you have plenty of greens. When you are tying a flat bunch of chrysanthemums select the stiff ones for the end and sides. We stick a No. 19 wire in the heads of the weakest. The majority of the flowers in a flat bunch should face up; their beauty is lost if you can only see their side. The heart of the flower is its center of beauty. A few clean sprays of ivy, asparagus or highly colored delicate autumn foliage is best to use, and never let the bulky particular case immense shower effects with Oncidium varicosum over white sash ribbon was most attractive.

Large chrysanthemums are the flowers most generally used and we are glad to note there is more attention, at least more regard paid to tender nerves. But what a blessing chrysanthemums are anyhow. We must not forget they are the poor retailer's savior on many an occasion, for whilst they are in season you have always something to fall back on, something that will keep in your store string twisted stems be seen. Finish the end of your bunch with a few choice flowers and vines.

A very beautiful casket cover was recently made by Stump on Fifth Avenue; Fränk Schlosskauf was the artist. Violet colored Porto Rican matting in double thickness was used instead of wire for the foundation. This was completely covered with wired and unwired violets. The ends of the covers were looped with garlands of Cattleya labiata. It was most effective. The matting matched the violets, was easy to arrange on, hung better and can be commended instead of the cumbersome heavy wire frame for this class of work.

Many will be anxious about what to use at show decorations. We can recommend John Cook's new rose "Baltimore." It is a great beauty, a white rose with a red heart. Then there is John May's Mrs. Oliver Ames, a grand light pink rose, and Liberty or Testout; Bridesmaids, Bride, Perle and such will stand a poor chance against the ones mentioned. Novelty is what you want, at least in flower; if you don't the people in your town do, and you had better get some of those available.

This is the time to look out for where you can get the right sized conifers to fill window boxes and vases. This class of work is always done in a hurry up way and usually with rootless shrubs that have been dug out of frosted ground with the pick ax. Such cannot be expected to live, and it is only the weather that helps to retain their color for a week or so. Have your conifers dug and shipped with care while the ground will permit, or arrange to have some put in sheds for use when wanted; you will need them later. This is a part of the business that should be worked up by suggestion and proper attention.

We haven't much that's new this year so far. Some of the Broadway florists have been showing fancy cut flower boxes elaborately trimmed with ribbons and sprays of flowers. These are used only for special occasions. They are good to make a first impression with. Plant trade promises to be very good. Clean, sturdy stock is selling well. IVERA.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

I have been interested in reading Mr. S. Vesey's notes on the times the varieties flower with him. I note he remarked that Robinson will be in by Nov. 1st. Now we always commence cutting by the 20th of October and can at that time always command a price of $5 a dozen. Markets differ, of course, but we can find nothing in its season to take the place of Robinson.

This variety took the silver cup offered by the C. S. A. this year, and a more perfect lot of flowers could not be staged; every flower was exactly 22 inches in circumference and 22 inches over. Let anyone having what he thinks are pretty good flowers, measure a few of them and see how many come up to this standard.

Soliel d'Octobre as an early yellow is a hard variety to beat. Crown buds were developed by October 15 and of perfect form and finish. No grower can make a mistake in planting this variety extensively.

Closely following on Octobre comes Sunderbruch, and while this is an old variety, its fine color and artistic finish make it a ready seller with us. It was ready for cutting by October 20, and at this date, November 2, is still in excellent shape, what few are left.

Hurrell is a very fine second early yellow, and we are now cutting it extensively. The color is good and keeping qualities excellent. It is essentially a commercial variety for it produces no culls, and the entire bench can be cut clean away, and marketed as good flowers.

Appleton certainly is a handsome thing and is also a variety that will produce a good flower from every stem. We commenced cutting on October 24 and almost the entire cut averages the same in size of flower, 20 to 21½ inches in circumference, and 20 inches over. Appleton has a trick of sending up a few petals in the center of the flower above the surrounding petals, but if the flower is left on for a few days, the other petals will come up and make the flower symmetrical enough for all ordinary purposes. This variety is today certainly the best yellow we have. Its one time rival, Gold Mine, seems to have dropped out of sight.

I agree with Mr. Vesey in his statement regarding Mrs. Elmer D. Smith. It certainly does damp easily. We will not condemn it harshly, however, without another trial, for it is a splendid color, and as perfect in form as Bonnaffon, whilst coming as large again. If it were not for its damping propensity it would beat even Appleton, for Appleton looks very pale in color alongside of it.

Trainer L. Park has made a fine growth this year, but the flower can hardly be called a success. It is heavily streaked with bronze and is very rough at present. Park will carry us on till Wedding is ready, and this is our latest yellow, and still unbeaten in its class.

A yellow that was put up before the New York committee last week under the name of Josephine, turns out to be simply Robt. Halliday. The committee added a rider to their report stating that the variety resembled Halliday, and anyone seeing the two together can see that they are one and the same thing.

A pink (of European introduction unless I mistake), Mrs. Coombs by name, has made a good impression and will be tried more extensively next year. We are very shy on pinks and this variety is a good shade of color. It resembles Morel in style and color but the petals are broader. Ready for cutting October 24.

In whites we are just through with Robinson, which has been phenomenally fine, and now have Weeks, Madam Deis and Mrs. J. Lewis all ready for cutting. Weeks, as everyone knows, is very soft and has to be handled as tenderly as a new born babe if it is to be kept from getting bruised.

Mrs. J. Lewis is very pure but not large enough and will not be grown again.

Madam Deis is a loose, graceful reflexed variety that produces a wonderful flower from a very thin stem comparatively speaking. It is not one of the types that become popular as commercial varieties, but is all right for a limited first class trade nevertheless. The crown bud should be taken in handling Deis. It is far the most satisfactory bud. This variety is almost an exact counterpart of an older French variety, Mdlle. Therese Rey, but a much easier thing to handle.

What shall we say of Eaton, the "giant" white? It certainly is a very giant among its fellows. I have handled many mums but never one like this. The flowers will not be developed for a week yet but they are simply enormous at the present time. Many of them are already 24 inches in circumference, and 23 inches over. It seems to us that the introducer, Mr. Miller, did not begin to bring out the possibilities of this variety so far as size is concerned. And our flowers are finishing full and perfect in the center without that eye, that Wanamaker center, that we heard so much of last fall.

The plants range from 5½ to 9 feet in height, according to the bud taken, and in our thousand plants the percentage of loss is very slight indeed. It makes all the difference in the world whether a variety produces 95 or 75 per cent of fine flowers, from a financial point of view.

Nellie Pockett produces a very fine flower from the crown bud, but the later bud is deficient in petalage, and shows an eye as soon as developed. It is a very artistic flower and of ideal habit, but coming in as it does with Robinson on October 20, is not of so great value as it would be a little earlier.

A new variety to us that we will give a more extended trial next year, is Miss Alice Byron. The flower is on the style of Weeks, equally as pure in color, and with a full center. It will easily supplant Weeks if it will assume a little more robust habit.

The season has so far been very good for the perfect development of flowers. Bright days and cool frosty nights without damp and fog, and the net returns ought to average up better than for the past year or two. BRIAN BORU.

JUDGING BY POINTS.

Just a few words in reference to the matter of judging chrysanthemum novelties by points.

I have felt for years that it was not just to give a variety such as Iolantha 85 points, when such sorts as Timothy Eaton and Mrs. Elmer D. Smith receive only 95 or 96 points. Judged by the same standard a conscientious judge could not give the first named variety more than 75 points unless he gave the last named sorts over a hundred, and as there can be but one scale for all and as the extra early ones are the money makers, and we all want them as fast as introduced, I suggest the following plan as a practical way to overcome the difficulty.

Score an early variety as severely as a midseason sort, giving it simple justice, and taking November as our standard of judgment, work backward from November 1, giving two points for earliness for each seven days backward from November 1, the same to be added to the number of points honestly won, judged by the high standard of a November variety.

For instance, if a sort scores on Oct. 3, 77 points, that variety would be entitled to 8 points for earliness. The 8 points added to the 77 would bring the score up to 85, which would entitle the variety to a certificate of merit, and purchasers of the sort would understand the facts in the case without any footnote of recommendation from the judges.

Had the committee judging "Opah," for instance, given it 79 points on merit and 8 points for earliness, to which it would be entitled according to my plan, it being in by Oct. 2, it would have secured a certificate, and when I purchased the variety I would know just what to expect of it.

I trust I have expressed my thought and plan clearly, and would urge any one having a better plan to suggest to bring it forward at once that the present difficulty may be overcome before another October rolls around. I some time since called the attention of President Herrington to this plan and he gave it his approval, but did not wish to bring the matter before the society as his own suggestion and advised me to place the plan before the chrysanthemum world through the medium of the trade press, and as I think this an opportune time I trust you will give space in the Review to my suggestion.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

During November the dates for committees to examine seedlings and sports are Nov. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30. Following are the committees:

Boston, Mass.—A. H. Fewkes, chairman, care John Welsh, manager Boston Flower Market, Park street; E. A. Wood, J. H. Wheeler.

New York, N. Y.—E. Dailledouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Co., 26th street and 6th avenue; James W. Withers, C. Albert Small.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1514 Chestnut street; Wm. K. Harris, John Westcott.

Chicago, Ill.—James S. Wilson, chairman, care J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue; Geo. Stollery, E. Weinboer.

Cincinnati, O.—Albert Sunderbruch, chairman, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., 416 Walnut street; James Allen, E. G. Gillett.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

Anyone having a variety in season before or after dates fixed can have the same passed upon by specially notifying the chairman of committees.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 2.—Wm. Paul Binder, Rider, Md., exhibited Sirius, a white, reflexed variety, which scored 86 points commercial scale, 84 points exhibition scale.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—H. A. Molatsch, Brooklyn, N. Y., exhibited No. 62, light bronze, Japanese incurved, scoring 82 points commercial scale.

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—George Hollis, South Weymouth, Mass., exhibited a white, cream centre, Japanese variety which scored 87 points commercial scale. The name of this variety will be announced later.

Respecting the Josephine report of the New York committee, which appeared in your columns and not in any of the other trade or horticultural papers, beg to say that same was owing to the committee's request to withhold report not reaching your office in time. Said committee stated they believed the variety identical with Robert Halliday. When Mr. Kleinheinz was advised of the action of the committee, he wrote as follows:

"OGONTZ, PA., Oct. 30, 1901.

"Mr. Edwin Lonsdale, Secretary Chrysanthemum Society of America.

"Dear Sir: In reply to your letter of the 28th inst., I beg to say that I never saw Chrysanthemum Robert Halliday until recently; consequently, could not grow the Josephine and Halliday together.

"I feel sorry that the committee in New York did not see the difference between the two varieties. Admitting that they resemble each other to a certain extent, there is enough difference to be seen that Josephine is distinct from the other, and I am not a bit afraid to grow the two varieties together next year, and then I will show on the bench to any committee, wherever they come from, that Josephine is far superior to Robert Halliday.

"Josephine is a cross between The Queen and Golden Wedding. The cross was made in the fall of 1897.

"Hoping this explanation will be satisfactory. I am Yours truly, (Signed) WILLIAM KLEINHEINZ.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

A handsome special prize is offered by Mr. W. A. Proctor, Cincinnati, Ohio, for competition at the exhibition of the society to be held in Indianapolis next February. It is a silver vase valued at $100.00, offered for the best separate collection of commercial varieties of carnations, no more than fifty or less than ten of a variety to be staged. Premium will not be awarded for fewer than ten varieties, collection to be grown by exhibitors.

Any further information desired about this premium or about the meeting can be had by addressing Albert M. Herr, secretary, Lancaster, Pa.

The annual Thanksgiving number of the FLORESTA REVIEW will be issued next week. Send ads. at once.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lilies.

It is not safe to leave your Japan and Bermuda lilies exposed to too severe a frost. They are considered hardy, or almost; but we have produced by our growing them in pots a growth that can be hurt by a severe frost, and those that are in frames should be protected. Easter is so early this year that I would advise those that have but a limited control of temperature to get their Easter crops into the greenhouse as soon as they have room. The earliest 5 to 7 bulbs will soon be giving you flowers and from now on there will be no intermission. The early crops are not so often troubled with aphids but regular fumigating is the only way to be sure. As has been often remarked, when the aphids are down in the heart of the young growth, and that is where they "love" to feed, fumigation hardly reaches them and a solution of nikoteen syringed into the centre of the crown will do more good.

Geraniums.

The cutting of chrysanthemums will give you much needed room and don't forget to stand over all your geraniums in 2 or 2½-inch pots as soon as you have the time. A small percentage will be dead and many dead leaves will be on them, and they will be all crowded. It is wonderful what a benefit it seems to them to stand them over and give them a clean up and a little more space. They may seem a very secondary crop to you just now but they are of the first importance when next May comes.

Spirea, Lilac, Etc.

Very soon the last of the importations of shrubs and lily of the valley will be here. I once lost a fine lot of spirea by its being exposed to nearly zero weather soon after it was unpacked. Spirea, viburnum, lilac and Ghent azaleas can be considered hardy under ordinary circumstances but after two weeks in the hold of a vessel they are little prepared for a sudden and hard frost. There is no advantage in potting these plants when received; they will do very well in a cold frame with their roots well protected and glass over them. Those that have a cold house or cellar have still a better place. These deciduous shrubs make no roots during winter so potting just before you begin to force is time enough, but take care of them.

Rhododendrons want a little better than a cold-frame; somewhere about or a little above the freezing point will do for them and they must not be allowed to get very dry at the roots for they are evergreen.

Lily of the Valley.

So much of the lily of the valley grown and sold is handled by the man who grows hundreds of thousands or millions that the care of a few thousands seems of little consequence. From Jan. 1st to June 1st, we depend on the importations of the previous fall, and there is little trouble in handling it. Unpack at once and soak the roots of each bundle for a few moments, then store away in boxes 5 or 6 inches deep with some sand or soil between them. Cover the tops with 2 or 3 inches of moss and place the boxes in a frame and cover with sash or shutters, the latter preferred. They want neither the light nor heat but they don't want rain on them. In boxing it is well to have the right quantity in a box that you want to force in each week or twice a week; then it is convenient to bring in just the quantity you want, and more convenient than in a trench for they may be frozen hard and difficult to get at.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.

By this time you should be thinking of your Xmas crop of carnation blooms and you should do all you can to get them into as good condition as you can. If any varieties are a little backward you can hurry them along somewhat with the aid of a few extra degrees of heat and a few light doses of food. We do not make a practice of trying to work you may be sure that they will need a certain length of time to recover their normal vigor and the harder they are forced the more time they will need to recover. Every year we notice a lot of poor soft stuff come in after the holidays from growers who had been cutting elegant stock before the forcing commenced.

One can hardly be blamed for raising the temperature a few degrees to help open up a few hundred extra blooms when they are bringing double the regular price, and this can be done without injury to the plants if a good deal of judgment is exercised in the operation. We will write of that later, but now you want to get all your varieties into bloom by Xmas at the very latest. If necessary raise the temperature a few degrees to hurry up the growth and give a sprinkling of slaked lime to help keep the stems strong.

If the benches are not all mulched it will do the plants good and will hurry them up some to give a light top-dressing at this time. Don't put on as heavy a mulch as you do in spring, or early in the fall, as it is not needed. Half as much is plenty as a food for the plants and it will allow the soil to dry out much quicker. Those that were mulched in September can stand a sprinkling of bone meal mixed with soil. Mix about one part bone meal to three parts of soil and allow it to lay a few days and then throw a good handful between each row of plants and give a good watering to help wash it into the soil.

our carnations for special heavy crops for Xmas and Easter regardless of what we may be able to cut between or after those dates. We need a steady supply of high-grade blooms right along and we find that we cannot expect such a supply from plants that have had to go through a spell of forcing for every special demand that comes along. If you force your plants unduly at one time

ROSE NOTES.

If the soil has been in hearty condition at planting time and the house given proper attention since there will now be a nice growth on the plants, accompanied also by a luxuriant crop of weeds. The benches should be allowed to become moderately dry and the weeds pulled out. While in this condition the soil can be packed firm by treading the surface evenly all over, taking care not to tread so near the plant as to injure the stem. On benches when there is not enough headroom for this a brick can be used; the surface should then be stirred all over to the depth of an inch and given a good watering. Plants in a growing condition at this season of the year require copious supplies of water. To encourage evaporation and insure rapid growth the benches should be stirred at least once a week.

Staking and tying are the next operations to be attended to. This should be done while the plants are yet small. If they are allowed to grow and scramble all over the bench the wood gets sprawly and the eyes break weak. Spider will also find shelter from which it will be almost impossible to dislodge it. The most up-to-date support is galvanized wire, both for stakes and horizontals. A very neat way of arranging the supports is to make an upright frame of inch piping, consisting of two uprights and a crossbar, joined with elbows, the crossbar to be four or six inches narrower than the bench and to stand 28 inches above the side boards, the uprights to be sunk in the ground six inches. One placed at each end of the bench and No. 16 galvanized wire stretched over each line of plants, to keep the wires from sagging, a support made of $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch gas piping, same shape as the end frames, and placed at distance of 12 feet apart and tied to the horizontal wire, makes the thing complete.

To improve the appearance of the frames they ought to have a coat of white paint. This, while more costly than the old cane stakes and wooden frames is much easier to remove, and put up again after planting and is practically indestructible. Stakes of galvanized No. 6 wire 3 feet 3 inches long are then placed by each plant and tied to the horizontal wire. For Beauties there should be a double tier of wires, one at 28 inches above the bench and one at 4 feet.

Tying should never be neglected and ought to be done in a tidy and sensible way, each stem tied separately, so that the air can circulate freely among the leaves and not tied around the stake broom fashion.

To keep the plants in a good growing condition cultivate regularly, and tying properly attended to is now the grower's principal work. Disbudding will also claim attention. Until the plants are strong enough to bear a crop the buds formed during the summer should be taken off as soon as they are showing color. This should be done with a sharp knife or pair of scissors, cutting off along with the bud about one-half of the stem; this leaves those eyes only which are strong and nearer the plant to break. By treating the young plants in this way they will make less blind wood and more strong flowering stems for first crop.

RIEBS.

THE CHICAGO EXHIBITION.

The annual exhibition of the Horticultural Society was opened at the Auditorium last Tuesday. The display of chrysanthemum blooms is a grand one, containing many remarkable flowers. The bush chrysanthemum plants are rarely in good shape, the date being evidently a week too early for the variety. The single-stem plants are more nearly in condition and as a rule they are equal to those of former years.

A feature of the large foyer is a special display by Walter Retzer & Co., covering considerable space. There is an arbor covered with wild smilax from the outside of which water falls from the greenery which is interspersed with colored electric lights and the effect is heightened by a lime light which reflects a glow upon it. In front of this is an arrangement of various decorative plants set upon a field of tan bark. The effect is attractive and decidedly novel. The rest of the foyer is devoted to the display of posters and to two decorated booths at which beives of young society ladies dispense cakes and other souvenirs for sweet charity's sake.

The arrangement of the Auditorium proper is much the same as last year, the large Pullman group of palms, etc., occupying a central position. There are not so many decorative plants this year as last and one misses the special displays by retail florists which have been so strong a feature of recent years. There are two good groups of fine geraniums in pots and a fine bed of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine from S. Muir (grown by Jos. Reeve), that attracts much attention. John Reardon shows some fine cosmos in pots. Mr. Uiblein makes an interesting display of orchid flowers frozen in a cake of ice and another of plants in bloom protected by a glass case. There are some good collections of primroses and cyclamen and miscellaneous plants, a well bloomed grafted chrysanthemum and some oddities in the way of tomatoes in variety grafted on the potato, also egg plant on the same stock.

Chrysanthemum Blooms.

The main interest professionally centered in the chrysanthemum blooms and the quality averaged very high indeed. In the International competition Poehlmann Bros. were first in Illinois, their varieties being Col. D. Appleton. Mrs. O. P. Bassett, Viviani-Morel, M. Wanamaker, Bonnafon, Lady Hanham, Timothy Eaton, Mme. Perrin, Mrs. Murdock, Golden Wedding, Mrs. Robinson and Pemsylvania.

E. G. Hill & Co. were first in Indiana with Fee du Champsaur, Casco, H. L. Sanderbruch, Brutus, Mrs. E. D. Smith, Orizaba, Morel, Merza, Appleton, Eaton, Nyanza and F. Rey Jouvain.

Nathan Smith & Son were first in Michigan and also won the sweepstakes, with Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mrs. E. D. Smith, Yamariva, Idavan, Orizaba, Lady Anglesly, Iora, Timothy Eaton, Kate Broomhead, Col. Appleton, Chito and Mrs. Coombes.

A. Herrington was first in New Jersey with Bonnafon, Mme. Deis, Kate Broomhead, Jeannie Falconer, Mme. Carnot, Yellow Mme. Carnot, Chenon de Leebe, Timothy Eaton, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. T. L. Park, Col. Appleton and Mrs. Coombes.

Theo. Boek was first in Ohio and Otto Spield, gardener to Mrs. P. D. Armour, Jr., Oconomowoc, was first in Wisconsin, both with good lots of blooms.

Timothy Eaton is very much in evidence among the cut blooms this year and some flowers are truly enormous. One of Mr. Hill's blooms of Eaton measured 23 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches in circumference and 17 inches over. Several other blooms of this variety were measured that ranged from 20 to 24 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches in circumference and from 13 to 15 inches over the top. A Mme. Carnot in Mr. Herrington's lot was remarkably deep. It measured 21 1/2 inches in circumference and 18 inches over the top.

But though Eaton certainly takes first position as to size Mrs. Robinson is still at the head for color, form and finish. Eaton shows an unfinished center as a rule, though this imperfection is less noticeable this year than when shown last year by the originator. Eaton is certainly a most decided acquisition and it will probably improve in finish as the growers come to understand its peculiarities better.

The classes for 25 blooms of a variety made a grand feature. But the exhibitors were somewhat wearied by a new rule requiring the entries to be judged twice, once on the opening day and again twenty-four hours later. This rule might be useful in the case of carnations taking second with the same variety.

For 25 pink H. W. Buckbee was first with Viviand-Morel, Poehlmann Bros. Co. taking second with the same sort.

For 25 red E. G. Hill & Co. were first with Geo. W. Childs and H. W. Buckbee second with Black Hawk.

For 25 bronze Poehlmann Bros. Co. were first and Hill & Co. second. For best 25 any other color Poehlmann Bros. Co. were first with Mrs. O. P. Bassett.

N. Smith & Son were first and E. G. Hill & Co. second in class for 12 varieties one-bloom of each.

For best 6 white Hill was first and Poehlmann second, both with Eaton.

For 6 yellow Vaughan was first with Appleton and Poehlmann second with same variety.

For 6 pink Jos. Labo was first with Morel and Vaughan second with Yana-

Vaughan was first on grafted plant and 3 standard geraniums; M. A. Ryerson on 12 white cosmos, 12 pink cosmos and pair Acalypha Sanderi; S. Muir on 5 Glory Lorraine legonias, 25 Primula obconica, collection of ferns and 6 Araucarias; Kalous Bros. on 10 cyclamen; F. Bahr on 25 Chinese primulas; E. G. Uihlein on collection of orchids and 2 dracaenas; J. J. Mitchell on 2 araucarias and 2 crotons; A. S. Trude on 2 other decorative plants; Mrs. Geo. M. Pullman on display of decorative plants arranged for effect; Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum (N. A. Schmitz, gardener) for group decorative plants open to commercial florists only.

Notes.

The display of roses on Wednesday was very good and the competition interesting. They must be passed upon again Thursday by the judges before awards are announced.

On Wednesday began the competition in table decorations. The only one in which award has so far been made is in the first of the specials offered by the lady judges for the decoration that would be supplied to customers, for $12. A. Lange won first and Walter Retzer & Co. second. The table decorations are almost solely low center mounds of chrysanthemums. The continued demands of the lady judges during previous years for simplicity has evidently resulted in deterring any competitor from deviating from the very simplest form. It is interesting but not very educational.

In addition to the special display in the foyer Walter Retzer & Co. have arranged a bower of greenery illuminated with electric lights on the upper floor.

VINCA VARIEGATA.

For many years the trailing vinca has gained in popularity for edging vases and boxes and last year it was not over plentiful. Perhaps it is not generally known that, being of a deciduous nature, it should be treated accordingly.

Those who pride themselves on their fine window box filling will use only good plants and they must be not less than three feet long and well grown and colored. Yet the market is full of short, stubby plants 12 to 18 inches long and scrawny.

In the fall they generally average alike yet by spring the difference is apparent, and why? Not noting their deciduous character the plants are dug up, cut back and the growth forced before the plant has had a chance to ripen and store up within itself strength to make its new growth. They should be allowed to gradually die back to the crown shoots and then these would break of their own accord.

Feeding at this time also helps materially and even if the room occupied by the bulk of the plants in the fall is considerable it is more than repaid by the condition and appearance of the plants in the spring. J. O. E.

or roses but it seems rather absurd as applied to chrysanthemums. As a result the competitors were unable to display any awards won until the second day.

In the class for twenty-five white E. G. Hill & Co. entered some immense Timothy Eaton; Poehlmann Bros. some of the finest Mrs. Robinson we have ever seen (they ran about 18 inches in circumference and 13 inches over, and of very fine color and perfect form). Anton Then and Bassett & Washburn grand Eatons, and H. W. Buckbee, John Felke, Sr., and Peter Reinberg excellent Robinsons. It was a case of Eaton and Robinsons.

Size won, E. G. Hill & Co.'s Eatons taking first and Anton Then's Eatons taking second.

For 25 yellow N. Smith & Son were first with Appleton, Poehlmann Bros. Co.

riva. For 6 red Hill was first with Casco and Poehlmann second with Shrimp-ton. For 6 bronze Jos. Labo was first with Chas. Davis and Smith & Son second with Kate Broadhead. For 6 any other color F. Bahr was first with Mrs. W. C. Egan and Otto Speidel second.

In the class for best collection, one bloom each, not less than 40 varieties, there were some strong entries. E. G. Hill & Co. were first, N. Smith & Son second and H. W. Buckbee third.

Plants.

In chrysanthemum plants the premiums were divided between M. A. Ryerson (John Reardon, gardener), A. S. Trude, J. J. Mitchell (Geo. Woodward, gardener), J. C. Vaughan, Gunnar Teilmann, S. Muir and Hill & Co.

Groff's Display of Hybrid Gladioli at the Pan-American Exposition.

GLADIOLUS.

Exhibit by H. H. Groff of Simcoe, Ont., and Arthur Cowce of Berlin, N. Y.

This illustration, which gives but a partial view of their wonderful exhibit, is sent you rather late. The display began about the middle of July and was kept up to the end of September. In all they exhibited a quarter of a million spikes. The first month or six weeks the flowers came mostly from Simcoe, Ontario, and latterly from Berlin, N. Y.

As is well known, Mr. Groff is the hybridizer, and to say that he is an enthusiast is putting it mildly. Though the busy manager of a bank he has found time for the past five years to work diligently on his favorite flowers, and the result of his work is marvelous. I will not attempt to describe any of them because the varieties were limitless and the size of flower was as remarkable as the coloring. Mr. Groff is ably assisted by his cultivator, Mr. John A. Campbell, and ten acres were devoted to gladioli the past summer. Mr. Cowce cultivates the approved varieties and this summer there was just thirty acres of gladioli at Berlin. Mr. Groff's seedlings are now sent to every land where the gladioli can be grown.

The display these gentlemen made at the Pan-American at large expense to them was of the greatest value and attraction to the floral part of the show. It is also very pleasing to see two such fine men making their hobby one of our most beautiful and decorative flowers. May they reap in abundance something more than glory. W. S.

PRIMULAS.

Every year our customers scan our primula bench from Thanksgiving to Christmas and pick out the earliest bloomers and the brightest colors. We cannot sow till June, and we always seem to have the biggest call for primulas before Christmas. There are several grand varieties that flower well in four and five-inch pots, sown in June, namely, dark blood-red, pure light pink, white and rose, and we should make it a point to always buy separate named kinds of early varieties for this purpose. Then, if they are not allowed to get pot-bound, and we use a good, open, lumpy soil, not rammed too tightly, we can clear out by Christmas for lilies or other stuff and make primulas profitable by not occupying benches with them from March until February. I find selected American grown seed much the best. J. O. E.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

[Oct. 28—Nov. 2.]

