The nymphs are planted in about 25 different groups. They consist of all the best known hardy species and varieties and have added greatly to the beauty of the Mirror Lakes. In all cases there is a background of shrubbery, and bulrushes are planted on the margins of the water. They were received from Henry A. Dreer last July. Temporary clay dams were formed and the pools filled with water as there was no water than in the Mirror Lakes. Although the winter was severe the frost was kept away from the roots and during April of this year the clay dams were removed and the Mirror Lakes were flooded, with the result that few, if any, of the nymphs were lost and they have been admired by thousands, a most pleasing bed. The varieties are good and are all colors indiscriminately mixed, which I believe is far prettier than a mass of one color, at least in this old fashioned plant.

There have been so many disappointments in verbenas of late that it is gratifying to see a brilliant bed of such an old favorite. I would take this opportunity to say that in all this fifteen acres of flower gardening there is but one bed in the carpet bedding style, and that seems something out of place and is scarcely noticed, showing that the popular taste no longer runs to that artificial style of gardening.

Henry A. Dreer has a long border filled with about fifty of the leading herbaceous plants, also an old fashioned garden containing some dozen beds filled with the most desirable of these now popular plants. The picture gives a view of a portion of the border.

The geranium bed is a large circle 24 ft. in diameter. As will be seen by the picture there are several varieties planted in sections. I am not sure but this is quite as pleasing in this flower as one color. It is a good demonstration of what are suitable varieties for ceed in accomplishing any great good, for I am sorry to say that the main support accorded them seems to be by only one branch of the trade, the growers. An effort should be made to include the retailer. The grower might say, "If he wants to come, he is welcome; if he would rather stay at home, let him stay there." Perhaps they would be justified, but nevertheless the retailer must be in some way attracted to such meetings; evenings should be especially set apart for discussions concerning him, and there should also be an effort made to introduce, during the course of every meeting, something of vital interest to him, thus, as it were, compelling him to attend. We cannot overestimate the necessity of having every branch of the trade well represented at all meetings.

Another important point in connection with the present methods is that a number of the growers do not seem to realize the necessity of carefully considering their customers. It is imperative that an equal distribution should be made in the allotment of stock, particularly when a scarcity is on the market great care should be exercised; it should never be said that a grower had been partial. Considerable trouble seems to have been met with in the past by growers favoring one or more of their customers, allowing one to have more than his share of stock, while the other (shall I say poor?) fellow at the last moment is forced to chase around in search of that which he had expected from his regular source of supply.

There are two sides to every question. At a time when there has been an oversupply the retailer has inconsiderately favored one of his supply men, and instead of having procured a smaller lot from each of his growers has allowed himself to be led away by favoritism and cleaned off the stock of a single grower. We must not lose sight of the fact that the neglects are included in both sections; that the growers are not alone at fault, but the retailer is very often responsible for the condition of affairs caused by want of foresight or carelessness. They both should have remembered that golden rule, "Do unto others as you would be done by." Consideration should be employed by both parties; thereby, I think, would be the saving of a great deal of the worry and anxiety of such as "Shall I get enough for my orders?" and "Will I get rid of my stock now everybody has plenty?" If both sections would be brought to realize the great necessity for care, I think you will agree with me that the relationship by that single instance would be greatly improved.

Another point of minor import is the seeming reluctance of retailers to propose the growing or discarding of any special flower or variety of flowers. For some reason he does not advance any of his ideas as to what should or should not, according to his opinion, be given special attention by growers. One of the apparent reasons is the fear lest he should, by freely imparting his knowledge, benefit his competitor in trade, or should his ideas prove a failure, feel himself under obligations to reimburse the grower for the loss sustained by his wrong interpretation of the public's requirements. Again there is the fear of a pet idea being dashed to pieces by the refusal of a grower to entertain his opinion as rational. Thus it seems that jealousy plays an important part in the daily life of a retailer; he seems always in fear lest he impart some of his knowledge to the benefit of his opposition; he is fearful lest he say too much in the presence of his grower, a fear that the other man may be benefited thereby. Perhaps there are no grounds for his suspicion of his grower, still it is wonderful what is whispered in the ear of ourselves as to the movement of the other fellow down street. All growers are not alike, and it seems too bad that a few careless ones should cause so much animosity and be so preventive to the harmony necessary for the improvement of our dealings and relationship.

I believe I now come to the most serious obstacle in the prevention of a closer and better relationship; the question we face every day business is transacted between grower and seller, the cause of most of our misunderstanding and all our serious trouble, that great problem, "prices." Before a substantial and lasting improvement can be brought to bear on our relationship it will be necessary to find some way of a better regulation of prices, of a more equal distribution of the different qualities of plants and cut flowers produced by our growers, goods will have to be placed on the market in such a way that the advantage, if any, should be shared alike by the large grower, the smaller one, the big retailer, down to the man going from house to house with his little push cart, there will have to be a more careful method of gradation. If you will pardon me, I would like to quote here from a paper read by myself at a meeting of the Toronto Gardeners and Florists' Association, of Toronto, last winter.

"Some growers have partially solved the difficulty, and as is naturally suggested, grade their products, but there are others who do not as yet seem to have realized the importance of gradation and making a conglomeration of all grades except because a certain flower has a common name there should be one price for all, thereby not getting a good price for the good, a poor price for the poor, but a general medium, giving, I claim, a questionable advantage to the No. 1 fellow, and, could it be properly understood, not making trade better, but killing a class of trade that would go without before entering the big establishment, thereby decreasing the demand of a people who would appreciate a slightly poorer quality as well as though it were selected stuff."

The advantages gained by one and lost by the other in our present method of marketing tend to lessen the necessary harmony; instance after instance has occurred when the smaller grower, although guilty of not grading his productions, and to my mind doing anything but assisting his brother of smaller degree, strange to say, when he has successfully brought to issue a particular line of flower, through his ignorance of the price obtainable for his goods, disposed of them at a far less price than should have been secured, and strange it may seem, but true, instead of benefiting his equal in business enterprise has, for the few encouraging words to be obtained from the great retailer and well "scented" of the honor of selling them, given the advantage to the place where such financial advantage was the least necessary. He (the grower) has lost by the transaction. The small retailer has never had a chance to share in the profit; the gain to the big retail man has been questionable, for he has strained one of those very sensitive chords of friendship connecting grower and seller.

The large retailer is not to blame, for in this world of rush and grab it is every man for himself and "the Devil take the hindmost." The fault lies in the ignorance of the grower, disposing of his goods at a small figure when a greater price was obtainable.

It appears to me that after considering all the points detrimental to our more friendly and harmonious relationship, the lesser grievance converging to a central position seems to dissolve into one great fault, that awful bugbear "prices." True, there is that seeming useless jealousy; but were we to agree on the question of prices, were a proper regulation regarding them brought into existence, I would feel safe in placing my confidence in our wholesale and retail men, and, knowing the nature of many of them, guarantee, if necessary, that it would be almost impossible for them to withhold from forming one of the most successful organizations for the advancement of our particular line of trade. That we would all be benefited thereby is an assured fact, for there is hardly a line of trade where good, clear, undoubted confidence in each other is as badly needed as with the florists.

Here is a mid-July glimpse of a perennial border. At the left in the foreground is a group of spately hollyhocks, flanked by perennial phloxes not yet in bloom, though some of their kindred out of range of the picture are already dressed in their fullest glory. Higher up at the left the foliage of Golden Glow, flowering crab apple and Weir's cut-leaved maple make a rich background of green. The dense group in the center of the picture is the tuberous rooted sunflower, which will be nearly ten feet high before it is ready to bloom. In front of this group are auratum lilies in bloom. The size, splendor and delightful and far-reaching fragrance of the auratum make it a feature in any collection of flowers.

The light colored bloom through the right center of the view is mostly that of Cleome speciosissima, a continuous bloomer from June till frost. In certain situations is very effective. The dark group in the foreground at the right is a disseed form of Helianthus multiflorus; the leaves are broader and the growth more robust than in the ordinary full double form.

At the extreme right is Campanula Van Houttei in bloom. This is by far the most reliable of all the introduced campanulas for hardy planting. II.

DES MOINES, IOWA.—Mr. Charles N. Page, manager of the Iowa Seed Store, has returned from a two months' visit in Europe.

UTICA, N. Y.—There is a small delegation from here at the Buffalo convention. All are hurrying their work so as to get their carnations in. J. C. Bigelow, Jr., has gone to Sylvan Beach to enjoy a well-earned vacation at the family cottage, Oneida Lake.

CLAY CENTER, KAN.—J. P. Lampe, of Concordia, was here last Tuesday visiting Charles Humfeld.

POTTING SHED IDYLS.

A TEMPERANCE LESSON.

The "old man" did not believe in carrying rose beds over, and each year, at the season when greenhouse work produces a thirst that would stock a herd of camels, the men spent long, broiling days in rushing soil in and out in hand barrows, mending and whitewashing benches, and similar restful occupations. Jaggs had thoughtfully developed a sprained ankle a few days before planting began, which unfitted him for the more strenuous part of the work; consequently he sat on a peat barrel doing a bit of pottin', while the others hiked in soil.

"Seems to me Jaggs will be overworkin' hisself if he don't look out," observed Tommy, strolling back from a swim in the creek after supper. "Him and that bloomin' old parrot o' the old lady's is alike—they both takes most o' their exercise in talkin'."

"I reckon I generally remind you o' something moral and improvin', don't I, Tommy?" remarked Jaggs, genially.

"You do," responded Tommy. "Fact is, Jaggs, I never see you without thinkin' o' the ten commandments."

"Yes?" queried Jaggs, languidly.

"Sure thing," said Tommy. "You're both of you generally broke."

Jaggs acknowledged the compliment by firing a lump of peat at Tommy, and then subsided on the lily crate which formed part of the furniture of the summer garden. There was a brief flurry, caused by Tommy falling off a barrel in the effort to escape a daddy-long-legs which tried to find refuge down the back of his neck.

"Don't be cruel to poor dumb hinsecks, Tommy," observed Jaggs, reprovingly. "I've known lots o' them as was more improvin' society than some men."

"I believe yer," said Tommy, unpleasantly. "They can't talk."

"I knowed a batch o' cockroaches once," continued Jaggs, "as persuaded a man to quit drinkin'; he went and joined the Salvation Army afterwards, but o' course 'tain't fair to blame the roaches for that."

"Was they actual hinsecks," asked Tommy, "or did you just see 'em?"

Jaggs ignored this, and paused to start his pipe afresh before continuing his narrative. "I was down at the Squeebosset Nurseries," he observed, "bloomin' old pen, where they handles a lot o' tropical stuff. 'Course they gets everything goin' in the hinseck line. Once we gets a special importation o' tree leeches in a batch o' ferns, as keeps the chaps on the run most o' the time—big fellows, with a smile on 'em like hammer-headed sharks. I reckon as the boss would a-gone out o' business if it 'adn't been for a green boa as dropped in with a batch o' Philippine orchids—and the boss didn't pay no had vollerrum on him, neither. I reckon them graspin' custom house chaps put him on the free list. Anyway, he gets away with the leeches, and the rats, and a pair o' two o' rubber boots, and I reckon he'd been livin' yet if he 'adn't run across a Sunday paper. It 'ad a special full-page article about money in Dutch bulbs, with a lot o' pipe-dream pictures, and even a boa constructor couldn't swaller that! He just curled up his toes peaceful like, and went and died back o' the boilers."

There was a brief pause. Tommy Atkins' terrier Patches rushed in, seeking sympathy for a bald spot over one eye, which suggested a difference of opinion with Pharaoh, the greenhouse cat. Pharaoh strolled in after him, purring melodiously, but giving Patches a wide berth; then settled down to sleep on Davy's solid knee.

"But what about them moral and improvin' roaches, Jaggs, old boy?" asked Tommy.

"Well, as I was sayin'," continued Jaggs, "it was a bloomin' old jail of a place, and when I was on duty nights I used to get lonesome enough to join the W. C. T. U., or do hanythink else desperate. There wasn't no society, and exceptin' the boss and me, there wasn't a chap on the place as could talk what you might call good English. But cockroaches—Lor"—that was afore that bloomin' snake joined us—there was a reglar procession of 'em everywhere. They wasn't natives either, but them big tropical ones. I wouldn't like to say as any of 'em was over six inches long, but it was a reglar thing to see the boss's terrier shake one of 'em by the scruff o' the neck, thinkin' it was a rat! They was intelligent, too—there was one old chap as we tamed—he was pettier fond o' fried potatoes—and when I was waterin' at one end o' the range, and wanted to send a message up to the pottin' shed, I'd just tie a note around his neck, and he'd trot off with it as pleased as Punch."

"Say, Jaggs," inquired Tommy anxiously, "was you talkin' about the terrier or the cockroach?"

"Used to worry me some," continued Jaggs, ignoring the interruption, "when I was on duty alone nights. A chap can have too much of most hanythink—specially roaches. There was one night the tame ones kep' 'agin' round till they was a reglar nuisance, and I got tired of 'em. There was a lot o' scraps o' crape paper layin' round—the boss had been trimmin' up a lot o' plants for the church tea fight. I picked up one o' the snips, cut out a pair o' purple wings, and clapped 'em on to the big fellow with a dab o' paste. Well, you never see a hinseck more pleased; he ambled off, lookin' like he was givin' the others a treat. I liked his looks myself, so I kept on decoratin', and pretty soon I had the giddiest panorama you ever see—some o' 'em would make a rainbow look like widdier's weeds. Talk about birds o' Paradise—they wasn't in it—them hinsecks was more variegated than the novelties in a spring catalogue."

"Well, I just sits there, admirin' 'em, when Jimmy Oakley strolled in. Remember him, Davy?"

"A vera demoralising auld man," said Davy, severely.

"Yes," observed Tommy, "he's been goin' 'ome for twenty year—wouldn't stay another night in this bloomin' country if it wasn't such a long damp walk back to Liverpool."

"Well," continued Jaggs, "you know he wasn't never what you might call a white ribbon chap, and that evenin' I reckon he wouldn't 'a been surprised if he'd seen a pink elephant helpin' a pea-green hippopotamus to pot off orchids. He says:

"'Ulo, Jaggs,' and sits down. I says: "'Ulo, Jimmy,' and keeps on smokin'. I see he keep lookin' at them hinsecks; they was paradin' around, like a political procession—I reckon there was

'undreds of 'em. By and by he says, very precise-like: "Seems to me them cockroaches is a bit different from ordinary." 'Maybe a bit bigger,' says I; 'they ain't natives, most of 'em bein' Brazilian.' 'Well,' says he, 'I never see even a Brazilian roach with pea-green wings afore—must be a hybrid.' 'Jimmy,' says I, 'seems to me your boots must be a precious sight brighter than yer head; roaches ain't never nothink but a decent respectable brown. When a chap begins to see sky-blue-scarlet cockroaches with butterfly wings,' I says, 'he ought to think seriously where he's a-driftin' to,' I says.

"'Do you mean to say,' says he, lookin' at a chap with double purple and yellow wings as was crawlin' over a pile o' thumb pots, 'as there ain't nothink here but plain everyday cockroaches?"

"'I do mean just that,' says I, 'and you'd ought to turn over a new leaf afore you begin to see sky-blue centipedes playin' seven-up with a drove of horned toads,' says I. 'A man as sees unoffending hinsecks as looks like they was dropped out of a kaleidoscope,' says I, 'must have somethin' serious the matter with him.'

"'Jaggs,' says he, very solemn and dignified, 'your opinions is always worth listenin' to. Possibly I've been eatin' somethin' as disagreed with me,' says he, lookin' at another of them iridescent hinsecks. "It makes me quite fanciful. I think I'd better get some sleep." So the old chap started off, and I did hear as one o' them missions got hold of him since; he's goin' around holdin' forth as a reformed florist—first on record. But if the old chap has reformed, them variegated hinsecks jolly well deserve the credit of it."

"Say, Jaggs," said Tommy, "do you know why your true stories about animals always reminds me o' the Pali-sades?"

Jaggs, who was knocking out his pipe, made no response, and the unabashed Tommy called back, as he made his escape:

"Both of 'em, you see, is mighty big bluffs!"

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Market conditions are but slightly changed from last week. Roses are somewhat easier, especially white roses. Beauties are coming longer stemmed. Kaisers, which have been off crop, are now coming in and this, with the better supply of white asters, has materially relieved the demand for white flowers. Shipping trade holds up well and prices and demand are unusually good for this time of the year. Field carnations are beginning to come in.

Various Items.

Mr. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, reports trade this summer as fully 50 per cent better than that of a year ago. Mr. and Mrs. Washburn leave for northern Wisconsin this week. Mr. Gressens and Mr. Winkelman, of Bassett & Washburn, return from their summer outings this week. Fred Lurkhurst, an old-timer of this city, is dead. His son's address is not known.

Hans Tobler, Traverse City, Mich., is a visitor in town. Sinner Bros., Ridge avenue, have commenced housing their carnations. Those who have seen the plants say they are the best seen this year. Their roses, too, are looking well.

William O'Hara, 57 years old, a florist of Kenosha, was struck by a south bound Illinois Central train at Seventy-first street. The shock paralyzed the lower part of the body. He was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where he died.

THE BUFFALO SHOOT.

In the shooting tournament the Lockland prize was again won by Philadelphia, Cleveland was second and Buffalo third. The scores follow:

- Philadelphia—Harris 15, Anderson 19, Burton 22, Reid 19, Ball 15, Cartledge 17.
- Cleveland—Beard 18, Altick 18, Hippard 18, Steffens 13, Eddie 20, Graham 13. Total 100.
- Buffalo—Braik 8, W. Scott 15, Troup 9, Kasting 4, W. B. Scott 6, D. J. Scott 6. Total 48.

In the individual shoot at twenty-five birds John Burton won first with 22, George Anderson second with 21 and E. Hippard third with 20. For fourth place four were tied with 19 each, but J. Eddie won out on the shoot off.

PHILADELPHIA.

Various Items.

The cut flower market is not in so good shape as last week; there is more stock and less business. There are some new Beauties about and some excellent Kaiserins and Meteors; these sell fairly well, but the poorer roses don't move. Carnations are pretty well over. Asters have taken their place; they bring from $1.50 per 100 down, a good many being poor. Smilax is in very good demand.

I. W. Pabst, of Moorestown, N. J., is sending some nice Cochet roses to Fred Ehrert.

John Devlin, Sixty-third and Elmwood avenue, is cutting about the best gladioli coming into the market; they are of good colors and sell well at $4 and $5 per 100.

Henry F. Michell will leave on Monday next for his annual trip among the eastern and western seed growers.

Joseph Meehan gave the members of the Germantown Horticultural Society an interesting botanical ramble last Saturday afternoon. The party met in front of Memorial Hall and proceeded through Fairmount Park, over a route selected by Mr. Meehan, who pointed out the rarer shrubs and trees to be found there. The affair was a great success and attracted several well known horticulturists who are not members of the society. Among those present were Edward Neville, Edwin Lonsdale, G. C. Watson, Albert Woltemate, S. Mendelsen Meehan, Mr. Morse, Mr. Duncan, George Riddles and others.

Thomas Butler, formerly of Wyndmoor, is selling bulbs for H. Waterer.

About 100 delegates left this city on two special cars attached to the 10:30 a. m. train bound for Buffalo over the Lehigh Valley railroad. Who went and what they did will be found chronicled elsewhere in these pages, sufficient to say that they worthily upheld the renown of the Quaker City in the convention hall, in the trade exhibit, and in the sports.

BOSTON.

Trade is good—very good indeed. The trouble is there is but an awful little of it, consequently a small order seems good indeed. Asters now come nearer being plentiful than anything else, and even they are not so much in evidence as usual at this date. Roses, carnations and sweet peas are not over-plentiful nor of very good quality; small white flowers, lilies, gladioli, etc., rather scarce, but the limited call makes prices low on everything. Smilax, asparagus and other green material not moving at all.

Apropos of the gladioli question, Mr. F. W. Fletcher is growing 40,000 bulbs of the new one, Groff's Hybrid, shown at the New York convention last year. Mr. Shaler of Weston has the New England agency and Mr. Fletcher grows this amount for him. The expected crop of bulbs is about all sold. The blossoms are larger, rounder, fuller, than older varieties, and are of a much more hardy character.

I believe the demand for red roses has been better than usual here for summer trade. There has been a good supply and I think they have gone out very well indeed. J. McFarland of North Easton is the first one to appear on the scene with new crop American Beauties.

The auction sale of stalls in the co-operative market will not take place until Saturday, September 14.

For real exhilarating vacation reading let me recommend the Saturday Evening Post. Here is an extract from a love story in the last issue: "Her father was a florist and necessarily a millionaire. He only parted with his lily of the valley for its weight in gold, and his American Beauties for their weight in diamonds." "He" was a grower, too!

J. S. MANTER.

VIOLET HOUSES—HEATING.

No. 1.—I have a house 16 feet wide running east and west. On which side of this house would be best to make a violet house with sash, (lean-to house) the north or south?

No. 2.—Do you think that 8 runs of 4 in. pipe (4 on each side and one end) are sufficient to heat a rose house 20x40, the south end glass and north end against shed 9½ ft. to ridge?

SUNNY KANSAS.

In answer to the questions asked by "Sunny Kansas"—a lean-to violet house against a house running east and west should be on the south side in order to get the full benefit of the sun, which is so necessary for violet growing.

If the rose house referred to as "20x40" has the roof and one end only of glass, it would probably contain about 1,000 square feet of glass, which would require at least 350 feet of 4-inch pipe to maintain 55 degrees, and I think the coils he describes will contain very nearly the desired amount and if the house is well built, and boiler has full capacity, should give the desired results.

CHICAGO TO BUFFALO.

The Chicago Florists' Club's special train to Buffalo carried a delegation of about 100, and the Wabash railway gave it a clear track and a great run. It started at sharp 4 p. m. Monday, overtook and passed the fast 3 o'clock train before Detroit was reached, and arrived in Buffalo an hour ahead of the time set. The train consisted of a diner, four sleepers and a chair car, which had been suitably decorated and bore signs reading: "Chicago Florists' Club's Special." With Ed. Winterson, George Asmus, Charley Balluff, P. J. Hauswirth, Walter Kreitling and the rest of the "warm bunch" aboard it is needless to say there was a large, hot time.

The party included the following from Chicago: A. McAdams, George Wittbold, Otto Wittbold, G. H. Pieser, E. F. Winterson and wife, Geo. Asmus and wife, C. W. McKellar and wife, P. J. Hauswirth, Edgar Sanders, G. L. Grant and wife, Joseph Foerster, Walter Kreitling and wife, Mrs. Melms, Miss Cook, John Paulus, John Hoefl, G. Swenson, A. L. Vaughan, P. H. Retzer, Mrs. S. for the coming season. We have doubled the floor space of our salesroom, coupled with all modern appointments. In addition to a large number of consignors, growers of first-class stock, we have added a greenhouse establishment of our own in order to enable us to take care of our constantly increasing business. We confine our main efforts to the production of

First Quality American Beauties.

With this addition we are enabled to furnish our patrons with a complete line of Cut Flowers of an exceptional high grade quality. We would respectfully solicit your patronage, assuring you first quality stock, right prices and prompt service.

MEALY BUG ON COLEUS.

Having to winter about four hundred stock plants of coleus the mealy bug, which seems to be more partial to coleus than to anything else, has annually made life miserable for the writer.

Last year we got a five dollar bottle of X. L. All Fumigating Mixture which was quite satisfactory for the time being, but in two or three weeks the pest was as bad as ever and on account of the price of the "X. L. All" frequent fumigation was out of the question.

Last spring, however, I invested five dollars in the "Florists' Manual" and by mere chance happened to read therein that: "If a gardener has charge of the hose mealy bug ought never to be seen on coleus." Now, although the writer considered himself "a gardener," having had some twenty years' experience both in the old country and America, he immediately determined to adopt the treatment hinted at by Mr. Scott, being fully convinced that he "did not know it all yet."

Consequently when potting the coleus into the pots in which they were to stay for the winter (3½ and 4-in. pots) considerable care was taken with the drainage so that the plants would not get too wet or waterlogged. Since the last repotting the plants have every day been subjected to an "unmerciful battering" with the hose and the result is that a finer, cleaner, thriftier looking lot of coleus plants it would be hard to find.

Heretofore the writer had been afraid to syringe coleus heavily for fear of their damping off, but if the drainage is all right, and the temperature from 55 to 60 degrees nights, there seems to be no danger whatever, as we have only lost two out of four hundred, so far.

Now, in the writer's estimation, that little clause in the "Florists' Manual," "If a gardener, etc.," is easily worth to him the five dollars paid for the book, although he should never find anything more. Doubtless hundreds, probably thousands, would say, "Why! any fool would know enough to syringe coleus to keep down mealy bug!" probably any fool does know enough, but the writer did not, and the whole book seems to him to be full of just such little things that don't seem to amount to anything until one needs them, and then these same little things prove to be of inestimable value.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Thursday afternoon, August 1, at 3 p. m. The attendance was very small, owing perhaps to the very hot weather. Vice-President Juengel opened the meeting promptly at 3 o'clock. The reports of the different committees were read and accepted. The election of officers then took place, and the following members were elected: F. J. Meinhardt, president; Frank M. Ellis, vice-president; E. Schray, secretary, and J. J. Beneke, treasurer. The three trustees elected were: R. J. Mohr, F. J. Ammann and E. W. Guy. The secretary's report showed that the average attendance during the last year was fifteen. The club had fifty members at the beginning of the year, and fifty are still members at the close of the year. Twelve essays were read during the year, which is considered good, and the members hope that the same number, or more, will be read the coming year.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday, September 12, at 3 o'clock, and we hope to see a large attendance, as at this meeting will be related the experiences of the different members while on their Buffalo trip.

The Market.

Trade in cut flowers is unusually quiet here even for this time of the year; local demand is very irregular, and is confined to funeral work; cut flowers of all kinds are very scarce, and one can hardly take in a good-sized order for fear of not getting the stock. All around us the hearts of the people have been gladdened with good rains, but not a drop for poor old St. Louis, and outdoor stuff is suffering badly for the want of moisture.

Notes.

We are making preparations to leave this hot town for Buffalo, the convention city, and by the time this issue is in the hands of our readers we will be enjoying ourselves with our friends "Billy" Scott and "Billy" Kasting and the rest of the Buffalo florists; so look out for us, we are coming twenty strong, and we will be ready to take everything in sight—that is, in bowling prizes.

Will Young and wife returned from a short stay at Atlantic City. Their sudden return was owing to the death of Mrs. Young's brother.

From a letter received from Max Herzog, who is abroad with his wife, we learn that they are having a very pleasant time and will have lots of news to report on their return home next month.

Mrs. M. M. Ayres was on last Friday very much overworked with funeral work; your correspondent was called upon to help out, and I think it was the largest order for one funeral ever put up in this city, and the work was all very fine. J. J. B.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The Dutchess County Horticultural Society will hold its annual flower show here on November 6, 7 and 8. W. B. Dinsmore offers a prize of $50 for the best group of ornamental flowering plants, arranged for effect. Mr. C. F. Dietrich, a prize of $50 for the best decorated dinner table laid for eight persons.

Lilium Harrisii Bulbs.

TRUE AND TRIED STOCK. Now Ready.

NOT THE CHEAPEST, BUT THE BEST.

We believe our THREE-LEG BRAND of Lilium Harrisii and Longiflorum to be freer from disease than any other stock from Bermuda, because we pay a bonus above the market to secure only the best. To growers wanting very early delivery, we quote as follows, in limited quantity, for immediate delivery:

5-7-inch bulbs, 400 in a box,	$50.00 per 100;	$5.50 per 1000.
7-9 " " " 200 "	$100.00 "	$11.00 "

LILIUM HARRISII AS USUALLY SOLD.

These bulbs are perfectly sound, fully up to measurement, and in all other respects appear satisfactory, and are identically the same stock offered by other houses as "selected," at much higher figures. The difference between these goods and our best grade is, these bulbs are purchased in the open market without any knowledge of the grower, whereas our Three-Leg Brand is grown purposely for us and selected white in flower.

5-7-inch bulbs, 400 in a case,	60c per doz.;	$4.00 per 1000;	$37.50 per 100.
7-9 " " " 200 "	$1.25 "	9.00 "	85.00 "

One whole box at 700 rates.

Freesia Refracta Alba. True California Bulbs, superior for early forcing to bulbs grown in any other locality. First Size Bulbs, $6.00 per 1000; 75c per 100. Monster Bulbs, $8.00 per 1000; $1.00 per 100.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus. Strong transplanted seedlings. $25.00 per 1000. 3.00 per 100.

A New Rambler Rose

We have nearly reached perfection in our new Pink Climber, which we are introducing under the name a worthy companion for Crimson Rambler, a cross of the pollen of Rosa Wichuraiana with that of Rose Mme. Gabriel Luizet. It is of a decided shell pink in color, extremely hardy, vigorous grower, throwing out immense trusses of bloom, individual flowers being twice the size of Crimson Rambler and very double. Is endowed with a fragrance heretofore unknown to this type of rose; it also being a good forcing rose. Because of its wealth of bloom it is an unexcelled acquisition for indoor decorative purposes.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

BULBS.

We believe our THREE LEG BRAND of LILIUM HARRISII and LONGIFLORUM to be freer from disease than any other stock from Bermuda; we pay a bonus and secure only the best. We quote for immediate delivery, in limited quantity: 5 to 7 in. bulbs, 40c in box, $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 7 to 9-in., 20c in box, $11.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

LILIUM HARRISII as usually sold. These bulbs are sound, up to measurement, in all respects as appears on order; and are identically the same as offered by other houses, as "selected," at much higher prices. The difference between these bulbs and our best grade to this genus are purchased in the open market, whereas our THREE LEG BRAND is grown purposely for sale as selected white in flower: 5 to 7-in. bulbs, 40c in a case, 60c per doz., $4.00 per 100, $37.50 per 1000; 7 to 9-in. bulbs, 20c per doz., $2.00 per 100, $55.00 per 1000. One whole box at 1000 rate.

FREESIA REFRACTA ALBA, true California bulbs, superior and choicest grade to this grown in any other locality: First Size Bulbs, 75c per 100, $6.00 per 1000; Monster Bulbs, $1.00 per 100, $10.00 per 1000.

A VALUABLE PAPER.

Your paper is valuable and I could not do without it now.—MAX MECKES, Ashland, O.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

Alfred J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass., registers Cattleya Mossiae var. Evelyn Sloane. Flower pure white with yellow blotch on lip, very faint flush of mauve color on lower portion of lip; bold flower, finely fringed; originated at Wyndhurst, Lenox, Mass.

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., register climbing rose Dorothy Perkins, thought to be a cross between Wichuriana and Mme. Gabriel Luizet; rampant grower, type of Crimson Rambler; extremely hardy; foliage glossy, flower shell pink, very double, borne in clusters of 30 to 40; individual flowers 2 inches in diameter, very fragrant.

Gustav Oermeyer, Parkersburg, W. Va., registers new geranium Mrs. Gov. Jackson, a seedling of Mrs. J. M. Gaar, which it resembles in all respects of habit, foliage and freedom of bloom, differing only in color, which is a soft saffron, and having larger tubs.

Wm. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

OMAHA.

Various Notes.

The past two weeks have kept the retailers very busy indeed. The demand was principally for funeral flowers. Owing to the extreme heat a large number of people were sent to the hospitals, and large quantities of flowers with them.

The writer was often amused and sometimes annoyed at the ignorance displayed by customers who demanded flowers, during a spell of extreme heat, as good as those to be had at any other season. I find that these are the people that never buy flowers when there is a profit in them.

Prices at present are about as low as they ever get, being as follows: Roses, 50 to 75 cents per doz.; Beauties, $1 to $2.50; carnations, 25 to 30 cents; gladiolus, 75 cents to $1. Sweet peas are about gone; tuberoses are in, but asters have not yet made their appearance.

All those who attended the last meeting of the Nebraska Florists' Society enjoyed themselves immensely. At the bowling competition Messrs. Hess, Henderson and Floth easily excelled. The first two named will be the only ones representing our society at the convention.

A. Donaghue, Sr., has left for a six-weeks' trip to England and will take in Buffalo on his return.

A. Donaghue, Jr., has returned from his fishing trip at Dixon's Beach, Lake Okoboji, Iowa.

S. B. Stewart and wife have also returned from a week's outing.

W. J. Hesser, of Plattsmouth, was in the city recently. SCRIBBLER.

CINCINNATI.

Various Items.

Trade conditions remain about the same as last week. There is, however, a slight increase in the number of asters coming in. A few, that are beginning to look like something, bring $2 per 100; others from 50 cents to $1.

Outdoor stock is considerably improved owing to the fact that the hot, dry spell has at last been broken and we are now having weather that is all that could be desired, as to temperature. The one heavy rain that we had did a wonderful lot of good; but the ground is again very dry and a good soaking rain is much needed.

The board of public service has adopted the plans of Park Superintendent B. P. Critchell for the improvement of that piece of barren land of about five acres to the east of Eden Park and at the foot of the cliff. The improvement will consist of driveways, walks, and a lake in the center. As this spot has been an eyesore for many years the improvement will be greatly appreciated. The stretch of land on Gilbert avenue opposite Eden Park is also to be improved.

During a severe wind storm the smokestack on the establishment of George Murphy blew down, smashing in about fifteen feet of one of his houses.

Fishing in the Ohio is a favorite sport with the boys. They generally take a couple of days off with tent, lines, etc., camp out along the bank and have a good quiet rest.

Huntsman & Co. have moved from their Race street store and are now to be found on East Sixth near Walnut.

Gus Adrian will be unable to go to Buffalo for the convention. He fell into a boiler pit and sprained an ankle. It is to be hoped that his injury is not a severe one. His wife, together with a party of friends, will start for the Rainbow City this week.

Charlie Jones and wife, with a party of friends, left Saturday for Buffalo, Charlie will be in Buffalo during the convention.

E. G. Gillett left for the convention Tuesday night and R. Witter-staetter and Dock Sunderbruch Monday night. By the way, don't fail to ask Dock how he enjoyed his railroad ride.

C. J. ORMER.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

Various Items.

At last a good rain has broken the long dry spell and all nature looks fresh again. Field-grown stuff looks well considering the lack of rain; carnations were planted early, and had made a good growth, and now are strong, rugged plants; roses and other plants look fairly well. All hands are busy throwing out old carnations, whitewashing, painting and getting the houses in first-class order for the new crop, which we expect to commence planting in a week or so. We plant the early sorts first, following with the later sorts in about two weeks. Mums are looking well. Our open-house system of culture is the proper thing here, and the stock is now fast climbing up the stay strings. We expect to have some flowers, such as our old friend Theo. Bock calls "goat oons." Store business is on the dull order, but a good run of funeral work and a wedding now and then keeps the boys from getting sleepy.

Mr. Nicholson, of the Texas Seed & Floral Company, is enjoying a trip to the north; Chicago and Michigan being his objective points. He said in taking leave he was going up north to get warm, and I guess he will get there, for, judging from the daily report of the thermometer, you fellows up north are having hotter weather than we Texans.

KIND WORDS NEVER DIE.

CHAS. T. SIEBERT:—I take pleasure in expressing satisfaction in using your Zinc Glazing Points. They have outlasted all others used, therefore are better and cheaper. Their merit should result in extended sales. Sincerely yours,
THEO. F. BECKER, Florist.

CHAS. T. SIEBERT:—Please book my order for 100 lbs. of Zinc Never Rust Glazing Points. I have used 5 different kinds of points in the last 12 years, and none of them gave me satisfaction like yours. They will stay in, are easy to drive, no rights or lefts, will hold the glass in place, and do not rust away like all others I have used. Your Zinc Points are easy to take out when making repairs. I have used about 100 lbs. of your Zinc Points in the last 2 years, and I am perfectly satisfied with them.
Yours truly, F. BURKI.

CHAS. T. SIEBERT:—In our 25 years' experience in glazing points of all kinds, I can say your Zinc Points are the best to date.

FLORISTS' HALL ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

On the first day of August, 1901, the 1,020 members comprising the Florists' Hall Association of America insured an aggregate of 1,541,382 square feet of glass, as follows: single thick, 5,220,561 square feet; double thick, 7,696,162 square feet; single thick, extra one-half, 369,007 square feet; double thick, extra one-half, 800,280 square feet; single thick, extra one-half, 502,263 square feet; double thick, extra whole insurance, 2,066,228 square feet.

The receipts for the year ending August 1st, 1901, have been, from eleven assessments, $8,298.50; from new business, as per treasurer's report, $1,960.03; from investments, $201; from reimbursement of glass broken by hail, $65.77. Total receipts for the year, $10,660.30.

The treasurer has paid $5,285.50 for losses during the year; for amount $1,484.80 on account of the reserve fund, $1,000, making a total of $7,809.34.

The cash balance on hand at the close of the year, $9,674.49, of which $34.45 belongs to the reserve fund, and leaving $9,725.55 available for use in the emergency fund.

The reserve fund of the Florists' Hall Association now consists of $7,000 invested as per treasurer's report, and $2,725.55 cash in hand, making the total reserve fund August 1st, 1901, $9,725.55.

Glass belonging to members to the extent of 42,218 square feet of single thick and 28,374 square feet of double thick was broken by hail during the past year and paid for by the Florists' Hall Association.

Since the first day of June, 1887, the Florists' Hall Association has paid 134 losses, involving an expenditure of over $16,000.

The secretary especially requests that members furnish him with information concerning all hailstorms in their vicinity, whether they are personally interested or not, as such information will materially assist in the compilation of statistics.

Your secretary is also pleased to report that the Florists' Hall Association is now exempt from internal revenue taxation. He also requests that members use greater care in making proofs of loss. The Florists' Hall Association is especially prompt when proofs are properly prepared, but inaccuracies cause delay in the payment of claims.

The usual increase in business has been maintained during the past year, which can be considered a manifestation of continued confidence on the part not only of the members, but of the trade at large.

JOHN G. ESLER, Secretary.

THE STANDARD Duplex Metal Gutters.

A Common Sense Gutter in all its details. Built of the best and strongest material manufactured. The best combination for strength, durability and neatness that wood and iron can complete. No drip from either underside of the gutter or any part of the house. Only 8 inches of shade. No sash bars are butted against the gutter, thus retaining the moisture and causing early decay. No ledges to retain water. No wires to hold the sash bars against the gutter. Only 5 joints in 100-foot length. Only 16 posts in same length. Will last a life-time. Ask your leading architects and they will tell you the same.

THE STANDARD VENTILATING MACHINERY.

They are made to fill all wants for Greenhouses, Factories, Foundries, etc. In sectional or solid posts, with slow and rapid motion. All fitted in the best workmanship order. No accidents. Always reliable and warranted for 10 years. Will last a life-time. Made mostly of malleable iron.

THADEN'S WIRE TENDRIL.

Adapted to horizontal wires as well as stakes for Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, etc.

We claim that the tendril does not crowd the plant, but holds it firmly and with freedom. Does not mutilate the foliage. Harbors no insects. Makes the plant come to a straight stem. Admits of free circulation of air. Requires no skilled labor to place properly. Can be moved up or down the stakes. Easily put on and easily taken off, and are durable. Sample package of 100 prepaid for 50 cents.

GENUINE KROESCHELL BOILER for your purpose.

PIERCEVILLE, VA., December 5, 1899.
KROESCHELL BROS. Co.: I write to state that the No. 12 Boiler we bought of you last summer is taking care of 30,000 feet of glass with great ease. Last night the temperature outside stood at 20 degrees with the wind blowing a gale, but the night fireman maintained an even temperature with but very little draught, and I believe it will give us all the heat we need in the coldest weather. The boiler is all and more than you claim for it and is entirely satisfactory in every respect.
A. B. DAVIS & SONS.

A. B. DAVIS, MET.

CHICAGO, ILL., April 13, 1900.
KROESCHELL BROS. Co. Your Greenhouse Hot Water Boiler No. 3 is beyond question the best boiler made. It is taking care of 2,250 feet of 4-inch pipe with ease and I am going to build this season another house 18x112 which I expect to heat with the same boiler. There are a number of different kinds of boilers made and we have had some of them in use, but they will not do the work your boiler does. Should any florists want information as to what your boilers will do, please send them to me.

FRANK J. FINK.

BOWMANVILLE, ILL.,
April 10, 1900.
KROESCHELL BROS. Co. The boiler I bought of you is supplying 11,000 feet of 4-inch pipe and would easily supply 12,000 feet. It heats a section of five houses or 35,000 feet of glass, 60 deg. or more if needed, and I have found the boiler perfectly satisfactory in every respect.
H. BAUSKE.

KROESCHELL BROS. Co. I can say that the two No. 12 Boilers we purchased of you last year proved very satisfactory indeed, heating our rose section of 50,000 square ft. easily. What would another boiler cost, only built 2 ft. longer, for delivery this fall? An early reply will oblige.
WELAND & RUSCH.

MILWAUKEE, WIS., April 11, 1900.
KROESCHELL BROS. Co.: We did not get the No. 6 Boiler we ordered of you; you could not make it on account of the strike in your shop. Am very sorry we did not get it, as yours are the best boilers made. We have one No. 5, bought almost five years ago, and we heat four houses 12x150 feet with it, or almost 3,200 feet of 4-inch pipe. When we are in need of another boiler we shall buy yours.

KROESCHELL BROS. Co. In reply to your inquiry I would say that the last boiler you sold to us is giving the same uniform satisfaction afforded by the other three, purchased 3 years ago. Your boilers seem built for the purpose of causing water to boil, with economy in the use of coal. As our Mr. Louis M. Noe, of Madison, N. J., has this week placed an order for one of your No. 11 Boilers, further comment is unnecessary.

PEACE OF MIND

is not generally included in the cost of the heating apparatus, yet every florist knows how valuable it is to him to have an apparatus that he can arrange and know it will carry with a certainty the proper temperature until morning. This is

IN THE EVENING

ONE OF THE FEATURES of our boilers, as is fully

following letter:

W. D. SNELL, Newville, Herkimer Co., N. Y., Jan. 2d, 1901, says: I wish to express my thorough satisfaction with the No. 70 Standard Sectional steam boiler which I placed in my greenhouses early in December last year. I have three houses, 38x65, located side by side, with glass in roofs and gables. The houses are built of glass and wood and contain in all about 5,000 square feet of glass surface. I have in use about 2,000 feet one-inch pipe, or about 700 square feet of radiation. I carry a temperature of about 60 degrees at night, but have had no difficulty in getting any higher temperature desired. I find that the boiler will run ten hours without attention. I attend to it about nine o'clock at night and it will run with no further attention until seven o'clock in the morning. The draft I have is not a good one, yet notwithstanding this objection, I have no difficulty in getting the fire up and getting as much steam as I desire. I can thoroughly recommend the boiler and will be glad to have you refer to me anyone that wants further information."

John Burton, President-Elect Society of American Florists.

HOME IMPRESSIONS OF THE CONVENTION.

Looking back after it is all over, I hope that the Buffalo convention will be considered in many or all respects a success. We think it was the largest representative convention in the history of the society. It is true there were a few of our best known men not present, prominent among them being Mr. Wm. R. Smith, Robert Craig and John X. May and others. We regret their absence, but take it altogether it was a very large crowd.

The trade exhibit was not quite up to New York, but that one so far exceeded any of them that we can afford to be second to it. Undoubtedly the trade exhibit is a most important factor in the success of a convention and we are delighted to hear that the exhibitors say this was one of the most successful from a business point, all having done well.

The address of President O'Mara, without casting the slightest reflection on some very fine and able addresses that preceded it, was undoubtedly the most complete ever offered the society and embraced every topic of real live interest to us in the most concise form. Our local men were much alarmed for several weeks previous to the convention that our meeting hall was not large enough and it proved to be slightly insufficient for the crowd at the opening session and during Mr. Farquhar's lecture. At all other times it was amply large enough, and it is perhaps better to be slightly crowded than have a few people in a large hall.

Personally, the writer wished the society to come to Buffalo not alone for the Pan-American, but to visit again (and with many for the first time) our beautiful city, and the many expressions of admiration and delight spoken of our city were most gratifying. We expected about two hundred ladies to take the carriage ride but it turned out there were four hundred, and that caused some delay, but only added to the pleasure.

There is one function connected with the society which we do not approve of, and that is the president's reception. Not but what this one was as pleasant as any, and we hope as well conducted, but we do think it is a useless and embarrassing affair. What is the good of having a dozen people standing up there in evening dress, shaking hands with five or six hundred other people whom we have all known for years? It occupies valuable time and I hope will be dispensed with on all future occasions. It was an innovation begun at Pittsburgh and we trust that we saw the last of it in Buffalo, and I feel that I am only voicing the opinion of the present president, and I hope the president-elect, when I say "Let it drop."

We are also of the opinion that this convention was pretty well drawn out in time. Perhaps this comes from us with rather a poor grace, but we do not intimate in the least that you were too long with us. Two days less of business would have given you more time to have seen the Pan-American. You cannot get people to listen to long essays and we should be in favor of cutting them out. It is almost an insult to a man who is reading a really instructive essay to have no more than 100 people to listen to it. If they were sent and ordered printed in the report, that would be sufficient.

The illustrated lectures are all right. The one by Mr. Farquhar was particularly attractive and more would have listened to it had they been able to find an entrance to the room. It was not only entertaining, but there were some valuable points for the florist and horticulturist. We thought the lecture by Mr. F. W. Taylor on "The Pan-American as an Educator" particularly good. I don't suppose but what everyone attending the convention visited the Pan-American, but we did feel that if that lecture could have been given on the first night, anyone seeing those views would have been bound to see the real thing. With our pretended belief in the good of these essays and papers, there is not one in fifty who comes to the convention who cares to listen to them. We believe they are of great value to the trade and the profession but are much better digested when read at home. The trade papers publish them, as well as the report of the society. By all of which I mean that the business of the society could be done in two days and leave two days for entertainment, sports and recreation, for it is recreation that 90 per cent of the people want. In the early days of the society there was much more extreme conviviality going on than at present, and it is well that it is now seldom seen.

We are under the impression that the shooting tournament went off about as smoothly and successfully as any since its introduction at Atlantic City, yet it is hardly the sport of many of the florists, although we think it a more scientific and better sport than bowling. We regret that the fine alleys that were promised us did not materialize, and that what we had to play on made such a bad impression at first, although we believe that on the day of the match there was not much to find fault with. Talk about form! Where were the men who used to be considered crackerjacks? And how the better unheard of did shine out!

It never rains but it pours, and honors and prizes fell thick on John Burton. We are well aware that Mr. Burton could have been president of the society years ago had he had the slightest wish for it. Everyone knows what an excellent business man he is and our society is to be congratulated on its choice.

There is quite a difference of opinion about the meeting place for 1902. We are not entirely a trade organization. At least we have, or should have, a broader view before us, and if a very few of our brethren below Mason and Dixon's line have joined our ranks, we are now strong enough to go to them and show them that we are really the S. A. F. & O. H. of all the country in deed as well as word. Don't tell people you are not going to Asheville, because you don't know yourself at present, and most likely you will.

In conclusion, the writer has many reasons to be thankful that he lived to the year 1901. The many kind words said about his humble efforts at the Pan-American and the generous and splendid recognition given him by the society pays ten fold for all the worry and work that has to be gone through and is incidental to every exposition.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE CONVENTION EXCURSION TO NIAGARA FALLS.

What can be said of the efforts of the Buffalo florists but in the line of praise! What if you did wait five minutes for your coffee; remember, there were, the officials informed us, 1,200 people in the party. They gave many the greatest treat they ever had in their lives, for it is safe to say many were there for the first time and will always remember it.

Very early on Friday morning all those attending the convention were astir and excited with pleasant anticipation. The Buffalo Florists' Club had made arrangements to carry the party to see Niagara. Two special trains, consisting of twenty-two cars, were required, and no one missed being there. After a fifty-minute ride the entire party was escorted to view one of the world's greatest sights. Each was then allowed to roam around and many of those present availed themselves of the opportunity to see the gorge and whirlpool. We shall not attempt to describe Niagara; that has been done before; the indelible impression it makes on the mind of the visitor is too great to be affected by any descriptive pen.

By courtesy of the park officials the center of Prospect Park was reserved for the florists, and here the Buffalo florists provided a nice lunch for the entire time he went as a boy in the employ of the great house he was with until now, when he occupied an important position not only there, but in American horticulture; but there was one thing they thought was lacking, and they had decided to provide that; they had selected a wife for him, a watch that would remind him of pleasant hours." Here Mr. Scott handed him the gold watch, with the remark that it was a token of the love and appreciation of every member of the S. A. F. O. H. Mr. O'Mara was visibly affected and in returning thanks said he considered it one of the greatest days of his life. He would cherish the gift with all his heart. He urged his hearers to cement their efforts and to work as one man, to never relax in their efforts or deviate from the aims of the great society.

Adam Graham, E. G. Hill, John Westcott, Warren Ewell, W. N. Rudd, James Dean and Charles Zeller were in turn escorted to give their weight of opinion on matters generally. Little did many of those present know that in Mr. Zeller they had the oldest living florist in the United States. It was he who, over fifty years ago, imported the first commercial carnations from France. The old veteran, the hero of many an era in the history of American floriculture, was visibly touched by the demonstration of which he was the center when he said the present state of affairs and the great prosperity were like a dream to him; there was something in voice and eye that reflected the struggles of the past and the greatness of the present. He was proud to be there; it made him young again.

He was in favor of it; it gave him the best results, but the great demand for buckwheat and pea coals were raising the prices.

In reply to an inquiry about pressure Mr. H. B. Bently found that a boiler kept at 60 pounds of pressure was the most economical.

Mr. Beattie of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture gave some interesting facts concerning experiments on soil temperatures. Pipes laid 16 inches beneath the surface of outdoor soil were the best and able to produce great results. He thought the day would soon come when steam would be used through tiles in greenhouse cultivation. He predicted its general use in the same manner as sub-irrigation.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Taft for his paper.

CONVENTION NOTES.

The high standing given floriculture at the Pan-American Exposition through the efforts of William Scott was recognized by the appointment of a committee consisting of W. N. Rudd, E. G. Hill and Edwin Lonsdale to prepare suitable resolutions, the same to be engrossed and presented to Mr. Scott.

President-Elect Burton asked the assistance of every member in making the next annual convention a success and hoped to see all again next year at Asheville, N. C.

Hearty votes of thanks were passed to the citizens and florists of Buffalo for the warm welcome and liberal entertainment given the society.

party, after which a great many went on tours of sightseeing until 5 o'clock.

At the depot, on the return journey, William Scott, on behalf of the members of the S. A. F. O. H., presented President Patrick O'Mara with a beautiful gold watch. Mr. Scott, standing on a weighing machine (let us hope the scales will always be as pleasant to all), called the crowd to order and among other things said they "were met to give expression to their feelings; they all admitted Mr. O'Mara to be an orator, business man and the greatest parliamentarian in the S. A. F.; he had shown his ability from Another pleasant feature of the convention and one which met the approbation of all the exhibitors was the presentation of a purse to the manager of the trade exhibit, Mr. Keitsch. J. I. D.

THE FUEL QUESTION.

In the discussion of Prof. Taft's paper at the Buffalo convention Mr. C. W. Ward said that his place (the Cottage Gardens) consumed between five and six hundred tons of coal a year. A test was made of Wilkesbarre pea and egg coal and the pea coal was 50 per cent cheaper.

club on the last day were the following: Ant. C. Zvolanek, Grand View, N. J.; Mrs. E. M. Bullock, Elkhart, Ind.; Chas. Daines, Newark, N. J.; Robert George, Painesville, O.; E. F. Coe, New Haven, Conn.; C. B. Dertrick, Ionia, Mich.; J. H. Haddonson, Omaha, Neb.; H. Millingar, Merchantville, N. J.; E. J. Bush, Charlotte, N. C.; Frank Berry, 8 water, Minn. All others that were registered were reported last week.

The exhibitors were generally fortunate in selling their exhibits to Buffalo florists and thus avoiding repacking and reshipping. H. A. Drees' exhibit of plants was sold to J. H. Rebstock, and M. Rice & Co.'s immense collection of florists' supplies was purchased by Ira G. Marvin, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., while W. F. Kasting took the exhibit of Bayerdorfer & Co. Nearly all the plant exhibits were disposed of.

A Group of S. A. F. Visitors at Niagara Falls. This Includes the Largest Number in any Group but Shows only a Part of those Present

The display of gladioli at the convention was fine, but that at the exposition was far superior. When such blooms as those can be marketed in quantity the summer cut flower market will present a different aspect.

For a full report of the proceedings of the convention, papers read, etc., see last week's issue.

With the majority the question of the hour seemed to be, "Where is Asheville; how big is it, and how many florists do business there?" As we understand it, Asheville is a health resort in the mountains of North Carolina, largely hotels, with a population of probably not more than 10,000. It has one florist, Mr. J. W. C. Deake, our Vice-President-Elect. The principal feature of Asheville from a horticultural standpoint is the great estate of Mr. Vanderbilt, containing several thousand acres, called Biltmore, and which was laid out by Olmstead. It will no doubt be a prime attraction in bringing members to the next convention.

There were some exciting bowling matches on the side. In one Chicago secured some valuable souvenirs from the Buffalo aggregation, but in a return game the Bisons obtained partial satisfaction.

W. F. Kasting had to keep that safe of his open most of the time cashing checks and drafts for members who ran short of the needful.

An excellent lunch was provided for the lowliers at the alleys.

We print in this issue engravings from photographs taken specially for the REVIEW of each of the nine teams competing in the bowling tournament.

We also print in this issue several views of the exhibition from photographs taken specially for the REVIEW.

The portrait of President-Elect Burton is quite up to date, being from a photograph taken just after his election.

THE EXHIBITION.

The committee to award the Buffalo Florists' Club's cups for the best exhibits at the convention awarded the cup for plants to Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, and the one for cut flowers to Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y., for his fine showing of gladioli.

The committee recommended that hereafter more attention be given to quality and less to extent. Mr. E. Lonsdale moved that the secretary be instructed to provide for an exhibit of American grown bulbs and that at the next meeting a silver and a bronze medal and a certificate be offered by the society for the best exhibit of such bulbs. This was carried.

A CONVENTION BY COMPLIMENT.

Such was the result of the ballot at Buffalo in selecting their next convention city (Asheville, N. C.). The writer returned during the night to avoid those who dared him to come home without the convention. Milwaukee was due to receive complimentary votes at the Buffalo session, in view of the fact of having invited the society for several years to hold a meeting in our city. The effort was more united than ever this year and great preparations were made to induce the society to come here in 1902. There were 92 solid Milwaukee votes on the Chicago special and over 200 on the New York train, all pledged to Milwaukee, and therefore it seems impossible to believe and explain why only 66 votes were in favor of Milwaukee. We have but one regret, and that is that the Business League of Milwaukee offered to send an eloquent speaker free of charge with our delegation to speak for Milwaukee and the offer was declined, thinking it would hurt our cause. Much indignation was therefore expressed at allowing a paid speaker who said he was not a florist and was not interested in the society to have superior influence over an intelligent body and ignore a bona fide invitation from a well organized florists' club.

The question is asked, Why were not all the delegates there to vote? While this would have changed the result, if those present had voted according to their own convictions, half the attendance would have been sufficient to change the result. The total of 138 votes east out of 600 to 700 delegates showed too much confidence for Milwaukee and does not express the wishes of the majority. The vote for the selection of the city should have been postponed until the afternoon session or held earlier in the day, as owing to the hour being 1:30 p. m., many of the delegates got tired waiting and left the hall so as to get lunch in time for the afternoon session, which was to open at 2 o'clock p. m.

Had Asheville been a stronger competitor they would have received less votes, and, as the saying goes, "Great minds run in the same channel," it seems the great minds of the society were so afflicted at that time and voted for Asheville and then offered excuses for having done so only for fun or voted complimentary to prevent a landslide. The majority of the rank and file apparently voted for the best interests of the society.

The deed has been done and we therefore must make the best of it and abide by the vote. The society has crossed the rough and rocky roads and is well on the way to prosperity and it is hoped that our next convention will be as prosperous as those in the past.

C. C. POLLWORTH.

IT WILL BE to your advantage to mention The Florists' Review every time you write an advertiser.

CARNATION NOTES.

New Varieties.

Most of the new ones have made a very fair growth, considering that most of them were planted from small pots and this has been a remarkably dry season. This, however, we attribute to faithful cultivating, at least once each week since they were planted. All have made strong enough plants to show what there is in them this season with the exception possibly of Irene, which was not in the best of condition when received. The plants are very sturdy, though, in spite of their smallness, and may come out all right. Perhaps the disseminators would kindly give us a few points on its particular wants through the REVIEW.

Mrs. Lawson was kept inside all summer and we believe that we have overcome that short stem fault in that variety. A good plan we find is to pot up a few plants of each variety, after housing what we want, to plant in where one may have died out here and there. They take hold easily in the pots and they need no shade or special care when planted in the bench from the pots. About 5 per cent of what you benched should be all you need to pot for this.

Cultural Notes.

Those plants you benched in the spring will be making a good growth now, and the supports will be needed at one before they begin to lay over and grow crooked. Loosen up the surface of the soil before putting on the supports, but do not be in a hurry about mulching down red spider. Pick off the rusty leaves and burn them. Give them all the sunshine there is, so that in spite of the rapid growth it will be firm and well matured. The worst thing you can do now is to get your plants into a soft, watery growth, and right at this time there is perhaps the greatest danger. Rub off that shade and open the ventilators as wide as you can, both day and night.

Will have more to say about supporting carnations next week.

A. F. J. BARR.

CARNATION QUESTIONS.

In answer to L. H. G., there is no reason why the varieties he names should not do well together in the same house, if each variety is planted where it will Exhibit of M. Rice and Co., Philadelphia, at the Buffalo Convention. Photographed in Two Sections.

If the blooms of Norway are in proportion with its growth they will be immense. The variety Elma has made the best plants of any variety we have and out of 1,000 plants not one has been lost; in fact, the same is true of the 4,000 planted along with them.

We are also pleased so far with the Marquis. Last season we were very much disappointed in its behavior, but as it produces such grand blooms, we decided to try it again this season, and last week we housed about 100 plants, which are looking fine now. We sincerely hope that we misjudged it last year. Crocker has made such fine plants and it transplants so easily that it is a pleasure to house it.

them with manure. If you mixed a proper amount of manure in the soil there is no need of a mulch until the first crop of flower shoots is allowed to come up and bloom. Put it on just when they begin to shoot up. This should not be allowed, though, for a few weeks yet, especially with the reds, as the blooms are not of good quality nor in good demand until cooler weather sets in. Keeping the shoot off now will enable the plants to grow larger and to produce a larger and better crop of blooms later on.

See that they have plenty of water at the roots and syringe them well every day, unless you see rust start, in which case no more syringing should be done than is absolutely necessary to keep have about the temperature it wants. If I knew how many benches he has in his house and the general arrangement of the house, I could tell him just how to plant, but I will give him the temperatures in which each of the varieties seem to do best and he can arrange them on the benches to suit himself:

Flora Hill, Mrs. Lawson and Scott like 56 degrees; Jubilee, Mrs. Bradt and Gold Nugget, about 52 to 54 degrees, and White Cloud, 50 to 52 degrees. These temperatures are for soil of average weight, but we find that Jubilee and White Cloud burst best and bloom more in a very heavy clay soil and kept at about 56 degrees. They will not stand such a high temperature, though, unless the soil is very heavy, as a light soil will make the stems weak and the blooms small. Be sure to plant White Cloud and Jubilee on a center bench, where they will have plenty of head room. They need at least three feet between the bench and the glass.

Mrs. G. M. Bradt is still placed at the head of the fancy varieties when quality and quantity are both considered, but in quantity alone Armazindy runs away ahead, but it is not in as high favor as formerly, on account of the faintness of the stripe.

The leading scarlets outside of Jubilee are America and G. H. Crane. Most growers favor Crane, as the color is a shade deeper than America, and it is perhaps a little easier to manage, but with us in a heavy soil, plenty of water and a temperature of 55 degrees, America comes with as good color as any one could wish for, and as the blooms are larger than either Crane or Jubilee and it is very free, we prefer America.

Mr. G. could greatly improve his pink class by planting Mrs. Joost in place of Scott, and I would also advise him to plant a few Ethel Crocker. He will want no more Scotts if either of these does well with him. Both like about 54 to 56 degrees and not too much feeding. Mr. G. will find that it will pay him well to keep right up with the new introductions, even if he can only afford to buy a few plants of each variety to try for himself.

A. F. J. BAUER.

CHRYSANTHEMUM TROUBLES.

We are troubled with some kind of a sickness on our chrysanthemums and would like to know if there is any cure for it and whether it will spread. We send a sample of the diseased plants.

B. B. & SON.

I am sorry to say I cannot help your subscriber much, as the specimens were so badly shriveled it was impossible to make anything out of them. One of the stems seemed to have stem rot, but as stem and foliage were pressed and dried to a crisp, it is hard to state.

Most of the leaf diseases and stem rot come from a too liberal use of the hose. The munn is not an aquatic, though some growers seem to think so by the way they pour the water on. I would suggest that your correspondent see that the bench or pots, or whatever the plants are growing in, has good drainage, and water very carefully. Spray the plants with sulphide of potassium as advised in your issue of August 1, or use the ammoniacal copper solution, the formula for which, as stated in the Florists' Manual, is as follows: Copper carbonate, 1 oz.; ammonia, enough to dissolve the copper; water, 9 gallons.

If your correspondent were to send me some leaves and stems packed in damp moss, so they would reach me in reasonably fresh condition, I could advise him much better what to do. BRIAN BORT.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

It seems as though cool, comfortable weather is too good for us; anyway it has turned very hot again, and no rain in sight; it has been raining all around us, too, but it had little effect on the thermometer. Rain is needed very badly, even the grass is haked brown, so you can imagine what our door stock looks like.

Prices on flowers are holding a little stiffer now, not so much because there is a better demand, but because the quality is much better. Roses especially are showing much improvement and there is a better supply. Brides, Maids and Meteors sell from 2 to 4 cents; Beauties from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. There are very few carnations to be had in this market, and what few are being cut are very small; nevertheless, they are rapidly disposed of at from 50 cents to $1 per 100. A few tuberose are coming in; they also are poor and 2 cents per spike is about all they will bring.

Various Items.

E. G. Gillett, Dock Sunderbruch and R. Witterstaetter arrived home from the convention city Saturday noon. They report a howling good time and say the meeting was one of the best they ever attended. Mr. Gillett gives a glowing account of the Pan-American, saying that if it does not surpass the World's Fair at Chicago in size, it certainly does in architecture and artistic decorations and effects.

Mr. J. W. Rodgers who went to Buffalo with the Cincinnati party, was recalled, after but a few days' stay, by a telegram stating that his wife had been taken seriously ill.

The hail storm that recently passed over this city destroyed every pane of glass in the establishment of J. G. Fine of Dayton, Ky. As he carried no insurance the loss will be severely felt.

R. A. Betz was called to Middletown Saturday to help out our friend Joseph R. Goldman, who had a sudden rush of funeral work. It is to be hoped that a few of such rushes will fall upon some of the Cincinnati boys. I can assure you they can stand for it.

J. O'Malley was busy for a few days last week decorating floats for the hutchers' parade. As flowers were scarce he did the best he could using sunflowers, Arbor-Vitæ and flags to good advantage. He had twelve floats to decorate.

BOWLING AT BUFFALO.

Those who say or think that sports do not constitute one of the leading features of the great annual convention are very much mistaken. In the opinion of the majority of the young element, and we suspect the old boys, too, bowling is a great attraction. There are very decisive views against putting the annual outing on a too straight academic line.

One of the odd facts connected with the doubtful support for the next convention is the lack of facilities to entertain the sports of the trade. So much do they feel this icy prospect that already plans are being considered to organize a florists' bowling tournament in some central city at a time convenient to all. This appears at the present to be an unfortunate necessity, and should it assume definite shape there is no doubt but that it will cut a big slice off the convention attendance. How to prevent it is a question that Mr. Cloud and his angels in Asheville may probably be able to solve, but Asheville or not, we are heartily in favor of anything that will keep the young men of our business together.

In the general matches it is intensely pleasing to note that the prizes were widely distributed; this will keep alive the spirit of rivalry.

The Lord & Burnham cup was won by Philadelphia with a total in three games of 2,560.

The Hitchings Co. cup was won by New York, highest in third game, with 883.

The Queen of Edgely cup was won by Chicago, highest in first two games; total, 1,698. This cup now becomes the permanent property of the Chicago club.

The Detroit trophy was won by New York, highest score any game, 883.

The F. R. Pierson cup, highest aggregate individual score in three games, was won by Wm. Gibson, Philadelphia, with 523. Mr. Gibson also won Kasting's gold pen for highest score in any game with a grand score of 213.

Scott's opera glasses were won by A. Y. Ellison, of St. Louis, with 485, the

In the open to all individual contest John Burton captured the first prize, the Coldwell lawn mower, with a score of 181. David Scott took second with a score of 166. There was a bad mixup in this contest. Two games were played and it was understood that the total of the two games would count, but it seems it had been decided by the captains that the first score only would be considered. This materially changed results; and through accident two of the score sheets were lost. We are therefore unable to give the scores in full. Other scores we have memorandums of are 160 by J. J. Hess, 155 by J. H. Relstock, 154 by J. F. Wilcox, and 150 by C. M. Balluff.

After the matches were over William Scott presented the winning teams and the successful individuals with their prizes. This was done in the most pleasing manner and gave a chance for many jokes and numerous expressions of good feeling and high hopes.

But let us not forget what was generally admitted to be the funniest and most alarming feature of the bowling tournament—the Chicago German band and their marvelous makeup. It was the greatest surprise the uninitiated ever got; the whole crowd were astounded.

New Yorkers are accustomed to pretty nearly everything connected with sights, but in this case, coming as it did from their own tradesmen, they were completely taken off their feet. It is safe to say never was such a band associated with the business in any clime. It was great. The caricatures and the music were sufficient to chase away both Coney Island and the Midway attractions. Winterson, Asmus, Balluff, Polliworth and their associates, be they in repose or astir, deserve the greatest credit for their efforts to make this convention memorable. There is the spirit that made Chicago what it is, and behind their noise there are hearts of goodness and exhaustless push which are destined to be of the utmost value to American horticulture.

J. I. DONLAN.

THE CANADIAN HORTICULTURAL ASSOCIATION CONVENTION.

For friendliness, kindness and entire good fellowship between all the delegates present, the London convention, I think, takes the cake. In saying this I don't say anything derogatory to former conventions. They have all been most enjoyable and instructive, but each one takes on a distinctive feature, and it is only right that we should improve each year. And to the London Horticultural Society most of the credit is due for the very gratifying result of their efforts to make every one feel quite at home.

Another good feature of the convention was that there was a good deal more discussion in session than on former occasions; quiet, inquiring discussions, that bring out just the points necessary to the proper understanding of the subject in hand. The only thing that is regretted was the comparatively small number who thought it their duty to the profession to attend. Those who did attend will, I am sure, attend again and bring others with them. When once the profession finds out the good that is being and can be accomplished by the association, the traveling expenses, of which one hears so much now, will appear to be a trifle compared with the benefit obtained. A considerable number of new members from parts hitherto unrepresented were on hand, which is a good omen for future conventions.

At the first formal session the convention was heartily welcomed by the mayor, Mr. Thomas Manton gracefully replying. The president, Mr. J. H. Dunlop, made an eloquent address, which was as usual laid on the table and left there. The secretary reported and wanted to give up his job to a better man, but the boys—good, kindly souls that they are—would not hear of it and gave him a bonus in spite of his protests. The treasurer reported everything lovely and a good balance at the bank.

At the evening session, which was an open one, Dr. Bethune lectured most interestingly and instructively on "those horrid little bores," the insects, and Mr. W. J. Lawrence, of Mimico (near Toronto), expatiated on the advancement of horticulture, to the enjoyment of all present. Some of the boys, however, thought that however much the cut-flower trade had advanced, there was not much to be said about the plant trade at that connection.

On Tuesday morning the local committee treated the company to a car ride around the city and out to "Springbank," a city park of most desirable parts about seven miles out, where an appetizing lunch was spread on the balcony of the large pavilion. The lunch was soon demolished, when speeches and songs were indulged in. The trolley car had been profusely and tastefully decorated with flowers and maple boughs.

At the afternoon and evening sessions the papers were read and discussed, questions were asked and answered, the place for next meeting chosen and officers elected.

On Wednesday five or six of the boys departed for the S. A. F. convention and the Pan-American. They have not been heard of to the date of this writing and great anxiety is felt amongst their friends as to whether they have been able to resist the wiles of the sirens of the Midway, but however, as Mr. Johnston, of Kingston, was chaperoning the party, they feel sure that a man so experienced in such shows will not allow his trusting brother florists to be led astray.

I should not forget to mention that the members paid a visit to Mr. William Gammage's greenhouses, just outside the city, and were surprised at their extent and the quantity of stock contained therein. Mr. Gammage is in the throes of building four or five large, new, up-to-date houses, which, when in operation, will enable him to keep up with his greatly increasing business.

Mr. Fred Dieks' place, London South, was also visited; it is devoted almost exclusively to carnations. Some had been planted in the houses, the rest were still in the field; all were looking the picture of health and strength. Mr. Dieks does not believe in indiscriminate early planting, but plants these sorts early which he has found by experience do better for it. Eldorado is one sort that grows to perfection with him and without a speck of rust.

Hamilton, "the ambitious city" at the western point of Lake Ontario, the city with a mountain, will be the place of meeting next year.

The officers elected for 1902 are as follows: President, Joseph Bennett, Montreal; first vice-president, C. Webster, Hamilton; second vice-president, G. Robinson, Montreal; treasurer, H. Simmers, Toronto; secretary, A. H. Ewing, Berlin. Executive committee, three years: W. J. Lawrence, Mimico; W. Muston, Toronto; O. Johnston, Kingston; for two years, in place of G. Robinson, elected second vice-president, Thomas Manton, Eglinton.

Secretary's Report.

I beg to report that the present number of paid-up members on the books of the association is a considerable increase over the year before. It must be acknowledged, however, that the increase is chiefly due to the large number of horticulturists in Montreal who took a deep interest in the proceedings of the convention. No doubt the attendance from the western end of this province would have been much larger but for the great expense of traveling such a long distance, and this expense item is the great difficulty which this association has to contend with. The executive committee ought certainly to meet, say, in January or February, but as its members are scattered all over the country, it is next to an impossibility to arrange a meeting in any place where it would be possible for all to attend. The delegates to this convention are fortunate in being able to obtain rates reduced to the minimum, which will allow many to attend who would otherwise not be able to stand the expense, and I have no doubt but that there will be a still further increase in the number of members for the secretary to report at our next meeting.

I think when florists once learn the good they get from attending these meetings the expense in question will not be so prominent. They will find that it pays them to attend these conventions, to assist the association (if only by their presence) to have a trade organization worthy of their profession, that will use all means to bring their business more and more before the public. In these days of organization, combats and trusts it is the duty of every florist in the country to assist by every means in his power his own trade organization. Don't sit in your petting shed and say, "Oh, that thing is run by a clique." The "clique" (some one has to run the show) wants you and your help and you want to be in it. Only one "clique" is wanted, and that is the whole trade.

I trust I have not usurped the prerogative of the president by saying these few words. I am sorry to say we have no Canadian trade paper now in which to let off any superabundant eloquence which may happen to accumulate. I find it a serious loss and I hope the time is not far distant when another attempt will be made on a more permanent basis. Our trade in this country certainly ought to be able to support a paper and I firmly believe that it is.

In conclusion, I would strongly advise the association to try a change of secretary as a means of advancement, a struggling country florist has not the time to devote to the work that is necessary, however much he likes it. A young man who has some time to give, who has ambitions to see our business take its proper place in the procession, would be better able (though not more willing, perhaps) to lift the association out of old ruts and carry it along to the success it deserves.

HOW CAN THE RELATION BETWEEN GROWER AND RETAILER BE IMPROVED.

By FRED C. W. BROWN.

[Read before the Canadian Horticultural Assoc'n at London, Ont.]

If we are to improve our own relationship so as to bind ourselves in a bond of lasting unity it appears then that we should feel around for a radical change in the present methods of marketing our produce before hastily advancing or passing judgment on any of the systems propounded for that improvement; we must carefully weigh all the why and wherefores. The steps forward must be firm and sure; we must not allow ourselves to embark on new methods without the universal assistance of all growers and retailers connected with the floral trade; chance must be left out of the question, success must be assured, or there will be a danger of wrecking the partial unity existing at the present time. What shall that change consist of? Of systematically improving our ways for the disposal of goods, a clear and thoroughly reliable system for placing on the market the stock in trade of a cut-flower grower.

The source of distribution, to my mind, should take the form of a commission house or go-between, a place where the stock in trade of the grower could be placed in the hands of a person or persons in a better position to know the different classes into which the stock should be divided; they would naturally know the proper value of the stock intrusted to their care, and, always provided they be perfectly upright and honorable men, would, I am sure, prove that such a system as I have in mind be of financial benefit to all growers placing confidence in them. I am sure, could the assistance of the growers be obtained, such houses, or houses, would prove their worthiness. We would soon appreciate the innovation. Among the advantages there would be a great saving of time to our busy grower; he would not have to waste his valuable time peddling from store to store, but instead know that his stock was being carefully and intelligently handled by competent persons, with only the necessity of a single delivery. He would also be assured of receiving the full market value for his productions, and anything worthy of special price would be held and easily disposed of at the full value. There would be a scientific method of gradation, the smaller or poorer stock would be sold at a reduced price, while the better or selected would more than make up for the lesser price obtained for the poorer grades.

The advantages to the retailer would be of infinitely great importance, for though he would either have to use his phone or personally go after his stock he would have a greater selection; if first grade stuff were required, he could obtain it; if second or third rate stuff was wanted, he would likewise be suited; he would be sure of equal distribution, no favors; if a rush order came in he would know where to lay hands on what he wanted; also he would know without losing time whether it would be possible to get what he wanted without having to cover several miles of country in the vain search for a few cents' worth of a particular line of flower. If what he required were not obtainable wholesale, he would know where there would likely be a brother florist who would oblige him by granting a favor where a favor would some day be required in return. He would also be assured of receiving fresh stock, the ever-watchful commission man would virtually force the grower to bring in nothing but fresh stock (there would be no necessity for otherwise), and when he had received his day's supply could be assured of having at least a stock of "unsalted" flowers.

Another, and to my mind about the greatest advantage to the retailer that would be gained, could the aforesaid system become universal, would be the checking of that great, I might almost say, curse of the wholesaler peddling his stock from door to door, and not only doing what I consider an injustice to the retailer, but injuring himself by virtually forcing the retailer to buy from a source where such practice is not indulged in; he not only peddles from door to door, using the information gained by his contact with the retailer as a guide, but frequently sells at a figure not in advance of that asked of the shopman. Could he be brought to realize he is doing more injury to himself than the retailer by allowing the persons who patronize him to consider that the proper way to buy, also giving them the bad habit of procuring stuff at its wholesale value.

We might bring argument against the system on account of excessive handling, still I think a practical and intelligent man could cause the growers to be more careful in packing at the greenhouses, thereby more than counter-balancing the necessity for the extra handling of the goods. There would be less likelihood of overstocking.

You might ask: Who is going to pay for all this? We are well aware that the stockkeeper will have to be well paid to assure good, reliable men. The question arises from where is his revenue to spring? I believe that the necessary finance to reimburse him will be obtained, not altogether by a high price paid by the retailer or a percentage deducted from the present prices obtained by the grower, but by the more careful handling of the goods and a surer, quicker and better way of disposal, thereby saving the necessary expense attached to the middleman.

I believe the time is near at hand when we will have some such system introduced among us, and when it does, if it can be proven satisfactorily to us that the right parties head it, then we should unite in giving our undivided support to some such innovation. It cannot be successful without the universal support of all, as there will be many obstacles to contend with, but, eventually overcoming step by step the many minor difficulties connected therewith, advance to the pinnacle of perfect business organization until forming the apex of the pyramid. We should be eagerly sought after by other branches of the mercantile world to find, if possible, the reason for the gratifying harmony and perfect unity of members of the world of floriculture.

among our plants than we used to be. All this sets us thinking of how our new purchases are coming out financially. Size of flower and length of stem we know we are going to get. But the point that puzzles us is the flowering qualities, as the profit to a certain extent depends on that, and the terms applied to new varieties, such as free-bloomer, continuous-flowering, never-off-crop, are often very disappointing to purchasers.

'Tis a pity there cannot be a flowering scale, one that is graded from some well known variety such as Scott or Day-

Now, suppose that you are in a large city, which also means a fashionable one, the demand for the novelties will be great, and customers will soon find where they are to be got and will go there. So to get your share, if not a little more, you must have them, not of course, disregarding the what I will term every-day carnation. But the growing of these new varieties is not all that is necessary to make them profitable. They must be handled right in the store; customers must be taught their name and their superior points, so that they soon look for a certain brand and realize from their shyness of flowers that they have to pay high prices. To maintain these prices, a fault, very prevalent in small cities, must be overcome, and that is picking flowers before they are full grown. Many of the newest varieties take time to mature and if you pick them before they arrive at that state you have only an everyday sized carnation and can get only a medium price. Besides, and are only throwing away money in paying high prices for large flowered varieties. 'Tis better to refuse the sale and keep up your reputation for the best. It will pay.

Among small growers I would say, confine yourself to a few of the novelties—so that you can buy in fairly decent quantities, for if you have not enough plants to give you a fair picking of flowers, so that a good showing can be made to the customer, you cannot command the price or establish a regular sale for this particular line, but if you are in a small way, don't grow fancy and to the exclusion of the old stand-bys, for they are still good. For some years our trade papers, by their correspondents, have repeated the cry, "Scott and Daybreak have had their day." I am not referring to the Pan-American Scott, for he will never be a "has-been." Well, these two carnations are still good and fill a big gap and they have a quality which many of our new ones have not—"floriferousness"—a word that means a great deal when it comes to profit.

My knowledge of carnation growing has not been gained in very large establishments where the newer ones are grown in large quantities and where their peculiarities are studied and every chance given for the best results; but I have been where medium quantities of anything that promises good results has been tested with older ones. The general result has been that the boom they have been sent off with, viz., their free-flowering qualities, have been a disappointment. Therefore, as we must have these new ones, we must proceed to make them profitable and that is by keeping up a good price, never letting up if our customers object. We must use the argument of long stems, larger flowers and smaller numbers needed to fill the bill.

When we think of the patience, study, and sometimes financial loss that many have given to keep the carnation at the top of the flowers of the present day (often this has been done without regard to profit), it seems rather harsh to be standing here discussing the results as to whether all this has been profitable. But I can assure you and them that these new introductions have been a profit to the buyer and all in the trade. In growing new varieties there are some unavoidable failures, some from a variety not keeping up its good record, others from some fault in the growing, but

IS IT PROFITABLE FOR THE GENERAL FLORIST TO GROW THE LATEST INTRODUCTIONS IN CARNATIONS.

