Forcing Lilacs.

The lilac is a favorite flower and very useful, especially in funeral work. There is no difficulty in bringing it into flower. Now, here is a plant that we truly force. It is deciduous and dormant, yet we can put it at once, without any preparation, into a temperature of 70 degrees and force out the flower. With the rose we have to produce foliage and a good stem or it will not be crowned with a bud. The lilac has had its flower stored up for many months, awaiting the return of spring, and all we do is to anticipate spring by artificial heat. If you do not have a house that you can keep at 70 degrees, we have had good success by placing them along the edge of the path where the escaping heat from the pipe was constantly surrounding them.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The varieties of American carnations are slowly gaining ground in the esteem of the English growers for market. This slowness to gain popularity can probably be attributed in a very great measure to the difficulty a would-be grower experiences in obtaining plants to make a start with, and in fact getting to know anything at all about the American carnation. The ordinary run of grower here just knows that carnations are particularly popular in America and he sees a few fine blooms in the large wholesale markets, where they generally realize some high figures. The one or two growers who have a stock in England have whole houses devoted to their culture as in America, and appear to be continually increasing their amount of culture under glass. One grower in particular has three or four fine houses. The plants are not grown in pots, but are planted out in large beds running the whole length of the houses and have a very healthy and vigorous appearance. Instead of using supports in the form of wire or wood stakes, the stems are supported by strings threaded from side to side and from end to end of the beds, thus forming a sort of netting with a mesh of about three inches square, and in this mesh the bloom stems are supported. The grower informed the writer that it was his intention to considerably increase his stock.

There is a movement on foot to establish an annual show or exhibition for the horticultural trade on a large scale, to be held in London and to be something equivalent to the horticultural trade to what the annual Smithfield cattle show is to the agricultural trade. It is to be called "The Garden Fair," and the trade is being invited to engage stands for trade exhibits. If anything is wanted to make it a success it will be the lack of public interest at the turnstiles in the shape of a sufficiently large taking at the entrance. Horticultural shows in England are usually poorly patronized by the general public unless there is added some other attraction. J. B.

ILLINOIS FLORISTS.

There was a meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Handel hall, Chicago, on Thursday, January 11, James Hartshorne, of Joliet, presiding. The new state charter was presented and it was voted to go ahead with organization under it and put the association on a permanent basis. An invitation from the florists of Peoria was read asking for the honor of entertaining the association at its first annual convention. On motion of W. N. Rudd the invitation was accepted, the date of the convention set for the last week in February and the chairman directed to appoint a committee of five whose duty it shall be to prepare a program for the meeting, fix the date and issue a call which shall secure the attendance of every prominent florist in the state.

The Illinois State Florists' Association was organized a year ago, at the time it was hoped to secure an appropriation from the state legislature for the erection of a range of glass at the State Experiment Station at Urbana for the study of plant diseases. A committee was sent to Springfield and received considerable encouragement, but the appropriation was finally refused. It is hoped to have better success by making an earlier start this time and it is also hoped to accomplish good in many other directions.

WASHINGTON FLORISTS' CLUB.

At the last meeting of the Washington Florists' Club the following rules were adopted for the judging of flowers and plants.

1. The committee of awards shall consist of five members who shall be elected by the club at its annual meeting, to serve for one year. If at any meeting of the club (flowers or plants being on exhibition) less than three members of the committee of awards being present, the presiding officer, with the approval of the club, shall appoint others to act temporarily, the power thus granted to expire at the close of the meeting.
2. All exhibits of new varieties of flowers or plants shall be made at a regular meeting of the club, and the exhibitor shall notify the secretary at least three days prior to the meeting at which he proposes to exhibit. To secure the club's certificate it will be necessary that a growing plant accompany the cut flower exhibit in the case of carnations and roses, and that roses and carnations be exhibited at three different periods of the season; it will only be necessary to show a growing plant at one exhibition.
3. Anyone showing a novelty with the intention of obtaining the club's endorsement in any way the committee may recommend shall conform to the rules laid down by them for their guidance as herein stated.
4. The highest award for flowers or plants shall be the club's silver medal; first-class certificate, second and third, in the order named.
5. In judging carnation flowers at the exhibitions in the club's rooms the scale of points adopted by the American Carnation Society shall be adopted, as follows:

|             |    |                 |    |
|-------------|----|-----------------|----|
| Color ..... | 25 | Form .....      | 15 |
| Size .....  | 20 | Substance ..... | 10 |
| Calyx ..... | 5  | Fragrance ..... | 5  |
| Stem .....  | 20 |                 |    |

In judging the growing plant the following scale shall be used:

|                      |    |                 |    |
|----------------------|----|-----------------|----|
| Condition .....      | 15 | Stem .....      | 15 |

| Calyx .....          | 5  |                 |    |

Should the variety judged average 85 points or more at the meetings where it is shown, it shall be awarded the first-class certificate.
6. In judging rose flowers the scale of the American Rose Society, as follows, shall be used:

|             |    |                       |    |
|-------------|----|-----------------------|----|
| Size .....  | 10 | Substance .....       | 10 |

| Form .....  | 15 | Distinctiveness ..... | 10 |

In judging the growing plant the following scale shall be used:

|                      |    |                       |    |
|----------------------|----|-----------------------|----|
| Condition .....      | 15 | Form .....            | 10 |
| Productiveness ..... | 15 | Substance .....       | 10 |
| Size .....           | 10 | Fragrance .....       | 5  |
| Color .....          | 15 | Distinctiveness ..... | 10 |
| Stem .....           | 10 |                       |    |

The same conditions will apply to roses as to carnations, which are explained above.

7. In judging chrysanthemums the scale of points adopted by the Chrysanthemum Society shall be used, as follows:

| Commercial Scale. |    | Exhibition Scale. |    |
|-------------------|----|-------------------|----|
| Color .....       | 20 | Color .....       | 10 |
| Form .....        | 15 | Stem .....        | 10 |
| Fullness .....    | 10 | Foliage .....     | 10 |
| Stem .....        | 15 | Fullness .....    | 15 |
| Foliage .....     | 15 | Form .....        | 15 |
| Substance .....   | 15 | Depth .....       | 15 |
| Size .....        | 10 | Size .....        | 25 |

8. When a new plant, such as will be grown in a pot or in the open ground generally, is brought to the club's meeting, if the committee is sufficiently satisfied as to its distinctive merits and other qualities, they shall be empowered to give final award without further examination.

9. In judging flowers or plants other than those named, the committee may use a scale of points adopted by a special society covering the exhibit, if any exist; or they may judge them by any other method at their discretion.

10. All reports of the committee shall be entered in a book kept for that purpose. All reports shall be signed by the members making same.

11. Rules governing exhibits of disseminated varieties:

Competitive exhibits of flowers or plants already disseminated shall be judged by the scales governing same as provided in the rules for novelties, excepting roses; in case of the latter the following scale shall be used:

|             |    |                 |    |
|-------------|----|-----------------|----|
| Size .....  | 15 | Form .....      | 15 |
| Color ..... | 20 | Substance ..... | 15 |
| Stem .....  | 20 | Foliage .....   | 15 |

12. The awards under the rules for disseminated varieties shall be first-class certificate for excellence of culture, second and third, in the order named.

13. The club's silver medal shall only be awarded to new flowers or plants and only to those scoring 95 or more points.

MILLEPEDES.

We have a Piersoni fern that we transplanted in a large iron vase last summer. In the fall it was taken into a living room and with the temperature about 75 degrees it was doing finely. It has become quite large, measuring about four or four and one-half feet in diameter, and some of the fronds close to three feet. We have noticed within the past few days a peculiar worm on the centipede order lying on top of the ground in bunches, curled up and when disturbed they move at a rapid rate. Will these worms harm it? Is there anything we could do to get rid of them without injury to the plant? We picked at least 100 from the top of the soil today and if there are as many in proportion under the surface there must be thousands.

G. M.

The worms that have appeared on the surface of the soil in the manner described are millepedes, or thousand-legs, this insect laying its eggs in the soil, and are not likely to do any serious injury to the fern in question. Entomologists state that the millepedes live upon decayed vegetable matter, they also have been found eating tender young growths of some plants, and are certainly of no benefit to the fern. If a large sheet of paper were spread upon the floor, and the plant laid over on its side and jarred by a series of light blows, most of the insects would drop off onto the paper and could then readily be disposed of.

SUCCESS WITH LORRAINES.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken just before Christmas at the greenhouses of Samuel Murray, at Kansas City. It shows the house of Gloire de Lorraine begonia from which he took the exhibit for the Kansas City show which attracted so much favorable comment from all trade visitors. Many visited the greenhouses for the purpose of inspecting the balance of the stock. They were pleased and surprised to find that practically every plant in the lot was up to exhibition standard; there were no poor ones. The picture shows the stock just after the plants for the Christmas display had been picked out.

DARLINGTON ON CALIFORNIA.

[A paper by E. B. Darlington, trial ground superintendent for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, January 2, 1906.]

In complying with the request of certain members of your club, that I should give you a short talk on a trip which I had occasion to make to California the past fall, in the interests of the seed firm with which I have the honor of being connected, I would state that the period of this visit was the latter part of September and the early part of October, at which time nearly all the harvests had been gathered and the growers were awaiting the advent of the winter rains to commence plowing and planting the crops for the ensuing year.

A Dry Season.