The end of the week found the chrysanthemum season about at its height, I imagine; and while every conceivable price is being taken for them still a few dozens command a tall figure—$4 being the best I have known. But one dollar still purchases an awful good dozen of them.

Red roses of all kinds are becoming more plentiful and of better texture, so that prices still remain at from 50 cents to a little better than $3, perhaps, per dozen, with better grades for the money than is usual. Some very good Kaiserins, Perles and Carnets are coming in, the former losing its place as Brides become larger, but the two latter are surely meeting with more favor than ever before. This is not saying very much, because neither of them has had its share of popularity in this section. Rose men do not consider they are cutting heavily, but much more goods is being produced than the city can use, more especially of the larger sizes. This produces that unsatisfactory condition of a few of the very best selling at a good figure, small ones for funeral work selling well and medium grades not moving at their real comparative value. But rose growers hope to have something to be thankful for about the time President Roosevelt's first proclamation goes into effect.

The carnationists seem to be walking on good solid foundations; prices probably a little better than when last quoted, say from one to a possible four cents now. If a scarcity exists it is among the white varieties.

Violets still continue to sell the best of anything and have become quite plentiful, too. I would give prices same as last week—35 to 75 cents. Quality very good.

H. N. Eaton has begun to move his lilies cityward, where the cut ones find ready market. He sent in a sample lot of potted ones, but "candidumly" speaking they did not sell in that shape worth a cent.

The summer-like weather has hurt the sale of both cut flowers and plants without doubt. Outdoor goods in variety are still coming in and I have seen quite good outdoor violets picked and sold this month. And within ten feet of me now is a heliotrope in excellent condition which has stood the weather thus far with no protection whatever.

A Visit to Clematis Brook.

I took the underground elevated at Park street and a Massachusetts Central railroad train for Clematis Brook to inspect the fortifications erected there upon a commanding little knoll, by F. R. Mathison and added to by present lessees, Anderson & Williams, until 30,000 feet of glass is now utilized. Who doesn't know Mr. Mathison? Who doesn't know "Billy" Anderson? But Mr. Williams is not so well known on the Boston end of the business, because he makes his influence felt more at the Brook. And the combined rose product of the three is surely as well known as any one of the three, being noted for quality, quantity and especially for an even output. They never seem to be either "off crop" or "on crop," but keep right on cutting about the same and looking pleasant.

The railroad, side by side with the Fitchburg, each with stations at every stopping place not thirty feet apart, goes out through an interminable tangle of railroad paraphernalia, then the vegetable flats, a few pretty residential sections, past W. W. Edgar's place and the icy looking expanse of the mammoth establishment of E. N. Pierce & Sons, and lands you within a half-minute's walk of the compactly built place. Three long houses exactly side by side, all bisected by a walk through the center. The boiler house, office and stable are at one end of this walk and three smaller houses stand beyond these necessities to the business. These buildings are all in the best of repair and are thoroughly well built. Brick foundation walls from two to three feet high, thirteen automatic ventilators, a big tank into which water is pumped from a driven well, together with faucets from the town supply for emergencies, two huge boilers, one being a brand-new one, hundreds of tons of coal, the large home of the commander-in-chief and smaller ones of the other officials, are all seen at a glance. Then there are 10,000 rose plants to be seen and the walks are more or less encumbered by boxes of elegant Bouvardia now just beginning to bloom. There is do not stand very high, all the older ones being pretty thoroughly tied down. But above this growth that is tied down extends the new growth about six inches apart each way upon an average and now from eight to ten inches to two feet and a half tall, each stem bearing a bud or flower.

Though having a station so near, Mr. Anderson remembers the story of the early bird and drives three miles to catch a train that lands him in Boston fifteen minutes earlier. J. S. MANTER.

NEW YORK.

Despite the fact that we have for a long time been in the whirls of a most exciting municipal election, there has been a fairly good demand for all kinds of stock. There were hours and days when stock moved somewhat slowly, but the average for the week, considering everything, was good. Next week most of the wealthy folks will be in town and could it when the department is in the grasp of unscrupulous politicians.

A most instructive course of lectures on botany are being given every Saturday at 4:30 p. m. in the hall of the museum at the Botanical Gardens, Bronx Park. There is always a large attendance at these lectures, and the library up there is the best of its kind in the country.

We forgot to mention last week that the large Latania shown by A. Herrington at last week's show here was donated to the Botanical Gardens.

We are off to attend the several shows round about here; there are no less than four on this week hereabouts, and it requires some planning, much work and travel to cover them all. Wish the boys up along the Hudson would spread dates a little more next year and give the papers a chance to breathe.

Bowling.

There was a large crowd on the alleys last Monday night, and the coaching was somewhat terrific. Possibly the eve of election was responsible for some of it; anyhow, the fun more than compensated for the non-breaking record scores.

The New York team and a few rooters will try conclusions with the Philadelphians on their own alleys on Tuesday, November 12, and in the near future expect to wake up both the Flatbush and North Hudson boys. Yes, there's lots of good things on the calendar, and Captain Lang says it's only for practice to be in shape for Asheville or any other place where champions meet. Scores last night were:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The mid-season chrysanthemums ruled the market this week and are preferred to long stemmed Beauties, for which there is no marked demand. Several new varieties have made their appearance, and, generally speaking, sell well.

Mrs. Trainor L. Park, yellow, Colonel Appleton, yellow, and Timothy Eaton, white, are among the finer varieties. Leo Niessen had some very fine Ivory and also Mrs. Perrin, a deep pink variety of good size. Mrs. Weeks is another pretty white of good form. The ruling price on choice blooms of these sorts is from $1.50 to $2.50 a dozen. Perfect specimens of Eaton go higher, but unfortunately a good many flowers of this variety do not come perfect.

The large Easter plant growers are bringing in their first blooms of chrysanthemums now. This week Robert Craig & Son have begun cutting Ivory, Colonel Appleton and Merza. William K. Harris is sending in the two first named sorts and also Maud Dean, and a pale pink sport from this variety which resembles apple blossoms in color.

While cut flowers of the Queen of Autumn have been selling well, there has been an unprecedented run on plants in pots. Both Campbell and Mecky, who make this their specialty, have been obliged to cut their orders despite the enormous quantity of plants grown. It seems likely that the season will be a one house of Kaiserin. Enormous old plants' relentlessly bent over and tied down and so full of briars that a rhinoceros would murmur if asked to go through. Their labors for the year are about done, but many good canes yet rise above the tangled mass. We counted the stalks upon a bush chosen at random to see how many blooms had been taken this summer. Twenty. Is that good?

There is a house of nice very new Carnot bushes just beginning to talk. The only work they say that a hardened old florist can understand is "Money," but to others they whisper of purity, grace, elegance and all other virtues.

But nearly everything is set to Brides and Maids varying from six months to three years old and most of them are in fine shape for a winter's work. They quite a large boom is expected in the plant and cut flower trade. Every grower, especially of violets, looks forward most anxiously for horse show week, and it is to be hoped all expectations will be fulfilled. Prices of almost all grades of flowers are on the upward trend; we only require frost and snow to satisfy some growers.

The Florists' club meets next Monday night and a very high old time is anticipated, so a full attendance is most desirable. Reports of the recent show and nominations for officers for next year are two of the items on the program, and the rest depends on—the weather.

Nothing niggardly about one city when $2,000,000 is annually devoted to the maintenance of parks. Of course, it doesn't all go into the system. How short one, leaving very little worth having for late sales. George W. Childs, the best red variety, has made its appearance and will be welcomed by the retailers for the Pennsylvania-Harvard football game on Saturday next at Franklin field. The wholesalers speak confidently of there being enough red roses and violets to supply the demand on this occasion.

The other features of the market are the improved demand for tea roses, which are selling better than at any time this fall, and the continued brisk demand for white carnations.

Various Items.

Jack Frost pretty well demolished the outdoor stock this week, barring possibly the muslin covered dahlias at Atco, N. J. There is a general feeling that the season has finally opened in earnest with very bright prospects all along the line.

The first team of the Florists' Bowling Club defeated the second team of the same organization in the tournament on the academy alleys by something over 100 pins on Friday of last week.

The return match between the New York and Philadelphia teams will take place on Tuesday next at the alleys in Horticultural Hall. The New Yorkers are betting that they won't lose a game, but there will be no difficulty in getting takers among the representatives of the Quaker City, who are confident that they will more than succeed in wiping out the disastrous defeat in Gotham on October 22. PHIL.

BUFFALO.

Now the Pan-Am. is over, society in its old normal condition will assert itself and I hope it will be a gay season. Flowers are plentiful and quality good but business has been rather dull for the past week. Chrysanthemums are not going to waste nor yet in very great demand.

We had two well known figures here to see the dying gasps of the Pan-Am., Mr. Peter Crowe, on his road home from Denver, where he had been to see Son William and George Fancourt, of Wilkesbarre, lately arrived from "Old Lannon, don't yer know." George is always fluent, but abundantly so now, and he has so much to tell you of the superiority and well dressed people of his native soil as well as the immense horticultural places. I had the good fortune to be able to introduce both of them to Mrs. Carrie Nation who decorated them with her little gilded hatchet. She looked at George and said, "You need it," but she wanted to embrace Peter for she was sure he was a temperance man and his weight would be grand as a battering ram to demolish a grog shop. Mr. Crowe may not be fastidious but he objected to any intimacy, for Mrs. Nation is one of the most repulsive featured of Eve's daughters.

Pan-American.

The closing hours of the Pan-Am. were wild. While the dignified president was making a feeling and pathetic speech just prior to the final extinction of the wonderful light, fifty thousand hoodlums of all grades of society and both sexes, lost their heads and rioted over the ground destroying what they could not carry away. I don't want to reflect on the management but it could have been better. It could have been quelled by a few sharp examples early in the evening. I am so thankful that nearly all exhibits in my department were packed and gone and no one suffered, but it's an experience that I was not prepared for. Professional show men may be, but they are a class by themselves.

Just allow me to say that the guards, so called, or policemen, about 250 of them, have been nothing but ornamental loafers from the day they were appointed. They were smarter looking and better drilled than the Columbian Guards, but useless for the protection of property. Their chief industry was to see what they could lay their hands on and chin with the girl at the trinket booth. There were a few exceptions, but very few. The behavior of the crowd when conventional rules no longer governed their actions, was nothing more than one more illustration of the great truth that the most civilized race of man is nothing more than a brute with a veneer of civilization spread over him and alas, here.

I hope I won't be bothered with Pan-Am. business now that it is over. The awards in the whole of the horticultural department went to the grand jury last week and should soon be published, and the awards sent to the recipients. Nothing has been neglected that I am aware of and tomorrow your humble servant is going to the Adirondack Mountains with a 30 calibre Remington, where, in 10 days, he expects to bag 1 bear, 3 deer, 2 wild cats and a barrel of feathered game, and if he does not get the first named animals he will try to bear with the rest. CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Mum is the word now, and they are coming in by the wagonload; but so soft are they, owing to the hot weather, that it is almost impossible to ship them any distance. Store men say that they do not "hold up" in the show window, and a mum that will not hold up in a show window certainly will not be satisfactory in a private house. Even such varieties as Robinson, Appleton, Bassett, etc., have no staying qualities this season.

Right here I would like to say a good word for little Ivory. Little though it is, it has proved its sterling worth to the grower, the retailer and, in fact, to everyone interested in flowers, and it has sold side by side with varieties more than twice its size, and for more money. From $4 to $8 per 100 was obtained for this little gem, and when you consider how many more of them can be grown in the same space in comparison with the larger varieties, it is not hard to see which pays the better. The best Ivory were received from George Bayer, of Toledo, Ohio, and they show that variety with a 30-inch stem and a flower that will compare with the best of them.

Everyone reports that business was all that could be desired for the month of October, the increase over last year being all the way from 10 to 30 per cent. This is encouraging, especially when you consider the unfavorable weather. It is needless to say that with cooler weather the outlook for November could not be better.

The following are the prevailing prices on stock: American Beauties, $4 to $25 per 100; Brides and Maids, $2 to $4; Meteors, $2 to $5; carnations, fancy, $1.50 to $2.50 per 100; ordinary, $1 to $1.50; chrysanthemums, $4 to $20 per 100; valley, 4 cents; violets, 25 to 75 cents per 100; smilax, adiantum, asparagus and ferns at regular prices.

Various Notes.

For last Saturday the florists in the Jabez Elliott market report the best business since last Easter. Large quantities of mums were sold and at fair prices.

One chrysanthemum was before the committee Saturday. It was a large-sized bronze, incurved variety, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich. Stem and foliage fair. Loosely built flower, globular in shape. Good for exhibition purposes only; cut October 25; named Importation.

November 9 is the date of the chrysanthemum show of the Cincinnati Florists' Society. Everything points to a first-class meeting.

Mr. W. A. Procter brought in some Prosperity, the famous carnation, and from the looks of it it deserves all the praise it gets. With stems 24 inches, strong and straight, and a 3-inch flower, it looked fine. It was almost pure white in color, just a faint showing of pink in the center. This is doubtless due to the hot sunshine. W. Jackson is the grower of these blooms and their excellence speaks well for the grower.

The greenhouses of the Hoffmeister Floral Company were burglarized last Thursday night and about 300 chrysanthemum blooms were taken.

Mr. Sidney Murphy and Miss Tuifort were married last Wednesday at the home of the bride at College Hill.

M. H. Benzinger has bought out and is running the Robert D. Ruttle greenhouses in Covington, Ky.

AUTUMN'S FLORAL TROPHIES.

The tulip blooms in springtime,
The rose in summer comes,
But autumn is the season
That brings chrysanthemums—
The fluffy-headed beauties
That on their long stalks sway,
And velvet-like their petals
In which the colors play.
Brown, purple, pink, and yellow,
Red, white, and loyal blue,
In every shade of color,
And every tint and hue,
They stand in floral splendor,
All rivals far above,
For on them have been lavished
The wealth of Nature's love.
They're lacking in the fragrance
That nestles in the rose,
They lack the dew that glistens
When morning sunshine flows;
But whether massed or singly
They gleam in glory rare,
The floral queen of beauty
With stateliness of air.

And proudly they are posing
Before admiring throngs
As though they knew 't was
Of praise to them belongs.
And there are exclamations
Of wonder and delight,
From all who see these flowers
Arrayed in colors bright.
The tulips and the roses
Are but a memory now;
We hail a later beauty,
And at her shrine we bow.
For when all other flowers
To age and cold succumb,
We joyfully are greeting
The grand chrysanthemum.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business did not improve any last week; in fact it was dull, very dull. The market was glutted with all kinds of cut flowers, especially roses and chrysanthemums. More beautiful weather than we have had the past week would be difficult to imagine, and this, of course, made trade dull and caused the glut. Placards announcing "Roses, 20 cents per doz." were numerous the past week in the downtown store windows. The fakirs were selling them on the street corners at 10 cents per dozen.

Good first class roses, including short American Beauties, were selling at the wholesale houses at $5 per 1,000 and were even hard to dispose of at that price, many of them going to the waste pile. The stock of roses that is coming in now is very fine. Should the weather turn cold and cloudy this week we will have a different story to tell in the next issue.

Carnations are not so plentiful but enough of them are coming in for the demand. The price remains the same as last week; the quality of the stock is good, and the demand fair.

In chrysanthemums the quality is fine and plenty of them are now in the market. The best sellers the past week were Robinson, Ivory, pink and white. Some very fine Bonaffon and Sunderbruch came in the past week, which brought $3 per dozen for the best; other varieties being from $1 to $2 per dozen. This week we expect to see some fine Jerome Jones and Morels in the market. Valley had very little call last week and quite a lot of it went to waste, from $2 to $4 is the selling price. Violets have also felt the effect of the dull market and from the looks of things nobody in the trade was happy the past week, except the street fakir.

Visitors.

Mr. S. S. Skidelsky of Philadelphia, got in Saturday and is talking Nelson carnations to the trade. Mr. S. reports that never before did he sell so many carnation plants as he has of the Nelson.

Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., spent a few days with the trade last week. Mrs. Vesey reports that she will, as usual, make a large exhibit at our annual show next week.

Mr. C. W. Scott of Chicago, who spent a week with the trade in this city, left for home Saturday night.

The Show.

The prospects for the coming chrysanthemum show, which will open next Wednesday morning, are very flattering. According to the rules everything must be in place by 9 a. m. Wednesday, November 13. Chairman Meinhardt says that the hall will be open all day Tuesday and that the exhibitors can have all day to place their exhibits. The management hopes for plenty of help from the members of the club on Tuesday so that everything will be in readiness for the opening on Wednesday morning.

Mr. George Schmidt of Edwardsville, Ill., who is well known among the trade in St. Louis—better known as "Brother" Schmidt—will be married next Tuesday, Nov. 12, to Miss Lena Bayer.

Bowling.

The league team will not bowl again until Thursday night, when they meet the strong Exchange team. The boys expect to be in better trim than they were last Monday and no doubt will make a better showing. The averages for the last fifteen games are as follows:

The St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club held a meeting at the Court House bowling alley. President Kunz stated that money was needed and an assessment of $1 was called for from each member, payable by next Monday night. After the meeting the members formed two teams and rolled three games. The rolling of Beneke, Sturtz, Ellison, Kuehn and Kunz was good. Mr. S. S. Skidelsky was present and helped to fill out one of the teams. The scores of the evening were as follows:

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Last Sunday our warm fall weather departed suddenly and we have been having a taste of real winter. As a result the heavy supply of roses has shortened up some, but there is still an abundance for all demands. Roses are still $4 for the best. There is a lot of poor stock in the market, and all sorts of prices prevail, ranging down to as low as 50 cents a hundred. There is a very good shipping demand for the best grades and fancy Kaiserin, Carnot, etc., reach up as high as $8. The best Liberties bring $1.50 to $2 a dozen, and from that range down to $3 and $4 a hundred for the poorer qualities. Beauties hold the same old range right along.

Good carnations keep at $1.50, with fancy Lawsons, Bradts, etc., at $2 to $3, and Peter Reinberg reports sales of fancy Prosperity at $6 to $8. There is still a lot of poor stock and we hear of clean-up sales at as low as 40 cents a hundred.

Chrysanthemum prices are decidedly below those of last year on the average, probably about 20 per cent lower. Only a few of the very fanciest will now bring $3 a dozen and really fancy stock can be had for $2, with excellent ones at $1.50, very good blooms at $1, $5 and $6 per 100 for fair grade, and then come quotations by the armful.

We noted at one dealer's a lot of Bonaffons that would have graded near the top but for damage to a few of the petals in each bloom, that looked as though it might have been the effect of frost or damp. At a short distance they seemed perfect, but on inspection by buyers were rejected. But for this injury they would have moved readily at $2 to $2.50, but as it was they found no takers at $1. It was an apt illustration of how values are reduced by the slightest imperfection.

Local demand has been hardly up to the standard for the season, though a fair run of funeral work has helped materially of late on white stock. It is expected that the horse show and the flower show, both being held this week, will inaugurate the social season.

Various Items.

A report of the annual exhibition will be found elsewhere in this issue.

The annual banquet of the Florists' Club will be held this Thursday evening (7th inst.) at the Victoria Hotel, Michigan avenue and Van Buren street, at 8 o'clock. Edgar Sanders will be toastmaster. There will be a large number of visitors. President Winterston has told the management of the hotel what to expect if the dinner is not worth twice the price. Walter Kreitling is in charge of the decorations and it promises to be a great event.

At the club meeting last Friday evening the new officers were duly installed and sixteen new members were elected, all the applications having been brought in by President Winterston. Treasurer Sanders' report showed a balance of $230.98 in the treasury. Retiring President McAdams was given a hearty vote of thanks for his earnest labors during the past year. Steps were taken looking to the securing of a larger meeting room and arrangements were made for one for the second and fourth Thursdays of the month. Later, though, it was found that this room has been taken by other parties. Therefore the next meeting will be held in the old hall the evening of Friday, November 15.

On Tuesday a telegram was received by Assistant Secretary Kanst, from Indianapolis, signed by six prominent Indiana florists saying that they had a magnificent show, entries full and the finest decorated hall ever attempted in the United States. Score one for Indianapolis.

Among visitors at the exhibition were Elmer D. Smith, Adrian Mich.; Fred Lemon, Richmond, Ind.; Ewald Suder, Toledo, Ohio; M. Luetsch, Lake Geneva, Wis.; C. W. Johnson, Rockford, Ill.; James Hartshorne, Jos. Labo and J. D. Thompson, Joliet, Ill.; F. Bahr, Highland Park, Ill., and Uncle John Thorpe, of course.

M. J. Miller, Freeport, Ill., was a recent visitor.

Among visitors that arrived on Wednesday were Samuel Murray and C. C. Ripley, Kansas City; C. C. Pollworth, William Edlefsen, Milwaukee.

Bowling.

There was a hot match between Milwaukee and Chicago teams on the alleys last night (Wednesday). The match was for best two games out of three and as Chicago won the first two games they settled the question. There was much excitement and lots of good natured banter during the games, the first two not being finished till 11 o'clock. There were other visitors besides those from Wisconsin. Mr. Ewald Suder of Toledo, holding up Ohio's reputation in great shape. He is a whole club in himself. Following are the scores of the two deciding games:

AN EMPLOYEES' ASSOCIATION.

Replying to F. F. R. we are perfectly willing to give space to further communications on the subject providing they suggest something practical and are signed by the full name and address of the writers. F. F. R. and others should bear in mind that a paper cannot print communications from unknown correspondents. We must know who we are dealing with.

We see no necessity for "the boys to chip in" until it is made manifest that there is a sufficient number of employees that really desire to belong to such an association; and we question whether a circular would bring any more responses than a communication in the trade press.

If F. F. R.'s statement that he and his partner are on duty regularly from 4:30 a. m., to 8 and 9 p. m. is correct then he is certainly being pushed some as to hours. Haven't you stretched it a few, or taken one or two exceptional days as an example?

We are perfectly willing to "give the employer a hit" if we can do it and they really want it. If F. F. R. will formulate his ideas as to how an association could accomplish some real good, write it out and send to us with his full name and address attached. We will print it. His name and address need not be printed, but we must know who the matter comes from.

POINSETTIAS.

After trying several plans I find that good results are obtained by benching the old plants on a sunny bench in May or June in good soil, not over three inches deep, the plants a fair distance apart. Cuttings of good texture and firmness can then be taken off, but not so as to rob the plant too much at one time and unduly weaken its vitality.

Cut below the joint, take off only the immediate bottom foliage, and root in the full sun in clean sand in a water-tight bench, and keep well sprinkled. If the plants are intended for five-inch pot plants, pot along into three-inch until August 1, then take the tops off these and also the old plants and make one final propagation. Afterward pot up your old plants and the cut back three-inch plants and grow along for second grade stuff.

To induce dwarfness, pot firmly, grow in full sun and place plants close to the glass in a well ventilated house or frame without shade. Never allow the temperature to fall below 60 degrees, and do not repot after the early part of October. Feed when the plants are pot bound after the last shift. J. O. E.

PANDANUS VEITCHII.

Having a great many of these in spring that were apparently in too large pots and nearly or quite green, it was perplexing what to do as this stock is with us salable only in medium sized pots and when well colored. The plan we finally adopted was a complete success.

Having prepared a light, moderately rich soil, the plants were shaken out of the old soil, with as little damage to the roots as possible, and then repotted into as small pots as possible. They were watered sparingly and kept warm and close. When they had become well established in these small pots they were shifted on, using a good rich soil with a fair proportion of horn shavings mixed in.

The manner in which they colored and came along was surprising, and from unsalable plants they became fine saleable ones. J. O. E.

THE ELM LEAF BEETLE.

Superintendent Pettigrew, of the Boston Parks, says the damage done by the elm leaf beetle is decidedly serious. He says that the proper time to attack the pests is in the spring as the leaves unfold, by spraying with one of the arsenical solutions. In this way many can be poisoned before breeding time. A second spraying should be given when the egg clusters are found on the under side of the leaves.

THE WINNING RHYME.

Following are the verses that won the prize offered by the Kansas City World for the best rhyme for chrysanthemum.

The vocalist who lives next door
Sings "Holy City" o'er and o'er,
And gives me for "chrysanthemum"
Only the rhyme "Jerusalem."

Oh, would that "mum's the word" were writ
Upon his heart, and that he'd quit.
I'd give a big chrysanthemum Could I but make his anthem mum.

TRENTON, N. J.—The state entomologist has issued a warning that there will be a plague of the 17-year locust next year in this section. It is the brood which made its last appearance in 1885 and which did much damage at that time.

THOMAS ROCKFORD, the famous English florist and nurseryman, died recently at the age of 82 years. The Rockford greenhouses cover an immense surface.

COLDWATER, MICH.—Van Aken Bros. have just finished building a fine retail store on Monroe street. They are cutting some fine mums.

RICHMOND, IND.

The Richmond Florists' Club was organized at a well-attended meeting November 1, with officers as follows: Fred Lemon, president; George Fulle, vice-president; H. C. Chessman, secretary; John A. Evans, treasurer. A committee consisting of G. R. Gause, J. M. Gift and Vernon Grave was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws and to report same at the next meeting, to be held November 15.

The club starts under very favorable auspices and it is believed it will accomplish much good. E. G. Hill was present and made some good suggestions, but declined to accept any office. All eyes are upon our venerable treasurer, upon whom honors have been showered thick and fast recently.

H. C. C.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Peter Byrnes, who has for some years past been manager of the Hemogansett Greenhouses, has resigned his position and has started in business on his own account.

Walter A. Potter, formerly in the seed business here, died at Yonkers, N. Y., Oct. 24, aged 49 years. He was buried at Bristol, R. I., Oct. 28.

SOMERVILLE MASS.—In the Somerville Journal's special number of Oct. 25 appears a handsomely illustrated description of the store and greenhouses of Mr. J. W. Howard. In addition to the original range here he now has a plant of 20,000 square feet at Woburn, and last spring he leased the greenhouses formerly conducted by John Duran in West Medford. These, with a branch store in Charlestown, give him four establishments to look after. Last spring he filled an order for 50,000 bedding plants from the Boston & Maine Railway.

CROMWELL, CONN.—Mr. A. N. Pierson has not allowed any of his carnation plants to bloom yet this season. They have all been regularly disbudded with the idea of laying a strong foundation for winter work. Some selected buds are now being allowed to remain and he will begin cutting flowers in a few weeks.

Various Items.

At this writing the question is asked, "Can we hold back the chrysanthemum for the great exhibition?" The lingering summer weather which prevailed here all through October caused a little uneasiness among the growers, inasmuch as it brought everything on in full crop, and roses were sold in large quantities at very low prices. The sudden drop in the temperature last Saturday night has soothed the troubled mind, stock has improved, prices advanced and overcasts can now be worn with comfort.

The writer was granted two hours' leave from duty last week and he went on a tour of inspection among the growers.

The Humfeld Floral Co. are having their usual good success with their carnations, but roses are a part failure same as last year. Too much smoke and gas have proved to them an expensive nuisance. This firm will dissolve partnership shortly. W. H. Humfeld has purchased a lot at 10th street and Hyland avenue and is building a $4,000 residence. On the same property he will build greenhouses and a flower store. The location is a good one and only two blocks from his present place of business.

R. S. Brown & Son speak with great satisfaction of their fall trade. Their stock is looking well, especially the houses of mums. Mr. Brown, Sr., says mums are selling better this year than any year since he has been in business.

Situated near our beautiful Elmwood cemetery is the model establishment owned by Albert Barbe. We never saw his place looking as fine as it does now. Mr. Barbe went to a big expense last summer in enlarging his plant, giving him twice the capacity of a year ago. Mums, roses, carnations and violets are doing well, and the indications are that Mr. Barbe will get big revenue from his stock this season.

Interest in the coming flower show is looking upward, and the premium list has reached the sum of $3,500. Paul Ducret gave $25 and W. J. Barnes $15 for window decorating prizes.

Trade is excellent, with stock good and plentiful. The decorations for the October ball given at the Midland hotel and the decorations for the Commercial Club's banquet were arranged by W. L. Rock. H. J. M.

THE NEW YORK EXHIBITION.

The Exhibition Committee and Committee of Ways and Means of the New York Florists' Club, met Nov. 4, and received the results of the recent exhibition at Madison Square Garden which were found to be very encouraging and satisfactory, everything considered.