[Read before Canadian Horticultural Association by E. Mepsted, of Ottawa, at London, August 5, 1901.]

The subject, "Is It Profitable to Buy the Latest Introductions in Carnations?" is quite a problem. At first thought one is inclined to say no, but there are many ways to look at it, that after a little thought we may say yes.

The great improvement made in the individual flowers in the past few years has been beyond the anticipation of the most sanguine. But sometimes one almost thinks it has been at the expense of the health and vigor of the plant. Do not think that for one moment I would rob the introducer of one atom of credit that belongs to him for his patience, perseverance and skill in hybridizing. But it does seem to me that in the past few years the diseases and unsatisfactory condition of plants have increased at a rapid rate. But this may be due to the fast life the carnation has had to live in the last ten years, the luxuries in the shape of food, to say nothing of medicines; but let the cause be what it may, we are given more to expect troubles break. I will now try and give my ideas as to why it is profitable in most cases, though in some may not be, to buy the new introductions.

In all florists' business, whether in large or small cities, there are two classes of buyers, those who want the best, the newest, the most fashionable and, perhaps I may add, the largest flowers—in fact, anything that is a novelty; and this same word "novelty" is a great factor in the trade of the day, and this class of buyers are willing to pay a good price. Of the other class there is always a large proportion of customers who want a good, useful article, and are willing to pay a fair price for it, but do not aspire to have the fancy long-stemmed article with the fancy price. Now, each of those patrons has to be cared for in proportion to their importance. In different cities, to do this we must keep in touch with the productions of the day and post ourselves on the individual merits of the same. This, at the present day, is easily done. Carnation society meetings and shows give us the opportunity of seeing for ourselves the new flowers and gaining, from intercourse with others, knowledge as to the merits of the same and enable us to form a good idea as to which varieties are profitable to our class of trade.

the value of the good ones easily balances this.

The introduction of these grand new ones has also been profitable indirectly. Although some localities may not be quite ready to fall into the necessarily higher price, it is bound to come, and the advent of these fine flowers even in small cities, has boomed up the carnation to the extent that even the price of older sorts is doubled, to the profit of all. And as we all reap something from this state we should do our part to keep this good tide moving and the way to do so is to encourage our introducers by testing their qualities and it will be profitable in the end.

To sum up the case, I would say in large businesses buy any new varieties that are thought well of in general, still growing the older sorts. To those with smaller businesses, buy two or three varieties of what are considered promising, in fair quantities, and introduce them yourself.

In Canada we are rather apt to err in the penny wise and pound foolish way; we say it will not pay us to go here and there, but, gentlemen, it pays every time you go away from home, for the inexpensive chances that are now given to attend carnation conventions and shows leave no excuse, and it is just at these places that you learn what you want to buy for profit. There is not a doubt in my mind that if today we were to wipe out the results of the S. A. F. and carnation societies and shows for the last ten years, carnations would be selling all round for a much lower figure and in smaller quantities than they are today. Therefore, we should take advantage of any meeting or show where we can gain points on the carnation and so avoid the irritating feeling that our neighbors are getting more money out of the divine flower than we are.

The great advantage of having carnations of the newest type for use in decorating rooms is their large bold flowers and long stems, filling a position the older varieties could not. Again, in design work one can easily afford to pay double price for flowers of the size of Al White Cloud. Once more the range in shades of color given us in the new ones has given us a much larger scope in pleasing our patrons, and if these are not enough to persuade you to buy some 1901ers, think of the profit to your health and pleasure of watching a bed of Lawson flowers grow larger and larger until they mature and then sell faster than they come.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Trade is so-so, if you know what that means. I do not. But it is just what we always have to put up with here during this particular chapter in the calendar. There is really quite a bit of material coming in, so much that a great deal of it meets interference getting out again. Sweet peas and carnations are not awfully plentiful, but nobody cares for that. They simply use asters, and there are enough of them, goodness knows, and prices on them are graduating down to hardpan very swiftly. Many new crop roses are coming in, and are getting in each other's way.

A Visit to Paul Richwagen's.

It was unfortunate that I rang in a hope for the acceleration of Paul Richwagen's aster business in last issue. As a result he has been cutting 15,000 per day ever since, and has damaged our own business as well as others thereby. In order to put a damper on them and to see the large land purchase he recently made I rode out with him, twelve miles, on that feverishly rainy day we had. Paul said it wasn't going to rain when we started, and kept saying so all the way out. But it rained.

No better suburban drive can be chosen. The entire road seems almost perfectly level. We took Beacon street, down by the fine city residences, packed upon every inch of ground and four or five stories high, for the first mile, when it began to rain. Then through aristocratic Brookline with still finer houses, separated and not piled upon each other, where it rained harder through one or two of the Newtons, with their great variety of scenery, varying from still more elegant and more widely separated mansions, to typical forestry, where it rained still harder, to the more subdued scenes of the eastern part of Newham, where it still rained great gusts, to his home, where we arrived pretty well drenched, in spite of good protection and—it still rained! Named geographical points passed were Coldidge's Corner, Reservoir, Newton Center, Newton Upper Falls and Highlandville. It rained in all these places individually and collectively.

I saw his wife, his four children, his foreman, his newly acquired twenty-four acres of land, his 16,000 feet of glass, his growing crops, his barn, his new farming tools, consisting of rake, mower, sulky plow, walking plow, cultivators, hand seeders, etc., and his home, which he purchased when burned out. Every single thing in the list is all right in big capital letters, except the ruins of the burned house, which is a statue of desolation, indeed. It was a fine, large old country mansion, in good repair, and still looks on the outside quite like a house with missing roof. But it is simply a shell of little more than paint and clapboards, and is really not worth even tearing down.

The greenhouses are in the form of two well-built structures, 45x180. In proof that his bargain on the whole place is all that is represented, he has refused an offer of $3,000 bonus upon it already, with the question of acceptance of $5,000, which he avers he would refuse.

But do you know that rased has brought into market a good 100,000 asters during the past month, half of them during the past week, and they came off of a ridiculously diminutive piece of real estate. When he wasn't looking I breathed maledictions upon that piece of ground, so that the crop cannot last much longer, and also upon more than as many more of the later varieties, so that they will not bother us so much by half as they otherwise would, since many will come in too late unless frosts hold off wonderfully.

And it stopped raining about that time and I came home, not much sadder, quite a bit wiser so far as his place is concerned, and considerably drier when I got there. J. S. MANLY.

ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis delegates who spent a very pleasant week among their friends in Buffalo are home again. The convention was a great success and the Pan-American Exposition is all that it is claimed to be of beauty. The Buffalo brothers outdid themselves in taking care of the visitors and the St. Louis delegation wish to thank the Buffalo boys through the Review for the kind treatment received at their hands.

We did not bring home any trophies, though one of our boys, A. Y. Ellison, captured the gold pen, by making the second high single score, 209. It was a scrub team, but they did themselves proud by beating a few clubs. One satisfaction the St. Louis boys had was beating the three best bowlers from Chicago; 150 pins in five games, and Messrs. Kuch, Ellison and Bencke are now wearing new hats at the expense of Messrs. Winterson, Amus and Foerster.

They will now have to wait a year and travel to Asheville for revenge.

The Market.

The market remains about the same; though roses are more plentiful and better than a week ago. The dry weather is still with us and outdoor stuff is burning up for want of rain. Business is very quiet and funeral work is about all we have to do. Prices on roses run from $2 to $3 per 100; quite a lot of short Beauties are in the market at $5 per 100. Carnations and asters are small and sell at $1 to $1.50 per 100. This is about all the stock that is coming in at present. J. J. B.

FIVE TIMES AS MANY.

I spent $2 in the classified columns of the REVIEW and as a result sold five times as many plants as I did through $25 worth of advertising in another paper. This is experience that can't be gainsaid.—G. P. MOORE, Ocean City, N. J.

A GOOD THING.

The classified ads. are a good thing. It is easy to find just what is wanted, and I think it is only a matter of a little time before people generally will realize this.—S. M. HANBSON, Danville, Ky.

BETTER RESULTS.

I shall continue to patronize my columns by giving you a greater proportion of my advertising, as the REVIEW gives me better results.—JOSEPH HEACOCK, Wyncote, Pa.

A GOOD DRUMMER.

THE REVIEW is a good drummer. It sells plants quicker than any other trade paper we have in the country.—C. LAWITZEN, Rhinebeck, N. Y.

The Market.

The rose supply has improved somewhat, both in quantity and quality, but carnations are scarcer than ever. For the best roses $4 and $5 are still obtained, but the buyer gets a better quality for his money. From these figures prices grade down to $1. In carnations the best bring $1.50, while in most any kind of a carnation will bring $1 a hundred, a remarkable price for the season. In asters the best bring $1.50 and some very good ones are seen, but the quality averages poor and there are lots that will not bring as much as 50 cents a hundred, even with the great scarcity of carnations. Gladiolus are still to be seen in quantity and prices are very low, except for the best quality blooms of light colors; $3 seems to be about the top price, but many are offered as low as $1.50. There is a shortage in all green stuff, such as adiantum, smilax and asparagus.

The demand is remarkably good for the season and the shipping call is brisk.

Various Items.

The Buffalo pilgrims have been returning in small detachments and only a few are yet to be accounted for. The bowlers are being warmly congratulated on the fact that they won the Edgely cup a second time and now own it. We hear rumors of a suitable celebration in the near future.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., has returned to the city to look after the unexpected summer business, and will stay until the end of the month. He says it is the first time in the history of the business that his house has paid expenses during the summer months.

Fred Strel will open a store at 84 Jackson street on August 20.

The bowling scores made at Buffalo will be found elsewhere in this issue of the REVIEW.

CLOSED OUT ALL STOCK.

A few words in regard to your classified ads. Last year, late in the season, we had a surplus stock of some considerable thousands of asters on hand, and had about concluded the season was over, but your classified ads, coming to our notice, although we are rather conservative in regard to new things, we concluded to try them, as the rates were so reasonable that there could not be but a small loss if we received no returns. The effect was that we closed out all the stock and returned some cash to customers whose orders we could not fill.—A. & G. ROSBACH, Pemberton, N. J., June 11, 1900.

A GREAT PULLER.

Your paper is a great puller to sell plants. I could have sold double the amount that I had. I shall always advertise in the Review when I have anything to sell.—J. F. Brown, Knights-town, Ind.

SOLD OUT.

Please state in your next issue that I am sold out of asters. I have had to return orders, though I had a large supply. I lay it all to the Florists' Review adv.—T. C. BRACE, West Berlin, O.

COMPLETELY SOLD OUT.

Please discontinue my classified adv., as I am completely sold out of chrysanthemums, in fact could have sold three times what I had through your adv.—H. D. DARLINGTON, Flushing, N. Y.

HERE IS A BUSINESS BOOK FOR BUSINESS MEN

NO SCIENCE BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE.

It don't tell you the botanical classification but it does tell you how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

It don't list every plant in cultivation but it does tell you just what you want to know about every plant that there is any money in for a Commercial Florist.

The articles are arranged alphabetically so that when you want to see what Mr. Scott says about Cannas you turn to the Cs and in an instant you have it.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.

Caxton Building, CHICAGO.

The book treats of over 200 subjects and is freely illustrated with fine half-tone engravings.

It is a book that you need in your business just as you need any other useful labor and money saving implement or device.

The price is $5.00, carriage prepaid.

If you have not already obtained a copy of this book order one now.

If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Notes.

Trade is exceedingly languid, the demand being limited to funeral purposes mainly. Flowers are abundant of a certain grade—the earlier asters, carnations and outdoor roses. The quality of the latter is far below other previous seasons, especially of the Coquets—white and pink. This doubtless is due to peculiarities of the season. We have had for the past ten days high temperatures, with great humidity and several heavy rains, one downpour exceeding two and one-half inches in about as many hours. Today (August 12) we had another copious rain. The nights are delightful, a peculiarity here of August weather, their refreshing coolness making amends for the exasperating torrid heat of the days.

The Baltimore contingent is back from the Buffalo meeting, all evidently full of enthusiasm (and other things). One pilgrim, like John Gilpin, of frugal mind, boasts that he accomplished the trip on forty-five cents less than twenty-five dollars. Another expresses himself as charmed with the beauties and grandeur of nature and art which the journey revealed, Niagara quite meeting his expectations, and his only kick being at the bad faith he encountered in the Midway, where not as much was shown him as he was induced by the concessionaires to believe he would see.

Considerable building is going on in this vicinity. W. P. Craig, Govanstown, is building two rose houses; Edw. A. Seidewitz, a violet house; Richard Vincent, Jr., & Son, two extensive houses; Andrew Anderson, a rose house.

The greenhouse plant of Massey & Bro. has been sold to John Bartels, formerly of Colorado, the announced price being about $9,000, on a fee simple basis. There are five greenhouses with 6,000 or 8,000 feet of glass and two dwellings. Colin Campbell will have charge as manager. R.

THE GARLAND GUTTER.

The John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, say that out of 18,000 running feet of greenhouses they have supplied material for to Illinois florists during the last seven months, no less than 12,750 running feet have been erected with the Garland iron gutter.

WEST ROXBURY, MASS.—E. R. Lowe is building another violet house, 20x100, which makes the sixth house all in violets.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Eli Cross has added two violet houses 11x200.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

Twenty-five years ago the state of Colorado was admitted into the Union, and the occasion was celebrated here the first week in August with great eclat. Vice-President Roosevelt and many other distinguished guests were present and the buildings were gaily decorated with flags and bunting.

Colorado Springs is a beautiful little town with wide streets and fine stores, and a copious supply of rain has held vegetation in keeping with the other attractions. Trade in cut flowers and decorative work has been excellent here this summer, so report Messrs. Clark and Crump. Mr. Clark has a range of 100,000 feet of glass well equipped with modern appliances. All his young stock is under cover and shows the best of care. At the Crump greenhouses we found everything in a thrifty condition, especially the young roses, which are beginning to give new blooms.

For the banquet given in honor of Vice-President Roosevelt the floral decorations were arranged by Mr. Crump and gotten up with great skill and originality. Particularly worth mentioning were the vases of long-stemmed Beauties, which were grand for this season of the year. Mr. Crump also exhibited a float of natural flowers in the street parade.

With its unexcelled scenic attractions and the invigorating climate, is it any wonder that florists love to visit this interesting state? The branch railway, called the Short Line of the Rio Grande, and recently opened between here and Cripple Creek, is a wonderful piece of railroad engineering. For a distance of 35 miles the railroad takes a winding course through the Rocky Mountains until it reaches an altitude of 10,000 feet above sea level. While making the ascent we see nesting in the grass such flowers as the Mariposa lily, wild penstemon, anemone, gentian, gilia and the columbine, which luxuriate in this high altitude.

Cripple Creek.

The Cripple Creek district and its vast mining industries are well known to the country. Of the enterprising masses who came to try their fortunes here, the florist was among the first to arrive, and he is established and doing well.

Mr. Burns, who owns a moderate range of glass, says that owing to the high prices charged for fuel and water the growing of flowers under glass has not been very profitable here yet.

The Webster Floral Co. does the leading business of the district, buying all their material from the Clark establishment at the Springs.

The writer while sojourning in Cripple Creek had the privilege to go underground 1,200 feet and to see rich veins of precious metal, for which this district is noted. It was also a pleasure to note that the inhabitants took especial pride in their gardens. The fuchsia, geranium, sweet pea and pansy thrive to perfection in this cool climate. I. J. M.

FRENCH BULBS.

The syndicate for the Defense of Agricultural Interests held a meeting July 7 last at which were present many growers of bulbs. We give below a translation of part of the published report:

"The general crop of flower bulbs is bad. Hyacinths have increased but little and grown but little. The disease is worse at various places, and more severe than last year. Even narcissi, generally so robust and prolific, remain without enlargement and without increase. The minimum prices fixed by the syndicate have been observed everywhere. In view of the poor crop even higher prices are obtained, and some of the members regret not having fixed the price of narcissi at 15 francs, which has been reached at certain points.

"Complaints have been made against many merchants who have established arbitrary measurements for the size of freesia and it was decided that next year the standard shall be sharply exact in order to avoid all discussion.

"The next syndicate meeting will take place in August, at the end of the harvest, and then a list of prices will be elaborated for next year and important reforms made as to the mode of payment and the suppression of strikes. The meeting adjourned after having decided to maintain still more energetically than ever the prices fixed upon."

FREMONT, NEB.—C. H. Green reports that business has held up fairly well all summer. His roses are extra good and he has commenced cutting from the early planted ones. Carnation planting is finished and his stock is fine, being of good size and of close, firm growth. The weather has been hot and dry until the last two weeks, but with constant cultivation, stock has been kept growing in good shape. There was a fine rain on July 27, just enough to make the soil fall away, like meal, from carnations when lifting. Mums are extra fine, and we all look for a good season.

FR. DODGE, IA.—P. L. Larson has just completed a new house 16x125 and has planted it in roses.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Seen at the Convention.

There were many good things to be seen by the retailer at the trade show at Buffalo. We were surprised to see in M. Rice & Co.'s display of baskets about the best exhibit that has been put up at a convention for many years. We never care so much about the extent of an exhibit as we do about its quality; in this particular case we saw many innovations and designs in basket ware that are destined to become very popular with up-to-date retailers. Their adjustable willow pot covers are sure to be appreciated by all decorators. It is a good thing, not new in design, but new in construction; the steel bands, interwoven with the willow, prevents the cover from becoming soggy and adjusts it to all sizes.

Another good thing was the new reversible decorative plant stands. These were of several shapes, but all constructed with a view to be useful even more than ornamental. In one end of the stand is inserted a zinc vase capable of holding a large bunch of long stemmed flowers; when the stand is reversed it becomes a substantial plant or basket support. It will be of the utmost value in the store or in decorations. We would advise the addition of some little device that will prevent the lining from falling out when turned upside down.

There were many new designs among the baskets shown by this firm; they represented what Europe had to offer this season. Of course, there are many things that "go" in Paris that will not be even looked at in New York. We have a more critical people to deal with here, and there is less appreciation of the bizarre in art. Such things as colored palm leaf bows will never be accepted in this country, even though they be popular in Paris.

Rice & Co. also showed some exceptionally fine colors in Porto Rico matting for fancy pot trimming, and their German crepe papers are a great improvement on what we get in this country; it stands the sight of water, and that is all important.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., exhibited some choice baskets, and very handsome wheat sheaves.

Krick's immortelle lettering and the Boston Florist Letter Company's exhibit showed wonderful improvement in that class of work. Of course, there is not nearly so much lettering used nowadays, but still much is used, especially in downtown localities, and all know what it is to have good lettering; even if you are an adept at twisting the chenille it scarcely pays for you to bother, and the above people's work is much better. Krick showed some wire pot hooks that are much used by decorators in New York; they are very useful for hanging up potted plants; they should be known to every one.

There was much of interest in D. B. Long's exhibit. Many of the best retailers like to show photos of their own creations to customers, but even in their cases, Long's floral photos are of immense value. No store should be without an album of good designs; it is essential to all lines of business. Long's photos, that is the new ones, are equal to the average work turned out by the best retailers, and none need be ashamed to have them on their counter. We were particularly taken by his cleverly gotten up booklets for retailers. We consider this a most important item to progressive florists. Advertising in these days must be carefully considered. It has become necessary for those in the race to send out cards or booklets at certain periods. Mr. Long's ideas of supplying that demand deserve success; his work is artistic and the whole construction is made to appear as your own.

There were some very fine ribbons shown by S. S. Pennock and Schloss Bros. A specially choice embroidered ribbon was noticed in the former's display. Pity it was that the several bows, especially the new or most popular ones, were not shown by these firms. There must be something better shown for wedding ribbons.

appears like home made. Brague's work is good.

Cowe's machine wired tooth picks are of great assistance to the slow stemmer. When the price is a little lower they may be used by experts, if only to dispense with the troubles attached to rusty and tangled wires, and the ever present dull shears. Green stemming sticks are sure to be generally used in the future; tooth picks would look better if dipped also. We might just as well have these little things right now as wait a few years for them. Much of the effectiveness of "made-up" work depends on the total obliteration of moss, sticks and other incidental material, and anything which lessens the work should at once be recognized.

The Ford Company's exhibit of Christmas bells was very good. These sell very well in New York, and there is a big future for them if introduced with more appropriate settings than we have hitherto seen. Ribbons and red immortelles do not constitute the all in all for Christmas decoration; there is lots to learn in that line.

Kift's string vases were shown to good advantage. The more they are known, the more general will be their use, not only in window decorations but in every class of decorative work where flowers are used.

The plant exhibits made by the numerous well known firms were of special merit. The small crotons were extra fine, and more should be used in basket work. The trouble with the crotons usually offered for sale is that they are of poor growth, and abominable colors. Growers should try to supply retailers with the kind of stock generally seen at conventions.

Bed of Cannas at the Pan-American Exposition. Exhibit of C. W. Ward.

There was a cemetery bouquet holder shown by one, we forget whom, that should recommend itself to those doing a cemetery business.

Baker Bros.' new retinospora will be very valuable for evergreen vase and window box work.

We saw much that was commendable in Brague's exhibit of decorative material. His laurel wreaths of their kind were exceptionally fine. These supply men are keeping up with the requirements of the times. It pays in busy days to give a little extra for stock which

In Dreer's exhibit Cibotium Scheidei was seen—the great decorative plant of the future. It is now used to great extent by the best trade in New York. There is nothing more beautiful than this fern, be it in window or drawing-room. It will not tolerate ignorant usage; it may be expensive to many on that account, but it is exquisite when properly arranged, and that's the kind of material artists must have, no matter what the cost.

Of course, everything shown at the trade exhibit was of interest to the average retailer, out some things were exceptionally so. We saw in Arthur Cowee's grand display of gladioli many magnificent flowers worthy the attention and patronage of every retailer. Every one knows the great value of gladioli, more especially the white or light colors; they are invaluable in funeral work, and the time will come when, as in the case of L. Harrisii and L. longiflorum, their season of flowering will be greatly extended.

There is one thing about this annual trade exhibition that must sooner or later change—and the sooner the better. There must be better inducements offered for people to make creditable displays. Competent and careful judging must be the rule, not the exception. Of course, every member of the national society is a judge in his own estimation. These annual shows, however, call for the most critical. A good thing in basket or any other appliance is of just as much importance in a way as boiler or plant, and should be so considered. A paltry "Mention" is but poor consolation

Jones in the hands of some growers gives profitable results. For a latest yellow my choice would be Rieman.

In pinks, Messrs. Smith claim that Lavender Queen for Thanksgiving and Superba for Christmas are pre-eminent. I cannot say personally, never having grown either. Maud Dean is an old standard late pink.

While it is far better to plant stock that has been potted and is well rooted, you can, if you are late, plant the cuttings right from the sand into the bench. They must be kept well shaded from the hot sun and sprinkled frequently until established. In a week or so they will be growing away nicely. After planting use every effort to get the plants growing well, because the time in which they have to make their growth is limited, and they do not have the show that the earlier planted stock has.

Insects.

Bench plants generally by this time are staked up and the work with them consists chiefly in keeping them tied up possible before the flowers appear, because it is very destructive to the petals. Frequent syringings with weak tobacco liquid or fir tree oil soap will make things so unpleasant for this pest that it will reduce in numbers very materially.

Buds.

Nothing probably harasses a beginner in the gentle art of mum-growing more than the question of bud selection. This is not the least bit surprising when the mass of conflicting testimony relative to the merits or demerits of crown and terminal buds is considered; and yet this conflicting testimony is only what one might expect in a country so large as this, where climatic conditions and environment are necessarily so different, and the impossibility of drawing a hard and fast line self evident.

Because I can successfully handle the crown bud on a variety in say the neighborhood of Chicago, it does not follow that a man ought to be able to grow that same variety on a crown bud in Georgia or California.

Plants adapt themselves to the conditions surrounding them, the chrysanthemum doing this possibly quicker than the average plant, and it behoves the grower to also adapt his working knowledge to the different conditions under which he may have to grow his stock.

Undoubtedly the bud most generally used by our florists is the terminal bud. We might call this the natural bud since it is the bud that would produce a flower if the plant were left to itself, and not disbudded or trimmed in any way. It is as its name implies the terminus or apex of growth, and if this simple fact is kept in mind there will be none of the mistakes which even today are so common, of confounding the crown bud with the terminal.

The crown bud can always be distinguished by the shoots that appear around it, and which if allowed to remain take all the nourishment away from it and cause it to shrivel up. The terminal buds have no shoots around the bud, but just a cluster of smaller buds around the central one.

Another way to always know the crown bud is by the season of the year. Any bud that forms in August is a crown bud, no matter how many buds the plant has produced during June and July.

The reasons why the terminal bud is used more than the crown are various. In the first place, being as before stated the natural bud, it is more easily handled, and will develop properly in a much lower temperature than the crown bud. It is also better furnished with foliage up round the neck of the flower, also quite a consideration when growing for cut flower only. Also the color of pink varieties is nearly always much brighter and better on the terminal bud.

Some of the objections to the terminal bud are: First, the flower is almost invariably much smaller and does not have nearly the same fullness, though it may make a neater flower. This is the reason why flowers to be used for exhibition are so generally taken on the crown bud. Secondly the stem on the late bud is often very weak, owing to the quick, soft final growth it makes in the cool days of September and October.

tion for the money, worry and time expended. Lucky it is that a good thing is appreciated, even if it has no medal on it. If the society is so generous as to place its medals at the disposal of other societies whose judges can and will award these medals to fleeting attractions, they surely can better afford to practice that generosity in connection with their own annual trade exhibit.

IVERA.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

Early and Late Varieties.

The last batch of plants should be all planted out by this time; dwarf varieties that have been kept for side benches, and late varieties for Thanksgiving and later use.

The batch to be grown for the latest flowers should be planted out in a separate house from the early and mid-season kinds, then they can be kept well ventilated, and a good growing atmosphere maintained all through October. This would be manifestly impossible in a house where flowers were opening as the atmosphere then must be kept dry and warmer.

The best late white to plant is probably Wm. H. Chadwick, though Jerome and free from insects. The caterpillars have been worse this season than I ever remember before, and nothing makes the plants look worse than these omnivorous creatures with prodigious appetites. The grasshopper has not put in his appearance yet to any extent, and we fervently hope he won't. September, however, is his favorite season, then after the bud is taken and is swelling nicely, Mr. Grasshopper comes along and cuts off its connection with the rest of the plant by eating through the soft, succulent stalk, or else takes one side out of the bud itself in a cursory sort of way. Naturally the grasshopper only does this on the finest buds, and when you go examining the damage done you will also most like have a cursory way with you.

The importance of getting young plants entirely free from aphids as soon as possible after planting out, I have before spoken of. Our plants have not been fumigated since the first week in June, and today I cannot find a single black fly on the entire stock and do not expect to have to smoke again until just before the buds begin to show color.

There is a little brown thrip that begins to appear about this time, and you should endeavor to get rid of it as far as

Now let us criticise the crown bud. If you want early flowers on early varieties you must use the crown bud. By early varieties I mean such as Fitzwygram, Yellow Queen, Smunderbruch, etc. While the difference in the opening of the flowers from the different buds is often only a matter of two or three days, that difference often makes a vast change in the price obtained.

The great bulk of the midseason kinds come all right on the crown bud, with the exception of the pink varieties, providing the bud is taken at the right time; viz. the last days of August or first week in September. I would except from this rule also Mrs. T. L. Park, and her brother, Colonel Appleton, which do better on a later bud.

If the stock is planted closely in the bench it is not wise to use the crown bud, because it often in such case makes a long neck owing to the growth of the plant being drawn up instead of being close-jointed and sturdy. When the neck is long and weak it is unable to support the flower properly, and the sparsity of foliage is painfully apparent. Dwarf varieties like Bonaffon will not of course show this long neck on the crown, but the taller growers will. The crown should have a temperature never lower than 45 degrees to develop in, or it will not develop properly, while the terminal will develop all right in any temperature above actual frost.

There is a bud often called the late crown which is a sort of intermediary between the crown proper and the terminal, and this bud is pretty nearly always a safe one to use. I don't know of any variety that will not develop a perfect flower from it.

Plants that produce a crown bud early in August will often produce a late

The only way to get an accurate idea of how certain buds will mature in your own individual locality, is to make a note of the dates the buds are taken and see which ones produce the best flowers. Then you have a working data and will know for another year.

BRIAN BORU.

surrounded by 5 or 6 rows of McKinley. The combination is grand. It is impossible to see the flowers of McKinley in the picture, but for many weeks the plants have been covered with bloom as a geranium bed. Eighteen inches, even 2 ft., is considered the right distance to plant cannas, particularly of the stronger growing varieties, but Mr. Ward sent us such an abundance of plants that we were able to plant these only one foot apart, so they have quickly filled up and have made a magnificent show. If you want a quick return, plant thickly. No florist can afford to be without the McKinley canna.

Exhibit of Evergreens at the Pan-American Exposition.

EXHIBITS AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

The bed of geranium "Le Soliel" is the exhibit of C. W. Ward of Queens, N. Y. These plants were unfortunately received during our wet spell here and had to remain in the packing box almost a week before we could get them in the ground, and nothing suffers worse under these conditions than a geranium. But they quickly got over it and for many weeks have been a most brilliant bed.

The bed of evergreens is the exhibit of the William H. Moon Co., of Morrisville, Pa. They were planted about May 10, and occupy a square bed just north of the Woman's Building. In the center are three Pinus exce'sa. Next to them are nine Retinospora plumosa. Next to that come a row of Retinospora squarrosa and next Retinospora aurea. The whole were surrounded with an edging of the Golden Juniper, quite small plants. Quite a number of the juniper died, but not a single one of any of the larger plants. We have had occasion this summer to move several small evergreens, which we have done during the month of July with perfect success. We all know that just as evergreens start to grow, say about the second week in May with us, is the best time to move them, and next best is possibly the end of August or early September. But I really believe that if a sufficient ball of earth can be taken that you can move them with safety any time during summer; that is, the moderate sized plants, without their losing any roots.

The bed of "Garret A. Hobart" canna is the bed of W. G. Eisele of West End, N. J. When received about the first of June, these were by no means good plants; in fact, they had suffered a good deal in transit, but they quickly started to grow and have been for a long time a most brilliant bed. It is of medium height, very stout grower, and most profuse bloomer. It is a heavy spike with a dark, rich scarlet, and I think will take rank as one of the most free bloomers.

There are two beds of geraniums on the margin of Mirror Lake, the exhibit of Henry Eichholz, Waynesboro, Pa.

crown the second or third week in September. The only difference in the appearance of a late crown from a terminal is in the fact that in the terminal the smaller buds are clustered closely around the central bud; while in the late crown the smaller buds appear in small clusters of two or three each on a small separate footstalk which would if allowed to remain, attain a length of two or three inches only.

In color, Le Soliel is very slightly lighter than S. A. Nutt. It is absolutely healthy and a vigorous grower; but not too rank, and I have never seen its equal for quantity of flowers. I consider it our best bedding scarlet geranium.

Perhaps the handsomest, or rather the most finished bed on the whole grounds, is the canna bed, the exhibit of C. W. Ward. It is a circle 25 ft. in diameter. In the center is Black Beauty, which is

They are of the dwarf Tom Thumb type. The variety Dryden is of the Miranda type of flower. No bed on the whole grounds has attracted more attention. It has just been simply a bouquet of its beautiful pink flowers. It is a gem. I have never seen a better bedder, and it should be grown by every florist. "America," as will be seen by the picture, is also a wonderful bloomer. For a bright, neat spot on the lawn it seems to me that this type of geranium is indispensable. They look neater and are prettier than the stronger growing zonals. America is a salmon shade.

The bed of David Harum canna has been very much admired. It is the exhibit of J. C. Vaughan, and is immediately to the east, or front, of the Woman's Building. As usual, the photograph does not do justice to the bloom. There is something remarkably pleasing about this beautiful canna. The foliage is a rich bronze, but not too dark. The flower is a fine, pleasing orange scarlet. There is harmony or blending of the flower and color of the leaf which makes the variety most attractive. I predict for this canna the greatest popularity.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

We don't believe in putting these into the sand. You might lose a smaller percentage in the sand, but you can afford to lose a few more by potting them at once. They make much better plants when rooted in the pots. Pot firmly in good sandy loam. When I say pot firmly I mean see that the soil around the base of the cutting is firm. The surface of the soil always gets close and packed by watering, but many thousands of cuttings and even transplanted seedlings are lost by loose soil around the roots. We stand the cuttings when first potted on benches where the roof is slightly shaded, but not in any north side house. Give them a good soaking when first potted and after that water only when they are decidedly dry, and unless we get very hot weather you will lose but a very few.

Violets.

Take good care of your violets just now. What I have seen has been growing freely for the past two months. All runners must be kept cut off. They should be gone over at least once in two weeks. Syringing must be kept up every fine day or you will get red spider. This is best done in the morning. During the month of September we always get an attack of aphid, which are most difficult to dislodge as they get down into the crown of the plant and because violets don't like a strong dose of tobacco smoke, which, after all, is the best way to kill aphid on most plants. Tobacco dust may answer the purpose. Fumigating frequently but mildly will keep them away, but I like best the tobacco water applied in a very fine spray, and don't overdo it in strength. Niko-teen at the strength of one in 300 of water, or the Rose Leaf extract at one to 75 of water is safe. WM. SCOTT.

HARDY AQUATICS.

Beginning at the water edge in the lower left hand corner the tall reedy growth consists of Iris pseudoacorus and

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Hollyhocks.

This is an excellent time to sow seed of hollyhock if you have the convenience to winter them in a very cool house or a well protected cold frame. The best I ever grew were sown in early September and wintered in 3-inch pots in a cool house. Unfortunately the disease has troubled us very much but this year we have been free of it. They are stately, majestic plants and nothing is finer as a background to a border. Their growth is very simple, providing you escape the disease. I would sow in a flat and when well up shift into a 2-in., and later 3-in., always remembering that they are hardy plants and want the coolest treatment, in our milder states wintering out of doors. At the same time if you want to get the very best results do as I say and winter them in a house or cold-frame in pots.

Pansies.

For pansies that are to be wintered under glass don't delay sowing at once. Those sown for field culture should now be ready to transplant into the beds, which should be done as soon as the plants are fit to handle, for the sooner they are well established and make compact little plants the better they will winter.

Pelargoniums.

The end of the month or end of September is the ideal time to propagate the show pelargoniums. Plants that went out of flower in July should have made a good growth and if they have been out of doors in the sun or in a sunny house all the better. A week before you cut the old plants down keep them quite on the dry side. It will make the wood all the better for propagating.

Now, the greatest mistake made by those who do not know the requirements of these plants is that they are afraid to cut them down. Don't be afraid; if you have but two or three inches of stem it is enough. There will be any amount of breaks from the old stems. Almost any part of the growth you have to cut off will make a good plant. The leading green growth is all right and so is a few joints below it. The cuttings can be put into 2-in pots at once in sandy loam, but it is safer to put them in the propagating bench in the usual way. They want a good soaking and after that only water when the sand is dry. They root freely in about three weeks.

The old plants, if it is desired to keep them, can remain on the bench for a week or two and be given scarcely any water. There are no tops so they need only enough to keep them from shriveling. Very soon a great number of young growths will have started from the old wood and when half an inch long you can shake off all the old soil, trim back the roots and repeat in a size smaller than they flowered in, and you have started again on another year's growth and these old plants will with good care make fine lushy plants and are the best for early forcing.

Geraniums.

In a week or two you will be propagating your first big batch of geranium cuttings. See that the plants are encouraged to make a vigorous growth. Water is sometimes needed, but never as much as hoeing, and be sure to keep the old flowers picked. If planted out purely for stock even the buds can be picked off. Don't try and propagate till the first week of September, and not then if the weather is hot.

At the cape in the center of the view is a dark group of Aster vimineus flanked at the left with golden rod and Heliopsis laevis and farther left a group of Helianthus grosse-serratus. Following to the right at the far end of the pond the margin is accross and sagittaria var., with S. gracilis. Near the white birch at the right is a group of Pontederia cordata just in bloom. The rest of the margin is made up chiefly of plants already enumerated, with Mimulus ringens, Lobelia siphilitica and minor water plants.

The groups of nymphaea include Nymphaea alba, N. candidissima, N. tuberosa, N. Marliacea alba, N. Mar. carnea, N. Mar. rosea, N. Mar. chromatella and N. rosea.

All of the growth in this pond is perfectly hardy and well established and the effect is largely the result of natural adjustment.

CARNATION NOTES.

Supporting Carnations.

There are about as many methods of supporting carnations as there are growers, and, of course, each claims that his method is the very best of all. It would be difficult to say which method is superior to all others in every respect, as each has its weak points as well as its strong points.

Many growers use wire supports of one kind or another, either home-made or one of the many kind offered by wire-workers. There is a great difference between the styles or shapes of the different makes, but they nearly all have the bad fault of being rigid or unadjustable. Such spare growers as Mrs. Bradt can hardly be expected to stand up straight in a wire ring which is large enough to span a large plant like Crocker or White Cloud.

The one exception to this rule, that I know of, is a home-made affair, and, by the way, this is the way our best inventions and most useful appliances are worked out, and the reason is that there is always practical experience behind it. Use wire of good strength (about No. 16, I think) and cut into 3½-foot lengths. Find the center, and wind around something round, about 4 inches in diameter, leaving twelve inches of each end straight. Wind around one and a half times and bend the ends so they will hold the loop horizontal when the legs are stuck into the soil. Turn up about three inches of the ends so as to give a better foothold in the soil; if the legs are too long for the plants, turn up more. This support can be adjusted from four inches to as large as six inches across the loop, which is large enough for most plants. Another ring is made with longer legs, to support the blooms later on. Some growers use these wire supports only for supporting the body of the plant and later on put on a network of wire and twine to support the blooming stems.

Another system used a good deal is what is known as the Dornier system. After all the weeds are thoroughly cleaned out, get some woven wire fencing about fifteen inches wide. Cut into lengths to reach across the bench, bind into an angle and lay between the rows with each edge resting on the soil close to the plants. After putting these in place, stretch wires between the rows, lengthwise of the bench, and weave a series of diamond-shaped openings all over the bench by running cotton twine diagonally across the bench, wrapping the twine around each wire as you go across the bench. The only objection we have to this method is that it is almost impossible to do any weeding after the wires are put in place.

We use instead of the wire fencing a network of wire and twine, which we like better, as we can get between the plants to work the soil or to pull the weeds, of which there are always a few coming up all through the season. We stretch a wire lengthwise of the bench between each row of plants and another along each edge of the bench, about six inches above the soil, and tie cotton twine straight across the bench (two strings between each row of plants), tying to each outside wire and wrapping once around each wire as you go across. Nail a wooden strip 3x1½ across the bench under the wires, about 20 feet apart, to keep them up off the soil. We used to use wire stretched across, but wire will stretch some, and in a few months the whole thing will be let down a few inches, thus destroying its effectiveness. Before beginning to tie on the strings we measure the length of string required and cut a lot of them the proper length. Now, this suggestion may not be new to you, but some other brother may not have thought of this simple little trick which will save him lots of valuable time. Drive two nails in a bench just one-half the length of your string apart. Tie the end of the string to one of the nails and pass over the other nail and hack until you have a ball of twine used up. Then cut the strand open on one side and you have a hundred strings cut just the same length in less time than it would take to cut ten strings one at a time. One man takes a bunch of these strings and begins on one side, tying to the opposite wire and wrapping around each wire half way across the bench, when another helper takes it up and finishes up by tying to the other outside wire, and so on until the end of the bench is reached. You would be surprised to see how quickly two active lads can get over a bench after having a little practice. At present only one network is required, but later on, when the stems are longer and the buds are heavier, another, and toward spring, on some varieties, a third network will be required to hold the flowers up straight. See that the ends of the wires are fastened securely, so there will be no sagging.

CLOSED AND OPEN SYSTEMS.

About what will be the percentage of increase in the heating capacity of a hot water heater with a closed system over that of an open system?

I have a hot water heater made by a well known Boston concern which is rated to carry 800 square feet of radiating surface and give a temperature of 70 degrees. Last winter it failed to properly heat 480 square feet to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees. The house has but 1,200 square feet of glass.

The expansion tank has an open vent. If I should replace the present tank with a proper closed one with pressure gauge, etc., about how much more heat would I be likely to get? The heater company has had an expert examine the piping system, and he pronounced it faultless. But an article in your last issue has given me a new idea and new hopes.

C. B. Y.

In response to the inquiry of C. B. Y., it would not be possible to state definitely just what percentage of greater efficiency or heating power he could get out of his boiler by changing the piping system from an open to a closed pressure in the case of this house the apparatus should maintain 60 degrees readily.

If C. B. Y. will send a rough drawing of the house in question, showing what parts are of glass, the exposure, etc., also a plan of the boiler and piping with full description of same, I may be able to locate the causes of his inability to maintain the desired heat, in which case I will be pleased to advise him as to his most effective course to reach the desired results.

The Florist Club.

Our regular monthly meetings are on the evenings of the second Thursday of the month, but on account of the S. A. F. convention, our August meeting was postponed till the third Thursday, so as to give the boys who went to Buffalo a chance to express themselves as regards the convention and the Pan-American. All who went to Buffalo were delighted; they enjoyed the trip, were exceedingly well pleased with the convention and the courtesies of the Buffalo florists, and had a real good time at the Pan-American Exposition and at Niagara.

At our September meeting we are to show and discuss seasonal flowers, hardy and tender, and the members have been requested to bring in a little of whatever they have in bloom, as material to talk about.

The Buffalo Convention.

The president's reception. Yes, yes, regarding the propriety of that "orator" business.

If our president would devote a session or a part of one to a discussion of the newer and most important plants, implements, etc., shown by exhibitors, I believe it would be highly interesting to most of us, and if anybody can do this intelligently John Burton can, for he has the practical experience and discriminative knowledge. These exhibits could be selected by the judges of awards. For instance, in the line of plants: Take one or two of those very brightly colored crotons, Wittbold's fern, any little known palms or other plants and set them on the president's desk, and he shall take them up, one at a time, and, say, ask how the crotons were colored, how the fern was adapted for several purposes, who grew the palm successfully and how, how many years gladioli could be grown on the same ground without deterioration, etc. In reply we would get experience from all over the country. The same with flower pots, kinds of hose, appliances for heating wagons, glazing, and many other things. We do this at our club meetings and we have fine meetings, and everybody says something; the quietest among us will answer a question, but to ask us to write a paper or make a speech would scare us half out of our wits.

BUFFALO.

The Convention.

Last week appeared like a calm after the storm. Yet we were by no means lonesome and had quite a sprinkling of the florist visitors well into the middle of the week, and a few stragglers can yet be found.

We have had no business meeting yet and no opportunity to throw bouquets at each other for any efforts that we made to make the convention a success. Where all tried their best it would be bad taste to single out any for special praise; still I won't offend any by saying that we owe much to Charles H. Keitsch for his able work in managing the trade exhibit. Kasting has no equal as a raiser of the sinews of war, which is most important of all. Braik put his whole soul and body into the sports. Adams worked like a Trojan to get everybody comfortably housed, and did it, I believe. Legg stuck to his post as secretary most faithfully and ably. And for a good all round worker, here, there and everywhere, not for honors or publicity, but for the good of everybody, Charlie Guenther takes the cake. A club of twenty-five members with the earnestness, industry and usefulness of Mr. Guenther could rise to any achievement.

Business.

It seems to me that business is much above the average for this unusually very dull time. Gladioli, asters and sweet peas are the principal stock in trade, with a sprinkling of roses. Of Kaiserin there are plenty. None of our local growers plant out many Cochet. The pink is beautiful, but the white is even more valuable. More carnations should also be planted out of doors early and by this time would be giving us any amount of flowers.

An indispensable article just now is the Japan lily. I would advise anyone to have a crop of these started as late sure system, but assuming that the boiler he has is designed, constructed and fired as a slow combustion boiler, he can, undoubtedly, add to its heating power, by increasing the draft and consequently the temperature of the fire.

It seems to me that a boiler manufactured by a reputable concern and rated by them to heat 800 feet of radiation should certainly be able to heat the house described as containing but 1,200 feet of glass, and that the 480 feet of radiation in the pipe coils should readily maintain a night temperature of 50 degrees, assuming that the pipes are properly arranged and installed, in fact unless there is some very unusual element of expos-

Brother Scott, for mercy's sake, drop it!

John Burton is an honor to our business, and right glad I am that he has been elected our president. As well as being most successful in business, his sterling honesty and manliness are proverbial over the whole country.

On to Asheville! No, not from Pittsburgh. We went in force to Buffalo, but we cannot do so to Asheville. We ourselves are to blame, however. Had we all stood by the society and attended to our business in the convention hall, instead of running around the parks and the Pan-American in convention hours, this would not have happened. I admit my guilt. And I have very ugly ideas as March. We bought 500 quite late. They had kept in the original cases perfectly and are now coming grandly and just what we want for bunches.

Various Items.

The growers of the neighborhood have been busy lifting their carnations and most of the houses at Coriú and Lancaster are filled.

The many friends of Prof. J. F. Cowell will be glad to hear that the sudden illness with which he was attacked during convention week has entirely disappeared and "Richard is himself again," or rather Frank.

that I was at all nervous over, thinking possibly they would not be a success, but we are now assured they will later make a fine effect.

The bed of ornamental grasses by Henry A. Dreer is now at its best and much admired. There are several beds of tubercous rooted begonias. Most people are afraid to trust these in the broad sun, but with careful watering, followed by a stirring of the soil, they promise to be just as brilliant as geraniums. Among geraniums "Le Soleil" is still keeping up its remarkable flowering qualities. Nothing in a scarlet can be better. "Pasteur" is also grand.

of Sylvania, Ohio. But by far the largest exhibit is that of H. H. Groff, of Suncoc, Ontario. Mr. Groff planted out 150,000 bulbs especially for the Pan-American and when they are exhausted his associate, Mr. Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., has 28 acres more to draw from. Some 10,000 spikes are continually on exhibition and the number of varieties, the marvelous markings and coloring of the flowers, are truly wonderful. A very pleasant incident in connection with this gladiolus show, but which is absolutely authentic, is the fact that a lady on seeing these gladiolus went across the aisle to the telegraph

Capt. Braik has discovered that shooting off 100 rounds of shell entirely unfits you for bowling. It deadens the muscle. While this is the case with some of us it worked differently on John Burton. Any excuse is better than none.

Pan-American Items.

It seems rather soon to be telling the florists what is to be seen at the Pan-American, but after all there are thousands who were not here and who I hope will be glad to read in your columns of what we are doing in the horticultural line. On the whole I consider this summer has been very favorable for all outside growth and the past two weeks has made a great improvement in many of the beds and plantations.

The herbaceous borders of Henry A. Dreer are most interesting at this time. Many fine things are in bloom. Cannas, are, of course, about the most showy of the plants. A bed of dwarf "Florence Vaughan," the exhibit of J. C. Vaughan, is particularly attractive just now and so is David Harum: Victory I have spoken of before, a most beautiful flower.

There is nothing finer on the grounds than a large bed of "Tarrytown," the exhibit of F. R. Pierson. This has scarcely the clear, bright scarlet of "McKinley" but is profuse of bloom. It seems to surpass almost any variety. Three other cannas now looking fine are Gen. Washington, a brilliant scarlet; Buttercup, a pure yellow; and Niagara, a variety very much resembling Queen Charlotte. These last three are the exhibit of Conard & Jones.

I am glad to say that dahlias are doing well. These are about the only plants

The nymphaeas on the borders of Mirror Lakes have been for several weeks at their best and I am proud to say that Mr. William Tricker, who has lately paid us a visit, says they could not have done better anywhere. They have added very much to the beauty of these small ornamental sheets of water. The large basin in front of the manufactures building, devoted to hardy nymphaeas, can at least be pronounced a decided success, and with its twenty varieties presents a most beautiful appearance, particularly in the early morning. As many know, we had great difficulty in making these basins hold water. Too large a quantity of water has been needed to keep them up to the right level. This is by no means the conditions for best results. The warm basin, in which are two plants of Victoria Regia and two of Victoria Trickerii, has been fairly successful. The leaves of victoria are now about 4 feet and the exotic nymphaeas are flowering freely. Both are well worth a visit but I am afraid many come to the grounds and do not find them out. Surrounding them is some very ornamental carpet bedding done by Mr. Ulrich.

The large plot devoted to a dozen beds, the exhibit of the Detroit Parks and Boulevards Commission, is now looking very fine and attracts great attention. The gladiolus show in the main horticulture building and north conservatory has been a feature for the past two weeks. We have had exhibits from the Michigan Seed Company, South Haven, Mich., James Vick's Sons, Rochester, a larger exhibit by Peter Henderson & Co., of New York, and several large shipments from the Cushman Gladiolus Co., office and sent this message: "Come to the Pan-American. The gladiolus show is worth the journey alone."

I can scarcely believe that at any time during the whole year will the grounds look any better than they do at the present time. Everything is green and blooming. People are realizing this for the attendance is now up to the 70,000 mark and we look for an increase daily. No florist can afford to miss the Pan-American. I hope to shortly send you an accurate description of all the varieties of cannas that are shown here, beginning with one grower's exhibit and following with the others.

WM. SCOTT.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

We are having a remarkable spell of dull wet weather and in consequence a certain section of the cut flower trade is very dull. Roses can be bought at prices ranging from 50 cents per 100 for the poorest up to $8 for the choicest few of the Victorias, etc. American Beauties are commencing to come in in fairly good quality; $3.00 per dozen is the steady top price for the select whilst the bottom grades are sold on the streets by the Greeks at 5 cents per bunch of six.

Carnations are of course scarce and $1.00 and $1.50 per 100 are asked for the few seen. Cattleyas are also few and far between; from 40 to 60 cents are the market prices. Valley is bringing $3, $4 and $5. White asters have been in fairly good demand; $1.00 per 100 has been given for presentable stock while the colored ones could be had for half the price. Gladioli 50 cents per 100, and Hydrangea paniculata, the poor retailer's greatest friend at present, brings $2.00 per 100. Large quantities of the usual outdoor flowers are obtainable at reasonable prices, the only trouble is that their uses are limited except for summer residences and a few city restaurants and the florists' window.

Various Items.

Without exception in any section of the trade everyone anticipates a very good business the coming season; the prospects in New York never were brighter. The retailers and many of the wholesalers are busy repainting their stores and in many other ways preparing for an increased trade.

Good sized decorative plants are scarce and high and will be more so next winter.

Large shipments of kentias are coming over from Europe and the prices are going to be almost prohibitive for perfect stock. Many early buyers have been already scouring the market and report that as high as $150.00 each has been asked for specimen kentias (mighty good stock to invest in, especially where you rent them out).

American Beauty is going to be the rose par excellence the coming winter and many have greatly extended their cultivation of it. Next year if the steel and glass can be had at any fair price there will be lots more houses erected for Beauty growing.

There is nothing but praise heard for work to make the Madison Square Garden show in October a success. This is a tremendous undertaking, affecting as it surely will floriculture all over the state. A vast amount of money is at stake and something far more than money. The date is early for flowers and for wealthy people to attend but in this effort every gardener and every florist within reasonable travel of this city, eye those from long distances, should be represented by plant or flower. The greatest care should be taken by the club, as no doubt will be the case, that competent and fair judging will prevail. But it isn't the money or the judging; get in the race anyhow.

Pres. W. F. Sheridan presided at the club meeting which was held on Monday, the 12th, and W. J. Stewart acted as secretary in the absence of John Young. J. W. Withers reported progress for the exhibition committee and Mr. O'Mara for the ways and means committee gave a very encouraging report on the financial end. He thought that special donations might cover the entire prize list for the coming show and that the guarantee fund for future shows may be unnecessary. H. Beaulieu made a display of dahlias; the judges requested that he exhibit one named "Alex Wallace," again at next meeting. A press committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Bunyard, Burns and Hafner.

After celebrating the victory on the Buffalo alleys the bowlers adjourned to allow the experts to patch the reputations damaged at the tournament.

J. I. D.

in sold at 2½ cents, a good price for this time of the year; the poorer ones all went at $1 per 100; this price is too high for the quality of the stock. Asters, for the best, 2 cents, and from that price down to 50 cents per 100. Gladioli are very poor; so are tuberosa stalks; these sell at 3 cents per stalk for the best.

There is quite a lot of funeral work and white stuff is in great demand; almost anything is sought to make up the work.

The outlook for a better quality of stock in the near future is promising; the young rose stock is uniformly in very good condition; the carnation plants are looking fair and are making rapid growth, especially those in low ground, where the plants have more moisture; violets in some places are looking good, while at other places the stock is more or less affected by the drought.

Notes.

Mr. Augspurger, of D. Augspurger & Sons, of Peoria, Ill., was in town the past week selling Boston ferns. Mr. Augspurger says that the classified ads. in the Review gave them wonderful results.

Mr. M. L. Dollins, representing The Tropical Plant Co., of Orlando, Fla., was in town last week calling on the trade.

Emil Schray, secretary of the St. Louis Florists' Club, was married last Wednesday to Miss Linda Fortmann, of South St. Louis. The happy couple left the same evening for Buffalo to spend a two weeks' honeymoon. The wedding of Mr. Schray was something of a surprise to his many friends, as he had not generally announced his matrimonial intentions. Mr. and Mrs. Schray will be at home to their friends after September 1 at their newly furnished home opposite Mr. Schray's place of business on Pennsylvania avenue. Congratulations are now in order.

William Lamar, keeper of Forest Park, was married last Thursday afternoon to Miss Marie A. Dubois. After the nuptial knot had been tied Mr. Lamar and bride, accompanied by Park Commissioner Ridgely, took supper at the cottage in the park. Mr. and Mrs. Lamar will reside for the present in Forest Park.

Rudolph Kitchner on last Friday received official notification of his appointment as keeper of City Hall Park and will assume his new duties August 19. Notwithstanding the drought the flower beds and the lawn in the City Hall Park are in excellent condition, which is due to the efforts of Mr. Kitchner.

Mr. George Waldbart, on Grand avenue, reports an excellent business so far this summer. Mr. Waldbart chaperoned a party of five St. Louis florists during the Buffalo convention and all report the best time of their lives.

Mr. C. C. Sanders is very busy of late. He is moving his residence back from its present location. A fine new show house on Clara avenue will be his next move. This will give Mr. Sanders one of the best locations in the West End.

Mr. Theo. Miller, on Delmar avenue, is building a new office on the side of his greenhouse store, which will give him the necessary room he is in need of.

Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, is in town and is booking lots of orders as the result of their fine display at the convention.

John W. Kunz, with H. G. Berning, is off on a two weeks' vacation.

Emil Schray and bride, who were on their way to Buffalo, were recalled by the Bison boys and girls. New Yorkers greatly appreciate all that was done to make their visit to Buffalo a pleasant one. There is a general "kick myself" feeling attached to every member owing to the Asheville tragedy but as the sentence is far away the thing is beginning to assume a philosophic shape. Pollworth may have been defeated but St. Louis would have trouble for 1903 should we go to Milwaukee next August.

Club Meeting.

New York florists wasted no time for rest after returning from Buffalo. It may be said that the members of the club went to the club rooms from the train almost and at once retackled the

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market conditions remain unchanged and the past week saw more flowers than the business needed. I don't remember of ever seeing so many poor flowers in this market as at present. The demand is good but stock so poor that the retailer does not care to invest, as it is better to refuse orders than carry poor stock and lose trade. Of course some very good stock is coming in but not nearly enough to go around.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been in fair shape for the past two weeks, an occasional very busy hour being sandwiched between the quiet ones. There is undoubtedly more business done now than in past years at this time. The increase is chiefly in design work. Beauties are improving in quality and stem and there are more of them. Edwin Lonsdale is sending in some very nice blooms of this rose to S. S. Pennock. The price is $2.50 per doz. for fine flowers with 24-inch stems and ranges down to 50 cents per doz. for short stemmed, poor or open flowers. Meteors, Carnots, Maids, Brides and La France can be had in limited quantities of fair grade at $3 to $4 per 100; seconds, from $2 per 100 down; choice Kaisersins bring $4 to $6 per 100. Leo Niessen is receiving some nice (for this season) white carnations. The best bring $1.50 per 100; ordinary grades, $1 per 100.

Asters are very plentiful and sell pretty well at $1 to $1.50 for good stuff; the poorer ones don't sell. A few Semples are to be seen and have the call. Lily of the Valley is in demand at $3 and $4 per 100 for firsts. Some of it is nice but there is some trouble with damping due probably to the moist weather. Greens are rather scarce; those that come in sell pretty well at about last quotations.

Various Notes.

S. S. Pennock is receiving some very fine Meteors from Charles L. Price, of Lansdowne.

Adolph Fahrenwald, of Hillside, James Anderson, of Garrettford and Charles W. Cox are all cutting a few new crop Beauties; the first two ship to S. S. Pennock.

W. J. Baker is, and has been, receiving a very good grade of asters.

Leo Niessen is receiving some nice long stemmed Beauties from David Anderson of Garrettford.

This city has been visited by some extraordinarily heavy rains this week. Monday saw two tremendous downpours which caused some damage; railroads were washed out, shipments delayed and houses and cellars inundated.

Riverton.

The lot of the correspondent of a live horticultural paper is not always a happy one. He must know or find out something worth writing about and no matter how busy he may be that something must be put in shape in time, even if it takes him well into the wee small hours; he must lay aside his pipe and he mustn't mind black bugs that drop from the light onto his paper. There are, however, compensating advantages—one of these fell to my lot a few days ago when I had a delightful two hours' ramble with J. D. Eisele over the H. A. Dyer place at Riverton. It is not possible to cover this place intelligently in two hours or probably in two days; but you can get a surprising amount of interesting information in that time when under the care of such a guide. We began in the houses.

Adiantum Bensoniana is a graceful fern believed to have a future before it. It is largely grown about London and is considered as ranking second only to A. Farleyense; unlike the latter it is not a variety for cutting but makes a beautiful specimen, the fronds being shorter than those of A. F. and appear less easily bruised.

Pandanus Sanderii is a prime favorite; it propagates more readily than P. Veitchii, suckering and rooting freely. The cuttings when removed from the parent plant show an embryo root not observed in P. V. which appears to greatly facilitate propagation. The older plants retain their variegation down to the lowest leaf but in summer lose their bronze color; this will return in cooler weather and probably can be retained even during summer under certain conditions. Mr. Eisele feels confident that P. S. is a distinct species. It is expected that the stock will be offered about January 1, 1903.

There are two whole houses of Cibotium Scheidii. A beautiful sight they are. One house is filled with specimens in 7-inch pots; the other with 9-inch pots. Orders are being booked now for delivery October 1, at $1.50 each for the smaller size and $3 and $3.50 each for the larger. This fern is found to be very durable and is unsurpassed for store or home decoration. "Everybody is growing Boston so we have a stock of Nephrolepis davallioides furcans for variety," Mr. Eisele remarked. They promise well and should soon make good plants.

There is a splendid lot of about 130 varieties of hardy phlox in full bloom outside; there are about a dozen distinct colors, the rest being variations. F. G. von Rassberg is a fine white variety considered best for florist's cut flower work. Rudbeckia Golden Glow is also very showy and ought to be found in every garden. A new canna, No. 1164 from Wilhelm Pützer, Stuttgart, Germany, the introducer of Queen Charlotte and many other fine varieties, is very promising. This new canna grows to a height of about 32 or 4 feet, has bronze foliage and bears large flowers of an intense orange scarlet. This canna is more than likely to prove of great value. It will be given another year's trial.

Abutilon Crimson Rose, has a fine large flower. There is also a clear yellow flowering abutilon with large petals that is very distinct.

Cymucheia acuta, a vigorous climber, in its second year, catches minute insects, alas not mosquitoes, in its hairy florets. Whether this is done for sport or for a living is in course of examination.

Much pleasure is felt regarding Clematis Durandi, a pale blue of the large flowering hybrid class. This variety is believed to be entirely free from the diseases so prevalent among clematis of this class. Mr. Eisele considers these hybrid clematises most discouraging to florists and amateurs alike. They are often sent out in perfect condition and soon after being received and planted they have fallen victims to a fungous disease. It is to be hoped that this variety is but the pioneer in a class of practically disease proof clematis.

Among the hardy perennials whose flowers are not yellow, quite a recommendation to most florists, Stokesia cymnea is considered a valuable blue flower for cutting, superior to Scabiosa. Delphinium Charles Reade, is now producing its second crop of bloom. This plant produces a blue flower somewhat like mignonette in form and borne on long stems ranging from 12 to 15 inches.

Solanum jasminum is a good white summer bloomer that ought to become more popular among our florists; it looked very well here. Two dracaenas in form resembling D. indivisa but with different foliage next claimed our attention. D. Decucci has variegated green and white foliage; D. Lentig has bronze foliage; both will surely become popular when they are better known.

Cocos Bonnetti is thought to be a wonderful outdoor palm, better than any phoenix. A very fine specimen is to be seen; the price is necessarily high as in the case of all large cocons.

Quite a lot of 5 and 6-inch camellias are grown for shipping south. They are now plunged in ashes outdoors under a high slate roof.

Three acres are being added to the aquatic plant. The ponds now in course of construction will be larger than the present series of ponds. James Brydon is considered the ideal nymphaea of today. The aquatic department has met with encouraging support, especially from parks and large private places.

Gross an Teplitz, called the Crimson Hermosa, is a rose that it is believed will prove popular as a florist's rose for pot sales.

There was not time to examine the canna fields and many other things before the good steamer Columbia appeared and carried off many boxes of growing freight tagged for far distant points, and also these hasty notes.

Honors won at Buffalo.

Philadelphia is justly proud of her sons. Cups, trophies, prizes galore have they brought home from the national convention at Buffalo. The Henry A. Dreer Company captured the silver cup for a fine 400-foot display of palms and ferns which, by the way, will not return to Riverton. Then Charles D. Ball, M. Rice & Co., Robert Craig & Son, H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and many more did exceedingly well, winning honors with their displays. It was in the sports, however, that her sons shone most brilliantly, bringing home nearly all the bowling and shooting prizes, as a glance at the scores will show.

John Burton's election as first president of the S. A. F. O. H. under the new charter is a very gratifying to Philadelphia. Mr. Burton is one of our very best men, representative of thoroughly up-to-date horticulture, and a man who can and will make the Asheville meeting a success.

Philadelphia thanks Buffalo for her hospitality with all her heart. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market is somewhat easier, especially on roses. More carnations are coming in but the quality is not improved. However, the recent rains have been of benefit to the plants. The whites have averaged better in quality than the colored ones.

Prices hold up firmly on the best qualities of roses and carnations but are easier on the poorer grades. Good Brides and Maids go at $3 to $4 while poorer ones are offered at as low as $1, and we hear of a sale of some very extra Kaiserins at as much as $7. The supply of Beauties has nearly doubled during the past week and the quality has considerably improved. Good shorts bring $4 to $6 while those with 12-inch stems are held at $1 a dozen and the longer ones up to $2. Some good Liberties are being cut and they sell well at $4, $6 and $8 per 100. Carnations still range from $1 to $1.50. Fancy asters are in good demand at $1.50 per 100, and occasionally $2 is obtained for a few very extra, but the poorer grades are not wanted at any price. Gladiolus are still a glut and pretty fair spikes are offered at as low as $1 a hundred.

Various Items.

Mr. C. L. Washburn and family will return this Thursday from Athelstone, Wis., where they have been resting and fishing.

W. E. Lynch is missing from E. H. Ihant's and is enjoying his vacation. Mrs. Lynch recently returned from a three-months' absence in the east and he will need a little time to get acquainted with her again.

Kennicut Bros. Co. have recently purchased eleven tons of wrapping paper and twelve tons of newspapers for the coming season's business. They are evidently planning for a generous increase in trade.

Walter Mott, representing Henry A. Dreer, was a recent visitor.

A meeting of the bowling club will be held in the near future and action taken on the result of the Buffalo tournament.

The hardy garden at Lincoln Park is now gay with phloxes and sunflowers. Some of the beds of hardy roses are again in bloom—but not the roses. Gladioli had been planted among the bushes and their spikes of flowers are now making the beds attractive.

Mr. Arthur Newell, of Kansas City, stopped a day here on his way home from the convention.

ADVANCING FLORICULTURE.

All who have inspected the displays in the department of floriculture at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo are loud in their praise of the splendid work accomplished by Mr. William Scott. It has been educational to many florists as well as to the general public and its value in the advancement of floriculture in America can hardly be estimated.

The profession is certainly to be warmly congratulated that such an able gardener and capable manager has charge of this display at the exposition, and the thanks of the whole trade are certainly due Mr. Scott for the sacrifices he has made in order that floriculture should be adequately and properly represented. Only such a broad-gauge generous and public-spirited man as Mr. Scott could be induced to practically turn over his own large business interests to other hands in order that he might be free to give his full thought and time to a work that is purely for the general good.

We are pleased that the Society of American Florists has recognized this and honored itself as well as Mr. Scott in a set of resolutions, which are to be engrossed and which will no doubt be among Mr. Scott's most treasured possessions.

Now is the time for the florists of St. Louis to make sure that floriculture will be in capable hands during its exposition. Don't wait until the political wire pullers have filled the position with an incompetent man whose only ambition is to draw a salary. See that your very best man is offered the appointment and bring pressure to induce him to accept it.

A REMARKABLE AFFINITY.

Rudd made a speech for Milwaukee, but he half admitted sub rosa that he voted for Asheville. Did you ever notice the remarkable affinity that man has for the side he thinks is going to win?—G. C. WATSON in American Florist, Aug. 17.

[We refuse to believe that Mr. Rudd would play such a trick on his Milwaukee friends—at least until we have further information as to what Mr. Deake brought with him from Asheville.]

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Mr. W. B. Paterston, of the Rosemont Gardens, reports business since Jan. 1 last as double that of any former year for same period. His stock is in excellent condition. All the roses have been planted for some time and he is getting ready to house his carnations, of which he has 12,000 plants in the field, all in the pink of condition.

NEW ORLEANS.—At the recent annual meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society officers were elected as follows: Jas. Newsham, president; L. Lapouyard, vice-president; D. Newsham, secretary; John Eblen, treasurer. At the supper which followed much enthusiasm was manifested regarding the coming fall exhibition.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Miss Eleanor A. Ormerod, the noted entomologist and botanist, died Aug. 9. She was unique among women. Last year the University of Edinburgh conferred upon her the honorary degree of LL. D. Miss Ormerod being the only woman who has thus been honored.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—A new range of glass is to be built at the Florida Agricultural College. The main building will have a frontage of 60 feet by 45 deep over all. The center dome will be 30 feet high; wings 12x16. The entrance will be of brick and will be 38x16 feet.

HELENA, MONT.—The Salt Lake Floral Co. has been incorporated here by W. B. Hamilton, G. L. Templeton and W. D. Mangon of Butte. Capital stock, $25,000. The company will have a branch in Anaconda.

OAK PARK, ILL.—The Fair Oaks Nursery Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $30,000. The incorporators are Edw. Payson, A. E. Berry and R. K. Bickford.

THADEN'S WIRE TENDRIL.

Adapted to horizontal wires as well as stakes for Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, etc.

We claim that the tendril does not crowd the plant, but holds it firmly and with freedom. Does not mutilate the foliage. Harbors no insects. Makes the plant come to a straight stem. Admits of free circulation of air. Requires no skilled labor to place properly. Can be rolled up or down the stakes. Easily put on and easily taken off, and are durable. Sample package of 100 prepaid for 10 cents.

SAN FRANCISCO.

Business is very dull and to make things worse the great labor strike still exists and the port is practically tied up. Money is a scarce article during the present troubles between capital and labor, as all kinds of business is affected.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its third meeting on Aug. 5 at Mission Opera House, Mission street, San Francisco. This society was organized at San Francisco on July 1 with sixteen charter members. At the second meeting thirty-four members were present, and at the third meeting held on the 5th the membership list had run up to eighty and the charter was voted as closed. The Chinese, Japanese and "the ladies" will not be admitted to membership. We can well dispense with the Chinese and Japs and would be better pleased if they were in another planet, but it seems a little hard on the ladies to bar them from the society. Perhaps the members who voted against the ladies were afraid their mothers-in-law would get a chance to sit alongside them at the meetings and put a bridle on their tongues, or perhaps the tobacco smoke and "hot air" would be more than they could stand. However, there are times when the boys like to be alone, so I guess the meetings of our society will be part of those times. The majority has it.

Some time in September a dahlia show will be held, by the members only, and $7.50 will be offered as prize money. Seven exhibitors are expected.

At the meeting J. Thomson, gardener for Mr. Lloyd Tevis, made an exhibit of cactus dahlias, named. The blooms were splendid and much admired by all present.

Mr. Wm. Eldrege, gardener for W. H. Crocker, made a display of pansies that were simply magnificent, the finest I ever saw in colors and they were much admired by the members.

A chrysanthemum show is proposed for October but whether it will be a public show or for members only is yet to be determined.

The following gentlemen were elected to act as officers for three months beginning from July 1: President, H. Platts; vice-president, Wm. Eldrege; recording secretary, H. H. Lilienthal; financial secretary, Chas. F. Fick; treasurer, P. Cauhape; librarian, Fred Cleis; ushers, Chas. Winkel and G. Gagne.

All gardeners, florists, growers and seedsmen on the Pacific coast ought to become members of this new society because it will be a benefit to one and all. The seedsmen and florists will know its benefit by being known among private gardeners, etc., and the working gardener and grower will know its benefit by coming in touch with employers of gardeners and growers. Flower shows will be held in season and every man will have a chance to show what he can do as a grower, and liberal cash prizes will be offered at all shows for well-grown plants and blooms of high merit.

San Francisco has been long in want of just such an organization. In fact it was the only large city in the United States that was without one. So get together, boys, and make our society what it no doubt will be, one of the best in America. J. N.

BOSTON.

Much the same old story. Roses, gladioli, dark colored asters and a few outdoor blooms, like hydrangea, rudbeckia etc., are quite plentiful. Good pinks, sweet peas, light colored asters, lilies, customers and money quite inclined to be scarce. Surely no awakening of business yet but many are dropping home from vacations either with hopes of such conditions soon or else because funds run low! Which is it?

Mann Brothers, of Randolph, are making something of a specialty of a new variety of the Liliun auratum. Its chief characteristics are extra size and strength of plant and blossom, with yellow flecks in place of the brown ones in older varieties. They call it the Liliun auratum virginialis and claim to be sole owners of anything of the kind in America. J. S. MANTER.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

A meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held July 25, President J. W. Smith presiding. A communication was read from the department of agriculture through Mr. Ligg in regard to the digging wasp "Megastis speciosus" which has been more numerous this year than usual giving many much trouble and annoyance. Discussions followed as to the best methods of exterminating the same.

Mr. Robert Donald, of Youkers, was elected to membership and Mr. George Middleton, of Tarrytown, was proposed. Mr. McFarlane read an essay on "Small Fruits" and a discussion followed, many taking part. A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. McFarlane for his able paper. Schedules for the November show were then distributed.

CLOSED OUT ALL STOCK.

A few words in regard to your classified ads. Last year, late in the season, we had a surplus stock of some considerable thousands of asters on hand, and had about concluded the season was over, but your classified ads, coming to our notice, although we are rather conservative in regard to new things, we were so reasonable that there could not be but a small loss if we received no returns. The effect was that we closed out all the stock and returned some cash to customers whose orders we could not fill.—A. & G. Rosbach, Pemberton, N. J., June 11, 1900.

A GREAT PULLER.

Your paper is a great puller to sell plants. I could have sold double the amount that I had. I shall always advertise in the Review when I have anything to sell.—J. F. Brown, Knights-town, Ind.

SOLD OUT.

Please state in your next issue that I am sold out of asters. Have had to return orders, though I had a large supply. I lay it all to the Florists' Review adv.—T. C. BRECKE, West Berlin, O.

CLEANED HIM OUT.

Please discontinue my adv. under head of Geraniums until further notice. Wish I had stock to supply the demand. Will send you copy for more ads. soon.—S. W. PIRE, St. Charles, Ill.

SOLD 20,000.

Through your valuable advertising medium I am all sold out of 20,000 plants from 3-inch.—W. C. ROCKWELL, Bradford, Pa.

CLASSIFIED ADVS. O. K.

Please discontinue my adv. in REVIEW, as plants are all sold. The classified ads. are O. K.—HARVEY B. SNOW, Camden, N. Y.

THANKS FOR RESULTS.

Many thanks for results from adv. Had to turn down many orders. Sold out so clean could supply only about one-half that the orders called for.—J. N. KIDD, St. Joseph, Mo.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Convention.

The convention is over and all unite in the verdict that we had a glorious time and that too much praise cannot be given the Buffaloes who did so much to contribute to the general good time indulged in by all visiting delegates. The trade exhibit was highly educational and reflects great credit on those who contributed that feature of the convention.

Everything was satisfactory but Asheville. I was one of those who wore a "bright spot button" but with numerous other "bright spots" did the Pan-American on Wednesday instead of attending the meeting. Had we been attending to business the result might have been different. We must be careful in the future and not be caught napping again.

The resolution offered by J. C. Remison, allowing no one but a florist to recommend the selection of the next meeting place was highly proper and to be commended. The S. A. F. O. H. should go one step further and have the place of the next meeting voted on at the same session at which the officers are elected.

We gracefully submit the next meeting place to Asheville, the "City of the Skies." We will be there and may it not be a grateful change from a bustling metropolitan city to the superb grandeur of the justly famed beautiful city?

Trade Conditions.

Trade is very quiet. The summer lull is on at last. Roses, while not plentiful, are equal to the slight demand and are steadily growing better in quality. There are some pretty good Beauties being cut with fairly good stems; just at present they are feeling the effects of a dull day. Carnations are scarce.

Crabb & Hunter have four carnation houses planted and will have their large Irene house planted this week.

All field grown stock in this vicinity is looking fine. G. F. C.

BETTER RETURNS.

We will candidly say we have had better returns from ads. in the REVIEW than in any other publication.—NANZ & NEUNER, Louisville, Ky.

ELWOOD, IND.—William H. Woerner is building a new rose house 18x113 feet, the walls being erected of the building blocks. Mr. Woerner used these blocks in the walls of a house erected last year and finds they make an excellent greenhouse wall. They are hollow and the dead air space is a great help in keeping out the cold.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

After reading Mr. Wm. Scott's Manual, we wish to say that we consider it without equal as a book of reference for busy florist material. GEORGE M. KELLOGG, Pleasant Hill, Mo.

Mr. Scott's superb work, "The Florists' Manual," was indeed worth waiting for. When compared with the amount of practical information it contains, the selling price, $5.00, seems a mere bagatelle. Oakland, Md. H. WEBER & SONS.

It is the best book of the kind ever published. There is more in it than in any other book I have ever seen. JOHN THORPE, Chicago.

The copy of the "Florists' Manual" was duly received. I am very well pleased with same. The more I read it the better satisfied I am with it, and there are one or two articles alone in it that are each worth all you ask for the book, for everything is made so plain and all details are right to the point. I trust you may have a good and ready sale for the same. M. S. WORDEN, North Adams, Mass.

The only fault to be found with it is when you get reading it the midnight oil is liable to run low and you have to go on to gas or reluctantly break off, either going to bed or first taking a look over the houses to see if the temperature tallies with the Manual. Hartford, Conn. GEO. S. OSBORN.

We are in receipt of "The Florists' Manual," by Mr. Scott, and may say it is the right book for the florist, published at the right time. It is what we all need. Rutherford, N. J. ROBBINK & ATKINS.

I am much pleased with the Manual. It is just what I have been looking for. Something that we can understand, and enjoy reading. Etna, Pa. M. NAUMAN.

I am very much pleased with the Manual. It is just what we have needed for a long time. Milwaukee, Wis. N. ZWEIFEL.

It is certainly a neat and handsome book and you credit. BENJAMI, HAMMOND, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

It is a work of art and should be in the hands of all live florists. Its useful and interesting contents cannot fail to be a benefit to all in the trade. C. C. POLLWORTH CO., Milwaukee, Wis.

I greatly appreciate the Florists' Manual. It is a splendid treatise. JOHN WELSH YOUNG, Germantown, Pa.

The Florists' Manual is worth five times the price. It is just what a busy florist wants. Columbus, O. B. BUEHLER & SON.

Am well pleased with the Manual. It is a practical, everyday helper, concise and to the point. Milwaukee, Wis. W. A. KENNEDY.

Am very much pleased with the book; it is very handy for reference. Macon, Ill. F. E. BONHAM.

Unlike so many of our books, it has the very flavor and essence of actual experience. Ithaca, N. Y. L. H. BAILEY.

We find the book very useful as a reference in answering the many questions about plants that we receive almost every day. Philadelphia. JOS. KIFT & SON.

We have gotten much valuable information from the Florists' Manual and are highly pleased. Franklin, Tenn. TRUETT BROS.

The Florists' Manual is a gem. No florist could afford to be without it. Madison, N. J. A. J. BAUR.

If everyone has enjoyed your work as I have it is a successful publication. It is different from our usual horticultural works, being plain and concise—just what one wants. Flushing, N. Y. H. D. DARLINGTON.

I am more than pleased with the Florists' Manual. OTT BROWN, Cape May City, N. J.

Manual to hand. Am well satisfied that it is the best work of its kind ever published. Joliet, Ill. JAS. HARTSHORN.

No progressive florist, old or young, can afford to be without the Florists' Manual. The old florist needs it, for reference, to aid a defective memory, and the young florist wants it as a guide in this progress of our Florists' business. J. T. TEMPLE, Davenport, Ia.

The Commissioners of Parks and Boulevards some time since directed that a library be started of such books as deal with subjects pertaining to park work, and to that end an order has been given for a number of books, among which is your "The Florists' Manual," which you are sending me. After reading this book carefully, I am greatly pleased, and wish to congratulate you on the practical manner with which you have treated the subject.

The book is placed where it will be accessible to all of our greenhouse employes, where this board expects to reap a reward many times the cost of the book. Respectfully yours, COMMISSIONERS OF PARKS AND BOULEVARDS, E. J. CORYELL, Gen'l Supt., Detroit, Mich.

The book is written for the working gardener, and Mr. Scott's reputation is so well secured that he will find among his gardening friends a host of genuine admirers. As a writer on practical gardening subjects, he is a recognized authority. * * * Mr. Scott has long been an employer and knows what information young gardeners, or those with little experience, need, and he has his whole subject so perfectly at command that he can give the most desirable and essential information in the clearest language and with satisfactory brevity. The book is a distinct and important gain to the practical garden literature of this country, and it should be in the hands of every gardener, and everyone else engaged or interested in ornamental horticulture. The price of the book is $5, which seems somewhat high, but for useful information it is worth every cent of it.—Vick's Magazine

Florists' Manual, by William Scott. Publishers, Florists' Publishing Company, Chicago. Price, $5.
From advance sheets of the Florists' Manual, kindly sent us by the publishers, as well as from those which have appeared from time to time in the trade press, we have formed an idea of the general scope and usefulness of Mr. Scott's book, and we now hail with a great deal of satisfaction the work as a completed whole. Several handbooks of a more or less similar nature, dealing with commercial plant culture in America, or some portions of it rather, have been placed on the market; but the teachings which they convey have, as the years rolled by, become to a greater or less extent obsolete, owing to the continued mutability in methods, etc. So that the Manual containing, as it does, matter which is strictly up-to-date, and thoroughly practical, should meet with a ready acceptance among all engaged in the industry upon which it treats. The caliber of Mr. Scott's instructions, in matters horticultural, is too well known to need any special commendation at our hands; suffice it to say that the same soundness of doctrine, and masterful handling of material, which we have generally characterized the text of the book now before us. Nearly 200 individual items are discussed, viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among the florists, and commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting the needs of their particular class through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small space confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not nearly so obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Mechan's Monthly.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, Florists' Publishing Co., Chicago. A reference book for commercial florists.