In the section visited, which comprised the coast-line from San Francisco to Los Angeles and the higher land in the vicinity of Sacramento, there had been no rain since the previous spring; the hills and mountains were gray and bare, excepting for the small brush and occasional carpet of dried burr clover, while over the trees and roadside weeds was a thick coating of finely powdered dust. Excepting on occasional small lawns and parks which were kept frequently watered, nature had completed her work for the season and was enjoying a period of rest before starting in to produce another crop. But the climate was fully in evidence everywhere and its possibilities were a source of continual wonder to the gardener from the east and impressed itself on one at every hand, not only to see the growth of palms and greenhouse plants in the open air, but also in the changed appearance of our own familiar crops of fruits. The real estate boomers and people of the towns hold forth on the subject of climate with the greatest enthusiasm, but the gardeners and seedsmen whom I had the pleasure of meeting passed over all this as a matter of course and confined themselves to showing their various crops and the natural points of interest in their immediate vicinity and all were true gardeners in extending the hand of fellowship and hospitality.

Cut Flower Stores.

My time was extremely limited and was so fully occupied in visiting the ranches of the seed growers that I did not visit any distinctively florists' places, nor did I notice any such on the outskirts of the cities, but they must have a number of such places, as the flower stores in the cities evidenced. These stores were quite in the eastern style, though not nearly as numerous. At the time of my visit the flower stores in Los Angeles and San Francisco had good displays of chrysanthemums, which at that time were selling for $2.50 per dozen at wholesale in San Francisco, but aside from the chrysanthemums, the flowers displayed were not as fine as the products of the greenhouses in our own city. No doubt this is largely due to the lack of a demand for fine flowers at that time, as it was between seasons, as there should be no difficulty in producing as fine roses and finer carnations than we have if there should be a sufficient demand for them. The only drawback is the high cost of coal, but this could probably be obviated by the use of oil, which is almost exclusively burned for the production of power.

Santa Clara Valley.

Leaving San Francisco the morning after my arrival, my first stop was in the famed Santa Clara valley, a tract of level land from three to ten miles wide lying between two ranges of brown hills. The soil is black and heavy, much of it in the central portion being adobe, or dried swamp land, divided by large open drainage ditches, while the higher portions were of a lighter color and texture. The soil is free from stones and consists of loam or earth which has washed down from the hills through countless ages. The higher, lighter-colored ground had much the appearance of our own soils, but in the lower ground the black adobe has the appearance of the muck found in the bottom of an old pond. In the dry season this black earth becomes extremely hard and large cracks radiate over the surface in every direction. Even where it is kept constantly cultivated, the small particles of soil resemble gravel in their hardness.

Such flowers as late crops of sweet peas, asters, etc., as well as beds of young celery, carrots and endives were growing vigorously under the influence of irrigation and did not seem to mind either the hardness of the soil or the intense heat which prevailed during the middle of the day. Hoeing to keep the surface soil loose and fine is unknown in California, and probably impossible in the adobe lands. It was a strange sight for eastern eyes to see men walking between the rows of plants with the hoe held high in the air to descend with a vigorous chop at any weeds which might appear.

The fruit orchards, on the other hand, have the surface of the soil constantly cultivated and are as clean and free from weeds as a model garden, but the eastern eye misses and longs for the fresh green backgrounds which should relieve the cultivated lands, and its entire absence, at least at that season of the year, continually reminds you that you are in a strange land. The leaves of the fruit trees are a rich deep green, as well as the foliage of the growing crops, but serve only to accentuate the dusty brown or gray tints of the surrounding landscape. Even where there is a bright green lawn, it has the appearance of a small flower bed in the midst of the bare brown earth surrounding it on every side.

No Ornamental Planting.

Nearly all planting in California is done on a large scale and is quite distinctly localized. Thus in the Santa Clara valley, we find the ranches of the principal seed growers within a few miles of each other, and fairly extensive apple orchards, with miles and miles of prunes and thousands of acres of sugar beets. Every crop is grown for the cash it will bring, and outside of the large tourist hotels and some few private places in the towns, ornamental plantings or surroundings are things of the future. This seems strange to a gardener or florist, as practically all of our decorative palms and plants can be grown in the open air, but it is doubtless due to the necessity of irrigating, or constant watering of the plants and grass required during the dry seasons and it costs about $20 to $25 for the water necessary to keep a small town lawn fresh and green during the summer and fall.

Although very nearly all of the level valley lands are now under cultivation, there still remain occasional groups or clumps of live-oak trees, and these, with their mossy, gnarled trunks and branches and the bright green, holly-like leaves, are the most attractive features of the valleys, but as the grazing ranches are divided and broken to the plow they are being cut out and made into firewood and there seems to be no attempt whatever to make new plantings of this beautiful and locally characteristic tree. I shall always remember the live-oaks, not only for their interesting growth, but also for the grateful shade they furnished during the heat of the day, as the moment you step under the branches of the live-oak you feel a coolness similar to that when going into the florists' ice-box, while with all other trees the foliage simply affords relief from the strong sunlight without any feeling of coolness in the air. During my stay in the Santa Clara valley the thermometer would go to 108 to 110 degrees during the middle of the day. The air was clear and perfectly dry, so that no one perspires, but the heat is felt in a burning or prickling sensation on any exposed portion of your body. Nearly all the time there was a fresh breeze blowing in between the hills from the Pacific and from four o'clock in the afternoon until ten in the morning, the air was cool and pleasant and at night sleep was most refreshing, unless the California flea was present to take a hand in welcoming you to the country.

J. W. RODGERS.

The long controversy as to the position of superintendent of parks at Cincinnati has at length been settled by the appointment, on January 10, of J. W. Rodgers. There were a number of candidates for the office to succeed B. P. Critchell, who has served long and satisfactorily under former administrations.

Mr. Rodgers is a native of Cincinnati, 34 years of age, and for ten years has been in the greenhouse business on his own account, at Price Hill, where he has built up a nice range of glass and a profitable business, but the opportunity open to the park superintendent at this time is an exceedingly tempting one, because of the large amount of new work which is to be done by this administration. The salary is $2,500 a year. Mr. Rodgers is a member of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, the American Carnation Society and the Society of American Florists, and has been an attendant at most of the recent conventions. It is announced that he is shortly to marry Miss Martha Meyer, of Price Hill, who is a daughter of a well known Cincinnati manufacturer.

LETTUCE.

The Second Crop.

In preparing for replanting after the crop has been cut, it is well to see that the surface of the soil is thoroughly cleaned of all decaying vegetable matter. Usually when lettuce is cut a few of the smaller under leaves are left and these are often more or less tainted with decay. The careless operator will often turn them down into the soil in forking it over, in place of spending a short time in clearing them off before beginning the forking process. From just such carelessness fungus germs are propagated, which prove a source of considerable trouble in the crop that follows. The old lettuce roots should also be picked out in forking over, so as to leave nothing in the soil that will decay.

To keep up the fertility of the soil it will be necessary to add some fertilizing ingredients before planting each of the crops. Just what to add will depend a good deal on the nature of the soil, but as a rule the use of commercial fertilizers is not advisable; the best is the old stand-by from the barnyard, in a well decomposed condition. This, thoroughly worked into the soil, is the best general fertilizer we have, especially for crops of this nature, which need something they can take hold of right away and in which the plant food is easily available. The so called commercial fertilizers are too violent in action to suit lettuce, which will not stand much forcing but must be allowed to come along pretty nearly in its natural course.

The condition of the manure in regard to moisture should also be given a little attention. If this is in a wet, heavy condition and no other means are available for drying it out a little before hand it would be well to leave it spread out on top of the soil for a day or two to dry somewhat before working it into the soil.

Though there is not much danger of the soil being too wet just after the crop is cut, owing to the necessity of keeping it on the dry side after the plants have reached the mature stage to prevent damping; nevertheless if it should happen that the soil is in a rather wet state it should be allowed to partially dry out before beginning to work in it, as working the soil wet makes it heavy and soggy and anything but suitable to the wellbeing of the plants.

After planting it is well to use a little care in the application of water. There will be no necessity for watering the whole bed for some time after the plants are set, but water should be applied to that part of the soil immediately surrounding the plants. Thus the moisture is placed so it can be reached by the roots and utilized by the plants, and danger of souring the soil thereby avoided. As the plants attain size and the roots spread a larger surface will require to be dampened, until the whole bed is covered, but too much care cannot be used in the application of water during these dull, short days when very little evaporation takes place.

W. S. CROYDON.

MUMS AND LETTUCE.

Could I grow mums in greenhouse benches in the same soil I used for lettuce? Would there be any danger of spoiling my lettuce soil? Or would the roots interfere with the lettuce? Or would it be better to grow them in pots plunged in the lettuce soil? If planted in the bench could I mulch them, with what and how thick? What two or three varieties of each color, white, yellow and pink, would be best for cutting to be off by Thanksgiving, as I want the ground for lettuce?

C. H. T.

If I follow C. H. T. correctly, he desires to know whether he can use the same soil without changing after the mums are cut, for a lettuce crop; if he uses new soil for the mums, or perhaps it is a solid bed instead of a bench where the soil is not removed very often. In any case a crop of mums can be taken before lettuce is planted, providing the soil is sweetened out and more fertilizer added before replanting to another crop. By fertilizer I mean a top-dressing of nice rotten manure. If this top-dressing were applied to the chrysanthemums in September, an inch or so in thickness, it would help both crops a good deal. It is not advisable to keep soil in the benches too long. It should be changed every year at least.

A selection of standard varieties that would run together would be about as follows: White, Alice Byron, White Coombes, Eaton; yellow, Cheltoni, Appleton, Yellow Eaton; pink, Coombes, W. Duckham, F. A. Cobbold; red, S. T. Wright, Dazzle, W. R. Church.

OBITUARY.

Death of J. A. Budlong.