Medals, certificates and cash prizes as awarded by the judges were duly approved and the treasurer was instructed to issue warrants for all awards as recorded.

The final premium list for the eleventh annual chrysanthemum show and floral exhibition of the St. Louis Florists' Club, to be held in Grand Ave. Masonic Temple, St. Louis, Nov. 13 to 15, has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing the secretary, Emil Schray, 4101 Pennsylvania avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

MILWAUKEE.

The advent of chrysanthemums has lived up trade and demand has been brisk the past week. Roses and carnations consequently suffered with exception of good shipping stock. Bonnions predominate in mums and seem to be the favorite, especially as a shipper. Carnations are coming in quite freely and of good quality. Violets are also more plentiful, but good quality find a ready sale.

W. G. Schucht, representing the C. C. Pollworth Co., has returned from an extended western trip and has left for the east to look over the holly fields to procure a fine grade of holly.

Nic Zweifel, one of our crack carnation growers, was married last Monday at the residence of the bride, and his honeymoon will include a visit to the Chicago mum show. A party of about fifteen will visit the mum show from here.

Bouquet green is being offered more freely from the north and with continued open weather indications are there will be enough to go around.

Jas. Chacona kept an elaborate display of mums throughout the week, making a special sale of this flower.

C. C. Pollworth is packing up his traps and will be on the ground at the opening of the deer season, Nov. 10, in the northern woods.

Arnold Ringier was in town looking orders for Komans for next season.

FLORISTS' MANUAL
WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

CHICAGO.

Roses.

As was noted last week and as will be seen by the engraving in this week's issue, there was a fine display of roses, and the contest was very interesting. Following are the awards:

- Twenty-five Golden Gate (special prize of $25.00 offered by the American Rose Co., Washington, D. C.), Bassett & Washburn.
- Twenty-five American Beauties—1st, Peter Reinberg; 2nd, Reinberg & Weiland.

- Twenty-five Marquise Litta—1st, Bassett & Washburn.

whites. It was decidedly the best white on exhibition and it will evidently be an important factor in the cut flower market. Judging by these flowers, which left practically nothing to be desired in form, color and stem, no one will make a mistake in planting this white.

In the pinks Mrs. Lawson held her own well and seems to have a strong hold on first position in this class.

In scarlets America seemed to have gained a few points on G. H. Crane, especially in stem, as shown here.

A large vase of Mrs. H. N. Higginbotham, a light pink not yet introduced (shown by the Chicago Carnation Co.), was very beautiful, and this variety will undoubtedly take the place of all of the Daybreak type. The flowers are large, of fine form, borne on strong stems, and the blooms are delightfully fragrant. It easily discounts Daybreak at its very best and the niche left vacant by the former favorite will be more than filled.

- Fifty Marquis—1st Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Chicago Carnation Co.
- Fifty Lawson—1st, Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Chicago Carnation Co.
- Fifty Lora—1st, Peter Reinberg; 2nd, Harms Park Floral Co.

- One hundred blooms, one variety—1st, Chicago Carnation Co. (with Lawson), winning a sterling silver cup, value $25.00.

Prosperity showed up well in several classes and has evidently come to stay as a fancy. The flowers shown averaged

The American Rose Co., Washington, D. C., displayed a fine vase of their White Golden Gate, and John N. May a vase of the new rose, Mrs. Oliver Ames. Both received certificates.

Carnations.

The display of carnations on Thursday was even better than that of roses on Wednesday. A vase of Norway, H. Weber & Son's new white of last year, exhibited by Bassett & Washburn, showed this variety to be right at the top in

It was awarded a silver medal. Medals were also awarded to the Chicago Carnation Co. for Mrs. Potter Palmer, scarlet, and Chicot, crimson.

Following are the carnation awards in detail:

- Fifty Flora Hill—1st, Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Sinner Bros.
- Fifty White Cloud—1st, Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Sinner Bros.
- Fifty Petra—2nd, Peter Reinberg.
- Fifty any other white—1st, Bassett & Washburn (with Norway); 2nd, H. W. Buckbee (with Bon Homme Richard).
- Fifty America—1st, Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Sinner Bros.
- Fifty Red Bradt—1st, Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Anton Then.
- Fifty Crane—1st, Bassett & Washburn; 2nd, Chicago Carnation Co.
- Fifty any other red—1st Henry Smith (with Estelle).

- Fifty any other crimson—1st, Chicago Carnation Co. (with Roosevelt).

a good three inches in diameter, and that's a big flower as we measure it, with the flower in its natural position. By flattening the flower against the rule it would go 3½ inches or over.

In addition to those awarded medals the Chicago Carnation Co. showed several very promising seedlings still under number. And they made a fine display of other sorts not for competition.

In the standard varieties Bassett & Washburn were very strong, as will be seen by the large number of prizes they won.

Violets.

The display of violets was the largest ever made at a Chicago exhibition. The liberal special premiums offered by Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., were responsible. Grand Rapids took both, Eli Cross first and Crabb & Hunter second.

Chrysanthemum Seedlings.

There were several entries in the class for seedling chrysanthemums, but none measured up to the standard and no awards were made.

Floral Arrangements.

For dinner table decoration for twelve covers, to be judged each day during the exhibition, Wednesday, chrysanthemums; Thursday, carnations; Friday, roses; Saturday, optional, the first prize of $125 was won by Anderson Floral Co.; second, $90, by A. Lange; third, $60, by Walter Retzer & Co.; fourth, $40, by Walter Retzer.

In the classes for table decorations costing $12, $10 and $8, A. Lange was first and Walter Retzer & Co. second in each case, while in the one for $5 Walter Retzer & Co. were first and A. Lange second.

Bridal bouquet, first, Walter Retzer & Co.; second, Anderson Floral Co. Walter Retzer & Co. received a special award for the arrangement of plants in the foyer described last week; also a special on basket of flowers.

Notes.

The award on standard geraniums was changed, or rather a clerical error was corrected, and first prize was given, as it seems the judges had intended, to John Reardon, gardener for M. A. Ryerson. A clerk had accidentally transposed the judges' awards.

August Jurgens displayed some forced tulips and daffodils that excited much comment and many questions as to how is was done; also some very fine valley.

H. N. Bruns showed some extra fine valley as a special display.

Bassett & Washburn showed a vase of Harrisii that were extra fine for the season.

S. Muir received a special award for his fine group of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Walter Kreitting & Co. had on display a table decoration not for competition.

The attendance was very satisfactory. It was feared that the horse show would draw away from the flower show, but it was evidently a help instead of a drawback. The weather was good all the week, averaging the best of any flower show week in years.

There was a host of visiting florists from out of town, who will be found mentioned in our Chicago notes.

The judges were R. H. Warder, superintendent of Lincoln Park; Alex Reid, of Oakwood Cemetery, and C. B. Whitnall, of Milwaukee.

E. G. Uihlein exhibited a seedling fern, Nephrolepis Uihleiniana, which received special mention.

Robert Mueller is gardener for A. S. Trude, who won many premiums in the plant classes, as recorded last week.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held their sixth annual flower show in the Assembly Rooms, Madison, N. J., Nov. 5 and 6. It is a pleasure to record that it was a grand show, the best ever given by the society. All the prizes were competed for, and the quantity and quality of roses shown can safely be said to excel anything seen at exhibitions given in the whole of the United States this fall, and some of the chrysanthemums were the finest shown in this section of the states this season.

Cut Chrysanthemums.

Arthur Herrington was first for 36 blooms in 6 varieties, with Mme. Deis, Appleton, Kate Broomhead, Jeannie Falconer, Mrs. Carrington and Eaton. These were simply magnificent blooms, many of them measuring 20 to 22 inches in circumference. Wm. Duckham was a close second with Weeks, Morel, Carrington, Park, Merza and J. Falconer. For 18 in 3 varieties A. Herrington also won first with Appleton, Timothy Eaton and Mons. Chenon de Leche. Peter Duff, Orange, N. J. won second; there were six competitors in this class. A. Herrington won first again in the class for 12 blooms, 4 varieties, 3 of each, with Eaton, J. Falconer, Robinson and Carrington. Peter Duff won second; there were seven competitors for this prize. In 12 whites, Peter Duff won first with Merza (one measuring 33 inches), and Arthur Herrington won second with Timothy Eaton, some of them measuring 28 inches in circumference. All Appletons were shown in the 12 yellows, A. Herrington, first; Geo. Smith of Orange, second. For vase of 12 blooms in variety, Wm. Duckham won first with Chas. Davis, Morel, Eaton, Weeks, Loveliness, Carrington, Park, Broomhead, Mme. Carnot, Yellow Carnot, Appleton and Yanariva; A. Herrington was second. There were four competing in the classes for twelves and as many in the sixes. Six whites, Geo. Smith first, with Weeks; A. Reagen second. Six yellow, first, Henry Hentz, with Appleton; second, O. Keser. Six any other color, first, A. Coren with Morel; H. Hentz, second.

Vase of blooms arranged for effect, first, Wm. Duckham, second, O. Keser.

Roses.

There were four lots staged for the 18 American Beauties. L. A. Noe won first and H. Hentz second; all were grand blooms on immense stems. There were many competitors for the 12 American Beauties, L. A. Noe again winning first, and H. Hentz second. Ten growers tried to win the honors for 12 Bridesmaids. John Mitchell won first, and J. T. Quarney, second. Seven exhibited in the class for 12 Brides. L. A. Noe won first, and H. Hentz second. Twelve competed for 6 Bridesmaids; John Mitchell first, and The Chatham Rose Company, second. Thirteen vases of 6 Brides were shown. First honors went to Righter & Barton; second to Chatham Rose Company. Twelve competed in the class for six blooms of any rose except Bride or Bridesmaid and Beauty. Peter Duff won first with Papa Gontier, and Elwood Brant second with Liberty. There was a dire scarcity of variety in roses shown, but the quality of all was extra fine for the season and those who failed to win have no reason to be ashamed of their products; they could not have been duplicated anywhere else.

Carnations.

There was but one class provided for carnations, which seemed strange to us, though this is the great rose-growing center. However, there was a nice table of blooms shown and they in a measure defied the roses and chrysanthemums in the line of loveliness. The class called for 3 varieties, 18 flowers of each. D. Canstra won first, and H. L. Hand second.

G. H. Velie & Sons, Marlboro, N. Y., won first on 100 double violets, W. H. Thomas second. H. L. Hand and O. Keser were winners of the prizes for single violet.

Groups.

For group of chrysanthemums and foliage plants, H. L. Hand was first, A. Coren second, and John Jones third. Group of foliage and flowering plants, chrysanthemums excluded, John Jones first, Wm. Charlton second. Three specimen chrysanthemum plants, pots not to exceed 12-inch, first and a special to Geo. Smith of Orange, N. J.

Some of the Chrysanthemum Blooms at the Chicago Show.

These were the prettiest bush plants exhibited in the east this year; they were very fine and were eloquent advocates for a better recognition of this kind of skill at all important shows; the varieties shown here were A. J. Balfour, Mutual Friend and Walter Molatsch. In the class for 12 plants grown to single stem, D. Carlyle won first, and O. Keser second. For specimen bush plant, Peter Duff won first with a nice plant of Walter Molatsch. For 3 plants in flower, exclusive of chrysanthemums, Wm. Charlton won first with an allamanda, begonia and clerodendron; he also won first for specimen flowering plant. John Jones won first for 6 ferns.

Wm. Duckham won first in all the vegetable classes, A. Coren, G. Chisholm, S. Brant and H. L. Hand winning seconds.

There were classes for amateurs which were of interest to many, and there were grand groups of palms, foliage, ferns and flowering plants shown, not for competition, by Wm. Duckham and Arthur Herrington. Certificates were awarded to Hart & Huston for fine mushrooms, to A. Herrington for vase of Gerbera Jamesonii, to J. Hart for cucumbers, to John N. May for the new rose, Mrs. Oliver Ames. Mr. May also displayed a table of very fine pompon chrysanthemums. To E. Regan for fine cosmos. Lager & Hurrell exhibited a table of choice orchids, which included Vanda caerulea, oncidiums, cattleyas, odontoglossums, etc. H. Hentz, a group of economic plants in which was a cotton plant covered with cotton bolls.

Mr. Herrington exhibited a bench of tea roses, Marie Van Houtte, Marie D'Orleans, Mme. Lambar, Geo. Nahon-dand and Mme. Cochet, which had grown out of doors for the past three years; the blooms shown had withstood three degrees of frost. Mr. Herrington's exhibit proves that tea roses can be successfully grown outdoors with but very slight protection during winter. The medal offered by Moore, Hentz & Nash to be awarded the actual grower of the winning 18 Beauties was won by J. F. Ruzicka, foreman for L. A. Noe; for 12 winning Bridesmaids, to John Mitchell, and for the 36 winning chrysanthemums to Charles H. Totty, foreman for Mr. Herrington at Florham Farms. Prizes for the actual growers of flowers and plants might be given at all exhibitions.

We have been to many shows this year and must give the Morris County boys credit for having the best in many things. All concerned deserve special praise. We hadn't time to visit the press room, which we were informed was specially furnished, but enjoyed ourselves with the little army from New York and elsewhere.

The judges were Wm. Turner and N. Butterbach, from Oceanic, N. J., and J. W. Withers of New York.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The seventh annual exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held in the state armory, Poughkeepsie, November 6, 7 and 8. It was generally conceded to be the best show given by the society for many years. The armory is a fine exhibition hall, and on this occasion it was well filled with choice plants and well grown flowers. A great and most successful feature was the competition for prizes offered to the pupils of the various schools of the town. Every conceivable variety of plant, in every degree of culture, was shown in these classes. A great number of small useful articles were offered as prizes, and several hundred plants were staged from many schools. It was worth going a hundred miles to see this table, and to study it was to see the pathetic and humorous—yes, the love and ambitious, too—connected with child life. All the school children were admitted free in the mornings, and if the promoters of shows everywhere could have only witnessed the countenances of the little orphans or poor children as they trooped along among the flowers they would never deny the poor of their cities that costless but great pleasure.

There were many features of much excellence at this show. The hall was specially illuminated by many colored lamped electric lights. There was a reappearance of Russell and Powell as exhibitors, and there were magnificent chrysanthemums, and, of course, the show of violets could not be duplicated anywhere else in the universe. If they never showed anything else but violets at Poughkeepsie the show would be one of the most important from a floricultural point of view. There were not as many violets as one might expect, and perhaps on the next occasion a greater number of prizes might bring out the whole contingent of growers; as it was, though, the flowers shown were elegant, and the difference between many was somewhat microscopic.

Strange to say, there was no entry for group of chrysanthemums arranged for effect. The prizes for specimen bush plants went to H. E. Shave, gardener to Frederick Vanderbilt. There were two competitors in the group of ornamental and flowering plants arranged for effect. First prize was won by Samuel Horn, gardener to A. Rogers. This group won only by its wealth of cattleyas. The language of the schedule didn't call for the artistic, and even though the arrangement was faulty, as was the case with all the groups, profusion of flowers won out. A special award was recommended William Russell, gardener to C. F. Dieterich, for arrangement. William Russell was first for group of foliage plants and Samuel Horn second. A very elegant Areca lutescens won first for William Russell in the class for specimen foliage plant. For six foliage plants in not over 6-inch pots W. G. Gomersall, gardener to Winthrop Sargent, was first and W. Russell second. W. G. Gomersall won first for six distinct ferns, Samuel Horn was first for specimen Asparagus Sprengeri. W. G. Gomersall was first for specimen fern and W. G. Saltford second.

Cut Chrysanthemums.

The Dieterich prize, $50 for 26 blooms, 6 varieties, 6 of each, was won by William Russell, with wonderful flowers of Frank Hardy, Mrs. H. Weeks, Major Bonaffon, Mayflower, Golden Wedding and V. Morel. H. E. Shave won first for 12 blooms of white, with Mayflower; S. Horn was second. William Russell won first for 12 yellows, with 12 magnificent Bonaffons; Thomas Emerson won second. W. G. Saltford got first for 12 pink with V. Morel; S. Horn won second. For 12 any other color, S. Horn won first with Charles Davis; W. G. Saltford second.

The Miller prize, $20 for 24-blooms in 4 varieties, 6 of white, pink, yellow and crimson, was won by I. L. Powell, gardener to Samuel Thorne, with the varieties John Shrimpton, Appleton, Morel and Weeks. For vase of 25, arranged for effect, W. G. Gomersall was first with white flowers and autumn foliage, and W. G. Saltford second with Bonaffons and asparagus. The class for 24 blooms, distinct varieties, brought out an elegant lot of blooms: the winner, Samuel Horn, put up as fine a lot of blooms as has been seen anywhere this season. The varieties were Robinson, Balfour, Modesto, Mme. Deis, Appleton, Mayflower, Gold Mine, Morel, Rustique, Golden Wedding, Iora, N. Pockett, Weeks, P. Kay, C. Davis, T. L. Park, Carrington, Fee du Champsaur, Philadelphia, Bonaffon, G. W. Childs, Eaton, G. J. Warren and Minerva. I. L. Powell won second in this class. For 12 blooms, 12 varieties, I. L. Powell won first with A. J. Balfour, Appleton, Malcolm Lamond (the best crimson seen at all the shows), Lawn Tennis, Merza, Bonaffon, Weeks, Morel, Minerva, Eaton, Golden Wedding and F. Hardy. R. B. Sexton won second.

The Sargent prize, $20 for 24 yellow, 4 varieties, 6 of each, was won by W. G. Gomersall with Peter Kay, G. J. Warren, Appleton and T. L. Park. The prize for largest bloom in the show was won by W. G. Gomersall with a G. J. Warren 24 inches in circumference.

Cut Roses.

For 20 American Beauties, $20, S.

Horn; collection of roses, 4 varieties, 12 of each, price $25, won by I. L. Powell; 12 Bridesmaids, first, I. L. Powell, second, Mrs. Oakley Thorne; 12 Brides, first I. L. Powell, second Mrs. O. Thorne; 12 any other variety, first, T. Emerson, with grand Carnots; Mrs. O. Thorne, second. John N. May was awarded a certificate for the new rose Mrs. Oliver Ames.

Carnations.

There was quite a good exhibit of carnations and the quality of flowers was very fine. Charles Barson won first for 50 pink with superb Joosts. W. G. Saltford won first for 50 red with Crane. For 50 variegated W. G. Saltford was first with Bradt. For 36 blooms, 3 varieties, 12 of each, Charles Barson won with Joost, Jubilee and Lawson. Adam Laub & Sons were second.

The Elliott prize, a beautiful carving set, offered for the same number of blooms as above, was won by Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J., with Lawson, Roosevelt and Bradt.

The mayor's prize, $15, for 100 double violets, was won by Allen Traver, Rhinebeck, N. Y. The Mitchell prize, $10, for 2 bunches of double violets, $10 in each, was won by Herman Asher, who also won first for bunch of 50 in the private gardeners' class.

The Henderson prize for collection of vegetables, the Cook & McCord and W. Atlee Burpee & Co. prizes for same, brought out interesting exhibits. Wm. Scott of Tarrytown won first for 2 bunches of black grapes. The Troy prize for best plant raised from seed or cutting by exhibitor, went to David Gindra for a fine specimen of Bonapartea bystrix. H. Clinkaberry exhibited a new hybrid cypripedium, and W. G. Gomersall a grandly grown fern, and S. Horn, a fine croton in above class. Clarence Reynolds won first in the amateur class for flowers arranged for effect.

For dinner table decorations offered on the first day, Harold Cottam won first with a decoration of Meteors and Adiantum cuneatum. W. G. Saltford decorated his with Golden Gates and ferns. Three tables were shown on the second day. W. G. Gomersall won first with white chrysanthemums and autumn foliage. W. G. Saltford had a pretty table with Perles and ferns, and H. Cottam used Bridesmaids. These tables were the best seen at the Poughkeepsie show in years. None of them were up to the Metropolitan standard, but they were good, considering the difficulties in procuring the right furnishings.

F. R. Pierson sent several Bay trees to help fix up the hall, and W. G. Saltford, in addition to being manager, put up several complimentary groups. A pleasing feature about this exhibition was that the principal exhibitors made friendly wagers that they would beat each other next year. The judges were A. Herrington, Henry Siebrect, J. I. Donlan and Wm. Scott.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Philadelphia show was opened to the public tonight (Tuesday) in Horticultural hall. It is a fine exhibition, reflecting great credit on all the workers who have helped so well. The effects are enhanced by a wealth of foliage plants sufficient to set off the rich coloring everywhere. The chrysanthemum plants are well grown, fully up to the standard, and there are plenty of them of all shades and colors. The main stairway is handsomely decorated with vases of plants, specimen box, ferns and asparagus and vases of Timothy Eaton and other fancy blooms.

The center of the main hall is filled by six stately arecas in tubs, elevated, with vases of chrysanthemums between, the whole surrounding a group of choice orchids and foliage plants and a fine Boston fern. Autumn leaves were used freely to cover tubs and supports. Two fine groups of foliage plants set off this center. A rich border of chrysanthemums in pots surrounding the whole. Many of these plants were exceptionally well done. An immense specimen kentia fills the center of the stage, with smaller ones on each side. Banks of choice foliage plants, well arranged, fill both sides of the hall. Next comes a table containing some thirty superb Begonia Gloire de Lorraine covered with bloom, opposite a nicely flowered group of geraniums between a group of Pandanus San-deri, and a specimen of the same variety fully seven feet high.

The features of the smaller hall are a grand assortment of cut chrysanthemums in vases, some superb crotons, perfect in size, coloring and form, a well-grown lot of begonias and flowering ferns and orchids. Downstairs, Ivory, the new bridal rose, was beautifully displayed in two large vases in an alcove. Opposite is a pretty display of glass flower vases in candelabra style, nicely decorated.

The lower hall contained a vast collection of fine vegetables, also seeds, fruits, bulbs and vases. A bed of artificial hyacinths, red and white, in full bloom, made a good illustration on a table of bulbs. Full details and the prize list will be given next week. PHIL.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The third annual exhibition of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held in the Music Hall at above place on November 5, 6 and 7. It was not only the best show the society ever gave, but can be put down as one of the best exhibitions in the United States. Pity it is that there is no hall in Tarrytown large enough to properly display what is annually sent, and this lack of room not only prevents the adoption of many most desirable classes, but it necessitates the overcrowding of what is shown. Therefore in sizing up this show we must consider what it would be had there been sufficient space. We must congratulate the society on what it has done and what it is doing for horticulture. Of course, nothing less could be expected from a locality unequaled in wealth.

It was conceded by all those in a position to know that there were more high grade chrysanthemums shown here than at any other place. The largest flower at the show, Mme. Carnot, measured 23 inches in circumference, but there were plenty of blooms measuring from 20 to 22 inches in circumference. The group of chrysanthemum plants exhibited by Wm. Scott were never excelled and seldom equaled. The winning bush plants were Harvest Moon, G. W. Childs, Adele and Mutual Friend. William Anderson must be congratulated for once more winning the most coveted prize, Pierson's silver cup. His varieties were T. Eaton, Mme. Deis, T. Carrington, Mrs. Coombs, Nellie Pockett, H. J. Jones, Appleton and Swanley Girl. In the 36 blooms, 6 varieties, 6 of each class, Geo. Middleton exhibited P. Kay, Weeks, Jones, Bonaffon, Morel and Robinson. William Smith exhibited a new pink chrysanthemum of great size. F. R. Pierson put up a grand lot of blooms, not for competition. On this table were a batch of seedlings, some yellows and pinks showing great promise. He was awarded a certificate of merit for them. The largest of them was 22 inches in circumference. Mr. Pierson also exhibited complimentary groups of orchids, ferns, begonias, Pandanus Veitchii and a general assortment of decorative plants.

Appleton won the honors in classes for yellow. George Middleton's winning 25 were Yellow Mayflower, Carrington, N. Pockett, Philadelphia, Autumn Glory, O. P. Bassett, H. Weeks, Portia, Swanley Girl, Yellow Carnot, G. J. Warren, A. J. Balfour, Robinson, M. Deis, Mrs. Barclay, W. C. Egan, P. Kay, Bonaffon, Morel, Iora, Meta, Mme. Carnot and the French mistake re Agriculture.

George Middleton's Liberty roses were the best seen this fall. A vase of that great scarlet carnation sent by C. W. Ward was one of the features of the show; it was given a special award, and a certificate of merit was given the new rose, Mrs. Oliver Ames, shown by John N. May. The specimen ferns exhibited by William Scott, Jas. Nichols and others were simply immense. All are to be congratulated on everything put up at this show. Mr. F. R. Pierson supplied the press with type written lists of awards, which we appreciated.

The school children of the district were admitted free and helped by their tales of delight to advertise the show.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The chrysanthemum show held here from the 5th to the 9th by the Fall Floral Festival Association was a success financially as well as florally. The quality and extent of the exhibits were superior to anything held in this city in years past. There was also a decided departure in the decorations from previous exhibits and while the arrangement was very pretty and effective in some ways yet in other respects it was not as good as some former arrangements, the principal objection being the obstruction of the view from the balcony. After walking among the exhibits and admiring the blooms individually for an hour most of the people would go up to the balcony and listen to the concert and look down on the exhibition as a whole, and when the whole floor could be seen at once it was a grand sight. This year there was an avenue of large latanias raised on pedestals which divided the hall in halves, making really only one-half of the show visible at a time and the same trouble was experienced in photographing the show.

Wild smilax and other green material were used extensively and with the aid of hundreds of incandescent lights a very pleasing effect was produced. Up on the stage there was an exhibit of orchids arranged before a large mirror and people were crowding around them continually. At the other end of the hall was a large table of miscellaneous cut flowers and foliage from all kinds of odd and rare plants, which was very interesting and instructive.

The weather remained fine throughout the week and the attendance was very fair, but hardly up to what such a show ought to draw. But this is the first show held here for many years that did not leave the promoters with a deficit to make up.

The cut blooms of chrysanthemums were as fine as any one could wish to see and most classes were hotly contested. The two most prominent varieties were Timothy Eaton and Col. Appleton. Eaton certainly has the size and stem, but we were disappointed in seeing such a large open center in many of the blooms. Perhaps this can be remedied with proper handling. Appleton seems to be a perfect yellow and was easily the finest yellow in the show. Bonaffon, which has always been a favorite here, looked like about 30 cents beside it, and it will now have to "go away back and sit down" in the exhibition hall. Old Viviani-Morel and Mrs. Perrin still seem to be the leaders in pink, and a good pink with the size and substance of Eaton would be appreciated.

In the class for 20 Eaton the E. G. Hill Co. were first, with Vesey's from Fort Wayne second and G. Teilmann of Marion third. These were all grand blooms and each lot was only a few points better than the one next to it. In 20 Appleton Vesey's were first, with N. Smith & Son second and H. W. Riemann third. In 20 Bonaffon E. G. Hill was first, with Vesey second and H. W. Riemann third. In 20 Mrs. D. Smith, N. Smith & Son were first, with Hill second and Riemann third. These blooms were only about half done and did not show the variety to advantage. In 20 Mrs. Perrin, Hill was first, with Riemann second and J. Heidenreich third.

In 20 yellow N. Smith & Son were first with a vase of Mrs. Glessner, H. W. Riemann was second with G. Wedding and Hill third with H. L. Sunderbruch. In 20 white Gunnar Teilmann was first with Fee du Champsaur, W. W. Coles of Kokomo was second with the same variety and E. Huckleidre third with Robinson. In 20 pink Hill was first with S. T. Murdock, Riemann was second with Nono and Bentermann Bros, third with V. Morel. In 20 red or bronze N. Smith & Son were first with Charles Davis, Hill was second with Kate Broomhead and Teilmann third with Arab.

In 10 white Hill was first and W. W. Coles second; both showed Eaton. In 10 yellow N. Smith was first and Hill second, both with Appleton. In 10 pink Hill was first and H. W. Riemann second, both with Viviani-Morel. In 10 any other color Conway was first with Bassett and Teilmann second with Chito.

In the class for 10 blooms in 10 varieties the E. G. Hill Company was first with a fine lot of blooms of H. J. Jones, Fakir, Princess Alice of Monaco, Mme. Jouvinn, Mrs. E. D. Smith, Collette, Col. Appleton, Kate Broomhead, Timothy Eaton and M. V. Claverin. N. Smith & Son were second with Merza, Bruant, Yanariva, Jora, Chas. Davis, Rustique, Wm. B. Chamberlain, Eaton, Appleton and Mrs. E. D. Smith.