The author's first aim in preparing this work was to fill a long felt want among florists—a book describing the best plants commercially, with cultural advice founded on experience. Viewed in this light, it is a valuable and instructive work, very complete in its details. But it need not be confined to circulation among the florists, and commercially connected, although gardeners and amateurs need not expect in it a work exactly fitting the needs of their particular class through the author's own words, i. e.: "If those who favor us with a perusal of its pages glean only one hint which may help them * * * they will have received value for their money." A work resulting from Mr. Scott's long and varied experience, "from selling a bunch of violets over the counter to planting a tree or seeding a lawn or building a greenhouse," cannot but throw out many hints of value to any one interested in any line of horticulture or flower gardening. The comparatively small space confronting the reviewer at first is far from encouraging, but as the purpose of the author is more clearly brought to light, it is better appreciated. It shows the intention to treat of the most desirable and profitable things to handle—a condensation which many will enjoy. Many interesting subjects are brought to headings, such as "Easter Plants," "Watering," "Decorations," "Potting," "Bedding Plants," etc. Not the least of value to the possessor of this book are the beautiful half-tone illustrations, numbering more than 100, and critical persons may object to the interspersing of advertisements with the reading matter, though it is not nearly so obtrusive; yet it must be remembered that the work is designed for commercial purposes, and not strictly as a library book.—Mechan's Monthly.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL...

By WM. SCOTT

IS A BOOK of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review) and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal and experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

CINCINNATI

Various Notes.

We are now having what might be called ideal summer weather. While there has not been a heavy rainfall, frequent showers keep the temperature cool and have brought that green, fresh look back to vegetation.

Carnations are beginning to show some life again, and asters are coming nicely. The better varieties of cut asters are coming in and bring from 2 to 3 cents. Roses have advanced from 3 to 4 cents and now the very best go at 5 cents. The market in general is on the advance.

The stores have all been busy with funeral work, so white flowers have been most in demand, but colors are not far behind.

Mr. J. W. C. Deake and his aunt left this city last night for their home. As might be expected, Mr. Deake is elated over his success in having Asheville chosen as the next meeting place of the S. A. F. O. H.

Mr. Harry Papworth, of New Orleans, passed through this city Thursday on his way home.

Large crowds visited the city greenhouses in Eden Park Saturday night and Sunday to see a Victoria Regia which is now in bloom. As this is the only plant of that variety in this city it is quite a novelty to the public.

A Visit to Dayton.

The writer was in Dayton, Ohio, last week and while there visited the establishment of Harry Altick. Mr. Altick is devoting his entire space to carnations and chrysanthemums, and he is to be congratulated on the excellent condition of his plants. He has almost finished housing his carnations, and I have never seen better plants. Mr. Altick lost several thousand geranium plants in a large fire at Fairview Park. They were used in beds and were a total loss.

Mr. Alva Kauffman has decided to discontinue business owing to failing health. He was doing a very large retail business and it proved to be too much for him. His place is for sale.

Mr. H. H. Ritter and daughter are in the east on a trip. They will visit New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Atlantic City. Mr. Ritter has a model establishment. Everything is looking first class and points to another prosperous year.
 C. J. ÖHMER.

OTTUMWA, IOWA.—Clarence Kranz has just completed the erection of two new houses, one 22x200 for roses and one 16 x200 for general plant stock. His roses are planted and in fine shape. Field carnations were dry, but rain has been frequent recently and stock is now in good condition to bench.

MARQUETTE, MICH.—The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railway has decided to erect greenhouses in connection with the new depot here. A park will be laid out around the station building and greenhouses.

GUESSING CONTEST AT BUFFALO.

In the guessing contest inaugurated by McKellar & Winterson, Chicago, in which they offered a prize of $10.00 to the one guessing nearest to the number of pins made by the bowler having the highest individual score in any one game at the tournament held Saturday, August 10, at Buffalo, there were 260 guesses that came from about eighteen states, Illinois leading with 76, New York, 62; Pennsylvania, 28; Maryland, 22; Wisconsin, 25; Ohio, 10; the rest distributed in smaller numbers among the states of Arkansas, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Rhode Island, Missouri, Nebraska, Kentucky, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Michigan.

There were seven who guessed the correct number—213 pins—viz: E. Schloss, 533 Broadway, New York; J. Austin Shaw, 271 Broadway, New York; Mrs. T. F. Lang, 670 Sixth Avenue, New York; Thos. Wallis, Chicago; P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; Wm. Christie, Baltimore; Jos. E. Pollworth, Milwaukee, among whom the prize will be divided.

The one who made the 213 score, Wm. R. Gibson, of Philadelphia, guessed 225, Miss Hester Gibson was nearer, with 215.

Plant Registration.

P. J. Berckmans Co., Augusta, Ga., register new rose Climbing Clothilde Souperet, a sport from Clothilde Souperet; originated in their nursery in 1896; flowers one and one-half to two inches in diameter, very double. White with rose or light carmine center; a perpetual bloomer; rapid, willowy growth; foliage same as Clothilde Souperet.

The Michigan Seed Co., South Haven, Mich., by E. S. Thompson, manager, register gladiolus Park Belle; color illuminated pink; growth, dwarf, 2 to 2½ feet; flowers, spreading; characteristics, permanent for the past nine years.

WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Trade has been very good for this season, running 50 per cent better than last summer. All are cutting a goodly supply of fair roses but no carnations.

L. J. Stuppy has just finished two new houses and has them planted with the newest carnations, including Marquis and Lawson, which did well with him last year, Marquis making the finest flowers ever seen in this locality. Roses, mums and violets all planted a month ago.

J. N. Kidd and family are in Manitou, Colo. Mr. Kidd suffered a severe illness lately but is much improved.

Frank Stuppy is making preparations to spend September in Montana in search of big game.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The Rhode Island Horticultural Society has issued its premium list for the annual chrysanthemum show to be held next November. Copies may be had by addressing the secretary, Mr. C. W. Smith, 61 Westminster St., this city.

KEWANEE, ILL.—Two new greenhouses are being erected by Hamilton & Plummer, one 20x100 and one 20x75.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Pencil Points.]

Never be in doubt as to whether you should repaint your store or not. If it only half way needs it, do it. There's nothing like a clean bright store or office. No more shelves or dust collectors in modern florists' stores; nothing but a good ice-box, counter and choice furnishings. Unsightly and seldom required supplies are kept out of sight.

There is nothing like a change. It may be for better or worse, but the world of today requires it. See if you cannot change something about your store for the better. Most florists are busy just now with vacations or alterations; both should be attended to at once.

The coming season will be like many lives, a short and a merry one. This will be particularly so in large cities. Country life is yearly becoming more attractive to the rich American, and in consequence the cut flower trade suffers. It is in very many cases doubtful whether the florist doing a good steady trade among poor people is not better off than he who caters only to the rich.

We'll soon have the auction rooms agoing to get the cash for growers' coal bills. There will be big bargains on small stock as usual early in the season, but the man with only his store had better be careful; only those who have glass can afford to plunge. This also applies to newly imported stock, it must become established and acclimated before it will stand the wear and tear and dust and draughts of store usage.

If you are growing ivies out of pots in the field, dig the largest up at once and pot them; careful handling will get them in fair condition by the time they are wanted. Newly potted plants are of little value for retail work. Many growers "plunge" their ivies and thus have them ready at all times. There will be a good demand for large ivies this winter.

California privet (Ligustrum ovalifolium) has become a very popular box and tub plant in New York; it is a cheap, safe and an immediately effective screen. The possibilities with this material are great; not all can afford to pay the price demanded for bay trees, and in their case privet is a good substitute. Shapely specimens, well furnished with smaller plants at bottom, and grown in presentable tubs, will sell well next season; retail nurserymen may make a note of this, but be sensible in price.

There has been a steady demand for good sized Boston ferns all this summer and in the future it promises to be even greater than ever. Growers will do well to prepare for a continuous supply of good, cool grown specimens of this grand decorative plant.

You can scarcely get anything more effective than a well furnished hanging basket of Asparagus Sprengeri; the great value of this plant is not yet recognized; the time will come when it will be better grown and more generally used, and its greatest worth is seen when in hanging baskets.

Get your freesias in if you want them when most valuable.

Carnations will be later than usual this season, but promise to be of finer quality.

Supply men inform us that the immortal crop has been a total failure. This news comes at a time when we were going to advise our readers to get up their stars and bells for Christmas. They tell us the price of red immortelles has been doubled and that very few are obtainable. Well, Europe needs immortelles more than we do; we can get along without them; all the same we cannot see why this country does not grow, instead of importing, them. Once upon a time small unopened immortelles were considered inferior; now they are most preferred; the dye and the size of the bunch comes before size of flower (in their case) on the American market.

A western man has patented a bouquet pin. It consists of a stick pin attached to a piece of tin on which is fastened a bit of wire; the intent is to wire the stem of the bouquet or flower on to the tin and it is stuck to the garment in the manner of the badge; it is called an invisible bouquet holder or pin. It may be a "go" in some quarters, but our experience has been that the old style is best.

From time to time we notice strange ideas executed in regard to the attachments for wearing flowers; little bottles of water were once carried behind the lapels of coats in which to stick the stems of boutonnières; the custom became general in England, and we are compelled to smile at the recollection of that and other more recent innovations. Thorley, last season, offered an expensive violet pin. It was a short gilt chain and metal violet with fasteners; some people must be distinctive at any cost, but a plain clean pin and quality in flower is good enough for the best.

All who can should see the floral parade at Saratoga, N. Y., the first week in September. Some vile things no doubt will be seen, but some pretty ones also, and much of interest in general. An immense amount of flowers are used for this occasion. African marigolds are extensively grown for groundwork on floats, etc. The great trouble with the Saratoga annual fete is that florists will do the work for almost nothing in order to get it away from one another. Pity where there is so much spring water there should be so much foolishness.

We notice that there have been more floral fetes and floral dances this year throughout the country than ever before, but fear they have been more of the artificial than natural material kind; we expect it to be so till the florist takes his proper place.

There is just a little too much of that misty north and south business introduced into arguments anent florists' conventions. There is no north and south in ability or principle. New Orleans, Atlanta or any of the florists' centers of the south would have been more acceptable to the majority, but what can't be cured must be endured.

We saw finer and better varieties of sweet peas on Main street, Buffalo, this summer than we did on Broadway, New York; and more white asters in Kastinger's store one day than in any other store in the state. Strange, very strange, we saw only one florist's stand on the streets of Buffalo; lucky for the Main street boys that the Greek pest is not established there; woe betide them, etc., etc.

It's a mistake to imagine that where pass the greatest crowd is the best place to open a florist's store. We know of places where hundreds of thousands pass in a day that are not worth considering from a florist's standpoint. The business seems to be concentrating more and more to the residential sections.

Rubber plants have been extensively used to good advantage in garden vase work this summer. A few years ago experienced growers were afraid to grow these plants in direct sun; now they are almost all grown outdoors. The market will be flooded with them this fall; the branched ones will have first call. Straight rubbers are less in demand every year.

Wonder what has been the matter with small Cycas revoluta this summer; we haven't seen them for sale at every corner of the street; queer how things run out.

Roman hyacinths have been cornered by a syndicate in France. What a blessing! The less we see the more we appreciate is applicable to many things, more especially where syndicate material is concerned.

Choice cut flowers are very scarce these days, and seem particularly so when most wanted. American Beauties are coming in much earlier this year; it is the best rose on the market at present, and Kaiserin is the next best. Asters have not been satisfactory so far, but better is expected of them during next month. Some provision should be made to have the aster crop last till chrysanthemums are well in. Lilium lancifolium album and L. auratum with white gladioli are plentiful and furnish excellent material for funeral work.

About the most despised flower we have on the market now is Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora; it is for the while abundant everywhere and a source of aggravation to most wholesalers. The country is full of this stock and growers should not expect much in return. It is a mighty good flower for the poor retailer to have in stock and will be more so as the days get colder; fine work can be done with it if used with tact; the trouble is that everyone now, even to the poorest, look for an abundance of roses in the cheapest work, and more because other material is not used to advantage; they fail to see good value or beauty in other flowers.

We are glad to learn that business at the summer resorts has so far been unusually good this season. IVERA.

BULBS.

Roman hyacinths have been advanced $2 to $3 per 1,000 in price during the last two weeks. The 7 to 9 and 9 to 11 Harrisii are very scarce, owing to a shortage in the supply of those sizes. But there seems to be plenty of good-sized Japan longiorum. Some importers have obtained their bulbs earlier than usual on account of Easter coming so early next year.

The demand for Roman hyacinths and paper-white narcissus is increasing yearly, but of the narcissus the grandiflora is generally demanded, and the call for the grandiflora multiflora is continually enlarging. Von Sion does not keep up with other bulbs in increased demand except on some special select stock. Practically all the Von Sions now come from Holland, the English grow bulbs generally producing greenish flowers, the French grown also having the same tendency, though in a less marked degree.

the afternoon, close up the house, raising the temperature, which would fall during the night and leave the foliage wet all night. I have seen this done four or five successive afternoons and the next morning the dew drops were glistening on every leaf and in one week there were no leaves for the dew to rest on. This moist heat in the evening, followed by a damp, close atmosphere, will quickly produce a silvery threaded fungus, entirely distinct from mildew, which will take off every leaf in short order.

A very good and successful rose grower told me a few years ago that he rather liked to have an attack of mildew during September. He considered it gave them a rest. I cannot agree with him. A rest by a cool temperature, which would seem much to be preferred. In conclusion, do your syringing always in the morning. Dull, damp days there is no need of it, and never close the house when the foliage is wet unless you can do some firing. WILLIAM SCOTT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Stevia.

The only stevia worth growing is S. serratifolia, and that you have planted out. With our warm and frequent rains they have grown into large plants. About this time they can have their last stopping, which should not be just the very tip pinched out, but four or five inches of the top of every shoot pinched off. They have some weeks to grow outside yet, but as you cannot do everything at once it is well to lift them about the middle of September. Give them a good sized pot and don't put them in the house. Stand them in the shade till they have got over the lifting and then if we escape a September frost they are better out of doors till near the end of October.

It is at the holidays that you want the stevia, and I have never had too much of it. There is a grace and lightness about the flower which blends with everything and makes acceptable many an otherwise stiff bunch of flowers. Some growers lift the stevias with a good ball of earth and plant them on the bench in six inches of soil. This plan will do very well and produce finer spikes than in pots if you have a crop to succeed the stevia, but I like the pots best.

Bouvardia.

It is about the time (first week of September) to lift the bouvardia. It is little grown now, although twenty years ago it was one of our most important cut flower plants. They are by no means the easiest plants to lift, but if they have been grown in a sandy loam and lifted when the soil is moist few of the roots will be lost. These should always be planted on a bench 9 to 12 inches apart in 4 or 5 inches of good loam. Shade and frequent syringing must be attended to till the plants show they have got hold of the new soil, after which the bouvardia wants the fullest light. If they have been pinched in the field recently all right. If not, leave them untouched till they are established inside and then pinch the leading shoots. This is another flower that is not appreciated while there is a flood of chrysanthemums, but when December comes it is welcome.

I may just mention to those who are beginners—to whom at all times my notes are respectfully dedicated, and not to the experienced—that the bouvardias are all essentially tropical, and while you may get a very good Christmas crop and perhaps another at Easter at a night temperature of 50 to 55, you will have a long period of rest, and to grow them profitably they should have a night temperature of not less than 60 to 65.

Poinsettia.

If you want to plant out a bench of poinsettias, by which means you get larger flowers than in pots, now is a good time to do it. Five inches of good heavy loam will grow them well and let it be in the lightest house you have. Poinsettias will thrive in a lower temperature when their roots have plenty of room than they will when grown in pots, and for cutting, the planting on a bench is the surest way, but we sell so many in pots that we have to grow them that way. Mealy bug is the worst enemy of poinsettias, and as they delight in plenty of syringing you should never let it get a lodgment on the plants.

Roses.

Soon we will be having cool nights and much more care and watchfulness will be called for. Up to date there has been no trouble; with good soil and proper watering a healthy and strong growth has been made, and no excuse for mildew up to this time. With the coming month, however, we shall get nights that will go down to 40 or 45, and you will be tempted to shut up the ventilators early to keep the house warm. As long as there was a free and abundant circulation with open ventilators day and night it mattered little when you syringed, but when cool nights are coming syringe always in the forenoon.

Syringing is done for two reasons: First to produce a moist, growing atmosphere conducive to growth, or food for the foliage, and next to keep down red spider. A long chapter could be written on syringing. Some men are so dexterous with the hose that they can thoroughly wet, or, I might almost say, scour the underside of every leaf without scarcely wetting the soil of the bench, while others are so crude that what they call sprinkling is neither a syringing nor a watering. I am sure I have seen some dismal failures from this unskillful use of the hose. But of that later. The cool nights that are coming is my theme.

The ideal conditions when the outside temperature falls below 50 degrees would be a small amount of ventilation with a very slight heat on the pipes, but firing early is often inconvenient and considerable expense and may only be needed for a few nights. The next best condition is to have the house by evening perfectly dry and a small amount of ventilation, or, if too cool and windy, close it up entirely. The very worst management would be to syringe during

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

Subscriber asks for information regarding the forcing of cucumbers. The variety generally grown in the East for purely commercial purposes is the American White Spine, the long seedless variety of the Telegraph type, not being called for in the market at all. Why this is so is difficult to state, for the White Spine cannot compare with the Telegraph for flavor, in my opinion.

If subscriber is proposing to market his crop, he would better grow the White Spine variety.

The seed should be sown in pots, and when the young plants are well rooted, they can be planted out on the bench about three feet apart. It is not wise, in the winter, to fill up the entire bench with soil, because then the plants are apt to run too much to vine before fruiting; and, also, if the soil gets too wet, stem rot may set in.

The best way we have found is to take a section (say) a foot square, and fill it with soil, using loose bricks to keep the soil from washing down. Then, when the plants have filled the soil with roots, the bricks can be moved back, and more soil added as it is needed.

The temperature should never fall below 60 at night, with a rise of 15 to 20 degrees by day.

The main factor of success in growing cucumbers is to never let the plants receive the slightest check from the time the seed germinates.

To produce a crop of fruit on the White Spine, the flowers must be artificially pollinated. This is easily accomplished; the only thing being to determine the difference between the male and female flowers, and transfer the pollen from the one to the other. The female flower is easily distinguished from the male by the embryo fruit at its base. Some large growers put a hive of bees in the house to insure fertilization of the flowers.

When the plants have made a good top growth, the tip should be pinched out, to induce lateral growth, which is where the fruits will show. Do not let the lateral growths get all crowded together, but pinch out any unnecessary wood.

For a support for the plants on side benches wires can be run the long way of the house, and kept down a foot from the glass. Growers that make a business of cucumber-growing have no benches, but plant out on the floor of the house, and have a wooden trellis to support the plants. If only a few plants are needed, they can be grown in pots and trained up anywhere.

Red spider is perhaps the worst enemy to contend with; but, if the plants are kept well syringed, and the atmosphere and ventilation right, spider will not be troublesome. If green fly appears, a very light fumigation on several successive evenings will dispose of it.

If Subscriber only wants to grow a few plants for private use, I would certainly recommend him to grow the Telegraph. With this type, fertilization of the flowers is unnecessary, the fruit, in fact, coming much better and straighter without it; and, as before stated, the flavor is superior. CHAS. H. TOTTY.

BEDDING.

The accompanying engraving is from a recent photograph of the parterre at Lincoln Park, Chicago. Among the combinations seen in the bedding here this summer are the following:

Egandale cannas bordered with the yellow variegated trailing abutilon, Chicago cannas bordered with yellow celosia, Crozy cannas bordered with Abutilon Souv. de Bonn, Florence Vaughan cannas bordered with rose geraniums, mixed cannas bordered with rose geraniums and a ricinus in center, red geraniums bordered with variegated thyme, pink geraniums bordered with santolina, cocks-combs bordered with Pyrethrum aureum, vincas bordered with Pyrethrum aureum, heliotrope bordered with red achyranthes, ageratun bordered with yellow alternantheras, Begonia Erfurtae bordered with Begonia Schmidtii, vincas bordered with Begonia Schmidtii, Begonia Erfurtae bordered with ageratun, Caladium esculentum with Agave Americana in center and bordered with Aralypha Macfarleana, Abutilon Souv. de Bonn and red alternantheras; Aralypha Macfarleana bordered with Abutilon Savitzii, phoenix in center, crotons interspersed with Aralypha Macfarleana and A. Sanderi and bordered with a row each of Abutilon Savitzii, red alternanthera and yellow alternanthera.

There are also beds of verbenas, petunias, etc., without borders. Among the cannas Egandale is still the most effective.

CANNAS AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

It may be of some practical value to your readers were I to give them a brief description of the cannas exhibited here, which include most of the older standard sorts as well as several of recent introduction. I have chosen first the exhibit by F. R. Pierson and will follow next week with those of other exhibitors.

"Tarrytown" was raised by Luther Burbank and introduced by Mr. Pierson three years ago. It is a brilliant carmine crimson, very early and a continuous bloomer, medium to dwarf in height. There seems to be scarcely any variety giving us the same quantity of flowers. A large bed of it here now is a brilliant mass. I consider it one of the most indispensable of all cannas.

"Pierson's Premier," intermediate in color between "Queen Charlotte" and "Souv. de Antoine Crozy," the center of the petals being much deeper and richer than Queen Charlotte with a narrow gilt edge. It is of dwarf habit and very desirable.

"Black Beauty" is undoubtedly the handsomest of all dark leaved cannas; foliage large and massive with the finest rich bronze purple color. It is decidedly tall and the most handsome of all dark cannas where a large mass of its effective color is desired.

"Mrs. Kate Gray" is a deep orange; a tall grower, very free bloomer and the largest flowered canna that we have yet seen.

"Secrétaire Chabaune," deep salmon suffused with silver, very free bloomer, medium height.

"Robert Christie," orange scarlet, almost identical in color with "Chicago" but rather a taller growth and very free bloomer.

"Sam Trelease" is well known. It is with us this year doing very finely. Vivid scarlet in color; base of petals bright golden yellow. With us, in height a little more dwarf than the old Mme. Crozy.

"Souv. de Mme. Nardy," bright golden yellow heavily spotted with scarlet. Flowers individually larger than Florence Vaughan; a tall grower.

"Crimson Bedder," bright crimson scarlet; a very early, free bloomer and quite dwarf. Very desirable canna where a dwarf of bright color is wanted.

"Duke of Marlborough," very dark, rich, velvety crimson and a tall grower.

"Michel Favrechon," bright orange shading to carmine. A very strong grower.

"Mlle. Berat," dark carmine pink. Tall grower and a remarkably free bloomer.

"Rosemawr," a rich shade of soft, rosy pink suffused with deep rose. A dwarf grower and free bloomer.

"Philippe Rivière," bright scarlet mottled with carmine; a very distinct variety; tall grower.

"L. Patry," orange; dwarf; very large grower and large truss.

"Alsace," This variety is the nearest to a white that we have seen. Very free and distinct. Medium in height.

"Souv. de Antoine Crozy" is so well known that it needs no description from me. Possibly the best of all gilt edged varieties. Its intense scarlet bordered with a golden yellow is so attractive and it is also so free. Grand grower and medium to tall in height.

Speaking of height, cannas vary much according to the season, soil and culture. Our soil is a heavy clay loam but well enriched with manure. The highest culture has been given them in the way of copious waterings followed by a good hoeing.

What a blank a flower garden would be nowadays without these gorgeous cannas. WM. SCOTT.

BOILER AND PIPING.

What boiler capacity do I need to heat the following houses: One 20x162 feet, 12 feet to ridge, south side 4 feet, all glazed; one 11x100, banked up on both sides to plate; one 18x63, connected to large house, 10 feet to ridge, sides boarded?

Are six 1½-inch returns and one 3-inch flow sufficient piping to keep the first house (20x162) up to 60 degrees in zero weather, and what difference would one more 1½-inch return make? F. W. Maryland.

In answer to F. W.'s inquiry as to capacity of boiler necessary to heat the three greenhouses described, I would advise a boiler, if manufactured especially for greenhouse purposes, having a rated capacity of maintaining 60 degrees night temperature in houses having 8,500 feet of exposure, but if based on a dwelling heating rating, one having a capacity for 2,900 to 3,000 feet of radiation. In proportioning the heating surfaces in the greenhouses, provision should always be made for the coldest night experienced in your vicinity, and as zero weather is not unknown in your town, I would advise at least one foot of radiating surface to every three square feet of glass exposure, or if you are willing to force fire a little during the few extremely cold nights you experience, you may reduce the ratio of heating surface to one foot for every 3½ feet of glass exposure. H. W. GIBBONS.

New York.

PIPING.

How many runs of 2-inch pipe would it take to heat to 65 degrees a palm-house 70x24, three-quarter span. Would it be advisable to use three 1-inch returns to one 2-inch flow? I have plenty of 1-inch pipe. F.

Assuming the house to be of the usual proportions, having about 31 feet of glass exposure in cross section, I would suggest the use of 20 lines of 2-inch pipes to produce a temperature of 65 degrees. It would be possible to use the 1-inch pipes he refers to, for returns, but I would not advise them, unless he has an unusually deep boiler cellar, as the friction in the 1-inch pipes is so great as to materially retard the circulation under the ordinary greenhouse conditions of boiler cellars, which place the top of the boiler nearly on a line with the circulating pipes. H. W. GIBBONS.

New York.

BOILER CAPACITY.

What capacity of boiler do I need to heat 2,800 square feet of glass to 60 degrees in zero weather? What style of boiler is best in case I later wish to increase the amount of glass? Will a sectional boiler enable me to increase my boiler capacity at smallest expense?

How many 4-inch flow pipes and how many 1½-inch returns will I need? Pennsylvania. E. K.

In reply to the inquiry of E. K. relative to hot water boilers for the heating of houses containing about 2,800 sq. feet of exposed glass to a night temperature of 60 degrees, I would suggest a boiler, if made by parties whose chief business is greenhouse heating appliances, having a rated capacity of at least 1,100 feet of radiating surface, but if of a pattern manufactured principally for dwelling heating, one having a rated capacity of 1,500 feet of radiating surface.

If you do not contemplate enlarging your glass area there would be no special need of a sectional boiler, but if you have any idea of extending in the future, I would suggest a sectional boiler, which can readily be added to without displacement of the original boiler and one in which any section can be removed easily at any time without disconnecting and displacing the whole boiler.

One 4-inch main will readily feed 1,500 lineal feet of 1½-inch pipes.

New York. H. W. GIBBONS.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

August has been a very wet month and a very good month in the cut flower market. Business is quieter than it was a week ago; rather more dull hours between the busy ones. Beauties have fallen off a little in price; $2 per dozen is about as high as they go, and pretty fair ones can be had at $1.50 per dozen; short Beauties don't sell very well. Other roses are better in quality the cool, dark weather gave them a chance to develop; at about the same prices as quoted last week. Bridesmaids are sometimes in short supply at $3 and $4 per 100. Carnations are a trifle more plentiful, though that is probably a misleading term, as there are not many about; $1 is asked for outdoor stuff and $1.50 for indoor.

Asters are on the wane. Some growers have finished cutting, while others are right in the midst of their Supplies. The best valley is fine at $4 per 100. Leo Niessen has some very fine stock from Carl Jurgens of Newport, R. I. The best grade of this valley has brought $4 per 100 all summer and sold out cleanly. Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora is seen in quantity; selected long stemmed flowers bring as high as $5 per 100 in limited quantities, while the poorer stuff doesn't move well at $2 and $3 per 100. Job lots of this flower are not infrequently seen. Smilax is scarce at 12 and 15 cents per string.

Various Items.

Henry F. Michell has returned from a two weeks' trip through New York and Canada. He spent a few days at Buffalo and speaks enthusiastically of the landscape effects at the Fair, which he says far surpass the Columbian Exposition. (Please bow, Mr. Scott.) Mr. Michell spent most of his time among the pea growers of northern New York and in Canada and reports the crops in fine shape for next year's seed. One very fine Canadian, considered both by the grower and Mr. Michell to be of unusual merit, was purchased. It will be sent out next season, probably under the name of "Michell's Special Extra Early."

J. J. Styer, of Concordville, is sending in some nice outdoor carnations. Mrs. Fisher and William Scott, to William J. Baker.

Mr. James Forbes, of Portland, Ore., who was here last week, says there is a good demand for flowers in his city, but that the florists must depend on themselves for the supply, as the wholesale markets are so far away.

Willow Grove Park is playing a part in educating our people in the love for plants and flowers. The effects are, as a rule, good, though here and there are seen combinations of color or material that would worry Mr. McMillan, could he see them. The extreme neatness and cleanliness seen everywhere are remarkable, considering the number of persons who visit the place.

The cannas were excellent when I saw them, one bed being a sheet of bloom. The geraniums and sage made rich effects; the beds being set off by velvety grass. The large urus and rustic boxes about the casino and lake are very showy. Near the casino were two fine croton beds and beds of coleus of standard varieties. David Joyce, who for many years had charge of the Carpenter place at Germantown, is in charge and deserves great credit for the way he has developed floriculture at this popular resort. Phil.

ST. LOUIS.Various Items.

The situation is about the same as reported last week. The dry spell is still with us. Although we have had several light rains they were not enough to be of much benefit to the already suffering outdoor stock.

Quite a lot of roses of all kinds came in the past week, especially short Beauties and some fine long-stemmed ones, but as trade is slow they sold cheap. Signs displayed in downtown store windows read "American Beauties with long stems, $1 per doz." Other roses sold all the way from $2 to $4 per 100.

Carnations are looking somewhat better, but are still very small and are selling at $1 per 100 for poor stock; anything good goes up to $2.

The retailers missed the hardy hydrangeas this year, as they all burned up from the heat and dry weather. Mr. Sanders reports that he alone lost over 500 plants this year.

Asters from the east are selling well, as they are large and of good color. They bring $1.50 per 100 and some fine ones sell at $2. Home-grown asters are very small and sell for little or nothing. Smilax is about cut out and asparagus takes its place just now.

Walter Mott, representing H. A. Dreer of Philadelphia, was in town in the interests of his firm. Walter is booking plenty of orders since the convention.

Charles Ford, who represents A. Herrmann of New York, called on the trade last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Weber spent a week at Oakville, Ill., for the benefit of Mrs. Weber's health.

John W. Künz is back at his post at Berning's after a ten days' vacation.

Willie Sanders is back in the employ of Henry Berning.

Arthur Ellison got back from the convention after visiting Chicago. Arthur says he called on Ed and Phil while in Chicago.

Beyer Bros. were busy all of last week decorating for the Schwenken Fest at Concordia Park, which took place Sunday and Monday of this week. The decorations were finer than ever this year and were the chief attraction.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on Thursday afternoon, September 12, at 3 p. m. President-elect Meinhardt and President Guy would elect any member of the club to be present to witness the installation of the new officers. Other important matters will come up at this meeting. Max Herzog will be back to tell us of his trip abroad, and those who attended the convention will tell the members of their experiences and how the beautiful Pan-American was handled by Brother Scott. This will be a very interesting meeting, and those present will not regret having attended. Secretary Schray will also have something to say which will be of great benefit to the younger members of the club.

Bowling.

The florist bowlers who are to make up a team to join the big St. Louis Ten-Pin League, now being formed, held a meeting to select their team. The bowlers present were: A. Y. Ellison, C. A. Kuehn, J. J. Bencke, C. C. Sanders, Carl Beyer, F. M. Ellis, Theo. Miller and Wm. Adele.

J. J. Bencke was elected captain of the team and A. Y. Ellison representative of the club to the League meetings. The following will make up the team: J. J. Bencke, A. Y. Ellison, C. A. Kuehn, Jas. W. Kunz, C. C. Sanders, Wm. Adele and F. M. Ellis. This team will roll each week during the season of the League and five members make up a team. Before the meeting a few games were rolled and the scores were as follows:

	1	2	3	Total
A. Y. Ellison	112	175	192	207 717
J. J. Bencke	126	172	156	156 550
C. A. Kuehn	148	154	...	202
C. C. Sanders	125	148	...	273
Carl Beyer	108	134	101	343
Wm. Adele	131	167	134	432
F. M. Ellis	169	165	128	462
Theo. Miller	119	75	100	89 274

This is the first rolling the boys have done since the convention and they were a little rusty. A. Y. Ellison being the only member in form, rolling the last three games without a break.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply of roses has shortened somewhat on the average and prices are up to $4 and $5 for the best, while a very few extra Kaisersins have brought as high as $6. The great bulk of the cut, however, still ranges from $1 to $3. The supply of carnations is equal to demands and prices still range from $1 to $1.50 for select. Rates on the poorer grades are lower and we hear of some clean-up sales at as low as 10 cents a bunch. There is sufficient demand to take all good stock except asters and gladioli. Aster sales still average good, though, where the quality is first class, and these bring $1.50 per 100, with some sales of extra select at as high as $2. The poorer grades are more unsalable than before.

In roses the pink ones are scarcer than white, quite a change from a short time ago, when white had the call. Beauties are improving in quality steadily and there are now more of the $2.50 grade offered. Liberty holds its position well and good blooms bring $8.

Trade conditions in general continue excellent for the season and the summer will certainly average the best ever known in this market.

Various Items.

The Harms Park Floral Company is sending a splendid lot of asters. They have a field containing about 40,000 plants in which there were few misses, and from which they are cutting an immense crop of fancy flowers. Their best flowers are from "Carlson's Improved," introduced last season by Mr. D. S. Heffron of Washington Heights. It is a great advance in asters, the flowers resembling fair sized chrysanthemums and the plant is wonderfully robust and productive. They placed the plants 15 inches apart in the field, but found they had not given them enough room. Next year they will plant them 18 inches apart and omit every fifth row. They come in three colors—white, pink and light lavender. They also grow Sample's Shell Pink, Giant Comet and Vick's Daybreak and Purity. The latter is a good white, but Daybreak is too light a shade of pink to take well in the market, and they will not grow it again.

They have dropped the growing of tulips for forcing at Klehm's Nurseries. There generally came a hot spell after the blooming season and the bulbs didn't ripen well enough for forcing purposes, though they were all right for blooming out of doors. They lost about all of their Liliun longidorum bulbs. They did well for several years, but one season they pretty nearly all disappeared. They still grow their valley pips and find it profitable, though at one time were so discouraged they were about ready to give it up.

Their greenhouses are now almost wholly in American Beauty roses. They have 6,500 plants bonched for this season. All they have aside from the Beauties is one house of Brides and Maids and two houses of carnations.

W. W. Barnard & Co. have received a large shipment of Japan longidorum, the bulbs arriving several weeks earlier than usual. This was arranged for so that growers would have a good start in getting the flowers in for Easter, which comes early next year.

Among recent visitors were Mr. James Forbes, of Martin & Forbes, Portland, Ore., and Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

McKellar & Winterson recently received a shipment of 18,000 calla bulbs, their second shipment this season. The stock came through in fine condition.

Bentley & Co. are beginning to receive Beauties from their new establishment at New Castle, Ind., and they are of excellent color and texture. The New Castle soil certainly has some special virtue in it.

J. A. Budlong is spending a few weeks in Riverside, R. I.

Kennicott Bros. Company offer special premiums at the fall show of the Horticultural Society for Irene carnations, as follows: Best 50 blooms, $6; best 25 blooms, $3; best 15 blooms, $1.

A. Iraison has reopened his store at 588 East 43d street, having returned from Texas and Oklahoma, bringing with him specimens of asphalt and similar souvenirs.

A meeting of the bowling club will be held this (Thursday) evening at 8:30 at McKellar & Winterson's.

NEW YORK.

"Nothing doing" would almost cover this section this week. Everything is dull, even to people and the weather. Better send us another bundle of the issue containing photos of the bowlers at Buffalo. Every one is speaking in praise of it; copies were at a premium in New York. The wives and sweethearts of all the boys shown have swooped up all the papers, so send us a few more.

Mostly all those who went to Europe have returned after leaving a good many American dollars on 'tother side.

The market is exceptionally inactive this week. There will be a little splutter shortly in the way of a few plants for the store windows. Things have got to be made to look a bit business-like about September, even if there be no trade worth the mention till November.

Small will shortly open a store on the Thirty-third street side of the Waldorf-Astoria; it will be pretty and a good business stand. In the moving of Siebrecht & Son's store, at Thirty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, one can see the passing away of one of our old florists' landmarks. That corner was made famous by Hodgson, then the present owners, who will do business the coming season in their new store at the Windsor Arcade, at Forty-seventh street.

Florists' bowling clubs will no doubt be numerous in this vicinity next winter, sufficient in number to have a tournament of their own. We have so many crack bowlers here and the sport has got to be so popular that the next national tournament may see many clubs from these parts.

Out at Flatbush last Thursday night there was a jolly party, and the fun could not be measured. The Dailledouze Bros. offered one of their fine Telegraph cucumbers as a prize for the one rolling the highest score in one of the first two games. D. Y. Mellis was the lucky man, with a score of 173 in the first game.

A most pleasing incident occurred at the close of the evening's sport. Eugene Dailledouze, with a few congratulatory remarks on behalf of the Flatbush Florists' Bowling Club, presented Carl Woerner with a handsome silver water pitcher, suitably engraved, as a token of their esteem. Mr. Woerner was married to Miss Mamie Purcell, of Charleston, S. C., on Aug. 6. He is well known and appreciated among the craft in this section and all wish him much happiness.

The proprietor of the alleys offered a very handsome ball as a prize to be rolled for by the New York and Flatbush teams, and the match will probably take place on the Flatbush alleys on Thursday evening, Sept. 5, when a good crowd of rooters will no doubt assemble to encourage things. The scores on last Thursday were:

Riley	156	145	150	Mellis	173	145
Raynor	102	156	170	E. Dailledouze	158	128
Siebrecht	120	119	143	P. Dailledouze	157	117
Schmutz	159	113	146	H. Dailledouze	119	111
Woerner	166	117	141	Woerner	117	81
Donlan	131	108	115

BOSTON.

Trade Items.

Hold up just one moment, Mr. Editor. Before you go to press let me enter my little wail from Boston. Never was the business in worse shape here. But little good material coming in of any kind and but little call for it. Quite an amount of poor material of all kinds coming in and but little demand for that. The effect on prices needs no description.

Money is awfully scarce, too, noticeably small change. If a man bargains with a salesman for a dollar's worth of goods for 35 cents, he invariably shows up a V or an N, if he offers to pay at all. Now, there must be a vein of philosophy in such a situation as that, and I think it is this: The buyers have got out of floating capital and gone into their old stocking after one of the bills they pickled down last winter for just this kind of a situation.

I heard this kind of an argument, too, the other day as a reason why so few goods are being sold. The street men used to buy all they could get at their own price, but now most of them will only take a very limited portion at any price whatever. There must be philosophy in this, too, if true, but I am sure I do not know what it is.

Another feature of the game, too, is the rapid increase in need of delivery wagons. Customers demand delivery of smaller purchases right along and street cars keep curtailing their accommodation in this respect. Martin E. Tuohy, James M. Tuohy, J. W. Newman and F. W. Fletcher are among those to bring out new teams for this purpose.

It is a good scheme to keep the date of the second Saturday in September in mind as the time for auction sales of stands at the Park Street Market.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The annual exhibition of plants and flowers and the annual exhibition of fruits and vegetables will be held in connection with the chrysanthemum show on the 5th to 8th of November, provided that the building shall have been accepted by the society before that time, and the exhibition scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 14, will be omitted.

Trade Notes.

There is little doing in the way of business and very little stock to do business with. All the old roses are thrown out and few of the young ones are strong enough to cut from. Carnations are just being replanted and only outside blooms are to be had. In spite of the dry summer and the smallness of the plants in the field nearly every grower around here is planting from two to four weeks earlier than last year. Many had to put two and three plants together to make a fair-sized bunch and consequently most of them had to buy some to fill up the benches.

Last week we had a good rain and for several days it rained at least a good shower each day, and now the ground is moist through again and everything outside is growing luxuriantly. Many plants and shrubs that were thought dead are pushing out new shoots as though it were spring time. The damage done by the drouth will not be so great as expected, the greatest loss being this season's crop of blooms of all midseason flowers.

All the convention people are back and all speak well of Buffalo and the Pan-American. The writer was there earlier in the season and could see then what a grand place it would be by this time. No one, however, seems very enthusiastic over the idea of going to Asheville next year, but by the time another year rolls around there will be a few who will have the convention fever and whether it is Asheville, Milwaukee or Chicago will make little difference as long as a good time is promised.

A severe hail-storm passed over this city today just at noon and in a few parts it is said to have been terrific, some of the hailstones being as large as quail's eggs. As far as we could learn none of the greenhouses were damaged. None of them happened to be in its path, which seems to have been a narrow one.

Baur & Smith have bought two and one-half acres of land one square west of their present location, on which they intend building a range of houses in the near future. Mr. Baur is erecting a residence on part of it at present.

A. Palud is also erecting a fine residence on his place.

F. S. Smith is happy over the arrival of a fine baby girl at his home. Both mother and baby are doing well.

Will Bertermann is not improving as rapidly as his friends would like to see, but we hope to soon have him among us again.

E. A. Nelson has his new houses under glass and is finishing up planting. It is certainly a nice range of houses and gives him a nice lot of room.

A. F. J. RAUB.

WATER SUPPLY.

Is there a steam pump on the market for pumping water direct into pipes for watering in greenhouses? If so, what kind is the best? Is it necessary to have a governor on same to regulate pressure? How large a pump would be required to supply water for five houses, each 20x100, and for irrigating an acre of ground in summer time? How large a well is required and what size suction pipe? What kind of valve should we use to keep high pressure of steam (necessary to run pump) from running through greenhouses? L. S.

[Will some reader kindly supply the desired information and oblige.—Ed.]

RIDGEWOOD, N. J.

The Hon. Peter I. Ackerman, who secured the passage of the act under which the Florists' Hail Association was incorporated, died at his home here on Saturday, the 17th instant, after a few weeks of severe illness. Mr. Ackerman was highly respected and honored by all who knew him.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—A free exhibition of flowers was held in the Library August 16. The display was large and varied and the Library was crowded during the afternoon and evening. Many summer visitors are here now and the show gave them an excellent opportunity to inspect the products of local gardeners.

CLEVELAND.

News here at the present time is rather scarce; there seems to be nothing of especial note.

Bates Bros. report carnations all in. They will keep their roses over another year, and are building a new house for violets.

Fred Aul and Peter Probeck are getting in carnations as fast as they can. The first named is contemplating some changes in his houses.

We have been having some very fine weather for lifting carnations, and some of the growers are taking advantage of it. Quite a good deal of rain and the days are mostly cloudy, so the plants wilt scarcely any.

Market for cut flowers now is very slow, there being very few roses or carnations and most of the stock is of rather poor quality, but enough, such as it is, for the demand. The aster crop is now in full blast, and some very fine flowers may be seen in the different florists' windows and at the stands in the market. The price varies, according to quality, from 50 cents to $1.25 per hundred.

There are some complaints about the aster bug, but they have not become general as yet. There seems to be some favored localities around here, where the bug never appears, and others where they sweep everything in the shape of flower or bud before them. TENEP.

ROCHESTER, MINN.—H. Roeder & Son, who recently purchased the greenhouse business of Williams Bros., have repiped the greenhouses and have put in a new 20-horsepower boiler.

WATERLOO, N. Y.—Smith & Kuncy have completed another new greenhouse and have stocked it with palms, ferns and begonias.

DETROIT.

Various Items.

The Detroit delegates to the convention are all well satisfied with the trip to Buffalo and feel well repaid for going. Nothing has been printed in the trade papers about the bicentennial celebration of the founding of Detroit, on July 24 to 27, inclusive; but we did have a rousing celebration nevertheless, ending with a floral parade, in which some of our representative florists took an active part, Messrs. Breitmeyer, Schroeter and the Detroit Floral Company entering floats which would compare favorably with any of those in the California flower festivals.

Mr. R. Watson is rebuilding his entire plant, having bought the cypress material of Gibbons & Co. while in Buffalo.

At the annual meeting of the club on Wednesday, August 21, the following officers were elected for the coming year: George A. Rackham, president; F. Holz-nagle, vice-president; J. F. Sullivan, secretary; B. Schroeter, treasurer.

It was decided to have an outing for members and families on Saturday, August 31, to Bois Blanc Island, the boat leaving Wood avenue at 9 a. m. city time. There will be games, etc., and the club invites all florists within reach to join them.

Mr. Craw, representing Lord & Burnham Company, was a visitor at the club.

Mr. Rackham and Mr. Flowerday both go to Louisville, Ky., next week to attend the twenty-eighth triennial conv-ence of Knights Templar. Reg.

MILWAUKEE.

Business during August has been comparatively light compared with that of July. Outdoor stock, especially asters, is coming in freely now, but owing to the great shortage of carnations the asters move fairly well, especially the whites. Gladioli are not as good in quality as they should be and prices are ruling low. Sweet peas had a very short season and in fact were in the market but a few weeks. Roses are coming in better now and they move at good prices.

During a visit to the various establishments about the city the writer found all the growers stocking up their houses for winter business.

At the recent meeting of the American Ten Pin League C. C. Pollworth, the wholesale florist, was elected president. The membership of the League includes eight local clubs, one of which is The Bloomers, composed of florists. The Bloomers will rehearse regularly now so as to be in trim during the Chicago chrysanthemum show. P.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.
A Reference Book for Commercial Florists

CINCINNATI.

Various Notes.

Business was inclined to be a little slow last week. Greatly increased supply of aster and poor demand made the price decline considerably. The quality is not of the best, the stems incline to be short.

Roses cut from new plants are coming in nicely. Some of them are very good, but the majority are a little soft and bear shipment poorly.

A few good gladioli are coming in from the north. They bring 2 to 3 cents a spike.

E. G. Gillett received the first consignment of the season from Mrs. E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind. It consisted of the first cut from their new carnation Dorothy. The flowers were first class in every respect and sold readily at 2 cents. This variety did remarkably well last year both as a grower and seller and from present prospects it will do equally as well, if not better, this year. Carnations are very scarce in this market at present, and those in evidence are of poor quality; 50 cents to $1 is all they will bring.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at the establishment of George & Allan, Oakley, Ohio, on Sept. 5, at 2 p. m. A schedule for the monthly shows to be held during the winter is to be mapped out. The payment of dues is also in order. The matter of a float for the fall festival parade will be discussed. Messrs. George & Allan especially request the ladies to be present.

At the exhibition of flowers and plants at the Hamilton County fair, held last week, Mr. J. T. Conger received fifteen first prizes.

J. A. Peterson and F. Ball are in Louisville, Ky., attending the national convention of Sir Knights, which is being held there this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gear are in the east. They will visit Atlantic City, New York and other eastern cities. This is Fred's annual trip to Atlantic City. He certainly likes the ocean.

Joseph R. Goldman, of Middletown, Ohio, is also visiting the east.

Richard Witters-taetter is adding a model greenhouse to his range. Dick expects to be in it at the carnation meeting at Indianapolis in February. He appreciates the fact that this will be the greatest carnation meeting ever held and is making extra efforts to show what he can do in the way of seedlings.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., is in this city. C. J. OLMER.

NEW LONDON, OHIO.—The firms of W. D. Chase & Son, of New London, Ohio, and G. W. Swanger, of Shiloh, Ohio, have been consolidated with the addition of six new houses at New London, Ohio, as the Chase-Swanger Company. They are growing greenhouse and vegetable plants for the wholesale trade.

FREONIA, N. Y.—David Scott, the florist, a brother of Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, is very low with Bright's disease and the doctors say there is no hope. He may have passed away by the time this is in print.

MERIDEN, CONN.—A. L. Hall has purchased the interest of Mr. Crawford in the firm of A. F. Crawford & Co., and will continue the business at the old stand, 37 New street.

TORONTO.

The Industrial Fair.

Our great Industrial Fair is all too quickly drawing its opening day closed to our attention, and although we do not pretend to attempt a comparison with "the only Pan-American," we most certainly desire it to be registered that we are here for business, and if possible, hope to draw considerably from Buffalo for our attendance. Any of our cousins from across the line who see fit and have time at their disposal should give us a call during the week of Sept. 5. You will be well received, and I assure you you will find brother florists of Canada at least the equal of American florists when a question of hospitality is concerned.

The exhibit of plants and cut flowers will be staged by noon of the 6th, and those who are fortunate enough to be in attendance from outside points will find it a first-class representation of all lines of our work and goods, carefully selected and so staged that every point that seems likely to attract shall seem to fairly jump at you, while the poorer stuff, if any, will be carefully relegated to the background.

Strange, but true, we all hope to secure the firsts, and though some of us are doomed to disappointment we will put forth our very best.

The Market.

Roses and carnations have been very scarce, but although the supply is small at present the demand is less for the class of stock (not A 1) on the market. Asters are exceptionally good this season, large flowers, long stems, and full, prices ranging from 25 to 75 cents per 100. There is quite a business being done by the smaller stores with potted up asters.

Lilies, both auratum and geocorum, are scarce at any price, and grabbed up at first place offered. There seems to be an opening for more of that class of stuff at this time of the year. It has been noticeable for several years past that there has always been a scarcity of summer lilies.

The boys who were fortunate enough to attend our Canadian Horticultural Society convention at London, Ont., and also the Society of American Florists' convention at Buffalo, are home, full up with new ideas, good resolutions, and pleasant memories. C. W.

PINE BLUFF, ARK.

Business is very dull with us here in the south on account of the drought. Corn and cotton in most all places is cut to one-fourth and one-half crop. Roses and outdoor stock have suffered from the dry weather; mums have held their own pretty well.

A. A. Harper has purchased a block of four acres of land six blocks from his greenhouses that he is going to grow vegetables on and make a market garden in connection with his floral business.

We will have the state fair here Oct. 14 to 19 and look for some nice exhibits in the way of fruits and flowers.

We are to have an electric street railway at last. The tracks are almost all laid, the power house will be completed by Sept. 10, and we will begin to put on city airs. ARK.

ACME IRON PLANT STANDS OUR OWN MAKE.....

After considerable experimenting we have succeeded in perfecting an Iron Plant Stand that is both practical and ornamental, being made of iron and painted black.

FOR DECORATING, DISPLAY OF PLANTS IN STORE, GREEN-HOUSE OR CONSERVATORY, THESE ACME STANDS HAVE NO SUPERIOR.

The durability of the Acme Stands, aside from all the other advantages, speaks much in their favor. Every Up-To-Date Florist should use our

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bulbs.

Paper white narcissus and Roman hyacinths are now arriving and very soon will be followed by the tulips and hyacinths. I have never found that there was a great deal of demand or profit in forcing paper whites much before Christmas, but I do think a big lot of them is always most useful. A few Roman hyacinths are always very desirable just as early as you can get them, but large quantities of them are not desirable until the holidays, and from then on.

To have Roman hyacinths early, say by the first of November, a few should be boxed immediately. I use the same size box for all forcing bulbs, and that I have frequently described. I think it is poor economy to use any old box that you can get because the first cost is cheap. Much better to have them all of one uniform size. We find the handiest size is 24 inches long, 12 inches broad and 3 inches deep. The end pieces are made of inch stuff, and the sides and bottom of half inch. Four strips 3 inches wide make the bottom and the small space between each slat for drainage. These boxes will last several years unless allowed to lay around with the soil in them all summer, which should not be done. These boxes we find the most useful for sending out the plants in the spring and if we neglect to pick them up where plants have been delivered no great loss, for I don't believe they cost over five cents apiece. We buy the sawed strips and make them ourselves. We find the younger members of the family are always fond of using the saw and hammer and I have had seventy-five of these boxes made in a few hours by the boys.

Now, Roman hyacinths are supposed not to stand any freezing. This is a mistake; they are not hurt by a freeze providing it is not too severe and that you do not disturb them while in a frozen state. For the earliest, however, there will be no frost touch them and they can be placed out of doors in the open on strips of board, which allows them to come away cleaner when brought in. A box such as I have described will hold 60 Roman hyacinths, about 40 to 45 paper white narcissus, 60 of the larger varieties of the tulips and 72 of the smaller tulips.

It is generally conceded that the quality of the soil has very little to do with the quality of bloom of these bulbs that we force because the flower has been prepared in a foreign land and all we do is to force it out. For instance, water grows a hyacinth about as well as you can grow it in a pot in the richest of soil; still, the soil should be of the right texture and that I would call a sandy loam. Soil that has been thrown out from a carnation bench would be the very best material.

It is strange how awkward many men are at this bulb business. Some will put the bulb away down until it is nearly touching the bottom of the box and others will fill the flat so full of soil that the bulb is sticking up an inch or two above. If the box is filled lightly with soil even to the top and then the bulb pressed in until the top is about even with the top of the box it will be found about right. A very little soil then can be thrown between the bulbs and the operation is finished. Here is something that should occupy little time even if you have a large quantity, as a handy man can put thousands in boxes in one day.

After you have placed the boxes on boards on the open ground give them a thorough soaking and then throw over two inches of the surrounding soil, or, if you have tanbark at your disposal, put on two or three inches of tan bark, but I prefer the soil. When first forcing bulbs we did not realize how necessary it was to keep these early planted bulbs sufficiently moist. We thought one good watering was sufficient. This is entirely wrong. Remember there is no moisture arising from the earth as there is with plants planted in the open ground, and they must depend entirely on rains, and you know it takes an awful good rain to go two inches into the ground. Unless we get extremely wet weather every week you should give these early planted bulbs a thorough soaking, for you want them to make root as quickly as possible.

For the early paper whites, they also can be placed outside, but for the main crop of paper whites and also the Roman hyacinths, I prefer to have them in a cold frame or some place where a good covering can be given them. While on the bulb business, I may as well say that those who desire to force tulips early should have a certain portion of them put into the flats at once. For that matter they can all be boxed as soon as you can find time, for there is nothing like getting them well rooted before winter sets in. The success of forcing them will depend upon how well they are rooted. I will have something to say later about the winter treatment of them.

Lilies.

We are very glad to find Japan longiflorum lilies arriving. Do not attempt to force any as you have the Harrisii for the early flowers. They are always best in the frame and can be left there until well on in November. I used to advocate putting the larger size bulbs in 4-inch pots and afterwards shifting them. I have had several people tell me that they were sure the shifting retarded their flowering a week or ten days. I am scarcely prepared to believe that, although it is possible it might do so, and a very few days will make a great difference with such an early Easter as our next. Therefore, I say, put them at once into the pot they are to flower in. I do, however, believe in the plan which we formerly practised of putting the bulb down two inches below the surface of the pot and when they are brought into the house filling up the pot to the usual depth, or, say, half an inch below the top. This nourishes and feeds the roots which always come out of the stem above the top of the bulb.

Verbenas.

I suppose but very few of you trouble any more to perpetuate the sweet old verbenas by cuttings. After seeing them this year so fine I believe they will come again into fashion. The little carpet bedding I have seen this year looks to me hideous and the beds of our sweet flowers are far more enjoyable in every way. If you do want to propagate verbenas from a choice strain you should now cut back a few plants. Shorten them back to within five or six inches of the main stalk. Stir up the ground between them, putting a little rotten manure around amongst the growth and keep them watered, and by the end of the month you will have an abundance of green succulent growth, which is the right kind of stuff to make cuttings and root quite easily in a cold frame during November.

Geraniums.

The great change of weather and the welcome cold days remind us that we must begin to propagate our geraniums. As I said a week or two ago, don't trouble to put them in the sand. Put them at once in 2 or 2½-inch pots. A cold-frame is all right for them providing you will not neglect them there, but we find a bench in a light house is the safest place.

Roses.

I presume there are plenty of roses not yet tied up. I know there are several establishments where they are just doing it. There is no doubt that the steel wire support tied at the top to a horizontal small wire is almost the ideal way of supporting them, but the first cost of this is considerable. A wire, the steepest size, run across the bench and kept an inch or so above the soil, is another plan. From that wire run a strong, cheap string to a wire running across the bench, or lengthwise of the bench, say four to five feet above the roses. This is a very inexpensive way, easy to install and very easily removed when the soil is taken out in the spring. Both sets of wires can be raised away up temporarily and put in place again after the roses are planted. I see occasionally some very crude attempts at tying roses.

In tying a carnation in the old-fashioned way, when we used stakes, it is correct to let the string envelop the whole plant, just tied enough to support it. With a rose this is entirely unnecessary and wrong. The small, useless growth, which it is entirely proper to keep on, for no blind wood should ever be cut away from a tea rose, wants no support. It will not make much growth and will not hurt. It is only the strong growths that are going to produce the roses that we want tied. But tying is a very important thing and should not be neglected.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.

We have been having ideal carnation growing weather lately and plants in the house as well as those remaining out of doors are making a fine growth, clean and thrifty. Those that were kept inside all summer have made more growth during the last few weeks than they did all the summer previous.

Your entire attention from now on until winter sets in should be directed toward keeping the plants in a healthy and thrifty condition. Keep the weeds out, stir the surface of the soil frequently as long as you can see no roots near the surface, and support them properly as soon as it is needed, to keep the plants upright and the stems straight.

Those that were in the bench all summer can stand a mulch of about 1-inch of well rotted cow manure, but those that were housed in August will be better without any mulch for a month or so yet, providing you mixed a fair amount of manure into the soil when it was composted. After spreading on the manure give a good watering and then be careful not to keep the soil too wet.

ber morning will injure the plants or that the warm sun will be harmful. Both will help to keep the growth firm and disease-proof. As long as the temperature outside does not drop below 40 degrees you need not be afraid to keep the ventilators open. Even then you will want to run some steam around before you close the houses up tight, but I will have more to say about that later. Of course you do not want the houses to drop that low later on when there is a crop on, but you have nothing like that to consider now. What you should be working for now is a strong, robust, healthy plant free from disease or any other weakness.

If you have use for the blooms you might as well allow the stronger plants larger outside. That is just where they make a mistake, and a big one at that. This growth that is being made now and for several weeks to come is very rapid and tender and when the plant is lifted it suffers, even if the days are not very warm, much more than does the slower and firmer midsummer growth. After the plants are established in the benches they grow just as rapidly as they would outside.

The greatest advantage in early planting is that the plants recover quicker and are ready to grow right ahead during the entire time in which the carnation makes this rapid growth. Consequently the plants are also better established when winter comes. Any grower of average judgment knows that any plant, whatever it may be, will establish itself better during early fall, while the nights are cool and the days are long and warm, than it will later on, when the days are short and cloudy. So get your carnations in at once, and get them established on the benches before bad weather sets in. A. F. J. BAUR.

SUPPORTING CARNATIONS.

I will give you my method of supporting carnations, which I like much better than any I have yet tried.

I use No. 10 galvanized wire stakes 36 inches long, one for each stem. The stems are fastened to the stakes with No. 28 copper wire cut into $\frac{1}{4}$ to 2-inch lengths; 3 or 4 to each stem will be necessary. This will keep the stems perfectly straight and almost as stiff as the wire itself. While this makes considerable work, yet they are quickly fastened to the stakes and the extra stiffness of stems and quality of blooms will more than repay all cost when strictly first class blooms are wanted.

It will also insure a higher grade of flowers if the plants are not allowed to throw off too many shoots. My plan is to keep off all but one or two at the base of each flowering stem.

SWEET PEAS.

Sweet peas, which have heretofore been so generally cultivated with great success in the vicinity of Springfield, Mass., have this year been practically a failure in that section, and the prevalence of the blight has led the Rev. W. T. Hutchins to speak of the sweet pea as "a lost flower" in his neighborhood.

In a communication to the Springfield Republican of Aug. 25 he attributed the trouble to a weakening of the constitution of the sweet pea as a result of the rapid development of the flower into higher forms at the expense of the original vigor and hardy habit of the flower and the production of the seed in such vast quantities in California. He says the bounds of nature's supply of vital power have been overstepped and that as a result the whole seed stock is in a condition of nervous prostration; that it is now impossible to get a normal root to support the vine. He holds it will be necessary to re-vitalize the whole foundation seed stock from which the trade supply is grown, and that it will take at least four years for skilled seed growers to do it.

In a letter on the subject W. Atlee Burpee & Co., the Philadelphia seedsmen, say they have had the blight on their grounds to some extent, but have so far been able to combat it successfully by planting their sweet peas in an entirely Asters grown by the Harms Park Floral Co., Chicago.

The soil will not dry out so quickly as before, not only on account of the manure, which prevents evaporation, but also because the sun is getting weaker right along now and does not draw the moisture from the soil as it did during mid-summer.

The growth will also be firmer if a little less water is given than during the hot spell. Leave the ventilators up as high as you dare all night and give all the air you possibly can during the day and be sure that there is no more shade on the roof. If the rain has not taken it off clean, go over the houses with a brush; it will pay you well to do so. A few years ago we used to wait for the frost to loosen the shading material and for the rains to wash it off, and I see some growers do the same thing yet, but like many other old time methods it is penny wise and pound foolish.

Don't be afraid that the cool September morning will injure the plants or that the warm sun will be harmful. Both will help to keep the growth firm and disease-proof. As long as the temperature outside does not drop below 40 degrees you need not be afraid to keep the ventilators open. Even then you will want to run some steam around before you close the houses up tight, but I will have more to say about that later. Of course you do not want the houses to drop that low later on when there is a crop on, but you have nothing like that to consider now. What you should be working for now is a strong, robust, healthy plant free from disease or any other weakness.

There is another task for our carnation hybridists: We need a good hot weather scarlet. We have F. Hill for white, and Scott and Crocker for pink, but not one of the scarlets in commerce today is of any account in warm weather.

We still see a few houses that are not replanted yet and it should not be put off any longer. One or two growers have not commenced planting in yet, claiming that as the plants are growing so well outside it will be best to let them grow new location, where no peas, either ornamental or cultiary, have been grown for several seasons, and with favorable weather they secure as fine peas and as long a season of bloom as they ever did. For the last three years their chief trouble has been with hot, dry weather and the greenfly. They have succeeded in mastering the latter by spraying with white oil and potash soap. In their trial grounds they have growing side by side trials of seed grown in France, England, Germany, northern New York, Oregon and California, and can detect absolutely no difference in the growth of vines from seed grown in these widely different locations, all being equally vigorous under favorable conditions and all equally as susceptible to the blight when the conditions are not favorable.

ASTERS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of part of the field of asters at the establishment of the Harms Park Floral Co., Chicago, recently mentioned in our Chicago notes. There are about 40,000 plants in the field and the cut of flowers has been enormous.

In the foreground are seen the Carlson Improved Peony Flowered type, and this type also predominates in the picture of a vase of aster blooms picked from this field. It is this variety that has supplied the finest flowers, and its growth is remarkably vigorous. The plants were placed 15 inches apart in the field and have grown so vigorously that it is difficult to walk in among them without injuring them. Next year they will plant 18 inches apart and omit every fifth row. This type comes in three colors—white, pink and light lavender. It is certainly a splendid aster.

They also grow Semples' Shell Pink, Giant Comet and Vick's Daybreak and Parity. The latter is a good white, but Daybreak is too light a shade of pink to take well in the market, and they will not grow it again.

In another nearby patch of asters is a bare spot where the plants died out entirely. The mystery was explained by the fact that this was where a lot of old glass was cleaned with lye water last year. Moral—don't use lye where you expect to grow anything in the future.

WATER SUPPLY.

Is there a steam pump on the market for pumping water direct into pipes for watering in greenhouses? If so, what kind is the best? Is it necessary to have a governor on some to regulate pressure? How large a pump would be required to supply water for five houses, each 20x 100, and for irrigating an acre of ground in summer time? How large a well is required and what size suction pipe? What size of main flow pipe?

What kind of valve should we use to keep high pressure of steam (necessary to run pump) from running through greenhouses? L. S.

There are several steam pumps that will do the work. The brass ball cylinder pump made by the American Well Works Co. would be a good one. Have never heard of a governor on a pump, though there may be such a pump made.

For the purpose mentioned the pump should have a capacity of 30 to 40 gallons a minute, with about a 3-inch flow. The size of well is immaterial, just so you have the flow of water. The well should be one that cannot be pumped dry in dry weather. Sink the well until a good heavy flow of water is struck.

A valve could be used to hold steam back from the houses, but by no means resort to this method of water supply. Erect a good substantial water tank, of either steel or cypress, and mount it on a strong derrick not less than 45 feet high. This will give you all the pressure you will need. Then put in an Olds gasoline engine of 3-horse power and use a 2 or 2½-inch flow pipe from engine over top of tank. Attach all supply pipes at bottom of tank. Have a good sized tank, say 600 barrel, and use a 2-inch supply for houses. You can then water all five houses at one time without any fall in pressure. We have plenty of pressure for syringing with our tank, which is 45 feet high.

Be sure to place tank where it will not have to be moved when you build additional houses. We have a system like the above in operation and we have plenty of water. The cost of running our gasoline engine does not exceed an average of 18 cents a day, and we pump water for nine large houses and numerous frames and lath structures for summer plunging.

If you pump direct into your pipes you will have to use a tank with a ball safety valve for high pressure, set to any pressure you desire, and then when you close off the spigot the pressure will operate the valve and the tank will catch the supply; otherwise you would have a "bust up," for there would be no outlet to take the pressure off pipes and engine.

F. W. BEACH.
Dallas, Tex.

Replying to the inquiry about water supply, I have always used direct pressure, to which I attribute the success that has followed my syringing with a pressure at the nozzle of 65 to 90 lbs.

I use a No. 3 Columbus pump direct into water service of 1½-inch main, which divides as it passes through center vestibule into 1-inch outlets, distributed along the beds by ¾-inch faucets. I use two hose at a time, taking the water from each side of the main, thereby syringing each half of the house simultaneously.

Steam is derived from a 30-horse power boiler, pressure 55 to 60 lbs. No controller is necessary. Water is dead-headed when not used, which affects the pump very little. Service of our pumps lasts ten to twelve years without any repairs at all.

This would, I believe, fill the bill for L. S. In fact, I have never been able to understand why this system is not more commonly used.

CHAS. RAYNER.
Anchorage, Ky.

In answer to L. S. in your issue of 29th inst., would say we have a country place consisting of three greenhouses, two 20x100 and one 28x100 feet, which we water with a steam pump, cylinder 3x2x3, suction 1 1/4-inch, discharge 1-inch, attached to cistern 9 feet deep; we also have a well 176 feet deep, with deep well pump attached; we run both pumps at same time, with our boiler, a 12-horse power vertical, which is larger than necessary, but we find a large boiler economical in both attention and fuel; we can run both pumps at the same time with five pounds steam, only our injector requires twenty-five pounds steam to work satisfactorily and we have our boiler set to blow off at 40 pounds.

The deep well pump pumps the water from well into cistern and the steam pump distributes from there. Our houses are all laid with 1 1/4-inch distributing mains (1-inch would be large enough), and we have spigots conveniently located so as to water each house with one section of 3/4-inch hose twenty-five feet long. A man at the hose with a bicycle whistle to signal the boy at the pump for more or less pressure is all that is required; one whistle means stop; two whistles, go ahead; three whistles, slow up. I forgot to say we have a 3-horse-power engine to run our pump at well.

We use our steam pump and hose to apply all insecticides, chemical fertilizers (liquid) and liquid manures. We find it especially convenient in applying tobacco water and paris green to mums for black aphid and caterpillars; we have an extra suction attached and pump the insecticides from barrels and the fertilizers from tanks. We take off all our ventilators during the summer and we find it the only way to keep down black fly.

Our boiler, too, we utilize for extra heat in zero weather. We use the same pipe we use in the field to water with in summer, to run temporary coils for more heat where necessary during winter, and it works like a charm.

LEBANON GREENHOUSES.

Lebanon, Pa.

I would answer the questions asked by L. S. as follows: There are a number of makes of steam pumps which will force the water directly into the pipes or hose. It would be difficult to say which is the best. It is not necessary to have a governor to regulate pressure. To supply water for houses mentioned would require a pump with 2-inch suction and 1 1/4-inch discharge. From this, one to three lines of hose could be used. With 20 lbs. steam there would be 25 lbs. water pressure. To run three lines of hose would require 35 to 40 lbs. steam. A well would need to be so good that a 2-inch pipe would not exhaust the flow of water. Either Fairbanks or Jenkins valves could be used. H. P. SMITH.

Piqua, O.

PIPING FOR HOT WATER.

I have a house 75 ft. long, 17 ft. wide and 11 ft. to peak of roof. It is now piped with the old 4-inch pipe. I would like to know how to repipe it with 2-inch pipe so as to get the best results.

In the center bench, which is five feet wide, I have carnations, and the two side benches, four feet each, are for bedding plants. I want to arrange it so I can run it warm enough in the spring for coleus, say 65 to 70 degrees at night.

STEADY SUBSCRIBER.

In reply to the question of Steady Subscriber, I would suggest an arrangement of piping as indicated in the accompanying plan for this house, 75x17 feet. To secure 65 to 70 degrees, night temperature, I would advise 15 lines of 2-inch pipes, five under each bench, valving one return pipe on each coil so as to be able to conveniently regulate the temperature when running the house for carnations. New York. H. W. GIBBONS.

PIPING AND BOILER CAPACITY.

I have a detached house 20x100. The piping consists of about 550 feet of 4-inch pipe, and it is heated by an old-fashioned box boiler. It does not keep the house warm enough in severe weather. Have I got pipe enough, or is the boiler at fault?

I am building a new boiler with a capacity of 5,000 square feet. Would it be advisable to twin the two boilers, so that I could heat the same pipe with this new boiler? The boilers will stand about 20 feet apart. The 4-inch pipe is the old style, put together with calked joints, and is about one foot from the ground.

Mass. W. W.

In reply to W. W.'s inquiry, it seems that his trouble is caused by the deficiency of heating surface in the greenhouse. He does not say what temperature is desired nor the amount of glass exposure in the house, but assuming there is glass on the roof and ends, and a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees is desired, the house would require a minimum heating surface equal to 870 feet of 4-inch pipes.

In answer to his second question, it would be desirable to connect the two boilers, so that one or both may be used, as circumstances may require.

PLANT BREEDING CONFERENCE, 1902.

The following preliminary program of subjects for the proposed International Conference on Plant Breeding and Hybridization, to be held in the fall of 1902, is announced by the council of the Horticultural Society of New York. The exact dates for the meetings are not yet decided upon and the program as given is subject to alteration:

1. Results of Hybridization and Plant Breeding in Canada. (Illustrated by specimens.)—Wm. Saunders, Director of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Canada.
2. Notes on Plant Breeding in California.—E. J. Wickson, Horticulturist, Agricultural Experiment Station, University of California.

ON TO ASHEVILLE!

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FLORISTS' REVIEW: In reading the trade papers I read nothing but "kicking" because the 1901 convention voted to hold the next convention at Asheville, N. C., in 1902. Now, why do these members "kick" because they lost Milwaukee? Whose fault was it? I for one know, as I was present in the convention hall at the time the vote was taken, and if the members who wanted to go to Milwaukee had not been away sampling the golden fluid, and the spokesman said so much about the Milwaukee golden fluid, they perhaps would have won. But the first two days of the convention we saw too many under the influence of this golden fluid, and I and a number of others voted for Asheville, N. C., and we feel we did right, and too much credit cannot be given Mr. McCloud for his noble address, and the fight he made.

I also see Mr. Grove P. Rawson (who, by the way, was not present because, he says, he had other fish to fry, and who must have forgotten that he could have salted or pickled them so they would have kept if he wished to attend the convention; or, still better, he could have brought them along, as we had a special train and could have had a fried fish dinner and no doubt given Brother Rawson a vote of thanks for his floral fish dinner) and he also refers to Mr. William Scott, our past president, as Brudder and Great Scott, and says he had changed his tune and ought to be spanked, etc. Now, Mr. Scott is no nigger, nor was he a nigger in the fence in the matter of Asheville, as the convention at large voted him a set of engrossed resolutions, which shows what they think of his noble work for the S. A. F. in the past and at the Pan-American exhibition. As to the president's reception, Brother Rawson quotes some good ideas, if they are carried out, that is name a press committee who would have published in all local papers a notice of the convention ahead of time and invite the public, as also supported by Mr. James M. Lamb, of Fayetteville, N. C.

Now, the whole thing looks like the cow who had a good pail of milk and then kicked it over, and afterwards was growling because she did so. Now, the spirit that each member should have and express at the present time is, success to Asheville, N. C., convention in 1902, and then success shall crown our S. A. F., as we have elected men we can trust with the management of our society, and who will not make it a trust or a clique club.

So now, brothers who feel so sore because they lost Milwaukee, from now on pull off your coats and work to make Asheville convention in 1902 a success and it will rebound with good to our society and ourselves, and I am sure all will be found in line when the convention meets, and will say we who voted in 1901 made no mistake, but will want to go there soon again. So, yours for success for the S. A. F. and the 1902 convention, with a big tiger.

HENRI BEAULIEU.

BUFFALO.

The writer is hardly able to judge how business has been for the past week as it has been a very much broken up one for him. Good flowers are none too plentiful. Asters seem to be of an inferior quality, and this is general with all the growers of the neighborhood. Plenty of gladiolus are coming in and sweet peas are still to be had. It is to be hoped that we shall soon have better roses. With the exception of Kaiserin they have been very so-so for some time past. Some enterprising man ought to plant half an acre of Cochet, for it seems to be the ideal rose for summer use.

I find that all the florists did not come to the convention, for there has been a good sprinkling arriving right along. The attendance at the Pan-American for the past two weeks has almost reached the desired point, and yesterday, Labor Day, there were nearly 104,000. President's Day comes on next Thursday, when the crowd is bound to be large.

We have had some very copious rains this past week, which, although it is rather damaging to the flowers, is keeping the grass and everything green. I would particularly like visitors to see the aquatic basins in front of the Manufactures Building and the other in front of the Machinery Building. The basin containing the hardy nymphs and nelumbiums is now remarkably fine. There are some sixteen varieties of nymphs in boxes, each containing some ten to twelve plants and it is a beautiful sight in the early morning, when they are at their best.

Messrs. Groff and Cowee are still keeping up a magnificent display of their gladiolus. They had on exhibition some 10,000 blooms one day last week when it was photographed and I hope soon to send the florists' journals copies. In the grounds the dahlias are coming into bloom. These I was somewhat nervous over but they are doing splendidly. The herbaceous borders are still very attractive. I wish I had time to send a list of all that is to be seen in them and will endeavor to do so later. There are some things there not generally known that I believe would be valuable to florists.

The cannas are now at their very best, and I can scarcely believe more brilliant beds have been seen elsewhere. Tarrytown is a magnificent sight and so is a bed of Dwarf Florence Vaughan, the exhibit of J. C. Vaughan. Even the tuberous rooted begonias, of which so many are sceptical as an outside bedding plant, are very fine. One variety exhibited by Henry A. Dreer, called Duke Zeppelin, is as brilliant as a bed of geraniums and much more pleasing. Beds of asters are also very gay. One of the most interesting beds on the grounds is a large irregular group of grasses, the exhibit of H. A. Dreer. It contains the Arundo Donax (its variegated form), several species of eulalia and Pennisetum. A very striking bed is a large circular one of Tritoma Pfizerii. Altogether I believe that the grounds have never looked better than they do at the present, and I cannot but wish that every florist in the country had one quiet walk through it, for I do think some things are doing about as well as it is possible to do. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There are more people on the streets in the shopping section of the city, a sure sign that the tide is turning city wards again. Business is fairish; those who are in earnest are doing surprisingly well these days. Beauties are unchanged from last report; Brides and Maids continue to improve in quality and in popularity; $3 and $4 per 100 is still the market price for the best. It was premature to say that asters were on the wane. There are still a great many and they are very useful; the price remains unchanged. Leo Niessen has handled a large number of these flowers the past week, and also of gladioli. The latter is low in price.

A pretty and seasonable Labor Day novelty is the dahlia as grown by W. P. Peacock of Ateo, N. J. The colors are a fine double yellow and a scarlet; they are very decorative. S. S. Pennock is handling them.

William Wood, of Trenton, is sending in fine Kaisersins to S. S. Pennock.

Various Items.

The stores are brightening up a bit; more attention is being paid to the show windows now that fall is here.

in a pot, in all sizes from 8 inches down. Here, as in nearly all our other up-to-date places, very tall specimens are conspicuous by their absence—it is not good policy to grow them too large when they can be sold in medium sizes. The seed of this variety is sown in plain soil covered with peat.

Areen lutescens is second in point of numbers and was also in every size from 8 inches down. One especially fine batch in 6-inch pots was made up from three 3-inch plants and was a treat to see. Mr. Taplin thinks the lack of scrubbing was of benefit in this case—no, they did not remain dirty, they never got dirty; Jennings Bros. evaporating pans are used and scrubbing isn't needed. Eight pans are used to a house 100x23, four on each side placed on the pipes alternately. These are filled with tobacco water and are kept actively at work while firing lasts. Some nice 4-inch plants of this variety were made up from 2-inch plants, considered better than making up from the seed pan.

Latania borbonica came next in point of numbers and was fine. The 10-inch and 8-inch were especially well done; the former size is scarce. Kentia Fosteriana included some good 3-foot plants in 8-inch pots. Pandanus utilis was free from spot and looked promisquite an important point in this item of the expense column.

The strife among busy florists as to who shall go first to the telephone has been lessened by the tacitly understood rule that the greater comes last. The less distinguished man must meekly "hold the wire" while the boy at the other end gets the great man. This is plain enough when a humble countryman wants a haughty townsman or a poor grower wants a wealthy retailer or commission man, but what do you think happens when H. H. Battles calls S. S. Pennock?

This is the season of the year when the Beauty growers feel sympathetically drawn toward that passage in Shakespeare in which Lady Macbeth, who has just murdered her husband's rival, General Banquo, is described as washing her hands while walking in her sleep and saying, "Out, damned spot."

The club meeting was held on Tuesday evening and was well attended. G. C. Watson, Leo Niessen and Robert Kift, talked about the Buffalo convention and what they saw and learned there. The present officers were renominated for another term. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply of roses and carnations is slightly larger than last week, but there is practically no change in prices. The best teas bring $4, with a few extra good Kaisersins going as high as $5. Beauties are coming in more freely, but the demand is brisk and the best grades are still scarce. On carnations $1.50 is still top price for the best, and those that bring this figure are generally fine whites. A large share of the cut is sold at $1, and the poorest go at as low as 60 cents. Asters are not moving quite so freely, though $1.50 is still obtained for extra select blooms. The poorer grades go at as low as $3 to $5 per 1,000. A few good auratum lilies are still coming in, and they go quickly at as high as 15 cents a bloom for the best. Gladioli are still in evidence, but are almost unsalable. Hydrangea paniculata and similar stock is on sale, but it moves slowly at low figures.