On Saturday morning, January 13, Joseph A. Budlong, the widely known Chicago grower and wholesaler of cut flowers, while riding his bicycle past the greenhouses of Peter Reinberg, at Robey street and Foster avenue, was struck by an electric car, sustaining a fracture of the hip and internal injuries from which he died on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. No one but the motorman witnessed the accident and it is impossible to say just how it occurred. Mr. Budlong was removed from the scene of the accident to the Swedish hospital only a few blocks away, but his injuries were beyond the reach of medical science.

Joseph A. Budlong was born at Providence, R. I., in 1841. He removed to Chicago in 1862 and has been an active and influential figure in his section of the city for nearly half a century. A number of years ago he was engaged in market gardening and the pickle packing business with his brother, but for twenty years he has devoted his energies to the growing of cut flowers. For nearly a dozen years his product was consigned to leading commission houses, the range of glass being added to until, in 1898, it afforded sufficient resources for the backing of a wholesale store, which was opened at 37 and 39 Randolph street and was at that time under the management of John Zech, the present manager being Philip Schupp, who is Mr. Budlong's son-in-law. The business has developed both steadily and rapidly and is now among the largest in the city, handling besides the cut from the Budlong range, the consignments of a considerable number of other growers.

The greenhouse establishment has been added to until the glass to be erected this spring will completely cover the city square on West Berwyn, near Lincoln avenue. The very best of methods have been followed in all departments and the best of results achieved. Mr. Budlong never departed from his New England conservatism and whatever he undertook was well considered and eminently practical. In recent years he has practically given over the management of his greenhouses to his son, A. H. Budlong, in whose hands the prestige of the establishment has suffered not at all.

Mr. Budlong was good natured, kind hearted and generous to a degree which won him not only the respect of everyone who knew him, but the friendship of all with whom he was thrown in contact. His business integrity was a maxim.

Since giving over the active management of his business he has devoted a large part of his time to the outdoor recreations of which he was so fond. Principal of these were bicycle riding and skating. Annually for twelve years he has made a bicycle pilgrimage to his old family home near Providence. It is 1,150 miles by the shortest route and the trip occupied two to three weeks. He invariably wheeled the entire distance one way.

Mrs. Budlong survives, with one son, Albert H., and one daughter, Mrs. Philip Schupp. The business will be carried on by the estate without change in the management.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon and was attended by a large number of those in the trade, the floral remembrances being very numerous. Interment was at Rose Hill cemetery.

I shall always remember the live-oaks, not only for their interesting growth, but also for the grateful shade they furnished during the heat of the day, as the moment you step under the branches of the live-oak you feel a coolness similar to that when going into the florists' ice-box, while with all other trees the foliage simply affords relief from the strong sunlight without any feeling of coolness in the air. During my stay in the Santa Clara valley the thermometer would go to 108 to 110 degrees during the middle of the day. The air was clear and perfectly dry, so that no one perspires, but the heat is felt in a burning or prickling sensation on any exposed portion of your body. Nearly all the time there was a fresh breeze blowing in between the hills from the Pacific and from four o'clock in the afternoon until ten in the morning, the air was cool and pleasant and at night sleep was most refreshing, unless the California flea was present to take a hand in welcoming you to the country.

J. W. RODGERS.

The long controversy as to the position of superintendent of parks at Cincinnati has at length been settled by the appointment, on January 10, of J. W. Rodgers. There were a number of candidates for the office to succeed B. P. Critchell, who has served long and satisfactorily under former administrations.

Mr. Rodgers is a native of Cincinnati, 34 years of age, and for ten years has been in the greenhouse business on his own account, at Price Hill, where he has built up a nice range of glass and a profitable business, but the opportunity open to the park superintendent at this time is an exceedingly tempting one, because of the large amount of new work which is to be done by this administration. The salary is $2,500 a year. Mr. Rodgers is a member of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, the American Carnation Society and the Society of American Florists, and has been an attendant at most of the recent conventions. It is announced that he is shortly to marry Miss Martha Meyer, of Price Hill, who is a daughter of a well known Cincinnati manufacturer.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—A. H. Stolper, successor to R. Alston, is sending out souvenir postal cards which are photographs of scenes in the Royal Greenhouses.

LETTUCE.

The Second Crop.

In preparing for replanting after the crop has been cut, it is well to see that the surface of the soil is thoroughly cleaned of all decaying vegetable matter. Usually when lettuce is cut a few of the smaller under leaves are left and these are often more or less tainted with decay. The careless operator will often turn them down into the soil in forking it over, in place of spending a short time in clearing them off before beginning the forking process. From just such carelessness fungus germs are propagated, which prove a source of considerable trouble in the crop that follows. The old lettuce roots should also be picked out in forking over, so as to leave nothing in the soil that will decay.

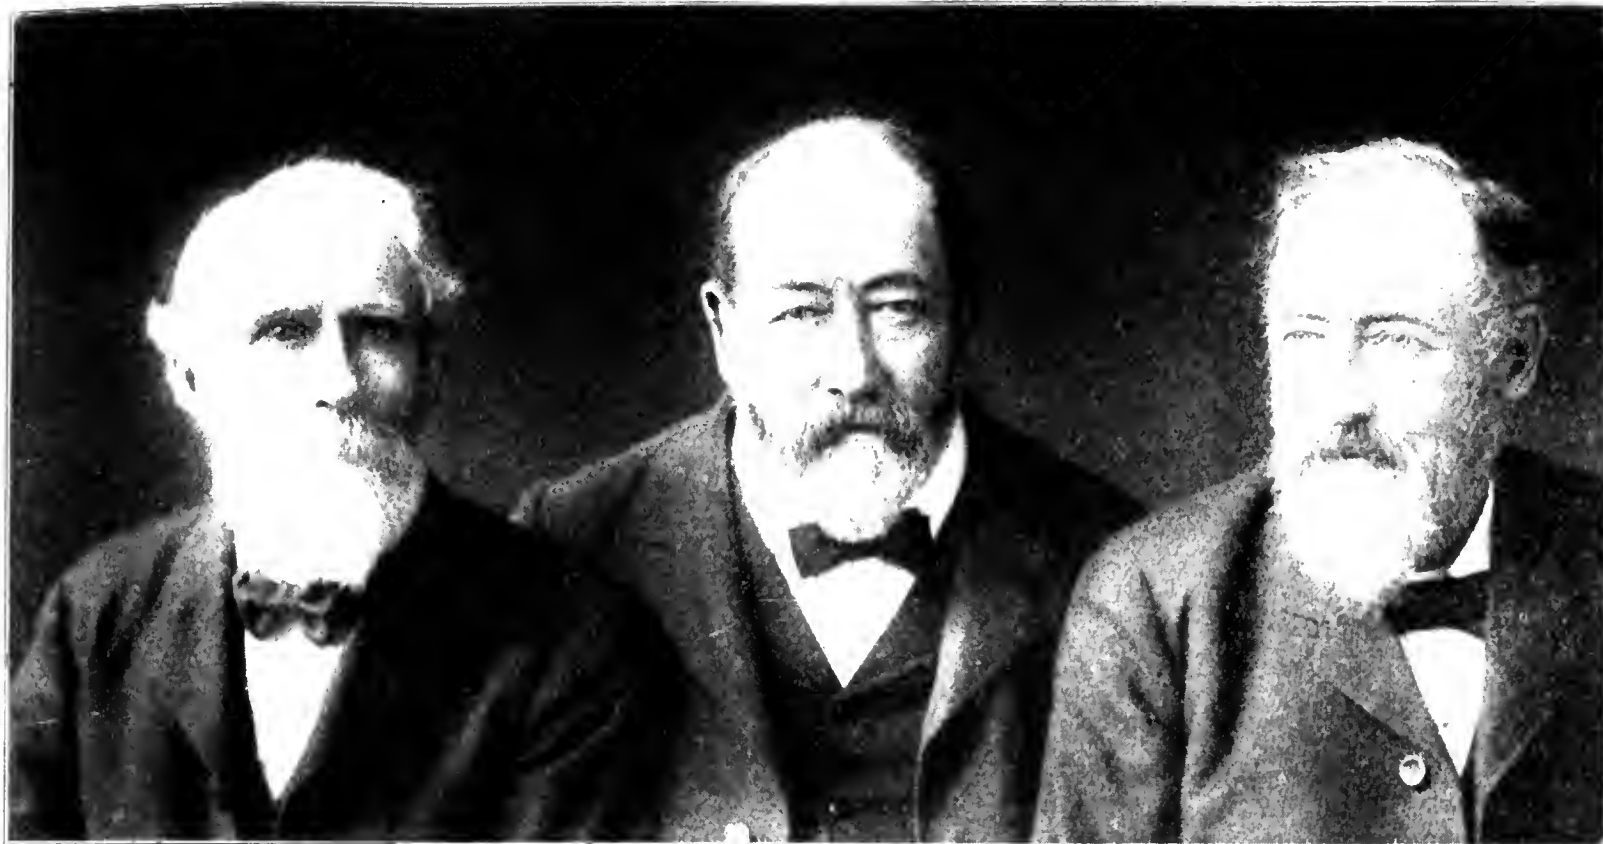

To keep up the fertility of the soil it will be necessary to add some fertilizing ingredients before planting each of the crops. Just what to add will depend a good deal on the nature of the soil, but as a rule the use of commercial fertilizers is not advisable; the best is the old stand-by from the barnyard, in a well decomposed condition. This, thoroughly worked into the soil, is the best general fertilizer we have, especially for crops of this nature, which need something they can take hold of right away and in which the plant food is easily available. The so called commercial fertilizers are too violent in action to suit lettuce, which will not stand much forcing but must be allowed to come along pretty nearly in its natural course.