In 5 specimen plants Conway was first and J. Heidenreich was second. Both had fine plants considering the short time they had to grow them in. In 2 white J. Heidenreich was first, with Conway second. In 2 pink Heidenreich was first and Conway second. In 2 any other color Heidenreich was first and Conway second. In 1 white Heidenreich was first and Conway second. In 1 yellow Heidenreich was first and Teilmann second. In 1 any other color Heidenreich was first and E. Huckleidre second.

In best 30 plants, single stem and bloom, yellow, E. Huckleidre & Son were first and Conway second; both had Bonaffon. In 30 white Stuart & Haugh of Anderson were first with Robinson. In 30 pink E. Huckleidre was first with Merula and Conway second with Lady Harriott. In 30 any other color Conway was first and Riemann second, both with Childs. In 30 plants not less than 10 varieties, H. W. Riemann was first and Hill second. In 5 plants in 8-inch pots J. Heidenreich was first and E. Huckleidre second.

In 6 plants in 6-inch pots, white, E. Huckleidre & Son were first and J. Heidenreich second. In 6 yellow J. Heidenreich was first and H. W. Riemann second. In 6 of any other color H. W. Riemann was first. On standard yellow H. W. Riemann was first and Conway second. On standard pink Conway was first and Riemann second. On standard white Riemann was first and Conway second. On standard any other color Conway was first and Riemann second.

H. W. Riemann showed several seedling mums and captured the S. A. F. silver medal with a white scoring 91 points. A pink one scored 87 points and another white scored 86 points.

The carnation show was far superior to anything that had ever been shown here in the fall and the blooms in most cases had midwinter quality in them. In 50 variegated Vesey showed Mrs. Bradt. In 50 white Vesey was first and Stuart & Haugh second; both had White Cloud. In 50 red Stuart & Haugh were first and E. T. Grave of Richmond second, both with America. In 50 pink E. T. Grave was first with Vesey second, both with Lawson. In 100 blooms Vesey was first with Triumph and Lawson and E. T. Grave second with Dorothy, John Hartje had on exhibition several varieties of pedigree seedlings and captured the S. A. F. bronze medal with a white one and a certificate with a pink one. R. Witterstaetter sent a vase of Enquirer and another of a fine white seedling. Baur & Smith showed a vase of Elma, which were fine. E. A. Nelson showed a vase of Mrs. Nelson, which were fine, considering that they were only planted a few weeks. He also gave away 1,000 blooms on Thursday evening at the lecture given by Mr. Griffiths on carnations. The Cottage Gardens, of Queens, L. I., also sent a lot of Gov. Roosevelt, and so did Mr. Fisher a lot of Mrs. Lawson, to be given away that evening.

The rose display was also grand and many fine blooms were staged. In 20 Perles, H. W. Riemann had his own way. In 20 Brides, South Park Floral Company, of New Castle, was first, with Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, second. In 20 Maids, Vesey was first and South Park Floral Company second. In 20 Liberty, Vesey was alone. In 20 Kaiserin, West View Floral Company, of Knightstown, was first and W. W. Coles second. In 20 any other kind, South Park Floral Company was first with Golden Gate. In 20 American Beauty, South Park Floral Company was first, and Coles second. Any rose not disseminated prior to 1901, American Rose Company, of Washington, D. C., was first, with a vase of its new rose, Ivory, or White Golden Gate. This is truly a grand rose. The E. G. Hill Company showed a fine vase of White Lady and J. N. May showed a vase of Mrs. Oliver Ames, both of which were grand. Later on Mr. Hill came over with two blooms of a new rose resembling Ulrich Brunner in color and general makeup and large, heavy foliage.

In 500 violets, Young & Smith were first and J. Hartje second. In 2 Pandanus Veitchii, H. W. Rieman was first and J. Peterson, of Cincinnati, second. In 10 adiantums, Bertermann Bros. were first and Rieman second. In 16 cyclamen, Rieman was first and Bertermann Bros. second. These were not well enough in bloom to make a good show.

In 10 foliage plants, Rieman was first. In 10 geraniums, Rieman was first and E. Huckleberg & Son second. In 10 flowering begonias, Bertermann Bros. were first and Hill second. In 10 Rex begonias, Rieman was first and G. R. Gause, of Richmond, second.

In 6 palms Bertermann Bros. were first. In pair palms not over 24-inch tubs, Rieman was first and Bertermann Bros. second. In specimen palm, Rieman was alone. In specimen Boston fern, Baur & Smith were first and Rieman second. In 6 ferns Bertermann Bros. were first and Rieman second.

There were two table decorations, two mumm baskets, two rose baskets and several designs, but there was no competition in those classes. Also two tables of roses, one arranged by Bertermann Bros. and the other by H. W. Rieman.

The music was furnished by Klausman's orchestra and Herman Bellstedt, Jr., the great solo cornetist.

On Wednesday evening at a meeting called in connection with the entertainment it was decided to bring about, if possible, the adoption of the carnation as the national flower.

Visitors from out of town were J. D. Meat-saw Carmody, George M. Iron-gutter Garland, W. W. Kaiserlin Coles, J. Peterson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, Charles Knopf and wife, John Challenge Ventilator Evans, George Fulle and wife, George Gause, E. G. Hill, Joseph Hill, Fred Lemon, Ben Schroeder, H. Shepard, all of Richmond; J. S. Stuart and wife and J. A. E. Haugh and wife of Anderson; Paul Tauer, of Lebanon; Gunnar Teilmann and Ed Bissel, of Marion; Jacob Schulz, August Banman and Mr. Kuntzman, of Louisville, Ky.; Ed. J. Brown, of Shelbyville; E. Hyatt, of Anderson; Mrs. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne; and a crowd of Cincinnati florists whom the writer missed but among whom was Ed Gillett.

Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, Ohio, was judge and his decisions were satisfactory in every case. A. B.

Of all the exhibitions given this season that held by the Lawrence-Cedarhurst Horticultural Society in the Lawrence Hall, Nov. 8, deserves the most praise. This society is the youngest, it being only recently organized, and the locality cannot boast of having much glass, but it has a few good men who feel like fish out of water unless they are growing for exhibition. A few of them have, so to speak, been reared in exhibition halls in Europe and in America and no matter where such men go exhibition plants and flowers can be seen.

Alex McKenzie, John G. McNicoll, James Bell, E. J. Horn, Thomas Sanderson, Herbert Entrobist, Wm. Mitchell, John Reilly, Paul Seidlin and Maurice Griffin deserve great credit for the success of this show. The wealthy people of the locality took keen interest in the winning of the awards, many of them displaying more anxiety than their gardeners. The hall was not large enough, everything being cramped up. Prizes were awarded to pupils of the schools and to amateurs. School children were admitted free and hundreds attended.

Decorative Plants.

Group covering 100 sq. ft.—1st, J. McNicoll; 2nd, J. Reilly.

Six stove and greenhouse plants—1st, J. Bell; 2nd, J. McNicoll.

Three specimen ferns—1st, A. McKenzie; 2nd, J. McNicoll.

In the fern exhibits was shown an immense basket of Nephrolepis exaltata with fronds 7 feet long; it was the best decorative plant seen at all the shows.

J. Bell, A. McKenzie and J. McNicoll were winners in the classes for specimen palms, table of decorative plants and six table plants.

Chrysanthemum Plants.

A. McKenzie won 1st for group with foliage plants (J. Reilly 2nd), 1st for three best plants (J. McNicoll 2nd). For 12 in 12 varieties, single stem, 6-in. pots, 1st, J. McNicoll; 2nd, J. Bell. Six plants same, 1st, J. Bell; 2nd, J. McNicoll. Six plants, 6 varieties, not less than 3 nor more than 6 blooms to a plant 1st, J. Bell; 2nd, J. McNicoll. The same exhibitors divided honors in classes for specimen bush plants. J. Bell's anemone variety Garza was a little beauty, the only anemone seen at the shows worth considering; this class of chrysanthemums deserve to be more popular.

Cut Chrysanthemums.

Twenty-four blooms 4 varieties, 6 of each. 1st, J. Bell, with Appleton, T. Eaton, T. L. Park and Minerva. Bell also won first for 12 in 4 varieties, 3 of each, with Eureka, Appleton, N. Pickett and Lady Roberts. For 6 yellow with the best Bonnaffons seen in years; they were grand. Six crimson with J. Shrimpton, A. McKenzie and J. McNicoll's winning seconds.

A. McKenzie won 1st for 6 pink with V-Morel, the best seen this season. J. Bell was second with Mrs. Coombs. J. Bell won 1st for 6 whites with Silver Wedding; McKenzie, 2nd, with T. Eaton. The Burton special prize for 24 blooms was won by J. McNicoll with the largest lot of flowers seen at all the shows; some of them measured from 22 to 31 inches; 2nd prize went to A. McKenzie.

The winners in the class for 12 varieties were Mme. Rogers, Morel, Portia, Mrs. Mease, Weeks, Mutual Friend, Eaton, Yellow Mayflower, Robinson, Appleton, P. Kay and Jerome Jones. J. Bell's T. Eatons measured 22x18; they were immense. He also had some grand Inter-Oceans.

Cut Roses.

McKenzie and McNicoll divided most of the honors in the rose classes. Ten dollars and $5.00 were offered for 12 Perles; 1st went to J. McNicoll; 2nd to J. Bell; and $25.00 was offered for 18 Beauties. The Beauty prize was captured by McKenzie; 2nd, McNicoll. This order was reversed in the other class for Beauties.

Ten dollars and $5.00 was offered for 30 carnations. First went to P. Siedlin; 2nd to A. McKenzie. H. Eltzholtz was a winner in violets and carnations. Thos. Sanderson, Karl Kretschmar and M. Griffin also got their share of the prizes.

Elliott's carving set for display of vegetables was won by J. McNicoll. The vegetables shown were in quantity and quality most creditable.

It was a very good show. The judges were Wm. Russell, Milbrook; J. W. Withers, New York; and Peter Duff, Orange, N. J. J. I. DONLAN.

COLD SPRINGS, N. Y.

The third annual exhibition of the Putnam County Horticultural Society was held in the Town Hall, Cold Springs-on-the-Hudson, November 7 and 8. Owing to the unwise policy of restricting competition in the majority of the classes to the gardeners of Putnam county, this year's show was the poorest ever held along the Hudson. It is quite true and an important desideratum that the glass area of Putnam county would stand no show with that of its neighbors, but all the same it looks bad when one society shuts out all others from competition. The fact that not a single outsider exhibited and the members themselves failed to show ought to be sufficient to guide future schedule makers. The future of Putnam county shows depends on outside exhibits.

We have the very highest praise for the few workers who collected $300 for premiums and in other ways did their very best for this year's show. They are William J. Buckley, Peter Mason, James Cassidy, William Dyas, Leander Hustis, Howard Julian and a few others.

For best group of chrysanthemums and foliage plants, first, P. W. Mason; second, S. Cunningham. Best six plants, first, P. W. Mason. Group of decorative foliage plants, first, H. Julian. Six foliage plants, first, W. Dyas. Six ferns, first, W. Dyas. Specimen fern, first, H. Julian, also with specimen Asparagus Sprengeri. Specimen foliage plant, Leander Hustis. Six poinsettia plants, first, W. Dyas.

President A. V. Porter's prize, a silver mounted glass vase, for 36 chrysanthemum blooms, 6 varieties, 6 of each was won by Leander Hustis; 12 white and 12 pink, first, W. J. Buckley; 6 yellow, first, L. Hustis; 25 blooms, arranged for effect, first, W. J. Buckley; for 24 blooms on boards and 12 on boards, P. W. Mason won firsts.

W. J. Buckley won first prizes for 12 Beauties, 12 Bridesmaids, 12 Brides, 12 Perles, 12 any other variety. P. W. Mason won second for Bridesmaids and James Cassidy second for Brides.

In carnations W. J. Buckley won firsts for 12 scarlet, 12 white, 12 pink and 12 new carnations. P. W. Mason was second in 12 whites. This exhibitor also won first in violets. The same exhibitors, with the addition of M. Gallagher, were winners in classes for vegetables.

Leander Hustis won first for largest chrysanthemum in the show with Appleton, and W. J. Buckley was awarded a special prize for vase of Timothy Eatons, which were the best blooms at the show. The judges were Messrs. F. R. Pierson, Forson and E. Wood, of Wood Bros., Fishkill. Some set funeral designs were shown by the Spy Hill Conservatory, florists of Fishkill. J. I. DONLAN.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

The past week has been a busy one for the exhibitor, with shows being held all over the country at almost the same time. This makes it hard to get around and see all that's going on, but it is of course unavoidable. The time when the "mum" is in its glory is from Nov. 1st to the 10th, and of course the different exhibitions must come in those dates if the "mum" is the central attraction.

The quality of the flowers exhibited this year is very high, and the number of exhibitors who set up extra special quality flowers is greater than ever before. I have not met a single individual this year who has gone to the trouble to inform me that the extra large flowers are not attractive any more. This was the cry with lots of people a year or so ago, but one has only to watch the great bulk of the general public as they enter a show, to see how little ground there was or is for such a statement.

Nearly everybody makes straight for the largest flowers and it is a ridiculous statement to make to say that the pompon or single types will ever satisfy the American people. This is a great country, a country of big things, and the American Beauty rose and the big "mum" have a fast hold on the public taste. Possibly we are today running more to size than finish in our flowers.

This is particularly true with Timothy Eaton. In my notes last week I stated that this variety was developing without the bad center, but I erred too soon. The absolutely perfect flowers are not numerous, and consequently Eaton must rank lower as an exhibition flower than as a commercial flower. The past week it has been beaten in competition by both Merza and Mrs. Weeks, neither one of which can hold a candle to it for lasting qualities, or general usefulness; but they both put on a fine finish, and leave nothing to be desired in color.

Merza will not take up the water when cut, on account of the stem getting so hard, and will not keep fresh more than a few hours off the plant.

Mrs. Weeks is so soft that it is useless as a commercial flower, but it has a finish as fine as satin, so all you can do is ask, like the politician: "What are you going to do about it?"

Of all exhibition varieties, none can compare with the White and Yellow Carnots when the crown bud is used. Their only fault, but it is a fatal one, is that the stem is unable to hold the enormous flower erect. Our buds were taken August 23, and the flowers were ready for cutting by Oct. 30, though they have kept improving ever since. We have had enormous flowers, but they would not exhibit them, knowing that they would not "stand for it."

Mr. T. Carrington, an Australian variety of the Mrs. Geo. West-color, has made a great showing during the past week. It makes an enormous flower, but is not very kind in growth, and is a difficult variety to get to produce perfect buds. It was in condition for cutting on Oct. 27, and is still in fine shape.

Mrs. Barkley is a variety that we think very highly of. It is just now in condition for cutting, and is a lovely shade of pink. We shall give Barkley an extended trial next year, because it comes in at a time when most of the other pinks, with the exception of Maud Dean, are over. The foliage is large and bulky, but the pink of perfection is not yet in sight.

Golden Wedding we shall begin to cut about the 14th, and very fine they are. It is an old variety and a good one, and will wholesale at 50 cents a flower right through when of first-class quality. Take the trio of Robinson, Morel and Wedding, and after the lapse of years, nothing can approach them in their respective classes. So many of the present day novelties go to pieces after the second year. Take Bonaffon this year, and while it is exquisite in form, it is deteriorating rapidly in point of size.

Wm. H. Chadwick will be ready for cutting in a few days, and is certainly a very fine late white. Chadwick seems to be one of those things that for some reason or other does not catch on at the time it is introduced. Full many a variety is born to blush unseen after the committees have got out their little hammers and taken a fall out of it, though if I recall correctly, Chadwick was scored very highly by every committee before whom it was exhibited. Possibly it is grown more extensively in other sections than here. It certainly deserves to be.

In noting the prices obtained in different cities, it seems to me that somebody is growing "mums" at a loss. Your Philadelphia correspondent noted that good flowers went for $3 a dozen and seemed to think that was a good price. Now, if the flowers were really first-class, that is to say, up to the exhibition standard, $3 a dozen was no price at all. If the grower will keep track of every item of expense connected with the crop, he will find that exhibition flowers cost more than a quarter each to produce. I hold that the very highest grade flowers ought to wholesale at 50 cents each, if the grower is to make anything on his crop and allow for a percentage of poor flowers.

But $3 a dozen is a princely price alongside the reports from other cities. From 5 cents up seems to be the prevailing figure. Now when an earth can make any money on "mums" at 60 cents a dozen? Better by half grow roses or carnations. There is something radically wrong with either the stock or the market, when such prices rule. If we couldn't get more than 5 cents for our quality flowers, we would go in the glass business, or join the noble army of the Sons of Rest, or adopt some other species of lucrative employment.

New Pink Gladiolus Park Belle.

GLADIOLUS PARK BELLE.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a spike of flowers of the new pink gladiolus, Park Belle, grown by the Michigan Seed Company, South Haven, Mich.

The color is a solid illuminated pink of a pleasing shade, the flower is well formed and in habit it is a dwarf grower, ranging from 2 to 2½ feet and having a stout stem. It gives promise of being very valuable as a bedder as well as for cut flowers.

It was awarded honorable mention at the Buffalo convention of the S. A. F. and a diploma at the Pan-American Exposition.

ROSE NOTES.Mulching.

As soon as the feeding and roots begin to come near the surface it is time to stop stirring the soil and apply a light mulch, consisting of two-thirds well-rotted cow manure and one-third soil. This should be prepared during the summer by being piled up in the same way as planting soil, then chopped up and in three weeks turned over. Passing it through a three-quarter inch screen makes it just about fine enough to cover the bench without putting it on too thick. Instead of a screen we have for the last year been using the Tonawanda seed crusher, with three-quarter inch drum; it does the work well and is a great labor-saver.

Add to each cubic yard of compost 20 pounds of fine bone flour and spread evenly on the bench to the depth of half an inch. This should be repeated at intervals of five or six weeks during the winter. After the first mulching the plants will be able to use a richer compost, which can be obtained by increasing the quantity of bone. By the middle of March we will have more sunshine and a longer day; the plants will then be making a more vigorous growth and will require a heavier mulch. One inch in depth is about the limit to insure best results.

Watering.

This is one of the most important operations in rose culture and one of the most difficult to describe. How and when it ought to be done can be determined only by a thorough inspection of each bench. As atmospheric conditions and seasons are continually changing, plants at the different stages of their growth requiring different quantities of moisture, it is only after years of careful and close observation and a knowledge of the requirements of the plants, coupled with sound judgment, that the art of watering is attained.

The bench should be carefully inspected every morning and all dry spots gone carefully over previous to the general watering; and no attempt should be made to do the syringing and watering at the same time, as that practice will most surely lead to disaster. By the middle of September the plants will begin to prepare for the winter, the root action will be more sluggish and the plants show signs of wanting a rest.

To carry them successfully over this critical period calls for the best judgment the grower has at his command. Overwatering can easily be detected by the leaves assuming a paler shade and must be carefully guarded against. As the season advances they will require less water, and as heat will now be used on cold nights the benches will begin to dry out from the bottom instead of from the surface and the drying will be more irregular than during the summer. Vigilant care will have to be used, as it is easy to be deceived by appearances. Every bright day the syringe ought to be used to eradicate spider, as the dark, short days of winter will soon come when that will have to be done sparingly; and to enter the winter with a dose of spider is almost as bad as having mildew, and quite as hard to get quit of.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

Business conditions continue much the same as last week. There is a good demand for all kinds of choice flowers, with poor stock dragging badly. Prices have not materially changed. Violets advanced a trifle on Saturday of last week and have held their own pretty well this week. Choice roses and carnations rule a shade higher. Meteors brought from $4 to $6 per 100, with a very few at $7. Chrysanthemums went rather slowly a few days ago, but the exhibition this week has a quickening effect on the demand. Timothy Eaton is the best white coming in; it is really fine, selling well in limited quantities. S. S. Pennock received some exceptionally handsome Gold Mine this week, a well named variety. Maud Dean is the standard pink, with Mrs. Perrin a favorite when obtainable.

W. K. Harris has some President McKinley, which appear popular.

The demand for red and blue flowers for last Saturday's football game was hardly up to expectation, due probably to the absence of any element of uncertainty in the contest, our university having a very poor team. The wholesalers found a limited demand for violets, red roses and chrysanthemum George W. Childs. The retailers did not experience the rush anticipated for these flowers; still they did fairly well.

Various Notes.

Joseph Heacock, Wynote, Pa., has experienced the busiest October in the history of his place. Both his rose and palm houses are in the pink of condition, giving promise of a great winter season.

The Century Flower Shop is advertising its business by means of trolley cards. The public are invited to come and see their bargains in plants and flowers by a regulation sized card, which is embellished by a fern frond, or spray much longer to tie a house, owing chiefly to the short pieces, that the extra time consumed more than counterbalances the saving in cost of material. Raffles is valuable for tying up palms and in many other ways where string might cut the leaves or tender shoots, but I do not like it for tying stakes on roses.

Dumont & Co. have completed their improvements at 1305 Filbert street. The store now presents a very attractive appearance, with a neat office on one side and show window on the other. This firm started in business a few years ago as the distributing medium for a number of Chester county carnation growers. They have now three times as many shippers, covering all lines of cut flowers.

The Germantown Horticultural Society's meeting on Monday evening was well attended, the members and their friends turning out in force to hear Henry F. Mitchell talk about "Bulls for Outdoor Planting." An interesting debate followed, many questions being asked the speaker, which proved of special interest.

dolence sent to the family of the late Peter F. Daly. A letter was read from the Kansas City flower show management to the effect that there was something doing out there, but "mum's the word." No doubt there will be many fine exhibits sent from this section. The general opinion is that the Kansas City people should be shown all that is best.

Under the head of new business Mr. O'Mara spoke in favor of holding another show in the Garden next year. He reviewed all the good work done by holding the great show. The chairman called upon each member present for his opinion, and the result was that every man present not only favored the holding of a show but also put his name down for various sums as a guarantee fund. In a few moments $1,330 was subscribed among the following: Walter Sheridan, C. B. Weathered, John Young, W. A. Manda, L. Hafner, A. Herrington, also for Mr. McK. Twombly, P. O'Mara, A. L. Miller, H. Langjahr, John Cleary, G. Cook, W. Duckham, W. H. Siebrecht, Mr. Nash for Moore, Hentz & Nash, T. Lang, J. Nugent, Mr. Lencker, J. Morris, John Birnie, H. Bunyard, Fred Atkins, T. Roehrs; W. Schweinfurth, J. H. Troy, W. Elliott, Alex. Burns, F. Traendly, W. Plumb and a few whose names we missed, and the money was offered so quickly that we couldn't keep track of all, but it was in sums of from $10 to $100.

The officers of the club were empowered to make a contract similar to the one this year with the Madison Square Garden management to hold a show in the Garden next fall. The hall will be available on the 27th of October. The show will be from the 30th of October to the 6th of November. On motion of Mr. Troy the secretary was instructed to notify absent members of the work done by the poor members present. It was an exhibition night. We never saw the members so enthusiastic, and every man got up and gave full vent to his opinions. There is no doubt but that in the New York show next year the United States will have something to be proud of.

It would require several pages of this paper to record all the good things said. The schedule part came in for a thorough thrashing. Every scheme was advocated. Finally the new exhibition committee, consisting of Messrs. Herrington, W. A. Manda, Fred Atkins, J. H. Troy, W. H. Siebrecht, W. Plumb and C. W. Ward, were instructed to draft a new schedule and send it to all the members for suggestions, all of which it is hoped will be sifted and arranged for report at next meeting. It is hoped to have the adopted schedule for general distribution early in January. It was the general opinion that the next show should be more in the way of a trade exhibition; there is ample space for both a great trade and private gardeners' show. It was suggested to appoint a capable manager six months ahead that would insure a larger success. Suggestions and all forms of encouragement are in order now. The president will appoint a new committee of ways and means to attend to the mint.

H. Beaulieu showed a small plant of a new French red chrysanthemum named Mme. Plisson. The awards committee thought the dwarfness of the plant was merely cultural freakishness.

A letter was read from the ladies of the National Flower Distributing Guild thanking the club for the flowers sent to poor children from the recent show.

Robert Crawford, Jr., says that the season, very late in opening, is now a very busy one. His idea about chrysanthemums is that there is a good opening for a grower who will make a specialty of medium sized blooms for cut flowers, nicely done on single stems; such flowers as could be wholesaled profitably at 75 cents to $1.25 per dozen. He thinks the large flowers are often beyond the reach of the ordinary buyer, who could and would buy the medium grades all through the season. Colored shades on the electric lights make Mr. Crawford's show window especially attractive when illuminated. A fine photograph of this store, taken for the Review a few years ago, appears in Scott's Manual.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have a wonderful collection of florists' supplies, an instructive object lesson of the growth of our business. Their store is well worth a visit.

A very successful grower said last season that raffia had displaced string for everything except for tying a bunch of flowers. His roses are all tied with raffia and even his stakes were tied to the wires with the same material. It was cheaper and just about as quickly done. I was much impressed—adopted it on my own place and strongly advocated its use in my column. After a thorough trial I am using string again—with me the raffia does not hold so well. After a few heavy syringings some of the stakes will slip along the wires, and it takes us so

Club Meeting.

There was quite a large attendance at the regular meeting of the Florists' Club, held on Monday night. Walter Sheridan presided. The exhibition committee gave a full report of the Madison Square Garden show, which stated that though the financial end was short the Garden management was most generous and wished the club would try again next year. The club members who had put up the guarantee fund were satisfied. The committee was thanked for all the hard work done; votes of thanks were also passed to the several committees, the press committee being especially eulogized for the splendid results of its endeavor.

The nominating committee placed the following names for the officers to be elected at the December meeting: For president, Arthur Herrington, W. H. Siebrecht and D. Y. Mellis; vice-president, J. V. Phillips, Frank McMahon, John Birnie; secretary, John Young, John B. Nugent. Mr. Nugent nominated Harry Bunyard to take his place; treasurer, Charles B. Weathered, H. Gibbons; trustees, John Donaldson, Alex. McConnell, H. Steinhoff, H. Hentz, Jr., L. Hafner and Paul Dailledouze. Members can vote for any other name not on this ticket. Some lively electioneering is anticipated.

Mr. Morris, for the committee on resolutions, read a copy of the letter of con-

BOSTON.Trade Conditions for Nov. 4, 9.

A continuance of the previous week. The same old tears and groans, the same old drag and tussle on the part of the grower in most lines, and the same quiet satisfaction to the buyer as he hastens home with his purchase. I think there is as much business really being done as can be expected, but the plentiful supply of chrysanthemums especially, and of roses partly, deadens the appearance of things and keeps prices down. Carnations do not seem overplentiful and violets really became scarce toward the end of the week. Eaton keeps the call for cut lilies supplied, readily realizing $1.50 per dozen. Chrysanthemums run from 25 cents to a possible $5; red roses do not beat $3 just now, with 2 or 3 cents each as a starting point, and pink and white ones cannot get beyond 10 cents, beginning at free gifts to the hospitals. Pinks 75 cents to $4 per 100. Violets $3 to 75 cents, with a quite possible upward tendency. Mignonette, candytuff and bouvardia at normal figures and paper whites beginning to come in, going out at $3 per 100.

Weather still salubrious.

Chrysanthemum Show.

By all odds the grandest exhibition was that one open simply to those fortunate ones who received a printed invitation to see the chrysanthemums in bloom at the Waban Rose Conservatories at Natick. When Mr. E. M. Wood undertakes anything it is carried through to completion in all detail, consequently a special car was provided, which left Boston with two expectant smiles on nearly every seat, which were transferred by barges from the Wellesley station to the greenhouses.

The first glimpse of these houses is astonishing and the more they are examined the more your wonder grows. On the outside they resemble nothing so much as a huge fleet of war vessels at anchor. The same order and discipline throughout seem apparent, too. Each little detail of a smaller plant attains the dignity of a perfectly equipped department here, with forty men to man the ropes. Two hundred and twenty-five thousand feet of glass and a new house under way that will add 50,000 feet more.

Of course the 10,000 prize chrysanthemums only occupy a small portion of this vast extent, enormous though they be, most of the place being set to roses. There is also an extensive growth of Asparagus plumosus nanus. I question if such a display of chrysanthemums exists elsewhere. Most of them from six to eight feet tall, proportionately large in every way, of many different kinds and colors, they are a source of silent admiration rather than of any kind of description. This remark will also apply more or less to the whole establishment, which is all in first-class shape for a winter's campaign.