Shipping trade is picking up rapidly, and the prospects are bright for an excellent season.

Kennicott is receiving some very fine princeps adiantums that sell at $2 a hundred.

Various Items.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hanswirth start this Thursday for New York, where Mr. Hanswirth will attend the Great Council of the Red Men, in which he is an official of high degree. Stops will be made at Niagara Falls and Buffalo on the way, and they expect to be away about two weeks altogether.

The Harms Park Floral Company have been fortunate with their field grown carnations this year as well as with their asters. The plants they are benching are extra good. They grow mushrooms under the benches and find it profitable.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., is now in Michigan "doing" that state.

Mr. and Mrs. Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Company, St. Louis, were recent visitors.

Web Randall has returned from a visit to his old home in Pennsylvania, and brought back with him seven pounds of additional avoirdupois.

Decorated Vehicle Entered by the Detroit Floral Co. in the Recent Industrial Parade, Detroit, Mich.

Charles Thomas has returned to his old location in the former Baldwin place, now being turned into a theater, and serenely offers flowers despite the turmoil around him.

The Henry A. Dreer Company are displaying the Buffalo Florists' Club's silver cup in their window this week, together with a photograph of their prize winning group of foliage plants.

Edwin Lonsdale has planted 1,400 Queen of Edgely roses in his houses for the coming season.

The seed stores have an extra force this week preparing to handle the fall rush.

Charles D. Ball, of Holmesburg, has a thrifty lot of palms of standard varieties. W. H. Taplin, the manager, was very busy getting out early orders when I called on Labor Day, but he made time to show me the plants of which he is justly proud. Kentia Belmoreana is here in great numbers. Clean, sturdy stuff that ought to do well anywhere; some single and some made plants, three ing; it was chiefly in sizes from 6 inches down. Pandanus Veitchii was stocky and evenly colored; the salable sizes were getting scarce. Dracaena terminalis in 6-inch pots was beginning to color nicely. Livistonia rotundifolia, when cool grown, is found satisfactory in most cases. Ficus elastica variegata is considered a good house plant.

Three houses have been torn down and rebuilt since my last visit and these have been fitted up with Garland's iron gutters, considered very satisfactory, ice and snow melting readily.

The coal men are eager for orders now, following up all possible customers with energy. The rate on the florists' sizes, buckwheat and pea, is higher now than it was one year ago, yet the outlook is so uncertain that it seems wiser to lay in the entire winter's supply this month than to risk the higher prices which experts predict after Oct. 1. Another reason in favor of buying now is that the probability of getting a first-class article is much greater than in the winter;

Floral Float entered by B. Schroeter in the recent Industrial Parade, Detroit, Mich.

George R. Scott returned from a four weeks' stay at the country place in Michigan to find that burglars had ransacked his city mansion during his absence and removed his Sunday trousers. He will wear cotton batting and oilpaper this winter.

Bowling.

At a meeting of the Bowling Club held last Thursday evening the Edgely Cup was ordered suitably engraved and stored in a safety deposit vault until further orders. It was decided to inaugurate another series of trade league games, to start the first week in October, and Messrs. P. J. Hauswirth, E. F. Winterson, George Stollery and Charles Balluff were appointed a committee to organize four teams and arrange details. It was also decided to assess each team $5, giving the sum of $20 to expend for prizes, and a committee, consisting of Messrs. Hauswirth, Asmus and Winterson, was appointed to secure special prizes. A vote of thanks was passed to the Buffalo bowlers for courtesies extended during the recent national tournament. After the meeting a number adjourned to the alleys, and the scores of the two games follow:

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Notes.

Trade has been fairly good for the week ending with this writing (September 2). Asters are abundant and are now quite good. Just how long they will continue depends upon the number and voracity of the beetle, which, though late in arrival, is to be counted now as a factor of the situation. Messrs. Lotz and Woodfall have each about an acre and their theory is that only a certain number of bugs come, so that a portion of a crop is safe anyway.

Cochet roses are improving in quality. So are Perles, but the demand for these lessens as the white Cochet's grow better. American Beauties are just beginning to come in, and no Brides or Maids of any merit are yet in evidence. Pink carnations are plentiful, but whites are scarce and in demand.

The board of managers of the House of Correction, a state penal institution, it is announced, will put up a greenhouse. Since it is incredible that its products are for the delectation of its inmates, and equally so, that the flowers are for the use of the officers and managers of the establishment (for the public would hardly tolerate that) it would seem that they will come upon the market.

It is said that the largest family business by far this summer in this city has been done by a member of the trade who rents the glass and commands the labor of inmates of another reformatory institution for juvenile offenders, the terms of his contract, of course, not being publicly known, though it is understood to be an extremely liberal one.

A member of the Gardeners' Club here, at a recent meeting, introduced a scheme for the legislature to appropriate sufficient money for the construction of a greenhouse at the State Agricultural College. As there is already at that seat of learning quite a large glass structure (ample, it would be supposed, for the technical uses of the school), the question here recurs as to what is to be done with the products from this new house.

A virile and active trade organization might well find effective work in creating a moral sentiment and compel legislative enactment against the growing in public institutions of products which are to go upon the market in competition with those of its own members. Is it possible that the Gardeners' Club is willing to have its members and the other citizens of the state taxed to erect greenhouses, the products of which, at least those of the first two institutions indicated, grown by the labor of criminals, will come into competition with their own. If they are, indeed, they are far more tolerant than the men of other trades, who would storm the doors of the legislature rather than such things should be.

Here is a far more pregnant field of usefulness than cuttings or even flower shows, for a compact and well directed organization of gardeners and florists.

Alex. Scott, manager of the Florists'

Exchange, was out of town for a few days last week, his sad errand being to attend the obsequies of a deceased brother, David Scott, a florist at Fredonia, N. Y.

Robert L. Graham was hors de combat for a couple of weeks from a nail wound in his foot, which for a time gave him much pain and uneasiness. He is recovering now.

William Christie is recovering, too, slowly from the effects of the Buffalo trip, sighing for new Buffaloes to conquer, and quite of the mind that there shall be no more conventions without him, uncurd and incurable of his joking propensities, his roving capacity unimpaired and no edge taken off his wit and humorous sayings.

Richard Vincent, Jr., who is one of the oldest patrons of husbandry in this state, had at his fine place at White Marsh last week an assemblage of prominent Grangers, including the Masters of the National and the Maryland Granges, to rehabilitate a grange of which he and his family are members. His visitors enjoyed greatly an inspection of his large range of houses and attractive grounds. John Donn has sold his plant on Erdman avenue to John Glass, well known as an efficient and industrious gardener, who will doubtless make the place pay. The consideration is said to have been $5,000. R.

ST. LOUIS.

Trade and Personal Items.

The weather has been cool and delightful, but we have had no rain to speak of. There is a notable improvement in the stock of cut flowers coming into this market. The roses coming in are much better than they were a week ago.

From all indications, Fred Ammann of Edwardsville, will break the record on Perle roses, and perhaps on Beauties this season. The stock is handled by C. A. Kuehn.

The Anchorage Rose Company of Anchorage, Ky., are sending in some fine Maids and Brides. The stock will be handled by F. M. Ellis this season.

The Beauty stock of George M. Kellogg of Pleasant Hill, Mo., which is large and fine, is handled by H. G. Berning.

The roses that came in last week sold for $1 to $3 per 100 for common; American Beauties, from $2 to $10 per 100. They were retailed for 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen, and good stock at that.

Carnations are not so plentiful, in fact are very scarce, that is, good stock. Quite a lot of poor, short-stemmed ones come in which don't sell well; $1 per 100 is the general price. Housing the plants is progressing favorably and our growers have plenty of work for the next month to come.

Asters are very plentiful, but only the large white and purple ones are in demand. The bulk of them go at 50 cents to $1 per 100; a few extra fine Simple's go at $1.50.

Plenty of tuberose stalks, both single and double, which sell from $3 to $4. Gladioli stalks have been a glut; very little sale for them. Smilax is in great demand, with none in the market.

Mr. A. Schuerman and family enjoyed a ten days' visit at the Pan-American in Buffalo.

Mr. William Trillow, one of the old-time members of the Florists' Club, is in town calling on the trade and his many friends.

J. F. Howard, the florist of Hot Springs, Ark., was a visitor the past week.

John Young and family have returned from Lincoln City, where they enjoyed their three weeks' stay very much.

John W. Kunz has left the employ of H. G. Berning and it is rumored will again try the retail business this fall.

Otto Koenig spent all of last week in Louisville attending the Sir Knights convention.

Shaw's Garden was open to visitors yesterday (Sunday), it being the second Sunday opening this year. The attendance was very large.

Bowling.

The members of the Florists' Bowling Club who are to play in the league games got together on Monday and played five games. The rolling was only fair, but will improve with cool weather. Mr. Trillow, of Chicago, was a visitor and rolled two games. Mr. Sturtz, our new member and who will be on the league team, came nearly being high man.

The scores are:

NEW YORK.

The regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held at their rooms, 19 West Twenty-seventh street, Monday evening next. Fall exhibition matters will be the principal business before the meeting.

The death of a few prominent citizens this week caused a little activity in the way of funeral designs. Thorley had the majority of the work; they were very busy on Saturday and turned out some very large and beautiful wreaths. Very few designs are seen nowadays except wreaths and bunches.

However, this little ripple of business was not felt in the wholesale district; where all is patience and disgust: the market is at a standstill almost. Thousands of roses are offered at $2.50 per 1,000. The select few, and they are few, bring fairly fancy prices. Beauties bring from $3 per dozen down; valley can be had for from $1 to $2.50 per 100; catteyas 50 to 75 cents each for select stock, and anything you like for the general run of outdoor flowers.

A letter from Buffalo requests us to inform P. Welch, of Boston, that the duly press concerning these plants, and some have been kind enough to say we were the author of these criticisms; we didn't write them. We are rather inclined to praise the efforts of the few men who have succeeded in accomplishing so much for New York.

We would not have a Botanical Garden here were it not for the work of the Torrey Botanical Club. A mistake is made by having science appear too prominent at these institutions, but we are sure all the country will yet be proud of these gardens; only keep politics and ornamental humbugs out of it. Botanical gardens need the friendship and patronage of florists, not their indifference or antipathy. J. I. D.

TORONTO.

The first week of our Industrial Fair has been ushered in and escorted out with anything but favorable weather, particularly the last days being very wet and disagreeable, curtailing the attendance considerably. Nevertheless, those who had sufficient courage to face the elements were rewarded, for things are looking better, with more of them, as a rule, than at any of the recent annual exhibitions. However, the first week is principally just extra time, as it were, previous to the grand rally of the second week, when we look for an attendance in the neighborhood of 100,000 daily.

The pot plants have been staged and awards placed on them according to merit. I might mention, previous to giving a summary of the classes, that the judge must have found considerable difficulty in passing upon a number of groups, for had he closed his eyes and placed the cards he would not have gone very far wrong; it very often occurred that the first and second were so nearly equal that only after very careful consideration could the awards be made. Following are the awards:

Fifty distinct varieties foliage plants: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Central Prison; 3rd, Mantion Bros. While the Exhibition Park and Central Prison both had undoubtedly very fine exhibits, the particularly fine colored foliage of the former won the decision.

Group of plants arranged for effect (about 200 square feet): 1st, Horticultural Gardens; 2nd, Mantion Bros.; 3rd, Government House; 4th, Grainger Bros. The group by the Horticultural Gardens was very fine and easily deserved first, while the other three were worthy of their exhibitors.

Twelve cultivated ferns: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Central Prison; 3rd, Horticultural Gardens; 4th, Mantion Bros. The first two were particularly fine lots of plants.

Six adiantum ferns: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Central Prison; 3rd, Mantion Bros. The first two were very fine. 2nd, Horticultural Gardens; 3rd, Mantion Bros. Exhibition Park was disqualified for having a made-up plant, which was a Farleyense and a very fine.

New and rare plants never before exhibited in Toronto: 1st, Central Prison (Tradescantia Victoria); 2nd, Horticultural Gardens (Hibiscus Manihoti); 3rd, Exhibition Park (high colored croton). A peculiar part of this class was that the first and second were made-up plants and were not disqualified.

Orchid prizes were taken principally by the following in order named: Exhibition Park, Mantion Bros.; Horticultural Gardens (high colored poor); too early; not up to previous years.

Twenty-four ferns, 12 varieties, 6-in. pots: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Exhibition Park; 3rd, Horticultural Gardens; 4th, Grainger Bros. Very close judging was necessary in this class.

Caladiums, fancy: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Horticultural Gardens; 3rd, Grainger Bros. First two were very well grown plants with good foliage.

Twelve foliage plants: 1st, Central Prison; 2nd, Exhibition Park; 3rd, Government House. The following plants: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Mantion Bros.; 3rd, Central Prison.

Twelve palms, 9 varieties, 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Central Prison; 3rd, Mantion Bros. A beautiful lot of stuff.

Twelve palms, 3-in. pots: 1st, Central Prison; 2nd, Exhibition Park; 3rd, Mantion Bros. Twelve palms, 6-in. pots: 1st, Exhibition Park; 2nd, Mantion Bros.

Bed of Acalypha Macaefearna in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

BED OF ACALYPHAS.

Among the new features of the bedding at Lincoln Park, Chicago, this summer is a bed of Acalypha Macaefearna bordered with Abutilon Savitzii and with a phoenix in the center, of which we present herewith an engraving from a recent photograph.

The acalypha makes a bright show and is a welcome change from colons for the purpose.

FRIDONIA, N. Y.—David Scott, the florist, died Aug. 27, of Bright's disease, aged 65 years. He was a brother of William Scott, of Buffalo. He was born in England and came to America twenty years ago. He had charge of one of the finest private places in Buffalo for seven or eight years, and afterward did considerable landscape gardening, laying out several of the finest grounds on Delaware avenue. For the past ten years he has been in business for himself here. The funeral was held last Friday and the burial was in beautiful Forest Lawn Cemetery, Buffalo.

Boston terrier still wanders up and down Franklin street to the terror of the coons; he'd make a good mascot for the old guard, Patrick; send for him.

The New York and Flatbush Bowling clubs compete for a prize on the Flatbush alleys this Thursday night. W. J. Elliott, of Dey street, prefers the bowling green to the bowling alleys; the club he belongs to owns a fine clubhouse and green at Communipaw, N. J. He is one of the team rolling against the Boston Club at Boston this week. William is rightly of opinion that the florists should organize a team to bowl on the green.

Prof. N. L. Britton and Prof. John F. Cowell started on Saturday on a collecting tour of the West Indies.

The new range of glass at the New York Botanical Garden is being built by Hitchings & Co., and will no doubt be finished before severe weather sets in. This range of houses will complete the finest range of show houses on the continent. They are at present occupied by a miscellaneous collection of plants given by citizens and institutions. Some very severe criticisms have appeared in the Members of Canadian Horticultural Association at Springbank Park, London, Ont., August, 1901.

Selaginellas: 1st, Major Pellatt; 2nd, Exhibition Park; 3rd, Horticultural Gardens.
Begonias, Hex and flowering, were captured by Major Pellatt with very fine plants, as were also the geraniums and fuchsias, the other exhibit scarcely deserving mention.

You may wonder why the lilies and other flowering plants have not come in for fuller mention, but could you all see them you would agree with me that on the whole they are too poor and ragged to mention in the same column with the palms and foliage plants.

Cut flowers and designs come in next week.

Business has improved slightly this last week, with plenty of stock to supply all needs. C. W.

BACK-YARD GREENHOUSES.

Under the above title the Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, prints an article in its issue of Aug. 24 that would be exceedingly humorous were it not likely to lead people into making investments that could not fail to result in financial losses and bitter disappointments. A paper "founded by Benjamin Franklin" should surely be old enough to know better than to print such misinformation. The article opens as follows:

Many a city back yard of ordinary size might be made to yield a comfortable income if the space were utilized in a common-sense fashion—that is to say, by roofing it with glass and converting it into a greenhouse for raising flowers and high-priced garden vegetables. Such a transformation could be easily accomplished with the help of a carpenter, and the cost of it would be relatively small, while the labor involved in carrying on such an enterprise is so light and pleasant as to be particularly attractive to women.

Most women, indeed, enjoy nothing so much as pottering about among growing things, and the profits to be derived from a business of this kind are surprisingly large, considering the size of the investment and the amount of work required.

The writer then goes on to recommend the growing of carnations, violets lettuce, mushrooms, etc., for sale to florists and restaurants. The idea of florists being anxious and willing to pay good prices for the floral product of such establishments (providing a product should result) is quite too funny in view of existing conditions. And to suggest that an entirely inexperienced person could at once attain success in the growing of cut flowers in paying quantities under such adverse conditions is even more humorous.

The professional grower who may have happened to read the article in question undoubtedly dismissed it with a laugh. But how about any unfortunates who may be led into investing their hard earned savings in such a hopeless venture? Ought not those who know the inevitable result to take some steps to prevent the dissemination of such misinformation, or to counteract it after it has been disseminated?

POLLEN POTENCY.

The function of the pollen grain as a fertilizer of the embryo seed is a popularly recognized fact, and the biologist recognizes its potency to the further extent that, out of the myriad usually provided, a single one is sufficient for each individual seed. This latter fact, however, has been disputed, it having been claimed, on the evidence of diverse results in the offspring, that more than one grain, or its equivalent antherozoid, may influence the ovum so that in the progeny the characters of more than two parents may present themselves. Deep research goes, however, to prove that fertilization is effected on such definite lines that there is no room for a tertiary influence, the maternal and paternal primary cells being actually reduced to half-cells prior to their union, so that such union suffices to make one perfect cell, with all the potencies of the twain within it, and thus, like the lid on a pill-box, at once completes the structure and excludes further addition.

Recent research, the results of which have been published in the Botanische Zeitung by Herr C. Currens, points to certain phenomena in this connection which are extremely interesting, not merely to the scientific botanist, but also to the practical horticulturist as a crosser and hybridizer, or even as a selective cultivator on simpler lines. This investigator's experiments tend to show that, in the first place, a certain percentage of the pollen grains are in some cases functionally useless, so that to insure fertilization at all a greater number must be applied to the stigma than there are incipient seeds to be fertilized and that, in the second place, when an abundance of pollen is applied there arises a competitive race among them as their tubes traverse the tissues of the stigma in order to reach the ovaries at its base, and that, eventually, it is the stronger and more vigorous grain which effects the fertilization, this greater strength and vigor finding expression in the better constitution of the offspring.

In this simple fact, for fact it probably is, though further experiment is necessary to establish it as a general law, we see at once an explanation of the enormous numerical disproportion of pollen grains to fertilizable seeds. Most flowers produce thousands of grains against scores of seeds, the disproportion being the least in cleistogamous flowers, which present no opportunities for scattering, as they fertilize themselves, and the greatest in wind-fertilized plants, where millions are dispersed upon the breeze, of which a relatively minute minority can possibly be effective. In all cases, presumably, there is a proportion maintained between the greater or less certainty of conjunction, and, doubtless, a very large amount of the seeming waste of pollen constitutes a sort of insurance premium for the better security of the existence of the race.

From the experiments above mentioned, however, we can deduce another reason for the abundance, as it admits of a sort of sexual selection from a crowd of suitors, the race is obviously beneficial to the race in the long run. This also doubtless accounts for many cases of little understood protency, since it is quite clear that pollen grains which produce and extend their tubes more rapidly than their fellows are practically bound to be first in the race, and hence to impress their character the more prominently on the eventual batch of seedlings.—Gardener's Magazine.

STERILIZED SOIL.

A grower of roses for the Chicago market, Mr. F. Stielow, of Niles Center, uses naturally sterilized soil in his rose houses. He digs clay out of a pit—just such clay as is used in making bricks—and composites it with manure for a season. It is then mixed over and used in the rose benches. It looks decidedly unpromising, but it grows good roses.

Trade Conditions.

The ever kaleidoscopic situation here has been jostled a bit. Pinks are really scarce, especially colored ones. There are no good ones and the best that can be found are worth 2 cents each. Sweet peas seem to have dropped out of the race, but small white flowers, which have been bashful, are now quite forward.

Asters—well, you know what they must be at this date; but good, large ones sell quite well at 1 cent, while smaller ones sell less readily at from 25 to 50 cents per 100.

Roses? Don't say a word. If you try to say a word for each rose of the daily supply you will need a larger dictionary than now exists. The price upon them runs from 50 cents to $8 per 100. Red ones not yet very much in evidence.

Stores about town are sprucing up generally and the extensive repairs at Galvin's Tremont street place are done. They make the store a worthy feature of the sights of the city. The walls are fairly covered with huge mirrors, giving the idea that the store extends from about Court street to Boylston street. Multiplying his big Back Bay store by two is, of course, a huge problem, and is only yet well under way. It will be a tremendous affair when done.

W. H. Elliott, having roofed in all the available hills of Massachusetts, has begun upon the little irregularities in the natural scenery of New Hampshire. The Stearns Lumber Company has sent him up the material for a small matter of 600 feet long by 51 feet wide.

J. S. MANTER.

CINCINNATI.

Various Notes.

There has been a steady demand for flowers during the past week. Carnations are in good demand and the supply is not large enough to go around. The price ranges from 50 cents for those cut in the field to $2 per 100 for the first cut of fancies. Field carnation blooms have not been much of a success this year. In fact, many of the growers are very much discouraged owing to the small size of the plants they will be obliged to house. Although we are now having fine growing weather, it did not come till so late now, it will do but little good.

Roses seem to be doing nicely everywhere. The quality is improving slowly but surely, and indications are that we shall have good stock for the coming season. Brides, Bridesmaids and Meteors go at from 2 to 4 cents. There are very few long-stem Beauties coming in as yet. Those with twelve to fifteen inch stems sell at $1 to $1.25 per dozen. Short stems go at 3 to 4 cents. There is a good demand for Beauties in this market, and good prices can be obtained for them. At present the supply is next to nothing.

The late northern asters have not made their appearance as yet, but are expected to arrive this week. Those grown about this city are almost all cut out. The few remaining ones are short-stemmed, and sell for 50 cents per 100.

Business for the month of August was considerably ahead of that for the previous year, which, of course, is an indication of continued prosperity. I can see no reason why the coming season will not be a record-breaker if the supply of good stock be anywhere near the demand.

The annual harvest home, which is held at Westwood, occurred during the past week, and Mr. Ernsthoff, George Murphy and J. T. Conger were present competing for the prizes offered for plants and cut flowers. Honors were fairly well divided among them.

Mr. Walter Mott, of H. A. Dracer, Philadelphia, and Mr. Henry Behrens, of Middletown, O., were in the city recently.

Mr. Behrens is rebuilding his place, and now has everything in shape for the coming season. C. J. OILMER.

GEORGE NICHOLSON.

Mr. George Nicholson, author of the Dictionary of Gardening, has retired as curator of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, England, a position he has held for many years, on account of impaired health. His many friends in America as well as elsewhere, will be deeply grieved to learn that he has been obliged to retire for such a reason.

JOSEPH HEACOCK, - - Wyncote, Pa.

A UNIVERSAL MISTAKE OF THE RETAILER AND GROWER.

Ma. Editor: Did it ever occur to you, when you see stock lying on the counters of the wholesale houses in a morning, that it was wasting money and good flowers that ought to be in water. The grower should insist on having his stock put in water as soon as it reaches the commission man, but if it is, the retailer thinks it is not fresh and has been kept over from the day before. Well, he is the one who suffers when he takes home the stock that has been out of the water for two or three hours. It certainly will not keep as long as if it had been in water that long, and if the stock is not sold that morning the grower must stand the loss, as it will not bring as much by 50 per cent the second day.

Let the grower insist on having his stock in water and let the retailer insist on getting his stock out of water, then the commission man will do his part.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

The Elmira Horticultural Society holds several exhibitions each season and finds that more and more interest is taken each succeeding year in growing the finer varieties of flowers.

At the rose exhibition in June there were several grand collections of the newer varieties of hybrid roses. The grand prize—La France silver cup—was won by Eugene Laing with eighty varieties. The sweet pea show, August 1, brought out some fine home grown flowers and a splendid display from the Steuben county experts who did so well

PANSY SEED GIANT OF CALIFORNIA.

Having bought all the seed of Giant of California from the grower and wishing to build up a trade amongst the leading florists of the United States and Canada, I will send out the first 10 lbs. as follows: Trade package, 25c; 1/4 oz., $1.00; 1 oz., $4.00, free by mail. Giant of California is the largest strain of Pansies in the world, some measure 5 inches in diameter, consisting of 22 colors, all having very large eyes. A trial will convince you. Seedsman's orders not accepted. (CASH.)

at the Pan-American sweet pea show. A chrysanthemum exhibition is being planned for the first week in November, and the school children are growing plants to exhibit at that time.

Among the other activities of the society is the improvement work, trying to arouse public interest in beautifying the city by means of free lectures and meetings. Also we are working in connection with the school authorities to interest the children in growing flowers. Thousands of packages of seeds were sown and plants are being cared for preparatory for a competitive exhibition soon after school begins next month. Quite a list of prizes is offered by members of the society and public spirited citizens and the competition promises to be keen.

There is considerable building and rebuilding of greenhouses here and in a future letter I will give details. H.

MOBILE, ALA.

C. Xavier & Sons report trade during the summer as very good compared to that of previous years. They were kept very busy on floral work for funerals, the demand for floral designs surpassing that of any other summer. They are preparing to put in their carnations about Sept. 15. Roses seem to be doing very well considering the hot weather. They tried some field grown carnations this year and the plants turned out very well. They are fit for benching this season.

The storm of the 16th did considerable damage. A good many shade and ornamental trees were blown down and several sash broken.

A. Duplon suffered considerably. One side of his greenhouse was very badly damaged and his chrysanthemums were all blown over.

L. Thublin is putting up a greenhouse 12x50 for propagating purposes.

G. Bitzer reports trade as very good. His place was very badly damaged by the storm; his out of door plants were washed out and his chrysanthemums were badly injured.

The Little Gem Floral Garden (H. P. Lading) reports summer trade to be very good, the demand for flowers being much larger than last year. He reports very little loss by the storm.

The Industrial Gardens report summer trade very good. Their outdoor plants were all pretty badly damaged by the storm, but everything indoors is all right. Their palm house is a beautiful sight.

Miss Marie Minge reports summer demand for flowers to be far greater than any summer previous. Her roses are doing very well. She is preparing to put in her carnations about Sept. 15.

Mrs. M. Goodbrad reports trade as very good considering the very bad weather we have been having this summer. She intends going to New York next month to visit her daughter, Mrs. J. Sanders, and while there will pay a short visit to Buffalo to see the florists and also the exposition.

Mobile is rapidly coming to the front, and from the outlook the demand for flowers this winter will be much larger than ever. F.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

A recent heavy hailstorm did serious damage to many of the greenhouse establishments in this city.

R. J. Mendenhall was one of the heaviest losers, plants being badly cut and injured, as well as a great deal of glass broken. The R. Wills greenhouses lost a good share of their glass, and carnations in the field were also badly injured.

The Donaldson greenhouses lost heavily in glass, and many others had smaller amounts broken. It will be very difficult to make all repairs before winter sets in. Glass is in great demand here, a thousands of windows and skylights were broken by the hail.

Florists' Club Outing.

The outing of the Florists' Club took place on Saturday, August 31, at Bois Blanc Island, and was quite well attended, although the day was not an ideal one for an outing. The enthusiasm of those present made up for the lack in the attendance.

The program was carried out in full with the exception of the sack race. The baseball team was won by Captain Davis and team, 14 to 4. Agricultural race, by Pautka, first; A. Rackham, second; J. Stick, third. Fat men's race, Beard, first; Hupprich, second. Egg and spoon race, Knoppe, first; Sullivan, second. Ladies' race, Miss Sullivan, first; Miss Healy, second. Girls' race, L. Knoppe, first; F. Engelman, second. Men's race, A. Rackham, first; William Flowerday, second. Three-legged race, A. Rackham and Knoppe, first; Flowerday and Brown, second. Boys' race, H. Rackham, first; Stuart Rackham, second. Game of quito, James Taylor, first; E. A. Scribner, second. In the tug of war the West Side won out.

This was the first outing of the club and was so successful that it will no doubt become a permanent feature.

President Rackham will from now on push the coming flower show to be held in November, and with the aid of the club and special committees, is sure of making it a grand success. A committee will be appointed at the coming meeting to prepare a program for the year and as each member of the club always makes an effort to take care of the subjects assigned him, a successful year is assured.

One of the most interesting evenings will no doubt be the one assigned to Charles Plumb, who has just returned from England, France and Holland. Photos which were taken during his trip will be used in lantern views to illustrate the story of his trip, which the president has prevailed upon him to give the club at no distant date.

Carnations are about all housed and boys are already talking of Asheville.

RAG.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Business during the month of August has been good; comparing it with August last year it is away ahead, the demand for roses being especially brisk.

Carnation benching is nearly finished. Notwithstanding the hot, dry summer carnations in the field did remarkably well, the plants coming in in a nice, stocky form, which made them a pleasure to handle. Roses are looking well.

The Dunkley Floral Company have remodelled their carnation houses, and are just about finished benching. G. Van Bochore & Bro. are about finished with their new carnation range, and have most of their benching done. They are cutting some very fine Beauties, Meteors and Kaiserins. Brides and Maids are looking well, and promise a good cut in the near future. They have planted sparingly of Liberty, as it did not come up to their expectations last year.

The Kalamazoo Nursery & Floral Company has been absorbed by the Michigan Central Nursery Company. The new firm will be managed by Mr. Charles A. Maxon, general manager of the Michigan Central Nursery Company.

During the last month the weather has been everything that a florist could desire.

NEPENTHES.

A series of experiments carried on by the late M. Clautrian on two species of nepenthes in their native country, Java, seems to have set at rest the controversy respecting the digestive properties of the fluid contained in their pitchers. He states that the bodies of insects found in these urns are more or less completely digested, and that not by the agency of microbes, which were excluded during the experiments. The fluid, while still in the urns, is neutral to reagents, but shaking the urn, or introducing any foreign substance, renders it acid. The worms which takes the active part in the digestion, must be regarded as a peptic rather than as a trypsin.—Biol. Centralbl., 21, 23 (Pharmaceutical Journal.)

Trade and Personal Notes.

The general opinion is that trade conditions do not differ materially this summer from those of a year ago. We have some fearfully dull days, then occasionally a good one to relieve the monotony. It is no reflection on the craft to say that the work turned out during the summer season was the poorest ever seen here. We have simply done the best possible with the stock available. Recent heavy rains have cooled the atmosphere, revived the spirits of mankind and improved vegetation somewhat. Outside flowers are coming in more plentifully, but are inferior in quality. There are no field-grown carnations and asters are of no account for the retail trade. A better feeling exists among the growers since they were able to house carnations. The young roses are making good growth, though, like all other indoor stock, have not fully recovered from the terrible effects of the extreme heat.

The state of Missouri, which for two months was as dry as the desert of Sahara, is gradually redeeming itself and reports on crop yields are more encouraging. The peach crop is enormous and tons of this luscious fruit are to be seen in the fruit market.

Arthur Newell, our only representative at the Buffalo convention, has returned home full of enthusiasm and is very emphatic in telling the boys what they missed by not attending the convention this year. He says the horticultural features of the Pan-American exceeded his most sanguine expectations and can compare them only to the beautiful estates in old England, where in his boyhood days he strolled through the gardens at Sandringham with the Prince of Wales.

Miss Marie Dalley and Miss Jennie Murray, our two lady representative florists, have been sojourning in Wisconsin for two weeks.

The affable and businesslike Walter Mott called upon the trade here recently. H. J. M.

OMAHA.

Trade seems to have revived during the past week. There is no particular demand, but a steady increase; this may not hold out, but it looks like the beginning of a good fall trade. Prices are about the same as a week ago, with carnations very scarce.

Carnations are being planted by some growers, while others are waiting for a rain.

J. J. Hess and wife have returned from the lakes in Wisconsin.

A. Donaghue, Jr., left for the west, touching at Denver and Salt Lake.

WICHITA, KANS.

The unusual heat and lack of moisture during June and July have made all outdoor stock scarce and mostly of poor quality. Stock in the greenhouses has also suffered.

These conditions seem to have prevailed, with a few local exceptions, over the greater part of Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa and Oklahoma, so that the florist who wished to buy stock had to "send East" for it in most cases, and, judging from its quality when received, the same conditions evidently existed there.

Weather conditions here are about back to normal again, and outdoor stock which did not die during the hot spell is now making fair growth, and the shortage will not cost the florist as much as was feared when matters were at their worst.

Kansas has had at least five good crop years, and the present shortage in a part of the crops will not have the serious effect of a drouth under different conditions; and, with the best wheat crop in her history, Kansas will not lose step in her march of development, progress and prosperity. The fact is, the average Kansan is not losing any sleep, and is not half as concerned as the fellows who write scare-headers for the city papers would have it appear.

Summer business among the florists in Wichita is being about as usual. An occasional funeral job, with stock scarce, has made him attend to business pretty closely. Getting ready for the winter season is occupying the stage at present.

W. H. Culp & Co. have added to their storage room for fuel and expect to have the bulk of the winter's supply in the bins by Sept. 15.

Keuchenmeister will build a good-sized propagating house.

C. P. Mueller expects to add some more glass, and will remodel one house, and will probably change heating system from hot water to steam.

Arthur Marsh has sold his interest in the "College Hill Greenhouses" to Mr. Barton, who, with H. L. Hunt, will comprise the firm in the future. They expect to add a couple of houses this fall.

W. H. Culp & Co. have bought the corner lots facing on Market street and lying just across the alley from their present location. This ground has been used by them for the past six years for out-door planting, and is in a good location for their business. They had plans completed for a couple of good-sized houses to be built on this land this fall, but the continued high price of glass, pipe, etc., caused them to finally defer it, and the ground is now marked by a turnip patch.

The Wichita Greenhouse Co. has gone out of business. W. H. Culp bought the bulk of the desirable stock last May. The glass has been removed from the houses, and all the material is for sale.

C. A. Rose's store, on Main street, has been repaired, and with the freshly-painted woodwork, looks as good as new.

The immortal "Jags" paid Wichita a visit a week or so ago. He told us how he had been at work in Buffalo at the "Pan-Am," until everything that required skill was done; then he was laid off and went to Missouri, where he worked in a place until it got so dry they had to hand water in barrels for the greenhouses. That was too much for him and he came to Wichita. However, as he denied having ever met William Scott, of Buffalo, it is possible he is an imposter and en-

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

The Careful Buyer.

No man is more valuable to himself or his employer than the careful buyer, especially at a time when very little is coming in. It is his special duty to see that as little as possible goes out in the way of money, and yet manage to keep the store in a business-like condition. With orders on the books or not a presentable stock of flowers must be kept, and on his selection and ideas of value most often depends a great deal of the success of a store. Of course we can never put him on the same pedestal as the artist, but the artist depends more or less on him for material.

It is getting to be the custom in a few of the stores of New York to have two buyers. One scours the market and has the pick of the flowers sent to the store on the "approval if satisfactory" plan, and the inside buyer, getting all this stuff together, selects the best and returns the rest. This mode of doing business may be acutely astute, but it is bad and injurious to the general trade, and depends alike on men and markets. But that is yearly becoming less important in the whirlpools of over-production. It is good, whether we buy or not, to keep posted. To know the condition of the market is of the utmost value. Prices will go up and down, and they usually go up on the indifferent buyer.

Adaptability of material is another important feature and one that requires considerable training to be wise on. The retailer very often finds himself struggling between feelings of generosity and the reverse, especially when the market is low. He in most cases imagines that it only spoils customers to give them the benefit of his bargains, that if he were to give a large wreath now for $5 he would be expected to do so in December when flowers are much higher. There is a good deal of truth in this, and one needs to be very careful not to spoil a good customer, yet on the other hand, in the great majority of cases it is best and wisest to give people the benefit of the condition of the market.

Competition is liable to steal away at any time the customer who will pay a high price for anything at any time, but it requires more than competition to steal the customer with whom you deal in a generous way. One cannot catch new trade without offering some special inducement; one cannot keep old trade without giving satisfaction. There are times when those who generally look for quality would be better satisfied with quantity, and the majority of people nowadays look for both. You cannot blame them; don't get angry; it is the way of the times. Diplomacy is one of the greatest, if not the most valuable, accomplishment a man of today can acquire.

But let us saunter through the market with the buyer. It is a notable fact that the wholesaler adopt the same attitude toward the average buyer that the retailer does to his best paying customer—he prefers to give the Greek fakir or street peddler a bargain in preference to the legitimate storekeeper. It is a matter of common everyday occurrence in New York that a street fakir can go into any wholesale place and buy roses for one-half, most often one-quarter, the price charged to the stores. This is what most often demoralizes the market, and will ultimately end in a thorough revolution in the mode of marketing cut flowers in our large cities.

IVERA.

WREATHS.

In funeral arrangements the wreath is still the most pleasing and it can be arranged in a great variety of ways. We believe that a collection of wreaths arranged by floral artists in widely separated sections of the country would be interesting and educational to every reader of the REVIEW and we invite all to send us photographs of wreaths which they consider worthy of illustration in the REVIEW. We would like to include in the collection simple arrangements as well as elaborate ones. Will you contribute an example of your work for the benefit of all?

known fact that the most common one of the two (Rhizoctonia, or wet fungus) will do little harm as long as no moisture comes in contact with it, and that is why you so often find that during a moderately dry summer none of the plants die with it in the field, but as soon as they are hoisted and kept damp a few days the disease begins to develop and the plants soon begin to die off.

So the best, and, in fact, the first, thing to do as soon as the disease is discovered is to keep the plants as dry as possible and water the soil just enough to keep the plants growing and try to water in the morning of a clear day, so the surface of the soil will dry off again before night. Stirring the soil will allow the air to get into it, which is also very beneficial. You will always find more stem-rot in benches that are not stirred than you will where the surface of the soil is kept loosened up. Dusting lime over the plants and the soil is very beneficial, and in fact most growers mix about as much lime with the soil as they do of bone, and it all helps to keep the disease down. Sulphur is said to be good, but as it is much more expensive than lime it is not likely to be used as freely.

In a great many cases the disease is brought on through too deep planting and Mr. G. S. would do well to examine his plants and see whether they are not set into the soil deeper than they were out in the field. If such is the case, he should take enough soil off the bench to expose the stem as much as it was outside. Merely scraping the soil away from around the stem will do little good, as it will wash right back again after a few heavy waterings.

Bed of Blue Asters at the Pan-American Exposition. Exhibit of Henry A. Dreer.

CARNATION NOTES.

If I could see Mr. G. S.'s carnations it might be possible that I could determine the immediate cause of the stem rot which is giving him so much trouble. There are many ways in which it may be brought on, or aggravated, as the case may be. It has been proven conclusively that the spores of the disease are in most cases either in the soil on the benches or else it is brought in from the field with the plants, perhaps most often the latter. It is also a well-

We have always advocated leaving a slight depression around the plants to hold water when they are watered the first time, but it should not be a deep hole and the plant should not be planted as though the bottom of the hole were the level of the soil. If we notice any signs of stem-rot we water this way only once, and before we water again we make a furrow between each row of plants and water only in that furrow, leaving the soil near the plants rather dry. This keeps the stems dry and the disease remains inactive and at the same time the roots below have plenty of water, and in a few weeks the plants are established and able to fight off the disease. Keeping the soil loosened up allows the water to seak down to the roots while the top soon dries off and the stems are also kept dry.

We go through all our carnation benches about ten days after planting with one of the teeth from a hand cultivator and draw it through the soil about an inch or two deep, both crosswise and lengthwise of the bench. This leaves furrows both ways and there is no danger of the water running off the surface and leaving the bottom dry. Last year we had a bench which was infested with this disease and we were able to keep it in check by watering on bright days and only in these furrows.

We find that there is less of this disease where bottomless pots are used, as the plants are up higher, away from the soil and can be kept drier as the air can circulate better between them. We also find that there is still less if the plants are grown in the pots all summer than if they are lifted from the field in the ground is a bed of mixed hybrid perpetual roses.

A long oblong bed of Richelieu geranium by C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, has made a fine show for a long time. This geranium resembles in many respects the well known S. A. Nutt, but does not seem to have that defect of blackening the inner petals and is, I think, a distinct improvement on Nutt. The reader will notice in this bed there is a maple tree. Now this tree was not put there until last June and as the whole ground is artificially made and the tree could have but few roots we had no idea anything would suffer in the bed. If the tree had been growing there permanently we would have known, of course, that the roots of the maple would rob the soil and that the geraniums would be poor, but we hardly expected that a tree put there with a comparatively small ball of earth would make any difference. But to our cost we find that wherever there is a tree planted it has much affected the growth of the plants beneath.

most luxuriantly. The photograph does not show the colors but there are no two colors alike and all have been beautifully marked. It is a particularly fine strain.

A circular bed of blue chrysanthemum aster has been very fine, as will be seen by the picture. The bed is one mass of bloom, of an even uniform growth and like the other asters are about the average of asters in this neighborhood. Exhibited by H. A. Dreer.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

Mulching.

A light mulch of well-rotted cow manure is very beneficial to the plants growing in boxes or benches if applied soon enough for the plants to get the benefit of it before they come into flower.

I have always considered it better to put the manure on now as a mulch, so that its good properties can wash down into the soil, in place of putting a coating of manure in the bottom of the bench before filling with soil in the early part of the season.

It would be better, if the rotten manure is not available, to use fresh manure in a liquid form; then, if diluted well with water, it can have no possible ill effects. I have before now seen all the bottom foliage burned off by a top dressing of green cow manure.

should be carried on now regularly if good flowers are looked for. Feed early and often, like the ward-heeler votes, and, we might also add, always feed lightly. A bushel of horse or sheep manure, placed in a bag and soaked in a fifty-gallon barrel of water, will make a good liquid fertilizer, if allowed to stand for a few days. If the manure is in a bag the water can be easily drawn off with a Kinney pump.

Cow manure, I always think, is better if it is put right in the water and applied with a can. It never seemed to me to give up its good properties if confined in a bag, and if you use it loose in the water you can't use the Kinney pump on it.

Nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia can be used in the proportion of one ounce to four gallons of water; or, if you use the pump just mentioned, put in a pound and a half of nitrate to fifty gallons of water, and the pump will reduce it down to the right proportions.

Specimen Plants

that were left low enough at the last potting to allow a top dressing to be applied later should now be attended to. Top dress with equal parts of good loam and cow manure, but always leave ample room for watering.

Never allow the branches on these plants to get all bunched up together, but train them out and stake them. It always pays to give a specimen plant lots of room and you should make a point of turning the plants around every other day or so in order that no particular side of the plant shall get a monopoly of the light. While there is not so much money in specimen plants as there used to be, perhaps there is always a satisfaction in growing a plant as well as it can be grown.

fall, as they do not have to go through that spell of syringing through which they must go in order to keep them alive until the roots take a fresh hold. The same rule holds good with all other diseases. The plants are in a weakened condition for several days and unable to fight off disease as a growing plant can, and the extra dampness is just what most of the diseases want to make them extra aggressive.

So if Mr. G. S.'s carnations are planted properly the only thing for him to do is to run them on the dry side, loosen up the soil, and dust both plants and soil with lime; stop syringing altogether for a while, and give all the air he can both day and night. A. F. J. BAUER.

EXHIBITS AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Geraniums have done remarkably well in our soil and climate. In the picture is seen a bed of the well known Alphonse Ricard, the splendid orange scarlet, bordered by the little variegated Madame Salleron, which in my opinion is much better than Mountain of Snow. If you are going to have an edge to the bed the more compact it is the better. Visitors from the south and east have remarked that they cannot grow geraniums as well as we can here. Possibly our cold nights are a factor. The shrubbery in the back-

We are strong on cannas at the Pan-American. This is a large circular bed containing seven or eight of the old varieties, the exhibit of Henry A. Dreer. It was the first bed planted and has been very gay for a long time. As you can notice from the picture it is one mass of bloom. The varieties are Souvenir de Antoine Crozy, President Cleveland, President McKinley, Madame Crozy and one or two more.

The dwarf Florence Vaughan canna is entirely distinct from the well known Florence Vaughan. The picture shows a large oval bed. One or two of the old type was found in the bed but it went up 18 inches higher than the dwarf. For a long time it has been one mass of bloom and has been much admired. It is the exhibit of J. C. Vaughan.

The bed of perennial phlox, the exhibit of H. A. Dreer, is a great success. These plants did not reach here until the end of last April and for spring planting I consider have done remarkably well. The bed consists of a dozen fine varieties planted in bands diagonally across the bed. They were in the best condition when the photograph was taken.

A bed of single petunias is always more attractive than the double varieties. The bed illustrated is by James Vick's Sons and has been one of the gayest on the grounds and has grown fully as possible, so as not to destroy the fibrous roots more than is absolutely necessary. Give a large enough pot not to crowd the roots too much and shade from the sun for a few days until you can see that root action has commenced again. BRIAN BORU.

CANNAS AT THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Mr. Vaughan has an extensive assortment of cannas; among them many new ones. Among those occupying beds by themselves are Dwarf Florence Vaughan. This has the identical flower of the well-known variety, but is from 18 inches to 2 feet shorter in growth, and I am inclined to think gives a greater abundance of flowers. A large oval bed has been a grand sight for a long time. I think it a most valuable variety.

N. Jarry Desloges has green foliage, a large foret and large spike; medium in height; an orange scarlet in color.

David Harum I have before spoken of. It has dark bronzy foliage, medium in height, and it is particularly early, which I think is a good quality in any canna, and extremely free. The color is a pure beautiful scarlet. There is a blending between the flower and the foliage in this canna which is most pleasing.

Charles Molin has green foliage, medium in height, large spike; color a reddish salmon, with a slightly gold edge to the petals.

Francis Reif, green leaf, medium height, a particularly free bloomer and color an orange scarlet. This is a most beautiful canna.

Victory, large green foliage, tall in habit and very large flower with an immense spike. It is one of the earliest to bloom after planting. The flower is an intense deep orange, with a mottled yellow throat and edge of petals. We consider this one of the very finest cannas of recent introduction.

Mme. Alfred Blanc, medium in height, green leaves, color almost pure salmon, with edge of petals and throat yellow. This is a most vigorous grower, and gives a great abundance of bloom.

Leonard Vaughan, dark bronzy foliage, and tall in habit. A beautiful scarlet flower, slightly lighter than David Harum, and very free.

Chicago, green leaf, medium to tall; the color can best be described as a russet orange. Several of these cannas are in small beds, and although they have been carefully and constantly watered, there is not quite the chance to see them at their best that there is in large masses.

Conard & Jones have several very promising varieties. Buttercup is quite dwarf, bright green leaves, and very free bloomer. The color is a pure golden-yellow without any markings. We know of no other like it, and there must be room for it.

Niagara is a dwarf in habit and a very stout grower; a free bloomer. Flowers of the Queen Charlotte type, but a much heavier spike; a very striking variety.

George Washington, green foliage, dwarf habit, and particularly free bloomer. Large round petals, deep scarlet in color, almost crimson.

This firm has a large circle, 24 feet in diameter, filled with two varieties which they call American pedigree cannas. They have been photographed, and I hope to have the correct names. They were not early to bloom, but for the past month have been one of the most attractive beds on the grounds. The center plants have grown tall. Nearer the edge they are dwarf. According to our color chart, they are almost a pure pink, but a lady, who is a judge of color, tells me they are a cerise-pink. They are very striking varieties, and, in a large mass, a most pleasing sight.

WM. SCOTT.

FORCING GLADIOLUS.

A correspondent writes that he has a house of chrysanthemums, and asks if they can be succeeded by gladiolus. He thought once of growing sweet peas after the mums, and perhaps some Astilbe japonica. He also adds that he has only boiler power to keep them up to 50 degrees in cold weather and hardly that. What is rather worse, he says that the house is shaded, during the winter months, in the mornings, by a shed and barn.

I would say that the gladiolus would be not at all a satisfactory crop. Although some of my friends will disagree with me, I think that gladiolus can only be profitably grown among carnations or something of that sort; so I would dismiss the consideration of gladiolus.

If near a good market the sweet peas would do very well, providing you got them onto the bench immediately the chrysanthemums were out. To do that you would sow them in 3-inch pots now so they would be well started when the opportunity came to plant them out.

Astilbe is very easily grown, and, as it is not very profitable any time, but mostly at Easter, there would be no need of putting it on the bench until after New Year's, and then you would want something to succeed that at Easter.

If in a location where there is any demand for geraniums, I would rather get a lot of geranium cuttings. Get them rooted at once; keep them in small pots until the chrysanthemums are gone, which you can almost do in a cold frame, then shift them into 3-inch and later into 4-inch. You could grow quite a lot of astilbe at the same time, because the geraniums would not occupy all the house until their last shift, which, as Easter is early, would be plenty of time after that event.

I think I could make more money out of the house in that way than I could with either gladiolus or sweet peas. Some Japan longiflorum could also be grown, but do not attempt, in that temperature, to get them in for Easter; but, by keeping them out in a frame, protected until New Year's, and then brought inside, they would come along for Decoration Day and pay very well.

STOCKS—CANDYTUFT—IRIS.

Please tell me time of sowing seed and culture of stocks and candytuft. Also best method of handling iris.

The REVIEW is the very best trade paper that comes to our notice. IRIS.

In answer to "Iris" we would say that there are several varieties of stocks, and their treatment differs. The Brompton stocks, which give you the largest spikes, are sown in August, must be wintered in a cold-frame, and, if planted out early in the spring, will flower the following June. Not much grown in this country, but in the cooler parts of Europe are most wonderful. There is a tall growing strain, which in the days of short-stemmed flowers, were much used for funeral designs, and which takes four or five months from time of sowing till flowering. I cannot name the variety.

The best for the florist is a good strain of the ten-week varieties. We grew these largely some years ago, and had a fine strain of white. It had flowers about as large as a Degraw carnation. We made the first sowing in August, and again in November; and, for Easter, sowed in early January. Sow in flats, transplant into 2-inch, and shift later into 4-inch, and occasionally the strongest plants into 5-inch. A light loam, with a little spent hops or rotten manure, was added. Pot firmly. At all times stocks want the fullest light and never over 50 degrees at night. They are troubled with few enemies. Fumigation is all that is necessary, but they are liable to stem-rot, which necessitates careful watering.

Iris are very easily managed plants. All of them except the Spanish section, which has a bulb resembling a crocus, are herbaceous plants, and can be divided and transplanted either in the fall or spring. A moist, low ground is best suited to them. They spread rapidly, and are very hardy. The Spanish irises are imported in the fall, and can be planted as soon as received and should be protected with leaves or litter.

It will never pay to force candytuff, but in the garden it is a fine annual. If you want it for cutting, make a sowing as early as possible in drills and make another sowing a month later.

PHILADELPHIA.

Trade Conditions.

The weather which was summery to a degree at the close of last week, opened this week with a genuine fall feeling, the thermometer staying on the shady side of 50 degrees for a time. Roses are in consequence improving. Demand for them is fair; quite a little business in the best grades is being done. Beauties are bringing $2 per dozen locally when really fine, and $2.50 per dozen when carefully selected, so as to arrive in good condition at some distant point. Teas sell fairly well at $3 and $4 per 100. Carnations are more in evidence. Some fancy sorts such as Flora Hill and Ethel Crocker are to be had of good quality. Asters are still plentiful; some days there are too many. Smilax is in demand.

Various Items.

Keller Bros., of Norristown, report a very active demand for flower pots this fall.

William Berger, of Germantown, combines mushroom growing with his florist business, and finds it satisfactory. This enterprising florist has added two greenhouses and a show house during the past fifteen months.

Our local horticultural writers generally favor their readers with a paragraph about the "familiar sun-browned faces reappearing" at this time. Would not this apply strikingly to the floral aristocracy of to-day?

The city's suburbs are wonderfully beautiful—rich, green grass, clematis, cannas, sage, hydrangeas, geraniums in full bloom—a wealth of color is displayed well worth seeing.

A lovely lady who presides over one of our leading stores found that a certain hustler always put the price up when she badly needed his flowers. On a certain busy morning when her whole force were in the midst of work, she gave a signal. Instantly all trace of work disappeared under the counter and when the hustler entered every one appeared idle and listless. The lady is confident this ruse saved her a lot of cash.

It is a fine thing to belong to the Florists' Club. You can feel a sort of proprietary interest in all the trophies brought from afar that ornament the show case; you can wear the pretty blue and white enameled button with its gilt monogram, P. F. C., engraved in the center, designed by H. H. Battles; you can bowl and chat and shoot and smoke with all the great men of whom you have heard and it will help you in many ways; when you are worried, or discouraged, or dull, it will do you a world of good and make life seem brighter and more worth while.

I spent a half-hour there this week. First Commodore Westcott told fishing stories. Repetition would spoil them; besides you might not believe them. I did. Then President Harris told of his early struggles to succeed in our calling, of the first start with only 400 feet of glass and how it took ten years of hard, unremitting toil before success was assured; then he told of his Jacque roses and Lilium Harrisii, of his tulips and daffodils and hyacinths, in a way that was so full of interest that I wished he

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Look Out For Frost.

There are many plants propagated from cuttings that it is not advisable to take cuttings in the fall, but are more profitably and better increased by lifting a few old plants. Don't delay this till the afternoon that you see a frost coming.

A few plants lifted now will root quicker than they will in cold weather, and will stand anywhere out of doors till the approach of frost. Among these plants are salvia, ageratum, acalypha, alternanthera (if you did not propagate these in August), pyrethrum, and others of which a stock can be worked up quickly. A few of these plants do not take up much room but are highly necessary when spring comes.

Mignonette.

We have found the green cabbage worm very troublesome on the young mignonette in our houses this fall. It is the larva of the sulphur butterfly. The chief, and you would think the only, function of their life is to eat, and before you can discover them on the leaves they have done much damage. They are also exactly the same color as the leaf. Don't wait till you see the plants half eaten, but sprinkle the leaves and then dust the whole bed with powdered hellebore. A teaspoonful of Paris green in two gallons of water and syringed on will also do, but the hellebore is safest.

Hydrangeas.

Don't let your hydrangeas stand too close just now. They have grown very rapidly of late, but should be far enough apart to let the light and air between them. And don't think of bringing them in for several weeks yet. It is always a time for the exercise of good judgment for the next month. You can't tell how frost will approach. If we get a few cool nights and then perhaps a night when the thermometer goes down to 32 degrees, it is the most favorable for us, for then things are gradually hardened and one or two degrees of frost will not hurt hydrangeas or many other plants that are considered tender. It all depends on the condition of the plants how the first frost affects them.

Just to be reminiscent a moment: Some 15 years ago we had warm, moist weather continuing till the 8th of October; not a night had been below 50, when down swooped Jack Frost to the extent of 6 degrees and killed everything that we had been negligent enough to leave out. Sweet stevia, geraniums, azaleas and all went; for the mild weather had deluded us. Don't trust to what you think the season is going to be, but go by your dates. If we are not prepared for a frost about the first week of October we ought to be.

Violets.

You should have all the shade off your violets by the middle of this month. Don't wait to see the aphid appear, but every week go over them with a weak solution of nicotine. When once the aphid gets down into the heart of the plant they are very difficult to dislodge, and it takes very little to ruin all your prospects of a crop. Keep all the runners cleaned off. Don't pull them off, it tears and bruises the stems. Cut them off. For the spot so troublesome with many I know of no cure, but to make the conditions right keep the house airy, syringe only on bright mornings and pick off every leaf the moment you see it affected. It is worth mentioning that you must never attempt to use Bordeaux mixture or any copper mixture or solution. It will kill every leaf.

Roses.

The next few months, or till steady firing commences, is the most anxious time with all your roses. Mildew is ever ready to find a lodgment the moment the vitality of the plant is lowered, and this may be caused by leaving ventilation on too long and getting a chill, or not opening up early in the morning and letting the temperature go too high. Above all avoid a cold damp night. When the outside thermometer goes below 45 degrees during any part of the night fire heat must be resorted to. Do your syringing early in the morning and not at all on cloudy days. WILLIAM SCOTT.

WATER SUPPLY.

Replying to L. S., pump No. 2½ made by the Dean Steam Pump Co., Holyoke, Mass., will do the work. It has 1½-inch suction and 1½-inch discharge. No governor. The pump has an air chamber to steady the flow of water. With this pump you can water with two ¾-inch hose, and it will give good pressure on one hose for syringing.

I have used this pump since 1889, when I started with four houses each 20x100, and though we now have twenty houses of the same size the same pump is still doing the business.

A well six feet in diameter and deep enough to always have six feet of water in it will give an ample supply of water for four greenhouses of the size mentioned by L. S. and the acre of ground. I have three wells of this size for my place, with four acres of ground.

Either Jenkins' adjustable seat globe valve or any good make of brass gate valve will keep the steam from leaking into the heating pipes if at a reasonable pressure, say 75 lbs. or less. I run my Dean steam pump at about 25 to 35 lbs. steam pressure, and after it is once started I have run it as low as 15 lbs. pressure and still get an ample flow of Market Conditions.

Those who have their whole knowledge of the florist's business upon the Boston items in the Review may have got misled since last issue, on account of quick changes in the market soon after mailing my last "ukase." During the first few days of September there was a marked falling off in both quantity and quality of all kinds of goods coming in and a corresponding increase in price. Rose became scarce because the bushes were tired; pinks almost out of the market, on account of extremes in the weather, and the aster crop declining, because between early and late varieties. And as a finishing touch the demand largely increased on account of several heavy funerals coming along at once.

Now again all this is changed. Roses have caught their second breath, pinks are arriving quite freely and late asters are pouring in by thousands in most excellent quality. But the word goes that pinks will be scarce till New Year's, as the outdoor crop cannot last long and plants for indoor work run small generally.

A Visit to J. W. Newman's.

How is your imagination? Take a mental trip with me to Belmont to see J. W. Newman's new home. He owns several fine houses in beautiful Winchesmontory, which gives the double value to a place; a grand view nowhere excelled. Behind are hills and trees, and in front are Boston and three or four sister cities in the distance, while, nearer, are several hundred acres of intervale, largely in grass, but partly marked by rows of vegetables. A sheet of water, always necessary to a landscape, is represented by two good-sized ponds.

Mr. Newman put all kinds of artisans at work upon the buildings a month ago, and they are there yet; so your imagination will not get over-worked on the drops of ginger ale on the front steps, and I want you to join me in the heartfelt wishes I clumsily made for him and his in the future.

J. S. MANTER.

CLEVELAND.

The florists here expect to have a great demand for flowers during the G. A. R. encampment. The J. M. Gasser Co. have the decoration of the columns in the public square and also some of the principal stands. The city is in gala attire, flags and bunting flying from almost ter, but is wealthy enough, both aesthetically and financially, to crave and obtain one with a landscape all its own. And he now has it, emphatically. Only about four miles out, on a wide modern street, within five minutes' walk of two stations, and surrounded on three sides by most elegant grounds of mansions of a twenty-year-old vintage or so, stood a twelve-acre farm with a barn and colonial homestead, upon all of which were the accumulated finger-marks of years of neglect. Two-thirds of the land, however, has been kept under cultivation and is in a rollicking condition of productivity. All kinds of fruit trees hearken to him in the autumn breezes, loaded with their ripening gifts.

Half the place consists of a very narrow strip, running back over a high proportion of things in the house. But it is far enough along to murmur comfort and hospitality at every turn; it mixes the eighteenth and twentieth centuries together quaintly, which is where you can let yourself loose. Here are the elements: Large house, one hundred years old; new paint and paper everywhere; new windows and front door; new all and large front portico; new hot-water heat; the telephone looks more out of place than anything else. One hardly knows whether to expect to hear voices of the living or the dead, if he works it! If your imagination is running too swiftly, you will think you have Paul Revere or Benedict Arnold, sure!

Now, Jim and I never drink, but we broke a can of cold milk over the ridge-pole of his new-old abode, spilled a few every conceivable place. Some of the florists expect to help all their help a half holiday the day of the parade. It is expected that day will be the biggest day of the week, and the parade will be a sight never to be forgotten.

The chief talk amongst the florists at the present time is the dastardly attempt on the life of our beloved president, and one and all hope for his speedy recovery. If the florists here had the meeting out of punishment to the assassin his fate would have been sealed before this.

The writer had the pleasure of a visit from the genial Mr. Kennedy, of the J. M. Gasser Co., accompanied by the gentlemanly Herman Hart, this week. Mr. Kennedy reports slow progress in getting in carnations on account of too much rain. Mr. Hart said that they had most of their houses. He also has about finished all repairs to his old buildings and completed his office and show room, which I am told has a very tasty appearance, both outside and in. Mr. Hart always has everything well in hand and in first class order.

A visit to the establishment of J. W. Wilson revealed everything in first class order and showed Mr. Wilson to be a painstaking grower. He grows roses and carnations principally and also some violets. He is potting some of his carnations into 6-inch pots, to plant into a house he has been cutting roses from all summer. He expects them to become well established in the pots by the time he wants to throw out his roses and then they will suffer no check when planted on the benches. Mr. Wilson also does some gardening, and has very good success, his nutmeg melons being especially fine. He also has a lot of grapes to dispose of after awhile.

J. Mollenkoph has his carnations about all housed and they are looking very good. The plants are small, but they have the appearance of being hardy, and will undoubtedly give a good account of themselves later. He is cutting some very fine asters just now. Semple's seems to be the variety he has best success with.

Mr. A. Schmitt, of Glenville, who had a slight stroke some two weeks ago, is improving very rapidly and hopes in a very short time to be around again.

Smith & Fetters report a very good trade during August. In fact all the craft seem to be well pleased with the summer trade this year.

Some of the growers here have received and planted their lilies, while others are not in any hurry, but are willing to wait for the later shipments, and then keep them growing right along believing they can force the later bulbs to a better advantage.

A. Graham & Son report all carnations planted inside.

The Florists' Club, at its regular meeting Monday evening, nominated the following members to serve as officers the ensuing year: President, Wm. Brinker; first vice-president, H. Kunz; second vice-president, Gordon Gray; secretary, I. Kennedy; assistant secretary, A. H. Graham; treasurer, Herman Hart. The electioning in the trade papers, which should be done at once, and recommended that the exhibition committee so attend to the matter.

Mr. Herrington said that after careful consideration he thought provision ought to be made for larger groups and that a sufficient prize should be offered to induce exhibitors to put up groups of plants covering 500 square feet; groups covering 250 square feet were the largest in recent shows, for which a hundred dollar prize was the usual thing offered; it often cost more than that for expense of getting the plants there. In the case of Madison Square Garden he argued that large groups were very necessary. Mr. W. A. Manda spoke in favor of having classes for large plants; these he considered were of more importance than large groups.

After considerable discussion the matter was referred to the exhibition committee for immediate action and after recess they proposed the following as an addition to the schedule of prizes. For best specimen kentia, first prize, $75; second prize, $25. Specimen areca, first, $50; second, $20. Specimen latania, first, $75; second, $25. Specimen any other palm, first, $75; second, $25. Best pair of tree ferns, first, $75; second, $25. These were adopted and the club hopes these generous prizes for single plants

BUFFALO.

Our city has been a sad and excited one. Never before was the name of this city so far and widely known, and it is lamentable that it should be advertised by this terribly sad affair. I am only writing for florists, but many of those who have visited Buffalo will remember the establishment of Mr. C. F. Christensen on Delaware avenue and the neat cottage he lived in. The greenhouses were taken away three years ago, but next to the cottage stands a modest brick house, one that has stood there for years. In that house lies poor President McKinley. Let us hope that he can soon be pronounced out of danger.

Naturally flowers are little called for the past few days except for one purpose. Mr. Kasting tells me, however, that for the past three weeks there has been an unusually good demand for American Beauties and other good flowers. The distinguished visitors we are continually having must account for that. Some inside carnations are coming in, and the first cuts of Bridesmaid roses, but they are of rather poor quality.

We still find a few florist friends among the many visitors, among them Mr. J. D. Eisele, of Riverton, who expressed himself as well pleased with Pan-

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held on Monday night last. There was a good attendance. President Sheridan presided and matters connected with the exhibition to be held at Madison Square Garden next month were thoroughly discussed. The club's ambition is to make this show a grand success and every effort is being made to that end. There were three applicants for the position of manager, namely, Messrs. Plumb, Bunyard and J. Manda. The selection will be left to a joint committee of the Garden management and the club. Mr. O'Mara was of opinion that the Garden people should share the expense of adver-

Complete schedules can be had from J. W. Withers, 136 Liberty street. The show will open on October 21 and end on the 28th, so get your pets ready. The judges are to be W. E. Edgar, Thos. Emerson, John E. Lager, Edwin Lonsdale, Wm. Turner and James Wood.

The forthcoming conference to be held in this city on plant breeding and hybridizing was considered and Mr. O'Mara urged that the club do all in its power to make the work a success. A letter was read from W. R. Smith thanking the club for the honor of electing him to honorary membership and referring in general to the great work ahead for all horticulturists.

The entertainment committee under the guidance of W. Barnham provided the attendance with a sufficiency of refreshments and amusement, the latter of the singing and dancing species.

The Market.

So far this week the market has been considerably less active than last week. The supply is much larger, but the demand is even less than it was and as a result of this working in both directions at once there is an unpleasantly wide margin between supply and demand. At the same time prices are practically the same as last week on select stock. It is the medium and poorer grades that are so plentiful, and there is almost a glut of them. When a buyer wants really select roses he must pay $4 a hundred for them, but he can buy medium and poor grade at almost his own price. Brides average better than Maids, as they are available in funeral work, but the poorest of the Maids are almost unsalable at any price. Beauties are still improving and there is demand for them all. It is marvelous how well this rose holds its own in popular favor and brings a good price when other roses are hardly looked at.

Outdoor carnations were considerably damaged by the recent rain, and there are many stained flowers to be seen. Prices range from 50 cents to $1.00 a hundred, it taking a pretty good quality to bring the latter figure. At the same time some extra good indoor grown Hills and other fancies are in demand at $1.50.

Asters have sunk rather low in the market scale, and though a few—a very few—still bring $1.50, the great bulk, and very good stock, realizes only 50 cents to $1.00, while the poorer qualities of pinks, blues and purples are practically unsalable at any price.

The falling off in demand from the country is accounted for by one dealer by the suggestion that those who were obliged to call on this market for some time past are now beginning to cut crops of their own. But these crops may be somewhat checked by the turn to much cooler weather on Monday. If so, orders will again flow more freely to this market.

Various Items.

At a meeting of the Horticultural Society, held last Tuesday afternoon, it was decided to hold the annual exhibition at the Auditorium Nov. 5th to 9th inclusive. W. N. Rudd was elected secretary and Edwin A. Kanst assistant secretary. Mr. Kanst was also elected a member of the executive committee. After the society meeting a meeting of the executive committee was held to perfect details for the exhibition.

Kennicott Bros. Co. have a new plan for encouraging business. They will during the season buy certain trade supplies at the lowest possible figure for cash in quantity, and offer them for brief periods at jobbers' prices, merely to stimulate their trade in cut flowers.

The bowling teams for the trade league tournament have been organized, and the series of games will start the first Tuesday in October.

Mr. A. L. Vaughan started Tuesday on a western trip for E. H. Hunt.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. have planted fifteen houses in chrysanthemums and there is no likelihood of a scarcity in blooms of the Queen of Autumn.

Mr. E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., returned from his summer outing last Tuesday and is full of plans for a record-breaking business this winter.

Frank Garland is cutting lots of roses now and admits that he has again gone rather heavily into bulbs.

The changes at McKellar & Winter-son's have sufficiently progressed so that it can be seen how greatly they will enhance the convenience of handling business.

Miss Helen Palmer, for some years connected with the trade press, was married Sept. 4 to William F. Rockwell. Miss Palmer had many friends in the trade, and all will wish her much happiness.

Recent visitors: J. A. Evans, Ventilatortville, Ind.; J. J. Curran, manager for G. Van Boche & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich.; J. E. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson; W. H. Barnes, Topeka, Kan.; Meyer Heller, New Castle, Ind.; L. Drummond, Clyde, Ill.

Awards have been made in the Tribune's garden, window-box and porch decoration competition, and the paper prints pictures of the prize winning displays. It will undoubtedly result in attracting the attention of the people generally to the possibilities of planting in city lots.

J. B. Deamud and family have returned from their summer trip.

Martin Petersen reports very satisfactory business at the store he opened last spring on West Division street.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The earlier part of the past week trade was very good, owing to a few cool days, but during the latter part of the week it became hot again, which had a demoralizing effect upon the market. There are roses in abundance, and more remain over than are disposed of, which is not much to the liking of the wholesaler.

Roses are selling at a very low figure; fairly good stock is quoted at from $1 to $3 for Brides, Maids and Meteors. A great deal of stock is disposed of in 1,000 lots at considerably less than the above figures. Beauties as a rule are short-stemmed and go at the same price as the common sorts; good long Beauties bring about $2 per dozen.

Carnations are very short in supply and it is impossible to get good stock just now. Some have good flowers with a very short stem while others have long stems with bad flowers; this makes them hard to sell and the wholesaler often has to dump them. The price is still $1 per 100.

Some very fine valley, which sold readily at $3 and $4, was seen at Kuehn's the past week.

Asters are a glut now, the very best selling at $1 per 100, while a few extra fancy bring $1.50; but the bulk of the stock is sold at 50 and 75 cents, and even cheaper in 1,000 lots.

Chrysanthemum plants at the different places are looking well and from all reports we shall have some fine plants and cut blooms this fall and they should be of great benefit to our fall exhibition, which no doubt will be as good as ever.

Various Notes.

Paul Berkowitz of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a caller the past week. Paul reports a fine business in his line all through the west.

C. W. Dicks, representing Jansen & Co., of New York, is in town calling on the trade.

J. T. Windt, the Bayard avenue florist, has returned from California, where he spent a very pleasant summer among friends. He kept posted on St. Louis and the trade by reading the Review, which everybody reads out there.

The exhibition committee held a meeting at Frank Ellis' store last Monday evening. Chairman Meinhardt reports that he expects a fine show this fall and that the special prizes are coming in at a lively rate. At the next meeting the different committees will be named and it is hoped that they will do their duty and help make the show a grand success. It can be done if all the brothers will give a helping hand and assist the committees all they can.

H. Weber & Sons, nurserymen, at Gardenville, Mo., report that the dry and hot weather has caused a loss to them this summer of $10,000. The loss of young stock was great.

John W. Kunz who, until lately, was with Henry Berning, is now in the employ of Frank M. Ellis.

It is rumored that Arthur Y. Ellison of Ellison & Tesson, will, on the 15th of this month, lead to the altar one of Secadia's most beautiful girls, Miss Lupe. Arthur has the sympathy of the bowlers and congratulations and best wishes of the trade at large.

Mr. Winfield Whittman, who for the past year was in the employ of Frank Ellis, is no longer connected with the firm.

Mr. Leo Eberenz, of Webster Grove, Mo., has just completed three new houses, 10x80, 17x80 and 20x80. These houses will be used for growing violets for the trade. The stock will be handled by Frank Ellis the coming season.

The St. Louis Fair Association which opens its annual fair the first week in October, offers the usual prizes for plants, cut flowers and floral designs. Superintendent Ayers says a number of local firms have already entered and that he expects a larger display than usual this year.

Bowling.

The bowling club rolled five games Monday night. The league team rolled some good scores. Owing to a very pressing engagement Arthur Ellison could not be present. Kuehn, Beneke, Sturtz and Kunz, the other members of the league team, did well. The scores are as follows:

CORRECTION.

In your item from St. Louis we note that your correspondent states that F. M. Ellis will handle our stock. As this is true only in part, and is likely to give a wrong impression, inasmuch as H. G. Berning and others also handle our stock at St. Louis, kindly insert in your next issue a note to that effect and oblige.

ANCHORAGE ROSE CO.
CHARLES RAYNER, Mgr.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Rain is again much needed in this section of the country. In every other respect the weather is all that could be desired. Most of the growers have taken advantage of the favorable weather and have housed their carnations. The general report is that plants are recovering nicely. What is left of the aster grub is furnishing food for the aster bug. These pests are eating everything in sight in the line of asters, but as the crop is about over the loss will be but slight.

Roses are about the same as last week, supply and price being about the same.

In carnations the demand is greater than the supply and the market holds firm. Pink is in great supply with white and red scarce. The price from $1.50 to $2 per 100.

A limited quantity of valley is to be had at 4c. George & Allan are the growers.

Meeting of the Florists' Society.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati

Florists' Society was held at the establishment of George & Allan on Thursday, the 6th. There were over seventy-five persons present and a first-class time was had by all.

A committee consisting of R. Witterstaetter, William Murphy, F. Ball, Ben George and Charles Jones was appointed to draw up plans for the monthly shows to be given by the society during the winter. The committee will be glad to have anyone wishing to give prizes to be competed for at these shows confer with them at once. As these exhibits do a great deal of good to everyone concerned and are much patronized by the public, thus creating a taste for that which is best in flowers, it is no more than right that everyone should help them along in every way they can. It is worth more in free advertising alone than all it costs. Charles Jones reported that the float for the fall festival parade was an assured fact, and even if we do not capture a prize it will at least be a credit to the florists of this city.

After the business meeting adjourned a nice lunch was served and then bowling and dancing was indulged in and much enjoyed by all present. Heartly thanks to the hospitality of Messrs. George & Allan and their wives.

Various Items.

E. G. Gillett took a flying trip among his growers last week. Among other places, he stopped at New Castle and Richmond, Ind., Grand Rapids, Mich., and Toledo, O. He reports stock looking fine everywhere and prospects for first-class stock to be of the best.

Henry Schwarz has moved into his new plant at Smith road and Forest avenue, Norwood, O. His houses are all complete and he is now busy getting everything into shape for winter business.

George Magrie has opened a store at 602 Elm street.

Miss Cronin of Covington, Ky., has started a branch on York street, Newport, and L. F. Benson of Newport has opened a store on Madison avenue, Covington.

William Murphy is suffering greatly from hay fever and will leave for Petoskey this week.

Mr. J. Lodder of Hamilton was in the city.

The Industrial Fair.

The second week of our great fair has come, and gone to the ever receding past; it brought with it the usual surprises and disappointments to the many exhibitors in every branch of trade, as all classes were well represented.

In the made up work this year I believe there were the greatest surprises. We were treated to the success of Mr. Simmons of this city and many well-known men were put in the background by this comparatively new man.

However, all say success to him, and promise that at future exhibitions he will not repeat the dose, at least not so strongly, it being to the tune of three firsts and two seconds out of five, Dunlop coming second, with two firsts and three seconds, the rest having the remaining prizes divided about equally between them.

There seems to have been a little dissatisfaction among some of the boys as to the way some of the awards were placed, but as we know that the judge, Mr. Ewing, of Berlin, Ont., is perfectly impartial and was not aware of whose stock he was judging, we can only say better luck next time and thank Mr. Ewing for his careful services.

The exhibit was noted for the evenness of all entries, there being no glaring advantage to any one exhibitor, all were so nearly equal.

Dunlop cleaned the rose slate, with Muston second and Manton Bros. third, while Manton Bros. turned the tables on Dunlop in the carnation sections.

The asters were very fine, resembling good chrysanthemums, as were also the dahlias, Rennie showing some magnificent specimens in both sections.

Summary of Awards.

Floral design, other than flat, 1st, Simmons; 2d, Dunlop; 3d, Brown; 4th, Grainger.

Various Notes.

Brown, the florist, in amateur photography, secured three first medals out of seven entries with a big field of competitors.

We noticed a number of outside florists in town during fair week.

As a representative of the Canadian florists I would like to state in your paper that we share with our cousins across the line the deep regret and sincere sorrow caused by the most dastardly attempt on the life of your president. We, as well as you, have come to recognize the sterling worth of this great man, and throwing aside political opinions and differences of national condition, we hope that President McKinley with his iron will and strong constitution, coupled with the aid of able physicians and surgeons, will foil the attempt of the assassin who would rob a good man of his life, a family of its head and a nation of an unbiased and impartial executive.

DES MOINES, IOWA.

The drouth has at last been broken and lawns and parks alike show the result. The honsing of carnations will be the easier for the rain. Some of the growers are through honsing, while others have only fairly commenced. Mr. Marshall has had a mild form of small-pox in his family, all four of his children having it, and his house is quarantined, which made it very annoying. The little fellows did not suffer much, however, and all hope for a speedy recovery.

Our state fair was held in our city and the floral display was about as usual. The amateur display was fairly good and as for the professional we clip the following from a daily paper. It speaks for itself:

LOZIER'S SWEETSTAKES.

The enterprising floral firm known as "Loziers" is always astounding the public with their untrifling, ceaseless push. Their exhibit at the state fair this year excels anything of the kind ever shown in the west. The judges declare that it is ahead of the famous exhibition of Chicago and equals anything shown at the Pan-American exhibition. There is every flower conceivable from the violet to the American Beauty rose. The floral designs were elaborate and as dainty in finish as to please beyond description.

WASHINGTON PARK, CHICAGO.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph, taken in two sections, of the sunken parterre in front of the conservatory in Washington Park, Chicago. The space devoted to the bedding is nearly twice as large as it was last year, the old roadway immediately west of the conservatory having been set back quite a distance and elevated twenty feet, thereby giving the public an opportunity to look down upon the display.

The four large geranium beds in the foreground are planted with the varieties Benjamin Schroeder, Meteor, S. A. Nutt and Mme. A. Chevalierie, only one sort used in a bed and each containing 500 plants.

One of the most pleasing features is

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

The Good & Reese Co., Springfield, O., register rose Queen Victoria, a sport from Belle Siebrecht; flower cup shaped; color, a blending of coppery yellow suffused with pink; foliage similar to the parent but growth more vigorous.

Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., register:

Cattleya Gaskelliana Mrs. Hugh S. Grant; sepals and petals white; lip much fringed, white, with a triangular blotch of purple and lilac; throat orange yellow; flowers nearly eight inches across.

C. speciosissima striata marginata; sepals and petals lilac with purple streaks toward the tips; lip purple, splashed with lilac, radiating whitish and purple veins; upper part yellow with purple margin.

C. speciosissima lilaciana; flower

tion of Chicago and equals anything shown at the Pan-American exhibition. There is every flower conceivable from the violet to the American Beauty rose. The floral designs were elaborate and as dainty in finish as to please beyond description.