The condition of the manure in regard to moisture should also be given a little attention. If this is in a wet, heavy condition and no other means are available for drying it out a little before hand it would be well to leave it spread out on top of the soil for a day or two to dry somewhat before working it into the soil.

Though there is not much danger of the soil being too wet just after the crop is cut, owing to the necessity of keeping it on the dry side after the plants have reached the mature stage to prevent damping; nevertheless if it should happen that the soil is in a rather wet state it should be allowed to partially dry out before beginning to work in it, as working the soil wet makes it heavy and soggy and anything but suitable to the wellbeing of the plants.

After planting it is well to use a little are in the application of water. There will be no necessity for watering the whole bed for some time after the plants are set, but water should be applied to that part of the soil immediately surrounding the plants. Thus the moisture is placed so it can be reached by the roots and utilized by the plants, and danger of souring the soil thereby avoided. As the plants attain size and the roots spread a larger surface will require to be dampened, until the whole bed is covered, but too much care cannot be used in the application of water during these dull, short days when very little evaporation takes place.

W. S. CROYDON.

MUMS AND LETTUCE.

Could I grow mums in greenhouse benches in the same soil I used for lettuce? Would there be any danger of spoiling my lettuce soil? Or would the roots interfere with the lettuce? Or would it be better to grow them in pots plunged in the lettuce soil? If planted in the bench could I mulch them, with what and how thick? What two or three varieties of each color, white, yellow and pink, would be best for cutting to be off by Thanksgiving, as I want the ground for lettuce?

C. H. T.

If I follow C. H. T. correctly, he desires to know whether he can use the same soil without changing after the mums are cut, for a lettuce crop; if he uses new soil for the mums, or perhaps it is a solid bed instead of a bench where the soil is not removed very often. In any case a crop of mums can be taken before lettuce is planted, providing the soil is sweetened out and more fertilizer added before replanting to another crop. By fertilizer I mean a top-dressing of nice rotten manure. If this top-dressing were applied to the chrysanthemums in September, an inch or so in thickness, it would help both crops a good deal. It is not advisable to keep soil in the benches too long. It should be changed every year at least.

A selection of standard varieties that would run together would be about as follows: White, Alice Byron, White Coombes, Eaton; yellow, Cheltoni, Appleton, Yellow Eaton; pink, Coombes, W. Duckham, F. A. Cobbold; red, S. T. Wright, Dazzle, W. R. Church.

OBITUARY.

Death of J. A. Budlong.

On Saturday morning, January 13, Joseph A. Budlong, the widely known Chicago grower and wholesaler of cut flowers, while riding his bicycle past the greenhouses of Peter Reinberg, at Robey street and Foster avenue, was struck by an electric car, sustaining a fracture of the hip and internal injuries from which he died on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. No one but the motorman witnessed the accident and it is impossible to say just how it occurred. Mr. Budlong was removed from the scene of the accident to the Swedish hospital only a few blocks away, but his injuries were beyond the reach of medical science.

Joseph A. Budlong was born at Providence, R. I., in 1811. He removed to Chicago in 1862 and has been an active and influential figure in his section of the city for nearly half a century. A number of years ago he was engaged in market gardening and the pickle packing business with his brother, but for twenty years he has devoted his energies to the growing of cut flowers. For nearly a dozen years his product was consigned to leading commission houses, the range of glass being added to until, in 1898, it afforded sufficient resources for the backing of a wholesale store, which was opened at 37 and 39 Randolph street and was at that time under the management of John Zech, the present manager being Philip Schupp, who is Mr. Budlong's son-in-law. The business has developed both steadily and rapidly and is now among the largest in the city, handling besides the cut from the Budlong range, the consignments of a considerable number of other growers.

The greenhouse establishment has been added to until the glass to be erected this spring will completely cover the city square on West Berwyn, near Lincoln avenue. The very best of methods have been followed in all departments and the best of results achieved. Mr. Budlong never departed from his New England conservatism and whatever he undertook was well considered and eminently practical. In recent years he has practically given over the management of his greenhouses to his son, A. H. Budlong, in whose hands the prestige of the establishment has suffered not at all.

Mr. Budlong was good natured, kind hearted and generous to a degree which won him not only the respect of everyone who knew him, but the friendship of all with whom he was thrown in contact. His business integrity was a maxim.

Since giving over the active management of his business he has devoted a large part of his time to the outdoor recreations of which he was so fond. Principal of these were bicycle riding and skating. Annually for twelve years he has made a bicycle pilgrimage to his old family home near Providence. It is 1,150 miles by the shortest route and the trip occupied two to three weeks. He invariably wheeled the entire distance one way.

Mrs. Budlong survives, with one son, Albert H., and one daughter, Mrs. Philip Schupp. The business will be carried on by the estate without change in the management.

In the picture J. A. Budlong is at the left. At the right is Lyman A. Budlong, the well known pickle packer and largest onion set grower in the United States. In the center is Wm. H. Budlong, of Providence, the younger brother.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon and was attended by a large number of those in the trade, the floral remembrances being very numerous. Interment was at Rose Hill cemetery.

STERLING, ILL.—The Sterling Floral Co. will erect a carnation house 28x120 this spring.

TEILMANN'S HOUSE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in the carnation house of Gunnar Teilmann, Marion, Ind., a few days before Christmas. The variety at the right is Moonlight, a white sent out two or three years ago but not very widely disseminated. Mr. Teilmann finds that it does excellently with him and is his most profitable white. On the bench to the left are Crane and Flamingo. Crane has always done well with Mr. Teilmann and the crop for Christmas was a sight. He says wholesale and retail prices were the same at that time, $1 per dozen, at retail in Marion and at wholesale in Chicago.

Mr. Teilmann does a large trade in cemetery vases and window boxes in the spring and it will be noted that he has material for this purpose along the edges of the carnation benches.

The photograph also shows the style of construction peculiar to this place. There are no purlin posts, but every few feet the bars are trussed with a wire which can be tightened or loosened at will. The roof also supports the flow pipe, which runs down the center of the house suspended from the crosspieces.

HYDROCYANIC ACID GAS.

I would like to know why they always say to use hydrocyanic acid gas at night. Why can't it be used in the daytime? It makes it bad about firing and ventilating at this time of the year if used at night. Two hours after opening the ventilators I go in and fire up and it generally gives me a sore chest and dry throat for a few hours and I am not in good condition to sing at the funeral of the pests, although I feel like it.

A. G.

I know of no reason why this gas should be generated after dark any more than fumigating with tobacco is always done at inconvenience after dark, but we think the reason for this old established belief is that during the day, particularly a day of bright sunshine, our plants are slightly weakened and they are less able to resist any gases or fumes deleterious to their health.

As for any trouble with your throat or chest, you have not surely followed the methods that have for several years been advised for generating this gas or you would have no occasion to moderate the temperature of the house or interfere with ventilation. An hour before sunset you can put your jars in place, mix the water and sulphuric acid, drop in your parcels of cyanide, lock your house and go home and contemplate the final going home of myriads of black, brown and green aphids.

TWIN CITIES.*The Market.

Business the past week has been very dull. Occasionally one would be favored with a funeral order, but as a rule there was practically nothing doing. Prices remained firm. Stock is coming in steadily, and it appears that the supply about equals the demand. While some stores were carrying heavy stocks at the end of the week, by inquiry it was found to be stock shipped in from outside points. Our growers are not cutting much stock, possibly on account of the cloudy weather that we have had the past week. But there appears to be considerable stock in the bud.

Minneapolis.

The Powers Mercantile Co. appears to be disposing of considerable stock, but most of it is of a second grade; for instance, carnations that sell for 75 cents a dozen and roses for $1.25 and $1.50 a dozen. Owing to the great number of people that pass through their place every day it is not to be wondered that they do a large business. A small percentage of them stopping at the cut flower department insures a good trade.

Swanson seems to be doing very well. He has a fine, attractive place and, while business is not rushing, there are some good sales.

The New York Florist, located in the Nicollet hotel block, are disposing of large numbers of carnations, which are a specialty with this concern.

There was some demand for flowers for the victims of the West hotel fire, but as the majority of the unfortunates were from a considerable distance from here, the demand was not as heavy as it would otherwise have been.

St. Paul.

The writer had the pleasure of a call at the St. Paul Floral Co. plant, run by Frank Gustafson, formerly of L. L. May & Co. In all he has about 35,000 feet of glass. Brides and Maids are grown principally and, while the weather has been against us, he is cutting some good stock daily. He also has some Enchantress carnations which are very good. Jubilee is still grown here and seems to be a success.

A short distance from the St. Paul Floral Co. is the plant of N. C. Hansen, who grows nothing but carnations, and they are all fine. He has for a white The Queen, with which he has been very successful. He has also had good success with Enchantress and Flamingo. Guardian Angel is grown extensively. Mr. Hansen is to be complimented on the neatness in which his houses are kept. A few years ago Mr. Hansen started with one small house; today he has five houses 24x100 feet, which is evidence of thrift and energy.

Among the callers for the past week were J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs; J. Jensen, Hillegom, Holland; J. Q. A. Turnbull, representing E. H. Hunt, Chicago.

FELIX.

NEW YORK.*The Market.

The market holds its own, which means that it is as good as usual at this season of the year and prices hold fairly steady. This is perhaps due as much to the limited shipments as to any other cause, nothing unusual in the way of weddings and funerals having taken place since our last report. This week the largest automobile show the world has ever seen may furnish power to give a little more speed to society's demand.

Carnations have been retrograding in price during the past week, but close at hand is McKinley day, more talked of and written about than ever before and more likely to be observed.