The new roses, Liberty and Helen Gould, make a fine showing here, the former appearing 100 per cent better than last year at this time and looks as if it might pull steadily all winter.

The new cold storage plant came in for its full share of attention. The key of its action is that strong ammonia is forced under heavy pressure through a tiny valve-like pinhole, causing it to become vaporized into pipes running around the refrigerating room. This simple process utilizes a lot of heat, which is abstracted from the air in the room. Further on, running water removes this heat and the once more liquefied ammonia returns to the engine to be used over and over again. Three rooms are thus fitted, the apparatus working much more effectively and cheaply than was expected. As a little test the temperature of a room has been carried down to 13 degrees below zero.

Another barge ride supplemented by an electric trip and a magnificent dinner at the Woodland Park hotel completed the pleasant outing. The occasion was a bit marred by the present condition of Mr. Wood's health, but he attended the dinner and we were much pleased to see him looking so well. Many delicate compliments to him and his able assistant, Mr. Alex. Montgomery, were passed during the after-dinner remarks, and many sincere hopes were expressed for speedy return to robust health.

At Horticultural Hall.

I object to the interior of the new hall and refuse to be comforted! The exterior is massive, impressive, sublime and beautiful, but the interior is largely plain brickwork, and the space is all cut up by massive arched partitions, causing great waste of room, spoiling the effect of the floral and plant display and giving the appearance of a good county jail. "An armory," as one man called it; "A horrible thing," to quote from another; "A cold storage plant," are the words of a third. It resembles the sub-basement of the statehouse extension, which is built to sustain the colossal structure above it.

"Mine not to reason why;
Mine not to make reply;
Mine but to feebly try
To say 'Some one has blundered!'"

I sincerely believe the exhibition would make a better showing in the old brick building, and that this year's show is hardly up to the standard. The fruit show is excellent, especially that of pears and grapes. The vegetable department is quite fair, combining this exhibit with a former one, omitted because of the unfinished condition of the building. Points especially interesting were the fine exhibit of bays, palms and ferns from R. & J. Farquhar, which formed excellent backing for the high colors massed in front; the Timothy Eaton mums shown by E. N. Pierce & Sons, Messrs. M. A. Patten, Peter Fisher, and A. Roper's carnation exhibits; H. N. Eaton's lilies, William Miller & Son's violets, James Conley's chrysanthemums, John N. May's rose Mrs. Oliver Ames, which he purchased from Mr. R. Montgomery, and a new salvia, Maroon Prince, being introduced by W. A. Rawson; these names about covering the commercial growers represented among the exhibitors.

The orchid family was well represented, but I think not so well as on some former occasions. The main hall is so built that heavy teams may drive in to unload upon the floor, which is of sub-soil primeval, unranked to the extent that bowlders the size of hen's eggs attract the attention of your corns, and dry and dusty to the extent of hazing the atmosphere and tickling your bronchial tubes! And to think that the recognized representative of a flourishing paper should be told by the doorkeeper of such a place to "go away back, stand up and buy a ticket," in order to possess himself of such inconveniences! But he took the prescription "went back and got it filled." "We won't go there any more; 'way down to the jingo farm!"

At E. G. Pierce & Son's.

I took a snapshot trip to this place, more especially to get an idea of the probable length of the remainder of the chrysanthemum season. According to their houses, it is two-thirds over, and work is beginning on forcing lilies for Easter. But, of course, they have a huge supply yet coming in, even on that basis, including 400 of those magnificent Timothy Eatons and a fine house of Bonaffons.

Their houses are undergoing a fearful overhauling, which will result in much greater ease and less expense in management. The sixteen huge houses are now arranged eight upon a side of a low covered passage, and all connected by a tramway for facility in transporting the lilies and other heavy objects.

An Item.

One morning President Stickel, of the Park Street Market, rapped for order and read a paper which had been passed to him. It was as follows:

"In behalf of about fifty frequenters of this market, noted for their good looks and generosity, this presents to the market the veiled picture hanging on the post near the desk. It is one of the directors, deservedly noted for good nature and short stature, heavy good sense and light weight. Long may his banana plant flourish and long may we live to enjoy its shade."

Mr. E. Sutermeister, who had been deputized to bring up another man as the recipient of a joke, was naturally surprised, when the picture was unveiled, to find it was of himself, in a particularly characteristic attitude, standing under a banana plant some fifteen feet high, which was a feature of his own garden this summer. Some of the boys got hold of a small photo of his daughter and had a fine watercolor made from it, which Mr. Stickel accepted for the market in a neat little speech. And well he might, as it is a fine picture of one of the finest men in the business.

CHICAGO.The Market.

Stock continued overhauling until last Saturday, when with a rush all stock on hand was eaten up, and demand has so far continued brisk. There is now a shortage of pink roses, but still enough white to meet demands. The continued cool weather has improved the quality of all stock, and prices, especially of carnations, have also improved. There are enough Beauties to go around, but no excess supply. Both in supply and quality Beauties have been unusually good so far this season, but while buyers have had rather better quality for their money there has been no lowering of prices. Good Beauties seem always in demand, no matter what happens to the rest of the list. There are still lots of weak tea roses, but on the whole the quality is much improved.

The demand for chrysanthemums seems very irregular. One day they are wanted and the next day not. A good share of the demand seems to be for blooms to make a show in the window. Immense numbers are sold, but the results are not so satisfactory as in preceding seasons.

Since Sunday sales of violets have wonderfully improved, and the season of demand for this flower seems to have opened at last. Prices are now $1 to $1.50 a dozen, as represented by the range in price. The demand for white violets is steadily increasing, as they are becoming more and more popular for use in wedding bouquets. Kennicott Bros. Co. are selling large numbers of them for this purpose.

White bouvardia is another flower popular for wedding bouquets. We note some of excellent quality at McKellar & Wintersen's, fine heads of bloom, with stems a foot long. This sells at $3 to $4 a hundred.

Adiantum and asparagus are scarce. Smilax rather in oversupply.

On the whole, the market is in a very satisfactory condition, with an excellent outlook ahead.

There promises to be a good supply for Thanksgiving day trade. Crops are coming on in good shape, with most of the growers, and many will cut late chrysanthemums for this holiday.

The Banquet.

There was a big turnout at the annual banquet of the Florists' Club at the Victoria Hotel last Thursday evening, many extra seats having to be provided at the last moment. The dinner was first class in every respect, and good fellowship reigned supreme.

When President Wintersen arose to clear the decks for the orators he received an ovation that lasted till the boys were tired out. He then introduced Mr. Edgar Sanders as the toastmaster of the evening, and that gentleman took a good, firm hold of the situation. He read a telegram from Director-General Taggart, of the Kansas City show, conveying kind wishes and fraternal regards, and called upon John Thorpe to speak for the Kansas City show. Uncle John told of the arrangements being made and quoted a few items from the premium list that showed the managers of the Kansas City show to be decidedly in earnest. Frank Carter then sang "Illinois," all joining in the chorus. G. L. Grant responded to the toast, "The Florists' Club," and the club quartette, composed of Messrs. McKellar, Wintersen, Kissell and Balluff, rendered a lively selection. James Gurney, of St. Louis, was received with three cheers and gave all a closer view of the beauties of nature. G. H. Pieser, Jr., sang a song on behalf of the wholesalers, in which the rest of the bunch was told to "go 'way back and sit down."

J. Austin Shaw, the Brooklyn Bard, read the Homeric poem that appears elsewhere in this issue, and which was received with much applause. J. D. Carmody explained about his weak kidneys and told several stories in his best vein. W. N. Rudd spoke regarding the exhibitions. Phil Hauswirth for the retailers, W. A. Kennedy for Milwaukee, John Reardon and George Woodward for the private gardeners, Joseph Reeve for the employees and P. F. Bentley for the wholesalers. All the addresses were brief and were freely interspersed with songs by the quartette and Mr. Carter. It was a most enjoyable evening, and one of the most successful banquets ever given by the club. Those who stayed away missed a treat.

Visitors.

Among the visitors during flower show week were James Gurney, St. Louis; H. W. Bueklee and C. W. Johnson, Rockford, Ill.; Fred Breitmeyer, F. Holzgang and George A. Rackham, Detroit, Mich.; M. Heller, New Castle, Ind.; Aug. Swanson, St. Paul; J. A. Evans and Fred Lemon, Richmond, Ind.; G. F. Crabb, Henry Smith and Eli Cross, Grand Rapids, Mich.; W. A. Kennedy, C. C. Ripley, Kansas City; G. E. Hunt, Terre Haute, Ind.; J. D. Carmody, Evansville, Ind.; Mr. Bush, Denver; George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill.; W. H. Gullett, Lincoln, Ill.

THE "YEAR OF OUR LORD," 1950.

[Read at the annual banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club.]

By J. AUSTIN SHAW.

"Should old acquaintance be forgot?"
I'm sure, with me, you answer "Never!"
True friendship, by true souls begot,
Lives on, forever and forever!

It's fifty years from now; Behold!
Another banquet hall is filled;
Our hot times, most of them, are cold!
Our merry, joyous laughter stilled!

We've had our day—our race is run;
Some of us have been good and thrifty!
Most of us had our share of fun,
And now it's 1950!

Let's have our "Mansions in the skies"
And bring us spiritual joy.
To hear new toasts, and their replies,
And list to what our children say!
What joy to see them once again,
'Tis heaven indeed! Our boys, God bless them!
Grown to be splendid manly men,
Would that our spirits might address them.
But no! Our voices all are hushed;
And yet our presence they can feel.
Our bodies may have turned to dust,
But they can hear our mute appeal!

At Last! Cigars, and "feast of reason!"
Now then, "Lean out your souls, and list."
The lovely things they say of us,
I'm sure 'twill "make your eyeballs glisten!"

With "reminiscescence" the toast,
It's kind that we are surely in it.
A kindly word for every ghost
We'll surely hear, when they begin it!

The Toastmaster.

Well, gentlemen, fill up your glasses!
As yours are awfully tonight we'd like
To drink to dear old lads and lassies
Of other years, whose souls we greet!

One toast, alone, tonight we give:
One general honor we bestow!
So, here, to those who have died, yet live!
To those of fifty years ago!

The grandson of a noble sire
Will speak for us on this occasion,
And also, if you so desire,
Sing "Little Brown Jug," by your persuasion!

No need the orator's name to mention!
'Tis Sanders, Junior, Number 4,
So kindly give him your attention,
While he the glorious past explores!

Mr. Sanders, Jr. and the Oration.

Well, gentlemen, it is an honor great,
That I should turn o'er history's pages,
And speak of those to memory dear,
Whose names will shine through all the ages.

Would that Old Time his wings would fold,
And we, together, tonight we'd see
The dear, delightful "story old"
That weaves around these names a crown of glory!

'Their's was an age of toil and fond devotion!
We'll have to try, ere they can sweep rose!
They made this land a garden from ocean ocean!
An wildernesses bud and blossom, as the rose!

With whom shall I begin? My grandsire?
Well, 'tis well!
For Edgar Sanders was a "household word!"
A hundred years ago his name to dwell,
And history says that Edgar was a "bird!"

When he "went home," Dame Nature loudly cried;
For he, like Li Hung Chang, in "working harness" died!
Again, from o'er the past I lift the curtain!
A "President" appears, 'tis "good John Burton!"

A man of sterling qualities and lots of "go!"
The one, I mean, put "on" at Buffalo,
'Tis "Bry" years since then, and records tell
He "filled the bill" and did his duty well!

Most of you—all of you—know of "Uncle John."
His was a busy life; 'tis o'er and "more's to come!"

They tell me there's a monument
Out west, upon a hill, in Kansas City!
I'm sure, for great skill and management,
It was begun
Sometime about the year of 1901.

Talk about oratory! Who in all these years,
Now covered by the past with shadows
Could move so readily to smiles and tears,
So potentially, as dear sweet Robert Craig?

But this night, brethren, I must not forget,
Must, in its memories largely be confined,
To our Chicago ancestors, and yet—
Where dwell such noblemen as E. G. Hill,
I have in mind!

This is a "billy" land, and mountains high,
With snowy crests, our raptured visions fill,
They point to flowery homes beyond the sky,
Where dwell such noblemen as E. G. Hill.

And I am sure we wouldn't if we could Refuse to drink the health of E. M. Wood!
I'll guarantee, where'er his soul roposes,
E. M. is busy, propagating roses!

Broken Column.

No arid plains, no desert of Sahara!
 Could ere confine the soul of Pat O'Mara!
 He stood for honor and deceit be scorned,
 And "Floriculture" has his name adorned.

Those were the days of wondrous exhibitions!
 When landscape architecture was begot!
 This wouldn't be a "banquet" under no conditions,
 If we forgot the glorious name of Scott!

"Great Scott" lives on and on and must have lived since Time began!
 To have evoked the glory he created at the Pan-American!
 Other big "Expos" since have been begotten!
 But Scott and Gurney ne'er will be forgotten!

Posterity would surely think us negligent or queer
 If on a reminiscent night we failed to speak of Dress!
 And I am confident it would our ghostly friends embarrass Should we not drink "eternal life" to dear old Deacon Harris!

There's Beattie, too, and Esler, both up yonder where no hail,
 Nor heat, excessive, will their genial spirits quail!
 And where no boilers burst, nor hinges
 creak, on land or sea,
 I think I see the restless soul of J. D.
 Carmody.

I listen, and a voice floats down in accents we can feel!
 'Tis Adam Graham's; and it says, "I'm feelin' vera weel!"
 As here on Earth, so, in the skies' complete directory,
 There's one name takes up lots of room,
 And it leaves small space for you and me!
 It is a name indeed, 'tis pretty safe to con-jure with,
 I needn't speak of Elmer, but you've heard the name of "Smith."

"Enough!" methinks you say, and yet you will with me agree

The "wee sma hours" would surely pass, and I can plainly see,
 You this "wee time" well spent if all these glorious souls, and true!
 Could pass before us, as we stand, and all their lives review, Great galaxy of stars were they, we'll see their equals, never!
 They've well won immortality, their light will shine forever!

Now for a glance at our "own folks," and then my duty's done!
 For after all, 'tis here they live, and round our hearts entwine.
 No! I'll not listen, when you whisper, "Johnny get your gun."
 To say kind words, to think kind thoughts,
 This is the province mine!

Men who like Chadwick, Uihlein, Ryerson, devoted wealth,
 And time and thought, and energy, and sometimes risked their health, To further Horticulture's weal, and nobly, in the van,
 Joined Nature's beating heart to theirs, and on her mission ran!

 most important asset!
 For Nature owes so much to those grand Pioneers Who've made her reputation sweet, and there's the name of Basset!
 Which in the records, boldy writ, on many

I see right opposite the name of Reinberg,
 "Beauties," "Beauties!"
 Well! That's a record proud to hold; they must have done their duties!
 And Vieter, too, and Fochmann and the Kenicotts and Stokely,
 All men of means and men of might; with hearts attuned to droilery!

I always have admired a man who bravely fights
 Life's battle, and never says "I can't!"
 A man who had the courage of his rights—
 There was one then! His name was Grant!

Through all the years, my constant lawn,
 Dame Nature, grass-er only has scattered favor,
 It must be a reward for "good behavior."
 For every blade of grass spells J. C. Vaughan!

There never was a tree, nor flower, nor bud,
 Would not spell out a name to memory dear!
 In leaf and fruit, Behold! 'Tis Willis Rudd!
 I pause, while o'er his Bier we drop a tear!

With eye of penetrating faith and vision calm—
 Which you, by being good, can also get, sir—
 Indelibly engraved by God, on every palm,
 I see the names of Wittbold, Kidwell, Bet-zler!

Afar: and hand in hand, on beds of flowers,
 A fleshy angel, and a lean one, sure!
 I see asleep amidst the heavenly bowers
 "The Two Johns," John R-varion and John Muir!

Ah, well! The good Lord knows our hearts!
 "Would take an age to tell of Hunt and Wilson and "Our Phil,"
 And all the rest—their names all shine
 On history's page! They always will!

Who could forget M'Adams and M'Kellar,
 And that big-hearted, noisy "Son of a Gun!"
 Whose voice still echoes loudly down the ages!
 You've heard of him; it was Ed. Winterson!

God bless them all; our fathers, uncles, aunts,
 The Deamads, Langes, the Amuses and Kansts!
 The Degnans and the Wienhoelers, the Buettners and the Millers,
 The Krettings and the Andersons, the Hobbs and the Himers!
 And all the rest; not one do we forget! Not one.
 They are immortal and beyond the sun,
 And stars, they shine resplendent, but they come
 And visit us on nights like this, "Tis "Home, "Sweet Home" to them, old memories to renew!
 I plainly feel their gentle touch, don't you?

Dear hands, dear hearts, of the dear "long ago!"
 Small wonder is it, they can thrill us so!

O, Spirits of those happy days,
 Those days of fifty years ago!
 All Hail! Farewell! Adieu! Adieu!
 We drink to you, before you go!

For "Auld acquaintance," ne'er will be forgot Each day, for aye, we'll bring it off to mind—
 Acquaintance sweet of gentle love begot!
 Dear, helpful, happy days, of "Auld Lang Syne!"

BROKEN COLUMN.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a broken column arranged by Mrs. E. Suder, Toledo, O., and sent to the funeral of the late President McKinley by the city of Toledo.

The shaft was seven feet high and the base 30 by 48 inches. In the design there were used about 5,000 carnations, 3,000 asters and several hundred roses, etc. The subject is certainly well handled. The local daily press gave the design very high praise.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The November meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held last Thursday afternoon at the regular place of meeting. The attendance was good and the proceedings very interesting.

The report of the exhibition committee was heard and Chairman Meinhardt asked all members to help all they could and try to make the show a success. The committee will have everything in good shape for receiving and caring for the exhibits. A full report of our show will appear in the next issue of the REVIEW.

Mr. P. T. Barnes and A. G. Grenier were elected to membership. Mr. G. E. McClure, late of Buffalo, and now at the Missouri Botanical Garden, made application for membership.

How to Grow Mushrooms: by Falconer, price $1.00, a valuable book that should be in the possession of every mushroom grower.

JOHNSON & STOKES, 217 219 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. F. M. Ellis, who has charge of the collecting of the World's Fair assessments, reports very little progress and says that the amount must be paid at the next regular meeting of the club and all who have not yet paid their share should do so at once. Either the secretary or treasurer of the club, or Mr. Ellis, will receive the money.

At the next meeting of the club Mr. E. W. Guy will read an essay on "Profitable Selection and Forcing of Bulbs," and Emil Schray will at the same meeting tell us how to grow "Chrysanthemums from a Commercial Standpoint."

Mr. McClure of the Missouri Botanical Garden was present and read an essay on "The History of the Chrysanthemum." Mr. McClure went into every detail of the development of the chrysanthemum. The paper was very interesting, especially at this time of the year when the "mum" is in its glory. Mr. McClure is a very bright young man from the William Scott school and will make a very valuable member.

A number of questions in the book brought out quite a discussion and the meeting lasted until 5:30 p. m. The next meeting of the club will be held the third Thursday in December and by that time the exhibition committee will be able to make a final report of the show.

The Market.

Trade has been somewhat better the past week; stock not quite so plentiful, though enough coming in to supply the demand. First-class chrysanthemums are selling fairly well, but poor stock, which is in great abundance, is hard to sell at any price. A great many growers claim that they are all cut out of their first-class stock and have very little left for the show, which they say is a week late.

In roses no variety is scarce. Choice stock brings from $4 to 100, while seconds sell as low as $1 per 100. The stock of Brides and Maids is very fine; also Meteors and Gates, while Perles and Woottons are not far behind them. All are selling better than last week.

Carnations are in excellent demand and stock not overplentiful; all are of good color and are fairly long-stemmed. Some very fine Daybreak, Scott, Bradt and Flora Hill are seen. Henry Aue's new St. Louis is still the top-notch among the whites at $2.50 per 100. Violets are looking well. Good Californias bring 50 cents and prices range from that down to 10 cents for southern stock. Smilax is in the market in good shape and fine long strings are $12.50 per 100.

Mr. W. A. Chalfant, of Springfield, Mo., was in town the past week. Mr. Chalfant has always been an exhibitor at our show, but claims to be all cut out this year, having only a few Weddings left, which he will send to the show.

World's Fair.

At Forest Park the work on the site of the World's Fair is progressing nicely. Mr. D. I. Bushnell, Jr., son of D. I. Bushnell, the seedsman, who is known as the archeologist on the grounds, is in charge of a lot of workmen who are opening the Indian mounds.

Mr. George Beistein of the Pan-American at Buffalo was a visitor last week and a guest of Director of Works Taylor.

President Francis says there will be no postponement of the Fair and claims that the St. Louis World's Fair will open promptly in May, 1903.

Bowling.

The Florists' team rolled three games with the strong Exchange team, and succeeded in landing the first game, which proved to be the highest single game rolled this season by any league team. The last two games were lost by over-confidence. The scores were:

HARDY SHRUBS.

By THOS. COCKBURN.

(Read before the Tarrytown (N. Y.) Hort. Society, Sept. 26.)

Our subject for discussion tonight is one upon which I am sure all can have something to say, therefore I can afford to be brief in my remarks.

Their cultivation and care require neither hot house or shelter from garden walls, but often afford shelter to the petted inmates of these. It is not my intention to go over a list of the different species and their varieties, trying to show the merits of some and the demerits of others; all are useful and beautiful in some way. What does not do well on the hill tops may do well in the valley, what is not adapted to the sunshine will do well in the shade, or in different soils and situations.

To give a list of varieties suitable for all purposes would be too much for me to undertake; a careful perusal of some reliable nurseryman's catalogue will give you more information than I can.

As to the raising and propagating of the different species, whether from seeds, budding, cutting or grafting, I have little to say. This is an age of specialists, and these belong to the nursery department. My advice to gardeners and amateurs is, unless you have time to kill as an amusement, let it alone.

But in buying from the nurseries. Knowing what your requirements are, if seedlings will fill the bill they are first choice, next in order are cuttings, if the perpetuating of some specialty is wanted, then budded or grafted stock is often a necessary choice. The great objection to the latter method is the throwing up of suckers from the stock and the general neglect of shrubs soon leaves them in a condition that allows no remedy but to throw them out. And very often stock and scion are badly matched; for example the imported lilacs are very often grafted on a common privet; they never make a perfect union and are short lived.

Most shrubs are not particular as to soil and will often thrive under very unfavorable conditions, yet it always pays to work right, and a little time and care will be well repaid in the future results. Certainly such plants as rhododendrons, azaleas, and plants of that order, as a rule require a prepared soil and nothing is better than good loam and leaf mould for them. Some lay great stress on a shady situation for them; the shade part can be well dispensed with, but get a damp situation if possible; where such conditions do not exist naturally have the beds or borders rather lower than the surrounding ground; mulching and watering are often necessary, as more plants of this kind are lost by drought than are killed by severe winters.

In selecting sites for groups or borders always bear in mind that you are planting for some purpose and not merely to fill space. There are some rules laid down for guidance in this matter, but they are like rules laid down for training a mule, they cannot be applied when wanted. Different surroundings of natural scenery or otherwise have all to be taken into consideration when planting to obtain desired effects. Have a bed prepared to plant and don't try to have a bed of shrubs and a lawn on the same spot.

Don't plant a conglomeration of different kinds in the same bed; try to keep one species, otherwise in a few years it is a case of the survival of the strongest.

It seems to be the general practice of the day to plant for immediate effect. This effect consists of planting four bushes where one should be, and if the effect is immediate the defects soon follow and are surely lasting. It may be permissible to plant double the quantity required with a view to thinning out as they grow, but even this is not to be advocated too much; it is better to plant right at first and allow each plant room for natural development.

It is desirable at this time to buy a quantity of small shrubs and have a sort of home nursery. These are convenient when a blank occurs, and by getting a few of the novelties each year one can keep up to the times and the outlay is trifling.

The operation of pruning is one for which no hard and fast rules can be laid down; certainly the annual grooming with the hedge shears is a practice that none can recommend, yet a good many practice it because we can send any one to shear them back to the old growth, but for correct pruning some knowledge of the different shrubs is required, and winter pruning is not all that is necessary; a great many are better pruned just after their period of flowering is past. Weigelas and most of the spiraeas are greatly benefited by this pruning.

The so-called Italian garden has obtained a footing in some parts. From what I have seen of them in Scotland I never did admire them, but what one sees here are the most horrible caricatures imaginable. Let us be thankful they are not called American gardens.

MY NEIGHBOR'S GARDEN.

"There a world of satisfaction
In the garden 'cross the street,
For its leaves are always lovely
And its blossoms pure and sweet.

The soil is rich and mellow,
And the drainage is just right,
Not a weed is ever found there,
Not a worm the buds to blight.

'Tis surrounded by the noises
Of the city's din and strife,
And it makes a spot of sunshine
In its owner's busy life.

She's a woman and she loves it
As a hungry heart best can,
Though it's but a red granthum
In an old tomato can."

A DREAM.

I had a dream recently. I dreamed that next August had arrived and that the opening session of the annual convention was being held upon a mountain peak. Our vice-president was delivering a most cordial address of welcome, with the delegates encircling him, each one holding in his right hand a straw with which he tickled the nearest footlet that dangled from the clouds overhead, and in his left hand a huge section of water-melon, while around all revolved a string of plantation darkies in a jivous dance.

It was all very lovely, and I was enjoying myself immensely until my neighbor told me that when we got tired of tickling the angels' feet we would be privileged to tickle our throats with some "mountain dew" that had been "buried out befo' de wah." He pointed out the place where it would be dispensed, but I never reached it, for in my haste I fell over a rocky piece of landscape—and awoke.

I have been thirsty ever since.

HENRY A. DREER, 714 Chestnut St., PHILADELPHIA, PA.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

By the time these lines are published and circulated the decorations and ornamental effects for the great exhibition at (Convention Hall) will have been completed. Six carloads of evergreens will be used in various arrangements, and together with the electrical display will form a beautiful combination. The decorative features, apart from the floral attractions, will be original and unique. A blue sky with the moon peering through it, and, as Mr. Taggart says, if possible "the milky way" will be carried out as nearly as skill can produce them. At each end of the great hall there will be a Japanese booth and refreshments served by young ladies attired in Japanese costumes. Music will be furnished by a band of twenty-five pieces and the musicians will also wear Japanese costumes. Another distinct novelty will consist of two fountains with fishes swimming in the basins.

The roof garden and the foyer of the hall are to be converted into a forest, "lovers' lanes" and lounging places. A pagoda and a typical Japanese garden will be built at the north end of the hall. The posters for advertising the show are neatly gotten up and have been freely distributed in the business districts. The twenty-five boxes overlocking the arena floor have been sold to the smart set, some of them selling for $60 each for the entire week. Our leading papers took up the enterprise in earnest right from the start and are publishing daily reminders of the proposed exhibits to keep the public interested.

The Humfeld Floral Co. increased the window decorating prize money $25.

Brother florists of Kansas and Missouri, come and see the show. It will be a "hummer!"

It will be an educator and you cannot afford to miss it. Don't forget that the management has secured a half rate fare on all railroads within a distance of 200 miles.

A special sale of cut flowers last Saturday by one of our bargain dry goods houses caused a little wailing and gnashing of teeth among the florists. The writer appeared on the scene at the hour the sale was scheduled to begin, and found buyers lined up in front of the counter as thick as a London fog. There were probably more flowers offered at this sale than were seen in all of the flower stores combined. It was learned at a late hour Saturday night that this firm had sold 10,000 carnations at 1 cent each, 2,000 roses at 2 cents each and 1,000 mums at 10 cents each. They intend to try it again. H. J. M.

IT WAS PROFITABLE.

Our last adv. was profitable. We were sold out of carnations in less than two weeks from time of first adv. Thanks.—SCHLURAFF FLORAL CO., Eric, Pa.

RIVERSIDE, CAL.—The National Orange Co. has just been incorporated with a capital stock of $800,000. E. A. Chase, formerly of the Chase Bros. Co., nurserymen, of Rochester, is president, a sufficient guarantee of the company's reliability.

The agricultural building at the St. Louis exposition in 1903 will be 2,000 feet long and 700 feet wide, containing an area of 32 acres.

Business during October was rather slow in most lines except wedding decorations; there were a great many of them, some very elaborate.