In the plant department of the exhibit there were shown over 500 varieties of rare and valuable plants, one specimen being an imported Japanese Cycas Revoluta palm, 125 years old and standing eight feet tall. Mr. Lozier refused an offer of $100 for this one plant. The Loziers certainly deserve their bountiful and honorable success. Lozier's city store is at 408 East Sixth street, and is the finest equipped floral store in Iowa. The Loziers do an immense wholesale and retail, local and shipping business, handling sometimes 10,000 cut flowers a day. Their flowers are home grown, "a product of Des Moines." Lozier's modern greenhouses are at 1210-1212 East 12th street and at 28th and Easton boulevard will be found their floral gardens of several acres. The Loziers run a high class establishment all the way through, and their motto is the "Best," and they have solved the problem of furnishing their product to the buyer at low cost, their prices always being about 25 per cent less than all competitors. Lozier delivers to all parts of the city in "correct style." If you have not seen their elegant new rubber tire glass cut flower van with driver in livery just keep on the watch for it. The finest rig of delivery of any kind in the state. All hail this progressive firm, give them a trial order and get 20th century service and the very best flowers and plants that can be grown.

All orders are promptly filled by Loziers.

Mail them we say for the above is that now is the time to laugh.

J. T. D. F.

[Our correspondent has evidently failed to note that what he has clipped is undoubtedly a paid reading notice and therefore only an advertisement. Any florist could probably have a similar notice printed in that paper by putting up the cash. It is not very

the triangular bed at the right hand corner. This is planted solidly with Tom Thumb sweet alyssum and bordered with Alternanthera rosea; a corresponding bed at the opposite side is planted with Begonia Veron and bordered with yellow alternanthera.

In the background, just at the center of the conservatory, is a bed containing clematis, hibiscus, bignoniads, achinas and ficus. Immediately in front of this is a large bed of celosia, of the following varieties: Golden Bedder, Verschaffeltii, Her Majesty and Fire Brand. On either side are crescent shaped beds, planted solidly with ageratum Stella Gurney. All summer these two beds have been a mass of blue flowers. A more satisfactory plant than this one would be hard to find.

About a dozen varieties of the standard cannas are used in the display, each variety in a bed by itself, thereby offering an excellent opportunity to make comparisons. The cannas are bordered with Erianthus Ravenne.

It is gratifying to be able to say that the number of persons who wandered among the flower beds in Washington Park this year was larger than any summer for the past five years. Many questions are asked by visitors pertaining to the kinds of plants used, methods of propagation, etc., all of which leads one to believe that the interest in bedding plants is stronger than ever.

Mr. Edwin A. Kanst is in charge of this department at the park.

TOPEKA, KAN.—Miss Lotta L. Barnes, daughter of William H. Barnes, secretary of the Kansas State Horticultural Society, was married September 5 to C. Emerson Johnson of Pueblo, Colo.

SKANEATELES, N. Y.—J. G. White has sold his place on Onondaga street and has bought a place on West Genesee street, where he is erecting two houses, each 20x80, using the Garland iron gutter and putting in modern ventilating apparatus, intending to increase as occasion may require.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Trade in this locality is very dull and nothing in sight to cause a change. Business is practically at a standstill with nothing doing except an occasional small funeral order. Flowers are scarce, both outside and in the houses. Outside stock is better, especially roses, both in size and condition. No rain for a month; dust two to three inches deep; everything dried up. Fall crop of mosquitoes tremendous. Still hoping for something to turn up.

ON TO ASHEVILLE!

EDITOR REVIEW: I saw an article on page 422 of Sept. 5 headed "On to Asheville" that I felt ought to be answered. I was present when the vote was taken on place of meeting for 1902. I also heard the "Silver-Tongued Hiring" who recited his piece inviting the society to meet at Asheville. Nay, more, I was present as much as any one, unless that one was our worthy president, and I did not see a man under the influence of that which made Milwaukee famous. I never helped to make Milwaukee famous, but I voted to hold the convention of 1902 there, and as the silver-tongued speaker said he had helped to make Milwaukee famous, and as he lives in Asheville, I presume they have the Milwaukee article there also. I am sorry any one should insinuate that the convention was voted to Asheville on account of drunkenness. Shame!

My only reason for answering that article is because I did answer the recitation about the "Seventy Hills." I have confidence that I could have saved the convention to Milwaukee, as a change of three votes would have done. I changed the minds of two gentlemen after they had written their ballots and before the tellers collected the same, and those two will read this and remember the circumstances.

With all that has been said, I say let us all work for the Asheville convention. As an old employer taught me, when I make a bad bargain stick the closer to it, and try to make a good one out of it. So here goes for Asheville.

NOW is the time to plan for the coming season. We have made our plans. Can we help you make yours?

Our Plans have been so well laid and carried out that we shall be in a position to give you the best service of any house in this market.

You ought to have the benefit of it. May we have an opportunity to divide with you the benefits resulting from our plans and our work?

Beauties will be a strong feature with us this season. The results of one of our plans are already beginning to materialize in the shape of fine buds from our new range of glass at New Castle, Ind.

All Other Stock will also be received in larger quantities than ever before, and our facilities for handling it to the greatest satisfaction of customers are now unequalled.

Write Us about what you may need this season.

DENVER, COLO.

Everything is very quiet in the floral line, funeral work being the mainstay. Most all have their carnations housed and most of them are looking well. A. J. Graham, president of the club and Superintendent of the City Park, has gone east to visit the parks, etc., in the interest of the park commission, to pick up any points of improvement that he may find. He will take in the circle—Chicago, Buffalo, New York, Washington, St. Louis and any place of interest on the way. He expects to be gone about a month.

The Floral Club gave a basket picnic Aug. 26 to its members and its friends. There were sports and games of various kinds, and that with the dancing made the hours fly only too fast. All had a jolly time. THORNE.

SEYMOUR, IND.—M. A. Barick, proprietor of the Seymour Greenhouses, is the only florist here. He has three houses, containing 4,100 square feet of glass, in addition to cold-frames, etc. The houses are heated by water under pressure. The party from whom Mr. Barick bought in 1898 is not a florist and should not receive wholesale catalogues.

Trade Notes.

The State Florists' Association held its monthly meeting on Sept. 3 with a very good attendance. Mr. C. L. Green was elected to membership. Of those who went to Buffalo each gave a short talk on what he saw and all agreed that it was a rare treat altogether. Mr. Rieinan, from Kingstown, was present and spoke very interestingly about what they are doing at his place and reported everything in good shape, with good prospects for a successful season. Baur & Smith had on show several promising white seedling carnations.

It was decided to hold a special meeting on the 18th of this month to discuss and get under way preparations for the carnation convention next February. The meeting will be held at A. Wiegand & Son's store, corner 16th and Illinois streets. All members of the association are requested to be present, and if any others of the craft are in the city on account of the State Fair or the Odd Fellows' national meeting, which is to be held here, they are most cordially invited to attend this meeting. Take North Illinois car and get off at 16th street. A good time is promised by the host, so be sure and come. A. B.

BALTIMORE.

At a recent meeting of the show committee of the Gardeners' Club, complete arrangements were made for the dahlias show, which is to be held at Royal Arcanum Hall on Sept. 23, 1901. Though called a dahlia show there will be many other flowers exhibited. Richard Vincent, Jr., will send 10,000 dahlias, which he will donate to the club. The patronesses of the club will be the exclusive visitors from 2 until 5 p. m., and from 5 until 10 p. m. the public will be admitted free. The show committee is composed of F. G. Burger, I. H. Moss and N. F. Flitton.

VALUES.

Will some reader of the REVIEW give me an idea as to the right price to ask for roses and carnations growing in the benches? Also for smilax and single stem chrysanthemums.

The roses were planted from 4-inch pots about July 1. The carnations, smilax and chrysanthemums were planted about August 1 and are all in fine condition and in the leading varieties.

I do not want to sell out, but I am on the route of a new railroad, and I want some basis for a claim for losses in case we are unable to agree upon a price.

Iowa.

N. A. N.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—The Central Floral Company of Fifth avenue, near East street, has been succeeded by the Fifth Avenue Floral Company, the Van Hartesveldt Brothers having bought the five greenhouses of C. F. Bennett of Detroit. The purchasers are at work putting the houses in first-class shape. They will build a store on the property, carrying a line of seeds, bulbs, cut and potted flowers and nursery stock. Another house will be built on the west side of the property next year.

WHEELING, W. VA.—Langhans & Co., formerly of Avalon, Pa., will open a store here about Sept. 15.

JOHN LUCAS.

John Lucas, founder and active head until a few years past of the firm of John Lucas & Co., large dealers in greenhouse glass in Philadelphia, New York and Chicago, died August 7. His death will cause no change in the business, which will be continued under the same name and at the same locations.

DES MOINES, IA.—The premiums offered for plants and flowers are so low and the regulations so exacting at the Iowa State Fair that there was this year only one exhibitor, and the display naturally was not extensive. The fair managers can hardly expect first-class work to be entered in competition for such beggarly prizes. The florist that did enter went in merely for the advertising and made the most of it.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Henry Norman, a florist of Medford, Wis., was a recent visitor. He had answered an advertisement of a matrimonial bureau, paid $10 on account, and came here to close the deal, but on his arrival could not find either the matrimonial bureau or his $10. So he reported the case to the police. Are marriageable ladies scarce in Wisconsin?

SARATOGA, N. Y.—The annual floral fête was very successful, the display being as extensive as ever and the city crowded with visitors. At night Broadway was illuminated with many thousands of paper lanterns. A new feature was a pyrotechnical display at the park of the racing association.

MANSFIELD, PA.—Mrs. Robert Crosley is building some new houses, which will increase her glass surface to 10,000 square feet. The stock consists of carnations, chrysanthemums, some roses and bedding plants and part of one house is devoted to lettuce.

LOOMIS, CAL.—A. Mitting is building two greenhouses for L. D. Clapp, who will start in as a carnation grower with 2,000 square feet of glass.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

The Central Michigan Nursery and the Kalamazoo Nursery and Floral Company, both of this city, have consolidated under the name of the former and have increased their capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000. The move means a practical absorption of the Floral company by the Nursery company. Both organizations have pursued successful careers for some time, the Nursery company being organized in 1891 by Charles A. Maxson, now treasurer and general manager. Increased business made an increase of capital stock advisable and nearly all of the shares are held in Kalamazoo. The united company now owns and operates 400 acres of nursery land south of the city near White's lake and thirty acres at the northern extreme of Woodward avenue, where three new greenhouses are being added to those already in use. Cut flowers of all kinds will be given especial attention hereafter in addition to the propagation and sale of plants, both wholesale and retail.

The officers of the company are as follows: President, J. N. Stearns; vice-president, E. D. Foster, Detroit; treasurer and general manager, Charles A. Maxson; secretary, C. A. Krill; assistant manager, J. W. Rose; manager floral department, W. C. Cook.

Of the three new houses two are 20x100 each and one 15x50. This addition gives the company a total of 13,000 square feet of glass, which it is intended to add to in the spring.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Ohio State Fair, which was held in this city Aug. 26 to Sept. 3, was not quite as successful as was anticipated and it probably will not be held two weeks again.

The floral and fruit hall was very attractive with its fine arrangements, which was in charge of Mr. Currie, formerly with the Colorado State Hospital, and Mr. Cregg, of Dayton, Ohio.

The following premiums were awarded on plants and cut flowers: E. L. Charles, Columbus, Ohio, 32 firsts and 9 seconds; Miss Perry, Columbus, Ohio, 8 seconds; Mr. Breece, West Berlin, Ohio, 3 firsts and 2 seconds; Mr. Hall, Zanesville, Ohio, 1 second; Mrs. Johnston, Dayton, Ohio, 2 firsts and 3 seconds; Mrs. Zimmer, Zimmer, Ohio, 1 first and 1 second.

Mr. Baldwin, of Newark, Ohio; E. Ashley, representing H. A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, and Jos. H. Cunningham, of Delaware, Ohio, were recent visitors.

E. Metzmaier has improved his place by rebuilding.

E. L. Charles has been rushed with funeral work and wedding decorations and has several large decorations booked for the future.

S. F. Stevens, who has been on the sick list since returning from Buffalo, is improving. G.

ERIE, PA.

Trade has not begun to show any improvement over the past few weeks. Funeral work is about the only thing in demand.

The August rains have brought in some good asters.

Roses are scarce and somewhat inferior.

The only good carnations are those being cut from the plants in the field. L. V.

Various Notes.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held its monthly meeting September 4 at the establishment of F. Walker & Co., New Albany, Ind., with President William Mann in the chair. Quite a large crowd of florists was present, and considerable business was transacted. After the meeting the members were invited to a bounteous spread which was prepared by the firm, and which will long be remembered by all who were present.

Trade is picking up a little this week. The weather is very hot here. Roses are coming in good, but there are not enough carnations to go around; asters are also coming in good.

Joseph Coenen & Co. report a very heavy sale in Boston ferns for the month of August.

Jacob Schultz's place is in fine condition; his seedling carnations are looking very fine.

J. E. Marrett has had lots of funeral work of late.

E. G. Reimers had a large decoration at the custom house during the convale of Knights Templar.

E. Heitz's place is in fine shape for the winter.

Hy Fuchs has just finished building a new office adjoining his greenhouses.

John Behrman, T. B. Rudy and wife, and Hy Lichtefeld are thinking of taking in the big floral parade at Cincinnati next week. HY LICHTEFELD.

NORRISTOWN, PA.—The Clipper Lawn Mower Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $50,000, and it is proposed to erect a plant with a capacity of 10,000 machines a year. Sales have increased so enormously that they have been unable to manufacture fast enough with present facilities.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL
by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopaedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

The Careful Buyer.

These few remarks are intended as a continuation of last week's notes for the careful buyer. Market values do not differ much in the large cities at this time of the year; that is on common general stock. It is only when and where specialties or novelties are offered or sought that prices go up very high, making transactions disagreeable, more with the same ultimate results and more profit. Some people cannot "make up" unless they are supplied with first-class stock; it would not be safe for such to invest much money in a business for themselves. The best test of artistic ability is to "make up" fine work out of poor material, and in our climate we should remember that the despised flower of one day may be a gem the next.

you can often make a good profit on a small job if you buy and properly use the right material.

Wild smilax is obtainable and in good condition; a little of it goes a long way providing you use other greens, and slender branches of red maple or cut-leaved oak are excellent for panel or garland work. Wild smilax can be used for the drop-loop or to lighten off the others. You can well afford to leave out evergreens in fall wedding decorations. Honeysuckle vines are good for light trimming, and there is nothing choicer nor more effective than Clematis paniculata; it is in full bloom at present, can be had cheaply from any large nursery and you can use it anywhere to advantage. If you make curtains or arrange this vine in a low position it should be tied up as if growing, foliage facing up; where it is used suspended overhead, aron account of the sudden rise than of the size of the rise. If the growers or wholesalers would agree to put a set weekly or semi-monthly price on certain grades of flowers there would be more pleasure, less fussing and more profit in the business. The majority will agree that the present system is a bad one.

The cut flower trade will not be very brisk for the next month or so, and though top grade quality will always be snapped up at whatever the price, still with the exercise of some common sense and plenty of artistic ability in the majority of cases poorer grades can be used

Just at the present we are getting in the last of the outdoor flowers.

Seasonable Material.

Let us classify the week's possible business and the material. Many are getting orders for wedding decorations now. Except in a few rare cases the prices are not as high as they might be, but care should be taken to get all the people are willing to spend, and in your estimates don't say or intimate that you will do the work for nothing just for the sake of keeping you in practice. Whatever the price give the people full value; range so as the flowers will face down; this rule applies to most vines.

Very fine effects can be got from sticking some long Clematis paniculata vines in a ball of green moss and hanging it up where it can be seen to advantage. Of course it just depends on the size of the decoration, but to do fine work you must use variety in greens, be it wild material or greenhouse grown, even more so than in the case of flowers. The background or greening is all important. Balmishes, broom corn stalks, culalias, especially E. gracillima, can often be used with splendid results; we have covered high pillars with Eulalia gracillima, hiding the stems and allowing the grass to hang gracefully out, and nothing could make the same effect.

Golden rod is not being as much used as in former years, but when good and bright it is acceptable to decorate any hallway in the country; it is not the flower to put among fine paintings and delicate furnishings; keep it in the room next the entrance and away from greenhouse stock or cultivated flowers. Gladoli, tritomas, hydrangea paniculata, asters, cannas, dahlias and many beautiful wild flowers such as Boltonia latifolia, B. asteroides, Cortopsis triferis, Rudbeckia triloba, Helenium autumnale, Helenium grandicephalum striatum, Rudbeckia speciosa, Helianthus helianthoides and many others equally lovely and despised merely because they grow abundantly in our meadows and marshes; all these are obtainable and at very little cost. A wagonload of such material is merely the spending of a few hours and a few dollars in the country and is sufficient to decorate several large rooms or a church.

Many a country florist rushes to the city to purchase for the smallest orders, when, particularly in the case of funeral work or decorations, better materials can be had near his own place for the trouble of collecting it. Any man with half an acre of land, too, should be continually surrounded with enough flowers of his own to meet almost any order up to frost time. Limited grounds must be treated the same as greenhouse space; grow only good valuable flowers to cut and when one thing is over have two more to put in its place.

We forgot to remind you in its class that climbing rose foliage, particularly that of Rosa Wichuriana and its hybrids, is fine for decorations. Arrange the foliage as recommended in the case of clematis, and tie short roses among the foliage. Don't make the inexcusable blunder of putting two different colored roses on the one drapery, though, and if you want the flowers to last several hours stick them in Kiff's hanging glasses or rubber-capped tubes, but be careful to have the glasses hidden. Where a rose decoration of the above nature is wanted, and it is the best way to decorate, buy the poorer grade roses in the box as they come from the grower and stick them up to the necks in water for an hour or two before using; you can have a few of the finer blooms wired to stand out prominently.

Where we have a bank of roses, or mantel shelf to make, we use small potted rose plants for green and use the same variety of rose flowers to finish. You can get any variety of rose plants at places denoted in the classified ads. of this paper; and where you have fine rose work to do, be the design wreath, wreath basket or layer designs, you can do better work with good rose foliage than is possible with ferns, asparagus or other greens. Twenty-five rose plants used to advantage in a design is worth more than fifty cut roses sometimes, and many more would be used were their great value recognized. Usually the most of the greening is done after the flowers are put in; it should be done before.

Bouquets.

As to wedding bouquets there is not very much to select from. Lily of the Valley has been scarce, but the wide-awake buyer can get all that is wanted for ordinary purposes, providing he buys early in the morning. Afternoon orders for valley could not be filled in New York last week. A limited quantity of stephanotis can be had, some gardenias, a few Dendrobium formosum, quite a quantity of the beautiful Bouvardia Humboldtii corymbiflora, and a few choice scraps suitable for side clusters. There is nothing to specially recommend for the bride's bouquet at present.

The most stylish bouquets this season will be of two shapes, one the drooping cluster spray, the other small and round with pendent spray in front; these are to be tied with the richest ribbons. The names and dates embroidered on the ends. The best and sweetest white rose is the Kaiserin, and the short thorns should be clipped off the foliage where they are to be used for bouquets.

Adiantum Farleyense will be used in every class of fine work the coming season. Whilst it will not do to have this beautiful fern appear cheap, or have the small-hearted customer have some of it thrown in with every few cents' worth of flowers, yet every store doing any size of a business will do well to have a few plants in the window. It enhances the value of everything. It is a necessity in the up-to-date store.

Funeral Work.

Funeral work constitutes the greater part of the trade at this time, and in the majority of cases the florist can, if he goes the right way about it, recommend and use any flower he chooses. The customer usually selects the design and requests the use of "plenty of roses." All this can be done and still use any flower for groundwork. Roses have recently been purchasable for $2.50 per thousand; fairly good stock can be had now at $1.00 per hundred, and whilst these prices prevail designs can be made entirely of roses at a small figure. It requires about 200 of such roses to properly make a 20 or 24-inch wreath, providing you use plenty of their foliage for greening. Where adiantum is used less roses are needed. In funeral work there is more chance to use up poor grade flowers than in any other section of the business.

Asters have been a great failure in New York this season; with a very few exceptions the quality of flowers has been poorer than those sent to any other city's market; some blame the seedsmen and others the narrow bargaining-driving growers; anyhow, New York's asters are a disgrace. These flowers are a necessity for two months, and it is bad business not to get the very best and cultivate them with care. Beautiful wreaths can be made with purple asters. We use five hundred medium flowers to a 30-inch wreath and tie a broad bow of the same color or white taffeta ribbon. The same can be done with white asters. They are the best flowers to recommend for shipping long distances or for use in cemetery designs. The flower may look common or cheap, but a properly made wreath will look as well, if not better, than one of any other flower.

Immense quantities of double tuberoses are coming in, and except for use in base work or in the designs ordered by poor people there is not much demand for them. The single tuberoses can be used to much greater advantage, but are not generally grown. Hydrangea paniculata is plentiful; it is now bringing about $2.00 per 100. For cheap work we highly recommend this flower; a 2-cent head properly stemmed can cover a square foot of surface; it is the cheapest groundwork flower on the market.

Double white altheas and double white petunias are also used for groundwork, and cost 25 cents per 100. White dahlias are coming in in quantity, soon to be followed by the chrysanthemum. Where cheap funeral designs are wanted, variety of flowers, even though they be poor, will greatly add to the value; in this way where a solid mass is used for first flower, small sprays of candytuft, feverfew, carnations, water lilies, or any other white flower, will help show off.

Solid work doesn't mean pancake or pudding-like things; they can be made just as attractive as the carved marble. The florist who insists on every one of his customers taking the ultra classical from his own standpoint is, to say the least, foolish, and on the way to do a subdued trade. We may incline to certain ideals but must respect the opinions of customers. Might as well try to force a newsway to choose a Wagnerian creation in preference to a cake-walk as to make some people take one design or flower where they want another. No harm for you to propose, but don't insist.

We regret the color lines in funeral flowers are not more generally recognized. There is a tendency to work off any old thing or color despite appropriateness. We often wonder if people who do this know the difference or that they merely disregard the opinions and nerves of their customers.

Material for flat bunches is not plentiful outside of roses. Lilies are confined to a few L. speciosum, but fine work can be done with even poor grade roses. You can make a new funeral bunch this way: Wire your roses and tie them up into several long, graceful sprays; get some steel wire, cut into desired lengths and bend to curve out from each end; green these well with any light vine, or preferably rose foliage; tie your sprays to the wires and have the center of the bunch quite heavy; finish with broad bow of ribbon at each side.

The general run of cut flowers is improving every day now, and the early bird can always pick up something choice to offer special trade. Liberties are going to be scarcer next winter because many growers became impatient with it and discarded it. Beauties are plentiful and fairly good. Do all you can to encourage growers to furnish variety. Even if you cannot sell them every day, a few Testouts, Perles, Carnations, Watevilles, Simsets, Bon Silenes, Papa Gontiers, Golden Gates, or any other kind will add value to the tiresome Bridesmaid, Bride, Meteor and Beauty, and if there is any trade at all variety can always be used. On the buyer and the artist depend much of the future of floriculture; they can and do kill the chances of many a worthy new flower; yes, many a good thing is driven from the market by hasty judgments or lack of foresight. The only safe way for the introduction of novelties is to seek the patronage of some influential florist or flower lover for their pets.

Notes.

Last week we had the very great pleasure of escorting through the New York markets Mr. and Mrs. Phil Hansworth and Miss A. Kreiting, of Chicago. It happened to be the days before the Jewish New Year. Very little stock was to be seen, and such as it was these distinguished visitors assured us that finer flowers, particularly in asters and Beauties, were obtainable in Chicago. Flowers such as gardenias, cattleyas, valley, and a few things like tritomas, Bonvardia Humboldtii, and, very strange to say, Hydrangea paniculata, were of special interest in the way of quality to them. According to them there is room for a good nurseryman out near Chicago. Tritomas, heleniums, hydrangeas and such stock are easily well grown.

The icebox in the new store Small & Sons are opening in the Waldorf-Astoria will be operated by cold air; no ice will be used. This promises to be the system of the future, as it is cleaner, more economical and produces better results. Our Chicago visitors were greatly impressed by the practical test shown them in the cooling rooms of the great hotel.

At this writing the whole nation is plunged into deep grief at the death of the President. It is a great blow to the florists' trade. There will be dull times for the next month, but there is no cause to imagine any great permanent panic. The man who takes advantage of the present sorrowful situation to run down the stock market is a fit companion to Czolgoz. Times like the present need true patriotism and common sense. Don't talk of bad times; show some manliness and keep at least the plant and cut flower markets steady.

IVEGA.

Don't FORGET that you will find all the best offers all the time in our classified ads., and that you can there quickly find what you want if it is in the market.

Death has claimed the chief executive of this "Land of the Free" and by the hand of an assassin a blow has been struck at the foundations of the best system of government civilization has yet produced. It will be useless repetition for us to attempt to eulogize the man in whom a majority of the American people have twice expressed their supreme confidence. All are familiar with his abilities as a statesman and the purity of his private life.

By the time this has appeared in print the mortal remains of William McKinley will have been returned to the bosom of Mother Earth with all the honors that a sorrowing people can bestow.

We must then turn to the future, and though we may feel that the ship of state has lost one of the ablest pilots it has ever had, we can but have the greatest confidence in the man whose hand is now upon the helm. In Theodore Roosevelt our late lamented president will have an able, wise and conservative successor. The American people are exceedingly fortunate that in our vice-president we had a man of such great abilities, and we feel safe in predicting that the period of prosperity the country is enjoying will suffer no check during his administration providing it can be avoided by any human agency.

Peace to the ashes of the great and good man who has gone, and may God guide aright the hand of him upon whom the responsibilities of government have devolved.

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

Any reader having photographs of floral tributes arranged for the funeral of our lamented president will confer a favor by sending copies of same to the REVIEW at the earliest possible date.

THE HOME GROUNDS OF A LANDSCAPE GARDENER.

The accompanying illustrations made from photographs taken at the home of a landscape gardener in Chicago indicate how one's grounds may be made attractive by the use of hardy trees and shrubs, mostly native, and with comparatively little expense. Many of the trees are oaks which have continued to flourish in spite of the frequent assurance that oaks will not stand civilization. Dogwoods, choke cherries, prickly ash and other native shrubs have also been freely used. The illustrations show some evergreens which have added greatly to the attractiveness of the place in winter. There are also a few elms, lindens and groups of willows which have been planted and ash trees which were growing when the house was built, twenty years ago. As far as possible the ridges and depressions in the surface of the ground have been retained so that the lawns have more variety of contour than one usually finds in this city.

It may be of interest to know that the grounds are cared for by one man, who devotes from one-third to one-half his time to them, and that they seem to meet the approval of many birds. Among those that adopt it as their summer home are thrushes of various kinds, robins, orioles, rose-breasted grosbeaks, summer warblers, wrens and catbirds. Bluejays are plentiful the year round, and if they behaved as well as they looked, would be very welcome. Occasionally a scarlet tanager is seen and a pair of cardinal grosbeaks spent one whole year in the vicinity, but they have not been seen this summer.

The grounds shown in the illustrations have a frontage of 300 feet, with a depth of perhaps 150 feet, back of which are the stable, the kitchen garden and the toboggan slide.

CATERPILLARS ON MUMS.

Can any of the readers of the REVIEW tell me how to exterminate caterpillars on chrysanthemums? They are what I suppose to be the larvae of the brown-tailed moth, which has been very numerous in this section this summer. When small they are of a whitish color and as they grow they get red.

"A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind."

The only cure I can suggest is Paris green when hand-picking is of no avail. We used Paris green this year in the proportion of a small tablespoonful to a pail of water, and by this means poisoned a great many caterpillars. Got them down, in fact, so that the rest were got rid of by hand-picking.

I have handled mums extensively for a number of years, but I never saw so many caterpillars before, of all descriptions and sizes.

The chief point to observe in the use of Paris green is to see that it is evenly distributed and not applied strong on one place and weak on another. It will burn the foliage if too strong. Apply it all over the foliage so that when the caterpillar feeds he has to eat some Paris green also. We found we had to use it very weak earlier in the summer, or it would burn the foliage, but the foliage is harder now and should stand it better.

Possibly, also, the Paris green varies a plant will make after the bud is taken, and further upward growth as a natural result is impossible. Day after day you can run over the same bench and still find shoots.

The suckers must be kept cut out until the bud is half-way developed. Some varieties produce a great many more suckers than others, Bonnaffon being with us one of the worst in this respect.

Insect Pests.

Grasshoppers are now most abundant and it is just now that they do the most damage, because if they eat the side out of a bud there is nothing further to be done but cut the shoot right away. The only way to catch them that I know is hand-picking in the early morning, when they are partially paralyzed after a cool night, before the sun has a chance to warm them into active life again.

When you see the young leaves drawn together over the bud, if you examine closely you will always find a small caterpillar concealed therein. He will invariably eat the bud if left undisturbed.

The army worm is very destructive to the buds some years. So far he has not put in an appearance with us. He will be found in a hole in the ground directly at the base of the plant in the day time, and at night, or some time when no one is around, he will climb up and bore a hole clean through the bud. One of these worms will cut every petal out of a fully developed flower in a single night.

Early Varieties.

The buds on early varieties are swelling rapidly, and the earliest ones, like Montemort and Fitzwygram, will soon be showing color. Syringing these varieties overhead should now be stopped; syringing any variety should not be practical, in fact, as soon as the bud bursts through the husky coverings, because if the water lays in the center of the bud, it is almost certain to cause the bud to rot. This is particularly true in the case of crown buds, which hang for a long while before developing.

There is a difference of several weeks in the time required by the crown bud to develop over the time required by the terminal, and this fact makes the crown bud a harder bud to handle, as it requires more careful treatment. B. B.

CALLADIUM BULBS.

F. A. G. asks: "How should calladium bulbs be treated and stored during winter?"

With many florists the calladium bulbs are thought to be the common large leaf calladium that we use for tropical gardening, which is generally known as Calladium esculentum, but I suspect that the inquirer refers to the fancy calladium.

First of all, the common calladium (esculentum) I have found keeps well under a rose house bench. As soon as frost has destroyed the leaves they should be cut off about six inches above the root and stored in a temperature of about 50 degrees, but a warm cellar will not do, as they shrivel up. While wanting to be perfectly dry they need the moisture that is provided in a greenhouse. Don't lay them on an earth floor or the moisture will start them growing.

The fancy calladiums, when they begin to fade, which they are doing at this date, should be gradually dried off; that is, given less water. Once a week will do very well and in a month no water at all. You can keep them for a few months brown and black and covered with hairs about a quarter of an inch long. The caterpillar gets to be about 2 to 2½ inches long.

Until three weeks ago my plants were unaffected, but since then the caterpillars have bred by the thousands. I have had five men at work continuously picking them off and destroying them, and yet we cannot get the best of them. I have used hellebore, slugshot, kerosene emulsion and fumigation, but without any appearance of killing any of them. My plants are grown on solid beds, the houses before planting were thoroughly cleaned and fresh soil used. I have one house 300 feet long and two 200 feet, with about 40,000 plants. S.

I am very sorry for your correspondent, who has been and still is infested with this pest.

some in strength. Mr. S. could use a teaspoonful first in four gallons of water and if no harm resulted to the foliage apply a little stronger. BRIAN BORU.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

The Buds.

Buds are appearing everywhere, and they should be taken at as early a stage as possible. It is very wrong to leave the surrounding buds and shoots on the plants a day longer than is necessary to see that the central bud is perfect. Concentration is the watchword, and all the energies of the plant should be centered on the bud. Side shoots and suckers should be removed as soon as possible, and the plants will need going over several times a week to keep these down. It is wonderful the number of side shoots in the soil, laying the pots on their sides so that no water reaches them. After they are perfectly dry you can store the bulbs in dry sand or any other dry material, always keeping them in a fairly warm temperature, never less than 50 degrees, and start them up again in the month of March or April.

If grown in moderate sized pots, say 6, 7 or 8-inch, there is no better way than laying the pots on the sides under a bench and letting them remain right in the soil that they have grown in until you want to start them up again.

W. S.

THE ASTER BUG.

In a recent issue of the REVIEW you pictured a field of asters grown by the Harms Park Floral Co., of your city, which were simply perfect.

A crop of asters would be worth several hundred dollars a season to us in our retail trade if we could grow them, but we have never succeeded yet, although we have made many attempts, and this year our failure has been more signal than ever. We get along very nicely until we reach the blooming period, when the aster bug steps in, and in spite of slugshot and paris green that's as far as we ever get.

This year our troubles have been multiplied by their attacks on our field-grown carnations. We grow about 2,000 Fisher and the same number of Scott for summer bloom in the field. They usually start to bloom about the first of July and bloom till frost. They did all right till about the beginning, or rather the middle, of August, when the bugs began on them, it seemed in preference to the asters. We were between the devil and the deep sea. Slugshot seemed useless and paris green was our only alternative. We used it. The bugs disappeared for about ten days. The plants were badly burned, especially Fisher, and I notice today the bugs are back again in force.

Is there no remedy for these pests? An answer through the columns of the REVIEW would greatly oblige.

CARNATION NOTES.

Mr. F. A. G. will find his questions regarding stemrot in carnations fully answered in my notes of last week, so I will not repeat the same thing this week.

How Many Blooms?

"How many blooms should a well-grown carnation plant produce during the flowering season?" is hardly a fair question. Carnations should not be judged altogether by the number of blooms each variety produces. A better way to put it would be: "How much ought each plant to earn in a season?" Nearly every grower knows that he cannot obtain the maximum of both quality and quantity from a plant at the same time, and that while one variety may produce nearly twice as many blooms as another variety, in most cases the difference in quality will be so much in favor of the shyer variety that the earnings will be about the same. Some of the newer varieties, however, combine these two qualities to a great extent as a result of cross fertilization, and in a very few years we will have varieties that will produce the very highest quality blooms and as many as any of our smaller flowered varieties of today could ever be made to produce.

Then again a variety may produce a large number of blooms, but at a time when there is little profit in them. Still another thing to be taken into consideration is how much room does each plant occupy. A plant that grows to perfection in a space of 8x10 inches should not be expected to earn as much as a plant that occupies a space 10x12 inches, or perhaps even more. So the fairest way to put the question would be: "How much should each square foot of bench space earn in a season?"

It is generally agreed that a house built according to modern style and costing about 50c per square foot of ground covered should pay for itself in two years. That means that a house 20x100 feet costing $1,000 and holding as it does just about 2,000 plants, will earn above cost of running about $500 each season. You can figure it down to so much from each plant, if you like, but there is so great a difference between the plants, even of the same variety, that it will not be practical. Some will run ahead while others will run behind. Add to this the expense of producing the plants, running the house through the season and marketing the blooms, etc., and you will be able to tell just how much each plant on an average should earn.

The cost of running a house will vary with different growers, so you must figure that for yourself. You may be a much better manager than your neighbor, or if you have ten houses you can manage to run them more economically than you can run five. You can never figure just how many blooms it will take to bring so much money, as you can never tell just what they will bring.

These results must not be expected, though, unless you have good houses, good soil, good plants to start with, a good early start, and, in fact, you must do things in a first-class way from start to finish if you want to obtain first-class results. Many employers who hire a man to look after the growing end of the business are unwilling to do their part toward bringing about these conditions, but expect the man to grow the very highest quality of stock with perhaps fourth-class facilities, and when the stock does not grade up with their neighbor's they blame the grower for it. This is a great injustice, and often a good grower's reputation gets a black eye until the employer is found out. Of course no first-class grower will remain on such a place very long, as there are plenty of good places where good men are appreciated and treated right.

A. F. J. BAUR.

GOLDEN GATE.

I have a house of Golden Gate in good condition and blooming to beat the band, but they have a great deal of blind wood. Would you allow them to dry out for a few days and cut out the blind wood, or allow it to stay on? J. M.

The rose is so exceptionally free-blooming that cutting the crop amounts to a very sharp system of pruning. Of course pruning becomes necessary if the plants are grown on in the benches a second year. AMERICAN ROSE Co.

Washington, D. C.

If the Golden Gate roses were carried over from last season it would be advisable to cut out some of the blind wood, in fact, it ought to have been done before this.

If planted since June it is not advisable to cut out the blind wood at this time. I think it very essential for the welfare of the plant and the future crop of buds that the foliage be left on, whether on blind or blooming wood. You want to get as much growth on your plants as possible before winter sets in, and the leaves are the lungs of the plant. I never have much blind wood on Golden Gate, nearly every branch, large and small, bringing a bud. This is one of the reasons why the Golden Gate is the best forcing rose for the florist who retails all his own product.

In making up work there is nothing finer than the small buds that come on the side shoots of this rose.

Later on when the plants have made considerable growth and have grown much together it is then advisable to cut out some of the superfluous wood, but if in cutting the buds the cutting is properly done there will hardly be any too much foliage on the plants at any time during the season.

LEWIS ULRICH.

If we were asked the value of the plants now to continue to grow on, or their prospective value, we would increase the above figures, the amount of increase depending on the size of plants, varieties of roses, carnations, etc., ability of N. A. N. as a grower, etc.

It is a question that we can hardly answer definitely; can only estimate the value as compared to what we consider the same plants worth with us.

A City of Mourning.

But a few short days ago, the 5th, our city was in its gayest attire and all hearts beat high, for the President of the United States was spending the day at the Pan-American. He visited almost every State Building, many of which were decorated with palms, flowers and flags in his honor. He spoke to tens of thousands from a stand in the grand esplanade. Then he was the guest of the New York State Commission at a 2 o'clock lunch, where 200 men of distinction met him. As the decorations of the tables were mostly from the gardens of the Exposition we did not think it worth while to say much about it. Through the kindness of Messrs. VALUES.

Will some reader of the REVIEW give me an idea as to the right price to ask for roses and carnations growing in the benches? Also for smilax and single stem chrysanthemums.

The roses were planted from 4-inch pots about July 1. The carnations, smilax and chrysanthemums were planted about August 1 and are all in fine condition and in the leading varieties.

I do not want to sell out, but I am on the route of a new railroad, and I want some basis for a claim for losses in case we are unable to agree upon a price.

Iowa.

N. A. N.

In answer to N. A. N. will say the value of plants now is cost of plants and cost of care for two months they have been planted.

We would estimate value as follows:

Roses, 825 per 100.

Carnations, $12.50 per 100.

Smilax, $10 per 100.

Chrysanthemums, $6 per 100.

Supposing all things are in A1 order and there is a sure market, I would say the following would be a fair valuation. You must remember that with exception of the chrysanthemums most of the work and expense is yet to come on these plants, and you cannot reckon on any positive crops; only their value at the time they are sold or destroyed, as the case may be. I would say if valued at this date that 20 cents a piece would be about right for roses, 10 cents a piece for carnations, 10 cents a piece for smilax, and 6 cents for chrysanthemums. I am very likely to be criticised as to these prices, but in my opinion they are near the mark and as much as I would value them if called on to do so for an actual case. Wm. SCOTT.

THE NEW YORK EXHIBITION.

We have received a copy of the schedule of prizes offered by the New York Florists' Club for the exhibition to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, Oct. 21 to 28 next. The prizes said beautiful gladiolus, the tables were decorated principally with these flowers, with asparagus and ferns strewn the tables and among them beautiful nymphaeas of many shades. For once we borrowed some exhibitors' palms, and fine kentias and latanias from Messrs. Henry A. Dreer and F. R. Pierson made the marble palace very beautiful. A reception to the Pan-American officials and clerical staff followed in the Government Building, and beneath two splendid arcades loaned by Mr. George Troup of Forest Lawn the President grasped the hands of four or five hundred people.

It is dreadfully presumptuous of me to call this a trying and useless function, still we think it is trying with this small crowd, and what must it be at a public reception. To have heard this noble, good man talk for even five minutes would make you better acquainted with the man than to be hustled past him, as must of necessity be the case. After a visit to the Falls of Niagara the following day the public reception began in the beautiful Temple of Music, and there the lamentable crime occurred of which all the world knows and has been told in minute detail far better than I can. After days of buoyant hope and even confidence of the President's recovery the bad turn came and in twenty-four hours William McKinley, the martyr, had passed away and our city sheltered the leading men of the nation.

Your readers will be interested to know of the flowers that were sent to the house of mourning. We believe there was a sense of delicacy that forbade a too effusive display of floral tributes, and those sent were mostly, but not all, from foreign representatives. The remains were removed from the house on John G. Milburn at 12 noon on Sunday and taken to the City Hall, where from 2 to 11 p. m. a multitude passed through

The waiting crowds stood in line upwards of half a mile distant from the hall. Our beautiful Delaware avenue, down which the funeral cortege went, never before held such a mass of people. For two miles and a half people stood ten deep on each side of the street. No nobler avenue exists and no sadder procession ever passed its verdant lawns and lovely houses.

Many loose flowers were sent to the Milburn home on Saturday and the designs were sent on Sunday morning. The undertakers had entrusted to S. A. Anderson the decoration of the rotunda of the City Hall, and it was well done. A large lot of beautiful palms were used. The daily papers as usual gave a most erroneous description of the floral tributes, pillows of immortelles being mentioned. There was no pillow there, much less of immortelles.

As near as I can ascertain, and the first four I can vouch for because they came from the writer's own place, there were a five-foot wreath of Kaiserin roses and valley from President Diaz, of Mexico; a three-foot ivy wreath with large bunch of valley from the Mexican ambassador; a four-foot wreath of pink roses and valley from the Mexican commission to the Pan-American; large bunch of American Beauty roses from employes of Cary Safe Co.; a wreath of American Beauties from Senator M. A. Hanna; wreath of white roses from Col. M. T. Herrick; bunch of lilies from Helen R. Gould, Tent No. 8, Daughters of Veterans; wreath of roses and carnations from the Chilean commission; a fine wreath of roses and purple asters from the Cuban commission; an anchor of pink and white roses from George B. Cortelyou, the late President's private secretary; from Chiefs Gerouimo, Blue Horse, Flat Iron, Red Shirt and 709 braves of the Indian Congress, a wreath of purple asters. This wreath was marked with a card which bore on its face side in Sioux tongue the Indians' tribute to the departed. On the reverse side was Geronimo's eulogy of President McKinley. A few other pieces there might have been.

Although beautiful in quality and fine in execution, you will notice there was great simplicity in the designs and an entire absence of Gate Ajars and Rock of Ages, etc. We suppose in Washington and Canton there will be many magnificent tributes from the exalted people of the earth. This (Monday) morning at 8:30, over the Pennsylvania railroad, departed for Washington President Roosevelt and the remains of the much loved William McKinley, and so ends for Buffalo this most sad tragedy, except to deal with the wretched man whose twisted brain led him to such a foul deed; but that will be entirely out of the realms of floriculture.

Pan-American Notes.

Out of respect to the illustrious dead the gates were closed tight on Saturday and Sunday. We are open today, Monday, and there is a big crowd on the grounds. Opinions differ widely as to whether our attendance will suffer or not from the sad events of the past ten days. The preponderance of feeling is that it will make no difference. We trust not, and we think not; why should it? The Pan-American was never more beautiful than at this moment. The mixed planting which surrounds almost every side of the large buildings, the pergolas and the courts, have now grown to a stately height, and the material used, if common, such as hemp, ricinus, canna, helianthus, etc., make a fine appearance. I remark with pride occasionally to a visiting brother florist that however stately and grand the architect may plan and build, the softening tints of green of our plants are indispensable, and without the foliage (the flowers could be dispensed with) the finest buildings look odd and naked.

The flower garden is in its prime. The canna beds, if I can be allowed to say it, are a little better than good, and so are many other things. The herbaceous borders and beds of Henry A. Dreer have for months been beautiful and interesting. Mr. Arthur Cowee is still keeping up a grand display of the Groff's hybrid gladioli. John Fay Kennell, of Rochester, has made a large display of his grand gladiolus "1900" and a few other varieties. This variety of Mr. Kennell's seems to be a very fine commercial flower and admired by all. Its bright scarlet with clear white throat is very striking. James Vick's Sons have made a grand display of asters in many varieties. Mr. P. Bissett, gardener to Mrs. G. G. Hubbard, of Twin Oaks, Washington, D. C., sent us a fine exhibit of nymphaeas, nelumbiums and Victoria flowers. We expect to have a large dahlia exhibit lasting ten days. Flowers are coming from many parts of the country.

Visitors within the next two weeks will see a very large specimen of the Agave Americana, or Century plant. A pair are flowering, but one was injured, while one has sent up a spike like a telegraph pole some forty feet in height. Century plants in flower are not as common in our northern states as dandelions.

The American Pomological Society met and held their exhibitions here last week. The display exhibits by the many states is so continuous and fine that this special exhibition was hardly appreciated, although fine in itself. It brought together about 300 professors. Nearly all fruit men, you will notice, are professors. I believe they had a well attended and interesting session. It would be impossible to mention half of those to whom I had the honor of an introduction. We saw with pleasure that wonderful worker, Prof. L. H. Bailey. Among the florists whom we have lately met was the veteran John Bader, of Allegheny City; John Charlton, of Rochester; Thomas B. Meahan, of Philadelphia, left his card but we regret not having seen him; A. N. Gilchrist, of Toronto (and here let me say that there is a score of Toronto florists due here) and they had better come quick! Mr. J. H. Troy, of New York, called with a brother, who is spending a month's vacation in America, who is spending a very typical well-to-do Englishman, whom it was a pleasure to meet. In the short while I had his company I wanted to direct them how to see most and mentioned an attractive feature of the Midway, when I heard was amusing. He said: "Oh, I have seen all that in Paris, don't cher know." On getting him to give me some idea of Paris I had to hold up both hands and exclaim: "My dear fellow! You need not go to our Midway."

Mr. J. Horace McFarland is here with an assistant photographing horticultural subjects for "Country Life." Now we shall get some real artistic pictures. Mr. McFarland is delighted with all he sees here. W. S.

Trade Conditions.

Not "Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high!" but "Everything is plenty and the price hangs low!" Good asters are quite plentiful at 1 cent each or less, and poorer grades are voluminous at all kinds of prices. Roses are still running very freely, a few Kaisersin touching 8 cents; best grades of other pink and white at 4 cents, with a little million of them at smaller figures. The season for red roses is really just beginning; good ones are scarce and prices are not established. Pinks are just in sufficient supply so that good ones sell readily enough at from 1 to 2 cents with just enough left to prove that the demand is supplied. Lilies, gladioli, tuberoses, candytuft and a full line of outdoor material can be had at low prices. All kinds of green material are plentiful except smilax, which is a bit off. H. M. Robinson & Co. are making a heavy drive on a huge lot of galax if taken in large quantities.

S. J. Goddard lifts the veil from horrors in the near future by bringing in a dozen white chrysanthemums on Sept. 14, upon which day three or four men also showed up with Princess Violets. Wm. Sim leaved with 1,000 of them.

The philosophy in the sale of stalls at the Park street market is to the point. Five years or so ago not all of them could be rented and half of those rented brought no premium above the regular rental. This situation kept improving yearly until last year the sale surprised every one by aggregating $3,300 for premiums, every stall being rented and with at least a 85 bonus, the heaviest bid being $65.50. But this year was a record bracket indeed! $6,733 tectotal "unearned increment!" Premiums ran all the way from $34.00 to $70.00 and a couple of dozen good customers were disappointed by lack of stalls. The stockholders see the point and are sitting down a big fund to be used in securing and fitting up larger quarters as soon as something suitable can be found, which in itself is quite a question when plenty of room, low rental and right situation are considered. Another argument, too, to prove that corporations have souls and that some trusts are good trusts is the fact that the directors and stockholders will invite all stall-holders to attend their annual banquet, which comes off some time in October. By judicious training a stall-holder who has paid a large premium can partially redeem himself at that time. J. S. MANTER.

NEW YORK.

Mourning for the Dead President.

This city is setting an example to the rest of the country in the way of mourning for the dead President. Every prominent building is draped, bunting and flag decorators have been working day and night to execute orders. Never since the death of Grant has such a display been seen. The principal florists have used considerable cloth to drape their windows. We regret the opportunity to show fine funeral designs has not been taken advantage of except in Fleisichman's, Thorley's and Small's. In the first window there is a large wreath of leucotoe leaves with about twenty yards of 10-inch width ribbon and repeated in a many looped bow at the top; silver lettering on the streamers. The design is very attractive. Thorley shows a large urn made of cape flowers, and Small shows the best design seen in the city for some time. A picture of McKinley is framed with leucotoe leaves and around all is an immense Roman wreath of the same material; purple cloth is loosely arranged between the frame and the wreath; the leaves are pinned onto fine netting; the work is well done and greatly admired.

Strange to say that with all the money spent on decorating the city up to this writing (Tuesday morning) there has not been over $400 worth of flowers sent to the funeral from this city, with the exception of some work from J. H. Small & Sons, who have the larger part of the work at their Washington store. Most of the florists expected to be very lousy, but nearly all the stores were closed at 8:30 Monday night. Washington seems to have captured most of the orders, through the foreign representatives, but if they got much it was not felt on the New York market, where roses can be bought at from $1.00 per 100 upward.

Various Items.

Every one expects business to be poor for some time to come. Officials, at least, will stop entertaining and society in general will be compelled to show some regard; nevertheless, the country's prosperity is too secure to be materially damaged, and calamity howlers will soon get tired. Great efforts are being made to keep the money market steady, and the next few weeks will tell much. It is the duty of the hour to have confidence and fulfill obligations and all good in tentions.

J. H. Small & Sons expect to open their new store at the Waldorf-Astoria next week. They will use cold air instead of ice in their store.

Thorley will open his Fifth avenue store next week, also; George Humphreys will be in charge.

William Long went to Washington Monday in charge of some pretty wreaths from Thorley's.

A recent report from Chicago to the effect that C. F. Klunder was coming here to open a store has got the boys guessing.

Mr. Reed, of the firm of Reed & Keller, has returned from Europe full of the good things he saw there and with whatever novelties and high grade goods he could gather up for their trade.

There is not much of variety in flowers coming in. Carnations are small but bring from $1.00 to $1.25 per 100. Valley is scarce, so are cattelias; they bring good prices. Single violets have appeared and sell for 25 to 35 cents per 100.

Bowling.

The New York and Flatbush teams, with numerous friends, met on the New York alleys last night. There were two prizes offered, one for the highest average made by a member of the Flatbush team. This prize was a very handsome new ball given by Theo. J. Lang; it was won by P. Riley. The other prize was a new ball for the winning team. The New Yorks won the match. Flatbush seems to be out of sorts lately. If the New York boys keep on they will want to tackle the Philadelphians. Pity the Chicago Indians are so far away.

A meeting of the bowling club will be held on the Arlington alleys, St. Mark's place, next Monday night, to elect officers for the season. The scores last night were:

LONG ISLAND, N. Y.

There is many an occasion in American horticulture where the rest of us needs take off our hats to the German American florists, and to our mind no event could be more creditable than the thirteenth annual horticultural exhibition given by the Long Island florists under the auspices of the "Schwabitcher Sangerbund" at Ridgewood Park last week. Every good German hereabouts belongs to some society with the title of Sangerbund, and the German florists of Long Island are affiliated with the Brooklyn bund. This was the twenty-fifth anniversary of their annual outing.

The origin of this society was the failure of the crops in the old country. An exhibition was organized there and the queen was asked to come and distribute the vegetables among the poor people. This custom (though there has been less want) has been kept up by the society every year. An immense monument of vegetables (it must have contained several hundred thousand specimens) was reared in the center of the lawn. Fred Marquardt, of Middle Village, was the architect of this wonderful piece of work, and we are informed it cost $400. About $450 was offered as prizes for flowers, plants and vegetables. The plants and vegetables were exhibited under a large tent 100 feet by 60 feet, and the carpet and flower beds were arranged on the lawn outside. These beds were twenty-five in number and each was to be ten feet in diameter. They were all well done. The plants were generally plunged with their pots. Pity it seemed to us that this display was not made in Buffalo, for no better beds than some of those shown here could be seen in any park in the country.

John Baumann, of Middle Village, was awarded a special prize for bed of Little Giant heliotrope. Every one should know this plant; it is fine. The same exhibitor won 1st on bed of scarlet geranium, variety "John A. Doyle" (which was the best scarlet at the show); 2d, on carpet bed, where their new Alternanthera "Hermendorf" showed up brilliantly; 1st on bed of pink geraniums, with "Beaute Pelegrine"; 1st on bed of crimson geraniums, with "S. A. Nutt," and 2d on bed of scarlet geraniums with "Alphonse Ricard."

Fred Marquardt, of Middle Village, won 1st on carpet bed, 2nd on bed of celosia, which contained some very fine combs, and first on bed of salvia with "Bonfire" (a glorious sight). M. Cassidy & Sons, of Calvary Cemetery, got 1st on bed of coleus, Herman Manner, of Maspeth, 2nd prize for coleus and special on bed of foliage plants. August Schrader, of Newtown, L. I., won a special prize for bed of torenia, and 1st for bed of foliage plants; also a special for bed of seedling fancy coleus. F. Siedentop, Middle Village, was awarded diploma for bed of coleus. William Kalfour, Richmond Hill, a special prize for bed of flowering plants. Specht & Henke, Cypress Hills, 1st for bed of celosias which had many pretty varieties, and 2nd for bed of salvia. A. Miller, of East New York, won first on bed of cannas, which contained about 50 of the best varieties.

Wm. Parson & Son, of Flushing, put up a fine group of conifers which won their 1st prize. C. W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, won several first-class diplomas, one for bed of caladiums with Black Beauty canna in center, and one for bed of begonias in which several of his new varieties showed up to advantage. It occurred to us that nothing more attractive than such class of exhibits could be put up at the several shows throughout the country, and provisions should be made for such.

In the classes for palms and decorative plants exhibitors could take all the space they wanted; some of the groups covered 250 square feet. John Miesem, of Elmhurst, won 1st on group of palms. Chas. Koch, of Flatbush, 2nd, and J. L. Childs won prizes for group of caladiums and crotons.

The show was well patronized. The management of the park gives $2,000. Admission was 25 cents. The show lasted five days. There were several attractions offered. The expense amounted to between $4,000 and $5,000, and the society always comes out well to the good.

PHILADELPHIA.

In Mourning.

The whole country is in mourning. In this city the principal buildings are draped in black, flags are at half-mast and depression pervades the air at the loss of our chief executive. Those of us who were in Buffalo five short weeks ago find it hardest to realize what has happened.

The Market.

Briefly put, choice flowers sell, poor ones don't. All grades of Beauties move well and the best bring $2 per dozen locally; a few very fine ones have brought $3 on shipping orders. Brides, Maids and Meteors are $4 per 100; a very few $5; seconds and thirds are wasted. Choice Kaisersins bring $6 per 100. Carnations are slowly increasing in quantity, though they are not yet plentiful. The best asters bring from $1 to $1.50 per 100 readily, and more could be used; poor grades are hard to sell. Valley moved briskly at $4. Smilax is very scarce at 20 and even 25 cents per string.

Leo Niessen is receiving the first violets of the season, which are good considering the weather, and sell quickly.

There have been very heavy shipments to Washington the early part of the week; bilies of the valley were especially wanted; also Beauties, Meteors, white and purple asters and other choice flowers.

Various Items.

Wm. H. Wyatt, 236 N. Thirteenth street, had a design ordered for the President's funeral in Washington.

Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., has noticed an exceptionally good demand for palms and for Beauties this fall. He is shipping palms this week as far west as Los Angeles, Cal., and lately to Portland, Ore. He was also shipping some Beauties and Meteors to Washington for the President's funeral.

Jennings Bros. have some 30,000 feet of glass devoted to roses at Oney, Pa. Brides, Bridesmaids and Kaisersins are all looking well. The feature of the place is a remodeled range of six houses fitted with their patent iron gutters and posts. These houses contain nineteen solid beds, each about 90x5 feet, the whole containing some 8,000 plants. There being no divisions between the houses, the effect is very light; the outside walks are next the walls, making every plant a center bed plant. In most of the other houses the benches are supported by the Jennings iron frame work.

H. H. Battles has leased the entire building at 112 S. Twelfth street, where the Century Flower Shop has been located for the past two years. A rear room has been fitted up for the convenience of the growers who will there offer their stock.

Samuel S. Pennock has returned from a trip down east. He visited Pierson's place, Cromwell, Conn., and was much pleased with the splendid condition of the whole place. Mr. Pierson believes in sterilizing his soil. A bed is half filled with soil, then 13-inch steam pipes are laid the full length of the bed at proper intervals. These pipes are perforated with 4-inch holes. The remaining half of the soil is thrown in on top; then the steam is turned on and left for twenty-four hours; the pipes are then dug out, and when ~~was~~ enough the bed is leveled and planted.

Leo Niessen is to handle the entire cut of John Burton's new rose houses during the coming season.

Edward Swayne, of Wawaset, Pa., has expressed his willingness to contract with one of our retailers for a regular supply of sweet peas every day in the year.

John C. Gracey, 2028 Columbia avenue, is pushing Cobotium Scheidei, which he considers a very satisfactory house plant.

Henry F. Mitchell is displaying a vase of a new white aster, "Puritan." It is a sport from Simplex, very double and keeps well.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Several heavy rains, accompanied by a marked lowering of the temperature, have played havoc with the supply, which has been cut down probably 40 to 50 per cent. The early part of this week overcasts were in demand and on Monday night we were dangerously near frost. The low temperature has seriously checked the cut under glass in most places and especially in those where fire heat was not employed, and the cold rains put a decided damper on outdoor stock.

At the same time demand has increased strongly and as a result there is a scarcity all along the line. A constant stream of shipping orders has been flowing into this market and there has been difficulty in filling them all. The great demand for funeral flowers at points remote from Washington and Canton indicate that many memorial services will be held on Thursday, at which flowers will be used.

Still, prices have not changed materially. The top price on Brides and Maids is still $4, with a few extra fancy Kaisers bringing as high as $5 and $6. But the demand is so brisk that qualities are not so sharply differentiated and the shortening in supply seems to have cut out the under grade stock rather than the best.

In carnations the range is from $1 to $1.50 and anything good will bring the dollar safely, though we hear of sales of short-stemmed poor grade colored sorts at as low as 10 cents a bunch. White is in the strongest position, though good colored ones go well, too.

Asters show the effects of the favorable weather conditions badly and there are very few coming in that can be called fancy. In fact, a better price than $1 a 100 is rare now, in spite of the strong demand for anything in the way of a flower. It is likely that we shall have no more good local grown asters, though good flowers may yet come from other sections if frost holds off long enough.

Various Items.

Among the large orders received on account of the president's funeral was one from J. M. Casser of Cleveland, to Kennicot Bros. Co., for 17,000 carnations, to be shipped direct to Canton, Ohio.

O. J. Friedman and John C. Schubert had divided between them the order of the State Street Business Men's association for designs aggregating $720. They were sent to Canton in a special car. Joe Bicher accompanied the designs to see that they were properly set up.

It is understood that the wholesalers generally will close at noon this Thursday.

At McKellar & Winterson's it is now: Paint! Paint!! Paint!!!

The George Witbold Company has been doing a very heavy shipping business in palms, ferns, etc., and say that last month broke all previous records in their business experience.

Mr. Arnold Ringler, representing W. W. Barnard & Co., has arrived in New York on his way home from Europe, where he has been for the last three months.

John Mangel has a very striking and appropriate window display this week. The central feature is a portrait of our late president framed in an oval wreath of short cypress leaves with a background of various flowers arranged very tastefully. It is the work of Andrew Miller.

Mr. O. A. C. Oehmler passed through the city last week from Washington en route to Butte, Mont., where he has taken a position with the Butte Floral Company.

Mr. E. S. Thompson of South Haven, Mich., was in the city last week displaying some remarkably fine spikes of gladioli and Michigan grown hyacinth, narcissus and tulip bulbs. The gladioli included a very fine red, an almost pure white, a yellow, several excellent pinks and many of good light shades.

Present weather indications point to an early frost. But signs are of little value and though a frost may come it is equally likely that we may soon be getting out our summer clothes again.

C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, was a visitor on Wednesday of this week.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting last Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock with President Guy in the chair. This being the first meeting of the club since the convention, many interesting talks came up before the meeting opened as to what was seen at the Buffalo position.

It was hoped that Max Herzog would have returned in time to attend this meeting so as to tell us of his travels and what he saw while abroad. We shall hear from him, however, at the next meeting.

Chairman Meinhardt, of the exhibition committee, requested that each member of the club make an effort to bring in at least one special prize for the show, which would be of great help to him and the committee in charge.

Mr. F. C. Weber resigned as chairman of the World's Fair committee, which is now composed of J. J. Beneke, chairman; C. C. Sanders and R. F. Tesson.

At this point President Guy left the chair, which he had so ably filled the past year, and the new president, Fred J. Meinhardt, was installed. All other officers were filled the same way. On retiring Mr. Guy made a few remarks for the good of the club and said he hoped that the members would lend their support to the new officers and help them build up the club and make the meetings interesting.

The sympathy of the club was extended to Mr. John Steidel of Central, Mo., who the day before, lost his residence and its contents by fire.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers and Mr. William Polst made application for membership. Mrs. Ayers is in the retail business on Grand avenue and Mr. Polst is not in the business, only a lover of flowers.

The chairman of the trustees made a call for essays for the coming fall meetings, the list to be ready by next meeting.

Mr. Trillow of Chicago and an old-time member, was a visitor and was called upon for a few remarks. Mr. Trillow responded with a few remarks on bulbs.

The second call was made on the club for 20 per cent of their subscription to the World's Fair, which must be paid at the next meeting of the club in October.

The question box contained quite a lot of interesting questions, which brought out that Frank Fillmore had the finest lot of Flora Hill carnation plants seen in a long time. This was made known by several growers who had visited his place during the day. They also disclosed the facts that E. W. Guy of Belleville, and Charles Connon of Webster Grove, would have a fine lot of Japan-grown longiflorums in bloom ready for Thanksgiving Day trade. Mr. Guy has about 400 and Mr. Connon 800, all in good condition, which were planted on July 3 for an experiment. This brought out a long discussion, which made the meeting quite interesting.

After adjournment the newly elected president took the members to Hotel Moser, where a fine spread was set for all. The health of the new president was drunk and all had a good time.

The Market.

There was a little more life in the cut flower trade the past week and a very gratifying revival is reported by all the store men. Quite a number of orders have been taken for early fall weddings, of which quite a few will take place next month.

The quality of roses that are coming into this city is very good; some fine Beauties are coming in and are sold very cheap; some good, long stuff sold as low as $5 per 100; Brides, Maids and Meteors average from $1 to $4 per 100.

Carnations are improving every day and some very fine stock was seen at the wholesale houses the past week which brought $1.50 per 100. Asters are still very plentiful and the commission men have plenty of them to throw away. A fine lot of Clematis paniculata sold well last week for funeral work. Valley still sells well at $3 and quality good. Tuberoses stalks are now in fine shape with plenty of them on hand at $3 per 100. Smilax is still very scarce; none to be had in this market.

A welcomed rain the past week has done a world of good to outdoor stuff.

Mr. George R. Olney of this city has patented a new device for holding a rose or carnation on the coat which he claims can be made cheap enough to be given away with every rose or carnation sold. Mr. John Steidel of Central, Mo., was visited by fire last Wednesday which destroyed his residence and all of its contents. The worst of it all is that the insurance had expired a few days before and was not renewed. John and his wife have the sympathy of the trade.

a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums for the fall trade.

Mrs. Vesey of Fort Wayne, Ind., is sending a fine lot of roses and carnations to this market which find ready sale at Kuehn's.

Walter Cies of Kokomo, Ind., is sending to Ellis some of his fine Kaisers and Beauties.

Dr. E. Sanders, who is a great lover of fine carnations, has again offered a special price of $25, to be competed for at the chrysanthemum show, for his favorite flower.

George M. Kellogg's stock at Berning's the past week was large and fine, especially the Beauties.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club had out nine members Monday night and rolled five games, quite a few good games being rolled. Kuehn complained of a very sore thumb on his bowling hand and this accounts for his poor showing. Ellson came later and missed the first game; this is quite natural now. John Young could not be present, owing to the death of his mother-in-law. By next Monday all hands will be out, even Chart Sanders has promised to come. The following are the scores made Monday night:

CINCINNATI.

Various Notes.

The fall festival is now on. The flower parade took place today, and, although only a few natural flowers were used in decorating the carriages, still many of them testified to the skill of our store boys as decorators. There were some very beautiful ideas shown and the workmanship was of the best. Of natural flowers asters were most used, and they showed up very well; but the hot sun used up the roses in short order.

Business has been very good as a rule, but prices have been mostly at a standstill. American Beauties have been in best demand, with Meteors a close second. From 50 cents to $2 per dozen is the ruling price of the former and 2 to 5 cents for the latter. Some first-class asters are still coming in from the north and are selling well at from 50 cents to $2 per 100. It is now but a short time till the chrysanthemum makes its appearance and everyone is looking forward to its arrival with a good deal of pleasure.

George Magrie has sold his old place and all of the houses have been torn down. He intends erecting a modern plant on some land he has bought not far from his old establishment. The plot contains about four acres, nicely situated for a florist's business.

John D. Seefrid and Miss Margaret Rhein were married last Thursday.

Mr. John Lodder of Hamilton, Ohio, has torn down a number of his sash houses and is about to erect in their place five modern houses 116x20 feet. This will make nine modern houses in his plant.

J. T. Herdigen of Aurora, Ind., was a caller.

C. J. OIMER.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—It is reported in the daily press that an attempt is to be made by the Federated Trades to organize a gardener's union, and that the organization committee will have the assistance of the State Federation of Labor. Fred Brockhausen is secretary of the latter organization and is the one who first suggested the new union.

FOR SALE.

A fine piece of property for florists' purposes in Baltimore.

I offer for sale a ten acre lot fronting 550 feet on the north side of the New North Broadway Ave., with a frontage of 800 feet on St. George Ave. (50 feet wide), and a 50-foot ave. to the east, giving three fronts, that is especially desirable as a location for a florist. It all has excellent acreage in a 12 room dwelling and No. 1 improvements, all in good repair. The neighborhood is well built up and is only 24 minutes from the city hall, County taxes and city conveniences. Five-cent car fare; car every three minutes; all night cars. Only four squares from the cars.

Price $15,000. Terms easy. Address BALTIMORE, care Florists' Review.

CLOSED AND OPEN SYSTEMS.

I wish to thank Mr. Gibbons for his reply to my inquiry. Was about to write and give further particulars when I received word from the company from whom I purchased the heater that they would refund the money paid for it, which action speaks for itself, so I will not trouble Mr. Gibbons further.

But I would like to know if a closed system is twice as efficient as an open one, as he states on page 251 in the article headed "Small Pipes for Hot Water." If such is a fact I might have gotten along with what I have.

Mass. C. B. Y.

Referring to the communication from C. B. Y., I have carefully re-read the communication written by me and appearing under head of "Small Pipes for Hot Water" on page 251, and do not see where I have stated that a closed system of water circulation is twice as efficient as an open system.

The statement contained in the first paragraph of the communication referred to, that circulation under a pressure system can be effectively maintained through a greater length of small pipe coils than a circulation under the open system, in the particular case referred to, through double the length of coil, is possibly that to which he refers, and on which he has presumably placed an erroneous construction.

The Hail Storm.

In the recent hail storm Mr. R. J. Mendenhall had 25,800 lights of glass smashed. Quite a number of plants were ruined by the falling hail and glass. The hail stones were from the size of a pea up to an inch and an inch and a half in diameter, and they seemed as hard as stones. Some were reported as large as goose eggs, but the hail that did the most damage was nearly round, hard, and about the size of Jackson candy balls, and it fell very thickly, or close together. The next day the hail lay in rows on the north side of brick walls at 10 o'clock. In the open spaces, where plants had been bedded out, one could not tell what had been there.

The storm for cyclone, rather, and only a part of it was near the ground) was from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ miles in width and 28 to 32 miles long. There were seven or eight greenhouse establishments in its track, and all of them suffered more or less.

Mr. Will had just completed a nice large house on Saturday night, and was going to fill it with carnations on Monday. Sunday night the storm came and broke all the glass, not only in that house, but in all the others. He had 25,000 carnations in the field, and none were left fit for planting. He practically lost everything. Other places suffered seriously, but the losses were not so complete as at Mr. Will's. And there were greenhouses to the right and left of the storm that did not have a light broken.

Mr. Mendenhall has more than half of his glass replaced, and if he has four or five more favorable days he will be out of danger. The plants that were injured by the broken glass and hail are recovering.

The loss by destruction of glass in the line of the storm, in dwellings, factories, etc., as well as greenhouses, was enormous. The storm raged terrifically for about 20 minutes, and in about half an hour the moon was visible and the stars were twinkling as if storms were unknown.

FLOODED WITH ORDERS.

For goodness sake take my adv. out of the REVIEW. Am flooded with orders. The balance due me will take up later. Dover, N. H. C. L. HOWE.

TORONTO.A Visit to Mimico.

I would like some other representative than myself to write the beginning of my notes this week. We played cricket and we won. Played at Mimico Asylum grounds, picked teams represented by Mr. G. Manton and Mr. T. Manton. The magnificent work of the team of the former won by piling up a score of 84 runs, against the 76 of the latter. The teams were composed of: 1, Lightfoot; 2, Goodier; 3, Cook; 4, Jennings; 5, Muston; 6, C. Woods; 7, Porter; 8, F. Brown; 9, W. Brown; 10, Sheppard; 11, George Manton, Capt.

SECOND TEAM: 1, Durham; 2, Bannon; 3, Whitaker; 4, Tidy; 5, Jackson; 6, Grice; 7, Twiner; 8, Woods; 9, Ailles; 10, Subton; 11, T. Manton, Capt. Scorer, George Mills.

Taking a stroll about the grounds before the game began we were very pleased to note some of the particularly fine beds of plants and were agreeably surprised to find that they compared more than favorably with anything of their kind seen in Toronto. The outside staff is to be congratulated on their excellent taste in their arrangement of beds, some very striking effects being obtained in the placing, shape and composition of many of them. Among the many (all are really worthy of note) we noticed:

A beautiful bed of Mme. Bruanti, that splendid pink geranium, also one bed of each of S. A. Nutt (red), La Favorite (white), Mme. Thibaut (pink), Salvia "Resplendent" was used in conjunction with the Golden Bedder coleus to good advantage, while some really fine beds of light variegated coleus were edged by dark red coleus (Verschaffelti).

There is to be a commission house in Toronto at last, to be run and managed by James Sinclair. We hope he meets with success, as his position as Dunlop's shipper and his fair dealing while engaged in that capacity is fresh in the minds of all the growers and retailers in this country. I hope to give a little fuller detailed account of his establishment at a later date.

The Market.

The wet weather of the last week has nearly ruined our outside stock and, as the roses and carnations are very poor, we feel the need of cut stuff. Roses range from $1 to $6, while carnations are poor at 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Some splendid dahlias are shown in some of the florists' windows.

A few American Beauties, from Lawrence, of Mimico, have decked the windows of Tidy this week, while Dunlop (whose crop has not as yet shown itself) has had an occasional jar.

Various Notes.

Wm. Jay is building a plant house close to the street in front of his present greenhouses, which will make a decided improvement in his establishment.

Trade has not as yet climbed to its firm legs; we hardly look for a great deal until the mums start, as society does not seem over anxious to begin its season until the cooler evenings are assured.

A few theater parties have helped break the monotony of the centrally located retailers, while the outsiders have, with the exception of a little funeral work, been compelled to sit on their haunches and look in the glass for companionship. C. W.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Trade is very quiet, broken occasionally by funeral and shipping orders. Some days everything saleable is cleaned up, then another quiet spell follows. The only scarce article is carnations; very few are being cut and the demand exceeds the light supply. Asters are plentiful, poor, and move slowly. Sweet peas are over. The weather has been dull and rainy, with a frost in sight.

Henry Smith is building a carnation house, 270x26 feet. With the exception of this house, Henry has all his carnations housed. So has Chadwick, to the tune of 60,000 plants. It is very cool here nights, necessitating steady night firing for roses and tender stuff.

Recent visitors: B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., a representative of Lion & Wertheimer, New York; E. G. Gillet, Cincinnati; E. E. Pieser, Chicago, and L. Collins, Toledo. They all admit that this city should be called "Violetville." G. F. C.

ENGLISH FLOWER SHOWS.

At the recent annual floral and musical fete in Shrewsbury, England, the total gate receipts for the two days amounted to $16,350, as against $16,200 in 1899, which was the previous high water mark.

If American floral exhibitions could enjoy such a paid attendance they could surely be made profitable. But it should not be overlooked that this fete was something more than an exhibition of flowers. In the report, which occupies over eight long columns of the Wellington Journal and Shrewsbury News of August 24 last, we note that though the list of awards filled nearly four columns and two and a half columns are devoted to descriptions of the exhibits, donors of prizes, etc., more than half a column is devoted to descriptions of the dresses worn by the ladies, and over a column to "stage performances," "the horse leaping," "the balloon ascents," "the fireworks," and similar attractions.

BUTTONHOLE BOUQUET HOLDER.

We have received some samples of Olney's buttonhole bouquet holder from the Geo. R. Olney Manufacturing Company, St. Louis, Mo. It is certainly far superior to a pin for holding a boutonniere in place, and if offered at a moderate price there will no doubt be a good demand for them.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—Greene & Underhill have opened a down-town store with new cases, counters, glass refrigerator and complete up-to-date furnishings. Heretofore all their retail business has been done at the greenhouses. They have also added three large new greenhouses to their plant, and will this winter be in better shape than ever to take care of their wholesale plant trade.

MITCHELL, S. D.—The Daily Republican of Aug. 31 prints a good half tone view of the greenhouses and nursery of Mr. E. C. Newbury. There are 10,000 square feet of glass and eight acres of nursery.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Nurserymen Condemn Virginia's Action.

A committee of members of the New York Nurserymen's Association met at the Yates Sept. 11, with C. A. Wieting of the State Fair Commission. The meeting was for the purpose of discussing the action of the Agricultural Department of Virginia in refusing to admit nursery products from this or other states without a certificate from a known entomologist.

The Virginia Board has made its decision under the advice and direction of Prof. Alwood, who is the entomologist of the board, and has taken the action with a view of keeping plants and trees infected with scale or other parasites from the State.

At the meeting it was decided that the action of the board in Virginia was contrary to the interstate commerce laws and that it was unconstitutional. One of the committee when seen last evening said that the New York Association would take exception and would hold Prof. Alwood personally responsible for all shipments interfered with. The committee man said that in all probability a test case would soon be made.

The case will be made upon the ground that while any State has the right to exclude diseased plants or animals on the ground of disease itself, it has no right to interfere with regular trade. All nursery stock of New York State is subjected to the inspection of the State Agricultural Department and is officially perfect when it leaves the State. This, the society will contend, is sufficient to insure its reception in any State unless actual disease or parasites are found.

MILWAUKEE.

Trade conditions are unsteady. A week of continued rain kept buyers from plunging, and as only actual requirements were bought, plenty of stock could be had at low figures. Asters are coming in heavy now, which relieves the shortage of carnations. Good shipping roses are about equal to the demand, with plenty of seconds left for cheap work. Similax is extremely scarce, but plenty of asparagus; but plumosus and Sprengeri are in the market to help out.

Asheville vs. Milwaukee.

Why all this continued argument about defeated Milwaukee? The majority rules, and Asheville was the choice of the majority, and to Asheville we go. Cut Milwaukee out of the argument now; we're not in the running. Our invitation was not backed up by the amber fluid, and the loss of the convention should not be charged to our famous product, as a recent correspondent insinuates. He probably comes from Kansas. C. C. P.

A WIDE CIRCULATION.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The first part of last week we had three good rains and since then business has been better.

We have sown turnips in our carnation patch, and a lot more where we had a garden, and will try to raise two crops on the same ground in one season. Turnips will come in mighty handy this winter in place of potatoes, which are now selling at 80 cents to $1.25 per bushel; small ones selling at 70 cents.

Good roses retail at $1 per dozen, but are scarce. They are doing well, but do not seem to be pushing toward the glass very rapidly. Some varieties have more or less demoralized foliage; leaves spotted, with a scorched appearance, as though held to the fire. Do not know whether it is caused by eel worms or nematodes, or some other sort of "toad." It makes the foliage look bad. Perhaps some rose expert can shed a little light on the matter. Would feel under many obligations if some one suggested a remedy that would remedy.

Field-grown carnations sell at 30 to 35 cents per doz.; those grown under glass a little higher, as they are some larger with little stem rot among carnations so far; no rust to speak of, and plants, as a general thing, look well.

Chrysanthemums are looking well, but they seem to have lost their grip somewhat in this locality; not much demand for them. Think they will eventually peter out entirely, both as plants and cut flowers, except perhaps a few grown for use in the greenhouses. They do not pay for the space they occupy in the houses.

J. H. W.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the "California Rose Company," of this city, with capital stock $15,000. The corporation absorbs the interests of and is successor to the Howland Nursery Company and the California Rose Company. The incorporators are: C. F. Howland, R. H. Wilson, S. M. Wile, O. S. Howland, C. L. Canfield. The corporation starts in with an established business, both wholesale and retail. While the articles of incorporation empower the company to engage in any and all branches of business pertaining to the nursery, florist and seed trade, the entire business is at present field-grown rose bushes and will probably be confined to this for some time to come. The company is at present growing more largely than any concern on the coast, and expects to eventually produce more field-grown rose bushes than any house in the United States. This season their stock consists of about 130 varieties of roses, including the best of both hardy and tender sorts.

SEBALIA, Mo.—At the Missouri State Fair, held here Sept. 9 to 13, first prizes were taken by Gelyen & Son, of this city, for collection of greenhouse plants, collection of Rex begonias, geraniums, palms, ferns, foliage plants, cacti, blooming plants, floral designs, cut roses and hand bouquets.

LYONS, IA.—Mrs. M. E. Eaton has opened a finely fitted up store at the corner of Main and Fourth streets, which will be in charge of Miss Dell Eaton. The greenhouses will be continued as before.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Flowers for the President's Funeral.

Some very handsome and expensive floral designs were sent to the funeral of the late President McKinley. The designs were not as numerous as was expected and the majority of them were made up in Washington. No doubt you will all have read in the daily and weekly papers the glowing descriptions and immensely exaggerated values of the flowers sent. It is amusingly startling to read and listen to these inflated stories. One Broadway florist tried to assure us that he had sent several $100 and $150 wreaths to Washington, whilst we knew it to be a fact that he had had no order at all. Queer, isn't it, what some folks will do to try and make themselves appear big.

We hope those who really had work for this most important event had it photographed. The largest orders seem to have come from foreigners. Wreaths and bunches were the principal forms, and those with cattleyas were naturally the choicest. We had intended going to Washington to write them up for this department, but important matters called us elsewhere.

We are inclined to think that the dealers who have so many metal wreaths and prepared cypress leaves on their shelves lost a big opportunity to dispose of this stock; such things are appropriate for the decorating of buildings.

The most artistic window in New York was that of the Gorhams on Broadway. Folds of black and purple velvet formed a background to a portrait of the dead president; across these were two fine cypress leaves, not tied, but detached and properly placed; the simplicity of the whole was most expressively beautiful. The majority of the decorations seen were spoiled by the too apparent and studied formality.

Here and there a cheaply made wreath of galax leaves or a few painted cypress leaves were seen in prominent dry goods store windows. The money spent on decorating the buildings in New York city would nearly reach the $200,000 mark, about $100 of which was spent among florists. As to the florists themselves, they were not behind in showing respect, but their work was not of their best, and the material mostly used was very cheap.