Lilies are in good demand at advancing prices. Violets are abundant and non-aggressive. It is hard work to force the price above 75 cents for the very best. May as well call it an "off year" for violets and have done with it. Some stock begins to regain its natural perfume again. This sells readily.

Oreholds hold steadily and there is never an overstock. There is too big a field now for that, and too limited a supply for this big country.

Various Notes.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club will take place at the St. Denis hotel Saturday evening, February 3. Tickets may be had of Walter F. Sheridan, 39 West Twenty-eighth street.

The ex-officers of the New York Florists' Club have formed an association for mutual benefit and reunion, inaugurating its existence with a dinner at one of the famous hostelrys. All the presidents, vice-presidents, secretaries, treasurers and trustees are eligible and enthusiastic as to its success.

John Scott, the new president, is a busy man, with greenhouse building and Scott's shipments and the absorbing duties of his new office. He was in attendance at the first meeting of the outgoing committee last week, where complete arrangements were made for the club's annual holiday. Liberal donations were assured and the committee, with Wheeler as chairman, promises something much larger than usual.

The ball of the wholesale employees was a great success. At midnight there must have been nearly 1,000 in the grand march, the enormous floor space being entirely filled. The decorations were profuse and to Frank Sheehan belongs the credit. Christmas trees and an abundance of lycopodium roping were used and flowers were distributed to the ladies. The wholesale and retail houses bought tickets liberally and the boys figured up a handsome profit as the result of their enterprise. The officers were: Nicholas C. Schreiner, president; Charles Matthews, vice-president; John Foley, treasurer; Elmer Greatfield, financial secretary; John Egenbrod, recording secretary; Arthur Wiese, sergeant-at-arms; Frederick K. Bohlman, floor director; George J. Allen, assistant floor director.

So impressed were some of the retailers present by the success of the ball that arrangements were made for an organization of retailers and their employees with a view to a similar event early in March, at the Lexington opera house or Madison Square Garden. All interested are asked to meet at the store of Harry Hoffmeyer on the evening of Monday, January 22, to perfect arrangements. Messrs. Gottlieb, of McConnell's, and Good, of Scallen's, are prominent boomers of the enterprise, which can be made a great success.

The Tarrytown dinner came along Wednesday evening of this week, a little later than usual. This is the only florists' club dinner in the country I have met where only temperance beverages prevail. But its popularity and excellence are proverbial and the men who miss it are few and far between. There was a large New York delegation and with it the award committee of the New York Florists' Club on a visit to the new introductions of the F. R. Pierson Co.

Henry Smith, a gardener, has brought suit against Helen Gould for $10,000 damages for injuries received while spraying trees on her estate. It seems a chemical solution was scattered through some defect of the hose, injuring his eyes, face and arms. This could not have been Esler's reliable hose, which needs no insurance against anything, not even hail.

Carnation House of Gunnar Teilmann, Marion, Ind.

There seems to be no limit to the enterprise of New York's park commissioners. The latest absorption is the village of Bronxdale, with its 2,000 population, which is soon to become a part of the famous Bronx park, an addition altogether of over 200 acres. The cost of the acquisition to the city will be some $2,000,000. This added makes Bronx and Central parks similar in area.

The attendance from this center at the Boston convention will be a representative one. New Yorkers have some very striking novelties to exhibit and one of the New York wholesalers will read a paper.

A. S. Burns was among the victims of unseasonable weather. Most of the afflicted of last week are convalescing.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, left for Omaha on Sunday to preside at the convention of the plant section of the American Breeders' Association. He will have to hustle to get back to Boston for the carnation meeting.

Arthur T. Boddington's business is growing very rapidly. He is on his annual visit to his customers in the Lennox section. The home interests are cared for by Mr. Begbie. Night work is necessary to keep pace with the accumulating trade.

Lion & Co. will make a specialty of their Colonial brand of florists' ribbons and report very encouraging progress since establishing themselves at 114 to 116 Spring street.

An abundance of white lilac is found at Ford Bros. this week, of superb quality.

A. L. Young and A. Moltz were among the wholesalers making merry at the ball last Saturday evening. Theo. Lang was a prominent figure in the grand march.

The Bowling Club "died a'borning." Many of the old club have joined other organizations. Later another effort will be made to get the Dayton match provided for and a harmonious club established. In the meantime, Flatbush and Thums' alleys furnish congenial opportunities for practice and enjoyment.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was in the city Monday on his way to Boston, a guest of Alex. Guttman, whose carnation, Victory, he has made one of his specialties. Mr. Skidelsky reports he is entirely sold out of the Schroeter carnation, Rosepink Enchantress, and has been returning orders since the first of the year. He predicts a great demand for the new rose, Queen Beatrice.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

Prices remain about the same as they were a week ago. There are prospects of a break in the price of carnations if the Philadelphians continue to unload on this city. The local rose growers are sending in good stock of American Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and Chatenay, which is quickly taken. The demand continues steadily, with a possible increase, for all good stock suitable for table decorations. The winter thus far has been favorable both for the growth and use of violets; consequently they are of good quality and move freely at fair prices. Excepting Paper White narcissi, which are plentiful, cut bulb stock is very shy. There is a considerable movement in lilac for decorative purposes, but as a pot plant it is not a success.

There is considerable demand for primroses, hyacinths and other spring flowers in pots and pans, those in 5-inch and 6-inch pots retailing at 50 and 75 cents each.

The Growers.

A. Gude & Bro.'s greenhouses show a fine stock of American Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and other roses, as well as carnations, and the great variety of pot stock that is in demand in a first-class store such as theirs. In addition to superintending their extensive greenhouses, Adolphus Gude finds time to branch out in other lines of business and report has it that he is making money in all of them. Being a good fellow he deserves it.

Alexander B. Garden is said to be the hardest working grower in the District. He was born and has always lived on the place which he now successfully superintends. It is probable that his disposition for work has some connection with his being such a stayer. He has recently made extensive improvements in his range. In addition to roses and carnations, he is having good success with bulbs, lilac and other forcing stock.

F. H. Kramer divides his time between his range, store and the Center Market, where he does a large business. Just now he is busy getting up a stock of the Queen Beatrice rose, for dissemination. He has also a prolific stock of Bride, Bridesmaid and Golden Gate. In azaleas, bulb stock, Crimson Rambler roses, palms and ferns he is keeping well up in the procession.

Peter Bisset is experimenting with Aralia cordata, introduced from Japan by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This is a food plant "to be used as a salad with French dressing," at least that is what the recipe says, but the writer, who has always plumed himself on being a civilized man, because he wanted all his "wittels" cooked, can eat this new plant raw, and like Oliver Twist, call for more. It is more tender and tastes better than celery and will undoubtedly become popular. SCOTTY.

There seems to be no limit to the enterprise of New York's park commissioners. The latest absorption is the village of Bronxdale, with its 2,000 population, which is soon to become a part of the famous Bronx park, an addition altogether of over 200 acres. The cost of the acquisition to the city will be some $2,000,000. This added makes Bronx and Central parks similar in area.

The attendance from this center at the Boston convention will be a representative one. New Yorkers have some very striking novelties to exhibit and one of the New York wholesalers will read a paper.

A. S. Burns was among the victims of unseasonable weather. Most of the afflicted of last week are convalescing.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, left for Omaha on Sunday to preside at the convention of the plant section of the American Breeders' Association. He will have to hustle to get back to Boston for the carnation meeting.

Arthur T. Boddington's business is growing very rapidly. He is on his annual visit to his customers in the Lenox section. The home interests are cared for by Mr. Pegbie. Night work is necessary to keep pace with the accumulating trade.

Lion & Co. will make a specialty of their Colonial brand of florists' ribbons and report very encouraging progress since establishing themselves at 114 to 116 Spring street.

An abundance of white lilac is found at Ford Bros. this week, of superb quality.

A. L. Young and A. Moltz were among the wholesalers making merry at the ball last Saturday evening. Theo. Lang was a prominent figure in the grand march.

The Bowling Club "died a burning." Many of the old club have joined other organizations. Later another effort will be made to get the Dayton match provided for and a harmonious club established. In the meantime, Flatbush and Thums' alleys furnish congenial opportunities for practice and enjoyment.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was in the city Monday on his way to Boston, a guest of Alex. Guttman, whose carnation, Victory, he has made one of his specialties. Mr. Skidelsky reports he is entirely sold out of the Schroeter carnation, Rosepink Enchantress, and has been returning orders since the first of the year. He predicts a great demand for the new rose, Queen Beatrice.

State of Business.

Prices remain about the same as they were a week ago. There are prospects of a break in the price of carnations if the Philadelphians continue to unload on this city. The local rose growers are sending in good stock of American Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and Chatenay, which is quickly taken. The demand continues steadily, with a possible increase, for all good stock suitable for table decorations. The winter thus far has been favorable both for the growth and use of violets; consequently they are of good quality and move freely at fair prices. Excepting Paper White narcissi, which are plentiful, cut bulb stock is very shy. There is a considerable movement in lilac for decorative purposes, but as a pot plant it is not a success.

There is considerable demand for primroses, hyacinths and other spring flowers in pots and pans, those in 5 inch and 6 inch pots retailing at 50 and 75 cents each.

The Growers.

A. Gude & Bro.'s greenhouses show a fine stock of American Beauty, Bride, Bridesmaid, Golden Gate and other roses, as well as carnations, and the great variety of pot stock that is in demand in a first-class store such as theirs. In addition to superintending their extensive greenhouses, Adolphus Gude finds time to branch out in other lines of business and report has it that he is making money in all of them. Being a good fellow he deserves it.