There are some very fine mums being cut at the present time, notably those sent in by Casper Aul and S. X. Pentecost.

The writer had a call from A. Hart, brother of Herman Hart. He reported everything at that establishment looking fine. They are cutting some mums that sell at wholesale for 15 and 18 cents apiece.

S. X. Pentecost has about completed his rebuilding, having torn down his old establishment and moved it onto some adjoining property that was acquired through trade. He has also added a store and work room, fitting up the store with a large glass front, giving him a much needed show window. When completed he will have one of the most convenient places in this part of the country.

He has one house of mums, 26x120, which is a beautiful sight at the present time, having some of the finest sent to the market so far this season. He also has two houses of carnations, 120 feet long, containing seven benches, which from present outlook will keep him supplied with carnations this winter. There are also four plant houses, one house for palms and ferns and a propagating house, giving him now nine houses and a lean-to, about eighteen thousand feet of glass.

The price of flowers has varied a great deal here, roses ruling from $1.00 to $6.00 a hundred, carnations from 75 cents to $1.50 a hundred and mums from 5 cents to 20 cents apiece. TENEP.

FREEMONT, ILL.—The thermometer has registered as low as 18 degrees and we have had a severe cold wave for the season. Outdoor vegetation was all killed Nov. 3.

STAMFORD, CONN.—Edward B. Jackson reports unusually heavy sales of hardy plants this fall. He reports results from his advs. in the Review as more than satisfactory.

ORANGE, N. J.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society held its regular monthly meeting on November 6 at its rooms in Orange. The final report of the exhibition committee was received, all arrangements for the exhibition on the 12th having been completed. Joseph A. Manda, treasurer pro tem, reported the receipt of additional money for the defraying of the expenses of the school children's work.

Secretary George Smith praised the children of the South Orange schools for the way in which they had seconded his efforts; he was unable to state what would be sent in from other points for want of full reports.

The feature of the evening was a loan exhibition of landscape engravings by eminent engravers. Among the pictures displayed were the plates by Woodlett, Browne, Vivares, Bartolozzi, Sharp, Heene, Middiman and Byrne, nearly all of the English School of the XVIII. Century engravers. Those from the paintings of Claude Lorraine were much admired, as also those of celebrated English country seats by William Woodlett. The subject was introduced by J. B. Davis, of the essay committee, and discussion by Robert McGowan, Peter McLaughlin and others. J. B. D.

PITTSBURG.

Mr. William R. Smith, Superintendent of the U. S. Botanical Gardens, Washington, D. C., came to Pittsburgh on Saturday to see the chrysanthemum show at Schenley Park, and on Monday evening the Pittsburgh and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club gave him a reception and dinner.

The grand old man was in his happiest humor, and the club members were delighted. It was one of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent by the club, and Mr. Smith promised to come back again a year from now as its guest. Most every man, young, middle aged and old, had something good and kind to say. P. A.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Christ Liehtmann's establishment now contains 10,000 square feet and he intends to add another 1,000 feet and a new office, these to be completed by Jan. 1 next. He is well pleased with the REVIEW.

TORONTO.

Business has materially improved and we hope for a continuance of the apparent revival of trade to its winter footing. Roses have been very plentiful and of excellent quality. Carnations are rather scarce as yet but as mums and roses are so plentiful the want of that useful flower has not been materially felt. Violets are still scarce. Valley sells well and orchids are just beginning to show themselves in some of the windows. Sinclair, the commission man, reports favorably on trade conditions.

I had the pleasure recently of visiting the home of that great chrysanthemum, the "Timothy Eaton," and seeing the stalwart giant in all the glory of its native home. From appearances he is going to eclipse himself this year and surpass himself in size and grandeur. Mr. Miller is to be congratulated on the splendid showing he has of the big fellow, and also the rest of his stock of mums, which is looking particularly fine.

Mr. Miller has a yellow sport from Timothy Eaton which promises fully as much as the parent. He also has a new pink, Mrs. Eaton.

The Turps are just finishing a batch of new houses, they having found it necessary to move where more room would be obtainable, their old situation being impossible to enlarge on. They make a specialty of carnations.

The array of bloom at the market these days (Saturdays) is very alluring to an appreciative public for which the boys who dispose of their stock at that particular point are very thankful, they managing to clean up before leaving, so far.

By the death of Mr. W. E. H. Massey, that Canadian philanthropic magnate, the business of a number of the retail men was considerably increased lately. The display of floral emblems was equal to, if not in excess of, anything ever before seen here. C. W.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo.—Mr. G. W. Weatherby's entire greenhouse plant was destroyed by fire the night of Nov. 7 and it is probable he will not rebuild. The fire was due to spontaneous combustion of slack in the coal house. As there was a high wind the fire destroyed practically the whole place.

MEMPHIS TENN.—W. H. Grimes is building a greenhouse 20x100 at Ruh-yville. He will make a specialty of field-grown roses and other plants.

A FLORAL LOVE STORY.

Fair Marigold, a maiden fair; Sweet William was her lover,
Their path was twined with bitterness; it did grow through clover;
The lady's tresses raven were, her cheeks a lovely rose;
She wore fine lacy slippers to warm her small pink toes.
Her puppy was an elder, who had a mint of gold—
An awful old snapperdog to make one's blood run cold!
His temper was like sour grass; his daughters' heart he wrung
With words both fierce and bitter—he had an lover's tongue!
The lady's hair was like the wax, of pure Germanic
He wore a Dutchman's breeches; he smoked a Dutchman's pipe.
He wore a Dutchman's breeches; by the pound and the dram
He was a Dutchman's choicest wintergreen;
She painted him forget-me-nots, the bluest ever seen!
He couldn't serenade her with the nightshade lark,
For every thyme he tried it her father's dog-wood bark.
And so she set a certain day to meet at four o'clock
Her face was pale as snowdrops, e'en whiter than her frock.
The lover vowed he'd pine and die if she should say him no.
And then he kissed her beneath the mistletoe.
"My love will live forever, my sweet; will you be true?
Give me a little heartease, say only, 'I love you.'"
She faltered that for him alone she'd orange blossom wear;
Then swayed like supple willow and tore her maidenhair;
For, madder than a hornet, before them stood her pop,
Who swore he'd cane the fellow until he made his hop!
Oh! quickly rose Mary. She cried: "You'll rue the day,
Most cruel fair! Haste, my dear and lettuce flee away!"
But that inhuman parent so plied the birch rod
He settled all flirtation between that hapless pop.
The youth a monastery sought and donned a black monks hood;
The maiden ate poison ivy and died within a week.

MEMORIAL TREES.

Orlin M. Sanford of Pittsburg, has started a movement in favor of planting trees in memory of the late President McKinley next Arbor Day and has written to a number of governors of states in regard to the matter. Governor Nash, of Ohio, replies that he will probably make such a recommendation in his Arbor Day proclamation.

SPIREA FOR EASTER.

"Bob" asks "the time to plant spirea to have them in bloom at Easter?"

The time of planting is of little consequence. When first received in the fall they can be stored away with some earth around them in a cold frame. Not later than New Year's pot them into 6, 7 or 8-inch pots, according to the size of the clumps, and start growing in the greenhouse at once. For the first month start them in a temperature of 50 degrees and afterwards they will take a higher temperature. As Easter is very early this year they will want all the time from New Year's on to get them in.

Two important points in forcing spirea are: An abundance of water at all times and no fumigating with tobacco.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE KANSAS CITY SHOW.

The final premium list for the great exhibition to be held in Convention Hall, Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 18 to 23, has been issued.

The premiums are very liberal and there are some "specials" that break the record for anything offered in the past in any city. The liberal prizes for 100 American Beauty roses are interesting many rose growers. And in this connection Mr. Thorpe wishes us to announce that the final awards on cut flowers will be made immediately after they are staged and that exhibitors should see that they are at their best at that time.

Copies of the premium list may be had by addressing F. J. Taggart, Director-General, or John Thorpe, Superintendent, Convention Hall, Kansas City, Mo.

On our title page for this issue will be found engravings from three photographs taken at the Chicago show. That in the center shows part of the display of roses and some of the chrysanthemum blooms entered in the international competition. The other two are vases of roses and chrysanthemums arranged by the Anderson Floral Co.

Philadelphia Palms Pay

Because clean, healthy and good value. A prominent Baltimore florist said: "I always buy my palms in Philadelphia, and from Mr. Heacock. He sends me what I can sell, never what I can't sell." JOSEPH HEACOCK, WYNCOTE, PA.

DENVER, COLO.

The warm, clear weather continues and lots of the outside flowers are blooming yet. These conditions are unfavorable to the mums, as it is bringing them out too soon, and also it prevents much of anything in the way of receptions or entertainments. Some of the florists are shading their houses and keeping the ventilators open nights so as to keep them back as much as possible. The sales are not what they should be, prices ranging from $1.00 to $4.00 per dozen.

On a visit to Benson's place we found his earnings, of which he has between nine to ten thousand, in splendid condition; one bench in particular of White Cloud was a beauty, also one of Mrs. Bratt was fine. His rose plants are fine, though the flowers are not quite up to the standard. Violets in prime condition.

At the Davies Bros' place we found their house of mums (50x50) in elegant shape. Their Robinsons they feel proud of, and well they may, for they are first class and bring the top notch price, which for a florist counts a good deal. They have enough carnations planted in light fruit boxes, set just the distance required on the benches, and after the mums are out they set the boxes right on their benches, taking off the sides, but do not disturb the bottom and there you are. They are growing lots of miscellaneous plants for the spring trade.

At the Colfax Floral Co.'s, the largest amount of glass in Denver, we found everything a humming. They not only do a large wholesale but also a large retail business. We found his mums pretty well advanced. Roses were in fine condition. His carnations, under the care of John Ferris, are doing fine, though he has some rust in his bench of Flora Hill. One bench of Bon Ton are looking elegant and by the way, this is the only place that Bon Ton is grown that I know of, most of the others growing Crane.

The Park Floral Co. attract a great deal of attention by the artistic displays in their windows under the supervision of Phil Scott. During the week they had an elegant display of orchids, such as Cattleya labiata, and later they had the bottom of the window turfed and a game of football in full swing. They serve to keep an admiring throng in front most of the time.

Emil Glauber has sold out his interest in the store of Glauber & Webb to T. I. Ballantine, of Peoria, Ill.

Charley Fawcett is back from the government greenhouses, District of Columbia, where he has been for the last two years. His health would not permit him to live east. He is with the Park Floral Co. at present.

THE KENTUCKY TOBACCO PRODUCT CO., Louisville, Ky.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Since hard frost a week ago, both demand and price have stiffened. Carnations are of fine quality and about equal to the demand. Roses are getting a bit off crop in general; those that are well in consequence be in at Christmas in proper shape. Chrysanthemums are now in the height of their glory, the early crop is cut and in some instances carnations in boxes have been brought in and placed on the top of the soil, to come on as next crop. The soil is left on the benches, to be used later for potting up geraniums and other soft wooded bedding plants.

Violets are improving with the cooler nights and the crop will be a large one.

Prices: American Beauties, $2 to $3 per doz.; other roses, $1 per doz. Carnations, 35 to 50 cents per doz. Violets, 20 cents. Mums all the way from 50 cents for small ones to $3 per doz. for the largest; the $2 size seems the most popular. G. F. C.

WINDSOR, ONT.—Geo. Campbell, who recently returned from Dawson City, Alaska, says that gardeners who have been growing vegetables in the valleys have been making money fast. Potatoes have yielded 300 bushels to the acre and they have commanded $12 a bushel. Cabbages bring $1 a head and turnips sell at $8 a bushel. Potatoes are planted early in May and are harvested in September.

STOIX CITY, IOWA.—J. C. Rensson, the florist, gave a very successful flower show last week. An art exhibition was given in connection with the show and there was a large attendance.

SANDWICH, ONT.—H. O. Fleming has built two new houses and has obtained a grover from Jamestown, N. Y.

The Greatest Money Maker of the Day!

Agents handling our McKinley Book are making all kinds of money. It is the easiest seller of all the works that have been written on this subject. One has only to see the book to buy it. It is bound in the most elegant style, contains over 450 pages, is printed on the best kind of paper, and the illustrations are all works of art. It is a book that will have a long and continuous sale, as it is the only reliable and authentic biography of William McKinley, our late president, published; who by his wise policy and kindly acts endeared himself to the hearts of the people. All loved him, and his biography will find a place in every home in this country.

The Life of William McKinley

OUR MARTYRED PRESIDENT

is written by Rt. Rev. Bishop Fallows, D.D., LL. D., a life-long personal friend and comrade of the late president, and whose intimate knowledge of the details of his life, together with his well-known literary ability, makes him unusually fitted for the task. It is the only authentic and reliable Biography of William McKinley published. It also contains the masterpieces of McKinley's eloquence, a short biography of Lincoln and Garfield, and a history of anarchy, its purposes and results. The introduction is by United States Senator Wm. E. Mason.

TO WOULD-BE AGENTS WE WILL SAY:

This is not a book that has been hastily compiled and rushed on the market to meet a temporary need for knowledge of our late president, but it has been carefully written by a most eminent scholar and literary divine, a man who was intimately acquainted with William McKinley from his earliest boyhood, and who shared with him experiences and hardships during the darkest days of our country's history, who followed with loving eye his every advancement and watched with tenderest friendship the lowly boy advance step by step until at last he reached the highest office in the gift of the people, and taking pride in knowing him, that this advancement endeared him still more to the hearts of the people.

IT IS A WORK THAT WILL LAST BECAUSE

It is the only reliable and authentic biography of William McKinley, our late lamented president. It is well and elegantly bound in full cloth, 7x11 inches in size. It is a book upon which no expense has been spared to make it complete in every detail. The engravings are the best that money and art can produce. It is printed on the best kind of paper and with the greatest care. It contains over 450 pages and 50 engravings, all works of art.

THE EXHIBITIONS.

An eager group of growers are waiting at the foot of the grand stairway in Horticultural hall; upstairs the judges are at work;—the whispered talk ceases as Secretary Rust comes down the stairs to the rail barring the entrance at the bottom. The secretary glanced about and noticed one of the group. "You want to go up?" he said. The bar was raised for an instant and the notes that appeared last week were gathered just before the great show opened to the public.

It is all over now, the crowds have departed and the plants have gone home too. I am very sure that all that was done was not in vain. Horticulture has received a stimulus that will be felt for a long time to come. Better plants and flowers will be grown in the future as a result of the lessons learned last week; better stock will be demanded as a re-

The rare and choice collection of orchids from Alphonse Pericat, gardener to Mrs. George B. Wilson, was arranged with ferns on a rockery; this group was a gem.

George Field of Washington, D. C., showed a table of cut orchids that bore evidence of excellent culture. Ocidium in center, with Vanda cœrulea, very well done and Dendrobium formosum, D. giganteum, D. Phalenopsis.

Thomas Long, gardener to George W. Childs Drexel, showed a plant of Gleichenia dichotoma that was a marvel. It appeared to be in a 36-inch pan, was perfectly proportioned and of immense spread.

John Hobson showed a specimen crotton, Queen Victoria, fully six feet high and four feet across. The other varieties expressed it, despoiled Mexico, in collecting a great variety of diminutive cacti.

Frank Basler, Carlisle, Pa., showed a Cattleya labiata with nineteen blooms on it.

The H. A. Dreer Co. exhibited a specimen plant of Pandanus Sanderii that was fully seven feet in height, and also a group of some thirty smaller plants, of ordinary commercial sizes.

Henry F. Michell showed a lot of hardy chrysanthemum flowers that proved interesting to amateurs.

Among the varieties of chrysanthemums winning prizes in plant class were: three pink, Sam Weller, Pembroke, Garden Queen; collection of four, Garden Queen, pink; G. W. Childs, red; Mutual Friend, white; Georgiana Pitcher, yellow. Other first prize winners were: Mrs. Frank Thompson, Mrs. Murdock, pink; Peter Kay, yellow; Mrs. Weeks, white; Miss Anne Thompson, pink.

John McCleary, gardener to Wm. Weightman, had the best plant in the exhibition.

sult of what was seen in the show halls.

In the quantity and quality of foliage plants, in cut blooms of chrysanthemums and of roses a decided advance was noticed in comparison with former years. The interest shown was most encouraging; the show was packed much of the time; better still, those who came, came because they cared, not merely from curiosity. It is safe to say that the general public learned something about plants and flowers that was worth learning.

The graceful and effective arrangement of the large quantity of handsome foliage plants was a striking feature. John Gaynor, gardener to John Wanamaker, made his debut with eclat. His Kentia Forsteriana was in the place of honor and under it were two fine groups, also from "Lindenhurst."

were C. Sunbeam, C. rubra lineata and C. Baron James de Rothschild. All were finely grown, large, perfect, and well colored. There were a couple of good birdnest ferns, Asplenium Nidus Avis, and variegated pine apples, Ananas sativa variegata, one of them in fruit.

Edwin Lonsdale's pale pink Lorraine was much admired, more so under natural light than the ordinary type.

The American Rose Co., Washington, D. C., had a very beautiful exhibit, showing their new rose Ivory. Two attempts to photograph this exhibit failed owing to lack of light, flash light not being allowed in the hall under the insurance laws.

Ferd. Bonlon, Sea Cliff, N. Y., showed tree violet plants, 8 or 10 inches high, in flower, which proved very interesting.

Robert Kift had, as one of the dailies were so strong that many very fine cases were not mentioned in the prize list. They added greatly to the credit of the growers and to the beauty of the show.

The second day, Wednesday, brought with it the roses, carnations and violets. The roses were the feature, a really splendid collection, that has never been surpassed here. They were appreciated too, the crowds being centered about the roses.

Our growers are beginning to realize that it is their duty to show their flowers; it will pay them too, for such a display cannot fail to attract attention. The roses grown near this city are as good, if not a little better, than those grown elsewhere; it is high time we recognized this fact and made our rose shows famous. Quality and variety were there: Beauty, Bride, Maid, Meteor, Kaiserin, Golden Gate, Pink Golden Gate, Perle, Sunrise, Liberty, Helen Gould, The Four Hundred, D. T. Connor's sport from Beauty, Baltimore from John Cook, and a new yellow, 1901, from the American Rose Co.

All were good, the competition in some of the classes being so keen that vases which would ordinarily have been prize winners were unnoticed. Upstairs, John N. May showed Mrs. Oliver Ames, exquisite in color, with deep green foliage, and the Floral Exchange had two vases of Queen of Edgely, the flowers in one of them being cut the week before.

The carnations were good, but very few in number. Ethel Crocker, General Gomez, three vases from Robert Lockerbie of Holly Oak, Del., a pale pink from Albert Roper, Tewksbury, Mass., and a pink and scarlet from Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, L. I., (mentioned in the prize list) comprising the list of the collection.

pale pink; Mrs. F. A. Constable, white; Col. Appleton, yellow; Gold Mine, yellow; Bayard Cutting, dark pink; Minerva, yellow; Indiana, light pink; Helen Bloodgood, light pink; Mutual Friend, white; T. Carrington, Pennsylvania, orange; Philadelphia, lemon.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The great exhibition in Convention Hall has redeemed all the promises made and it is truly a splendid show. The immense floor space was well filled with high class exhibits and the novel arrangement and accessories were as effective as anticipated. This city has certainly set a new standard for exhibitions of flowers and plants and that the public is appreciative is shown by the crowds that fill the great building.

It is mainly a cut flower exhibition, few decorative plants being used, and the largest lot of chrysanthemum plants are those shown by Samuel Murray, of this city, which occupy the center of the hall, and which won the big prizes.

Mr. Murray won the prize of $100 for best bush or standard, and first prizes ($20 each) in the classes for specimen white, specimen yellow, specimen pink and specimen red. J. C. Vaughan was second on specimen red. On standard plants Mr. Murray won firsts ($12 each) on one yellow and one pink, Vaughan taking second on one pink. On 6 specimen plants ($25) Murray was first and Vaughan second. On specimen grafted plant Vaughan was first and Bock third. For group of pompons and anemones Vaughan was second.

There was an interesting competition in the classes for 25 chrysanthemum blooms with prizes of $20, $15 and $10 in each class. Results were as follows:

White, 1st, E. G. Hill & Co.; 2nd, N. Smith & Son; 3d, Bock.

Yellow, 1st, H. W. Buckbee; 2nd, W. J. & M. S. Vesey; 3d, Samuel Murray.

Pink, 1st, J. C. Vaughan; 2nd, Hill & Co.; 3d, N. Smith & Son.

Collection pompons, 1st, Smith & Son.

Twelve anemones, 1st, Smith & Son. Best 100 Timothy Eaton or other white, 2nd ($30), E. T. Grave; 3d ($25), W. J. & M. S. Vesey.

There were seven competitors in the class for 100 American Beauty roses. The first prize of $150 was won by the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind.; the second prize of $100 went to Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa.; and the third prize of $75, was captured by Peter Reinberg, Chicago. It was a notable competition and probably never before have so many extra fine Beauties been brought into competition at any exhibition.

Notes.

Among trade visitors from a distance were Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gasser, Cleveland; Mrs. W. J. Vesey, Ft. Wayne, Ind.; Herbert Heller, New Castle, Ind.; E. A. Kanst, Leonard Kill, O. W. Frese, Edgar Sanders and J. S. Wilson, Chicago; J. F. Covell, Buffalo; James Gurney, St. Louis; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.

The attendance up to time of sending this report is immense and indications are that the show will prove a financial as well as an artistic success. The sketch view of the show that appears in this issue is reproduced from the Kansas City Star of Monday afternoon.

"Uncle John" Thorpe is very happy this week, and wears a smile as broad as the Atlantic ocean and as bright as the face of the evening star!

The ceiling of the big hall is a white sky dotted with stars and the moon gets in a lot of work during the evening.

The electrical effects are charming! Multi-colored lights are everywhere, in the mimic lake, amidst the evergreen hedges and around the flowers. It's a veritable "fairylund"!

The Beauty contest was a close one. In fact the seven exhibitors should all have had first prizes. Mr. Heacock's flowers looked better as the night advanced. They came 1500 miles, every stem was in one of Kift's patent glass preservers and every bud wrapped so that each flower was absolutely perfect.

Judge Vesey was detained at Fort Wayne by legal duties, but Mrs. Vesey nobly filled the breach and staged her beautiful mums most artistically. Her vase of Timothy Eatons was a beauty.

Prof. Cowell, James Gurney and E. A. Kanst had a very busy day judging but came up smiling in the evening, apparently none the worse for their hard day's work.

Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, were very unfortunate the first day in having about half of their boxes of exhibition flowers mislaid by employes of the hall and not being found again until too late to stage the flowers. However, they were in it on the second day, winning fifteen first prizes out of sixteen entries in the carnation classes.

The illustration of the Kansas City flower show is a very comprehensive one, and gives a very clear idea of its extent and beauty. Certainly nothing like it has ever been seen in this country.

The mountain and cloud effect in the distance, the sky, moon and stars, the immense Japanese pagoda, where over a hundred of Kansas City's beautiful society maidens in fancy costumes dispense cake and tea, the evergreen hedges, the spruce and wild smilax, the immense masses of flowers and flowering plants, and the music pavilion, all together form a most charming vista.

Add to these the ten thousand citizens who fill the aisles and seats to their utmost capacity, and you have an illustration of art and skill and success that may well make Eastern florists open their eyes in amazement and set them to thinking.

ORANGE, N. J.

The annual Flower Show of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place Nov. 12 in the Orange ark. The prizes were first, second and third class certificates, with the exception of the S. A. F. silver and bronze medals. The silver medal was awarded to the new rose Mrs. Oliver Ames. The bronze medal was not awarded. The display from the private greenhouses of the Oranges was in quantity and quality very creditable.

There was no attempt at competition, every one regardless of schedule went in to do their best. Worthy of mention was the display from Popken & Collins (florists). Their group, comprised of palms, ferns, etc., with bunches of chrysanthemums, carnations, roses and violets, made one long table; the effect was one of the striking features of the exhibition. William Runkle (D. Kindsgrab, gardener) exhibited a grand group of foliage plants, the arrangement being almost faultless. Also specimen Adiantum Farleyense, a grand piece.

General View of the Great Show at Kansas City.

Peter McLaughlin, gardener for Mrs. John Burk, exhibited very fine specimen palms. Mr. A. C. Van Gaasbeck (Wm. Bennett, gardener) made a splendid exhibit of chrysanthemums; also carnations. Mr. Van Gaasbeck is a new exhibitor and may be looked upon as one who may make the exhibitions interesting. Mr. A. B. Jenkins is also a new exhibitor. George Von Qualen, gardener for Mr. Jenkins, made a display of plants in 6-inch pots; also cut blooms, which were awarded a first-class certificate.

Mr. Paul Wilcox (Oscar Carlson), of Montclair, put up a small group of foliage plants, violets and carnations. Mr. John Crosby Brown (Peter Duff, gardener) made an exhibit composed of three large bush plants, pair of standards, six plants in 6-inch pots, vase of cut chrysanthemums; also carnations and roses. The quality of these exhibits was par excellence. Sidney M. Colgate (Geo. Smith, gardener) exhibited one large group of foliage plants with chrysanthemums in the center of the hall that covered about 200 square feet; he had four large bush plants; four bush in 8-inch pots, vase cut mums, specimen rhaps. O. D. Munn (John Hayes, gardener) exhibited six immense bay trees and large group of chrysanthemum plants. W. A. Manda exhibited a large collection of conifers. John N. May, collection of pompon chrysanthemums. S. Mizuta, of West Orange, Japanese plants, a miniature Japanese mountain and a miniature Japanese garden.

Mr. D. C. Edsall, of East Orange, was the only amateur exhibitor with collection of cut mum blooms, also one plant, very creditable indeed. The school children's exhibit did not come up to former years and it is doubtful whether the society will continue giving plants to the children; the results have been rather discouraging. Mayor Stetson made an address at the opening of the show.

TORONTO.

Grand weather, though not any too warm, marked the advent of our chrysanthemum show. The attendance this year I believe to be considerably in excess of recent shows, giving to the boys a toner as it were to keep in existence this annual event. For a few years back it had been necessary to cut the awards and only give a percentage of the prize moneys to enable us to meet expenses.

I think taking the exhibition on the whole it did not amount to what it has in former years; the quality and quantity were not so good in many classes as previously, and the competition did not therefore seem so keen, though in many cases some very close judgments were necessary to distinguish the winners.

In the plant and group sections it was a noticeable fact that where plants were shown such as are not considered as general commercial plants, the civic conservatories were successful over the local growers, while in the sections where commercial plants were called for the men in the trade were the owners of the winning stock.

The Toronto Floral Co. are to be congratulated upon their success in the adiantum classes. Manton Bros. and Wm. Jay & Son also appeared well in the foreground of the palm and fern classes. Some very fine orchids shown by Exhibition Park, Horticultural Gardens and Manton Bros., came in for their regular share of genuine admiration, and it might be noted that Exhibition Park was forced to look lively for first place. They have usually had it pretty much their own way.

Competition was more keen in earnings by a considerable margin than in the rose section. Chrysanthemums were not very numerous, but in many classes superior to anything shown before, while some of them were very poor. Of course we had a good showing of that monster, Timothy Eaton, and I think he appeared to be better than ever.

We were very pleased to see the name of J. J. Albright, an American grower of Buffalo, and although he did not win any firsts, we hope to again see his name among our prize tickets. The stock was very good and considering the traveling necessary to bring it here did very well.

The made up work by the retail men was not as numerous as usual, and all the classes, with perhaps the exception of the handle basket of any flowers, were easily judged. In the funeral design, Simmons was easily first, with a very pretty lyre; Jay & Son second, with same design; Dunlap, third, with a standing harp. Following is a summary of the awards:

Dunlop took second to Dale in all classes, but 12 new variety, for which he got first Toronto Floral Co., second, 25 Beauty, first Toronto Floral Co. came next with the remaining prizes with the exception of 20 arranged, for which C. Taly got first, Wm. Jay & Son, second, both with Dale's roses.

PLANTS.