One prominent window is turned into a ribbon counter, as if the florist's only chance to glorify his art was in the use and display of ribbons. Wreaths of galax and leucothoe leaves are the only designs shown. We have not seen one laurel wreath in connection with the occasion. Florists with the reputation of being artistic and up-to-date should know that the most appropriate design for use would have been a wreath of bay leaves. Pity it seems to us that where we have so many bay trees the opportunity was not taken to show how some could be used. There is a too ready inclination to recommend and use material simply because it is cheap. There are traditions and sentiment, expression and beauty attached to certain flowers and foliage which cannot be blotted out by ignorance, or the craze for cheapness, and on the occasion of national sorrow like the present, florists ought to try and preserve the sentiments which are the great pillars of their business.

Bulbs.

This is the time of the year when immense quantities of bulbs are finding their way to the potting sheds of the country. Dealers inform us that the craze for cheap grade stock is still as poignant as ever. We would like to say is not too good for the American trade. We are not only referring to quality, but to variety also. Give us the best named varieties, never mind the cost.

Chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemums, from present appearances, are going to be late this season. Glory of the Pacific and Merry Monarch are the two most grown for early use; these are well in bud now. The craze for early mums is purely imaginary; retailers are not justified in paying exorbitant prices for early mums, for in most cases they are bought for the window and very seldom can any more be asked for than is paid for them. Growers every year get false values on certain stock, through the foolishness of a few retailers. We advocate a fair price all around. Sensationalism seldom does good; high prices charged early in the season only deters people from buying later, and acts as an all around boomerang.

Nasturtiums and Tritomas.

Nasturtiums are this year being extensively grown by private gardeners.

to those who grow for cut flowers, get some cheap sorts of course, but don't forget in many cases the very best is what you need; spend a little extra for some named varieties of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, etc. Get away from the old rut of common stuff; the people will appreciate and pay for good flowers, and now is the time to select something that will not be the same as the despised glut of the markets. And don't forget, too, that some good Lilium candidum will be wanted next Easter. We hope to see the large growers offer something better in the way of bulb stock; we wish to assure them the retailer is willing to pay for good stock; the very, very best

They inform us that they have become very popular among wealthy people, and that many will be grown under glass for winter use. Very beautiful dainty decorations can be done with nasturtiums, many of the colors being such as appeal to the aesthetic. Arranged in small vases on forest green or Chippendale furniture their effect is very pleasing.

Tritoma Pfitzeri (I am not sure that is right) and T. carolinianum have been very prominently used in New York windows and large decorations this autumn. The first named is probably the best. They are very effective and should be more generally cultivated. They brought $3 per 100 wholesale here.

Autumn Decorations.

Keep your eye open for a few early well colored autumn leaves; you will soon find them in the swamp or along water fronts; they will be a welcome change in your window. Don't forget that a great many people object to the use of autumn foliage for wedding decorations, at least they will not have them in the room where the ceremony is performed. They argue that there is a tinge of sadness about them that is inappropriate to these joyful events; others don't care. Anyhow, be careful in recommending their use. We usually and if poor, out of sight. Keep your flowers in water and away from view until your greening is finished; there is nothing like tidiness. And don't attempt to bully or boss servants; you need their friendship. A "stuck up" florist is a good subject for the comic cartoonist; dignity is a respected virtue.

High colors are becoming more popular both in garden and indoor decoration. If you happen to be doing any decorating where color is desirable, you might use a cluster of Prunus pissardii to good advantage. Don't scatter things. Group them; they are thus more impressive.

with rubbish, just for the sake of having something in them; it is cheaper to have them empty than burn coal and waste time growing stock which cannot be sold. Now is your time to clear out everything that will not pay for the space it occupies.

The retailer who can store plants safely can now pick up many fine bargains at the auction rooms. Small and medium stock can now be got for half the price it will be two months hence. We will write on the plant market next week.

There will be a vast quantity of conifers used in vase and window boxes this fall and winter, yes, far more than in years past. Find out where you can get them at prices and in varieties and sizes most suitable. To nurserymen, let us say put a good stock of conifers in your sheds before the frosts get too hard, and do your best to encourage evergreen winter decorations in the large cities. Last year it was impossible to get any decent plants in New York after hard weather set in, and the prices and material offered were prohibitive. If florists would display a well filled window-box, vase or pot of conifers they would not only help to beautify their places, but would encourage a more general use of them by the public.

One of the most unpleasant features of the present time is the boarded plants. People begrudge paying the price for keeping and clearing their plants all summer. These plants are a nuisance and a drawback to the plant trade and should be well charged for. IVERA.

Broken Column by O. J. Friedman, Chicago, for the President's Funeral.

FUNERAL DESIGNS.

We present herewith engravings from photographs of a number of floral arrangements sent to the funeral of the late President McKinley.

The cross and column by Friedman, Chicago (Joseph Curran, artist), were each over eight feet tall, and the cross contained 3,000 American Beauty roses. It was a block cross and the surface was about a foot on each of the four sides when filled. The column was of white carnations and asters, and was about a foot in diameter when filled. The festoon was of Bridesmaid roses.

The two urns by Schubert & Co., Chicago (Henry Rowe, artist), were filled with American Beauty roses, 200 in each. The body of the urns were each of white asters, but on one of the handles were purple asters and the festoon of lily of the valley, while on the other one handles and festoon were of American Beauties. Both were about eight feet in height. The four designs cost $720.00, and were sent by the Chicago Business Men's Association.

The design by the American Rose Co., Washington, was an open book 6 feet by 4, made of the new Golden Cochet rose and lily of the valley; lying carelessly on one of the pages was a bookmark of purple satin, on which in letters of gold were the martyred president's last words:

"God's Will Be Done."

This book was raised over a plateau 7 by 9 feet, composed of rare ferns, Yellow Cochet and White Golden Gate roses and lily of the valley; and forming a background were three silk flags draped and carried diagonally across the plateau, the whole plateau profusely festooned with a blending of three shades of purple satin ribbon.

use them in the hall and one or two rooms, having nothing but green for the background in the principal room.

A most important thing for all to remember is that when you go to a house to decorate don't be spectacular in your approach. Avoid appearing as if you were going to either move the house or cover everything in it. Have your material and men neat, don't make the principal rooms or the hallway your store-room, but put your stock out of the way, Phrynum variegatum and Black Beauty canna were two very successful plants in the garden this summer; the former may be used in many places indoors.

Plants.

Attend to your forget-me-nots for Christmas and New Years. This is the time of the year when propagators are filling the benches with many old and obsolete varieties of plants that ought to be discarded. Don't fill your houses

Cross by O. J. Friedman, Chicago, for the President's Funeral.

The open book of Golden roses was significant of the life of the president, which was surely an open book of golden pages, each page filled with the record of glorious deeds of patriotism, domestic purity and the truest piety, at the same time the book betokened the craft who laid the offering at his bier.

The four wreaths photographed in the window of W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, were all arranged by that firm. One was ordered by Mrs. Mark Hanna, one by the people of Cuba and the other two by Mrs. Harry Hamlin and Mrs. Wm. Hamlin, of Buffalo.

The wreath of cattleyas and valley, by John Mangel, Chicago (Andrew Miller, artist), was ordered by the Unoin League Club of that city. It was three feet in diameter and contained 40 cattleyas, 275 valley and considerable adiantum. The price was $125.00.

VALUES.

Replying to the inquiry of N. A. N., in my opinion the smilax plants should be valued at 20 cents each, single stem mum plants at 12 cents, roses 75 cents per plant, carnation plants 20 cents each. It is rather a hard nut to crack. St. Joseph, Mo. L. J. STUPPY.

ROSE NOTES.

In this series of papers which I submit to you on rose culture under glass, I intend to address more particularly the rising generation of growers, and in order to make them clear and plain shall use as few technical terms as possible, advocating no theories and giving only those modes of culture which I have used with success, or seen successfully practised by other growers.

One of the most essential things in rose culture is to start right. To have good healthy bushes that will give good flowers during the winter months, care must be taken to plant nothing but the very best stock and that is none too good, and in order to have good stock great care must be exercised in propagating.

Many of the diseases which in after life affect the rose are contracted in the cutting bench, either through lack of knowledge of the requirements of a cutting or through carelessness.

Opinions regarding the best style of a cutting are almost as numerous as growers, some persistently advocating one-eyed cuttings, while others as earnestly advocate two and three eyes.

Some again recommend that cuttings be taken from flower stems, while others are content to use blind wood entirely.

In such varieties as Meteor, Liberty and Beauty, where comes from the bottom are desirable, cuttings may be taken with three eyes, leaving two eyes above the sand and one at the base of the cutting. Many growers have condemned this practice, but as it has worked well with me, I give it for what it is worth, and recommend the young grower to give it a trial.

Such varieties as Bridesmaid and Bride do well with one or two eyes.

After many years experimenting, I do not think it makes much difference whether flowering stems or good strong blind wood be used, the after treatment of the cutting being of more importance. We must also take into consideration the expense attending propagating from flower stems. Few modern growers would care to denude their plants of buds when by reason of dark and short days roses are scarce and command their best price.

But whatever kind of wood is used, it ought to be carefully selected, rejecting all weak and sprawly wood, and taking only that which is in a half ripened condition and growing on the most vigorous and healthy plants, taking special care to pass by all those plants which have foliage the least shade off color.

In making the cuttings use a well sharpened knife. Make a clean, short cut, avoiding a long slicing. It is well to keep the wood immersed in water, and to sprinkle the cutting after it is made and previous to putting it in the sand.

By middle of December see that the cutting bench is in good repair, wash clean and give a coating of hot lime wash; remove all rubbish, as cleanliness is absolutely necessary to health.

Clean sharp river or pit sand, not too fine, is a good propagating medium. Put it on the bench to a depth of five inches, water well, then pound firmly with a brick. With a common butcher knife draw a straight line across the bench at a depth of one and a half inches; do not go deeper, as it is better to have every cutting touch bottom than to hang. Put the cuttings in neatly at from one to two inches apart, according to the size of the cutting (Beauties will require more room), press the sand firmly along the line, then proceed with another parallel to the first at two inches distance, water well and never allow the sand to become dry, as wilting at this stage is ruin. Syringe lightly, so as not to disturb the cutting, as often as necessary.

In shading, a very thin cheese cloth answers the purpose very well. This ought to be arranged in such a way as not to be too near the cutting and be easily removed in cloudy weather or just as soon as the sun ceases to shine on the bench, as cuttings will root much quicker by having all available light, and come out of the sand in much better shape than if grown in the dark. Temperature of the sand ought to be kept as near 60 degrees as possible, with a house temperature of 48 to 50 degrees.

By careful attention to these rules the cutting will be in a fit condition to pot in from twenty-eight to thirty days.

RIBES.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Roses.

We are getting very changeable weather, that is, extremes of temperature in twenty-four hours, which is only seasonable. But this calls for great watchfulness. Perhaps more so than at any time of the year. Still there is hardly any excuse for mildew. There are more ways than one of keeping this scourge away. Flour of sulphur thrown over the foliage is often done but of doubtful utility and looks badly, and the first syringing washes it off and it is anything but a benefit to the soil. It is not the sulphur but the fumes of it that kills the spores of the mildew, and you get little of the fumes by dusting it on the leaves. Sometimes the sulphur is burnt in a hot shovel or other means. This should only be resorted to in extreme cases or when you want to kill a bad attack.

It is possible with vigorous growth and the most skillful management that mildew may never appear. Yet a preventive is much safer and I believe there is nothing so good for the purpose as sulphide of potassium. Dissolve a pound package in water enough to leave it about like thick paint, add an equal quantity of linseed oil, and then with a brush smear a spot here and there on the hot water or steam pipes. The beginner will say "How much?" On a hot water pipe a dab of seven or eight square inches every foot will do. On steam pipes less will do. The linseed oil has rather a disagreeable odor but you can easily put up with that if your roses are clean. This application will last several weeks, and when you put on a new dose scrape off the old or it will prevent evaporation from the pipes.

Greenfly is not at all excusable where steam is used because you can evaporate the liquid on the tops of the steam pipes or by filling a vessel with tobacco stems and putting a jet of steam into it produce a vapor impregnated with nicotine that will effectually stop all aphids. Some growers have an objection to this because they say the moisture caused by the vapor is inclined to induce a weak growth. As there are some splendid growers who don't make this objection there cannot be much reason for it. Where hot water is the method of heating much more trouble follows in keeping down greenfly. In spite of what some growers say the tobacco stems that I have ever procured if burnt in the usual way will curl up the petals and greatly disfigure the buds that are about opening. Especially is this true of the Bridesmaid type.

Fumigation is all right now, but when you are cutting fine roses it won't do. This is a good time to thoroughly clean them of all aphids. We have got along very nicely with the rose leaf extract of tobacco, diluted to one in ten of water. Put the mixture in some tin cake dishes or have dishes made three inches deep, six inches broad and one foot long. Put an inch of the tobacco water in the dishes and then by having some pieces of old railroad iron an inch or so smaller than the dish and heated very hot but not red hot you can drop them in and will get a vapor that will settle the fly. It is rather a fussy method, but everything worth having requires work. We found that a house 20 feet wide needed a pan every 30 feet. A coal scuttle and a pair of steam-fitters' tongs will handle the iron all right, and the fire to heat the iron you always have with you from now on. If you are once entirely clear of aphids fresh tobacco stems tied in bunches and laid on the surface of the bench, suspended in chicken netting beneath the edge of the bench, or strewed on the paths if appearance is not of any consequence, will do much good. So much so that if you start clean and renew the stems faithfully every week you will be little likely to see any aphids.

The other enemy of the roses is red spider. It is certainly less excusable to see red spider in a rose house in fall or winter than either greenfly or mildew, because pure clean water properly applied will most assuredly keep them away. Even if you syringe but three times a week and do it properly, it would effectually prevent the spider making any headway, and it is seldom you cannot syringe once a day. I am aware that all this is an old story to a good rose grower. But it is surprising how often I see men who are attempting to grow roses and do not yet know how to handle the hose. Remember, the spider is on the under side of the leaf, and there is where the water wants to reach.

While on roses let me tell you that there is no better time to propagate the Bourbon and hybrid tea, or any of the teas that are good summer bloomers. I have had occasion to speak once or twice this summer of the splendid qualities of the pink and white "Cochet;" and don't forget "Carnot," it is also a splendid summer rose, but Cochet for the florist's use is about unequalled. It is true we have Kaiserin Augusta for a fine white rose in the summer months, but it has to be grown under glass. Black spot in most localities hurts it badly out of doors.

There is a great demand for summer blooming roses every spring among our patrons, and my experience is that it is a most difficult article to procure. Plants that were planted out in the spring and lifted this fall and wintered in a cold-frame or cold-house, would be ideal for the purpose, but they would be costly from the labor that has been expended on them, so cuttings put in now will make very acceptable plants by next May and can be wintered in a low temperature; in fact, if absolutely resting during December, January and February, so much the better.

Without going into the quality or condition of the cutting, which has been pretty well thrashed out, I would merely say that any piece of wood, whether so-called blind or that bearing a flower, will do if it is of that age or ripeness that is found when the flower is about open. As you have plenty of material to cut from make the cutting with three eyes and put them in the ordinary cutting bench. I would just as soon put them on a side bench in a carnation house, or any house, in a few inches of sand without the slightest bottom heat. They will take a few days longer to root but are none the worse for that.

When first potted off a genial, warm temperature is needed, till they make roots in the pots; after that they will do in a night temperature of 40 degrees. In March shift into 3½ or 4-inch, and by planting out time you will have a young plant that will be most satisfactory for your customer or yourself.

If you wish to replant your bed of Kaiserins next March for summer blooming these plants propagated now and wintered cool are the very stuff you want.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA.

A subscriber asks: "What is the best thing to do with Hydrangea Otaksa to have them flower for Easter? They have been planted out in the field and are there now."

They must be good, large plants, because he says they did not flower last year. The subscriber lives in Germantown, Philadelphia, where it is likely they do not get a frost that would in the slightest hurt the hydrangeas before November 1st. I would say, leave them out in the ground until we have had one or two degrees of frost, which will ripen the wood. Then lift them, put them in a strong, well enriched soil, and still leave them out of doors in the pots as long as the weather is not too severe. They are better out of doors than under the greenhouse bench, and if frost comes gradually two or three degrees will not hurt them.

By the 1st of December they can be got on to the benches. For the first month give them about 50 degrees, gradually increasing the temperature until Easter day. The latter month they may need a temperature of 65 at night. They want a perfectly light house. Unnecessary to say that no pruning must be done or you will get no flowers. Pot firmly. Hydrangeas are such gross feeders and fill the pot with roots so densely that the last month some weak liquid manure twice a week will be found to be of great benefit.

VERBENAS.

Growing in Winter.

Although the verbena is one of the easiest of plants to root and grow in spring and summer, yet there are frequently failures in handling it through the winter months, where it is desired to have a set of the improved named varieties to meet a special class of trade, and what is wanted cannot be had in seedlings.

Fall cuttings will not get rusty and black spotted if a few simple rules are adhered to during winter. They should not be starved, and do finely planted out about six inches apart in good rich soil, or trayed up and placed on shelves where they can droop over. The first early cuttings should be treated the same way, unless you have a house which does not go above 40 degrees at night, and they may then go into two-inch pots. Feed with manure water, if any signs of weakness are noted, sulphur plenty for mildew and at all times give plenty of ventilation.

Your early plants will make fine three-inch plants for vases and boxes if placed along the edge of the bench. I tried some six and seven-inch pans for Easter. They were gorgeous and brought $1 each.

THE ASTER BUG.

If the Lebanon Greenhouse people have reference to the black bug which attacks our asters, I can tell them how to get rid of them. Four years ago I was visited by thousands of these bugs and tried all sorts of methods and ways to get rid of them. I used Paris green as I would use it on potatoes and found that it only killed a few. Finally I tried Paris green in a Seggato gun (this is a dry powder gun), and dusted the plants very lightly in the evening when the dew was collecting; the next morning the bugs were all on the ground and apparently dead, but as the sun got warmer they were all back on the plants, and I repeated the dose of Paris green at once. This time it killed them.

I have found this an absolute remedy for these pests; that is, repeat the dose the next day after the first application. I have so far reduced the number of aster bugs here that this year there were very few.

CARNATION NOTES.

We have been having fine growing weather lately for carnations, and the plants are rapidly rounding into good shape for the work that is before them. Most all the varieties are throwing up flowering shoots and some of the earlier ones are loaded with buds and blooms. The mercury dropped below the freezing point on two mornings of the past week, but no fire was needed to keep the house up to 45 degrees. As long as the days remain warm and bright it will not be necessary to start the fires unless the temperature outside drops considerably below freezing. During the day the sun warms up the wood plenty of air during these cool nights of September and early October as long as no rainy spell sets in. In case a cold rain sets in, such as we are liable to have in the fall, you must start the fires and run one pipe in each house to help keep the air dry, and a little sulphur sprinkled here and there on the pipe will help to purify the air, but do not make it strong enough to take the color out of the blooms. If the temperature runs up you must open the ventilators, and, in fact, you should have them up an inch or two on all possible occasions to keep the air fresh. The plants will bear both a higher or a lower temperature than the regular winter temperature if the ventilators are kept open, and in fact they are much better off than they are if the ventilators are kept closed and the temperature kept at just a certain point while they are making their fall growth. Later on when the blooms are developing you must keep them more regular to keep the calyxes from splitting.

But on whatever supports are needed to keep the growth upright and the ing now, and it should be put on while the weather is still bright and the plants will commence to feed on it while the growth is strong and rapid. Be sure the manure is well rotted, and if at all possible use cow manure and put it on about one inch thick. If you have only green cow manure mix it with soil half and half, and let it lay a few days, when it can be used with safety. Give a good watering after it is put on and then examine carefully each time you water thereafter.

There is another thing you should attend to before wet weather sets in unless you have already done so, and that is to provide for next year's supply of soil. If you can get some good sod from an old pasture with about three inches of soil to it you can pile it up with one-sixth of manure added to it and let it rot over winter, when it should be turned over. Some of us find it quite difficult to get good sod anywhere near the city and to haul it from way out in the country makes it too expensive, so we must find some other way of getting good soil to plant in. Take a strip of good soil and after manuring it well plow it under and sow it down in rye, and in the spring when the rye is about a foot high take the soil about six inches deep with the rye and all and stack it up to rot just as you would sod, mixing in the same proportion of manure. By keeping the soil worked up well you can make a comparatively small piece of ground supply you with all the soil you need, and you will have the advantage of knowing just what needs to be added to grow good stuff after a season or two. A. F. J. Baur.

GLADIOLUS THE BRIDE.

Can gladiolus The Bride be successfully forced each successive year or should they be rested every other year?

I had a batch of them and planted some among carnations inside and some in the field. The ones among the carnations forced finely, but those planted in the field never came up. Can some one suggest the cause? S. S. P.

In answer to S. S. P. would say that he should by no means try to force Gladiolus The Bride two successive years. Perhaps he does not realize that it is not the same even he was forcing, but one that has been produced while the other bulb was flowering, and therefore it has not been produced under natural and proper conditions. Buy them fresh every year if forcing is proposed. Grown out of doors those produced in the field are all right.

If S. S. P. has been uniformly successful in forcing this beautiful little gladiolus he is fortunate. Some years ago I planted them in flats, put them in a cold frame and later brought them in as you would tulips, but got no flowers, or very few. I tried them afterwards in some carnation benches, not amongst the carnations, but along the edge. That method was fairly successful.

I believe the best way is to give them a light, sunny bench. Plant about five inches apart between rows and two or three inches between plants, but not with anything else. They deserve and want the full light and sun. At starting a temperature of 50 is all right, but later they will stand 60 or even 65 degrees.

and the soil, which in turn keep the house warm over night, but do not under any circumstances close up the ventilators to get out of firing, as the atmosphere will become stuffy and foul over night if there is nothing to keep it moving. A good way to start disease, too.

What your plants want now is to thoroughly ripen the growth, and there is nothing that will do it better than stems straight. Such varieties as White Cloud and a few others will lay over on the bench and grow crooked as soon as they get a little heavy on top, and need to be looked after closely right along. You know this as well as I do, but I just want to remind you so you do not put it off until some day when the weather is too bad to work outside.

All those benches that were planted in August or earlier will stand a mulch-

Open Book by American Rose Co., Washington, for the President's Funeral.

WASHINGTON.

The President's Funeral.

The readers of the REVIEW have no doubt read in the daily papers full descriptions of the funeral of the late president. When brought to this city his mortal remains were placed in the beautiful east room of the White House, and there under the soft radiance of the crystal chandeliers he lay cold and rigid in the narrow embrace of a leaden casket. It was in this room that with courtesy and dignity and with cordial grasp of the hand he had welcomed the people who loved him so well, but now the hands lay across his quiet breast, the eyelids were closed upon the sightless eyes and from his pallid countenance the gentle, kindly smile had departed forever. To one who had frequently seen the dead president in life and who admired him for his democratic ways and kindly heart as well as for his abilities as a statesman, it was an affecting sight.

But it is of the floral tributes that your readers wish to know. The most elaborate design made by the American Rose Company was a large book, of which a photograph and description have been sent you. I shall not attempt to give complete lists of the various arrangements, as it would fill an issue of the REVIEW.

At J. H. Small & Sons the largest and most elaborate design I noticed was a 12-foot standing wreath of valley and orchids on a base of long-stemmed American Beauties, tied with immense streamers of purple ribbon. In this piece thousands of valleys were used as well as orchids.

A large 6-foot wreath of valley and orchids with sago palm leaves had a silver plate in the center bearing the name "Argentine Republic". It was very rich. The most attractive wreath of all was chiefly of cattleyas and natural palm leaves, with a plant of Cocos Weddelliana in the base, and large streamers of purple ribbon tied in a bow. This was ordered by the municipal government of Havana. A large 7-foot shield was made solidly of Kaiserins and Beauties bearing the emblem of the Philippines; and was very beautiful and costly. It was from the Eighth Army Corps, now in the Philippines.

At Small's I also saw a large number of other wreaths, mainly of roses, orchids and valley. Among these were tributes from Mrs. Garrett A. Hobart, Mrs. James A. Garfield, the governor and president of Costa Rica, Secretary Gage, Mrs. Hitt, Guatemala legation, Bureau of American Republics, Mrs. J. Addison Porter, Secretary Hay, City of Vicksburg, State of Iowa, Loyal Legion.

At the store of A. Gude & Bro. they were also crowded with work. I noticed a 6-foot wreath of orchids and valley, an 8-foot cross and crown, many large wreaths of valley and Beauties, a 10-foot Grand Army emblem, an 8-foot standing cross of red and many others.

At Z. D. Blackistone's I noticed a 6-foot wreath of valley, orchids and Beauties with the card of the Japanese legation attached; also a large cluster of Liberty roses on sago palms, a 6-foot standing wreath of valley with base of Beauties, draped with black mousseline de soie, which was very effective, a 10-foot standing cross of Liberty and Kaiserin roses.

I called on J. R. Freeman and found him at work on a huge wreath, with hosts of other orders to take care of.

Local florists seem to all have had a lot of work, but the orders would have been more numerous had it not been that so many society people have not yet returned to the city.

Various Notes.

Since the funeral of the president all kinds of flowers have been short in supply. Fine stock cannot be had at any price. Maids and Brides go at $4.00 to $6.00, La France and Meteor at $6.00, Beauties at $25.00 to $50.00, carnations at $2.00. Outdoor stock sells well at good prices.

The President's Funeral.

The floral tributes at the funeral of the late President McKinley, held here last Thursday, were almost innumerable. A local paper gives what purports to be a practically complete list with the exception of those that came on the funeral train from Washington and from which the cards had been removed.

This list includes 102 wreaths, 25 bunches, 13 panels, 19 boxes of flowers, 13 flags, 10 pillows, 6 shields, 5 broken columns, 5 crosses, 5 urns, 3 sheaves, 3 gates ajar, 2 baskets, 2 cross and crowns, 2 anchors, 2 vases, 1 scroll, 1 crescent, 1 book.

The vault in which the mortal remains of the late president were placed is in a depression in a hillside and the floral tributes were arranged on the adjoining slopes, making them hills of flowers. Several wreaths were hung upon the front of the vault, but no flowers were taken inside. There were many representatives of florists in the large cities present to see that their designs were properly cared for and put in position.

The decorations at the church were arranged by Charles Lindacher, the florist of this city, and were very handsome.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

We are gradually getting into better form, largely, perhaps, because rains have damaged the aster output and slightly affected the indoor crops. There is still a large amount coming into the city, however, and an increase in the demand is generally conceded. Good pinks come nearer to being scarce than any other seasonable flower, but the demand is fairly well supplied and prices are low enough on everything yet.

Naturally and rightfully the sad turn in national affairs will derange things a few days longer. Some few designs were sent to Buffalo and the generous drapings of the city utilized a certain line of floral supplies to quite an extent. M. B. Bunker assisted much in the tasteful appearance of many windows by supplying pictures of our lamented president very neatly decorated.

The printed rule hung in the elevated cars and prohibiting spitting in or from the cars or platforms at the stations punishment to the same indecent practice in their floral parlors the results of their late auction sale would surely resemble the historical three dimes in comparison with the fund so produced. If a man wants to spit on the floor anywhere he cannot find fault if he is called upon to cough up a dime first.

It was learned with great regret that John J. Forbes' horse ran away a few days since, throwing him from the carriage, breaking his leg and badly bruising him. No florist has more sincere friends among his own craft than this same John J. Forbes, with his big body, big heart, big purse and big capacities, and we all hope for a speedy recovery.

The finishing touches to the Horticultural Hall drag rather slowly, but at a meeting a day or two since the building was formally accepted although yet unfinished. It is an open secret that the society fears a mistake was made in locating their new building so far from the business part of the city, even their grand opening failing to draw a satisfactory attendance. It was hoped the location and the grandeur of the projected building would awaken an interest on the part of the Back Bay community, but this hope is not yet fulfilled. Luckily nothing can derange their financial stability.

The E. M. Woods Co. is pushing its prestige as the leading rose growing concern of New England by starting upon the erection of an addition to their establishment, measuring 50x800 feet. Make quite a place all by itself to some people, wouldn't it?

Competition is sharp just now to see who will catch the first frost. Those residing on high land feel handicapped in this race, but that will not prevent their elevation from affecting their prices whenever the lowlanders sell out their outdoor crop to Jack Frost, the unequaled window decorator.

The Market.

The cut flower market, which was greatly depressed by the cessation of business last week, has improved this week. Flowers are of better quality and are more in demand. Choice Beauties bring $2.00 and $2.50 per dozen locally, and occasionally $3.00 on shipping orders, when especially fine. The price of tea roses is unchanged, but the quality is advancing. Carnations are improving and sell well; $1.50 per 100 is obtained for everything worth having and $2.00 for selected. George M. Moss is handling some fine Flora Hill which bring the latter figure. Asters are getting decidedly rusty; not so many good flowers seen. Dahlias are coming in in larger quantities; some of them are very fine; $1.00 to $2.00 per 100 is the price, a few fancy bringing $3.00. Violets continue to improve. Leo Niessen is receiving more than last week. Smilax is still scarce, Asparagus plumosus being the principal green in the market.

Various Items.

Carnations have not done well in the field this summer, many of them being so small that the growers have to bunch several together in planting.

has been to be enforced, and of course the first man fined therefor is a florist, whose soul naturally Burns at the indignity. Is the fact that he was fined $20, while about forty others are let off on a $5 basis, a proof that florists are doomed to greater hardships than others or simply that they are known to be financially able to stand heavier fines than others? If the managers of the Park street market should apply a like tion to this rule, his plants, which are always fine, being fully up to standard. C. F. Knorr, of Lawndale, is bringing in some of his special brand of Brides and Maids, which have achieved an enviable reputation in the past.

Myers & Deserable, Glenside have a splendid lot of small ferns in 3-inch pots which are in good demand. The carnations at their Mt. Airy place are fully up to standard this season.

Diller, Caskey & Co., 6th and Berks streets, have succeeded Jennings Bros. in the manufacturing of iron greenhouse material. This will enable the Olney firm to devote their undivided attention to rose growing.

Edward Reid has returned from Dakota.

The Beauty growers who brought in crops during the past summer obtained very satisfactory prices. Chas. W. Cox, 2nd and Bristol streets, is more than satisfied with the results of his early planted house.

A local grower bought 2,500 asters, described as Scamp's, from an out-of-town firm. The asters were given good care but produced small flowers, evidently of an inferior strain. Inquiry has produced no response from the seller. To us this appears an imposition and should not be tolerated for a moment.

M. Rice & Co. have a very interesting collection of vases of iridescent glass in curious shapes and with more curious designs upon them. These are intended for table decoration. They are beautiful and quite a novelty in a florist's supply house. This firm reports an encouraging demand for improved crepe paper, which is most effective for plant decoration.

Joseph Heacock's place at Wynote will be the Mecca for Beauty growers this fall, his plants being exceptionally well done.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

President Herrington has announced committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports on dates as follows: Oct. 5, 12, 19, 26, Nov. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Boston, Mass.—A. H. Fewkes, chairman, Horticultural Hall, Tremont street; E. A. Wood, J. H. Wheeler.

New York, N. Y.—E. Dailedonze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Co., 26th street and 6th avenue; James W. Withers, C. Albert Small.

BUFFALO.

Frost and Other Things.

We are more fortunate than many localities near us, for we have escaped frost. Flowers are in abundance. Roses and carnations from under glass are coming in. Ethel Crocker, whatever its faults, is worth growing for a fall crop, for at this time of year there is no variety of its color that will give you the sibe of flower and length of stem. In localities where no serious frost appears before November 1 a whole lot of money could be picked off them.

Fort Erie crews closed on Thursday last after a steady run of three months. This is not a floricultural item, only several Main street florists will now be seen more steadily behind their counters.

During carnival week at the Pan-American there is to be a flower parade, when several hundred automobiles and more antiquated vehicles will be in line. Look out, brother florist, the demand for flowers must be great. It occurs Thursday, October 3.

Tuesday, the 1st, there will be a baby show. I hear that W. A. Adams, J. H. Rebstock, S. A. Anderson, Alex. Scott of Corfu and W. Belsey have entered their latest product. Size will score 50 points, beauty 49, and parentage 1 point. So any old father will do.

Pan-American.

The grounds are looking as good as ever, excepting what a severe blow did to the taller growing plants. At last the wonderful display of gladiolus which Messrs. H. H. Groff, of Simcoe, Ont., and his colleague, Arthur Cowee, of Berlin, N. Y., have kept up for over two months, is at an end. About a quarter of a million spikes have been staged, and in variety and beauty of flowers it is quite safe to say that it surpassed anything ever before seen in the gladiolus line. Mr. John Fay Kennell, of Rochester, keeps up his splendid exhibit of the variety "1900."

The dahlias exhibit opened with several fine tables of bloom. The largest exhibit came with the owner, H. F. Burt, of Taunton, Mass. He staged some splendid flowers in many classes. The next largest exhibit was from James Vick's Sons, of Rochester, who entered in ten classes. W. P. Lothrop, of East Bridgewater, Mass., entered in four classes and sent very fine flowers. Of all the flowers the cactus section, exhibited by Mr. Burt, attracted the most attention. They are truly beautiful flowers. If they can be grown with any stem they surpass for decorative use by a long way the more stiff and formal show varieties.

Though not floriculture, it is worth mentioning just now, that the display of fruit in the Horticultural Hall is well worth a long journey to see. It is not only a great display of all our temperate zone fruits but you can see the products of Florida, the West Indies, Mexico and our Pacific slope. From now till the close of the fair will be the greatest show of fruit. W. S.

NEW YORK.

This is a very busy week for almost every one connected with the trade here. Our auctioneers will be too busy talking to do anything else this week, for there are no less than seven plant auctions this week. Only the few know why things are so hunched. It seems to the uninitiated rather a mistake. The buyers haven't time to calculate. Yesterday was Dreyer's annual sale at Woodside. The affair was a good success. Some of the plants, notably tall kentias, brought more than could be got at private sale. Wipperman, of Brooklyn, was a large buyer of ferns; he got 2,000 at 2½ cents. Schmutz went for Araucaria excelsa at big prices, and Mike Laylor, the wit of the gathering, plunged on small areas. Alf Zeller had his eye on dracænas and rhaps, and there were one or two hotel men there who got their plants for less than they would have to pay the retailer. Auctions in this sense are a drawback to the business, but I suppose this is a free country and there is no trust on poor plants. We have a three-day flower show which opens to-day at the Berkeley Lyceum. It will be principally of dahlias and well let them alone till next issue.

Business is picking up on all sides, though many seem reluctant to admit it. Dutch bulbs are good and Japan longiflorums came in last week. If you happen to go on any of the boats plying round New York you are apt to be blocked by cases of bulbs going from those who have the good sense to advertise in this paper. There promises to be plenty of bulbous flowers this winter.

Cut flowers are daily getting better and prices are, according to the demand, raising little by little. Violets have appeared. Some we saw from Stanton Rockefeller, of Rhinebeck, at Thomas Young, Jr.'s, were exceptionally sweet and fairly good for the time of the year. This time last year some good mums were seen on Broadway; so far there is no indication of any coming to the market, in fact they seem all far behind time.

The general plant trade is good, very good considering of course there is no one in town yet, but the store men must have their stock and in this sense we mean business is good from the growers' point.

There is nothing specially exciting in florists' circles. All is preparation for the great show in Madison Square Garden next week. Wm. Plumb has been appointed manager, and that ought to please quite a crowd, but the club will have to give the public something far above the ordinary American flower show to make things pay this time of the year.

The latest we have to write about is the possible formation of two more bowling clubs in this city. Last night a few of the boys from the wholesale district got together on the alleys and decided to organize. They will issue a challenge to the boys in the retail stores next week. Now some persons may commence to think that there is some measure of opposition in this matter; let us assure all that there is nothing of the kind contemplated. There is a vast army of young men in this town who do not now belong to any florists' club or society. The bosses are not wanted in this party; it is thought that the employees ought to have some fun to themselves. We know this paper will always be at the service of everything that will elevate man or master; both are alike to us. But as to the scores:

Wm. Sampson	128	140	150
H. C. Riedel	130	125	136

A. Hunt	140	135	125
A. Riedlinger	132	144	125

The New York Florists' Bowling Club held their annual meeting on the Arlington alleys last night. There is a new infusion of life in this club since it won something at Buffalo and there promises to be a team here able to meet any in the country. At last night's meeting Wm. Siebrecht was elected president, Theo. J. Lang captain, Fred Lentz secretary, Alex Burns treasurer. Lentz broke the record among the florists last night. He averaged 201 in the four games. The scores were:

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade remains stationary. We are not receiving the large shipments of roses each morning that we were a week ago, owing to a few days of very cool weather, though enough are still coming in to supply the demand. Choice stock has a good demand and will have from now on. The wholesale men claim that the shipping trade is improving greatly. A great deal of the rose stock is still small, showing that it has been cut from young plants. Some extra fine Brides and Maids were seen the past week, which brought as high as $4 per 100; Motors and Perles the same price. As the bulk of the stock is small, the average price is about $2 per 100. Beauties have been somewhat scarce of late, that is, fancy stock; plenty of shorts in the market that sell from $2 to $5 per 100; fancies as high as $1.50 to $2 per dozen.

Carnations seem to come in a great deal better and each week sees improvement. The bulk are sold at $1; some fancy stock as high as $2 per 100. Flora Hill and Triumph are the best in the market at present. Asters are all cut out now and only a few come in, which sell very slowly. Some fine valley sold well the past week at $3 and $4; this flower always sells well when at its best. Smilax is again in the market, but small; this seems to sell well at $12.50. All other green has a good demand.

Notes.

Lloyd Vaughan, the popular salesman, representing E. H. Hunt, Chicago, spent a week with us. He is doing more business than ever.

Last week Fred C. Weber had to undergo a very painful operation on his shoulder and is now doing nicely, although he will not be able to bowh with us for about three weeks.

The two daughters of our friend J. Austin Shaw were in town the past week with "The Burgomaster" company at the Century theater. They are very clever girls and made quite an impression on several of the florists who went to see them.

C. Young & Sons Co. are now sending out their fall catalogue, which is quite attractive. They are very busy just now filling bulb orders for the fall trade.

Gus Eggeing, on Grand avenue, reports that he will have a fine lot of cut chrysanthemums this fall, which he expects to exhibit at the fall show. So look out for him.

Mrs. and Mrs. Ed. Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Co., returned from their northern trip two weeks ago. They report that trade has been very good all summer. They will again have charge of the decorations for the great Velled Prophets' ball. It will be decided in a few days whether the ball will be held in the Merchants' Exchange hall or the Coliseum (Exposition building).

George Waldhart's place on Grand avenue looks well; it's filled with the choicest plants of all kinds.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers and Mary Ostertag, the other Grand avenue florists, have their places also looking snow white with fresh paint and well filled with fine palms and plants of all kinds. The Grand avenue folks are ready for a good winter's business.

Show Matters.

Chrysanthemum show matters are progressing very satisfactorily, from the reports of the different members of the committee. They expect to meet each week from now on to work on the prize list, which they expect to have out by the end of October. The show will be as large as ever and, as the location is better, should make some money. The show will last three days, November 13, 14 and 15. Fred Meinhardt is president and chairman this year; Emil Schray, secretary; and C. C. Sanders will again look after the financial part. The other members of the committee are: George Windler, Frank M. Ellis and R. J. Mohr. The above are all hard working members and the club can safely look forward to a good and successful show.

Variou Items.

Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Carr have opened a floral department in the Lindell Hotel drug store, corner 6th and Washington avenues. Mrs. Carr was formerly with Alex. Siegel at the opposite corner.

Mr. J. T. Williamson, of Memphis, Tenn., was a visitor the past week. Mr. Williamson was at one time one of the largest shippers to St. Louis.

Bowling.

The Florists' Bowling Club, which joined hands with the St. Louis Tenpin League, is now composed of the following members: J. J. Beneke, captain; A. Y. Ellison, representative to league meetings; C. A. Kuehn, John Sturtz, Robert F. Tesson, John W. Kunz and William Adels. The season will open October 7 and twelve clubs will compose the league. The boys are entered under the name of "The Florists" and expect to make a good showing, as they are considered as strong as any of the other clubs which have entered. We are averaged at 811 in three games for five men. The Review will keep our eastern brothers posted as to our standing during the bowling season.

The league team was out in full last night and rolled six fair practice games. John Sturtz was our high man with 174 average, Kuehn second, Ellison third. The scores were as follows:

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Nothing could be more satisfactory than the weather we are having at present. Cool nights and moderately warm sunny days are the rule, and consequently all kinds of stock is rounding nicely into shape. During the past week there was a very slight frost in some localities, but not enough to do any visible damage. Business has taken a decided boom, and the commission houses are cleaned up every day by noon. There is a pretty good supply of stock coming in also. Business is averaging better than for the same time last year. Asters comprise the largest supply of flowers; they come from the north, are of very good quality and sell for from $1.00 to $2.00 per 100. Roses are coming better than last week, with prices about the same. Beauties are advancing slightly. All varieties are held stiff at quoted prices. Carnations are still very scarce. There seems to be no increase and no chance for an increase in the supply for some time to come. The price has not changed since last week.

The Fall Festival.

The fall festival, which is now running in full force, has perhaps helped to give our business a boost, more than was anticipated. The parade on Friday used a great many flowers. The florists were represented by a float, which did them a great deal of good and was much talked about. The flowers used in its construction were mostly asters. Large and small palms and wild smilax were used with great taste. The whole was contrived to represent a queen seated upon a throne with flower girls standing and reclining at her feet (of course these were the real article and not made of flowers). On each side of the throne were large horns from which bouquets of flowers were falling. In front was a fountain of running water banked with palms. The whole was covered with arches made of asters. The effect was beautiful and it was given a great reception along the entire line of march.

Friday was the day for the floral exhibit at the Fall Festival. Two prizes were offered—one for the best designs, five in number; this was divided into three prizes, 1st, 2d and 3d. And one for best single design. There were but two entries, these being made by Hardesty & Co. and George & Allan. Hardesty & Co. secured first prize for both classes. Their designs were: A large shell, made of pink and white balsams and rose geranium leaves, a center table decoration of Meteors, a swan boat on mirror, an eagle and a crown. In the construction of these designs they used the best flowers to be had and the workmanship was of the highest. For a single design they secured first prize with a large urn. This was a model of its kind as to shape and flowers used, but was perhaps a trifle too conventional.

George & Allan secured second. They exhibited a large horseshoe, a cross, a harp, wreath on easel and an anchor and capstan. The latter was by far the best design in the lot, it being extra well done. For best single design they exhibited an urn also; this was more graceful but hardly up to the standard of Hardesty & Co.

The Roschank Co. were represented by a very nice display of ferns, palms and orchids.

On Thursday, September 26, there will be another competition. This time the designs will be entirely lodge emblems. The prospects are that this will call out some fine examples of florists' work.

The judges for the past exhibit were J. Baer, B. P. Critchell and R. A. Kelly.

A Floral Urn.

But one floral piece was sent from this city to the funeral of our honored president. It was a large urn over six feet high, made by Julius Baer and sent by the Traveling Salesmen's Club. It was one of the most beautiful designs ever turned out by Mr. Baer. In its construction he used asters for ground work, with Meteors, Beauties, valley, Brides, in crosses and orchids. In the top two dozen long stemmed Beauties were placed. The piece was given a place of honor at the left of the vault at the funeral.

For the first time in eighteen years the statue of Garfield at Race and Eighth streets was decorated in honor of the martyred president. A very large wreath made of oak leaves was hung at the foot of the statue. It was designed by Miss Bessie Critchell and was an excellent example of this young lady's artistic taste.

Notes.

Wm. Murphy has just returned from Snow Island, where he has been to get rid of hay fever. He comes well stocked with fish stories, and, being a wise one, he has photographs to prove what he says. It might be well for some others in the craft to follow his example.

Charlie Jones has bought the store of J. W. Rodgers on East 4th street, and with Miss Kirk in charge is doing a fine business. This is a good stand and we wish Charlie great success.

Mr. Frank McGregor, of McGregor Bros., Springfield, Ohio, was a caller.
C. J. OLMER.

DAVENPORT AND ROCK ISLAND.

There is quite a bit of greenhouse building going on in the three cities of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline.

In the Davenport city park two nice houses 20x100 are being built, using the Garland iron gutters. Ewald Bros. are building two carnation houses, each 20x100, and Otto Klingbeil is putting up a violet house 12x100.

In Rock Island John Stapp has built three fine houses 24x100 for carnations, using the Garland iron gutters. A new firm (Meyers & Behring) has started in Rock Island with two houses 12x100, for retail business.

Business has been very good, though nothing to brag about, as stock has been scarce.

FOR SALE.

A fine piece of property for florists' purposes in Baltimore.

I offer for sale a ten acre lot fronting 550 feet on the north side of the New North Boundary Ave., with a frontage of 800 feet on St. George Ave. (50 feet wide), and a 50 foot ave. to the east, giving three fronts, that is especially desirable as a location for a florist. It is all in lawn except immediately around the house. Improvements are a 12-room dwelling and No. 1 outbuildings, all in good repair. The neighborhood is well built up and is only 24 minutes from the city hall. County taxes and city conveniences. Five-cent car fare; car every three minutes; all night cars. Only four squares from the cars.

Price $15,000. Terms easy. Address BALTIMORE, care Florists' Review.

PANSY SEED GIANT OF CALIFORNIA.

Having bought all the seed of Giant of California from the grower and wishing to build up a trade amongst the leading florists of the United States and Canada, I will send out the first 10 lbs. as follows: Trade package, 25c; ½ oz., $1.00; 1 oz., $4.00, free by mail.

Giant of California is the largest strain of Pansies in the world, some measure 5 inches in diameter, consisting of 22 colors, all having very large eyes. A trial will convince you.

BALTIMORE.

Trade Conditions.

We are having fine, hearty autumnal weather now in this latitude, the nights cool but yet without frost and the air and sun warm and balmy through the day. For the week ending with this date (September 23) trade has been fairly good. The cool nights and some dull days have made the supply of flowers somewhat short. Asters are over, outdoor roses have fallen off in quantity, cosmos and dahlias are coming in, the latter not abundantly. American Beauties are, for this market, more plentiful than usual; indoor roses, Brides and Maids especially, are small in size. Very few carnations, either from inside or out, are coming in. Greens are overplentiful—asparagus and sim-lax. Asparagus decumbens can hardly be said to be in the trade here as yet. A great quantity of violets has been planted this season, but so far none are in the market.

Carnation planting is about completed, and some related planters find it difficult to get small quantities to finish out when needed; whites are not to be had. There is not much change in the sorts in favor for a year or two past. Scott and White Cloud have been dropped by some, but there are others who continue to grow them. For white, Flora Hill and Lizzie McGowan will lead; Crocker, Lord and Joost are the favorite pinks; America and Crane lead the reds, while in this color Mack Richmond is a local favorite still.

The firm of Welsh & Perry has dissolved. Mr. J. J. Perry retains the store, on Gay street, and Mr. Philip B. Welsh will run the greenhouses on the Old York road as heretofore.

The Gardeners' Club held a dahlia show today (September 24) which was largely attended, the crowd in the evening being so dense that it was practically impossible to inspect the exhibits, which included, besides dahlias, foliage plants, cannas, designs, etc. The debated influence of the separation of the hours for the "patronesses," who included, as the daily papers say, "many fashionable women of the city and county," who had paid an associate membership fee to the club and those who later came in free, was not apparent at all. The club will hold a chrysanthemum show in November.

The Market.

The supply is still short of demand, and this is especially so in carnations. Of carnations any good stock of shipping grade brings $1.50, and there is not much variation from this figure. A few fancy Hills have brought $2.00, and some lower grade colored stock has sold at as low as $1.00, but the average runs very close to the $1.50 mark. Roses are still $4.00 to $5.00 for shipping grade. There is more variation in quality in roses, though, and much stock is sold at $2.00 and $3.00, and some even at $1.00, while a very few fancy Kaiserinas have brought $6.00.

Asters have improved somewhat in quality and some fine stock has brought as high as $2.00, though the average is nearer $1.00. Gladiolus are still in the market, but only the light colors sell; the others won't go at all. There is an increased call for adiantum and asparagus in bunches, which were in such poor demand but ten days ago. Smilax is a little more plentiful but inquiry is equal to the supply.

So far this week the weather has been quite warm, having made a sudden change from the cold and rains of last week. If these conditions continue it is likely that the supply will soon be ample to meet all demands. But today (Wednesday), the wind is again in the north and another cold wave with possible frost is likely.

Club Meeting.

The first regular meeting of the Florists' Club for the present season was held last Friday evening at 40 Randolph street. A good deal of routine business was transacted, and it was decided to invite Mr. Walter Heffron to read a paper at the next meeting, Oct. 4, on "Handling Cut Flowers as Received from the Grower." At that meeting a program for the winter season will be planned and a full attendance is especially desired.

Various Items.

Thos. Fogarty, of Friedman's, and Henry Rowe, of Schubert's, went to the president's funeral at Canton, Ohio, last week, to set up the large designs ordered by the Business Men's Association.

The new series of league bowling games will start next Tuesday evening at Worden's alleys. There will be four teams—Growers, Wholesalers, Retailers and Miscellaneous.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth and Miss Annie Kreitling have returned from their eastern trip.

James Annot Penman, who for many years was the American representative of the publishers of Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening, with headquarters in New York, died in this city Sept. 16, and his mortal remains were laid to rest in Mount Greenwood Cemetery.

Kennicott Bros. Co. report their first special sale of supplies a decided success. Flint Kennicott will soon start for a two weeks' vacation in Missouri for the benefit of his health.

Julius Niessen has resigned his position at Wienhoerber's and is seeking another opening.

Mr. H. Hunkel, of Holton & Hunkel, Milwaukee, was a visitor Wednesday.

TORONTO.Club Meeting.

After several months' vacation the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Society has resumed operations. On Tuesday evening last we opened the season with a social evening. President Lawrence was in the chair, and although the attendance was small the boys that did attend were treated to a good, exciting time for a few moments. One of our prominent members took exception to the reports sent a couple of the American papers by their Toronto correspondents, and unfortunately before thrashing out the question thoroughly unnecessary personalities were indulged in. There will evidently have to be a further investigation into the facts of the ease before either side can be considered in the right.

As a personally uninterested party and being present at the time of argument, knowing nothing of the case previously, it appears to me that the question at issue is: Should the paid employee of a grower be personally credited, officially, with the success attained by the firm by which he is employed for any new creations produced by hybridizing or otherwise, executed at the hands of said employee?

It was decided to hold another chrysanthemum and rose show this fall, dating from Nov. 13 (Wednesday) to 16 (Saturday). It seems to be the feeling that this will be the best show we have had yet, and as good, live committees will be appointed to look after all details we expect full entries with rousing attendance.

We would be pleased could a few entries be enticed from the other side of the line, and any growers who would care to take a chance with us will find that they will receive fair and clear judgment for anything sent over in competition. Or should our cousins not feel inclined to risk sending stock all this way for competition it would pay to send a display vase of anything new, be it only for the advertising.

Our general secretary, Wm. Jay, Jr., florist, Spadina avenue, Toronto, would be pleased to forward an entry list to anyone who thinks it worth while to drop him a card to that effect.

The Market.

The stock coming in the past week has been of a very inferior grade; it seems as though every one is unfortunately off crop. Roses, particularly the white ones, have been very scarce. Carnations have really not started to show themselves. Asters are nearly done, the cold, damp spotting them badly. The only redeeming feature being dahlias, which have been plentiful at $1.00 per hundred; very fine specimens have been sent in by many of the growers.

The visit of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York, has created quite a furor in Canada, and as we expect them here in a week or so are preparing to practically illustrate to their excellencies that this, the queen city of Canada, is loyal to the core and quite capable of expressing that sentiment. There are some very fine triumphant arches in course of erection on which the electrical effects promise to surpass anything of its kind ever seen here.

While they were in Montreal the demand for cut flowers, we hear, greatly exceeded the supply; we consequently look for a rush in our line of trade on their appearance here. C. W.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—The last outing of the South Bristol Farmers' Club was held at the home of Mr. F. H. Passell, the florist and gardener, at Mt. Pleasant. The chief interest was in Mr. Passell's extensive greenhouses and vegetable gardens. In the greenhouses are 4,000 thrifty looking carnations. Stem rot is the only enemy they have, and Mr. Passell thinks of sterilizing his soil next year. There are four acres in vegetables and immense crops are raised. "Brains, muscle and fertilizer," are the trinity that Mr. Passell depends upon. From 100 to 150 tons of stable dressing are applied annually to each acre.

H. was awarded the SILVER CUP, offered by the Buffalo Florists' Club for the BEST AND MOST COMPLETE DISPLAY. We have a large stock of these plants and can duplicate any that were exhibited. Florists will do well in anticipating their wants, and placing orders now, while we have a full line of sizes, and while weather will permit shipments of nearly all lines of stock by freight at a low cost of transportation.

Trade Notes.

Trade seems to be picking up nicely and good stock finds ready sale at fair figures. Roses are coming in very nicely and are comparatively free from mildew, possibly on account of the dry, bright weather we have been having. On the 17th all the rose growers had to start their fires on account of a sudden drop in the temperature, which went below freezing point. Coleus and other very tender stock was nipped, but fortunately such stock as geraniums escaped injury, and fortunate it was, as all the cuttings were still out on the stock plants in the field. Outside flowers are getting scarcer right along, and we are beginning to long for chrysanthemum time to come with its plenitude of bloom.

The State Society of Indiana Florists held a special meeting to begin active work on preparing for the entertaining of the Carnation Society next February. Perhaps the main thing at that meeting was the opening of the books for subscriptions to a fund to be used in defraying the expenses incidental to that meeting. That the boys are all in for making it a success was shown by the figures that were put down after each name. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, was selected as toastmaster by a unanimous vote.

After the business was finished Messrs. Wiegand (at whose place the meeting was held) started in to entertain their guests, and every one who has ever been a guest of theirs knows that they know just how it should be done. It was well past midnight when the crowd dispersed, and then it was only in order to catch the last car home.

The floral display at the Indiana State Fair was about as it usually is. A. Wiegand & Sons and Baur & Smith were the principal winners in the plant classes; W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, and Baur & Smith in cut flowers, and John Riemann in designs and baskets. Mr. Coles had a very fine lot of roses and his Kaiserins, for which he is famous, were as fine as ever. A. Wiegand & Sons always show a fine lot of palms and decorative plants.

Visitors during the past week were E. G. Hill and his son Joe and J. A. Evans, from Richmond; W. W. Coles, from Kokomo; J. A. E. Haugh, Anderson; Mr. Riemann, Vincennes; J. R. Fotheringham, representing F. R. Pierson, Mr. Temple, Davenport, Iowa; F. Dorner, Jr., Lafayette; H. Thaden, Atlanta, Ga. A. B.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

To Increase Stock of New Varieties.

A good way to quickly get up a healthy stock of new varieties, such as Timothy Eaton and Mrs. Elmer D. Smith, of which only a dozen or less could be afforded at the introduction prices, is to take the side shoots as they break at the axil of each leaf and put them in the propagating bed. They soon root, whether cut off below a joint or not, and after growing up to a bud, or making an abortive attempt, they form a nice healthy stool for next season's work.

From a dozen Timothy Eaton we now have quite a hundred nice plants by this method. J. O. E.

Trade Items.

Trade has been anything but satisfactory for the month of September. An occasional funeral order keeps the market pretty well cleaned up of all good white flowers. Late home-grown asters were plentiful and sold well. Young roses and carnations are making good growth and preparations have been made to increase the production over previous years. Society is inactive and nothing of importance in the line of weddings or other events have been announced so far this season.

The florists made appropriate window displays following the death of our illustrious president. The most effective arrangement was the one put up by W. L. Rock at his 11th street store, which was reopened on the 12th inst. Memorial services were held here last Thursday and the president's favorite flower, the carnation, was much sought for, the red ones selling for 10 cents each.

From Pleasant Hill, Mo., we learn that Mr. George M. Kellogg has just completed ten new houses 20x20 feet each. He now owns a neat little range of 200,000 feet of glass. Mr. Kellogg grows general stock, making a specialty of roses. He ships daily to this market and his stock is clean and of good quality.

Under the name of "The Chicago Floral Co." a new store was opened last week at the corner of 11th and Magee streets. John Snyder proudly tells us that he is practically the whole thing there and will do a wholesale and retail business, getting his entire supply from Chicago. John is the proprietor of two stores and his commanding figure is seen upon the streets now more frequently than ever.

F. Ross, formerly with the Humfeld Floral Co., has opened a retail store at 817 Walnut street.

It was sent by the city council and was arranged by Mann & Brown, the price being $200.

The Florists' Manual

by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title to gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

Funeral Designs.

The illustrations appearing in the Review and its contemporaries of American floral art of the designs sent to the funeral of the late president are very pretty. Some of the largest designs required six men to handle them, and we are sorry it seemed impossible to have them photographed; however, the ones shown are most creditable and some of them could not be reproduced in any other country, because they have not got the material. As it is, these designs were made outside New York city, and at a time when flowers were scarce; were it otherwise, even far better results would have been realized. New York florists feel proud of the work done by their brothers of other cities. The designs sent to the funeral of the late Queen Victoria cannot compare in any way to these, and they go far to show that though New York city is accredited with being the center of art, other American cities are equal to whatever emergencies arise to uphold American supremacy, even in the case of floral work for funerals.

The Plant Market.

This season promises to be an exceptionally good one for decorative plants, and as people are fast coming back to their city homes you cannot commence too early to make a display. A few plants outside your store on warm days will attract many a new customer, and let the old ones see you are still alive. Yes, the florists' stores at this time of the year should be bright and clean, and specially attractive, by having nicely arranged windows and a general appearance of aliveness. To be sure, you may not be doing much business at present, but if you don't show you are able to do it, you are liable to get left. This is the expensive time of the year for storekeepers, but it is the time when sacrifices must be made to try to at least retain the confidence of last year's customers and catch new ones. The florist business is at best only a speculation. The greatest danger lies not in the amount you invest but the material you invest in; eyes and ears are wonderful helps to those who strive to be successful, and they must be continually employed.

Now we are going to give advice to the retailers, and that may hurt some growers, but, Mr. Editor, it is necessary. We delight in knowing that every one gets a good big price for their stock, but the prices asked at present for any large-sized palm or decorative plant are exorbitant, nay, prohibitive; the people, except the few, cannot and will not pay one-half more than they paid last year for the same kind of plants, for they cannot see why, and it is a very dangerous thing for you to ask them to do it. It is a very easy matter for the grower to raise the price on the retailer, but it is quite another thing when the retailer tries it on his customer, so go slow on high-priced stock. Of course, you must have fairly good-sized plants and be able to equal your rivals, but there are many opportunities where you can recommend and use cheaper material with almost the same effect.

We are speaking for the good of the general plant trade when we say that every effort should be made to keep the public in good humor at the opening of the season; don't confront them with any big rise in plants because a few men have in a way cornered the market on tall kentias. You may have to overwork your wits on how to arrange Mrs. So and So's conservatory with smaller

There is no doubt about it that some growers will get whatever they ask for their large kentias, but the great trouble lies in the fact that a general rise is attempted on all manner of decorative stock. If the death of the president had resulted in a national trade panic, another story might be told, and there is no sense now in trying to kill the goose that furnishes the golden eggs. You must either handle large stock and be satisfied with smaller profits or recommend smaller stock and devise more ingenious methods of arrangement.

A great many of the plants offered for sale now have been grown warm in order to push their growth; they will suffer severely and suddenly if removed to cold dwelling houses or stores where dust and draughts are substituted for light and warm moisture, and then again, know ye that there is a great development of the old art of clipping plants. A great many of the high-priced plants offered in greenhouses have been most artistically trimmed by the shears, and when such plants are used in a house they must needs be clipped every two weeks, so you can figure how long such plants will last. Be willing to pay stock, but you have often had to overcome greater difficulties, and in many cases the stands will have to be used to elevate plants and save your trade. The grower is not to blame altogether for the condition of affairs today. A few years ago kentias were a glut; they were despised because other plants were popular, and every one, even the street fakir, had kentias for sale; this state of affairs in a lessening degree lasted until last year. Now, owing to the fact that growers have not had sufficient capital to allow part of their stock to go in reserve, and the markets of Europe have been heavily drained for large stock, prices have gone up and they will go much higher next year.

a good price for cool-grown, perfect plants, but look out for doctored plants at any price; they are apt to do away with your bank account and ruin your trade.

The plant trade must of necessity be divided into several sections. The florist with a greenhouse can always find room for a bargain, and there are generally plenty of them going early in the season. The florist with only his store must needs be more circumspect and replenish his stock only when necessary. There is an enormous amount of small plants at present on the market; there are probably over five million small kentias and arecas among the growers in this country that could be used in one way or another. The palms and decorative plants available for this season's trade throughout the United States would reach the fifty million mark. Almost anything in good condition can be used at one time or another, and the plant basket, or basket plant trade, will, if properly handled, be enormous.

There is nothing particularly new in plants that is to be considered by the retailer. It is generally a decade after a plant is introduced that it can be offered at a price to suit the general trade, yet there are many old varieties of plants too beautiful and useful to be longer overlooked. Let us go over what is offered by the growers at present, and classify the stock to suit the different grades of trade. First comes the small store or greenhouse keeper, whose customers consist of poor but plant-loving necessary to put three or four in each pot to make them look something like: many of them have but recently been fixed up, and avoid such if you can, because they will go yellow if taken from the greenhouse.

You will need some colored foliage plants. A few small and medium Pandanus Veitchii, one or two Dracena Lindenii and D. terminalis, but go slow on such stock; you cannot sell it if it is not perfect and it seldom remains so for more than a month in the average store. You can offer your customers a nice assortment of plants without risking much money on novelties or fancy stock. Phoenix canariensis and P. rupicola are good and can be recommended to live where most plants die. Livistona rotundifolia and Latania horvatica are two more plants you should chii, Dracena terminalis, Rex begonia, ferns, primroses, selaginellas, anything small, can be used up providing you have some color in it. You can pick up many pretty cheap baskets, pans, boxes and jardinières on the market, and no matter where your place is, you should let people see that you can do things nicely.

Get above the old level of doing things. Instead of having all your plants scattered about (and they seldom are attractive in such a way) put some of them together in some form. In a little while from now you can make a specialty of these designs and if there is any trade at all you ought to make out well on them. A great many people would rather pay five dollars for a basket or jardinière of plants than three or four dollars for one plant, and small plants such as we mention can always be got very cheap.

It is rather foolish to plunge and buy all you think you will want for the season. Better go slow; make a good show but remember you cannot sell stale looking plants and you cannot keep them as fresh as the grower. IVERA.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

Early Varieties.

So far as the early varieties are concerned, cultural instructions will soon count for nothing, as the buds are rapidly developing and success or failure is now assured. As the color begins to show in the buds, feeding with liquid manure should be discontinued and only clear water used. As the days get shorter and the heat of the sun declines it will be found that less water will be needed, and it should be so arranged that all watering should be done in the people. They are fully as capable of admiring extra large specimens as the wealthy people, but they have neither the room nor the money to pay for them, consequently we must select plants to suit. Small rubbers are probably the most popular in their case, and they were never so fine, so plentiful, or so cheap as they are at present. No mistake can be made by investing in a half dozen or dozen of the several sizes; children may be induced to buy the smallest size.

They can be bought at from $2 to $3 per doz. and can be retailed at from 35 to 60c. Branched rubbers are the most popular, and even they can be had in all sizes; the great majority are retailed at from $1 to $2. Next to rubbers with many will come Boston ferns. The country is fairly swamped with them, and away-down cut prices are threatened. There is too great a rush to get rid of a large quantity of these ferns, and the result will be disastrous to prices. You cannot well charge double in December for the plant you sell in October, and you may be face to face with such a condition. A great many of these Boston ferns have been grown crowded together and the result will be a severe dropping of foliage; you must get them as cheap as you can, of course, but use some care in selection and if possible get the cool grown, shapely kind; 6, 8 and 10-inch pan or pot sizes will be best for you.

Kentias are your next important plant and you will not have much demand for sizes above the $7.50 mark. You ought to get nice kentias and Areca lutescens you can afford to sell at from $2.50 to $5. The majority of such plants have been so pushed in growth that it has been have, and there can be nothing better for you than both varieties of aspidistras.

There are very many places and occasions where pans or boxes or vases of small plants could be sold were they arranged artistically and offered at a fair price. We are sure that this will be one of the greatest sections of the trade this year. The public is not slow to see and appreciate a good thing; it is yearly becoming more partial to plants and it is only a question of how you offer them. We have often arranged what we styled French plant baskets, some with low handles, others with side handles and just a bit of ribbon to add color. Small plants, such as kentias, Pandanus Veit- morning, so that the atmosphere of the house may be dry by nightfall. A dry, buoyant atmosphere is needed for the best development of the flowers.

At night the ventilators should not be closed tightly if the outside temperature falls to the freezing point, just for the sake of trying to be economical in fuel, but leave an inch or so of air on the top ventilators and run a crack of steam round the house. This will keep the atmosphere dry and moving and prevents the settling of moisture on the petals. Condensation always takes place if the house is closed up tight, and the moisture strikes through the petals and causes them to damp.

Flowers at the President's Funeral. The Vault at Canton, O.

Decomposition of the petals also takes place if the plants have been overfed, but this trouble occurs very seldom with the average florist, the shoe being generally on the other foot in his case, as either on account of lack of time or because he thinks the big flowers don't pay him his plants are generally underfed rather than over.

After the buds are showing color we like to maintain a temperature of from 45 to 50 degrees. Anything higher is unnecessary and anything lower is liable to check the development of some varieties.

There is a small thrip which is much in evidence just now, which works among the petals, chewing or sucking the coloring matter out of the petals and causing a flower to become very unsightly in a short time. This thrip seems to have an affinity for the white varieties or else the damage is more apparent on the whites. It is not very numerous if the house has been well fumigated for fly, and can generally be got rid of by handpicking if a diligent search is made on several successive mornings.

Mid-Season Varieties

Are greatly benefited by frequent applications of liquid manure now that the bud is showing well up above the foliage, but never make the mistake of giving the plants a strong dose at any time to try and make up for lost time. It is the greatest kind of a mistake. Let the liquid be weak and apply it every time you water at this time rather than giving a strong dose and giving several applications of clear water in between.

If liquid is applied too strong and the soil happens to be rather dry the effects are painfully apparent in a marbled, twisted stem and a blasted bud or deformed flower. It is always wise to put a little sulphur on the steam pipe as soon as firing has to be begun. This will keep down the mildew which is almost certain to strike in to a great er or less extent along the bottoms of the plants where the foliage is dense and the sun cannot penetrate. Apply the sulphur with a paint brush, dropping a little of it every four feet or so along a single pipe. If too much is used it is liable to cause the color of the pink varieties to fade and give the flowers a dull, bedraggled appearance.

The season of 1901, by the reports from different sections of the country, will show an improvement in flowers generally, the growth being as a general thing dwarf and in good condition.

BRIAN BONT.

VIOLETS.

In the FLORISTS' REVIEW of Sept. 12 there was an article on the use of nikoteen for aphid on violets. Will you kindly state what proportion of nikoteen and water to use.

A. H.

I suppose that A. H. alludes to something I said about the use of nikoteen on violets. The foliage of violets is very susceptible to harm; for instance, common Bordeaux mixture, which you can use on roses and carnations and many other leaves, is destruction to violets. It will burn them right up. Nikoteen is a very strong solution and for use on violets it can be used at a strength of 300 of water to one of nikoteen. Some use what is known as the rose leaf extract of tobacco, which you can use 100 to 1.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

GERANIUMS.

When lifting your old geraniums it is a mistake to pot them in large pots or boxes. Take off nearly all the foliage and pot into very small pots in sandy soil and place in the coolest house you have for a few months until they harden and form new roots. If then potted or boxed up they speedily respond and give plenty of cuttings.

If you want to work up a stock of new and choice varieties these can be planted out on a sunny bench after their season of rest and by making toothpick cuttings during February, March and April a stock can soon be worked up for spring sales in 2½-inch sizes.

J. O. E.

AZALEAS.

Azaleas for Christmas, such as Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner and Vervaeana, should be placed in a rather cool house after being received, but a week later they should go into a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees at night until in bloom, and then be hardened a little. When the conditions are not just right to maintain the proper temperature try a mild hotbed in the house and with the right amount of watering and syringing they will be hastened along. If carefully attended to those not having the right facilities in piping may get them in all right.

The main thing in making a hotbed in the house is to see that the material is well prepared, and this should be done before bringing it inside.

J. O. E.

PANSIES.

For spring sales we must have large, bright flowers, and having obtained the right strain of seed a little care should be used in making up the beds, which must be well drained and properly enriched with old rotted manure, bone meal or horn shavings.

The seedlings should never be allowed to become "drawn" before pricking off, and if the plants appear too thickly in the spring no time should be lost in transplanting farther apart.

After trying various methods of sowing the seed I have adopted the following: I sift clean sandy loam to a depth of three or four inches, water well, sow, and cover with boards elevated above the bed. When the seeds begin to germinate the covering is removed and the bed watered frequently.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bulbs.

Tulips are arriving and along with them the narcissus. I suppose there are some beginners in the business who have not yet tried their hands at forcing tulips. It is not such an important matter with us as it was 15 years ago. The forcing of tulips and daffodils was then a very important item and a good deal of money was made at it. I can very well remember the time when it was quite experimental with us and we had to try a year or two before we were certain of success. Now with good quality bulbs we know the conditions required so well that there is no fear of failure.

If you have imported your varieties no need of telling you what sort to grow. There may be some who have not yet purchased their forcing tulips. There is no doubt about the Duc van Thol being the earliest to force, but as I have often said, we have so many other flowers now for the holiday season that short stemmed tulips are really not essential, and therefore I would dispense with the Duc van Thol varieties. For scarlet, Waterloo (as often called Belle Alliance) is inexpensive and very fine. Vermillion Brilliant is the best of all scarlet flowers and very early. For a yellow, Chrysolora is still earlier than Yellow Prince and deeper in color, but Yellow Prince is grand, with a longer stem and is best for general crop.

For white the ever popular La Reine is the best. Under some conditions this variety often assumes a beautiful pink shade. When first opening it is almost pure white. White Pottebakker is a magnificent white, but much more expensive than the La Reine. For pink Rose Gris de Lin is fine, but the most beautiful of all is the Cottage Maid. Proserpine is one of the grandest of all tulips. Its color is hard to describe; we will call it a deep pink; a splendid forcier.

The above are about all the colors that you need and every one is perfectly adapted for early forcing. If more variety is needed, Kaiserskroon, red bordered yellow, is a fine flower, but sheds its petals badly. Duchess de Parma is also a very large flower, orange yellow. Joost von Vondel is a very fine flower. It might be described as a claret shaded with white.

There are few double tulips that it will pay to force. Couronne d'Or is a fine deep orange. Imperator Rubrorum is the best scarlet. Tournesol is a red and yellow; a very showy flower and worth growing for Easter. La Candeur is a very cheap, large double white, but do not try to force it before March. Murillo is the best of all double tulips for the florist. It opens white and then assumes a most beautiful delicate pink of a satiny texture.

Before I tell you my method of handling tulips I would just like to say, do not be in any hurry to plant out of doors. You are not likely to do it yet for some time, but last fall we had some valuable experience in this line. The best tulips that I have ever seen in this country or any other were planted as late as the end of November. In fact, they were dibbled into almost mud, but they came out in magnificent style. This is the experience of other growers. When you plant out of doors too early they are apt to be rather early in the spring and do not last in bloom nearly as well as those that are making roots in the spring. So the end of October and November is plenty early enough to plant tulips and hyacinths outside.

Now, for forcing it is very necessary that you get at least part of your bulbs in at once, and there is no object in delaying the boxing of any of them, because the better they are rooted the easier they will force. For the 17th time I will just allude to the flat or box we use for forcing, and I have never been able to improve on it. This flat comes in useful for carrying plants or for packing bedding plants in in the spring. It is 2 ft. long, 1 ft. broad and 3 inches deep, all inside measure. The ends are made of inch stuff and the bottom and sides are three inch strips half an inch thick. This just allows a small space between each strip on the bottom

It is a mistake to think that it is necessary to have a rich soil for tulips or hyacinths. The Hollander has produced the embryo flower and all we do is to force it out with heat and moisture, so any soil will do as long as it is a good workable texture. The soil from an old arnack bed would be ideal. Light it should be for convenience sake.

Boxing these tulips, hyacinths or narcissus should be a very quick operation and one that wants very little training. We just fill the box even full, and where a quantity is being done the man who puts the bulbs in need not have that part of the job to do. Then we squeeze the bulb down until the top is even with the top of the box and that makes the soil of just the right solidity. A little soil is needed then between the tops of the bulbs and the operation is done. The box I have described will hold about 72 La Reine or the smaller varieties and 60 of such varieties as Murillo, or 50 Von Sion.

If you have a root house that is very cold it may do as well for storage of these bulbs as to have them out of doors, but even in our severe climate I much prefer to have them entirely out in the open ground. We put some old boards on an open space of ground and set the boxes on the boards. We make beds of about six ft. wide and as long as you like and a space of six or seven ft. between another bed. The first and important thing is as soon as the boxes are placed on the ground that they should have a thorough watering. Make sure that it goes down to the bottom of the and is just what you want for drainage. We get this stuff ripped out at a planing mill out of rough but sound lumber, and I don't think the boxes cost us, making and all, over six cents each. Of course we make them ourselves. If you have a few little boys, as I have had in my time, passing through the age when they are fond of using a hammer, they will be delighted with the job.

box. We throw a small quantity, just a sprinkling, of the buckwheat husks on the surface of the soil. The only good that does is that the soil with which you cover the boxes breaks away easily from the soil in the box when taking them in. As soon as thoroughly watered we dig the soil out between the beds and throw on from two to three inches and level over the whole surface.

Nothing more is needed until near the first of December except one important thing, and that is if we get a dry spell the beds want a thorough watering every week. We made the mistake years ago of thinking that an occasional shower was enough. Remember there is no moisture coming from the earth to supply the roots as there is to plants in the open ground. When real winter comes or we think it is coming we throw on four or five inches of stable litter. A quantity of dry leaves, which we could easily get, would answer the purpose just as well, but we find it is a great job to keep them from blowing away. In a good many years we have never remembered but one year that there was any trouble in getting the bulbs in as we wanted them every week. If we have plenty of snow, so much the better, for that keeps the frost out, but if boxed early, as they should be, we don't at all mind if frost does penetrate down into the soil covering the bulbs.

Dutch Hyacinths are of course potted in 4-inch pots. We prefer to put these in a cold frame. Not that freezing will hurt, but they are easier to get at. The same with Roman Hyacinths. They are generally supposed to be tender, but we have often seen them frozen without any harm. But they should not be brought into a warm house when frozen. Paper White should never be allowed to freeze at any time. We never run any risk of them because we don't have Paper White out of doors after the middle of November.

For the past three or four years, or I might say since Easter has been such a plant time, hyacinths, tulips and narcissus in pots and pans have been a very important item. I prefer the pans to the pots for this purpose, but not too large. We grew many hyacinths and daffodils in 12-inch pans and found them rather large; 7, 8, 9 and 10-inch pans are the best.

There is a great variety of ways in which you can plant these pans. We found with hyacinths that to have them all of one color was preferred. Treat them precisely as I have described for boxing, except that I would prefer to put them in a cold frame, where they can be protected by glass or boards so that little or no freezing will occur, because if frozen hard many of the pans will be cracked. Common sense will almost tell you how thick to put these bulbs in the pans or pots, but remember that in the case of tulips you can scarcely overdo it. Tulips when massed are showy, but half a dozen stuck around in a pan would look scrumpy. I will tell you later about bringing them in to force, but I will say now it is useless to bring them in unless well rooted, and we have for some years found it unprofitable to begin forcing till New Year's; that is, we bring in the first tulips, Dutch hyacinths and daffodils about New Year's. This brings them on about the end of January, which is as soon as it is profitable to force them.

ROSE NOTES.

Propagation By Grafting.

This mode of propagating roses for indoor culture is comparatively new in America and has been resorted to with the object of getting increased root action and consequently more vigorous Shield 7 ft. High, by A. Gude & Bro., Washington, for the President's Funeral.

Ordered by Army of the Potomac.

growth in those varieties which are naturally weak on their own roots, or some other varieties which through a long period of excessive forcing are showing signs of deterioration.

Not having practiced this method to any great extent I am not in a position to say much about its merits from personal observation. The operation is by no means a difficult one, and can be learned more quickly from seeing it performed than from a written description. The time and labor expended in this mode of propagation is much more than that required in making cuttings and putting them in the sand, and whether the result in quality and quantity of crop is sufficient to make up for the extra expenditure is still a mooted question. The young grower who is desirous of trying to grow grafted stock would do better to purchase from some good grower who uses this kind, and give them a fair trial alongside of good stock raised from cuttings and watch the result. From my own experience and from what I have observed in other places where this kind of stock is grown, the difference is so imperceptible that I have reverted back to the cutting.

Cuttings.

Cuttings ought to be potted just as soon as the roots attain an inch in length. If allowed to stand in the sand any length of time after they are ready the roots extend through the sand and get so tangled up together that it is difficult to handle them without breaking. They will soon begin also to make wood of a very inferior kind, which will be sure to wilt when they are potted, and retard the starting of growth in the young plant.

Rose soil left over at planting time is a good soil to use for first potting; it ought to be in a nice mellow condition and passed through a half inch screen.

I prefer 2-inch standard pots. These should be thoroughly clean inside. It is wise not to take too many rooted cuttings from the bench at one time, as the roots are so tender that a lengthened exposure will soon shrivel them up, and the fewer checks the young plant has so much the more quickly will it start. Great care ought to be used in handling the young plant, the roots being so easily broken. It is easy to be quick at potting, but to do the work in a proper way is quite a different matter. The roots ought to be only one-third down the depth of the pot, and the soil firmed equally all the way down. Water as soon as possible.

The Young Stock.

At this season you will find room scarce and the temptation strong to place your young stock on any bench that is empty. This is poor policy. Look out the best position in the house for your young stock; it will pay you to make a sacrifice to give it a good place.

After having placed your plants on the bench make sure that they are thoroughly watered, as many young plants are ruined by want of care in this respect, they having all the appearance of having been watered while they are only wet on the surface. If the weather is bright, shade for the first three days, but only while the sun is shining on the bench, as the more light the quicker will be the start. Syringe twice a day in bright weather. Keep night temperature at 56 degrees and the day temperature in dark weather at 62 degrees, bright weather 70 degrees.

RIEBS.

THE CELESTIAL PEPPER.

Since the days of our old Jerusalem cherry (Solanum Capsicastrum) no berry plant has been introduced (barring Ardisia crenulata, which is expensive to grow) that has given more satisfaction than the Celestial Pepper. When in condition at the holidays it is a splendid seller, its beautiful foliage and berries in three colors—yellow, purplish and red—attracting instant attention.