Alexander B. Garden is said to be the hardest working grower in the District. He was born and has always lived on the place which he now successfully superintends. It is probable that his disposition for work has some connection with his being such a stayer. He has recently made extensive improvements in his range. In addition to roses and carnations, he is having good success with bulbs, lilac and other forcing stock.

F. H. Kramer divides his time between his range, store and the Center Market, where he does a large business. Just now he is busy getting up a stock of the Queen Beatrice rose, for dissemination. He has also a prolific stock of Bride, Bridesmaid and Golden Gate. In azaleas, bulb stock, Crimson Rambler roses, palms and ferns he is keeping well up in the procession.

Peter Bisset is experimenting with Aralia cordata, introduced from Japan by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This is a food plant "to be used as a salad with French dressing," at least that is what the recipe says, but the writer, who has always pruned himself on being a civilized man, because he wanted all his "swittels" cooked, can eat this new plant raw, and like Oliver Twist, call for more. It is more tender and tastes better than celery, and will undoubtedly become popular. See...

The Great Central Market.

The market suffered another relapse during the later half of last week, but was showing signs of renewed activity at the beginning of the present period. Carnations suffered in price more than any other item last week. There has been something approaching a glut, and while prices on the best grade of goods have been fairly well maintained, the lower grades and those which were carried over, have sold out cheaply. This week cuts have been somewhat reduced and the market has been gradually stiffening.

Beauty crops are just coming on and prices are weaker, with a prospect of a still further decline as soon as we have a little bright weather. Quality is excellent in every particular. Maids are showing the effect of the dark weather, the color being off. The substance in teas continues good. Brides are quickly picked up because of the large amount of funeral work, which also keeps white carnations cleaned up. Harrisii, callas, Paper Whites, Romans and white tulips are selling fairly well because of the same demand. Violets are not in large supply but are ample for all requirements, as there seems to be no special use for this flower this season. Stevia is selling well and mignonette goes nicely. A considerable number of cypripediums is seen. McKellar reports good demand for cattleyas for fine funeral work.

The green goods market is steady. Dealers are drawing upon their storage stocks of ferns and there are no idle moments for the boys; picking over is necessary.

Retailers Meet.

The Retail Florists' Association held its second meeting Monday night. The directors reported a constitution and by-laws which were adopted and ordered printed. They follow closely the phraseology of the laws of the Florists' Club. The directors sought also to curb the ardor of some of the members, and to allay the fears aroused by thoughtless assertions, by a declaration of the association's aims and objects, which they indicated to be as peaceful as a mid-summer morning—but before adjournment the directors were instructed to map out a plan of action against the "red violet" business. They are to report it January 29. Temporary officers were made permanent, adding Chas. Schneider as vice-president. Incorporation was ordered. More than a dozen new members were added.

The wholesalers have indicated their willingness to, as a body, receive a proposition from the retailers looking to mutual concessions.

Club Meeting.

President Hauswirth occupied the chair for the first half hour of the club meeting January 11, but was called away and Vice-president Leonard Kill presided for the balance of the evening. Philip Schupp, manager of J. A. Budlong's wholesale store, and J. M. Smely, Aurora, Ill., were elected to membership. Applications was received from John Ziska and N. P. Miller. P. J. Hauswirth was made a committee of one to arrange for a party to the Boston carnation convention. Prof. A. C. Beal, of Urbana, was present and urged that all present join the State Florists' Association. Jas. Hartshorne brought a vase of a fine red seedling carnation.

The entertainment committee announced a special meeting at Clark and Devon avenue at 7:30 tonight. There will be supper and entertainment. It is expected all club members and a large number of growers will be present.

Various Notes.

News of the accidental death of J. A. Budlong, chronicled in another column, was a great shock to his many warm friends in the market. The Florists' Club held a special meeting at Winter-son's Wednesday afternoon and attended the funeral in a body.

Emil Buettner is sending the A. L. Randall Co. the first white lilac of the season. Quality is good.

The leading retailers nearly all shared in the work for Dr. Harper. The obsequies extended over three days and were of a character in keeping with the distinguished nature of the great educator's services to the city and the world. Orders for flowers came from many European governments and from all parts of America. The work was all choice and there was much of it but all that lay on the casket during the several periods it was open to public view was a single stalk of Harrisii with a purple ribbon.

The death of Marshall Field at New York January 16 has made a deep impression in Chicago business circles. He was one of the first to see the possibilities of a great central market and he has since done more than any other man to spread the fame of commercial Chicago. He was Chicago's leading citizen and business will be practically suspended on Friday during the hour of the funeral. Samuelson has the family order; the omission of other flowers is requested.

Arrangements have been made for those going to the carnation convention to travel via the Lake Shore. All who can join the Chicago party are asked to address P. J. Hauswirth, 227 Michigan avenue, who will make arrangements as to leaving time to suit the greatest number. Cleveland, Buffalo and other towns en route are expected to join. The round trip fare will be $29.35.

L. Coatsworth and wife plan a trip to Cuba and Jamaica about February 1, to be absent several weeks. Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Bassett had arranged to start for Cuba on Saturday but have postponed their departure for a few days.

Peter Reinberg has a piece of a little over two acres of land that has been a sore spot in his eyes, so last Saturday he bought glass to cover it up. Any further addition will require more real estate. Mr. Reinberg has also yielded to the insistence of his constituents and will be a candidate for re-election to the council.

P. J. Foley was at his office last week for the first time since the flower show. He lost only thirty-eight pounds during his illness and is rapidly getting it back.

John Degnan has returned from his trip to New York and Philadelphia, where he bought the new stock of supplies for the Chicago Rose Co. He went over to Flatbush one night and won a silk muffler in the bowling.

On Monday A. Lange opened his new store at 40 Madison street. It is small but very neat and makes a fine show from the busy street.

George Reinberg is getting into another crop of Beauties, which is always

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

We are still having spring-like weather, which of course, has a bad effect on business. Stock of all kinds is very plentiful and prices are not what they should be at this time of the year. There seems to be plenty of funeral work but outside of this trade is slow.

There is a fine lot of stock in almost everything and prices are lower than for some time. Carnations are coming in more heavily every day and in order to dispose of them on Saturday prices were made to suit the buyer in thousand lots, in all varieties. The stock is of a fine quality, especially Lawson and Enchan-tress. There are plenty of Brides and Maids for all demands. Perles, too, are plentiful, with slow demand. Extra fancy Richmonds are scarce. Carnot is off crop. Extra long Beauties are not coming in as they should, as the demand is good for them. Other grades are plentiful.

Bulbous stock is piled up at all the commission houses at cheap prices. A few tulips and Von Sions are in. Cal-las, too, are coming in better. Harrisii is scarce. California violets are in great abundance and have sold as low as $3.50 per thousand. Doubles fetch 75 cents per hundred but sales are slow, as Cali-fornias have the call here. All greens seem to move better this week.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held a very impor-tant meeting January 11 at which nearly twenty-five members were present. The treasurer, Mr. Meinhardt, was prevented from attending on account of the sick-ness of Mrs. Meinhardt.

It was decided to hold our annual carnation show at the next meeting. First and second premiums will be given for twenty-five white, red, light pink, dark pink and variegated. The prizes will be $3 for first and $2 for second in each class. Competition is open to all. Grow-ers of new varieties are also invited to send their newest kinds. The trustees will see to the staging and taking care of stock.

Carl Beyer led a discussion on "Fore-ing Blooming Plants for Easter," which was very interesting. Those taking part in the discussion were John Steidle, R. J. Scott, H. Braun, J. F. Ammann, E. Schray, George Windler and George M. Kellogg. The other discussion on "Man-aging a Flower Show" did not take place. John Steidle gave a very inter-esting talk on his trip to Chicago. The president also called on Mr. Burrows for a talk on his southern trip among the smilax men. This was Mr. Burrows' first appearance at our meeting and he made a good impression.

The next meeting will take place on Thursday afternoon, February 8, at which two more discussions will take place, one by John Steidle, on "The Newer Carnations and How to Grow Them," the other by J. J. Beneke, "The Best Means of Bringing a Flower Show before the Public." These and the car-nation show should bring out a large attendance.

Various Notes.

L. Baumann, of Chicago, was a caller the past week selling florists' supplies.

Judge Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was in East St. Louis attending supreme court the past week and spent a day in the city.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville, was in town Thursday to attend the club meet-ing and reports a good holiday trade.

George M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, came down especially to attend the club meeting Thursday. Mr. Kellogg reports everything in fine shape at his large plant.

Theo Miller, Henry Felter and Charlie Kuehn paid a visit to J. F. Ammann, at Edwardsville, the past week. They report the place in fine shape.

W. J. Pileher had a fine lot of chick-ens at the chicken show last week. He came in for a few blue ribbons.

The St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, is busy building new houses.

A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, Ill., re-ports a fine holiday trade in all lines, and trade has been good ever since.

The Ellison Floral Co. was kept very busy the past week with two large wed-dings and other work.

The Riessen Floral Co. reports a very busy week with funeral work.

James North, formerly of the North Floral Co., and who is now with Honaker, at Lexington, Ky., called on friends here the past week. He likes his new berth.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, continues to send in white chrysanthemums. Some good blooms were seen at Ellis' the past week.

The florist bowlers lost two of the three games last week to the Fern Glens. Capt. Beyer is still unable to roll, on account of trouble with their boiler. In the games Ellison was high, followed by Meinhardt, Beneke, Kuehn and Lohrenz. This week they meet the Enterprise team.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business January 6 has not been very favorable but the supply of roses and carnations has not been enough to overstock the market and prices have held up well. Calla lilies and Paper Whites have been overplentiful for the past two weeks and the call for sweet peas and valley has also been slow. Single and double violets are down to 60 cents and 75 cents per hundred for the best and the demand is slow. The cut flower business has kept up well but it is the fellow who does the funeral work that has had the real dull times the past week. The market for green goods continues active.