The prizes for chrysanthemum plants were divided about equally between Horticultural Gardens and Exhibition Park for first and second places and Manton Bros. and Wm. Jay & Son fighting for thirds.
 In addition Horticultural Gardens held down the larger plant classes, with Manton Bros. occasionally coming to the fore, while Toronto Floral Co., Manton Bros. and Wm. Jay & Son about equally held down the smaller fern and plant sections.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

The fourth annual chrysanthemum exhibition of the Elmira Horticultural Society was held Nov. 12 and 13, and the common verdict was that it surpassed all previous efforts of the society. The hall was tastefully arranged and decorated by a decorating committee, with Miss Swift in charge, and when comfortably filled by the exhibits presented a beautiful appearance. Palms, laurel, green roping and hunting were the materials used in the decorations.

Several growers at a distance entered flowers, but many of them failed to send them on, but the local growers came out in full force. The quality of the flowers shown in all classes was very high, but one could not help noticing that the most improvement in the last few years has been in the carnation, although the Appleton, T. Eaton and Chadwick are way ahead of anything to be seen in chrysanthemums six or seven years ago. The Lawson, Genevieve Lord, Estelle, Mary Wood, Marquis, Prosperity and Viola Allen on exhibition showed the wonderful degree of excellence attained by the carnation.

The judges had great difficulty in deciding most of the prize-winners, the competition being very close. The Board of Trade cup, for best seedling, was won by T. Eaton last season, was awarded to the same variety, which took prize for new seedling at the Pan-American, known as Moon's seedling and exhibited by J. B. Rudy, gardener for Hon. J. S. Fassett. Mr. Rudy also secured most of the other first prizes for chrysanthemums.

Mr. H. N. Hoffman captured one first and most of the seconds, and Eugene Lewis the second prize for twelve varieties.

In the rose class the Bridesmaids grown by Hoffman received 1st and his Brides and Rudy's Golden Gates close behind. Rawson exhibited a vase of enormous Golden Gates, not competing.

In red carnations Rudy was 1st with Jubilee; Emerson Orvis, 2d with Crane. In white, Rudy 1st, with Mary Wood and F. L. La France, 2d, with Flora Hill. In pink, Hoffman was 1st with Lawson and Genevieve Lord, and La France next with Marquis. For violets, the 1st went to Hoffman, and 2d to Orvis.

The F. R. Pierson Co. sent a fine display of chrysanthemums. Col. Appleton and Nellie Pickett, the latter a very pure white. The Cottage Gardens sent three new carnations, but they were delayed in some manner en route, so were in poor shape to judge of their merits. They were all good in stem. The J. H. Manley is a very pleasing fringed scarlet, and Viola Allen is most lovely soft shades of white and pink variegated.

Mr. C. E. Hunn, of the Horticultural Department of Cornell University, brought a large and interesting collection of pompon varieties. Mr. Rawson occupied one corner of the hall with his exhibit of fine mums and roses and his wreath of "The Golden Flower" arranged on a moss covered plaque.
 Among the visiting florists from out of town were W. C. Rockwell, of Bradford, Pa., and Edward Snow, of Athens, who acted as judges; H. L. Drimmer, of Bath, C. E. Hunn and A. W. Stevens, of Ithaca, and Mr. Moran, of Watkins.

II.

MARSHAL, TEXAS.

Our "mum" show, which was held on the 7th and 8th (one week earlier than the advertised date, owing to the forwardness of the flowers) was a grand success in every way. While the East Texas Floral Association is composed largely of amateurs, the quality and quantity of the exhibits could have done credit to a professional exhibition, and when you take into consideration that the flowers were grown outside it surely gives great credit to the growers and the association.

Large quantities of superb single stems in all colors were shown; Silver Wedding, Major Bonnaffon, Black Hawk, Maud Dean, Mrs. Perrin, Mrs. H. Robinson, Timothy Eaton and scores of other sorts were shown in both bush and single stem pot plants, and also as cut flowers; many flowers were shown that measured over 9 inches in diameter.

The show was held in a large pavilion which had been nicely draped with wild smilax and which, with its many incandescent lights, made a beautiful display at night. Large banks of palms and ferns made a delightful background for the excellent display of chrysanthemums. While the chrysanthemum was the leader, the rose was a close second, thousands of fine roses being shown. The competition was strong and it took close judging. Many fine sorts were shown; Kaiserin, Perle, Bride, Maid, Golden Gate, Pres. Cleveland, Meteor, American Beauty, M. Guillot, Marchal Niel, Sunrise and LaFrance being in the lead as to quantity, but many of the newer sorts were shown in smaller quantities.

One of the most attractive features was the eight afternoon reception tables, all of which were well worthy of a prize, but only two prizes were offered for tables and it took close judging, so close was the competition.

The attendance was large and the music, both vocal and instrumental, was fully enjoyed.

Mr. F. W. Beach, of Dallas, was the judge, and so well was his work performed that we shall hope to see him with us again next year.

OBITUARY.

John Goode.

John Goode, a pioneer florist of Chicago, died at his home in Melbourne, Fla., Nov. 17, aged 88 years.

He was born near London, England, in 1813, and came to Chicago in 1845. He later went to St. Louis, but after a few years returned to Chicago and through a long and active life was an important factor in the trade in that city. He was at one time associated with Samuel Brooks, who built the first greenhouse erected in Chicago, and in 1857 he was one of those who founded the old Lewis Nursery. In 1869 he established the greenhouse business at Fifty-third street and Kimbark avenue, and continued here until 1882, when he removed to Florida, having disposed of the business to his son-in-law, Mr. Andrew McAdams, who still continues it.

In Florida he built a beautiful home, surrounded by a wealth of the trees and plants he loved, and here passed his declining years. His death breaks one of the most important living links with the earliest days of the trade in Chicago. He was engaged in floriculture for seventy years and during his long life had seen the business grow from its exceedingly modest beginning up to its present magnificent proportions.

He is survived by a widow and six children, among them being the wife of J. A. Pettigrew, superintendent of the parks of Boston.

Thomas Meehan.

Thomas Meehan, the noted nurseryman, head of the firm of Thomas Meehan & Sons, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa., died Nov. 19, full of years and honors.

He was a distinguished botanist as well as a horticulturist, was vice-president of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences, was for many years editor of the old Gardeners' Monthly, and later of Meehan's Monthly, was for almost a generation a member of the Philadelphia City Councils, was a philanthropist and a much respected and revered citizen of Philadelphia.

He has been a most important factor in the advancement of horticulture in America and his life's work will be a most effective and permanent monument to his memory.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

Timothy Eaton has been making a great showing at the exhibitions during the past week, and while it does not finish so good as some of the others, its immense size carried it through some tight places. The Eatons exhibited at the American Institute were simply enormous, and kept perfectly throughout the shows. Eaton was also very prominent in the whites at the Philadelphia show, and though very much smaller than the flowers put up in New York, were possibly better finished in the center.

It seems to be fashionable in some quarters to run Eaton down without a word for any good qualities it may possess. For myself I believe Eaton will become a standard white for commercial purposes. It is a fine keeper, no one can deny that, and readily responds to decent culture.

One of the most beautiful varieties I have ever seen is A. J. Balfour, recently shown in a winning class. It is a lovely shade of pink, and the foliage and general appearance are simply the perfection of neatness. Of its habits or antecedents I know nothing, but it is a variety that should be kept track of.

Goldmine cropped up in good shape in several places last week. As shown at Orange, N. J., in the single stem plant classes, it was very fine indeed. It evidently does best on the late bud, and any craving for chrysanthemum flowers. Then roses and carnations are coming in in splendid condition, and the flower-buying public once more turns to these as a change from the avalanche of mums that has been overwhelming them.

The standard of exhibition flowers this year has taken a tremendous jump upward all through the country. The interest, too, seems keener than for years past, and taking things generally the chrysanthemum is today on an excellent basis. True, there has been some kicking about prices ruling lower, but the fact that there has been little loss this year from unsuitable weather ought to bring the average of prices up to a normal standpoint.

ROSE NOTES.

Liquid Food.

After the mulch has been partly exhausted the plants will be benefited by an application of liquid food; this being easily and quickly assimilated can be quency of the feeding. Plants in a backgong or unhealthily state are in no condition to derive benefit from liquid food; it only makes them worse.

Some soils are benefited by applications of nitrates and chemical stimulants, but the ordinary grower's knowledge of chemicals is very limited and as "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," it is wise to be very careful in their use. These and concentrated foods are safe only in the hands of experts. Few of the older growers but have seen the direful results of this dabbling in chemicals; and, as "A burned child dreads the fire," many of our best and most successful growers depend for their feeding material entirely upon the natural product from the cow barn.

During the winter months rose benches will be benefited by light applications of air-slaked lime. This has a tendency to stiffen the flower stem and also keeps the soil sweet. It can be applied with the powder blower, using as much at each application as will make the surface perceptibly white.

possibly will make the best showing if not propagated too early in the season.

Appleton is still being shown in grand shape, and proves thereby that it is a splendid keeper. It is useless to bother with Bonnafon any more, when Appleton will produce a flower twice the size under the same conditions of culture, and if the right bud is taken, i. e., a very late crown, the flowers will develop perfectly.

Lady Roberts has been heard from, but not very extensively. Those best qualified to know say that there is very little difference between Roberts and Eaton, saying that Lady R. makes a better center. If it does, and yet possesses all the good qualities of Eaton, it should make a better flower to grow for exhibition.

A new seedling exhibited at Philadelphia as No. 4, will probably be heard from again as a purely exhibition variety. It is an exact duplicate of Jeanie Falconer in shape, immense in size, and somewhere between a buff and a bronze in color. Its class will be "any other color" and then you can call it any color you like.

Wedding, Eaton and Chadwick are the only varieties we have left to cut from, but they are all in fine shape, and will carry on to Thanksgiving. After that time it seems to us there is no longer used at the proper stage of growth to insure best results.

A good liquid food can be made from fresh cow manure. For this purpose a tank should be built of sufficient capacity to hold as much water as will be required for one application. This to be used as a reservoir to distribute from, and which can be connected with the water service pipes and pump. Another tank of smaller size should be built, if possible on a higher level, and connected with the first. Fill the smaller tank with manure and water and allow to stand until it ferments, when it can be drained through a half inch screen into the larger tank and water added to reduce it to the required strength. The first application will have to be weak, gradually increasing in strength as the plants get accustomed to this kind of food.

Liquid food should never be applied to a bench in a dry state nor in dull weather. The best stage at which to begin feeding is when the young growth for a crop has attained a length of 3 or 4 inches, feeding once a week, four such applications generally being all that is necessary to fully develop a crop. By the beginning of March, with longer days, more sunshine and active spring root action, roses will be benefited by increasing the strength and fre-

This should not be months for some time after mulching when bone is in the compost. RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

Boston, Nov. 9.—Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., exhibited Henry A. Gane, a rosy pink with lighter center, Japanese, incurved, which scored 84 points commercial scale, 86 points exhibition scale. This variety was raised by the late Henry A. Gane.

Nov. 16.—John G. Jensen, Providence, R. I., exhibited Providence, light shade of nankeen, Japanese, incurved, scoring 86 points commercial scale, 87 points exhibition scale. This is supposed to be a sport from Western King.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., had several varieties on exhibition before the Philadelphia and Boston committees, but as they were exhibited under number, we think it advisable to withhold publication of same until names have been furnished.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.

MARSHALL, Mo.—Henry H. Hensley, the florist, was married Nov. 12, at Springfield, Ill., the bride being Miss Jessie R. Chapman, of that city.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Violets.

A subscriber writes as follows: "Would you please give me in the Review the correct treatment for violets in cool houses? Is nitrate of soda harmful? If not, in what proportion should it be used? How and when should they be watered? What ventilation is necessary? What insects are they subject to and which of them is their greatest enemy?"

To answer all this at any length would be a treatise on the violet of a good many pages. And further I am not sure that any one can give the "correct" treatment. They can only say under what treatment they have been successful, which in the case of violets is very likely to disagree with the treatment of other growers.

First, about cool nights; from 40 to 45 degrees at night is the temperature generally considered right; below 40 the flowers will come slow in the middle of winter and above 45 will mean a good many flowers but a short crop.

Nitrate of soda can be and is used on violets. It will give depth of color to flower and leaf but will not increase size or quantity of bloom. One pound dissolved in 40 gallons of water can be used with safety.

Violets, like any other of our crops, want watering when they need it. Contrary to what many suppose the solid beds take water oftener than the benches, unless the heat of pipes dries them out. I would say let the beds get slightly on the dry side and then give them a good, copious watering; if in dull, cold weather, water between the plants, wetting the leaves as little as possible.

About ventilation. A most remarkable illustration came to my notice last week. In a north lean-to house of violets where there is only one 4-foot bench of violets and the ventilation is right over the plants and near the front of the bench, the ventilator is not over one foot above the plants. There is a very marked difference in the color and vigor of those that have had the air let in right over them. The ventilators are about 12 feet apart and wherever they occur there is a green, healthy batch of plants the width of the ventilator and those away from its influence are anything but vigorous. I would by no means advocate ventilating by this method. It should be at the ridge, for then the air is equally distributed throughout the house. Give air whenever the temperature goes over 55 degrees, but if a cold, cutting wind is blowing, it is better to let the temperature go a little higher than have a nasty draught on them.

The violets are easily attacked by the common greenfly and several species of a worse kind. Besides the aphid, red spider is often the cause of failure. The spot is caused by a fungus. I know of no cure for the spot but keeping the plants clean and picking off the leaf the moment it is discovered. Syringing spreads the fungus. It generally appears in the houses during the months of September and October. Red spider appears in the houses in July and August, but those are the months that you can syringe vigorously every day and there is no excuse for letting red spider get lodgment. There are plenty of days in October when you can syringe and if they are clean of spider at the end of October there is not much danger after that. The several species of aphid that attack the violet are much the most troublesome and it's eternal vigilance that will save.

I have been speaking all this time of indoor culture and therefore I believe that from the time they are planted out in the beds, say end of June, they should be faithfully fumigated, not too strongly, but often, at least twice a week, till you begin to pick flowers, and if they are clean by November 1 it is seldom that the fly will trouble you after that. Some growers in place of fumigating use tobacco dust sprinkled on the plants and some use a solution of one of the extracts of tobacco. The whole secret of violet growing is to keep them absolutely clean of all insects of every kind, but this is seldom done; it needs lots of energy and sustained effort, and simple as it seems to keep plants clear of their enemies it is neglected by the great majority.

Crimson Ramblers.

As Easter is very near this year (last day of March), you must consider it when starting and forcing several things, notably Crimson Rambler roses. Those grown in pots all summer, which should now be resting in a cold frame, need not be started growing till the middle of December. Those lifted from the ground during the early days of this month or about now want no real rest, and after being in a cool, shaded house for a few days will want to be started going again; but let it be very gradual; to put them into much heat before the roots are active would result in failure sure. Plenty of syringing at all times is good for them; in fact, an essential.

Lilacs.

Lilac, if wanted at Christmas, must be started at least by the first of the month. It needs a strong heat, about 80 degrees, for the earliest crop, and as the season advances less heat is necessary. If they are near pipes, counteract the dry heat by plenty of syringing.

Cyclamen.

Cyclamen are just coming into bloom and a beautiful plant they are. If you have succeeded in growing them till now with success there is not much fear of future failure, except by letting them get troubled with greenfly. In addition to a mild fumigation occasionally, tobacco stems strewn among the pots will do wonders in keeping down their greatest enemy. Cyclamen if not wanted for early flowering, or perhaps not till Easter, will do very well in a temperature of 40 degrees; it will simply retard them, but to flower them to perfection about 55 degrees is the thing; if much higher they grow spindling, and if cooler they are too slow. You have most likely sown cyclamen weeks ago and they are up. Plenty of light and a temperature of 55 degrees will do well for the young plants. I think they grow much better in flats than in small pots when first handled from the seed pans. For later batches there is plenty of time to sow yet and till New Year's.

Lily of the Valley.

Lily of the valley pips will be now arriving. Don't attempt to force any but cold storage pips for Christmas and New Year's; in fact, don't depend on the new crop to give you flowers till middle of January. When the new roots arrive unpack and dip each bunch for a moment in water and then put them away in a box 7 or 8 inches deep with some soil between the bunches of roots. If the box contains just what you want to force each week so much the handier. Place the box in a frame and cover over the crowns with two or three inches of soil. Cover the frame either with glass or boards, something to keep the rains off. For excessive wet is not good for them. If you force extensively it will pay well to sort over all the roots, choosing the largest and stoutest pips for the first forcing and the weaker for the later.

A DINNER TO M. VILMORIN.

On Nov. 6 a dinner was given to M. Philippe de Vilmorin, of Paris, by Philadelphia and New York seedsmen and the directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League at the Bellevue Hotel, Philadelphia.

The menu was very choice and the menu card was specially designed, bearing the French and American flags in colors, surmounted by an eagle. Pages were provided for the autographs of those participating in this notable affair, and we present herewith a reproduction of these autographs, which include the signatures of many of the most noted seedsmen in America.

Mr. and Mrs. Vilmorin, who made an extended tour through the United States and Canada during the last two months, sailed for home from New York Nov. 14, on steamship La Savoie.

CARNATION NOTES.

Varieties Exhibited at Indianapolis.

Perhaps a few remarks on the carnations shown at the recent fall show held here in Indianapolis would not be out of place at this time, as we must decide within a few weeks what new varieties we want to purchase for next year. Every year we find that we can improve our collection of varieties by adding one or more of the new ones and perhaps dropping a few of the older ones, and so we are continually looking out for improvements in every color.

The quality of nearly all the varieties shown was very good indeed, but there were many varieties absent which we would like to have seen. There was not a bloom of Prosperity, Norway, Lorna nor Roosevelt on the tables, although we know that most of these varieties can be had in fine shape by this date and what plants we have are producing good blooms on fine stems. We have never seen a single bloom of Olympia exhibited in this city. Mrs. Bradt being invariably the variety shown in the class for striped. There were several vases of good Mrs. Lawson shown, and we noticed that most of them had very good stems, 15 inches or over. Those having the longest stems were from plants that were kept inside all summer.

A vase of Triumph was about as fine as any one could wish to see. The stems were fully two feet long and supported blooms which were fully as large as the Lawsons. This vase was staged by Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, and she is to be congratulated on her success with this variety.

A vase of 100 Dorothy showed up very nice indeed. The blooms were of average size, the stems about 18 inches long, and they held the blooms up nicely. We have heard some criticism in regard to the keeping qualities of this variety, but we must say that these blooms the last day of the show, when all the others had gone to sleep, looked as fresh and larger than they did when they were first staged, and not one out of the 100 blooms had gone to sleep.

Avondale, or the pink Armazindy, was shown in very good shape by several growers. Those who are successful with Armazindy ought to have good success with this variety. There was a vase of Genevieve Lord which were fair in size and stem, but we never admired the color on account of the faded edge. We were surprised to see no blooms of E. Crocker, although we know of at least one grower who could have staged it in good shape.

There was a vase of old Daybreak, and although the blooms were very fair for that variety, they were far and away behind a vase of Elma, which is about three times as large and a much prettier bloom.

In white White Cloud had its own way, as there was only one vase of Flora Hill shown. These were very good blooms, but Flora Hill always has a poor stem in the fall, and that is where White Cloud wins. White Cloud seems to be earlier with most growers than usual and the blooms that were shown were very good and on 2-foot stems.

There was a vase of old Lizzie McGowan, and it was interesting to notice the difference between its small blooms and poor stems and the fine blooms and stems of White Cloud, yet the exhibitor claims that it pays him well in funeral work, etc.

In red we were surprised to see both first and second prize go to America in spite of the several good vases of Crane that were up against them. On inquiry we found that they were judged by artificial light, and as we have said once before in these notes, America seems to brighten up at night, while Crane and Jubilee both seem to deepen in color, and that is how it happened. America makes a larger bloom than the other two and the stem is just as good, but when judged by daylight Crane usually wins on color.

The only variegated variety shown was Mrs. G. M. Bradt, and they were considerably below the other varieties shown in quality. Many growers who usually grow a bench full of this variety this year have only a few hundred plants or none at all, as they do not seem to sell as well as the solid colors. There was not a single bloom of any of the yellows nor of the dark crimson, neither of which are popular around here.

There were a number of seedlings, etc., shown, but their owners will tell you of their good qualities in due time. Mr. E. A. Nelson's vase of his new pink, Mrs. E. A. Nelson, was very nice, considering that the plants had only been in the houses a few weeks. Owing to the doubling of his place this summer he was a little late in getting his carnations housed, but he says he will have them in fine shape by February.

By the way, don't forget to arrange to come to Indianapolis to the Carnation Society convention. It is going to be the best ever held by that organization, and you cannot afford to miss seeing the exhibition, which will be great. You will be well taken care of.

Cultural Notes.

Now that regular firing has commenced, you must be very careful in the watering. The sun is not so strong any more and on many days it does not shine at all. The soil does not dry out as rapidly and much less water is required, especially if a heavy mulch is on. At the same time the steam or hot water pipes will dry out the soil quite rapidly, wherever they are close to the bench, and you must continually look out for these dry spots each day. Go over the benches every morning and examine the soil here and there and then go over them again with the hose and water carefully where it is needed. If a pipe runs along underneath a bench and close to it you must watch carefully so the soil does not dry out at the bottom, as this is extremely harmful to the plants. In fact, if you water properly your benches will need a good soaking all over every now and then, and then it should be done thoroughly so that the water will go clear through to the bottom. Notice carefully those varieties that need a good deal of water and also those that want to be kept a little on the dry side. It will not take you long to see the effect on the plants.

I cannot tell you what varieties you must water heavier than others as it depends largely on your soil and the temperature you maintain in your houses. Those varieties that make narrow grass blades and wiry stems usually need less water than those varieties which make broader blades and thick fleshy stems and thick-petaled blooms; as, for instance White Cloud and Jubilee need more water than Scott and Flora Hill. Then again a heavy soil will hold moisture much longer than a light porous soil and will not need watering as often, but more damage is done too if it is allowed to become too dry.

It has been said, and very truly too, that if you can water right you need not worry about not having good success and during these next four months you will prove either that you do know or that you do not know how to water. Along toward spring more water is needed again and as the soil is full of roots and evaporation is rapid there is little danger of overwatering.

NEW YORK.

The Week.

The past was a busy week for most of the florists hereabouts, and quite a few were more than tired out after the worry and work attached to the dozen shows recently held in this section. This week the very atmosphere is full of horse show. Most of the principal florists decorate their windows or stores with something appropriate to the horse, and some pretty and some awfully funny things are seen. Yellow chrysanthemums and black satin ribbon regales one window, whilst violets, ana blue ribbon and tassels growl at one another in the next; then come saddles and boots and whips, aye, the very horses themselves appear 'mid heaps of varied colored mums.

But it is a pity every aspiring retail florist in the country cannot visit the Waldorf-Astoria this week; he would see and learn much there. Arthur Merritt, with Small & Sons, has done several horses and horses' heads that have never been equaled, and they are only of wire and green moss and pampas grass. Visitors are welcome in this hotel, and all who can should see this work.

It is difficult at this writing to say what the flower end of the great horse show will be. Yesterday the market was cleared of all good stock at fair prices. Violets, that is, good violets, are scarce and bring big prices, for they are looked upon as an essential part of this national parade of overdressed people. We have heard that some growers have been offered as high as $2.50 and $3 per 100 for their violets—anything goes these days.

Gardenias and carnations are much worn by the men, and cattleyas and valley adorn many a diamond spangled gown. It seems to us from the crowds on the avenues and in the hotels that all the rich folks have swarmed here, and doubtless the florists of all other cities miss some of their patrons this week. Of course, there being so many hundreds, we might almost say thousands, of florists in this city, any influx or increase in trade causes little or no excitement, but a great event such as we are having at the Madison Square Garden this week certainly brings an immense trade with it in flowers as well as in other goods, and it is safe to say there will be decorated tables at dinners, etc., during and after the show.

Everywhere one goes or looks there are piles of chrysanthemums; they're getting to be monotonous to some. Weddings there are to be sure where greens and mums are being used, but there have been no record-breaking decorations; all so far this season have been on the cheap scale.

An Exhibition.

A two days' flower show was held at the Berkeley Lyceum, West Forty-fourth street, on Nov. 13 and 14. Some very fine chrysanthemums were shown. A Herrington won five firsts and two second prizes. His fifty T. Eatons were immense. I. L. Powell won a first with twenty-five Weeks. W. Russell won first in thirty-six blooms, six of each. George Hale and James Bell, John McNicol and William Scott won several prizes.

E. G. Hill sent some fine Eatons; Lager & Hurrell showed some choice orchids; C. W. Ward several prize winning vases of carnations; H. A. Spavins, Mt. Kisco, showed some promising seedling carnations; H. Clinkaberry sent many fine seedling cypis; H. Siebrecht & Son, John N. May, J. Roehrs, H. Nicols and George Middleton put up interesting exhibits which won many prizes.

Bowling.

What did the sleepy Philadelphians do To the wide-awake New Yorkers—whew! It was simply awful, downright premeditated slaughter. We hear all kinds of stories anent the bowling match rolled by the New York and Philadelphia teams in the Quaker City Nov. 12, on which occasion the floor was wiped up with ambitions and reputations. The defeat of the New Yorkers is placed to the howlers and interferers by many who were there. There is a strong desire that both teams come together again on neutral alleys in both cities, and that noise and maseots be ruled off. New York nerges are no match for Philadelphia lunks; let us see both teams come together on strange alleys, where a better test can be made for championship material. Bowling scores in New York last night were:

Hafner	395	194	183	Van Hoesen	155	149	165
Siebrecht	140	145	184	Usading	78	82	97
Burns	148	148	151	Gutman	128	135	161
Lang	169	200	178	Elliott	119	135	155

Tracy	178	171	162	Mansfield	142	138	139
Lentz	178	160	181

There is some talk of having a ladies' night at the alleys. Possibly the girls want to see where the boys spend so much time.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market was in a chaotic state last week. Saturday was a busy day, some of the other days were not. This week the conditions are better. Indications point to a brisk demand from now on. The retailers are preparing their choicest combinations to satisfy the friends of the lovely debutantes. Large teas are being given daily in their honor, and it is no unusual sight to see at least one hundred bouquets tendered to one of these society buds.

Chrysanthemums are moving very much better; it seems probable that the demand for these autumn flowers will equal the supply until their reign is over. Prices are stiffening a little bit with prospects for an advance for Thanksgiving Day.

Various Items.

Samuel J. Bunting, Fifty-eighth and Elmwood avenue, has six houses of roses, three of Brides and Maids, two of Kaiserin and one planted with Beauties and the Four Hundred. The latter is a sport from Beauty, of a deeper shade. Whether distinct enough to warrant its cultivation as a separate variety remains to be proved. There are several hundred plants and preparations are being made to give this rose a thorough trial. It may be of interest to add that the Four Hundred sported with D. T. Connor, now Mr. Bunting's foreman, about four or five years ago.

There is one house of chrysanthemums, Bonnafon, Wanamaker, Viviani-Morel and Maud Dean and several other midseason varieties being at their best. Easter plants are a specialty here. Ten thousand lilies are coming on; there are also many hydrangeas.

Samuel S. Pennock is receiving some especially fine Timothy Eatons.

Joseph Heacock received a silver cup for his exhibit of fifty American Beauties at the Baltimore show last week.

Fairmount Park has a good chrysanthemum display which has attracted crowds of people. An effort was made this year to lighten the effect by using more of the red and bronze colored varieties to set off the lighter colors.

A prize was offered for the best miniature garden at the Chestnut Hill show. There were three competitors. Curiously enough the best exhibit was disqualified on the ground that while very fine it was imperfect, as there was neither an entrance nor an exit.

George M. Moss made a total of 528 in three games in a local bowling match on Saturday night.

Lost, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 12, at the bowling alleys in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, a valuable package of dough. The finder will please address the New York Florists' Bowling Club.

Show Notes.

A visitor, informed probably by one of the daily papers, inquired anxiously for the orchid spray out from the $10,000 plant. He was shown George Fields' "Vanda Cerulea."

The exhibit of hyacinths in bloom from Henry F. Michell puzzled the uninitiated. One man was observed smelling them. Another after gazing for some moments cautiously handled one and was heard to mutter "artificial" in tones of disgust. This exhibit was so highly esteemed by the Wilkesbarre florists that they borrowed it for their exhibition this week. The flowers were made of cotton, and the bed of sphagnum moss. The effect was strikingly realistic.

Thomas Butler, weaned from his former vocation, was in charge of H. Waterer's bulb exhibit.

Many visitors from all over the country were attracted to this great fall display.

Bowling.