Its cultivation is apparently easy. Many have discarded the plan of growing it in the open ground and lifting it, but prefer to sow seed about May and keep the plants moving right along, making the final shift into 6 or 7-inch pots or pans plunged out in the open frames all summer and brought in before frost.

A bench or house of this pepper well grown and in full fruit is a grand sight, and the plants sell at sight at profitable figures.

Three or four sowings, commencing in April and extending to June, will result in salable plants from September to Christmas in from 3 to 8-inch pots. A rich, open soil is best and the last shift should be made before the berries are colored.

Just a few chrysanthemums are coming in; they are poor as yet. Carnations are scarce and principally outdoor grown. There are a great many carnation plants in the fields about here, yet awaiting purchasers. Crops of roses and cattleyas and orchids seem to be on the rush at present. Orchids are seen in most of the florists' windows and they are very fine. Prices for all grades of cut flowers have so far this season been very high as compared with last year, in many instances almost three times as much has been gotten for good grades of cut flowers, and the growers ought to be satisfied with results so far. We may have a dull spell just now when people are still out of the city and crops are increasing, but as soon as the cold weather sets in and the mum glut is over there is every reason to expect a very good season all round.

Various Items.

The auctioneers report fairly good results considering all with last week's sales. John Scott's annual sale at his Keap street establishment was a big success. John has an immense quantity of small stock in good condition. Anton Schultheis got a big bargain in Pandanus Veitchii, so did Alf. Zeller with these and Draecena Lindeni. James Weir's Sons bought small kentias, and Schmutz got several good lots of small plants. Messrs. J. N. Champion & Co. displayed a keen knowledge of stock and values, sending quite a nice lot for their New Haven trade.

Clary reports that considering the earliness of the season the McCoolan nursery stock at Atlantic Highlands, N. J., brought fairly good prices. Many of the plants sent to the city auction rooms go well, others have to be slaughtered. The international yacht races are blamed for everything, and to tell the truth they seem to absorb all interest here.

Some of the florists are displaying pans of oxalis in their windows in lieu of shamrocks, and Small & Sons have two very pretty fac-similes of the yachts made of capes and immortelles on show at their new Waldorf-Astoria store. "Norman Co." is the title of a new florist store opened at Sixtieth street and Madison avenue. It is given us that Mr. Taylor, the cheap carnation man from Connecticut, is the controller of the firm.

Several prominent florists have recently died. All regretted to hear of Jim the Penman's fate. Peter F. Daly, founder of the firm of Daly Brothers, Grant on, N. J., passed away, and Louis Amman, son of the veteran Charles Amman, of the Bronsville Nursery, also T. J. Slaughter, the old-time rose grower of Madison, N. J., have joined the great majority, deeply regretted by many friends.

An Exhibition.

The flower, fruit and vegetable show held by the American Institute at the Berkeley Lyceum, September 24 to 26, was a success in point of quality of exhibits; 50 cents was charged admission, and at times there was a fairly good attendance.

Dahlias were the principal flowers on exhibition, and though the dahlia season has been somewhat cranky and backward, still some very fine flowers were to be seen here. The classes were divided between florists and private gardeners, and in the section for dahlias, W. P. Lothrop, East Bridgewater, Mass., won first on display of pompons, which were very fine; second on 25 varieties, one of each; first on 25 fancies with "Lucy Fawcett"; second on 50 varieties: second on 25 shows, one var.; first on display of Cactus dahlias, and second on 10 vars. of show dahlias. Rowel & Granz, Hicksville, L. I., got second on 25 blooms of fancies; second on five blooms of Strahlen Krone; second on 25 shows; first on five blooms of A. D. Livoni; first on 25 white shows and second on vase of Grand Duke Alexis. H. F. Burt, Taunton, Mass., captured first on 10 var. of shows; first on display of singles; second on display of pompons; first on display of cactus varieties; first for 25 varieties; first on 50 singles, and first on 50 shows.

In the classes for private gardeners George Hale, Seabright, N. J., won first for 25 shows with the var. "Emily"; first on 10 varieties; first on 25 varieties; first on 50 varieties; first on display of cactus varieties, and first on five Clifford Bruton. James Dowlen, Seabright, N. J., got second on five A. D. Livoni; first on five Strahlen Krone; second on five Clifford Bruton; first on five Grand Duke Alexis; second on 100 singles; second on display of cactus varieties; second on 25 varieties; first on vase of cactus and second on 10 varieties of shows. L. A. Martin, Greenwich, Conn., won first on display of pompons. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, exhibited several of his new dahlias.

This was practically the annual exhibition of the American Dahlia Society, the remnants of which met on Wednesday afternoon and reluctantly decided that the attempt to keep up such a society was a failure. This is a great pity.

The present classification is very faulty and steps should be taken to more properly define the types. Single dahlias seem to have gone out of fashion, and "shows" and "fancies" don't seem to be very popular in this country; pompons, cactus and what are strangely classed as "Decoratives" are the types most popular here, and the fifty best varieties of the two latter sections exhibited at this show were Baron Schroeder, Africa, Oban, Princess Christian, J. Roach, Kingfisher, Proserpine, Radiance, Kenneth, Octopus, Merry Service, Mrs. Peart, Mrs. F. Fell, Earl of Pembroke, Standard Bearer, Wiltshire Lass, Cinderella, Starfish, Beatrice, Bridesmaid, Matchless, Britannia, Arachne, Laverstock Beauty, Clifford Bruton, Gloriosa, Mrs. Barnes, Mrs. Turner, Island Queen, Alpha, Fusilier, Green's White, Night, The Czar, Princess Eve, Ernest Cannell, Ruby, Papa Charmet, Eclair, Capstan, Wm. Jewett, John Halifax, Mrs. Dickson. There is of course a similarity of color in many of these, but the forms differ and they embrace every shade; all of them are extra fine and well worth growing.

Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., exhibited and won a special prize for a most beautiful group of orchids, which included many varieties. We never saw a finer spike of Vanda coerulea nor larger Cattleya labiata and C. Gigas; they were very beautiful. C. labiata var. tessallata was fine, so was their C. Suavir and C. chrysozona, a new form of Laelia praestans and a fine piece of Stanhopea Amesiana. Julius Roebers, Ruthersford, N. J., showed some choice orchids and decorative plants, as did Siebrecht & Son, of New Rochelle, and Geo. Hale, of Seabright. Perhaps there was never a finer lot of fancy colored caladiums shown here than those of W. A. Manda; there were many beautiful new ones in the group. A. Hallock, of Queens, staged a fine collection of hardy phlox, and Tritoma Pfitzeri, exhibited by J. L. Childs, showed up immensely; all the above were awarded special prizes.

There was quite a display of hot-house grapes. Wm. Scott, Tarrytown, N. Y., won first on two bunches of Muscat Hamburg; first on two bunches of Muscat of Alexandria; they were very large bunches. A. Herrington, Madison, N. J., won second on two bunches of white and second on two bunches of black. Geo. Hale won first on collection with two bunches each of Lady Downs, Golden Hamburg, Gros Merve, Muscat Hamburg, Muscat of Alexandria and Black Alicante. Howard Nicol won second on collection. Ellwanger & Barry, of Rochester, displayed a magnificent collection of pears and other fruit, winning several prizes.

L. A. Martin, Greenwich, Conn.; A. M. Warner, Baiting Hollow, N. Y.; H. J. Reeve, Mattituck, L. I.; F. H. Tuthill, Jamesport, N. Y.; R. C. Kayton, Ellensburg, N. Y.; Wm. Scott, Tarrytown, N. Y.; H. Nicol, Yonkers, N. Y.; Alex Mair, Oakdale, L. I.; James E. Counce, Larchmont Manor, N. Y.; M. L. Bell, Sparkill, N. Y.; T. Garrett, Oakdale, L. I.; T. G. Bourne, Oakdale, L. I.; J. T. Young, Laurel, N. Y.; C. C. Crosby, Montclair, N. J.; all names celebrated by excellence in fruit and vegetable culture, divided the long list of prizes for same with most creditable exhibits. Cornell University was a large exhibitor, showing many novelties and well grown specimens.

A chrysanthemum show will be held in these rooms in November, with $500 offered as prizes.

Bowling.

The new bowling club organized among the employes of the wholesale florists met during the past week and elected the following officers: President, Adolphe Riedlenger; secretary, Arthur Wisce; treasurer, William Sampson, and Capt. James Coyle. A challenge was issued to the retailers to bowl this (Tuesday) night. Scores rolled on Saturday night on the Twenty-sixth street alleys were:

A. Riedlenger	141	128
A. Wisce	161	182
M. Sampson	102	107
A. Hutt	139	115
H. C. Reidel	109	118
W. Sampson	110	120
S. Dyde	102	129
W. Wisterkemp	120	110
J. Suple	127	125
H. Donohue	150	140

Much interest is taken in this club among the younger element in the florists' trade and there is no doubt but that it will soon be numerically very strong. It is hoped they will challenge the junior team of the New York Florists' Bowling Club shortly. Of course being only beginners they cannot yet cope with the experts.

The New York Florists' bowling team have challenged the Philadelphia Florists' bowling team and a hot time is anticipated when the match comes off.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has taken on a fall turn this week. The aster, ruler of the September market, has been replaced by the dahlia, which bids fair to rule the market during October. This flower is a revelation, a wonderful improvement over the dahlia of five years ago. The retailers are taking them up in earnest, as a glance at their windows will show.

This flower is a great shipper that our out-of-town brethren should certainly use wherever possible; $1 per 100 buys good ordinary, while select bring $2 per 100, and Ethies, with two-foot stems and lots of foliage bring $3 and even $4 per 100.

Roses are improving in quality and quantity, with prices about the same as a week ago, possibly a little higher on select stuff. Carnations are scarce and in demand at $1.50 to $2 per 100. Violets want a breath of cool air for a few nights to be a factor in the market. Asters are still to be had, though another week will make a difference in their number, which is steadily diminishing.

September was a good month when compared with the Septembers of previous years.

John Burton's Place.

Many florists have seen the picture of the president-elect of our national society, and most of them have read sketches of his life, and I know that all of them would like to know how his place looks. John Burton has a beautifully situated piece of ground on the Willow Grove pike in the village of Wyndmoor, near Chestnut Hill. The house and office are in a plot divided from the road by a well-kept lawn. The greenhouses are just back, all running parallel to the road, east and west, systematically arranged in two sections, with boiler sheds and open spaces between.

The houses are mostly filled with roses for cut flowers, although there are a few other things—smilax, Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus and Cypripedium insigne. The place is remarkably well balanced. Beauties are the main crop; there is also Maid, Meteor, Kaisersin, Bride, Liberty and a few small roses. Bon Silenc, La France, Isabella Sprunt, Pierre Guillot and Madame Gerard. One house is waiting for Ulrich Brunner to be brought in for Christmas in boxes. There is one new house here, after which the houses at the new place were modeled.

The new place, half a square foot, consists of six houses 150x25 feet. Each house contains three low benches and four walks. Four houses are planted with Beauty, one with Maid and one with Beauty and Golden Gate. All six houses are practically even span, with certain variations in pitch and height of wall and with front glass. All are heated by steam and have practical locking air valves made by the new valve company on the Cresheim road nearby. They are also fitted with a roller to prevent friction between pipes and pipe rests, an idea of Edwin Lonsdale's. The houses were built and fitted up by Mr. Burton and his own men. They are well done, so well that it is doubtful whether skilled mechanics could have done much better.

The stock at both places is in fine shape without exception; it is wonderful how well it has been managed while the building was being done.

Various Items.

Julius Wolf, Jr., has just completed a new house for boarders. He is fortunate in having both summer and winter boarders and can make the best use of such a house. Hot water under pressure is found to be admirably adapted to the requirements of this place.

W. P. Peacock, Meo, N. J., is now sending some wonderfully fine dahlias to S. N. Penock. C. W. Bruton is a yellow with color, size and stem almost equal to a good chrysanthemum; A. D. Lavoni is a fine pink; Storm King and several other whites are pure in color, of fair size and stem. There is a very fine crimson, the name of which I did not get. Mr. Peacock is going to cover a half acre or more of the late planted dahlias with muslin supported on uprights to keep off frost, so we may have flowers from this great farm for six or eight weeks yet.

J. J. Habermehl & Sons have had a very good summer business and anticipate a rushing fall and winter trade.

George Craig has put in a new tiled counter and window, which adds greatly to the attractiveness of his store.

John Devlin, 63d and Buist streets, has some very fine Ethel Crocker and Flora Hill carnations.

Thomas Foulds, of Gwynedd, has opened a store at 13th and Columbia avenue. It is understood that he intends to wholesale much of his stock.

W. T. Christ, of E. Washington lane, Germantown, has an early lot of cosmos in bloom. There is some speculation as to how it was done.

E. Weiss, of Hathoro, is cutting some very fine Brides.

The growers downed the storekeepers some days ago on the club alleys. The latter felt that it was a case of knowing the kinks and curls in the alleys more than one of superior bowling, so a match was arranged on the new Academy alleys, 9th and Gerard avenue, for Friday of last week, the losers to pay all expenses and stand a lot of jollying. The two teams lined up as follows:

Growers.	Storekeepers.
D. T. Connor,	George M. Moss,
W. K. Harris,	W. R. Gibson,
George Anderson	B. Starkey,
John Westcott	W. Graham,
John Burton	G. Watson,
S. Adelberger.	George Craig.

The storekeepers won after a rattling good game, by 122 pins. The growers have challenged them to a return match, which will take place at the same alleys on Thursday of this week.

The October meeting of the club was held on Tuesday evening. The officers elected were: President, Wm. K. Harris; vice-president, John Westcott; secretary, Edwin Lonsdale; treasurer, J. Wm. Colflesh.

C. J. Rennebar gave a practical talk on steam fitting, showing just how to make connections, which was greatly appreciated by the members. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business seems slow to assume anything like steadiness, and therefore not much can be said regarding it. The early part of the week there was quite a lot of funeral work, also some counter trade, but since then trade has been very quiet. The supply of carnations has improved, also the quality; there is more pink and red in than last week. The rose supply is quite large—that is, taking it all together. The supply of Al stock is far from heavy. Plenty of second-grade stock is sold very cheap, so cheap that some stores have out their usual signs, "Roses, 25 cents per dozen." The supply of Beauties has slackened somewhat, still plenty of them are in for the demand. First-class long Beauties are always in demand in this market. Ellis received a fine lot of Cole's Kaisersin the past week, which sold at sight.

Prices.

The prices paid on Brides, Maids, Perles and Meteors were from 1 to 4 cents; Kaisersin, $3; Beauties, from 50 cents to $2.50 per doz. Carnations have had a good call all week. The bulk of the stock which is still short-stemmed brings $1 per 100; anything like a long stem brings $1.50, and some extra fine stuff goes at $2; the latter has quite a demand, but as yet is scarce. Fillmore's Flora Hills at Kuehn's had a big demand. A few fine asters are still coming in, which bring $2 per 100. Valley sold slowly the past week at $2 and $3; quality very good. Cosmos, usually so plentiful is not to be had. Dahlias are too scarce to be quoted. Tuberoses were also very scarce the past week, with some demand. Chrysanthemums are not yet in, but it won't be long before this flower will crowd all others out of the market. All kinds of greens are selling well at the same old price.

Notes.

Miss Ida Schaffer has bought out the establishment of Mrs. Lukinsmeyer at the corner of 14th and Montgomery streets. Miss Schaffer is entirely new to the trade, not having had any experience; it don't seem necessary now-adays.

Mr. Andrew Meyer, on South Jefferson avenue, has a fine lot of mignonette Machet in 2-inch pots; also about the best pot chrysanthemums seen in a long time. These flowers are Mr. Meyer's pets, and no one knows better how to grow them. Mr. Meyer stated that the classified list in the REVIEW is a great help to any one who has anything to sell or wants to buy; it's so easy to find what you want.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting on the first Thursday in October, which will be on the 3d, owing to the fact that the second Thursday (our regular meeting night) will be big Thursday at the Fair Grounds, and all florists wish to attend the fair on that day, as it is the day that is generally set aside for awarding the prizes on plants and cut flowers. No doubt Secretary Schray has notified all the members of the change of date.

Max Herzog and wife returned home two weeks ago, and have kept themselves scarce since their arrival. Max, no doubt, has plenty of work on hand just now, and that accounts for his not having called on his friends. Max says that each member of the club who attends the next meeting will be entitled to a handsome present, which he brought from his old home abroad for this purpose. The presents will be distributed at the November meeting.

Grinding Out Florists By The Dozen.

Mr. Potts, who styles his establishment the Eden Floral Co., advertises for young ladies to learn the florist business. He charges them a three-spot with the promise of a good position when they have learned the trade, which will take them about two weeks. One of these learned young ladies called on your correspondent for a position and told of how she had learned the business in two weeks for $3. I asked her what she could do, and she said: "I can stem cape flowers, that's what I learned in a week, and was told that I could now go into the world and apply to any live florist and obtain a position as a first-class artist." She tried it, and now says that she will bring charges against Mr. Eden, as she called him, for obtaining money under false pretense. I gave her a little fatherly advice as to how long it would take her to learn the trade. I told her I was forty-five years old, forty-five years in the business, and didn't know it all yet. Since then I have had at least a dozen calls from young ladies for positions in the store, having finished their educations at the Eden Floral Co. in two weeks. They all had the same story to tell.

Bowling.

The members of the bowling club will not bowl tonight (Monday) owing to the opening of the tenpin league a week earlier. The Florists' team will open the season with three games with the Westerns on Tuesday night, Oct. 1, 1901.

but the demand seems smaller than is usual at this date, so that prices are not excessive, rarely being higher than $2 per 100.

Single violets have established a blue streak in the market, selling all the way from 50 cents to $1 per 100. Buyers of them need to come early and look sharp. Green material of all kinds in full cut.

Good red roses are not in over-supply, but pink and white roses are running very freely and getting to be of good quality. The Kaiserin is falling into the background.

In bygone years the rose men expected a few days' respite in competition between asters and chrysanthemums. This has not been allowed them now for a couple of years, but it looks as though a return to the old plan may occur this year. If so they can be depended upon to rise nobly to the situation.

Notes.

I hear nothing whatever concerning the present status of sterilization of soil in this section. Am I slow, or is it not paralysis a few days ago while playing golf, but is rapidly improving and complete recovery can be expected.

J. S. MANTER.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply has improved somewhat since last report, especially of carnations, but shipping demand remains so brisk as to take up all first class stock at rates last quoted, though local call is still small. In roses only the very best bring $5, and not very many go at that, the bulk of the selects going at $4, while $3 is probably the average on the general run of good mediums. The quality seems to have fallen off a trifle as the result of the warm weather we have had lately, and there is quite a lot of under grade Maids that are jobbed out at very low figures in order to move them. The demand for Beauties is as brisk as ever, and the supply is short of demand, especially in the long stemmed classes.

Wreaths by W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, for the President's Funeral. Also Decorated Portrait in their Window.

Great things are expected of both teams, as they are very evenly matched. The result of these three games will appear in the next issue of the REVIEW. The team that will open the season will consist of A. Y. Ellison, C. A. Kuehn, John Kunz, John Sturtz and J. J. Beneke. The other members are R. F. Tesson and Wm. Adels. Official scorer, Oscar R. Beneke. J. J. B.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

There is a steady increase in the volume of business being done here, but plenty of room for future growth. Collections are hard, both in the wholesale and retail departments, but general hopes run high for a good winter's run of traffic.

No frosts have occurred except very slight ones on extreme low places, yet outdoor material is practically out of the fight except candytuft. Asters are looking rather tired.

The next thing to do is to move the coming crop of chrysanthemums, which will very soon arrive good and strong. E. N. Pierce & Sons are now cutting a few regularly.

Carnations are not yet in a majority, much in vogue? During a recent visit to the establishment of W. J. Dana at Wellesley Hills I found him busy at the practice, in, to me, a new and novel manner. He had placed three lines of 2 or 3-inch drain pipe in his benches, covered them with nearly a foot of loam and spread the proper amount of manure on top. Connection between the drain pipe and his huge boiler was made with 1 1/2-inch pipe and a good heavy pressure of steam was rushed into them, at the joints and all through the loam. An immense heat was the result. Mr. Dana says if no further benefit than the sure destruction of weed seeds is accomplished he is fully satisfied.

About fifty feet in length can best be utilized at a time, but probably soil sufficient for twice that amount of bench surface can be handled, the drain pipe being removed when the material is worked over and spread further along the bench.

Incidentally I found Mr. Dana's place in first-class condition in every way, with a huge crop of roses getting well along, which will surely have to be considered in the floral economy of the coming winter.

Geo. W. Patton, the Lowell florist, was prostrated by a slight attack of Carnations are in noticeably better supply, and $1.50 seems about the top price for the best, with really good flowers at $1 to $1.25. Clean up lots of the poorer qualities are occasionally sold at as low as 50 to 75 cents a hundred.

Asters have improved some little in quality and some now being received are very good. White and purple are in best demand and there are none too many of the best grade in these colors. Good sized, clean stock brings $1.50 to $2.00, and some special fancies have brought as high as $3.00, but the poor grades and off colors are practically unsalable.

Dahlias and tuberoses are coming in but move slowly. There are still a few gladioli, but they are hardly worth mentioning. Smilax is more plenty. There is plenty of Sprengeri, and some plumose sprays, but strings are scarce. Anuratum lilies have been in very good demand this season.

The advance guard of the chrysanthemum host has arrived at Poehlmann's. They are cutting about 200 Fitzwygram a day.

The shipping trade is making a new record for the season. The houses that lead in this line report increases of from 50 to 100 per cent during September.

Various Items.

Walter Hetzer & Co. decorated the North Side Turner Hall for a reception last Saturday evening, and made quite a new departure. The material was nearly all obtained from the woods, and the effect was largely that of a forest. Palms, etc., were used on the stairs leading to the hall.

Among the floral designs sent to President McKinley's funeral from this city was a very handsome wreath of cattleyas and valley from the Greek colony. It was arranged by John Mangel.

Edward Blameuser, of Niles Center, is to be married next Tuesday.

Mr. E. H. Hitchcock, Glenwood, Mich., the dealer in hardy ferns, was a recent visitor.

Mr. George A. Kuhl, Pekin, Ill., was a visitor on Wednesday.

Bowling.

The series of league games was started last Tuesday night at Vorden's alleys, with much clatter and noise. Four teams were made up and there was material to spare. The Growers won three games from the Retailers and the Miscellaneous took three from the Wholesalers. Following are the scores:

PIPING.

I have a greenhouse 14x33, front wall 3 ft., side lights 1½ ft., rear wall 4½ ft., one end wall 3 ft., the rest glass. Walls double boarded with tar paper between. Shed on either end 10x12, with cellar below for boiler. Front bench 3 ft. wide and 3 ft. from ground. Middle bed solid. Rear bench 2½ ft. wide and 3 ft. from ground. On the rear or north side I have hotbed sash from gutter to ground for violets.

I wish to pipe this house as economically as possible to maintain a night temperature of 56 to 60 degrees when outside temperature is 15 to 20 degrees below zero, and wish to keep the violets at 40 degrees. I have a Wilks hot water boiler 42x42, with 3-inch openings. Would you advise the use of 3-inch boiler tubes instead of pipes, in view of their being much cheaper?

Mich.

C. C. W.

Assuming that he decides to use 3-inch boiler tubes, which are both efficient and cheap, I would suggest a plan of piping arranged about as shown by the accompanying drawing.

For the greenhouse, the arrangement of pipes being a coil of four (two flows and two returns) under each side and two end benches, these pipes reducing to one at the farthest end of the coil from the boiler and connecting to an open expansion tank. These coils should grade upward all the way from the boiler to the tank.

For the lean-to house, three pipes will be required, one (flow) being run along the high side and two (returns) on the low side of the house as shown, with an air vent placed at the end of the coil farthest from the boiler. These pipes all grade upwards from the boiler to the air vent connection. A valve may be placed on the flow into the lean-to house if it is desired to have an independent control of the circulation in this house.

The Fall Festival.

Our great fall festival with its flower parade, its trades' parade, its flower design show, and its trades' show is a thing of the past and was a grand success.

The day for the exhibition of floral designs was Thursday, September 26th. There were two classes, each having first, second and third prizes.

Class 1 called for lodge emblems, not less than five or more than seven pieces, and the first prize was captured by Hardesty & Co. with six finely gotten up designs. George & Allan won second prize in this class with their exhibit of six pieces.

Class 2 called for best single lodge emblem, and the first prize went to Hardesty & Co.; second prize to H. D. Edwards, of Newport, Ky.; third prize to George & Allan.

Trade and Other Notes.

Business during the past week has been the best in history for this time of the year. Everything seems to be working together to put life into trade. Even the weather, which is generally the most obstinate thing the florist has to deal with, has been all that could be desired, moderately warm days and cool nights putting life into stock, and flowers of all kinds are increasing in quan-

With the advent of cooler weather, trade has shown a tendency to gaze skyward. Two frosts last week helped matters along nicely in the way of disposing of cut flowers, especially those grown under glass. The assassination of President McKinley at Buffalo caused a severe depression in business during last week, casting a gloom over everybody. But this week opens more lively and prospects seem brighter for a good trade.

Florists in this vicinity are now getting outside stock housed in anticipation of cold weather and killing frosts. But today it seems like early spring, the temperature being 52 degrees outside at 5 o'clock this morning.

a brighter and healthier appearance since cool weather began; seem to stiffen up and foliage looks better. But there are still some roses which have that scorched, syringed-with-boiling-water appearance, somewhat on the order of the violet disease. Cannot tell what causes it.

Violets planted outside during the summer have passed away—crossed the dark river, so to speak. J. H. W.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

There has been considerable building and rebuilding of greenhouses here this year in spite of the high prices of material.

Mr. Fred La France has put up a new rose house 100 feet long, with a propagating house on the north side of it. Most all the other houses of his establishment are planted with carnations. He is trying many of the new kinds and has planted Marquis quite largely.

H. N. Hoffman has purchased the interest held by his late brother, Gen. E. M. Hoffman, in the firm of E. M. & H. N. Hoffman, and has disposed of the store business and retail cut flowers to Robert Leavitt, who has been their decorator and designer for a number of years. Mr. Hoffman continues in the local nursery business and will wholesale his cut flowers.

He has just completed two new carnation houses, each 100 by 23 feet, not separated by partition but having a cypress gutter supported on iron pipe posts. The walls are of grout (Portland cement and gravel mixed in proportion of one to eight and tamped into boxes). The roofs are of Henry W. Gibbons' cypress shaft bar construction, and the heating is hot water in wrought iron pipes with a Mercer boiler. His entire plant of 20,000 feet of glass is now heated by three Mercers, which have proved very satisfactory. He has planted very largely of the Mrs. Lawson carnation, and is trying several of the new ones.

Another new greenhouse is at "Strathmont," the estate of Hon. J. S. Fassett, and is of the latest iron construction and is intended for roses with a portion divided off for grapes. The gardener, John Rudy, will no longer be obliged to grow his famous chrysanthemums in the same house with his roses and everything else. John's mums are looking grand now, and he will make all the boys bustle wherever he consents to show them this fall.

The Horticultural Society exhibition for the school children brought out over 300 exhibits. The prizes, consisting of plants, books, tools, etc., were presented to them in the evening, and children, parents and teachers were well pleased.

The chrysanthemum show will be held as usual in November. H.

MADISON, N. J.—Thomas J. Slaughter, widely known for his large establishment here, devoted to the growing of roses, died Sept. 26, aged 77 years. He was a millionaire and was one of the early growers of roses on a large scale for the New York market.

He was born in Green River county, Kentucky, and moved to St. Louis in 1851 and became a traveling salesman for a grocery house. Ten years later he purchased the business. In 1863 he moved to New York and started the firm of Norton & Slaughter, which remained in business twenty-five years. He purchased his place here from Jay Gould in 1877.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—Eldred & Warburton is the name of a new firm here. W. H. Eldred is the confectioner who has for some time past handled cut flowers in connection with his other business, and C. C. Warburton is a florist, who was for some years with McCrea & Cole. The salesroom is at 15 Main st. West and the greenhouses at 293 Emmet st.

WE HAVE received a copy of the premium list of the forty-first annual St. Louis Fair, to be held in St. Louis Oct. 7 to 12, inclusive. Department O is devoted to horticulture and floriculture, and is under the superintendency of Mr. John D. Ayres. Prizes are offered for quite a variety of plants and arrangements of flowers. Entries are free, and competition is open to the world.

MARSHALL, Mo.—Henry A. Hensley, formerly of Springfield, Ill., has taken a position as manager for the Marshall Floral Co.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

President Herrington has announced committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports on dates as follows: Oct. 5, 12, 19, 26, Nov. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Boston, Mass.—A. H. Fewkes, chairman, care John Welsh, manager Boston Flower Market, Park street; E. A. Wood, J. H. Wheeler.

New York, N. Y.—E. Daillouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Co., 26th street and 6th avenue; James W. Withers, C. Albert Small.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1514 Chestnut street; Wm. K. Harris, John Westcott.

Chicago, Ill.—James S. Wilson, chairman, care J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue; Geo. Stollery, E. Weinboeber.

Cincinnati, O.—Albert Sunderbruch, chairman, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., 416 Walnut street; James Allen, E. G. Gillett.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

Anyone having a variety in season before or after dates fixed can have the same passed upon by specially notifying the chairman of committees.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.
Wyndmor, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

SPRINGFIELD, O.—Cards have been issued for the marriage of Ethlyn Blanche Aldrich, daughter of A. R. Aldrich, the florist, to William Currie. The wedding will take place Oct. 8.

AUSTIN, MINN.

The A. N. Kinsman Co. has just completed a new range of houses and dwelling. They are situated in the eastern part of the city on the banks of the Cedar River. Mr. Kinsman has purchased five acres well adapted for greenhouse purposes, and has arranged his new place so as to be pretty well sheltered from north and west winds.

His houses are planted with a general florist's stock, with roses and carnations, however, in the majority, and which look very promising for a good season's cut. There are 9,000 feet, built on modern lines with iron gutters, etc. The Kinsman company are the only florists in Austin, and besides enjoying a good local trade do considerable shipping to neighboring cities. C. C. P.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Trade is still keeping brisk, there being good demand for good stock of every kind. Roses are improving in quality every day. Carnations are looking grand. Mums are looking well, but from present appearances are going to be rather later than usual.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. are cutting some fine carnations from their earlier planted houses. They are also cutting some fine Meteors, Beauties and Kaisersins. Maids and Brides never looked better.

Ten dollars fine and $1.00 expenses was the award given John Calder for hitching his greenhouses onto the city water service without permission.

We are having ideal fall weather.

TORONTO.

Flowers were scarce and the quality very poor last week, and the retailers had very little stock in trade. The only outdoor flower of value now is the dahlia. Roses are improving this week and prospects are brighter all around. Prices here now rule somewhat higher on roses than in the United States, but our rates do not soar so much higher in winter and at holiday times as yours do.

During the past week there has been an amusing controversy over a proposition to expend $50 for a bouquet to be presented by the city to the Duchess of York on her arrival here. One would imagine that the amount involved was $5,000 instead of $50. It was eventually decided to have one of the public park employees make up a bunch to be composed of flowers gathered from the city's gardens and conservatories. One of our worthy aldermen humorously suggested that the Horticultural Gardens be presented instead of a bouquet, and we would further suggest that a bow and streamers of carpet beds be added, and that as a finishing touch the mayor and council be attached to the edges, forming a shower bouquet of the job lot. C. W.

WASHINGTON.

Business the past week has been a record breaker for the season. Stock is scarce, prices high and sales good. Prices for the past week have been: Brides, $4 to $6; Maids and Perles, $3 to $6; La France, $6 to $8; Beauties, $25 to $50. The demand for dahlias has been unusually large this season, with prices ranging from 50 cents to $3 per 100. Violets are showing up but are poor and go slow at $2 per 1,000. Carnations go well at $1.50 to $2.

On account of the cool weather people are returning from their vacations, which has increased the call for palms and ferns.

Stem rot has appeared in the carnation houses of the various establishments in sufficient quantity to make the boys feel somewhat uneasy.

F. H. KRAMER.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The last week of September was marked for its warm summer weather, high winds, clouds of dust and brisk opening of fall business. We have had no rain for weeks and everything is drying up, but as carnations are mostly all housed, except where building is going on, no damage is resulting.

Carnations inside are beginning to bloom but are short of meeting the active demand, particularly in shipping orders. Roses are in crop and equal to the demand. Asters are about over. The violet season was ushered in this week by the appearance of a few bunches picked by each of the numerous violet growers around town.

Henry Smith has just finished planting his new 170-foot house.

Henry Van Velden, Henry Smith's foreman, and the writer visited N. B. Stover, Grandville. He has torn down the old detached houses and rebuilt in one range. He expects to have them finished and in fine shape in a couple of weeks. His carnations and violets look fine. He will begin shipping this week. Recent visitors: Mrs. J. H. Deal, Owsoso, and Mrs. Emma Church, Charlotte. G. F. C.

A NATIONAL FLOWER.

In a communication to the Chicago Record-Herald Mr. A. B. Taylor, Fargo, N. D., suggests the adoption of the favorite flower of the late President McKinley—the carnation—as the national flower.

A PLAT of 65 acres of the battlefield of Kenesaw mountain has been purchased by the Kenesaw Memorial Association and is being transformed into a park. The association is composed of members of McCook's brigade, and it is attempting to induce the other brigades to buy the rest of the land and enlarge the park.

WAUSAUKEE, WIS.—A large tract of land has been conveyed to the village for park purposes. The larger part of it was a gift from the Bird & Wells Lumber Co.

HILLSDALE, MICH.—Wellington Hughes has his new greenhouses completed and the plants, etc., are now being removed to the new location.

PEORIA, ILL.—J. C. Murray is making fine displays of seeds at the various county fairs. His seed business is increasing rapidly.

This special offer is made to reduce our stock to a certain limit of space which we can devote to this plant, and will be withdrawn as soon as reduced to this limit. Without a doubt, the demand for this, the most important and valuable of all winter flowering plants, will this season again be far in excess of the supplies now in sight.

While all the Lorraine Begonias are difficult plants to handle during the spring months, we know of no other soft wooded plant which grows so freely at this season of the year, and with the most ordinary facilities you will have no difficulty in successfully growing now, and flowering it at a handsome margin of profit for the holidays.

To give best results, the larger sizes, above three-inch, must be shipped in pots.

OMAHA.

Trade has been fairly good during the past month. Flowers are now more plentiful, of better quality and bring a little better price.

The Nebraska Florists' Society held its annual meeting Sept. 26. The old officers were re-elected as follows: J. J. Hess, president; S. R. Faulkner, vice president; L. Henderson, secretary; S. B. Stewart, treasurer; G. Swoboda, Wm. Ellsworth and G. Sorenson, trustees.

Douglas County held its annual fair at Omaha, Sept. 14 to 21. Paul Floth, L. Henderson, E. C. Erling and Paul Paulson made fine plant exhibits. Paul Floth carried away most of the first premiums for plants; L. Henderson, the seconds for plants, and all the firsts for cut flowers and floral designs.

We had a heavy frost Sept. 18 which killed most of the outdoor stock.

There were not very many flowers sent from here to President McKinley's funeral on account of the distance, but there were many fine floral decorations seen in windows, the theaters, and in the churches at the memorial services.

Last Thursday night Omaha was visited by a heavy hail storm, which did some damage to the greenhouses of Faulkner, P. Floth, Arnold and some others.

The boys are still interested in bowling with a spirit to challenge Chicago or Milwaukee for a match game some time in the future. Following are the scores made at the alleys last Thursday evening:

	1.	2.	3.
P. E. Floth	166	136	140
J. J. Hess	126	148	163
S. R. Faulkner	129	140	132
L. Henderson	148	150	138
G. Swoboda	163	155	130

ST. PAUL.

After a couple of months' silence I think it is just and proper that somebody should report on what the boys of our capital city are doing and saying.

Well, all houses are filled now and every one feels relieved in this direction except our dear, big and open-hearted Henry Puvogel, who is putting up an entirely new range of carnation houses on the corner of Grand avenue and Oxford street, right in the swellest residence part of this city. Having had trouble in employing carpenters, which are almost impossible to hire, his arrangements got all upside down and simply set him one month behind time. His new houses are not glazed yet, but will be this week. The plan is laid out fine—greenhouses, boiler room, office, and residence, all in a very economical way, combined.

E. F. Lemke's new great, grand carnation house was finished long ago and every plant in it looks fine and is in splendid condition.

Haugen & Swanson built a new boiler house, much enlarged and improved the houses all around, and will continue to grow violets exclusively.

C. Bussjaeger almost turned his whole place upside down, and it looks much improved.

Our retail storekeepers are now getting in their palms and ferns for winter trade and are trying to beat each other in making attractive displays. Holm & Olson, who do a good business almost all the year around, put in a tremendous lot of big and small Bostons and other ferns, palms, etc.

Mrs. O. Hierskorn, the best and lovelly looking florist's wife in the twin cities, looks now still better, since her most careful husband sent her out on the lake for two months. I hope that every storekeeper's wife gets the same treatment, which is well deserved after a year's toiling in a lively flower store.

The L. L. May greenhouses, under the management of Frank Gustavson, look fine. Roses, carnations and mums—everything looks clean and healthy, just the way it ought to.

Seeger was coining money this summer out of roses he planted early; he commenced to cut soon and sold thousands of roses very readily all summer, the hot spell killing all annuals, such as sweet peas, etc., only too quickly.

About Christmas we shall report again—until then—Greetyling Yours, CHRIST, BUSSJAEGER.

BOSTON FERNS.

There is an advantage in potting up a batch of Boston fern runners now in 2½-inch pots. A few hundred will occupy little room and by spring they can be planted out in a bench of three inches of good open soil well enriched with rotted manure or bone meal, and if placed a fair distance apart will lay the foundation for your 4 to 6-inch pot plants, full of crowns and well rooted.

Such plants grown in good soil and kept going will make just the kind of plants you need for your trade, and are better than made-up plants or large lifted ones.

THADEN'S WIRE TENDRIL.

Adapted to horizontal wires as well as stakes for Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums, etc.

We claim that the tendril does not crowd the plant, but holds it firmly and with freedom. Does not mutilate the foliage. Harbors no insects. Makes the plant come to a straight stem. Admits of free circulation of air. Requires no skilled labor to place properly. Can be moved up or down the stakes. Easily put on and taken off, and are durable. Sample package of 100 prepared for 50 cents.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid.

Florists' Publishing Co., CANTON BUILDING, Chicago.

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopedia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

A Complete Reference Book for Commercial Florists

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Odds and Ends.

What we consider as the special duty of retailers the coming season is to do all in their power to make successes of the several flower shows to be held throughout the country. It is too sadly apparent that but a very small percentage of American floral exhibitions are successful financially or otherwise, because they are not supported and made at least artistic by the retail florists. It is only the few who are often classed as "cranks" that sacrifice much to keep floriculture thus before the public. To be sure exception in many cases may justly be taken against the system and manner of judging artistic work; this no doubt prevents many retailers from entering into shows, and no sane person can blame them. In our humble opinion only men of national reputation should be asked to pass upon the work displayed at the principal shows, and whilst a man may know what a good plant is, that man may be utterly incompetent to judge "made up" work.

But apart from the competition exhibitions, no matter how small or isolated the place, these shows afford the retailer splendid opportunities to advertise his business and here let us remark that no matter how prominent the man or his business, he needs to keep himself before the public as much as possible and he cannot do this in a more beneficial way to himself than showing them what he is capable of doing artistically.

We would in many senses appeal to the retailers to show a little more public spiritedness: don't permit flower shows to be discontinued because you cannot all get prizes. The average flower buyer, aye, your own customers, appreciate good work whether it wins or loses. A judge's decision may or may not help to defray your expenses, but it may not necessarily affect your trade. Exhibitions are failures because their artistic qualities are not of sufficient high standard to appeal to the general public. Sugar-loafed mounds of plants and regiments of bottled flowers are not attractive enough; there must be more novelty—more idealism displayed, and this is where the retailers can excel. If it were only to duplicate what you have made for the late president's funeral and label it so, or a set of bouquets, or table decoration, or a lesson in arranging plants, do something, for flower shows are of great value to the trade in general and every one at some time must be something above the common salesman. Show some heart and soul and contribute to the floral exhibition in your locality.

We have recently been asked by an extensive grower of bulbs as to the advisability of offering mixed tulips in pans and boxes next Easter. We are of opinion that pans or boxes of tulips or hyacinths containing two good colors will sell well providing they have quality also, and it will not be either wise or artistic to mix the colors in checkerboard fashion. Yellow and white, white and blue, pink and yellow, pink and white—well the combinations can be extended to all the varieties you may have, but they must be grouped. We think that baskets of mixed bulbs such as tulips, hyacinths, narcissus, valley, etc., will sell well in many places if they are put up nicely; the trouble is that they would have to be arranged when showing color. There are many people who would appreciate baskets or pans of mixed growing bulbous flowers and it needs variety to show off store stock. Don't go to excess in crepe paper —over, and there are reasons to justify them in being so.

If you want to do specially good work with chrysanthemums, you had better use the incurved types, but there is a class—the pompons—which are by far the most suitable for extra critical work. By pompons we don't mean the ruff-ruff puny things grown out of doors, but those grown under glass with as much care as other kinds. If you intend to decorate a table for a show try and get some of these flowers, and use very fine bronzed tips of Ampelopsis Veitchii or Japan maple—but we will leave these flowers for another time.

Speaking of exhibition work, though, reminds us that we should put up some small Rosa Wichuraiana and put them indoors to use as foliage later on. We venture to say that we could fix a table with hybrid Rosa Wichuraiana foliage and some small rose such as the Cherokee or Rambler, that would push your large roses and fancy greens and ribbons very hard. Put a few plants in pots anyhow, or get your grower to do it for you; they will be valuable to you trimmings, use some Porto Rican mats and inexpensive but good colored small baskets.

You will all soon be surrounded by an army of chrysanthemums. Some of the principal florists intend to handle just as few as they can, simply because they become very common stock. The street fakirs can in a while offer the same quality of flowers as you for half or one third the price. The best thing for any first class florist is to display and push the uncommon or extra high grade. Of course no florist can altogether ignore the chrysanthemum; it is a most valuable flower and will always be plentiful on the market, yet the majority of retailers are always glad to see their season for fine work, be it vase or basket or mantel.

Get posted on where you can get good pot grown ivy; you will soon need plenty of them. Small Araucaria excelsa are going to be pushed this winter, many growers are buying quantities of them. Now they will "go" at Christmas if put in crimson pots and tied with bow of ribbon. It should now be remembered by growers that there is a continuous demand during the winter for good rose geranium and lemon verberna foliage, so much so that many could make a specialty of their culture and make more money than they now do. The trouble is, as with everything else, there is an occasional glut or over anxiety to get rid of stock and crops are allowed to go out. Many a grower is now shipping rose geranium to the market that is too rough to use with even dahlias. Clean greenhouse grown stock is what is wanted and preparations should now be made to supply the certain demand from November to May.

It seems a great pity that we see so little of the finer varieties of cosmos in the east; they are beautiful flowers and quite a lot could be used could they be had. So far dahlias have been a failure this season in New York; growers seem to have but the poorest varieties hereabouts, at least Philadelphia is supplying New York with the best dahlias at present. There is a market here for good whites and cactus sorts.

If you can get any good pots of mignonette in during the winter they will sell; need not be the big cabbagey kinds, just the old sweet varieties that we can make up enticing mignonette baskets with. Jasminum gracillimum flowers will be fine with red roses. A spray in any box of flowers, or for finger bowls later on, and don't forget preciously upon it and be seared away from a more liberal or steady purchase.

Orchids can never be used or rated as common flowers; they are too beautifully erratic for that; they will not tolerate rough usage, and 'tis a pity to see them arrayed against gladiolus or dahlias. They would be more appreciated by the best classes were they kept a little steadier on the market. Crops cannot always be regulated, we know, but if you cannot get 25 cents wholesale for them keep them off the market.

Some very beautiful window displays are now being made with Cattleya labiata, and Oncidium varicosum, arranged in separate windows of course. Thorley had 500 cattleyas in his window one day last week, and other tip-top florists shoved most creditable creations in basket or other designs of them. We have just seen some pot-grown bushes of Crataegus pyracantha full of brilliant berries, and the thought occurred to us how useful they would be should they be got so at Christmas; they would need to be protected against birds, but they're pretty and might be worth going for.

Some growers are offering 4 and 5-inch pot stock of that hardest of all forms, Potamoium tabacum; it is nothing for temporary decorative purposes, but it is invaluable for "pocket work" in conservatories or in places where it is difficult to keep plants; it is fine for vase or window box work and you can afford to be well acquainted with it.

Keep your eye on where you can get plenty of nice small Cocos Weddelliana, crotons, Draenaena gracilis, kentias, Pandanus Veitchii, variegated cyperus, Draenaena Godseffiana, D. Sanderiana, Abutilons Savitzi and Souv. de Bonn and other graceful or high colored stock; you will need them for fern dishes or basket work. A day spent out in the nursery or among general plant growers is time well spent, providing you make notes of things, and if you don't always see what you want, give the grower some idea of what is likely to sell well. There are many cases where growers have lots of valuable stock that could be used to advantage were grower and retailer on closer visiting relations.

He is a foolish buyer who will place too much dependence on size of pot when buying plants; size of pot may be all very good when you want to fit basket or vase, but quality in plant comes before size of pot all the time. Put quite a few of your azaleas in the azalea pot this year; they are better to trim, and small size plants are going to be useful for many purposes. The future tendency in decorative work is a greater use of flowering plants, of which fine colored azaleas will form no little part.

If you happen to get a chance to do any decorating for some of the affairs to be tendered Sir Thomas Lipton there will be no harm in suggesting the use of shamrocks; you will find them offered in the classified ads. of THE REVIEW. We often read that section to get ideas; it is always most interesting.

CARNATION NOTES.

Snails.

Replying to the inquiry of W. S. C., who says snails are feeding on his carnation flowers, we have never found a better way of getting rid of snails than to catch them by hand and destroy them. They usually do their mischief at night and with the aid of a lantern there is no trouble in catching them. Have your fireman go through the carnation houses and catch them during these mild nights when not much steam is needed, and if he is faithful it will not take him long to rid the place of the pest. We do not like to use poisonous insecticides on plants that are in full crop, as more or less is sure to get onto and stick to the blooms when they are sent onto the market, and it might possibly in some way prove what some people say about poisonous insecticides being used by the florists and the great danger they think there is in bandling them. Such reports do our business a great deal of harm and we must be very careful to give no ground for them. Of course all open blooms would be picked before applying the insecticide, but while a crop is on there are always a lot of partially developed blooms which would catch a lot of it and retain it until they are marketed.

We know of nothing that snails are more fond of than they are of the young, it, Rhynchospermum jasmynioides is the next best thing, but its foliage is too clumsy and usually unclear.

If you can get a few pots of the best colored caladiums (they don't cost much, or you might hire them), you can make quite a showing with them in your window; they are very attractive when used in conjunction with fine ferns.

Just at present there seems to be an immense quantity of cattleya blooms on the market; some have been sold, we are told, for as low as $12 per 100—more's the pity if it is true. It would be better for the future of this class of flowers if a steady price were maintained on them; they should not be wholesaled for less than 25 cents, and they should never reach 75 cents. It seems bad policy to be compelled to charge your customer $1 or $1.25 for a cattleya one month and sell him a much finer cattleya the very next month for 50 cents; the supply and demand sort of excuse may go with some, but the regular buyer is apt to look sus-pectantly upon it and be seared away from a more liberal or steady purchase. Speaking of cutting up plants for funeral work reminds us that there is too much antipathy toward cutting up such as Cocos Weddelliana, phenix, etc., for use in funeral work. It is often, the case that you have defective plants around you that you could get value out of were you to use their leaves in large designs; often a leaf will add dollars to the value of a design where it isn't worth cents for ought else.

tender petals of a carnation bud, and no bait that we know of would lure them away while young carnation buds are to be had. Two things that they do hate, however, are salt and lime, and if we find them bothering a box of seedlings of one kind or another we sprinkle a layer of salt or lime around the box and no snail ever crosses it. Dusting lime over the plants might help to keep them off, and perhaps spraying with brine would help some, but we prefer catching them and giving them a good tight squeeze between the sole of our shoe and the ground.

Other Pests.

While we are on the subject let us have a word about keeping the carnation plants free from insects in general. Sometimes we have some trouble with sow bugs and for those we know of nothing better than sugar and paris green, a little of it dropped here and there on the edgeboard of the bench. Mix in enough paris green to color the sugar well, and mix thoroughly, leaving it stand several hours before using, so the sugar will absorb the poison. They feed mostly at night and bury themselves in the soil during the day, but you can easily see where they are the thickest by the way the lower foliage is eaten away. They seem to prefer the harder growth.

Thrip is a small fellow, but he can do you an immense amount of damage if he is allowed to get a foothold. We are never bothered by them until toward spring when the weather is warm. The first sign usually is a brown edge on the white blooms, and if he is not fought at once the blooms will come crippled and shriveled up without opening up right. Tobacco in various forms is the remedy, but it takes a lot of it to exterminate them, as they get way into the buds where no smoke or liquid can ever penetrate and you must depend on catching him outside. Fumigate and spray with liquid regularly for a week or two or until you know you are rid of them all.

Greenfly or aphid is such a common pest that every grower has one way or another of combating them. The commonest way, and while there are no blooms perhaps the cheapest way, is to burn tobacco stems and fill the house with smoke. This must not be done, however, when a crop is on, as it takes the color out of the blooms and the blooms will retain the burnt tobacco odor for a day or two afterward. There are many preparations on the market which are very effective and if used carefully they are moderate in price. The cheapest way we have found so far for those who can buy tobacco stems as cheaply as we can is to put about 6 to 8 barrels of stems to a 100x20 foot house, under the benches (on boards to keep them dry). Fumigate in the fall to get your plants clean and after that you will find that the stems will throw off enough nicotine to keep them free from greenfly, and thrips, too. Last year we found it necessary to fumigate not more than three times in any of the houses, and in some not once, from October 1 until the next June. An occasional turning over and a light sprinkle will keep the stems active.

Last winter I was visiting at a place that is famous for its carnations, and the grower told me of the trouble he had in keeping down aphid, and he showed me a bench that was alive with them at the time. It did not take more than a glance around to see the best way that any man could ask for to keep them down. The houses were built without partition wall between them and had walks next to the gutter and the hot water pipes were hung on the gutter posts, four or five on each side and about 3 inches apart. To fill between these pipes with tobacco stems would be an easy matter and the heat from the water pipes would send out enough vapor to keep any carnation free from aphid. The stems would likely dry out and need to be changed every month or six weeks on account of the heat, but that would not be much of a job.

Last winter during a long cold spell when the ground remained frozen we had some trouble with mice in our carnation houses. They would gnaw through the flower stems about two inches below the bloom and then eat out the seed pod, leaving the balance lay to show what they had done. We tried everything we could think of in the way of home-made rat poisons, but all in vain until we tried a preparation called "Stearn's Electric Paste." That seemed to be too much for them and in a few days we were rid of them.

CANDYTUFT.

I see in a recent issue of THE REVIEW that a correspondent, in reply to "Iris," says it will never pay to force candytuft. I take an entirely different view of it. I have been forcing candytuft for the last six years, and I consider it the best paying crop I raise.

There are, however, a great many varieties of candytuft on the market, and it is next to impossible to get any that is good for forcing. I have worked up my own strain, and find no trouble whatever in forcing it. I enclose a photo of one of my houses of candytuft, taken last May, and from which 800 bunches were cut for Memorial Day, and from which violets were picked up to April 6. Notwithstanding the cloudy weather we had, it was along and fit to cut ten days before Memorial Day.

I also enclose a photo of twenty-five spikes of my candytuft, which was awarded a certificate of merit by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in 1900. An idea of the size of it may be had when I state that it measured six feet from tip to tip. WILLIAM SIM, Cliftondale, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Acalyphas—Abutilons.

I hope you got everything lifted or propagated before the frost came, but in many parts of the country no frost has yet troubled the florist. There is one bedding plant we are going to discard, and that is Achyranthus. There are so many better things for an edging to a canna bed. The acalyphas are splendid, and a border this year which is magnificent round a large block of Tarrytown canna is Abutilon Savitzi. You can lift plants of this splendid abutilon, cut them back some and keep in a temperature of 50 until February; then give it more heat and begin to propagate. I find that if you don't want large plants of acalypha for decorating purposes you can lift the old plants from the beds (even if they are touched with frost, but not hurt) and just lay them in flats under the benches with their roots covered with moist earth. They will want no watering unless it is a dry house and will remain in this condition until February, when they can be brought up, cut back some and started growing. The old plants will make splendid stock for a sub-tropical bed and give you plenty of cuttings for young stock.

Cannas.

Everyone ought to know how to take care of canna roots but there is frequently a failure, and like many other things it is called "bad luck." But there is not much luck about gardening. When a hail storm comes and breaks all your glass that is bad luck, but when you allow your canna roots to rot because they are in the wrong place, that's not luck. For some years I have found the very best place for the cannas was beneath a carnation bench. Cut off the tops within a few inches above the ground, and if it's fine weather, no harm after you have shaken off the earth to let them remain out of doors in the sun for a couple of days, then remove them to the house, but don't put them on the earth or they will start growing again, which will spoil a lot of them. Place some old boards on the earth and on these place the roots. Another thing, look out for drip. There should be very little drip from a carnation bench until toward spring and then you have got the cannas out. If there is any place where the drip comes through remove the canna roots, for a continuous drip on them will rot them.

Alternantheras.

If you did not propagate alternanthera in the summer as I have frequently suggested during the month of August, you can lift a lot of the old plants now and plant them in flats as thick as you like. The principal thing about keeping alternanthera, especially the best of all, paronychioides major, is to keep them warm and dry. I don't mean absolutely dry, but on the dry side. The cooler the house the less water they want. You don't want them to grow, you just want them to exist during winter, or until next March, when they are torn to pieces and every portion of the plant will rot.

Azaleas.

The azaleas will soon arrive from Belgium. These are a very important plant now with the florist, not only at Easter but throughout the winter. There is a good demand for a well flowered azalea and for winter decorations they are largely used. Time was when we considered it about as cheap to throw away the unsold azaleas in the spring as to summer them over, but we are of a very different opinion now and for several years the kept over azaleas have been much our best plants, particularly the following Easter. Their care during the summer has often been written up. I will just say now that they should never be exposed to any frost. And remember that these azalea plants that you have kept over are not the ones to force. That may seem strange, but the freshly imported plants force much easier. The plants that you have summered over should be kept in a very cool house and will with little trouble come in at Easter in great perfection.

All dispatch should be used in getting your azaleas unpacked. You can reduce the size of the ball quite a little without doing the slightest harm to the plant, and to accommodate the hall of roots that they often have would need such a pot that the plant would look unsightly and over potted. The great majority of our plants should be in 6, 7 or 8-inch pots. As soon as you have chopped off what roots are necessary you should dip the ball a few minutes in a tub of water. This is most essential because if potted as they arrive all the watering you can give them will never penetrate to all the roots and I have seen hundreds die and the importer or dealer be blamed, but it was no fault of his; it was simply that the plants were drying to death. For a few days after being potted put them in a rather shady, cool house. In two weeks after potting select those you want for Christmas. Simon Mardner for a red; Verveaenea, the beautiful variegated; and the best of all for a forcing white is Deutsche Perle.

If you grow any of the acacias you will now be bringing them into the house and also the Bottle Brush plant. These want to be kept like the azaleas, very cool during winter.

Hydrangeas.

Don't be afraid of a little frost on your hydrangeas but keep them as much as possible away from the heavy rains. It is time they were ripening up. They will force all the better if they are given two or three weeks almost complete rest.

Crimson Ramblers.

The Crimson Rambler roses will do yet for a long time out of doors. The greatest danger now is that we may have a warm spell with much rain and in that case they are liable to break at the strongest eyes, so the plants are better now laid down. You want them to ripen their wood thoroughly. If you think they are too long without water it is not a great job to raise them up and give them one watering, but be sure and not let them get any warm rains, which we may have yet this fall. When most successful with these pot grown Ramblers we left them fully exposed until the middle of November and then by that time they were thoroughly ripe; then for a few weeks we covered them with glass. That was just to keep them from severe freezing.

I have not yet been successful in forcing Ramblers from field grown plants, but as others have I have nothing to say against that method. If you have them on your own place it is all right. The middle of November is plenty of time to lift them. They should be as little exposed to dryness and draught as possible. They must be lifted, potted immediately and the wood kept plump. Under these conditions you can have success, but when once dried out with me they have been useless, and that seems unavoidable with a railroad journey.

Carnations.

For fear some one else should forget to tell you, you ought now to put in a good batch of carnation cuttings at once. They will root easily with or without bottom heat, but a little bottom heat helps a good deal. If these plants are grown along in a cool, light house during winter, shifted from a two to a three and again to a four, and stopped once or twice, they will make fine plants to sell to your customers next May.

We find an increasing demand for these carnation plants. People are getting fond of their gardens, not so much for the display it makes as for the real love of flowers, and what can be better than carnations for them? If I were going to select half a dozen for this purpose I would put Mrs. Lawson as one of the very best, and the old variety William Scott; Crane for scarlet, although if you still grow Portia it is a magnificent variety out of doors. Evelina is one of the very best out of doors. Another good white would be Flora Hill. A great variety is not necessary and I don't know but what many other varieties are good for the purpose.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSE NOTES.

Watering and Ventilating.

A good material to place young stock plants on is coal ashes, passed through a half-inch screen, and spread on the bench to the depth of an inch. Worms do not like it and it is not so liable to shift with watering nor get so muddy as sand does.

Watering and ventilating now play an important part and the grower who becomes neglectful at this stage is laying up many troubles for himself in the future. Every individual plant ought to get its full complement of water. The rows nearest the edges of the bench dry out much sooner than the others, and will require a second or even a third going over before they are properly watered. This can only be determined by turning them out of the pot and examining the ball.

Ventilating ought to be strictly attended to. When the weather will permit a small crack kept on all night keeps the air sweet and healthy and gives the foliage a hardness that cannot otherwise be obtained; it also prevents moisture from condensing on the leaves. It is false economy to shut down tight to save a few loads of coal. In the morning the ventilation ought to be increased gradually as the day warms and reduced with the same care in the afternoon.

Mildew.

Any sudden change of temperature is detrimental to the rose, causing a check to the growth which makes them very susceptible to the attacks of disease and other pests, one of the first to show up under such conditions being mildew. This vegetable parasite (the germs of which are ever present in the house and ready to embrace the first favorable condition to germinate) appears in the form of a minute fungus, the filaments of which penetrate the pores of the leaves, interrupting respiration and robbing the plant of its juices; if not checked in its first stage it soon creates havoc with the foliage, ending in the ruin of the plant.

A dusting of flowers of sulphur is a good preventive; this is applied by blowing on with a bellows. The best instrument I have seen for this purpose is McMichael's Peerless blower; it distributes evenly and expeditiously. But the best preventive is to induce a good, vigorous growth by giving proper attention to ventilating and watering, stock of this quality in an ordinary tight house being nearly immune.

If once mildew has got a hold in a house dusting has little or no effect in checking its ravages. Fumes of sulphur properly applied will soon remedy the evil. Two parts of sulphur and one part air slacked lime mixed with water to the consistency of paint and put on the heating pipes at distances of a yard or so apart, and the house shut tight for an hour and a half during the coldest part of the night; this done once or twice a week will soon stop it. If steam is used it should not be put on the hottest pipes as the sulphur will fuse; the return pipe will generally raise all the fumes necessary.

Sulphur is sometimes mixed with linseed oil and painted on the pipes. This is a permanent and easier way of having fumes in the house, but this practice cannot be too strongly condemned. Apart from the disagreeable smell raised in the house the oil retains the sulphur too long, giving off fumes every time the pipes are heated, and as sulphur fumes are very destructive to plant life, no rose can long retain its health under such conditions.

Careful examination of stock every day being a most important duty, every young grower ought to cultivate the habit of close observation. It will save him many an hour's hard work and worry, as trouble detected in its earliest stages is so much easier to contend with. Red spider and green fly will be sure to put in an appearance and if not detected and exterminated will soon give lots of trouble.

RIBES.

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The grass bed now illustrated is the exhibit of Henry A. Dreer. It is of an irregular shape, about 100 feet long. For the past two months it has been extremely handsome and much admired. It seems to me that in large grounds you cannot very well overdo it with these beautiful grasses and if constantly before the eye they are a relief to our more showy or gaudy colored flowers. They are, of course, more suited as a background than in the center of a lawn.

This bed, as will be seen, is near a path which borders the canal. They were all planted this spring about the last week in May. The outer row is pennisetum. There are clumps of Eulalia japonica variegata, Eulalia japonica zebra, Eulalia gracillimum univata, Arundo donax and Arundo donax variegata, Erianthus ravennae (often called American Pampas grass). They were planted under the direction of Mr. J. D. Eisele, and the effect is most pleasing.

The aquatic basin here illustrated has been a success. It is situated immediately south of the Liberal Arts Building, a portion of which is seen in the background. The basin is 120 feet in diameter. In the photograph there was no chance to include all of it. Great difficulty was encountered up to the first of July. On four occasions we found the basin dry, and only saved the growing nymphs by the use of a wagon load of Florida moss, which was thrown over the plants, and the men were kept with a hose keeping the moss damp. The last time this occurred the nymphs had made considerable growth, and it was a sad setback for the plants. From early in July the basin has not leaked more than one inch in twenty-four hours, so very little water is needed to keep it up to the proper level.

Through July, August and September the temperature of the water was 70 to 73 degrees. There is three feet of water from the bottom to the overflow. The boxes containing the plants were made eight feet square and fifteen inches deep. This left nearly two feet of water above the surface of the soil. The nelumbiums are planted in brick basins, irregular ovals. That was done to keep the roots from spreading beyond their allotted bounds. Each box of nymphs contained from eight to twelve plants, according to the strength of their growth. We have often counted fifty open flowers on some of the groups. On account of so much cold water having to be put into the basin, the nelumbiums were very slow to flower, but during the month of September they flowered profusely.

Before I mention the varieties contained in this beautiful group I would like to say that had I been consulted I could have suggested a much cheaper way of making the lily basins. For instance, excavate but fifteen inches, and then where each group of nymphs were to be planted excavate another fifteen inches and fill in with the compost. In this case the material from the excavations was needed, but in most cases it would be a useless expense, and much more convenient to work amongst than having such a depth of water.

Although as a boy I had considerable experience with the Victoria regia, many years elapsed without any experience with any aquatic plants, and I obeyed the instructions of that king of aquatics and author of the water garden, William Tricker, manager of this department for Henry A. Dreer. The whole exhibit was carried out under his instructions and planting plan furnished by him. We believe could we have started out in the middle of May, or even the first of June, with a full tank of water and little need of any large amount of cold water to keep it full, the success would have been much greater. As it is, I can say on the highest authority that it is the choicest and most varied collection of nymphs ever brought together. As will be noticed by the names, many of them are Mr. Tricker's own American hybrids:

THE HANDLING OF CUT FLOWERS AS RECEIVED FROM THE GROWER.

BY WALTER S. HEPBURN.

(Read before the Chicago Florists' Club, Oct. 3.)

Cut Flowers: Embracing under this head, as this term does to one in the trade, everything from the daintiest orchid down through the best to the coarsest of garden and wild flowers, including everything in "greens" from adiantum to wild smlax: The subject of proper handling becomes complex as well as important.

It is not necessary for me to go into the question of the proper procedure, i. e., the detail of handling stock. As I take it that point is not the vital one just now. I could only tell you of some of my methods and they might differ widely from those of others, who are probably just as successful.

For every variety of flower sent to market we undoubtedly have a counter-part in a separate species of "grower." The average grower is too strong to pack flowers, besides he is too busy, any time he has to spare can be better employed in figuring up how much he ought to get for them. As a result it is no use to attempt to lay down any cast-iron rules for the treatment of stock when received, as no two lots of the same sort of flowers, grown under the same conditions, cut, packed and shipped at or about the same time, ever reached the sales counters in a uniform state.

We have to take them as they come and make the best of them. Sort, arrange; by handling raise the grade to the highest point possible and display to best advantage. Selling—well that is not under consideration at present—it is no trick to sell. Where the money comes in though is knowing when not to sell. The first man to get this one thing down right is the one who will be first, hands down, with no second.

In a wholesale house the supposedly principal object in the handling of cut flowers is to present the stock to the buyer in such a state as will realize the greatest amount of money for it when sold. This is true in a sense only. To follow this principle throughout would be to have to depend in a short time on a strictly transient trade. In nothing are appearances more deceitful than in flowers. No one knows their true condition unless he knows their full history.

Buyers are, roughly speaking, divided into two classes: the local and the out-of-town. For the out-of-town buyer, the one who does not see the stock before buying, but who relies entirely upon the ability and honesty of purpose of the wholesaler, the stock must be cared for as will best preserve its beauty, fragrance if any, and keeping qualities. For the local (the one who will help you open a consignment and then ask you, "Are they fresh?") the stock has to be offered in condition to suit the buyer. There was a time when the local buyer got better stock as a rule, than he does today. That was when he placed his order more often in advance and relied more on the word of the dealer.

It has been proven over and over again in all lines of mercantile business, that the merchant who attempts to sell the lines and qualities he thinks his customers ought to buy is quickly distanced by his competitor who offers what they want and as they want it. The theory, or principle, is applied to the handling of cut flowers, but don't forget: It is only where diamond cuts diamond, it is never so applied when it is up to you to furnish an agreed article. Suppose a buyer comes in daily and wants a hundred Mails and to be sure that they are fresh the only evidence he needs is that they should be out of water, would you if possible, keep some out waiting for him, or have them out if already in—if you saw him coming—or would you ask him to sit down until you were not busy so that you could point out to him the benefits of an early morning drink, to flowers as well as to—horses? What would you do? I rather think that after a few trials at argument, if necessary, you would get down early mornings and have a bunch wrapped up with a hot water bottle all ready and waiting if you couldn't get dry stemmed stock any other way—I would.

Now this buyer is not altogether wrong either. His idea is good. I have just made the statement that no one knows the quality of stock unless he knows its whole history. That is the keynote of this buyer's actions. He wants fresh stock even if wilted and is willing to do his own doctoring. The only trouble is he carries it too far and overdoes it. So it goes. Buyers must have stock presented to them as they want it—and they get it. A friend of mine would take his grocer's word on the fresh egg question, so he goes down town, pays a fancy price for eggs, each with a date mark stamped on the shell. I happen to know that the particular dealer he patronizes only pays thirty-five cents for a stamp and that it lasts a long while. Now whose fault is it? Both are satisfied. Coming back to flowers again, it was explained to me that I was asked to tell for the benefit of the local retailer something of how flowers are handled in a commission house, not how they should be.

The amount of stock properly handled in each house varies with the nature and extent of its business. Every house handles a part of its receipts, the proportion varying in each, according to approved methods, and a part suffers—but in reality not at a loss to the grower, the loss is the buyer's, but it's his own money he is spending.

As to a remedy? It is a question to my mind whether it can ever be remedied in whole. It is a tendency of the times to cheapen the cost of everything. Hammer down the buying price, hammer it down, let quality go but get the price down. Get something for nothing if possible. One and all, each and every-one, straining and striving by hook and by crook if necessary to get more than they are paying for. You are going to get what you pay for if you are lucky, and no more. It costs something to grow good stock, it costs something to handle it rightly. Where the retailer suffers he can remedy it himself, either alone or in combination with others.

Let the local retailer place himself more on the footing of the outside buyer. Depend on the salesman and the firm more. Put them on honor and don't trust quite so much to yourself. If disappointed try elsewhere. It wouldn't take long until most wholesalers would see the handwriting on the wall and would take steps toward seeing that all stock without exception was treated as it should be.

When the retailers of this town get over the notion that they have to go through a formula like this every time before they buy: "When did these come on?" "How long have you had them in water?" "Haven't you any fresher stock?" or "I don't want any," or "Put them back; you've had these for three days at least. I wouldn't take that stale stuff for a gift." When they get over this, I say, they will have made the first step toward the improvement in stock as it comes to them. It ought to be enough to ask for a certain thing to be of a certain quality at a certain price to be agreed on. Then take the statement that it is so. If after disappointments not to be laid to unavoidable mistakes you find that you cannot rely on that house or salesman, you have relief in your own hands: you will find others anxious to supply you, and you won't have to get a new set of wholesalers either.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

We are still convalescing! The foundations for a good winter are being laid deep and firm and wide.

Roses have become more plentiful with same prices on similar grades but another larger grade added to sell for more money, prices now running all the way from $1 to 88 per 100 on pink and on white and ranging from $4 to $25 per 100 on red ones, consisting of Beauties, Metecars and Liberties. Yellow ones are now represented better than usual with an increased demand, although irregular, as usual. I never found anyone who could explain why so fine a rose as the Perle could exist and attract so little attention. There are two or three new roses struggling for a rating also.

Pinks are not yet plentiful, but the demand is supplied and the average quality is rapidly improving. Two cents is about the limit yet. Asters are practically past history and the chrysanthemums are a page of the future. Fine white flowers are plentiful and green material is more so. Single violets are increasing in size and volume and a few doubles have arrived. Fifty cents is now the figure.

The retail system of the city proper starts off much as it was left last spring. There is a rearrangement of things at G. A. Severy & Co.'s place, and a slip of a new store has been planted at Copley Square which has not yet had time to get rooted. It will make a good stopping off place for salesmen going from Houghton & Clark's down to Galvin's Back Bay establishment where the big changes and additions spoken of a week or so ago are getting well along.

All the wholesale places are well and hearty with no special change except in the proprietorship of the New England Cut Flower Co. on Ordway place, where Mr. Lawrence Cotter's interest has been purchased by "Jaak" Minton, well known to the trade through his long connection with the establishment of G. A. Sutherland and other places. The new member of the firm will give it his full attention and prospects are, of course, unlimited. We must all wish them luck and then help them to get it. It is not yet known which of the little men is the head of the firm, but think what a disturbance will occur in the featherweight ring if it ever comes to Marquis of Queensbury rules to find out!! The "Judge's" jury experience of last spring will, of course, keep them on the correct legal side of everything, and his position as assistant registrar of voters gives him a pull in his ward.

The Banquet.

The Co-operative market, having thoroughly fortified its position as a commercial factor, now enters the social arena and throws down the gauntlet in the form of a magnificent banquet to the stall holders, the success of which must have surprised the most sanguine. Practically everyone was there and the utmost good fellowship prevailed. As in the great fight off Santiago, there was glory enough for all hands and to spare, and I do not expect a disgusting and disgraceful fight over the appointment of honors in this case.

Competing admirals (or admirables) here were President Stickel, unapproachable as a presiding officer; F. B. Mathieson, as off-hand speaker, essayist and soloist; W. H. Elliott, on deliberate, clear cut utterances; W. H. Knapp, ladies' champion, who won the only vote of thanks extended, treatise on profanity; James T. Carroll, auctioneer to the corporation, galling gun orator; and F. W. Clark, hospital department, who gave a fine account of the pleasure given hospitals by receipt of flowers. There were several more "men behind the guns" who were bullseye marksmen every time, and I was the booby prize myself, mouthpiece for the Review, and as Daniel Webster said about the famous chase of the "America" around the Isle of Wight, "There was no second!" (Rise here and give three cheers for the "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean!") The whole plan and its continuance annually was enthusiastically applauded and the sample of five ladies present was so well liked that it was generally voted to bring out the full force hereafter, with an implied vote of sympathy for one poor man who dimly foretold what he would get for going home and confessing that he supped with the five present this time. As a table decoration nothing beats the "American Beauty" and the great original is the best kind.

Imported talent, and also imported drinks, were present, and both were of the best brand, but I would vote to dispense with the latter in future. We must curtail free speech to prevent anarchy and free drinks for the same reason, judging by socialistic tendencies evinced in one very small corner of the room. "America" and "Auld Lang Syne" were rendered, after which an impromptu concert proved the presence of a large number of excellent voices, which must be tuned in unison for the future. J. S. MANTER.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The fall season for outdoor sports which begins with the international cricket matches and ends with the Thanksgiving Day football game, is now in full swing and business has improved in consequence. These games are by no means floral festivals, but they bring people together again and small entertainments and gifts are the result.

Nearly everything on the list is selling well excepting tea roses, the poorer grades of these being very hard to sell. White cosmos is in active demand; plenty of colored cosmos about but very little white. Single violets are improving in quality and sell fairly well.

P. M. DeWitt, of Croysden, sent in the first dozen chrysanthemums last Saturday to S. S. Penneck; they now ornament the window of Penneck Brothers. The price was $3.00, color white, varieties mixed, apparently including Madame Bergman, H. H. Battles will be cutting chrysanthemums from his new place at Newtown Square this week. John Kuhn, of Olney, will also be cutting this week; the variety is Yellow Monarch.

Various Items.

Myers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, have turned almost their entire place into a Beauty growing plant. The houses appear to have been planted a little later than last season, the firm believing that early Beauties do not pay well and are very subject to spot. Their plants are all in clean, healthy condition and growing rapidly. They have been cutting from some of the houses for a month past taking only the strongest shoots.

Low benches with walks around the outside of the house are liked here. There are, however, still a couple of side benches. These are planted in Sunrise, which present a beautiful sight, the bright green of the older foliage contrasting effectively with the rich red of the young shoots. The flowers resemble somewhat a blushing Sunset. It appears to be an ideal side table variety. The firm are very enthusiastic over its future prospects.

Walter P. Stokes, of Johnson & Stokes, has 16,000 feet of glass and several acres of cultivated ground adjoining his residence at Moorestown, N. J. The houses are devoted chiefly to palms and ferns. Kentia Behoveana and Ficus elastica, both imported, abound in various sizes. There are many Boston ferns in good condition, also small ferns for ferneries of the hardier varieties, chiefly peris; they are in seed boxes and 2 and 3-inch pots. Adiantum cucumatum planted out on side tables is in thrifty condition. Many of the palms and rubbers, as well as begonias, are plunged in frames outside. One house each is devoted to roses and to carnations.

About an acre outside is planted in scarlet sage of several varieties now in full glory. Cannas, too, are numerous; of the best known sorts Mme. Crozy, Florence Vaughan and Queen Charlotte; among other less known varieties were Betsy Stokes, J. C. Schmidt, President Carnot, Mlle. Brett, and Baron de Poille. There was a pretty collection of hardy perennials, among them a double star variety, Dianthus stellas. Violets, asters, daisies, chrysanthemums, hydrangeas, and many other popular plants are cultivated in quantity.

J. E. and H. F. Mergenthaler, of East Washington Lane, Germantown, have added five houses this summer, doubling their plant. Beauties, Brides, Maids and Kaiserins comprise their stock, all planted out for cut flowers. The houses are light and substantially built. When everything is finished the place will be a very complete one.

Louis Coche, violet specialist, is bringing in single violets. He also has two houses of carnations this season.

Charles Kienle, for fifteen years with Charles Fox, will go into business with his brother Rupert, 17th street above Chestnut, on October 15.

Correction.

In last week's account of John Burton's place it was incorrectly stated that La France was grown. It should have been Safrano. Also the patent valves were for steam, and not air valves.

Piping.

The points of general interest brought out in C. J. Rainear's address last week were: That cast iron pipe is sometimes sold to florists at 25 per cent over market price; that the quality of cast iron pipe is affected by its color; that poor pipe wastes coal through friction; that 10 cents a pound or 6 and 3-5 cents a foot is a reasonable price for 1 1/2-inch wrought iron pipe; that good steel pipe is equal to iron and cannot readily be distinguished from it.

PHIL.

BUFFALO.

Various Items.

Last week we had a very slight frost and again last night, or rather the morning of the 7th, a much harder one. But as I have often noticed when plants are gradually accustomed to it they will stand more than they will when a hard frost comes suddenly and it is remarkable what little harm has been done to the general appearance. Yet it has about settled outside flowers and now we will have to fall back on the production of our houses. Perhaps it is only imagination, but it seems to me that these flowers from under glass are altogether superior to those produced outside, however choice they may be.

Business has been remarkably good of late and well distributed. Roses are coming in in good quantity and a few are of good quality, but for every good Bride or Bridesmaid that comes to town there are fourteen very poor flowers. There are some fine carnations on the market. Several of the new varieties are giving us the best flowers. Those who grumble about Lawson being so short stemmed can hardly find fault this fall as flowers of high quality can be had. Ethel Crocker seems a magnificent early fall flower and Prosperity gives us the longest stem and the best of bloom. At this time of the year it will pass for white.

While speaking to a friend yesterday about his present business and although not on the main street where the Pan-American would be so likely to affect him, he said that his business of July, August and September has been at least double what it was last year and I believe that has been the case with all of us, and that is all the harm the Pan-American has done us.

Last week was nomination for our local officers who are to run the machinery of our local government; far more important to our tax payers than the question of high tariff or free trade, free silver or gold standard or any other national question. Municipal government is purely business and as much as possible should be hited out of party. We don't ask a man who is to run our business whether he is a republican or democrat and why should we care what the man is who is going to take care of our streets? Thank all things above and below that every day the independent or thinking vote is growing larger and larger. Yet there are wards of our city where a yellow dog would be elected if nominated because they are so strongly partisan one way or the other. You will say "We're all right; look at our beautiful city. What if taxes are high, business is good." Yes, we get along. But not with the help of our rotten political organization, but in spite of them.

These few remarks are preliminary to saying that members of our craft are dabbling or about to dabble in politics.

S. A. Anderson has a small bug in his bonnet which will, if not killed, evolve into a full sized butterfly two years hence. Our popular commissioner man, Billy Kasting, aspired to be comptroller of this great city, but it was not to be, and now we hope that William will subside into the cares of his large business and drop out of the gang. Now we think the average florist has fully as much intelligence and honesty as is to be found in any other trade or profession and we all ought to help nominate the best man for our ward and city and state legislature and he that is indifferent and does not attend the caucus is not doing his duty as a citizen and can find no fault if hoodlums are nominated. But for heaven's sake let us elect to our offices, and above all to our board of aldermen, the very best men that can be selected. They should be men who have been successful in business, with an abundant competency, who will give their time and even their money to help good municipal government. It should and will some day be a great honor to be an alderman of a great ward in a great city and there are any amount of splendid men willing to serve if the taxpayers will ask them. At present how horribly different it is. But I have great hopes of the future. Party organizations are for bringing spoils to the party and every soul knows it.

Pan-American Exposition.

The frosts have much marred the beauty of the grounds but scarcely anything is sufficiently hurt to need its removal. J. Fay Kennell keeps up his wonderful show of gladioli. His seedling "1900" is a wonder for lasting. A table of orchids consisting of about thirty plants of Cattleya labiata has attracted a great deal of attention in the north conservatory. They are remarkably large flowers. They were grown at the establishment of W. S. at Cold Springs who has in his employ William Hewson, an orchid grower of the first water who, as I have had occasion to remark before, handles an orchid like some men handle geraniums. Usually speaking orchid growers have to put on their glasses, look at a plant fifteen minutes and turn it round a number of times. There is none of that nonsense about Mr. Hewson's treatment of a cattleya, or any other orchid.