Various Notes.

At the annual meeting of the Florists' Exchange January 1 the report showed an increase in business of twenty-five per cent. The board of directors were re-elected as follows: John M. Rider, I. H. Moss, F. G. Burger, E. A. Seidewitz, C. E. Akehurst, W. G. Lehr and F. C. Bauer. The board elected E. A. Seidewitz president, F. C. Bauer vice-president, W. G. Lehr treasurer and C. Akehurst secretary. A committee was appointed to secure plans and estimates for a new building which is expected to be ready by spring. The Florists' Exchange of Baltimore is said to be the first organization of its kind in America. It was founded in 1890, through the efforts of E. A. Seidewitz, its first and present president.

Mr. Addison, formerly assistant manager at the Florists' Exchange, was married New Year's week.

The new seedling white carnation shown at the last club meeting by Fred Bauer looks very promising and was well spoken of.

At the last club meeting R. Vincent, Jr., spoke very interestingly on his recent trip abroad. Being largely interested in geraniums and dahlias, he made it his object to visit the large growers of that sort of stock, but said it was a hard matter to obtain quantity, no matter what the price. Mr. Vincent spoke very highly of the exhibit at the Crystal Palace, London, saying that he never saw a show in our large cities to equal it in artistic arrangement of the exhibits and also the floral designs, with an overflowing attendance of all classes of people.

George Fox, of West North avenue, has closed his store and expects to go south in the near future.

Charles Erdmann had considerable damage done to his greenhouses by fire New Year's week.

A meeting of the committee of the State Horticultural Society acting jointly with the committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held January 9 to lay plans for the erection of a horticultural and exhibition hall which it is proposed to build with state aid. The committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club were J. N. Boon, Thomas H. Patterson, I. H. Moss, N. F. Flitton and Fred Bauer. From the Maryland State Horticultural Society were R. Vin-

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business the past week has been very slow, the demand being much less than for the corresponding week of last year, but fortunately the supply has been limited, so there has been but little loss, violets both single and double being the worst sufferers. The slow business was caused by the very pleasant weather we have been having. Prices are quoted the same as last week, but lots of stuff has been jobbed at lower prices.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's smoker was a success in every way, the large crowd enjoying themselves very much, and the discussions on eel worms by some of our leading growers brought out some very different ideas on this important subject. Arguments of this kind cannot help but do good for all the members, and many of them would like to see an exhibition of the members' skill, in producing cut flowers or plants, something nice that they have grown and were willing to place on exhibition. A meeting of this kind once a month would surely bring out a big crowd, and then to wind up the season by holding a flower show at one of the armories for the education of the public would do much good in many ways.

H. R. Carlton and wife, of Willoughby, will take in the coming carnation convention at Boston. It being his old home he will certainly have a pleasant time renewing old friendships. Guy Bate, president of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., will also attend the convention, representing that firm with a working model of their everlasting tile bench.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Taken on the whole the market is very good, better than at the same season for some years. The dull season, which usually lasts for a month after Christmas, is this year less pronounced. The supply of both roses and carnations is smaller and each of these chief staples is selling very well.

American Beauties sell for from $6 to $9 per dozen for the best. Brides and Maids vary from $3 to $12 per hundred, a very few selling higher. Some very good Chatenay are coming in and sell well at from $4 to $16. Liberty is abundant and lower in price; same rates as Chatenay. Excellent Killarney are coming in and sell well, also Wellesley. Some very fine Richmond are seen and bring higher prices than Liberty, which latter it will largely displace next year. Some very good Mrs. Oliver Ames and Morgan are also seen.

Select carnations bring $4. Enchantress, Fenn and Mrs. Patten are now especially fine. Other grades vary from $2 to $3. Prosperity varies from $5 to $8, but only comes from a few growers. Violets run from 60 cents to $1 per hundred. Both Campbell and Princess of Wales are now of splendid quality. Sweet peas vary from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. The higher priced are very fine. There is more variety in bulbous stock. Golden Spur and double Von Sion narcissi come from several growers, in addition to Princes and Trumpet Major. Those and tulips sell at from $2 to $4 per hundred. Paper Whites and Romans are abundant and unchanged. Mignonette at from $3 to $6 and some extra good antirrhinum at $8 are seen. Freesia is of very fine quality and sells well. Lilies and callas are more abundant. Green stock remains about the same.

Carnation Convention.

Indications multiply that the coming convention will prove the banner one in the society's history. From west, north and south we hear of visitors and exhibitors who are coming and they will be well repaid for their trip.

We hope visitors will remember that delegates from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club wearing badges will be at the north and south terminal stations, as well as at the Back Bay station of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. and the Huntington avenue station of the Boston & Albany R. R. to meet all incoming trains on the morning of January 24. The two last named stations are very near the Copley Square hotel and Horticultural hall.

In a recent issue we stated that only 2,000 blooms were shown at Boston in 1895. This should have been 7,000, that being the number staged.

The A. C. S. usually has a snow storm as a side attraction. We hope climatic conditions may prove as favorable as on February 21 and 22, 1895, in Boston, and there will be no cause for complaint.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. will exhibit its concrete bench and there will be other allied exhibits of interest to growers.

Club Meeting.

There was a first-class attendance at the club meeting on January 16, about 100 members being present. The newly elected officers were installed and each spoke optimistically of the club's future, President Wheeler predicting the most successful year in the club's history with a membership of 400 ere its close.

The evening being known as carnation night, the well known carnation specialists, Messrs. M. A. Patten and Peter Fisher, spoke instructively on the past, present and future of the divine flower. All spoke optimistically as to the future of carnations. Interesting remarks from other members followed. It was voted to accept lady members.

The exhibits of the evening were largely of carnations, a number being seedlings. These would have been even more numerous but for the near approach of the carnation convention. Fisher's red seedling and M. A. Patten's Pink Patten were awarded reports of superior merit.

Carnation convention subjects and the proposed referring of applications to the executive committee took up some time. A good start for the new year was made, there being sixteen new members admitted and more promised for February. There were refreshments as usual, and it was a late hour ere the meeting closed, all present voting it a most enjoyable one.

Various Notes.

Dr. L. O. Howard, of Washington, who opened the lecture season at Horticultural hall on January 13, had a large audience to listen to his talk on "The Possibilities from Insect Parasites." He expressed strong hopes that the parasites obtained from Europe some time ago will eventually keep the brown tail and gypsy moth pests under control, in which hope his audience fervently joined.

J. W. Manning showed a plant of Azalea Hinodigee, a popular form of Azalea Indica, at Horticultural hall on January 13. The flowers are of a clear rosy pink color somewhat resembling A. amœna but larger and of a better shade of pink. The plant is hardy at the Reading Nurseries and should prove very useful.

The directors of the Music hall flower market have accepted a very advantageous offer to lease their present floor for theatrical purposes and will move into the basement of the same building, where a large staff of men are making the needful preparations for removal. The lower floor is the same size as the one now occupied. It will be well fitted up and brilliantly lighted and should prove just as serviceable as the present stand. It will contain an ice chest 10x35 feet and every convenience. The rental of the new location is less than half that of the present floor, which is a big item. It is hoped to have the new quarters ready for occupancy on or about January 22.

Doyle had the decorations, which were quite elaborate for the Armory ball at the Somerset on January 12.

Penn, on Bromfield street, had a very effective window decoration the past week, composed entirely of scarlet carnations and Lilium Harrisii.

David Lumsden has been engaged as manager by W. W. Edgar & Co., of Waverly. John Edgar goes as head grower for Peirce Bros.

The new souvenir catalogue of the Park street flower market, now practically completed, is a very handsome and up-to-date production.

W. L. Lewis, of Marlboro, has just acquired a fine new automobile, in which he may visit the convention if roads are in good order.

The employees of the A. H. Hews Co. were entertained to a banquet by Mrs. A. H. Hews, on January 13, at Odd Fellows' hall, North Cambridge. Music and other attractions added to the pleasures of the evening.

J. Tailby & Son brought in the first double Von Sion narcissi to the Music hall market on January 13. They are also cutting fine Golden Spur. They have been forwarding considerable stock to New York of late.

Thomas H. Meade, for the past seven years salesman for Jos. Breck & Sons, has left that firm and may start in on his own account.

H. Waldecker, of Braintree, has work well advanced on two new houses each 150 feet long.

John J. Fee, Lively & Bond and E. Sutermeister are all bringing in fine Golden Spur narcissi at present. The last named gentleman has also been bringing in fine pans of Dutch hyacinths.

Winsor carnation is doing grandly with Peter Murray, in Fairhaven. Mr. Murray grows this more largely than any other sort and it is more than upholding last year's reputation. F. R. Pierson Co., who purchased it, will show it at the coming convention. Having watched its behavior now for over three years we believe it to be one of the coming favorites.

L. H. Fellows, late of Vose & Fellows, Hyde Park, will erect several houses for himself next season.

Julius Heurlin, of the Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, has just recovered from a spell of sickness of several weeks' duration. Mr. Heurlin's increasing trade made necessary the purchase of 100 acres more land some time ago to be used largely for ornamental trees and shrubs. He is also building a propagating house.

The Market.