The Philadelphia bowlers downed their New York brethren on Tuesday evening, Nov. 12, on the home alleys, wiping out the defeat of three weeks before with something to spare. Following are the scores:

BALTIMORE.

Trade may be quoted in commercial phrase as "fair to middling." During the reign of the Queen of Autumn other royalties are in eclipse and it is not too emphatic a statement that many in the trade wish it were well over and her majesty's obsequies ended. The truth may as well be spoken that, at least for this particular spot of latitude and longitude, the chrysanthemum does not receive the marks of patronage and popular favor which once marked her royal progress. Whether size and ponderosity have been overdone, the big mums do not "go" as they did, and will not bring their former prices. Their season has been extended, too, so that from the earliest to the latest varieties they span a length of time which allows of the general public getting tired of them, and it turns again with relief to the more graceful rose and the ever attractive carnation.

The Exhibition.

The topic of the past week in trade circles was the chrysanthemum show of the Gardeners' Club. For effective display and artistic handling of the material presented, the show excelled any the club has held, and to the committee in charge, Messrs. Robt. L. Graham, George O. Brown and Philip B. Welsh, as well as to its energetic and popular president, Robert Halliday, belongs only praise for the taste and skill exhibited and the hard work done.

The stage was occupied by groups of fine foliage plants deposited by John Cook. The walls were decorated with southern smilax, and the visitor as he entered caught a charming Coup d'oeil of the attraction through an opening left in a hanging curtain of this material dividing the foyer from the main hall. Instead of the long tables the displays were broken into small groups, the entries of chrysanthemums in pots not being numerous. Two of the parks of the city contributed largely to the exhibition, the foliage plants and ferns from Patterson Park showing especially good handling.

Halliday Bros. had some palms of tall stature and fine foliage arranged along the walls, and Edwin A. Seidewitz another group. E. Holden (gardener to Mrs. Robert Garrett), showed some well-bloomed Gloire de Lorraine begonias.

Among the heavy contributors of mums were: Lehr Bros., G. A. Lotze, Jr., Halliday Bros., Philip B. Welsh, Charles M. Wagner, (gardener to Mr. C. R. Diffenderfer), H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md.; Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa.; M. J. Hannigan, (gardener to Mr. Jas. A. Garey), R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, and E. Holden.

Wm. Paul Binder, raiser of the popular Robert Halliday, Harry Parr and Lady Harriot, had other seedlings on show, notably Mrs. Harry V. Casey, a Japanese incurved, clear pink variety, and James Pentland, a pure white. He had some others of grotesque forms and unusual colors. He also exhibited a fine light pink seedling, the "Bently," originating with Robert G. Carey, of Philadelphia, decided by all to be an acquisition of merit.

The quality of the mums shown was generally fine—the magnificent Appletons and the immense, if rather coarse, Timothy Eatons making a sensation.

Roses and carnations were not up to the highest exhibition standard, excepting from this a superb vase of fifty American Beauties from Joseph Heacock, of Wyncote, Pa. John Cook's seedlings—Baltimore, another, a beautiful blush pink, and two of American Beauty blood, attracted much attention. The carnations came to grief and sleepiness all too soon. Designs were not above the usual conventional level as to taste and execution.

The judges were Messrs. Gude, Blackstone and Clark, of Washington, D. C.

The principal mum awards were made to G. A. Lotze, Jr., Lehr Bros., H. Weber & Sons, Henry Eichholz, Halliday Bros., E. Holden, P. B. Welsh and C. R. Diffenderfer.

Mr. Heacock received a silver vase, a special prize, for his American Beauties; H. Eichholz a silver ladle for his Timothy Eatons, and Lehr Bros. $25 for 50 Appletons.

The show, unfortunately, was not a success financially, the attendance, considering the attractions and beauty it presented, being meagre. The Sun announces, apparently by authority, that "the public did not pay the expenses; in fact, hardly enough to pay the hall rent, and the members of the club will have to go down into their pockets to make up a deficiency of several hundred dollars."

This was in direct contrast to a show held at Patterson Park the previous week. No admission fee was charged, and about 16,000 persons passed through the building to inspect and admire the plants and flowers, which Mr. Seibold and his assistants had arranged for their delatation.

Trade Notes.

The alterations, long in progress, at the Charles street store of Halliday Bros. have been completed, and one of the new features is a fine bow-window, which is kept decorated with the most expensive and showy materials. Indeed, this exhibit and the equally attractive one of Saml. Feast & Sons in the next house, are a flower show in themselves and make this part of the street bright and lively.

Mrs. Schuler-Thomas has had her store on Saratoga street remodeled. A feature is the garland of flowers on the walls painted by the trained hand of her artist son, Hans Schuler, whose friends and well-wishers believe he exhibits more than talent, genius, as a sculptor. A little bronze electric light bracket, done by him, is a thing of beauty and grace.

Still another penal institution (by courtesy and perhaps officially a "reformatory") is about to build a $1,000 greenhouse. Just what disposition is to be made of the products is to your correspondent unknown. R.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Nov. 10-16.

This week probably marks the passing of the heaviest point in the chrysanthemum season, and the consequent lowest ebb in the rose trade, which is that part of the business most affected by the late heavy cut of the former. Pinks and violets have been scarce enough to take care of themselves most of the time so far, and suddenly become much more so during the week, so that prices took an appreciable upward bend so far as violets were concerned, touching a bill per hundred on good ones of either kind. Roses keep up their number very well, and the producers hope to make a mark with them right away.

Right on Occasions.

On Sept. 13, 1759, Gen. Wolfe floated down the St. Lawrence River, sealed the cliffs leading to the Plains of Abraham and secured a position for his army by which he captured Quebec and destroyed forever the French control of Canada. One hundred and forty-two years, two months and four days later I floated down the subway upon an Oak Square electric, sealed the heights of Brighton and secured a position from which I could have smashed every pane of glass in W. H. Elliott's massive place with the millions of square stones that lay at my feet. The commander-in-chief being absent, Chief-of-Staff White sur-rendered unconditionally without firing a shot. One hundred thousand feet of glass were passed over for inspection, upon which we hereby award a first-class certificate.

The place reminds me of the noted English drink—it is half roses and half asparagus, counting both the plumosus nans and the twenty thousand of Sprenger. And either the tall houses of the former or the low houses of the latter make a regal picture to look upon, more pleasing to my eye than any house of blossoming plants I ever saw. The condition of everything can hardly be improved, but just now the two 465-foot pink and white rose houses are quite off crop. However, you can hear the next crop coming. The main plumose house, 200x110 and 30 feet high, makes the prettiest sight, with its thousands of green line threads running perfectly perpendicularly from the ground to the glass, each with a feathery vine closely trained upon it. This house, like most others on the place, is cut on the bias to make it fit the steep eastern slope of the hill.

In the two long rose houses already spoken of is a system of tying down old bushes that seems new to me. Perhaps a committee of rose experts should examine into it to pronounce either praise or censure. As the results look all right I think I will maintain a discreet silence. In several smaller houses are found a big growth of fine Carnots, Kaisers (now off duty), Meteors, a magnificent house of Liberties and a house of very dormant Jacks. A good, clean growth of American Beauties in one end of the long houses also suggests where the stock is coming from to supply the large new house now being built, as heretofore reported, upon his late New Hampshire purchase. And over and above all hangs the aroma of the departing glory of a quite numerous chrysanthemum output, which has filled all the stray corners and high shelves. Good solid construction, repairs well kept up, plenty of work room space, fine office arrangement, perfect equipment everywhere is the word. Thirteen of those automatic ventilators have the general oversight of their part of the business. I forgot to inspect the heating apparatus, but I think it is safe to imagine they have something of the kind, as I saw a chimney about a dozen feet square sticking right up through a glass roof, which is a peculiarity I never noticed elsewhere. More room in Brighton and of course an unlimited space upon his New Hampshire farm for additional growth, coupled with Mr. Elliott's improved health during the past year, makes him a very probable disciple of expansion, on the installment plan, for years yet to keep pace with increase of business.

Mr. Sutermeister fully appreciating the honor conferred upon him by the picture episode, has expressed to me his gratitude towards all contributors thereto.

The Market.

The supply has materially shortened up and prices on roses and carnations have stiffened. The best Brides and Maids now easily bring $6, and prices grade from that down to $2 for the poorest. There are still many weak ones and there is a scarcity of top grade stock. In fact, we hear of sales at $7 and $8 for some specially select stock. Beauties hold their price level and there are about enough to meet demands. Carnations have become really scarce, especially white ones. Anything at all good will bring $1.50, good ordinary will fetch $2 and fancy from $2.50 to $3. Chrysanthemums are moving very well. There is, however, a shortage of whites, most growers having run to yellow in their midseason varieties. White should not be overlooked. It is in as much demand at midseason as other colors.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that too many sorts of old shades and doubtful substance are still grown and suggests the following as being the most salable and most satisfactory to handle: Ivory, Pink Ivory, Robinson, Bonnafon, White Bonnafon, Eaton and Chadwick. He hears of several growers that will discard Appleton on account of its weak neck.

Referring to our remarks on the lower prices mums are bringing in this market this year, Geo. Stollery says prices will average fully 25 per cent lower than in previous years, if not more. Blooms that they formerly received $4 a dozen for brought only $2.25 this year.

Valley is going well at $5 for the best and the demand is steadier than in previous years.

The outlook for supply for Thanksgiving is that there will probably be enough Beauties but a shortage of other roses, and probably nearly enough carnations. At date weather conditions are favorable for the season. A number of Thanksgiving price lists will be found in the advs. in this issue.

Dorothy carnation is taking very well in this market, the best blooms now bringing $3 readily.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club seven new members were elected, as follows: Geo. Stollery, Fred Stollery, John Sinner, Chas. M. Miller, E. Enders, E. A. Asmus and M. Luetsch. A larger meeting hall has been secured in the same building and the meetings will hereafter be held on the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month instead of the first and third Fridays.

The next meeting will be held Wednesday, Dec. 11, and at this meeting a first premium of $4 and a second premium of $2 will be awarded for best exhibit of flowering or decorative plant suitable for holiday trade. A committee consisting of Messrs. A. McAdams, John Reardon and George Weinhoeber was appointed to arrange a schedule for awards for exhibits at future meetings. The intention is to have discussions upon the plants exhibited at the meetings. There was also talk of arranging for various entertainments during the winter season, and John Degnan, P. J. Hauswirth and E. Enders were appointed as an entertainment committee.

Various Items.

John Niederkorn, the north side florist, died Nov. 13 of pneumonia, aged 43 years.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, is in the city and is displaying some splendid samples of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Pandanus Veitchii and cyclamen at his room in the Palmer house.

Herbert Heller, of the South Park Floral Company, telegraphed E. C. Ambling to suitably celebrate the winning of first prize on 100 Beauties at Kansas City, and that the command was executed is testified by two empty champagne bottles attached to the telegram and displayed on the wall of Mr. Ambling's establishment. A. C. Kohlbrand admits that he had a share.

Quite a number of those in the trade went from here to the big show in Kansas City.

"Cash" Bridgeford has gone to Los Angeles, Cal., and will probably remain there all winter.

Recent visitors: Martin Renkaf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; M. F. Kyle, Kalamazoo, Mich.

John Refakes has offered the city $9,120 a year for ten years for the exclusive privilege of maintaining fruit and flower stands under the elevated loop stations, and John G. Lambros will offer $12,000 a year.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

The prize-winning vase of American Beauties of which an engraving appeared on the title page of last week's issue was filled with blooms grown by Peter Reinberg, Chicago.

Mr. Reinberg's Beauties have been much in evidence among the prize-winners at the exhibitions this month. In addition to winning first and second prizes in the leading Beauty competition at Chicago, his Beauties won three prizes at St. Louis, including the best prize offered there for Beauties (the blooms being exhibited for him by a St. Louis florist), and this week he won third prize in the hotly contested competition for the big premiums for 100 Beauties at Kansas City.

SPIREA ANTHONY WATERER.

T. A. I. asks the best way to handle the above to have it in bloom for Easter. I have never forced this spirea, but its treatment cannot differ much from that of other kindred hardy shrubs.

Whether you have imported them or lifted them, they should be heeled in either in a root-house or cold-frame, and can be potted at the time you begin to force. Fifty degrees at night will do very well for the first few weeks, and more heat can be given, if necessary. Plenty of syringing till the flowers are open.

The time it will take to bring them in

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

During the past week the rose flower trade was somewhat better, especially with the West End florists, who were quite busy with receptions and weddings. Quite a bit of funeral work was also reported.

We have had a change in the weather the past week, the glass going down below freezing point at night. This, no doubt, will have a shortening effect upon stock for Thanksgiving and is also the cause of the slight improvement in business.

The only flower that was overplentiful last week was the "mum" and a great many of them went to waste, especially the poor ones.

Roses were not as plentiful as they have been yet they sold very cheap. Some very fine stock of Maids and Brides is coming in which sells at from $1 to $5 per 100, according to the blooms and stems. Meteors, Gates, Perles and Woottons run about the same.

Carnations are in good demand and very few are left unsold. The quality is good and they bring from $1 to $2.50 per 100. Violets are selling well and good Californias are going at 50 cents per 100, with southern at 25 cents. Romans, paper whites and valley are now having a steady call at 3 and 4 cents. We are having some very fine snailx in this market now; very long strings which sell at 123 cents per string. All other greens are selling well.

Notes.

Our chrysanthemum show was a success from both an exhibition and financial standpoint, and there will be no need to call on the guarantee fund. We had a fine exhibition of cut blooms, in fact better than in former years when we had larger shows.

Chairman Meinhardt reports that everything was staged on time and that all the judges did their parts well, and he wishes to thank the gentlemen for rendering him such valuable assistance during the show.

Meyer Heller and Elmer Smith had a great time and left for Kansas City on Friday night; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lemon and Mrs. Vesey also departed for Kansas City on Saturday. Swan Peterson, who can tell pleasant recollections of his visit, went home Friday night. James Wilson, who spent a few days with his many friends, left for home Friday night. Jim will be in Kansas City this week. James Hartshorne left for home early but had a good time while he was here. Mr. Foreman of Louisiana, Mo., was the last to leave us and before going put in his application for membership to our club.

Mrs. Ellison, of Ellison & Tesson, will soon open a new store at Grand avenue and Morgan street.

All the West End florists were busy Saturday and Sunday, working half the night Saturday, preparing decorations for the funeral of Mr. McMillen, a wealthy St. Louisian.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled three games with the Diels on Thursday under protest. They rolled a ringer from Chicago named Boyles (do you know him, Ed.?).

PITTSBURG.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening, the 14th inst., at the rooms of the Cut Flower Co., 504 Liberty street. It was a bright and interesting meeting, and Mr. Reineman entertained us with a talk on his recent European trip. Three new members were elected and five new names proposed for membership.

In fact, so prosperous and fast-growing is the club that Fred Burki thought it was about time we were like the Boston or Philadelphia folks and have a horticultural hall of our own right here in Pittsburg, and after considerable discussion the president appointed Fred Burki, Gus Ludwig and Mr. Reineman a committee to examine into the matter and report at our next meeting. It is a good thing for us to have these progressive ideas in our heads, even if they may be a little premature. Just now available sites are almost impossibly expensive in Pittsburg, building materials are about unobtainable, and the labor market was never so uncertain as it is today. This is largely caused by the great number of massive buildings now being erected in Pittsburg.

Various Notes.

Mr. A. R. Peacock, a member of the Carnegie firm, is building a palace dwelling on N. Highland avenue and has contracted with Lord & Burnham Co. for the creation of an extensive system of conservatories and a mushroom cave. W. B. Ague, one of the gardeners at Highland Park, has been employed as his gardener.

Mr. James, lately gardener to Mrs. Carr, at Point Breeze, has resigned and gone into partnership with his brother in the florist business at Wilkinsburg.

Eddie Howells, of Schenley Park, was offered the situation, but on advice of Supt. Falconer he concluded to remain in the Phipps Conservatories, where something better may soon be in store for him. He has been asked to name the incoming gardener, however.

P. A.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—Walter Mott, who has for many years been traveling salesman for the firm of H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, will start in business here January 1 next, handling a general line of plants, bulbs, seeds and florists' supplies. The business will be carried on under the title Walter Mott Co., incorporated. John A. Smith, who has also been connected with H. A. Dreer, in the plant and seed departments, has been engaged as Mr. Mott's assistant. Mr. Mott's address will continue to be Riverton, N. J., until Dec. 25.

OTTAWA, ONT.

Business has improved during the last two weeks, especially in funeral work. Roses and mums are plentiful, carnations rather scarce yet.

Wright's greenhouses were almost all destroyed by fire on the night of Nov. 7, only two left of about a dozen. Mr. Wright put in an apparatus for burning sawdust and had it completed that night. The only conclusion he can come to is that the fireman went to sleep. Three of his hands were sleeping over the potting shed; one of them, a lad of 16, lost his life; all that was found of him were a few bones. When the writer arrived on the scene next morning he found a sad wreck, and Mr. Wright in a state of mind not to be envied. Not so much for his financial loss as the terrible death of the poor boy.

Willing hands went to work to protect what was left and by 6 p. m. connection was made with the boilers and steam turned on. There is not enough left to supply a store in the city, as all the roses, carnations, palms, ferns, and most of his azaleas and lilies were destroyed or frozen the next night. Mr. Wright will be seriously handicapped, as there is no wholesale place here to run to. But he is a young man with lots of pluck and energy and will soon get his place in order. His loss is between $10,000 and $15,000. No insurance.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Dull, raw, almost smother weather has been our lot for the past week. If we do not get more sun-shine, carnations are going to be very scarce at Thanksgiving time. Roses are none too plentiful and may be in shortage also. There will be an abundance of violets. Most of the growers are not being so successful with their violets this year as last, which has a tendency to hold the price of good violets firm. There will be a few callas and paper whites make their appearance next week. Mums are plentiful, all sizes and prices. After Thanksgiving mums will be comparatively few, as the late varieties are all earlier this year than usual.

A few extra fine Timothy Eaton were seen at Cunningham's. They were well done and monstrous in size.

At the City Greenhouses were seen fine Golden Wedding, Maud Dean, Helen Bloodgood, Col. Appleton, Robinson and Perrin.

Henry Smith has a bench of Riemann that will be in their prime next week and Crabb & Hunter are long on Jerome Jones.

Wm. Cunningham is ill with fever and sore throat. He has the wishes of the craft for a speedy recovery.

Henry Smith and Eli Cross attended the Detroit show and Crabb & Hunter sent a vase of their Irene to show the boys it was in first-class shape.

ST. PAUL.

Trade Conditions.

Conditions are most favorable for good trade in this town, and sales are well up to the top notch. Notwithstanding the great increase in building the past ten years, and the consequent increased supply of flowers, the demand has constantly kept ahead of the supply, and a great many more flowers are being shipped in than there were ten years ago.

The bright weather prevailing of late has been most favorable for all blooms and a fine crop of bloom has resulted. Mums are hardly up to the standard in quality, although the later varieties are much better than the early ones. Carnations will furnish a good crop for Thanksgiving trade, which promises to be unusually good. In roses, Golden Gate and Liberty are the leaders, and have been planted more extensively this year than ever before.

A most noticeable feature of this year's trade is the constant demand for Beauties. Prices are unimportant so long as good blooms, long stems and clean foliage can be obtained.

Bonquet green is reported rather scarce again this season, and prices are quite high.

A BUYERS' GUIDE.

The C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, Wis., have issued a new catalogue and call it a "Buyers' guide and reference book for florists." Not a bad title. Mr. Pollworth, as the contents are certainly sufficiently varied to warrant it. Plants, bulbs and miscellaneous supplies are listed in great variety and testify to the expanding business of this enterprising concern.

FREEMONT, ILL.—Louis Bauscher is putting up one house 12x50 for general stock and has added another boiler. Early next season he will erect four houses for roses and carnations.

WILKESBARRE, PA.—A chrysanthemum show was given this week in the armory of Co. D, Florist Marvin supplied many of the plants and flowers and decorated the building.

DIXON, ILL.—Florist O. L. Baird has taken his plants and flowers from Kelly's place, on First street, to the E. M. Bunnell Drug Co., on Galena avenue.

BUFFALO.

I think all hands and all classes of business miss the Pan. Am. to some extent and that is only to be expected, but there is no great collapse to come; it will not be felt except a quietude after the storm. There is nothing to collapse, there was not more than four or five cheap hotels built especially for the occasion and they got their money back, while all established hotels made lots of money and thousands of families made money by taking in boarders. You can't leave ten million dollars in a town without the whole community feeling some what richer by it. I believe business will be good this winter, there is every indication.

We are in the middle of the mump season but they are going rather slowly. Charlie Guenther, of Hamburg, is sending in some fine Golden Wedding, and the Huntley greenhouses (G. Troup, proprietor), of Corfu, have supplied a large quantity of good flowers. There are also to be found some fine blooms of Appleton, Jeannie Falconer and Timothy Eaton at Cold Springs, and some of them have gone to Kansas City.

Local grown violets are very scarce but the supply comes in all the same. I had a look at the Corfu establishments last week and the cut of carnations for the holidays is very promising. At Mr. Tronp's place the several varieties of Daybreak look fine and there are several grand benches of Crane and White Cloud. At the other end of the village is the Montrose Greenhouses, where Aleck, the son of William, presides. He is looking good. Much more profitable than last year, but all else is eclipsed by the wonderful Mrs. Lawson. In carnations it is like the alleged race horse Eclipse of 100 years ago. It is Lawson first and the rest nowhere, although that is hardly fair, and it would be more correct to say that The Margins and Ethel Crocker "also ran." You hear complaints of short stems. We had 18 inch stems on Nov. 1st, so you can't lay that fault up against the beautiful lady.

Mr. John F. Cowell has gone to Kansas City to act as one of the judges at the great show. When the associated press sends announcements of the prizes to all the dailies of the country you have got a flower show worth talking about. Our dailies have it that Mr. Peacock of Wynote took second prize for Am. Beauties. Of course we know it is the great Joseph that begins his name with an H.

One of our most active and worthy park commissioners died last week, Mr. Augustin Hager. Mr. Hager made a competency in the wholesale liquor business and afterwards as a leaf tobacco broker. About 27 years ago he bought 20 acres of land in what was then almost on the outskirts of the city and there for years he amused himself planting and improving the place till his little estate was a gem and a most interesting place for any lover of plants to visit. In horticulture and landscape gardening had been his chosen profession he would have been a star. He loved and knew plants, not because they made his place pretty, but for their individual selves. He was an ideal park superintendent. Pity there were not more of his sort on the board. He was beside a genial, clever, brainy man. We have lost one of our best friends.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Trade and Personal Items.

Trade seems to improve each day as we approach the holidays and that emblem of holiday time, the red berry, can be seen at every store. Violets are scarce and poor in quality, but the rains we are just having will improve them very much in the next few days. Roses and carnations are about the same as to quality and prices. Freesias are in market for the first time this week. Chrysanthemums are still coming into market in large quantities and are very cheap.

Prices: American Beauties, $1 to $3; Brides, Maids, Meteors, 25 to 75 cents; Cecil Brummers, 61 cents per doz. Carnations, Hoharts, firsts $1, seconds 50 cents; Crocker, 35 cents; Hill, 20 to 25 cents; mixed fancy, 25 to 50 cents; Prosperity, 50 to 75 cents; Scotts, 15 to 20 cents; and Portia, 10 cents per dozen. Chrysanthemums, Dailedouze, $1 to $1.50; Jones, $2 to $2.50; Bonnaffon, 50 cents to $1.50; outside chrysanthemums, 5 to 50 cents per doz. Violets, Princess of Wales, $1.25 to $1.50; Marie Louise, $1 per dozen bunches; Tuberoses, $1 to $1.75 per doz.; valley, 50 cents per doz. Smilax, 5 cents; asparagus, 10 cents per string; Freesias, 25c per doz.

Carnation Hannah Hohart will be placed on the market in the spring of 1902.

Mr. Thomas H. Stevenson planted a big batch of Longiflorums at his growing establishment, Millwood, Marin county, for outside flowers.

Visitors in town: J. W. Lake, Chicago; Robert Armstrong, Santa Barbara, and John Jack, San Rafael.

W. S. Marshall will open a store at Fresno, Cal.

The Golden Gate Park commissioners have decided to advance the wages of skilled laborers from $2 to $2.50 per day.

Mr. Robert Armstrong, lately of Fernwood, has taken a position with Mr. I. G. Waterman, Santa Barbara. Mr. Waterman is a millionaire from Philadelphia and owns one of the finest private places in Santa Barbara, employing sixty men. Mr. Armstrong speaks very highly of his new place and describes Santa Barbara as the most beautiful spot on the Pacific slope, the tenderest kinds of plants doing splendidly in the open. "We have no use for greenhouses there," says Bob.

The Cox Seed and Plant Co. has a fine lot of Diecksonia antarctica ranging from 2 to 20 feet in height. Dr. Brigham of San Francisco bought two of them last week, 15 to 20 feet, for $60.

Antone Verdi has opened a store at East Berkeley for the sale of plants and cut flowers.

Mr. William Eldred, gardener to the Col. F. Crocker estate, lost his wife on November 10. Pneumonia was the cause of her death. Mr. Eldred has the sympathy of the trade.

Some fine vases of that beautiful chrysanthemum Mrs. Jerome Jones can be seen at first-class stores. J. N.

CINCINNATI

Various Items.

The market started out with a considerable shortage in all kinds of stock, but everything points to a plentiful supply for the latter part of the week. Good, cool weather with frosts every night, and the thermometer ranging between 50 and 40 degrees in the day time, is first class from a grower's standpoint and ought to stir up a brisk trade. During the past week there was an enormous supply of mums, both large and small, and as trade, as a whole, was a trifle quiet, prices were not of the highest. There is a very good demand for small mums to be used in funeral work and they brought more money in proportion to their size than the larger varieties.

One of the largest and most elaborate church and house decorations ever arranged in this city was executed during the past week by Charlie Jones, of the Walnut Hill Floral Bazaar. The reason of this decoration was the wedding of the daughter of the Hon. J. B. Foraker. To say that Charlie outdid himself on this decoration would be putting it mildly. Nothing but the finest flowers that money could buy were used and in such lavish display as to astonish even those who are used to seeing the fine art examples of our eastern brothers.

On Saturday the flower market was overloaded with chrysanthemums, and as trade was light as a rule, you could get stock at your own figures at closing up time.

Now that Timothy Eaton is in shape to be cut, it is being sent in from many growers. The E. G. Hill Co. and E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., and C. L. Reese, Springfield, Ohio, have shipped some fine blooms.

George & Allan are now in the market with Romans and paper whites, which they quote at from 3 to 4 cents. C. J. OLMER.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Isaac Fricker, the veteran florist, died Nov. 13, aged 71 years. He was born in Dorsetshire, England, Oct. 8, 1830. He came to America in 1853, and for a few months was employed by William Buchanan in New York city. From there he went to Rhinecliff where he became a gardener for the late William Kelly who owned the estate which is now in the possession of Levi P. Morton. Subsequently Mr. Fricker removed to Albany and was employed as gardener by General John F. Rathbone, where he remained five years during which period he married Caroline Lamoure of Albany. In 1863 Mr. Fricker came to Poughkeepsie and formed a partnership with William Bennett. They erected greenhouses on the South Road on the north side of the entrance to the Rural cemetery. For twelve years Mr. Fricker continued in business at this place having as partners at different intervals George Stack and John Clarke the firms being known as Fricker & Stack and Fricker & Clarke. In 1875 Mr. Fricker removed to No. 635 Main street and in 1886 he bought out John Clarke and from that time until his death conducted the business alone. He was a genial, kindly man and had a host of friends.

The Mrs. E. A. Nelson

bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown. Read the following from a prominent grower who tested one dozen plants:

HARTFORD, CONN., Nov. 7, 1901.
S. S. SKIDELSKY, DEAR SIR: The plants of Mrs. Nelson carnation you sent me for trial did splendidly in the field and have made rapid growth since housing at the present time showing from 4 to 6 buds to a plant, not counting a considerable number I cut off a month after housing. There is also a mass of strong shoots coming up, which being in different stages of growth, compel me to consider it a continuous bloomer. I will further say, that I think for habit of growth, length of stem, rapid growth and absence of disease it is the best one I have ever grown.
Very truly,
GEO. S. OSBORN.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is