Mr. H. F. Burt has brought another magnificent display of dahlias. They include about 300 show flowers all named and 400 of the cactus type, many of which are also named. Mr. Burt's second shipment much exceeded in quality his first, and for that he has to thank a copious rain a few days before the flowers were cut. I think it would be instructive and interesting to your readers if I were to give you what Mr. Burt considers two dozen of the best show varieties and two dozen of the best cactus varieties for the commercial man, and here they are:

Cactus Varieties: Night, dark maroon; Uncle Tom, maroon, more closely quilled than Night; Stella, bright scarlet; Mrs. Charles Turner, clear yellow (one of the best of all); Mrs. A. Pearl, creamy white; Miss Webster, pure white; Countess of Lonsdale, salmon; Capstan, brick red; Beatrice, rose; Radiance, orange shading to red at tip; Keyes' White, a very fine white; Mrs. Dickson, rose pink tinted with yellow; Strahlenkroze, deep crimson, exquisite orange; Lavenstock Beauty, tinted salmon; J. F. Barber, center yellow, outer petals orange red; Madame Vanderdael, center white, outer petals soft pink (very decorative); Standard Bearer, scarlet; Britannia, salmon; Eclair, orange scarlet; King of Siam, shading from purple to maroon; Mary Service, shades of salmon and pink; William Jowett, rich scarlet with yellow center; Maurice S. Welch, a delicate soft yellow.

All the above can be depended on as most beautiful flowers as well as good growers. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The quality of roses and carnations is improving rapidly and the supply is equal to last week if not greater on the average. Demand holds up well, especially from out of town. From last Saturday to Monday trade was remarkably good. Tuesday it slackened some, but Tuesday is generally a light day.

Quotations are practically the same as last week, namely, $3 to $5 on roses with a few extra fancy going as high as $6. But $3 to $4 is nearer the average on good stock and poor short stuff is still cleaned up at as low as $1. Good carnations range from $1 to $1.50, with a very few extra fancy Bradts, Americas, Cranes, etc., reaching the $2 mark, while the poor shorts are cleaned up at 60 to 75 cents.

Beauties are improving materially in quality and though there is no change in quotations there are more of the better grades to be had.

Good violets are beginning to arrive in quotable quantities and the best go well. The top grade sell at $1 to $1.25, while inferior stock brings 60 to 75 cents.

Last Tuesday Kennicott Bros. Co. received 250 Harrislii Bibles from Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, that were remarkably good for this date. They sold at $2 a dozen. How was it done, Bro. Crabb?

Chrysanthemums are beginning to come in battalions and the regiments are not far away. Fitzwygram is the variety now most in evidence and the flowers go well at $2 to $2.50 a dozen. Poehmann Bros. cut a thousand good blooms on Monday, all of which sold at $2 a dozen. Frank Garland has 25,000 to 30,000 mums coming and is now cutting in fair quantity.

Valley is scarce and there is practically no Asparagus plumosus. There is plenty of Sprengeri but it is pale in color and unsatisfactory, being evidently the growth made in hot weather. Asters are practically finished and are no longer a factor.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a few fine Prosperity carnations that readily bring $3. He is also cutting some Chateaux and Gates that bring $6. He is much encouraged about Liberty which promises to fully redeem itself this season.

E. H. Hunt is receiving some very fine cattleyas and they are in good demand.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club last Friday evening a paper on the treatment of cut flowers as received from the grower was read by Walter S. Heffron. It appears elsewhere in this issue.

In the discussion that followed President McAdams said it had seemed to him that the quality of the beauties this year is not up to that of previous years. It was suggested that the numerous and violent changes in the weather were probably responsible. Mr. Anderson, grower for Sinner Bros., said that in a house of Brides and Maids in which the plants were of equal size and with equal advantages the Brides had made much the best growth and produced superior flowers. Golden Gate had also averaged very good and he was of opinion that this variety could better stand extremes of temperature than others.

As regards the handling of flowers by the grower the importance of having the cut flowers in water for at least twelve hours before shipment was repeatedly emphasized. Referring to captions Mr. Hartshorne said the longer the shipment the longer the flowers should be in water before. If for a one day journey twelve hours in water first would answer but for a two day journey twenty-four hours in water first was none too much.

Mr. Hartshorne had on display for the Chicago Carnation Co. a vase of blooms of his new carnation, Mrs. Higinbotham, the color of Daybreak at its best and of Flora Hill form and very fragrant. It is a very attractive flower and Mr. H. reports the plant to be a phenomenally free and continuous bloomer. There is certainly a place for it. The variety had already been certificated by the club so no further action was taken.

Mr. Geo. W. Wienhoeber, son of Mr. E. Wienhoeber, was elected to membership.

At the next meeting, to be held Oct. 18, the annual election will take place and Mr. Edgar Sanders will read a paper entitled "Our Pastimes, by a Young Sport." It will undoubtedly be decidedly gay.

Various Items.

Prof. C. S. Sargent, of Boston, visited Mr. W. C. Egan at Highland Park last week. Prof. Sargent's western trip is for the purpose of studying the law-thorns.

McCollar & Winterson continue to do a record-breaking business in supplies.

Jos. Fleischman, of New York, is in town, to be present at the opening of his store in this city next Saturday.

Ed. Bentley is again at the store of Bentley & Co. after an absence of six months in New Castle, Ind.

Mrs. F. Hurd will open a store in the Stock Exchange building, on the Washington street side, next Saturday. Mr. Thos. P. McCormick will be in charge.

John Bohan has returned from Salt Lake City.

Among recent visitors were Fred Heintz,

Terre Haute, Ind., and Mr. Fnech, Jr., Saginaw, Mich.

Bowling.

In the second series of league games played last Tuesday evening the Wholesalers won two from the Retailers while the latter took one from the former. The Miscellaneous won two from the Growers and the Growers took the odd one from the mixed aggregation. Following are the scores:

Through Charles Balluff, Mr. Henry McCall, city manager of the New Home Sewing Machine Co., offers one of his best machines (value $2.00) as a prize to be won by the man making the best average during the season of games, the winner to have played in not less than thirty games during the series. There promises to be a warm competition for this prize.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The general tone and prospect of business is much brighter than at corresponding time of last week. Prices for many grades of flowers, particularly choice roses and carnations, have advanced. Orchids are very plentiful and remain at a low mark. White chrysanthemums are being sought after but very few are coming in; other colors, particularly washy pink or magentas, seldom leave the florists' window; $4.00 and $5.00 per dozen are being asked for them, which seems a very big price.

Market quotations are now as follows: Beauties; specials, $4 a doz.; fancy, $20 to $25 per 100; extra, $15 to $20; firsts, $8 to $12; seconds, $3 to $6.

Meteors; special, $10 to $12; fancy, $8 to $10; extra, $6 to $8; firsts, $4 to $5; seconds, $2.

Brides and Maids; extra, $6; firsts, $3; seconds, 50 cents to $1.

Victorias; special, $1; fancy, $8; extra, $6; firsts, $3; seconds, $1.

Carnots; fancy, $8; extra, $6; firsts, $3; seconds, $1.

Violets, 30 to 75 cents. Cattleyas, $8 to $12. Dendrobium formosum giganteum $25. Chrysanthemums, $2 to $3 per dozen.

Various Notes.

No serious frost is reported yet, and out door flowers, especially dahlias, are fairly good; there is quite a demand for cactus dahlias; many more could be sold.

Plant business is improving; growers report a very encouraging state of affairs.

J. H. Small & Sons have the decorations for the Rockefeller wedding at Providence, R. I., and several artists have gone on to execute the order; some innovations are to be used in these decorations which will be well worth seeing.

Small & Sons' store in the Waldorf-Astoria, is one of the prettiest little florists' stores in the country; visiting florists should see it. The cool room for keeping flowers is regulated by cold air pipes; no ice is used in this store, and so far this system is very successful and seems to point to the future way of keeping flowers; the box is a gem.

The regular meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held on Monday night next, and as this will be the last general meeting before the show at Madison Square Garden, a full attendance is urged. Manager Plumb is working hard to have this show a record breaking success and he should have the assistance of every florist hereabouts to make it doubly so. The prizes offered are very generous and should bring out all the choicest stock in this section, but most important is to get all to exhibit something.

Bowling.

The bowlers will meet in the afternoon next Monday. The first two scores last night were:

Lentz.....	184	140	Hafner.....	133	152
Van Hoesen.....	145	149	Elliott.....	115

We left the boys on the alleys attempting to break the record. Capt. Lang is determined to have a team able to meet all comers.

There was heaps of fun on the 26th street alleys Saturday night. The new club met and formed two sides:

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held last Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock with President Meinhardt and all the other officers in their chairs. Fifteen were present, including Mr. Flint Kennicott of Chicago, who was a visitor.

The exhibition committee reported progress and that the members were hard at work on the regular prize list which will be out the latter part of the present month.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers and Mr. Rolst were elected to membership by a full vote. New applications were read from P. T. Barnes of Shaw's Garden and A. G. Greiner, a cacti grower.

The chairman appointed Frank M. Ellis to collect the 20 per cent of the World's Fair subscription, which must be paid on or before the date of the next regular meeting of the club.

Mr. Kennicott of Chicago, spoke about the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893 and told that a great help it was to the florists of that city and that we should push it hard as all Chicago was with us in this great undertaking. Mr. K. also told of his pleasant visits to St. Louis in his younger days, some thirty years ago.

Mr. Max Herzog, who has just returned from a trip abroad, gave us a very interesting talk as to what he saw while away. He brought back with him a violet stone and a new asparagus which he will exhibit at the coming show.

The next meeting of the club will take place a week earlier owing to the fact that show week comes the same week of the regular meeting. The meeting will take place Thursday, November 7, at 3 o'clock. Mr. Emil Schray will read an essay at this meeting.

After the meeting the members adjourned to the Hotel Moser where a fine spread had been prepared at Secretary Schray's expense and which was heartily enjoyed by all.

The Market.

Trade in the cut flower line has been fair the past week and shows continual signs of improvement. The weather has become very cool and we have had a few frosty nights. The rose crop shortened up considerably, still plenty come in for the demand.

There is always an extra call for choice stock, especially Beauties, the week the great Veiled Prophet's ball takes place and no doubt prices will go up somewhat on all kinds of stock. Meteors, Maids, Kaiserins and Brides brought as high as $5 and $6 per 100 the past week and from that down to $2; Perles and Woottons sold at about 3 and 4 cents for the best.

Carnations are coming in fine and many of our home-growers are sending in first class blooms of Daybreak, Flora Hill and Scott which sell well at from $1.50 to $2 per 100; the smaller ones go at $1.

A few violets are seen, but are small and pale, the weather being too dry for them. Another few weeks will see them in better shape and plenty in the market.

A few blooms of the early varieties of chrysanthemums are coming in but they are small and there is very little sale for them. Some fine cosmos is coming in but is still somewhat scarce at 50 cents per 100. Valley and tuberosa stalks sold well the past week. Smilax is at $12.50. Maidenhair ferns and asparagus have a good demand.

Notes.

Mr. Flint Kennicott of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, spent last Thursday with us, calling on the trade and adding new friends to his already long list.

Joe Rolker of New York, was again with us. Joe is likely to drop in on us any old time looking for orders in the supply line.

The St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association opened its Forty-first Annual Fair today (Monday, October 7) and is offering the usual amount of premiums for plants, cut flowers and designs. Quite a number of local florists have entered and will compete for the prizes. A full list will appear in the next issue of the REVIEW.

The Eden Floral Co., has advertised its place for sale and will retire from business, having made enough money off the unfortunate girls they roped in to educate in the business. Several of the young ladies say that they will horse-whip this so-called Mr. Eden some night when he is on his way home. So you may look for something sensational before the week is out.

Mr. and Mrs. Carew Sanders returned last Saturday from their summer trip through the east, coming home by the way of Buffalo and taking in all the sights of the Pan-American. Both are in the best of health.

Mr. C. C. Sanders will have a fine lot of show chrysanthemum plants this year, and in cut blooms of all kinds he will be in it with the best of them. His rose and carnation houses are also in fine shape for the coming season.

J. F. Wilcox, our friend from Council Bluffs, Iowa, is sending a fine lot of Beauties, Maids, Brides and Meteors to this market, which find ready sale at all times.

Bowling.

The Florists in their opening match with the strong Westerns came out victorious, winning all three games and leading at the end with 299 pins. The boys felt very much encouraged over their victory. John Kunz, the high man, was in his Detroit form, having got rid of his sore finger, and barring his first game certainly rolled well. Your correspondent was right in it himself, missing only three spares in the three games; the last game gave him four splits. Kuehn also rolled well and will do better. Ellison and Sturtz were worked to death the night before, with lots of funeral work, to which Sturtz attributed their poor rolling. But as they are two of our best they will surely do better in the next match, which will be with the Libertys on next Friday night, October 11, at 8:15 o'clock at the Cass avenue alleys. All florists are invited to be present. The scores of Tuesday's match are as follows:

CLEVELAND.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club held Sept. 23 the members nominated for officers two weeks before were unanimously elected. Walker and McLean, the enterprising florists of Youngstown, were elected members of the club, as was also C. G. Steyn, of this city.

A Reception.

The reception tendered the Cleveland florists by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gasser Sept. 26 was well attended, about 150 florists and their families being present. The host and hostess received in a tent which was handsomely decorated with palms and cut flowers. Adjacent to this tent was another where a banquet was served at 7 o'clock. Afterward small tables were placed around and all who wished to do so played cards, while on the floor of the other tent a canvas was stretched and dancing was indulged in till a late hour. The principal features of the dancing were a Highland Fling by Adam Graham and Gordon Gray to the tune of "Coming Through the Rye," and a cakewalk by Charlie Gibson, an honorary member, who introduced a striking effect by tripping his partner, falling and rolling several times on the floor.

All present voted the afternoon and evening a most enjoyable one and gave Mr. and Mrs. Gasser three rousing cheers and a tiger when they dispersed about midnight.

The Market.

Flowers are rather scarce. Most all the late asters are gone and not very many carnations are coming in, and what there are have very short stems. Roses seem to be off crop with most growers, and mums are not being cut in sufficient quantity to cut any figure.

Various Notes.

At Caspar Aul's establishment things are in good order. He has been cutting some early mums but says there is little call for them as yet. He was fortunate with his asters, having managed to keep the bugs off by steady handpicking. He reports the loss of about 1,500 carnations, caused by the water standing on a portion of his field. Those in the houses are rather small but are good healthy looking plants. His mums look fine and it looks as though he will again capture the first prize given by the management of the Sheriff St. market at the annual show in November.

John Leshar reports everything planted except a house of adiantums. The house is now filled with palms which he is selling rapidly, and when they are gone he will plant with adiantums.

At Herman Hart's the carnations are in prime condition and in fact so is everything else. His mums are not as early as some but they are early enough for the demand here. He has added to his plant this year a show house extending about 40 feet along Detroit street and about 15 feet wide. This gives him a much needed show room. There is about two feet of glass under the plate which is five feet above the ground. This house is now filled with Boston ferns in 6, 7 and 8-inch pans. He also has a house of smaller plants in 5-inch pots.

He was giving his primoses and cyclamen their last shift. He grows a great many of these and does them well.

Mr. A. Schmitt, of Glenville, has improved rapidly and is now able to attend to business again.

F. R. Williams is rejoicing over the arrival of a son.

H. Blome, representing the Geo. Wittbold Co., Chicago, was a recent visitor. TENEP.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA.

At the last meeting of the Sen. Point Horticultural Society Mr. Peter Barr, of London, read an exhaustive paper on "Ancient and Modern Daffodils." In the Cape Times of September 11 appears part 1 of the paper, and it occupies three and a half of the long columns of that publication.

COLOMA, MICH.—A company composed of George M. Grant, John M. Keck and C. H. Merrifield has been organized for the purpose of entering into the nursery business on an extensive scale.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

President Herrington has announced committees to examine chrysanthemum seedlings and sports on dates as follows: Oct. 5, 12, 19, 26, Nov. 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30.

Boston, Mass.—A. H. Fewkes, chairman, care John Welsh, manager Boston Flower Market, Park street; E. A. Wood, J. H. Wheeler.

New York, N. Y.—E. Daillouze, chairman, care New York Cut Flower Co., 20th street and 6th avenue; James W. Withers, C. Albert Small.

Philadelphia, Pa.—A. B. Cartledge, chairman, 1614 Chestnut street; Wm. K. Harris, John Westcott.

Chicago, Ill.—James S. Wilson, chairman, care J. B. Deannud, 51 Wabash avenue; Geo. Stollery, E. Weinboer.

Cincinnati, O.—Albert Sunderbruch, chairman, care Cincinnati Cut Flower Co., 416 Walnut street; James Allen, E. G. Gillett.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination.

Anyone having a variety in season before or after dates fixed can have the same passed upon by specially notifying the chairman of committees.

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.
Wyndmor, Chestnut Hill, Pa.

Work of the Committees.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

Cincinnati, Oct. 5.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Opah ("Indian name for morning"), a bluish pink variety, Japanese reflexed, which scored commercial scale 80 points. "The committee highly recommends this variety as an early sort."

At Chicago the above variety scored commercial scale 79 points. "The committee would recommend this to florists for planting in limited quantities, on account of its earliness, although the flowers before us for judging were not finished and in our opinion would take four to five days to fully develop. It is superior to either 'Mae,' F. Bergman or Fitzwygram, but we cannot score it up to 85 points, even taking its earliness into consideration. Scoring it strictly on its merits, 79 is all it will stand."

EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.

CINCINNATI.

Various Items.

After the rush of last week trade seems to be slow, yet it is well up to the average for this time of the year. Supply and demand are about equal except for the poorer grades which have to be sacrificed at job lot prices to clean them up.

Carnations are still very scarce; it seems that they are very late with every one. Mrs. E. T. Grave, of Richmond, Ind., is still sending in good sized cuts of her carnation Dorothy. They are A1 and the price is from $2 to $2.50 per 100. Meteors are 2 to 5 cents and Beauties 50 cents to $2 per dozen, and not enough to supply the demand by half.

We are having ideal weather. Several light frosts have killed the more tender plants but this kind of weather is O. K. for indoor stock.

The first mums of the season made their appearance in this city October 1. The variety was Lady Fitzwygram (white), shipped to E. G. Gillett by Mrs. E. T. Grave of Richmond, Ind. Although this variety is small in size and rather short stemmed its earliness makes it sell. They brought 15 cents. As yet the supply is limited, but by the middle of the week I think there will be enough to go around.

Harry Baer was badly used up in a runaway accident last week. He was thrown from his wagon and, besides breaking several bones, he received a number of severe wounds. He is now resting easy and hopes for an early recovery.

On Saturday last the first mum of the season appeared, to be passed upon by the chrysanthemum committee. It was shown by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich.; name, Oph; parentage, Lady Fitzwygram x Marquis de Montmort; Jap. ref.; color, blnsh-pink, turning to pinkish-white when fully opened. Very good sized flower for this time of year, stem and foliage only fair. It is better than any of the extra early varieties I know of, and is to be recommended. The blooms sent were cut October 4.

Mr. Martin Reukauf and Mr. Walter Mott were visitors this week.

C. J. OHMER.

KEEPING GALAX LEAVES.

Replying to "Subsiber", the best way to keep galax leaves is to put them in cold storage at a temperature of, say, 33 degrees. The ordinary florist can keep them in good condition in an ice chest, packed in original cases; that is, if they are properly packed.

Boston. HARLAN P. KELSEY.

We have received a copy of the fall catalogue of "Wholesale Floral Supplies" issued by E. H. Hunt, Chicago. Bulbs, seeds, wire work, ribbons and supplies of all kinds are offered in great variety. There are many original half tone engravings from photographs and the catalogue is well printed on fine paper. It is one of those catalogues that should be preserved for reference.

WAPPINGERS FALLS, N. Y.

The first annual exhibition of the Wappingers Falls Dahlia Society was held Sept. 20 and 21 and the display was excellent. The show of dahlias was extensive but many other flowers and some decorative plants were exhibited.

Ten long tables were filled with the exhibits of dahlias, garden flowers and wild flowers, with a general bank of wild flowers for a background. An eleventh table was for decorative purposes.

The largest exhibit of dahlias was made by Mr. George Howarth, whose exhibit embraced four hundred varieties, including almost endless variations of the cactus dahlia. Herbert Cottam's display of wild flowers was equally attractive, his exhibit occupying an entire table. The most artistic table decoration was arranged by Miss Lizzie Baxter.

Mr. William G. Salford of Poughkeepsie had a fine display of show plants and palms. The exhibits were all judged by Mr. F. R. Pierson, the well known florist of Tarrytown.

Among the leading prize winners were the following: Wm. Thorne, Mrs. John Wood, Herman Harcourt, Mrs. W. Johnston, Guy Harcourt, Mr. Paul Hilda Howarth, John Parkinson, Percy Alverson, Herbert Cottam, Marion Dyson, Mary Downey, Rowland Blythe, Edith Keeler, Helen Connolly, Madeline Blythe, Irving Grinnell, I. T. N. Harcourt, Adam Laub & Sons, W. G. Salford (Poughkeepsie).

Geo. H. Howarth is secretary of the society.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

Business is looking up; no doubt about it. The weather is cooler, the nights, especially, which causes roses and carnations to look much better, the foliage being a darker green and the blooms more solid. Last night (October 4) we had a killing frost, the thermometer going down to 30 degrees at 5:30 the morning of October 5, and no fire! Have not started firing yet—trying to harden things a little.

No mildew, to speak of, as yet on roses nor rust on carnations. A very little stem rot has manifested itself on the carnations the last few days, but nothing to cause one to walk in his sleep or have bad dreams.

Chrysanthemums are looking well and are nicely set with buds, with prospects of having plenty of bloom of good substance for all purposes. The old Diana is just the thing for funeral work, where a good white of medium size is wanted. The flower is larger than a carnation, flat and close petaled, making it fine for groundwork in set pieces. Do not see it mentioned in the lists of latter day mums; too old fashioned, perhaps, but it gets there just the same.

There will be no chrysanthemum show here this fall, except the individual shows made by some of the enterprising florists of the place. But more of this later on. J. H. W.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society held Sept. 26 the principal business was the report of the executive committee regarding the November show. There was a large attendance.

The display of dahlias was very fine. Mr. Joseph Harworth receiving honorable mention and Mr. David McFarland a vote of thanks for their displays. Mr. Wm. Scott also received a vote of thanks for a display of flowering shrubs.

An essay on "Hardy Shrubs" was read by Mr. Thos. Cockburn and the subject was discussed by many members. Mr. Cockburn was given a vote of thanks for his paper.

This special offer is made to reduce our stock to a certain limit of space which we can devote to this plant, and will be withdrawn as soon as reduced to this limit. Without a doubt, the demand for this, the most important and valuable of all winter flowering plants, will this season again be far in excess of the supplies now in sight.

While all the Lorraine Begonias are difficult plants to handle during the spring months, we know of no other soft wooded plant which grows so freely at this season of the year, and with the most ordinary facilities you will have no difficulty in successfully growing now, and flowering it at a handsome margin of profit for the holidays.

To give best results, the larger sizes, above three-inch, must be shipped in pots.

Trade Notes.

Trade in general seems very fair for this season of the year. Good stock of all kinds moves very well but the supply is still rather limited in really good stock. Many roses are middlevell, but most of the carnations that come in are very fair. The end of this week will likely see some chrysanthemums in this market. We have had no "mum" weather up to date and there has been no demand for them yet. Present indications are that the quality in general will be very good as nearly all the plants have made a short, heavy growth on account of the heat the past summer, except where the houses were heavily shaded. Carnations, too, are making strong growth and the quality will be very high this season.

The State Florists' Association met at the Commercial Club room on the first day of this month and a good number were present. The main question before the meeting was as to whether badges to be used during the show in November should be furnished by the Florists' Association or whether they should be supplied by the association which has the show in charge. It took about an hour's debate to decide that they should be furnished by the show management. A committee was appointed to arrange for receiving and entertaining the visiting florists. John Hartje had on show a lot of very promising carnation seedlings and among them were some fine whites. A. B.

HEMPSTEAD, L. I.—Extensive improvements are being made at the greenhouses of George Rogers. One new house, 22x 165, is being inclosed, and two No. 12 Scollay Invincible boilers are being installed to heat the eight houses. When completed Mr. Rogers will have a thoroughly modern and well equipped plant.

FRAMINGHAM, MASS.—Sewall Fisher, well known to the trade in the past as a carnation grower, has retired from business and has removed to Boston.

SIBLEY, ILL.—Wm. Kirkham, formerly of Chicago, is now in charge of the greenhouses of Henry Diers here.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Trade is all that could be expected. It started off with a rush the last week in September and is keeping up at a very satisfactory pace.

For the funeral of the late K. E. Armour, which took place Sept. 30, the floral designs were far superior and more costly than anything of the kind ever seen before in Kansas City. The most elaborate design was a standing wreath for $125, a flat wreath for $50, a pillow for $50, arranged by Samuel Murray; a six foot standing cross solid with yellow roses garlanded with Meteor for $100, a pillow for $50, and a dozen flat wreaths of orchids, valley and roses, ranging in price from $20 to $40, made by W. L. Rock; three bunches of American Beauties at $50 each, a tall handle basket of roses for $50, and a wreath of galax leaves and pink roses for $25, executed by Arthur Newell. There were also several handsome pieces made by the florists of Chicago and notwithstanding the long distance traveled they arrived here in perfect condition. It is estimated that the total cost of the floral display amounted to $3,000.

The rose crop is good and enough of them to supply local trade. Carnations are tardy and it will be a month yet before we get good salable stock. The Chicago commission houses have been shipping good carnations to this market for several weeks. The first mums made their appearance Oct. 1.

The fall festivities will be celebrated this week beginning Wednesday night with a grand ball at convention hall. W. L. Rock will decorate for the occasion, using some flowers, several dozen palms and one hundred crates of southern smilax. The fall festivities will mark the opening of the social season here, and the craft are sanguine of another prosperous season.

H. J. M.

OMAHA.

Trade has been on the hustle for the past week, funeral flowers and work being in great demand. Stock, especially carnations, seems to be steadily improving. In roses, Bridesmaids, and some of the Beauties, lack color. The first violets are in. They came from Faulkner and Donaghue. The latter has three varieties blooming at present, Wales, La France and California.

Prices have gone up a notch and are about as follows: Beauties, $1 up to $2 per dozen for 24-inch; Brides, Meteors, and Maids, $3 and $4 per 100; Peles and Gates, small, $3 per 100. Carnations $1.25 to $1.50 per 100.

Our market is in a peculiar condition just at this time. You can not buy, nor see, any flowers except roses and carnations. This is wrong, for the retailer needs, and should have, a variety.

THE RETAIL
FLORIST.....

Trimmings.

This week we present the first of a series of illustrations on plant and cut praise. These are a few simple designs in pot covers and wall pockets made of Porto Rican matting, and show but a quires more ability to arrange; others, we are sorry to say, who fail to see any beauty or adaptability in it; nevertheless this material is going to be much more in use the coming season because there is nothing to equal it. The public have had such a severe dose of crepe paper that the very sight of it is nauseating, yet considerable will be used because anything is preferable to a dirty plant pot. In Porto Rican matting we have a chance to display artistic ability, and when properly studied out and carefully used it will be found to be much cheaper than crepe paper.

Various ways of using the Porto Rican Matting.

flower trimmings which we hope will be of interest to many of our readers. This set was arranged by the well-known firm of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, whose beautiful exhibit at the Buffalo convention elicited so much small part of the possibilities in this material.

Now, there are a great many retail florists who are averse to the use of Porto Rican matting, because it costs twice as much as crepe paper and re-

The great trouble with every claimant to fashion or popular favor is that they are overdone.

A good plant or flower needs very little, if any, trimming; the poor or average stock, which constitutes 75 per cent of what is annually offered, requires to go through the hands of the artist in order to either make it presentable or to get out its full value. The only chance the retailer has of making a little extra money on plants is to use his utmost ability in arranging them; his investment may turn out to be a dead loss were he to offer the stock as received from the grower; it is the setting of the diamond that shows the gem to advantage, and every plant find even the most reckless buyer will sometimes object to the fancy prices necessary for such stock. The most profit lies in the medium and very cheap grades, and by utilizing a little of your ingenuity you can make the cheapest often look more enticing than the costliest.

For instance, suppose you buy some flats of tulips or hyacinths; you cannot offer them in those dirty boxes; if you do, you'll never sell them. We of matting costing a few cents and without a necessary bluish ask a dollar or two more than you intended for the work.

You can get the baskets used by fruit-ers for a few cents a hundred; they will fit any size pot you have. Get some, trim them as above with matting and ribbon and they are ready for instant use. Basket dealers may not like some things we write, but we don't always like what they offer; the colors of their baskets are extremely difficult to compromise with; they can do better by offering the above.

The great trouble with trimmers is the inclination to overdo the work; there is a tendency to put too many frills on things, and everything but good taste is the result. Harmonious colors and simplicity of arrangement are the two principal webs of success.

The illustration we show this week depicts only one class of work. It may be classified as a mixture of Paris and Philadelphia.

The designs appear much stiffer than they are; with the ends twice as much shirred, and softer ribbons used they would appear entirely different. As it is, if plants and flowers were shown in these they would show up much better. In New York here we have methods of using almost everything in a peculiarly American way, and we hope to be able, from time to time, to illustrate it.

Many times in decorations you will come across badly colored walls, etc., where something is necessary to bring out the full value of even green decorations; others where greens fail to emphasize the color effect of flowers. This in the store should be so placed or trimmed as to show up its best points. Plant baskets and Porto Rican pot covers are going to be very popular the coming winter and spring.

It will be absolutely necessary for the principal city florists to use their wits in order to get more for their stock than the "Cheap Johns." The man or woman who pays from $2,500 to $7,000 a year for rent cannot afford to sell cheap in the sense of the street fakir or basement store; a large volume of cheap trade would not mean as much to them as a select trade, and in order to attract and keep that class they must show quality in art, even more so than in stock. Your best customers may occasionally roam away and purchase cheaply elsewhere, but for choice flowers or good work they will always return to you, providing you have that about you and your store that appeals strongly to their eye. The study of plant trimming is therefore of the utmost importance to all. At all times of the year, but most particularly at Christmas and Easter, it is the most important and attractive element in the store.

One great and prevalent trouble we find is that though we are sure the ability is there, there is a general lack of originality shown among retailers in the matter of supplies. Orders for baskets, etc., are given at the last moment, and it's a matter of being satisfied with whatever is offered, whereas if at this time of the year the retailer would only stop and think out something new, or give his supply man some idea of what is best, more satisfaction and profit would result. Now, there will always be a limited demand for very rich and expensive baskets, but you will would advise you to cover that box with a thick layer of any kind of paper, tack it tightly to the box, then get a sheet of some appropriate colored Porto Rican matting and cut it in two or three widths, unravel the ends of the parts to be attached to the upper part of the flat, so as there will be fringe of from four to six inches; you can make the bottom band smaller and can fasten all with tacks and trim off with ribbon to match either flowers or matting. You can trim a good sized box with one sheet can all be accomplished by a judicious use of the matting referred to; with a good contrasting color it makes an excellent panel-like background. For instance, you have a hall to decorate. Suppose you get a sheet of white matting, cluster it cornerwise and fringe out all round to a depth of six to nine inches; arrange a loose cluster of yellow, pink or red flowers and tie with a flowing bow of ribbon to the mat; attach all to the wall and frame off with light, irregular greens and you will have something to bring out color, so badly needed in many cases.

Last Christmas good big prices were got for holly sold this way. Arrange the holly in nice loose, flat bunches, leaves facing upwards; have good cluster of berries and a sprig of mistletoe in front; get a dark green mat, shirr it well and tie to the holly with a bow of red ribbon. These were bought to send as presents, and in some cases brought as high as $3 a bunch.

It isn't a question of the cost of material; it is a matter of how you arrange and present it. That's where the value lies, and every florist should be continually on the lookout for anything that will assist him in this line. When we say high colors are to be fashionable in decorations this winter, we don't mean that that should be confined to trimmings alone. Combinations in colors will be necessary, and, as usual, will be according to individual ideas, but harmony alone will command respect. You must not value a thing for the price asked for it. Many a cheap thing has more merit to it than the ultra expensive.

There are two principal ways to look at things. In the first-class florist's store you must have cheap trimming material and the very best. Take the case of ribbons. It doesn't pay to put 50 cents' worth of ribbon on a dollar bunch of flowers, and yet you are often asked to put ribbon on small orders. The mere man and the average woman don't know the value of ribbon; they judge it by its effect, consequently the cheapest grade of ribbon, providing it is of good color, is good enough for the largest part of the work turned out. But there is another section where the very finest is none too good and where you don't lose by its use.

Taffeta ribbons will more than ever be the most popular again this season. Satin finished grades will be used for fine work, but broad velvet ribbons are to be used on the highest class work. If you care to attract the eye of any particular lady customer, try the best velvet ribbon you can get on some bunch of choice flowers; use some soft green, such as light green fronds of Adiantum Farleyense.

The general condition of business is unsatisfactory at present, but it is no worse, if anything rather a shade better, than other years. There is always considerable doubt and uneasiness at this time of the year, but it generally fades away with the coming of the severe weather, when country mansions are closed and city palaces are open. There will be good business this winter and they who act honestly and keep up with the times will have little cause to grumble at the end of the season. IVERA.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

This week we take our readers on a trip through the Chicago market by means of a series of pictures of the various establishments. The growth of the wholesale cut flower trade in Chicago during the past sixteen years has been truly remarkable. From one or two houses in 1885 the number has grown to eighteen or more, each one probably handling more flowers than either of the pioneers at that early day, and some handling truly amazing quantities daily.

Every trade visitor to the city considers a trip through the market most interesting and instructive, hence our attempt to take our readers on the trip by means of pictures. We believe they will be found interesting by all, and especially by those who purchase flowers in and consign to this market.

Chicago's shipping range for cut flowers is a large one, and extends from Buffalo and Pittsburg on the east to Salt Lake City and beyond on the west, and from Winnipeg on the north to New Orleans and Texas on the south. It is this continually growing shipping trade which has made possible the great ranges of glass in the vicinity of the city, and this trade promises to expand much further in the future.

It is not infrequently remarked by trade visitors to the city that they can buy roses and other flowers cheaper in Chicago than they can produce them in their smaller establishments, and it seems likely that the florists in the smaller cities and towns will depend more and more upon the large markets for stock in quantity, growing only a house or so themselves for transient calls, and devoting more space to fine plants for retail sales.

According to the statistics compiled from the last census of the flowers and plants produced in 1899 in only sixteen states amounted to upward of $11,000,- 000. Of this certainly more than one-half consisted of cut flowers and for the whole country the flowers produced will probably amount to $10,000,000. It is certainly a lively and vigorous "infant industry." And the shipping trade has been a most important factor in its development.

The Chicago Market. View in Wiator Bros'.

I told a very good customer and very excellent gentleman that he had a better place to keep his fine pair of Sweet Bays than I had—viz., his coach house. Like a sensible man he took my advice, and this spring they were in excellent order. Usually people who own Sweet Bay trees have coach houses, and that is the place for them.

Hydrangeas.

Large hydrangeas are another article that bothers some of us. A greenhouse is positively no place for them at any price because they will start to grow in the spring before you can put them outside, and then they are useless for summer decoration. A very cool, light cellar will do for them all right, but if there is a furnace in the cellar or basement it is both too warm and dry. If the cellar is really cool very little water is needed during the winter; just enough to keep them from shriveling. I saw at a large eastern establishment last October an excellent method. An excavation was made on an elevated piece of ground where water would not lie. The bench, as it may be called, was 4 or

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Everything should be in such shape now that although not under glass they can be moved in at short notice, for when frost does come now it is likely to be a hard one. Sweet slevia, so useful to us at the holidays, is much better out of doors, yet endures no frost. Azaleas don't want any and hydrangeas not too much.

Bay Trees.

I was surprised a few weeks ago to be cautioned by a good eastern nurseryman "not to let the Sweet Bays be injured by frost," and he was an old-countryman, at that. Grown artificially in tubs as we do, and their exposed stems, they may not be as hardy as if planted out in a shrubbery. They endure 20 degrees of frost without injury, and often more during an English winter. If coddled up in a greenhouse in winter and then exposed to even 10 degrees they may be hurt, but if gradually accustomed to the approach of winter there is no fear at all of injury till the thermometer gets down to 15 above zero.

They are getting numerous in our cities, and it is becoming quite a puzzle to know what to do with them when your patrons ask you to store them for the winter. If you put them in your coolest greenhouse you must charge at least $1.00 a square foot for every inch of space they take up—not the space the tub occupies but the head, and also a charge for carting. And even the greenhouse is not the best place for them. I understand the Belgians keep them in sheds, stored up one above the other, occupying little space. A shed with a little light and where there was not too much frost, would be the ideal place for them. But we don't all own one, or if we do it is a warm shed. Last fall

5 feet deep, 6 or 7 feet wide, and as long as you like. There the hydrangeas were stored. A covering of boards and mats did the rest, but that need not be put on till hard frost appears. That is the very best possible place; infinitely better than any cellar, and no attention needed until the warm days of April.

Shrubs.

If you do any business in shrubs now is the time to plant; the sooner the better, although if some protection is given most of the really hardy species can be planted up to winter time. Always strip off the leaves of any deciduous trees or shrubs if they have not already fallen.

I hope it is not necessary to say here that evergreens should not be transplanted after the middle of September. Don't do any, or very little pruning, to the deciduous transplanted shrubs this fall. Just leave the tops as they are, but tie them so that the snows do not break them down. Prune in the spring without fail. There is very little need of losing any of our common hardy shrubs, if good soil is put round the roots, well trodden in and, although it may sound funny to some people, if the ground is dry give them a good watering before you fill in the hole. Some unthinking people may not know that many of our fruit trees, and even forest trees, are killed during winter because their roots are dry. Trees want to go to rest in the winter with their roots moist.

ply very rapidly no time should be lost in destroying them. The peculiar round backed form of the older leaves of the Meteor and some other varieties make the under sides of the leaves an excellent shelter for them, which is difficult to reach in young stock, by reason of the leaves being so near the pots.

To control the ravages of this pest syringing must be persisted in every bright day, as the least neglect will soon show in the increased destruction of leaves.

Green Fly.

This pest is so well known that it

ROSE NOTES.

Red Spider.

Red spider is one of the most persistent enemies of the rose. It is so small as to be scarcely visible to the naked eye. To the vigilant grower its presence is soon made evident, and if left in undisturbed possession for any length of time the leaves will assume a scorched appearance. The injury is occasioned by their destroying the tissue of the under sides of the leaves, impairing the breathing of the plants. They thrive best in a hot, dry atmosphere, and as they multi-needs no description. Its entomology is interesting, and it is well to know the habits of the enemy with whom we are in daily conflict. The most effectual exterminator of this insect is tobacco. It is used in various forms, vaporizing, smoking, etc., a careful vaporizing or smoking once a week being sufficient to keep it in check. The operation should be done while the glass is cool and the benches allowed to become as dry as can be done with safety. The smoke or vapor being cooled by contact with the glass will stay lower in the house, and the benches being dry, there will be little evaporation, allowing it to reach the lower leaves. This condition is best obtained in the morning before sunrise.

The only effective remedy I know of is cold water sprayed on the under side of the leaves with sufficient force to dislodge the spider and eggs. Some growers object to using cold water because it subjects the plant to a sudden chill. This can easily be obviated by lowering the ventilators and increasing the temperature 8 or 10 degrees previous to syringing. Having practised this for years with good results, such as strong, hardy foliage and absence of mildew, I have no hesitation in recommending it. Warm water has a tendency to encourage a soft and rapid growth with tender foliage, a condition very susceptible to mildew.

Repotting.

Repotting ought to be done as soon as the plants have completed their first growth in the 2-inch pots, and repotted again after each succeeding growth, using half-inch shifts. While entailing a good deal more labor than larger shifts, the plants are much stockier and quick in growth and make bushes much quicker.

RIBES.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

In chrysanthemums we have cut and sold our crop of white and yellow Fitzgrams already. We think this a good early variety, both for white and yellow. It did the best for us, grown about three flowers on a plant, planting them in the bench rather closely together. We commenced cutting and shipping the 1st of October, and they are gone in from two to three weeks, so that you have the bench room for other plants.

I really think that the early varieties, from a grower's standpoint, are the most profitable, as they are cut and sold when there are comparatively few on the market, and are handled at a season of the year when the weather is not cold, thus saving extra protection. The best cut Fitzwygrams bring $2.00 per dozen wholesale, grown about three blooms to a plant; and about 4 to 8 and some 10 cents each, where there are from five to seven blooms to a plant, but these of course have to have more room on the benches. We would advise securing stock of plants in the fall, as you can always make your own cuttings much better than having them shipped.

We are cutting Bergman, Glory Pacific, Lady Harriett and Primo, and will soon be cutting Johnson, Mrs. Smith, Robinson, etc. Will write about them later. Bergman and Pacific are both good standbys for medium early. Lady Harriett is a fine acquisition as an early pink variety, it having good stem, foliage, good form and is a healthy grower.

Primo, as an early white, is not much good with us. It is very similar in form to Dr. Brigham, which we have discarded. The stem is some stronger, the foliage is not as good, neither is it a very good keeper. I think it has been misrepresented as being a valuable acquisition to the florist. Our plants as a whole are looking fine, with here and there a variety not equal to representation, especially of the new varieties.

due time, and that the hall would be ready for the reception of plants, etc., on Friday of this week.

Mr. W. A. Manda asked if a scale of points had been arranged for the judging of plants. This was, he said, always a source of annoyance to both judges and exhibitors; there was nothing to indicate whether quality or quantity was required, he thought, as with the case of the National Carnation and Chrysanthemum societies, there should be some scale of points for plants. This brought the judges on what they considered the vital points. Mr. C. W. Ward said that the Carnation Society had been changing its scale of points every year, and he expected it would continue so; it was much a matter of opinion. Mr. Withers announced that the judging of carnations and chrysanthemums would be according to the scales adopted by the societies which had the development of those flowers in view. The Rose Society had no scale, else that, too, would have been adopted. He did not see how they

The Chicago Market. Views in Bassett & Washburn's.

There was a very large attendance, in fact, more so than if it had been the annual election night; had the weather been fair there would have been even a larger attendance.

The forthcoming great show at Madison Square Garden was what brought the crowd out, and the indications are that the exhibition will be well worth coming a long way to see. Mr. Withers, on behalf of the exhibition committee, reported that everything was ready, all arrangements had been perfected, the tickets would be sent out to members in out quite a discussion. Mr. O'Mara was of opinion that the committee had considered every point. Shows had been held the world over and there was no scale of points to his knowledge in existence; it was a matter dependent on the intelligence and honesty of judges. It would, he said, now only cause confusion were any attempt made to formulate such laws.

Mr. Butterfield inquired if any one knew of the existence of a scale of points for judging plants. Mr. Manda answered that each society instructed could entertain any proposition in regard to plants; they had appointed six of the best men they could select to act as judges for this show and they were fully competent to dispense justice. A motion to have the committee arrange a scale of points was lost.

Mr. Manda asked if in the class for eyes it was meant merely Cycas revoluta or eyeads. Mr. Withers was of the opinion that the intent was for eyeads, but Mr. O'Mara was of opinion that Cycas was meant, in order that it might bring out a greater competition. The matter was left as it is.

Mr. Phillips referred to the lack of posters and advertising matter on the show, and Mr. Sheridan replied that the bill posters would on Tuesday or Wednesday cover the city and the surrounding towns with posters, etc., and that the show would be well advertised in due time. Mr. Weathered announced that there were a number of the convention souvenirs left which members could have by calling at his office or at John Young's.

Mr. Morris laid before the club a circular issued by the Public Education Association asking for contributions of flowers, plants and botanical subjects for use in class-rooms; any one wishing to donate such may address Mrs. Schnyler Van Rensselaer, 9 West Ninth street.

H. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, L.I., exhibited several vases of well grown dahlias, among which were many very good seedlings of his own raising, and several new French varieties; a particularly good yellow decorative type was one called Victor Voissier. His blooms of Gloire de Paris dahlia were the largest seen here this season. The committee awarded him honorable mention for his exhibit. Mr. Beaulieu is of opinion that French dahlias are far superior to those raised here. He claims there is more substance in them.

The exhibit committee in charge of the Madison Square Garden show wish to announce that on account of the season the entries for cut chrysanthemums can be made any time up to October 24th. Mr. O'Mara drew attention to the fact that his eyes were dazzled every time he looked at the end of the room and he asked for information as to the cause. He was informed that the glitter emanated from the trophies (Detroit trophy and Hitchings cup) won by the bowling team at Buffalo, whereupon he moved that the ex-captain and the present captain carry them up to the platform and tell how it happened. Capt. Traedely couldn't account for it, but Capt. Lang assured the club the cup would remain here with others at present resting in other towns.

The committee on nomination for officers held their first meeting; they will report at the November meeting.

dahlias at this meeting; several new varieties were seen here for the first time. J. W. Withers exhibited a remarkably fine collection of forty-eight varieties, embracing the best in all types; they were grown in his own gardens. Beaulieu, of Woodhaven, showed several of his seedling dahlias and some blooms of Mme. Peret pansies. Siebrecht & Son, of New Rochelle and New York, displayed some beautiful Cattleya labiata, and C. labiata alba; and Theo. Have-meyer sent a lot of fine dahlias.

There was quite an interesting discussion on dahlias and their culture. Mr. Withers urged late and deep planting. He said from the 15th of June to the 4th of July was the best time for dahlia planting. Mr. Henshaw spoke of old-time dahlias; he thought they had just as good, if not better, dahlias in the '40's. Mr. Beaulieu was of opinion that dahlias degenerated in this climate, and that it was necessary to import new stock. Dr. Hexamer gave his experiences in their culture, and Mr. Barron spoke on the different types. The next meeting will

The entertainment committee then took charge and dispensed refreshments. John P. Cleary manned the piano and Messrs. Butterfield, Plumb, Wallace, Nash and Hogan sang and danced to the enjoyment of those present.

Mr. O'Mara drew attention to the recent demise of Peter F. Daly, of Granton, N. J., and moved that a committee of three be appointed to draw up a set of resolutions to express the sympathy of the club. The chairman appointed Messrs. Morris, Birnie and Weathered to attend to the matter.

Horticultural Society.

The Horticultural Society of New York held a meeting at the Berkeley Lyceum on Wednesday afternoon, and as there was but a slight attendance Mr. Barron's paper on dahlias and other important matters were left over till next meeting. Mr. Barron reported progress on matters connected with the proposed congress on plant hybridization; the matter was attracting attention from every source and he expected entire success.

be held the second Wednesday in November.

The Market.

About the markets—well, the least said the better. The day after we sent our last notes the bottom fell out of the price list, and it hasn't been found yet. The present week has been about the worst so far this season. Good roses could have been bought for $2.50 per 1,000 almost any day. What we mean by good roses is good short stuff. Of course, high grades—the few select queens—brought from $4 to even $8, but the great bulk were slaughtered at whatever price was offered. There was no business, every ice-box was full and it was a case of getting express charges or paying the ashman.

Carnations are bringing good prices, from $2 to $3; valley, $4; cattleyas have gone up to $30, but it is expected that there will be no good business for the next few weeks. We are in the midst of a lively municipal election, the weather is mild, country life is more attractive than city, there is not a house of any consequence open on Fifth avenue or its side streets yet, and low prices and dull times must be tolerated till after horse show week.

The season has so far been very good and it will be so, therefore patience is not only a virtue, it is a post to rest on. We shall be in the middle of the great show next week and all the flowers that cannot bring $2 per 100 should be donated to make the show worthy the city.

home last week from a most enjoyable trip through Europe.

F. Hansen, florist of East One Hundred and Eleventh street, suddenly expired in his chair last week. His place, consisting of several greenhouses and plants, will be sold at auction by Cleary this week.

A. L. Miller of East New York reports a grand showing of his dahlia emalliflora. He cut 15,000 flowers last week; it is the best white to grow.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been somewhat depressed by the warm, dull weather, which has brought forward the crops, especially of roses, much faster than they are needed. While the demand is good the supply is far greater than the demand. One grower alone brought in 1,000 roses on Monday which were un-last week. Prices are firm on most stock that arrives in good condition.

Beauties range from 75 cents to $3 per dozen; a few selected have even brought $3.50. Brides, Maids and Meteors are $3 to $5 per 100. Kaisersins are $4 to $6. There are some Liberties, Golden Gates, Sunrise and La France coming in. Carnations are the best stock on the market, prices ranging from $1.50 to $2 per 100 for choice stock. Edward Reid is handling some Flora Hill, Ethel Crocker and Lippineott that readily bring the latter figure.

Single violets are becoming more plentiful, but do not as yet sell very well. There are also a few double violets now.

Chrysanthemums are increasing in numbers fast, and hold their price fairly well this week. David Cliff obtained $2.50 per dozen for Glory of the Pacific. George E. Campbell, who was first with this flower last year, cut his first blooms on Monday of this week. Lady Fitzwygram, Madame Bergman and Glory of the Pacific were the earliest varieties. He has 8,000 plants in pots, all very well done. Ivory is in fine shape.

Notes.

The old Evans place at Rowlandville is sending in some very fine roses. Harry Evans is the present proprietor. Curiously enough he bears the same name, though not a relation, of Charles E. Evans, the former proprietor, who is now in California. Madame Cusin is still grown and is considered a most profitable variety.

Henry F. Michell has improved his show windows by using beveled glass, and lighting them by numerous red and green electric lights, which effectively display his assortment of fine bulbs. These windows are considered the handsomest of their kind among the seed houses of America.

Bowling.

There were lively times at the bowling alleys Monday afternoon. No doubt the presence of the prizes won at the convention were the incentive to some high scores. We don't know what the conditions are, but the Philadelphia team's failure to respond to the challenge, we were informed, was sent by the New Yorkers, is a source of considerable guessing. The scores today were:

Thomas Minge has greatly improved the grounds at Holy Cross Cemetery, near Lansdowne, Pa., during the past year. Two hundred acres are kept in beautiful order and present rich landscape effects well worth seeing. There is still much ground to improve. Time only is needed to accomplish this, as Mr. Minge's capability in this line of work has already been proven, and his achievements during the twenty-five years at Fairmount Park are well known. The place is worth a visit.

BUFFALO.Business.

There has nothing very startling occurred in the near past. Business has been fairly good, flowers very much improved, and more of them. Outside stuff is about all gone. A few violets are seen, but they could be dispensed with for a while.

We have just started into the chrysanthemum season. Midge and Fitzwygram have been with us for a week or more, but rather a poor sample, and now we have Glory of the Pacific and its beautiful white sport, Polly Rose. There are several sports of this useful variety, but the true Polly Rose is much the best.

We are glad to see the Queen of Autumn return to us again. Never mind if the odor is not as sweet as that of violets, or that they are coarser than a Bridesmaid rose, they are gorgeous, beautiful flowers, nothing is more decorative, and they must always be popular in their rather brief season.

Notes.

Prof. John F. Cowell has just returned from the Leeward Islands, after a seven weeks' stay in those tropical, volcanic peaks. In company with Prof. Britton, of New York, he pretty thoroughly explored St. Kitts and discovered many species of plants new to science and still more new to commerce, so the journey was profitable as well as being (I should say) a great pleasure.

Pan-American.

At our request the Pan-American management have given us $300, to be awarded for some chrysanthemum exhibits. A list of the premiums is now published. This is but short notice, but will, I trust, be in time to bring out a good exhibit. We believe that to create an interest and produce a good show it should be competitive, and the premiums cash. I earnestly ask my friends to compete for the premiums in any class they possibly can, and I still more earnestly ask my brother florists of Buffalo and vicinity to compete in the classes for baskets, etc. Those classes were put in especially for competition among our local men and they should, and I believe will, do all they can to make the last four days of the exposition a credit to floriculture. We are aware that it is many days too early to get our finest "mums," yet there are varieties enough to make a good show and all you want is the will and interest to send the flowers and we will do the rest. CHICAGO.

The Market.

While there are none too many good roses to meet demands, there is an abundance of medium and poor stock, and some of the latter has to be offered at very low rates to move it. Some dealers think there is a material increase in receipts, but others hold that there has merely been a lowering of the average quality. In Beauties the best seem to be rather scarce, but there seems to be plenty of the lower grades. In carnations fancies are also scarce and good ordinaries are still held at $1 to $1.50, but shorts and poor grades are jobbed off at low figures; we hear of some clean-up sales at as low as 30 to 40 cents a hundred. Good roses are still $3 to $4 and very few are fancy enough to bring $5, while poor grades go at $1 to $2, and the poorest are sometimes cleaned up at 50 to 75 cents. There is some little mildew noticeable, the recent changes in the weather having apparently caught some growers at a disadvantage.

Chrysanthemums are daily becoming a greater factor in the market. Good white and yellow blooms are in good call, but sales of the pink Glory of the Pacific have to be forced to move the stock. Prices so far have averaged about the same as last year, and it looks as though the mum would hold its own as usual through the season.

Various Items.

McKellar & Winterson had one shipping order Tuesday that called for about $200 worth of flowers and material. One of their customers had a good wedding order. They are already beginning to receive many orders for Christmas decorative material, indicating that out-of-town florists are thus early preparing for the holidays.

Kennicott Bros. Co. note a continual increase in shipping demand. Last Tuesday they had in some of the best violets seen in the market this season. Among carnations they are receiving a large cut of Crabb & Hunter's Irene.

It is certainly a very pretty and remarkably fragrant pink sort.

Basset & Washburn report a steady growth in their shipping trade and they expect the season to be an unusually good one. Their stock at Ilinsdale is in fine shape and the cut is of their usual high quality.

Bentley & Co. are receiving some extra fine Beauties and other roses from their New Castle houses, and find business strictly first class.

E. H. Hunt says the season is opening in fine shape with them, both in cut flowers and supplies. Among other new specialties they will have this season is an excellent folding cut flower box of their own manufacture.

Wieter Bros. have their stock in good shape, as usual, and are prepared to take care of their full share of the winter's trade.

J. A. Bullong is showing some roses that are strictly fancy and will handle a large cut of first class mums.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. have been cutting mums for some time and now have them in quantity. Their October Sunshine are remarkably good.

Frank Garland has just finished repainting his place all in white, to be used as a background for his oncoming army of mums, with Mr. Stewart as general.

George Reinberg is cutting his usual nice line of flowers and is especially strong in Beauties and other roses.

J. B. Deamund makes rather a specialty of orchids and shows some very fine cattleyas, oncidiums, etc., as well as a general line of other stock.

Robert C. Northam, with Weiland & Risch, met with a serious accident to one of his eyes last Tuesday. It is feared he may lose the sight of the injured eye.

Chrysanthemum October Sunshine is a remarkably fine early yellow. Splendid blooms, averaging six inches in diameter and some with stems five feet long and perfect foliage, are now being cut by Poehlmann Bros. Co. and Peter Reinberg.

Lloyd Vaughan is now in the northern Wisconsin woods, looking up the bouquet green situation for E. H. Hunt. J. C. Schemeling, Milwaukee, was a recent visitor.

Fleischman opened his State street store to the public last Friday evening. Some splendid stock was used and the floral decorations were remarkably rich. A steady downpour of rain all that evening and all the following Saturday must, however, have been discouraging. It is a beautiful store and attracts much attention from passers-by.

A brother of William Schofield, the North Clark street florist, was killed on the Northwestern elevated railroad last Sunday night. He had fallen from the platform on to the track and was run over by a train.

Larry Kelly is now with John Muno, at 51 Wabash avenue.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at Handel Hall, 40 Randolph street, tomorrow (Friday) evening. The annual election of officers will take place and Mr. Edgar Sanders will read a paper entitled "Our Pastimes, By the Young Sport."

The time for the annual exhibition at the Auditorium is approaching and intending exhibitors should soon be prepared to make entries. If you desire a premium list you may obtain one by adressing Mr. Edwin A. Kaust, assistant secretary, 5700 Cottage Grove avenue.

John Muno is on a pleasure trip to St. Paul with a party of friends.

George Dolinski, who murdered Anton Lize, an employe of Brant & Noe, at Forest Glen, some time ago, expiated his crime on the gallows last week.

Wm. Krueger, of Krueger Bros., Toledo, O., called on the trade the past week.

A BIG EXHIBITION.

Kansas City is getting ready to show us a thing or two about flower shows. The directors of the huge Convention Hall, which seats 20,000 people, have decided to give a huge floral exhibition, Nov. 18 to 23, and to show that they mean business have appropriated the sum of $12,000 for expenses, this aside from any considerations of rental. Of this sum not less than $3,500 will be awarded in cash than premiums, and being informed that at some exhibitions premiums have been sealed down, or not paid when the box receipts have not been up to expectations, they offer to deposit the premium money subject to the order of the judges.

They further demonstrate their wish to make the exhibition all that it should be by securing the services of the veteran John Thorpe as superintendent. In this sort of work "Uncle John" is in his element and with the liberal financial backing he is assured of, we may expect to hear things from Kansas City.

Mr. Thorpe is full of enthusiasm over the project and is overflowing with original and striking new features that he expects to carry out. He has full charge of the arrangement of the premium list and is going to divide the amount into premiums that will attract the very best. There will be three premiums in each class, and as a sample he says the premiums for best specimen plant will be $35.00, $25.00 and $15.00. The premium list is now being prepared and will be issued shortly. In addition to the regular list there promises to be many special prizes. One already offered is $100.00 for the best unnamed seedling carnation shown, the winner to be named McKinley.

Mr. F. J. Taggart, Convention Hall, Kansas City, Mo., is general director of the exhibition and inquiries addressed to him will receive prompt attention. Mr. Thorpe is now visiting eastern growers in the interest of the exhibition.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions.

The twelfth of October was an glorious ending of an otherwise fairly good business week. Up to that day everything but roses was inclined to be a bit scarce for the amount of roofage the city represents. Although prices were not high, hopes and spirits were well up until the thermometer took an upward turn, also with the disastrous results of a flooded market and the populace planning to be out in the balmy air rather than staying indoors to look at a sample of nature sent in by the florist. It makes a difference, and was the first day of the season to make the pink growers wonder why they were ever born into this vale of woe, while the rose men wept aloud and the chrysanthemum men began to blossom out all around into several sizes of three or four colors. Breakers dead ahead and the warmer the weather the fiercer the storm will be.

Various Items.

October 10 was the date set upon for the marriage of James H. Delay, our popular Beacon street florist, who began some five or six years ago over behind the Public Garden and has pushed his trade so assiduously that now he is obliged to maintain a first-class establishment in every way. Jimmie has done well and we can only wish his last move to be his best one, and that it will result in increased happiness and prosperity. This makes two young ladies who have demonstrated unbelief in the old saying that "Delays are dangerous" during the past two or three years. "Al" Huston, the vigorous and courteous rose disseminator to William H. Elliott, also comes in for the same thing in the same degree for the same cause. He has doubled up his joys, cares and responsibilities lately. In just his case it is unwise to wish his pathway strewn with roses, being probably too much so already, but we may breathe a desire that his days may stretch out like a 50-cent string of Asparagus plumosus.

The annual meeting of stockholders of the Co-operative market for election of officers and any other business was held at the Quincy House Saturday evening, October 12. I held the office of official dookeeper, filling the position with my usual grace and dignity. It was emphatically a "smoke talk," with all effects of the "pipe of peace." Hannibal Hamlin's old appellation of a "large and respectable gathering" might be used in connection with the affair, but Judge Dewey's recent famous decision has no application whatever. Still I maintain there are florists who would at times make the judge doubt the soundness of his own doctrine—that a man must be "stupefied, overcome or frenzied" in order to be drunk.

After tossing around complimentary nominations very generously the old board of officials was promptly elected on the first ballot in every case except in regard to the vice-presidency, which necessitated a second attempt. The list stands: William Stickel, president; William Nicholson, vice-president; George Cartwright, treasurer and secretary, and W. W. Edgar, Peter Fisher, E. Sutermeister, L. H. Mann, E. N. Peirce and John Walsh as additional directors. Of course, this list could not be improved upon and their willingness to serve another year is proof of their loyalty to the good of the market. None of the positions has an emolument attached except that of the treasurer.

The question of annual banquet to stall-holders took up more time than it would to dispose of the real thing. It looks as if they got the "question" and the banquet itself somewhat mixed, because they "chewed" it over so much and did not fully "digest" it after all, but finally voted to "lay it on the table"—the question, not the banquet. So unless stall-holders behave pretty well this year we probably shall not get one. Some wanted one given to stall-holders and lady friends, and some to stall-holders alone, given by the corporation; others wanted same at expense of the partakers, and others want nothing of the kind at all, and "who shall decide when the doctors (or directors) disagree?"

A carefully considered revision of the constitution and by-laws is under way, which was taken up and put through its first paces, but adjournment became necessary before completion and the relative positions of the constitution, the flag, the banquet and the price of chrysanthemums in the procession is yet undecided.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business has been quite fair of late, and with the cooler weather stock has improved very much, particularly the rose stock. Meteors, Brides, Maids and Golden Gates are gaining in size and color; Beauties are very fine and plenty of them in all grades. Good stock in the smaller grades is held at from $1 to $4 per 100; some select shipping blooms go as high as $5; in 1,000 lots the price falls far below these prices. In roses the past week we may say there was a glut, and more are coming into this market just now than ever before. The call for select Beauties the past week was good, owing to the increased demand for the Veiled Prophet's ball last Tuesday. Still the florists about town claim that the demand has fallen off greatly from former years.

Carnations are also quite plentiful and are improving in size and color. Select grades sell for $2, and from this price down to $1 per 100. Some very fine Flora Hills, Scotts and Daybreaks are coming in now. The whites seem to have the call. Violets are still scarce, and the quality is not good enough to put on the market. Valley remains at $4. Cosmos is becoming more plentiful at 50 cents. The chrysanthemums are not coming in quite as fast as was expected. A few shipments of southern stock came in the past week, and more are expected by the end of the present week. These will, of course, depress prices on local stock. The home grown stock is not plentiful just now, but more will come in before the week is out. These, with the extra amount of other stock that is coming in, will no doubt have a very depressing effect on prices of all flowers. All kinds of greens, such as smilax, adiantum and asparagus, are having a good call.

Notes.

The decorations at the Veiled Prophet's ball last Tuesday were very elaborate and won the admiration of the large crowd present. The Merchants' Exchange hall never looked better. Mr. Ed Buechel, of the Riessen Floral Company, is to be congratulated on the good taste displayed. The flowers used for the occasion were mostly American Beauties, and some 4,000 were disposed of.

Mr. Henry Aue, of Lindenwood, has a new white seedling carnation which he calls St. Louis, and which is a very fine white, having all the requirements—stem, calyx and keeping qualities. Mr. Aue has been working up a stock of the new St. Louis for three years, and now has quite a stock of plants, which he will put on the market next season. He also has a fine pink seedling, which is not yet named. Mr. Aue expects great things from the St. Louis, and if the name has anything to do with it, it will be a success. Mr. C. A. Kuehn has the handling of Mr. Aue's stock.

Colonel Max Herzog again acted as judge at the St. Louis Fair, and again showed that he is competent to judge in all classes.

Club Meeting.

The next meeting of the club should be a banner one, as at this meeting we shall initiate Mrs. M. M. Ayers, she being the first lady to make application and to be elected a member. Mrs. Ayers says she will be present at all the meetings of the club.

The initiation will take place at 4 o'clock, and President Meinhardt has made extra preparations for the occasion. He expects all the members to be present and take part in the proceedings. This being the last meeting before the show, the committee will have a final report to make. Two essays will be read and the member who misses this meeting will miss a good thing.

The exhibition committee is holding weekly meetings at Ellis' place, working on the final prize list. The admission tickets are out and in the hands of the committee.

St. Louis Fair.

The St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association held its annual fair the past week, and the attendance was, as usual, large. The floral hall, which was one of the main attractions, contained a fine collection of plants, cut flowers and floral designs throughout the week.

The principal exhibitors were William Schray & Sons, C. Young & Sons Company, Ellison & Tesson and Richard Frow. Following are the prize winners:

Largest and most tastefully arranged collection of greenhouse and hothouse plants, 1st, Schray & Sons; 2d, Young & Sons.

Pair of hanging baskets of plants, 1st, Schray & Sons; 2d, Young & Sons.

Collection of ferns, 1st, Young & Sons; 2d, Schray & Sons.

Collection of colored foliage plants arranged so as to produce the greatest contrast of color, 1st, Schray & Sons; 2d, Young & Sons.

Specimen roses in bloom, four varieties, 1st, Schray & Sons; 2d, Young & Sons.

Collection of twenty-five blooming plants for house decoration, not more than three varieties of any species, 1st, Schray & Sons; 2d, C. Young & Sons.

Floral designs, two pieces, one funeral and one festival emblem, 1st, Ellison & Tesson; 2d, Young & Sons.

Best and most artistically arranged display of cut roses, 1st, Young & Sons; 2d, Ellison & Tesson; 3d, Schray & Sons.

Table decoration, plants to be used in connection with cut flowers if desired, 1st, Young & Sons; 2d, Ellison & Tesson.

Largest, best and most artistically arranged collection of cut flowers of any kind except roses, all to be properly labeled, 1st, Young & Sons; 2d, Schray & Sons.

Pair of parlor bouquets, 1st, Young & Sons; 2d, Ellison & Tesson.

Collection of carnations, 1st, Young & Sons; 2d, Ellison & Tesson.

Lady's bouquet, 1st, Ellison & Tesson; 2d, Young & Sons.

C. Young & Sons won first for display of floral requisites, for display of floral work, for display of immortelles and grasses and for designs of artificial flowers and grasses.

Bowling.

The Florists rolled three games with the Libertys on the Cass avenue alleys last Friday night, and won two out of the three games played. Charlie Kuehn, who should have been out the game, had pluck enough to finish out the game. Kunz and Sturtz had a lot of hard luck, and Ellison and Benke rolled their best games of the season. The scores were as follows:

On Monday night Frank Fillmore was awakened by the barking of his dog and discovered that the petting shed at the end of his greenhouse was on fire. The fire department quickly responded and soon had the fire under control, saving the greenhouses and plants. Mr. Fillmore's loss will be about $150; no insurance. Frank says that no doubt the barking of his dog saved the entire plant.

The Florists rolled three games with the Tigers on Monday night, October 14, and won all three games. In the second game they made the highest single game made in the league this season. Kuehn and Benke were in good form; so were Adels, Sturtz and Ellison. The team now lead in the league race with eight games won and one lost. The scores were as follows:

PITTSBURG.

The Florist Club.

The regular monthly meeting was held Thursday evening, 10th inst. Two new members were elected and four new names proposed for membership, so you see we are a prosperous and growing body. The subject under discussion was hardy plants for cut flowers for profit throughout the summer months. Of course, this included annuals and tuberos and bulbous plants as dahlias and gladioli, that any one can save in a cellar or other warmish place over winter without the aid of a greenhouse.

At best there isn't much profit in hardy flowers, the demand being light and prices low, but they are very useful for store window decoration. Sweet peas, mononette and Vick's branching asters were most favored among annuals. Several members said Semple's asters seemed to be losing in constitution as compared with how they were a few years ago. Among perennials, paconias, coreopsis, pyrethrum, white phlox, speciosum lilies and gaillardias received commendation. The small flowered sunflowers and golden glow rudbeckia had advocates, but it was held these flowers fade too soon after being out; one grower, however, insisted that by putting them in the cool of the evening and putting them at once into water in a cool, close place, they hold their heads up pretty well with him for a couple of days.

The finer roses may pay, but during the outdoor rose season there is such a glut of garden flowers, profits are precarious. Dahlias, if they would only behave themselves and bloom right, would be profitable, but they seldom do this unless it be in some old lady's garden under an old apple tree, in a moist, half shady place. The small variety Livoni was the favorite. All conceded gladioli would pay to grow; the paler colors are preferred for florists' work and the vivid ones for garden use.

Gus Ludwig read a letter from President Reineman, who is now traveling in Europe, telling of the grand things he was seeing in the way of dahlias, and more especially the brilliant cactus dahlias, in the German nurseries and gardens that made our mouths water. And he advised us: "Go thou and do likewise." Careful, now, boys, we've been there.

Then we all hitched up our chairs and turned our eyes and ears upon John Bader, who has recently returned from an extended European trip, and for twenty minutes John kept us listening and laughing. He told us about how the Belgians grow azaleas by planting them out in beds of lead mould in summer, and how kindly the plants take to such treatment. Also about the vast multitudes of bay trees, myrtle trees, bottle brushes, acacias and palms that are grown in those nurseries; and the rankness of the growth of hardy roses and shrubbery in the Holland Boskoop district. The Paris flower market had a particular charm for him, but he didn't see anything bodded out in the parks that we haven't here in this country.

Mr. D. Fraser showed a nice plant of Caledonia begonia in bloom. He doesn't think it is quite so easy to grow as are the pink Lorraines.

William Scott, of Buffalo, stand up! By a most hearty and unanimous vote of this club at this meeting you received the official recognition and thanks of this club for your most efficient work at the Pan-American exposition. This is entirely voluntary on our part and unsuggested from any source whatever. Most of us have been to Buffalo and have seen your work and we sincerely appreciate the spirit with which you entered into it and kept at it, and the excellent results you have achieved and their beneficial and instructive force upon floriculture throughout the whole country.

Mr. George Brown, superintendent of public gardens and grounds, Washington, D. C., spent a day with Park Superintendent William Falconer last week.

View in Fleischan's New Store, Chicago.

Superintendent William R. Smith, of the United States Botanical Gardens, Washington, D. C., has been spending several days with Superintendent Falconer. "I never felt better in my life," is how he feels. And as he left for home a happy man was he, for he had been presented by the Phipps conservatories with a splendid young plant of the very rare Coco-de-Mer (Lodicea sechellarum). The seed from which it grew weighed twenty pounds. The specimen, only a year old, occupies a big half-barrel tub. Dutch bulbs, as tulips, hyacinths and crocuses, are very fine this year, and 100,000 of them are now being planted in our parks.

Alocasia cuprea, commonly known as A. metallica, has been much used in flower gardens this summer; it isn't as loose or coarse as Caladium esculentum.

The Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania held its regular monthly meeting Thursday evening, 10th inst., in the Carnegie Institute, Schenley Park; this, too, was its annual business meeting and election of officers. For the ensuing year Dr. W. R. Hamilton, one of our eminent surgeons, was elected president; Dr. F. S. Davis, a prominent physician, vice-president; Mr. J. H. Shafer, curator of the botanical department Carnegie Institute, secretary, and Miss Anna M. Deens, professor of biology, Normal High School, treasurer. A high school professor from Kittanning gave a most interesting lecture on fungi and showed a multitude of specimens of toadstools, mushrooms and other cryptogamic growths of this nature. As many persons are members of both the Florists' Club and the Botanical Society, it was unfortunate that both meetings should be held the same evening, but this will be avoided in the future; the Botanical meetings will be held on the evening of the first Thursday of the month, and those of the Florists' Club on the evening of the second Thursday.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

BOSTON, October 12.—Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., exhibited Opah, bluish white, with deeper center, Japanese, which scored, commercial scale, 86 points. "Judged as an extra early variety."

CINCINNATI, October 12.—The E. G. Hill Company, Richmond, Ind., exhibited C. Holst, white, type of Merry Christmas, scoring, commercial scale, 85 2-3 points. EDWIN LONSDALE, Secretary.

BUTTE, MONT.

Cut flower trade is very brisk at present, with stock scarce. Chrysanthemums have been coming in for several weeks. There have been quite a few table decorations the past two weeks, and an abundance of funeral work. The carnations at the greenhouses of the Butte Floral Company, at Gregson Springs, are looking the finest of any the writer has ever seen anywhere in the country. The prospects for the winter could not be better.

The people of Butte appreciate up-to-date floral work.

Next week we are promised another new store, to be the finest west of Chicago. It will be owned by W. Clark, Jr., son of Senator Clark. The more the merrier, but not for long. Butte is surrounded by barren mountains, and there is only about so much business to be had, funeral work predominating.

Mahonia leaves, an autumn foliage found up in the mountains, are being used with excellent effect. Also kinikinick, a native green something like that of the arbutus in the east.

Several good wedding orders have been booked by the Butte Floral Company.

MADISON, N. J.

Morris County Gardeners and Florists held their regular meeting in Masonic Hall on Wednesday last; President Duekham in the chair. The main business of the evening was perfecting final arrangements for the forthcoming exhibition, and present indications assure that it will surpass all previous efforts.

The business session concluded, the members all went down to the new bowling alleys, the first to be opened in Madison. Two teams, captained respectively by J. B. Nugent and H. A. Bunyard, of New York, took the spheres in hand and put them through some wonderful gyrations. It seemed hard to convince some of the novices they were bowling at pins, not throwing at cocoanuts. As the Morris County team may be the dark horse in some of the tournaments the coming winter an injunction against publication of scores was obtained, which prohibits publication. Suffice it to say that Harry Bunyard officiated at the score board and his side won by a safe margin. A. H.

BALTIMORE

Trade and Other Notes.

The past week (we are writing on Oct. 14th) trade has shown decided improvement. The fall weddings are at hand, with consequent good demand for flowers. Roses are beginning to be more plentiful and early mums are coming in. Dahlias are abundant and there is no end of cosmos for those who can use these materials. Carnations continue scarce; indeed, very scarce. Violets have appeared in the market, but are diminutive in size and lacking in color.

We have had slight frosts, but except in the lowlands none to kill the tenderest vegetation, and semi-tropical plants and beds are flourishing as in mid-summer. For a few nights in the week preceding the last the mercury dropped toward the frost mark, but latterly it has been so high up as to make things uncomfortably warm, while heavy fogs and southerly winds constituted conditions exceedingly unfavorable for roses. Yesterday there was a warm rain.

The chrysanthemum show of the Gardeners' Club will be held, as heretofore noted, on the 12th to 15th of November, and Robert L. Graham has been made chairman of the committee of arrangements, which guarantees energetic work and plenty of it to make an effective and handsome display.

We are in the midst here of a great hullabaloo over the condition of our parks, which have in the past been a source of much pride to our people. Their physical condition is said to have deteriorated very much, and the finances are in a decided tangle, the indebtedness of the board for the current fiscal year aggregating something like $50,000—a large proportion of which is for new greenhouses, boilers and materials in several of the parks, and for supplies for them, the beds and the public squares. Among the unpaid bills reported are those of several of the florists—I. H. Moss, garden supplies, about $900; E. A. Seidewitz, ditto, $50; Fred G. Burger, for Dutch bulbs, $2,000, etc.

The trouble seems due to lack of businesslike management and want of a system of checks on expenditures. Above and beyond this is the need of responsible and intelligent control. There is no skilled head, no general superintendent and no chief engineer, and the official in charge of each park seems to have gone along on his own hook, taking orders either from the committees of the board, amongst which the several parks are distributed, or from its president, who is a lawyer, with no knowledge of arboriculture, gardening or landscape architecture. This officer, Mr. Thomas R. Clendenin, an attorney at law of large practice in damage and contested will cases, is a close friend of the mayor, and by the press is held responsible for the existing unfortunate condition of affairs. An investigation has been ordered by the city council, and the park board has engaged two lawyers for the defense, one of them, Mr. Bernard Carter, being at the very head of the bar in this state.

In the windows of John Cook, on N. Charles street, have been seen the past week or two some fine bunches of the new Sunshine rose, and there are indications of its finding a quick entrance into public favor; his Baltimore, too, is showing up handsomely.

Among the visitors to the trade here last week were Messrs. J. H. Troy, of The Rosary, New York, and Samuel S. Pennock, commission man, of Philadelphia. R.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Owing to a fire in the building occupied by Miss Flick as a flower store, damage was caused by smoke and water to her stock to the amount of several hundred dollars.

Mr. Kaede has added a new house to his plant, to grow mixed plants in.

Vesey's have been very busy shipping carnation plants all over the country, as their trade has been much greater than they anticipated.

Markey Bros. are established in their greenhouse after rebuilding their plant on West Jefferson street.

Mr. Ford, representing A. Herrmann, of New York, is calling on the trade this week.

The marriage of Mr. Louis Auger, Jr., to Miss Hattie La Mahr occurred on October 3. Mr. Auger will be remembered by his father having been in the trade for a number of years before his death.

There seems to be a great shortage in carnations, especially white, among all the florists.

Vesey's are cutting thousands of roses, fine clean stock, as they have no mildew.

Mr. Bond has some very fine California violets that he is beginning to cut from. M. S. V.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

A Flower Show.

What promises to be one of the largest flower shows ever given in this country is now being planned by the management of Convention Hall. Two months ago a circular was received by the florists of the city from Mr. Shouse asking their advice and assistance in bringing this enterprise about, but the proposition met with no favorable response from the fact that heretofore our flower shows had not been a financial success, and that there is an insufficient supply of good stock grown around here to warrant the undertaking. But this indifference did not discourage the promoters of the scheme, and Mr. Frank J. Taggart, one of the directors, was given full power to take necessary action. A meeting was called of the directors of Convention Hall, who decided to give a show about the middle of November and voted $10,000 as a guarantee of all expenses in conducting the show.

Convention Hall was built by popular subscription and is the pride of Kansas City. The arena floor is 125x200 and the hall has a seating capacity of 20,000. It is splendidly adapted for a floral display of such magnitude.

The management of the whole affair will be controlled by the hall directors, all good representative business men. The press has taken up the enterprise and is already giving it lots of free advertising. Society people and business men are becoming interested and several hundred dollars in special premiums have been offered.

Mr. John Thorpe, of Chicago, has engaged to superintend the show and to arrange the premium list. Mr. Thorpe was here two days last week discussing the plans with Mr. Taggart, and is now in the east for the purpose of securing exhibits from the leading growers of the country. The hall is to be decorated with southern smilax interspersed with small incandescent lights.

The florists have agreed unanimously to make exhibits and to assist the management in any way possible towards making the show a success.

Notes.

Weather conditions continue favorable for the production of good stock. If Jack Frost will defer his visits for two weeks yet we will have plenty of dahlias and cosmos, which seem to be in favor with the flower buyers.

The old Baker place has again changed hands. It was recently leased by Sam Short, who has sold out his interest to John H. Vesey, a well known grower here of high grade carnations and until last week had charge of a section of glass with Mr. George M. Kellogg.

DES MOINES, IOWA.

We are having a spell of that soft, cloudy weather that is not very good for any part of the greenhouse business unless it is the midwest. We have had copious rains and the lawns and parks are as green as in springtime.

Business is picking up some in the cut flower line, and as we have had enough hard frosts to kill all outdoor stuff, the flower store will be patronized more now. Some may decorate with autumn leaves, which are handsomer this year than we ever saw them before.