Last week was rather dull in cut flower circles. The supply was light but the demand was uncertain. Conditions have improved this week, there being greater activity, both locally and out of town. The supply of most flowers is still light. Choice roses are scarce and bring good prices, but the lower grades are more plentiful. Brides are scarcer than Bridesmaids, which makes them seem in better demand, an unusual occurrence in January. The fancy grades of carnations have fallen still more. White is scarcer than the colored sorts among the common varieties. Gardenias are much more plentiful and are lower in price. Valley has been in oversupply. Sweet peas are of good quality and seem much appreciated for dinners and teas. Calla lilies are plentiful and in demand. Both freesias and single daffodils are increasing in supply. White lilacs are more popular. Cattleyas are coming in freely.

and sell well, the white cattleya being more plentiful than last season, when it was a novelty. Greens are selling well. La Reine tulips have appeared.

Progress.

It was mentioned in the REVIEW exclusively, I think, that S. S. Pennock had taken possession of his new quarters in time for the Christmas rush. The workmen were swept back on Thursday before Christmas to make room for the great quantities of choice stock shipped in for the holidays. After New Year's, however, the workmen reclaimed the new building. They have been engaged since then in putting on the finishing touches, but now everything is in readiness for the opening, which is expected to take place next Monday, January 22. The new buildings are 1608 and 1610 Ludlow street, immediately adjoining numbers 1612 to 1618, now occupied by Mr. Pennock's wholesale establishment. The partition has been taken away, adding a floor space of about 44x60 to the already large area. Mr. Pennock's private office is in the front of the new addition. It is comfortable, convenient and well lighted. A freight elevator is among the improvements of the new building. A basement covering the entire space will be used as a storeroom. The rooms in the upper stories have all been rented as work-shops. Mr. Pennock is to be congratulated on his enterprise in so quickly turning a rather unsightly building into a neat and attractive place of business.

Various Notes.

An esteemed correspondent of a contemporary warmly and deservedly praises the number and loveliness of Alfred Burton's Beauties. Had this E. C. only taken time to stroll from the north to the south side of Willow Grove avenue, Wyndmoor, he would there have found that the Beauties produced by George Burton were bearing flowers no less numerous and fully as beautiful as those of his brother. There are two Richmonds in the field.

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of the Henry A. Dreer Co., sailed for Europe on January 16 on a flying business trip.

W. E. McKissick's fine grade of wild smilax is much sought after. He has had some large orders from prominent decorators.

Herbert Steinmetz took charge of a store on Eighth street, below Arch, early this month. This store was for many years run by Eugene Weiss. Mr. Weiss, it is said, will devote his attention to his rose farm at Hathboro.

Lemuel Ball, of Wisconsin, says that his Christmas, lasting throughout the fall, was very satisfactory. He was successful in coloring Dracaena terminalis in 4-inch pots better than ever before.

John Burton, assignee for Robert Craig & Son, transferred the property at Forty-ninth and Market streets to Robert A. Craig on January 10. It is understood that Robert A. Craig will, in turn, transfer this property to the new Robert Craig Company.

J. G. Whilldin went to New York on Wednesday to act as a government witness in deciding the value of some pottery imports.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving white tulips and freesia.

John Jensen, of West Philadelphia, has been cutting scarlet tulips since Christmas, and yellow tulips early in January.

Frank Ely reports that some varieties of aster, cosmos and sweet peas are likely to be scarce. He believes that his firm, the Henry F. Michell Co., will have plenty of all these seeds, their new crop being safely in the warehouse.

John Leech has resigned his position at Twenty-second and Diamond streets.

J. A. Smith, of H. F. Michell Co., returned on Tuesday from a very successful trip through Pennsylvania.

The Whilldin Pottery Co. had a larger stock on hand January 1 than ever before in its history. They are now running short on some sizes of pots. It is only fair to add that this is the company's first year with the REVIEW.

PHIL.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Florists here have had the best business on record, but now it is rather slack.

PEORIA, ILL.—Eleven firms were represented at a meeting at the store of Cole Bros. January 8, at which it was decided to invite the Illinois State Florists' Association to meet here in February.

MUSKOGEE, I. T.—J. L. Knisley, manager of the Muskogee Nursery Co., states that the call for cut flowers and pot plants has become so great that the company has decided to erect a range of greenhouses in the spring.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

Business since New Year's has been very fine and stock none too plentiful. Festivities of large size are not, and have not been, numerous, but that is more than balanced by a call for flowers for many different occasions. Carnations still seem the popular flower and when they are of good quality not one is wasted. Many of the finest carnations coming to Buffalo are grown by a gentleman who seldom favors Buffalo with his presence; he is too busy with his Lawton and Enchantress, for he is a corker for hard work. We are going out to spend the day with him very soon and that will be a better excuse to write up "Billy" Stroh, his model place and the small city of Attica, on the banks of the classical Tonawanda. This pretty Indian name of river and tribe is as musical and soft as the first notes of the bluebird in spring, and so is the river in August, but when on the rampage of a spring freshet it submerges many miles of farms and plays old Harry with roads. Most Indian names have a meaning, such as Niagara may mean falling water. From occasional summer drives through the Tonawanda Indian reservation we are convinced that the euphonious sounding Tonawanda means an Indian squaw not afraid of fire water.

Harry Bunyard was in town in the interest of Arthur Boddington. A visit from 'Arry is always a cure for dyspepsia. "don't you know, blame me bloomin' eyes."

Louis Lang, whose death was noticed a couple of weeks ago, was the surviving and connecting link between the old and new schools of floriculture in this city. He was a man of a kind, sociable disposition and of sterling integrity. Forty years ago there were about three commercial greenhouses in this vicinity. There were W. J. Palmer, Sr., on the Circle; Louis Lang, on North Division street, and John Pickleman, on High street. Mr. Lang's surroundings soon became the thickest populated part of the city and the smoke from the manufacturing part of the town made his glass opaque and about all the houses were capable of growing was the camellia. For years he had a great trade in this line of business. Those were the days that the camellia was king among flowers, and in ordering a cross, or wreath, or harp it was not size of design that was the consideration, but "How many camellias will you put in?"

What a change has come over us and what an interesting story some clever pen could record on the evolution of the business! Only a few men have been able to keep up with the steady march of progress, and with the change has come a new set of men, younger blood, and most of them have made their mark unfettered by old methods and traditions. If this young blood does not pretend to know floriculture as widely as the disappearing generation, it has energy, without which the wisdom of Socrates or the genius of Shakespeare are of no avail. W. S.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.—Flouner & Sons have moved their greenhouse opposite the cemetery, where they hope to be rewarded by doing a better business in the spring. The move was expensive.

AUGUSTA, GA.—Henry W. T. Balk, manager of Balk's Nursery, says cut flower and plant trade is increasing steadily. Their greenhouses are on Greene street, with salesroom with the Cable Piano Co. down-town.

THE REVIEW is certainly a grand paper; I could not be without it at double its cost.—N. L. WILSON, Oxford, Pa.

I SHALL continue to be a subscriber as long as the REVIEW keeps up to its present high standard.—JAS. CROSBIE, Medford, Mass.

For the enclosed $2 kindly extend our subscription to December, 1907. We like the REVIEW very much and do not see how anyone can afford to do without it.—J. C. BIGELOW & SON, Utica, N. Y.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

THE selection of Toledo for the next seed trade convention seems to give general satisfaction.

RED and white onion sets are reported in brisk demand at good prices. Yellows are following suit.

Now that the price of onion seed is settled, the next thing is to satisfy the man who wants to buy it.

WE still think that San Jose, Cal., would have been equal to the occasion if the convention had been given it.

It looks strange to see a retail catalogue bearing the name of C. C. Morse & Co. The book is very creditable.

VISITED CHICAGO: Joe L. Ullathorne, of Ullathorne Seed Co., Memphis, Tenn.; Max Wilhelmi, of F. Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kan.

It is noticeable in the seed catalogues at hand, that the houses supposedly best able to stand for low prices are among the top-notchers.

THE U. S. Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York has determined that fifty-seven pounds is a bushel of onions.

WEEBER & DON, New York, have Southport White Globe onions, $1.75 per lb., in their wholesale list, and $3 per lb. in the retail catalogue.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co. state in their wholesale list published January 8 that more than 30,000 miles were traveled to inspect the seed crops of 1905.

DAVID HERBERT & SON, Atco, N. J., announce that they have purchased the assets of L. K. Peacock, Inc. Mr. Peacock will be associated with them.

TOLEDO, O.—C. S. Burge, of S. W. Flower & Co., has been delegated to take charge of the arrangements for entertaining the Seed Trade convention next June.

H. F. MICHELL Co. says that treating sweet pea seed with nitro-culture before sowing will produce larger flowers, cause earlier flowering and prolong the season of bloom.

PETER HOLLENBACH, Chicago, suggests that a lake trip from Chicago to Toledo via Detroit be recommended for the consideration of the western contingent as a part of the transportation program for the 1906 convention.

THE Minnesota experiment station is making an effort to interest farmers in seed selection by means of a prize contest, for the purpose of increasing the state's average yield of wheat, oats and corn.

THE good prices at which sweet corn is quoted in the current catalogues is gratifying to the growers who, in the face of an apparent overplus of the article, held that final results would show a comparatively short crop.

NEW SWEET PEAS

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;
$1.75 per doz. (Retail, 25 cents).

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

TOLEDO MEETING.

The REVIEW of last week contained our correspondent's telegram from Philadelphia, the first published information of the action of the executive committee in choosing Toledo, O., as the next meeting place for the American Seed Trade Association. The following is Secretary Kendel's notice of the meeting:

"The executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association held a meeting at Dooner's hotel, Philadelphia, January 10, and decided that because so few of the members were able to go to California, it would be better to postpone that trip and accept the invitation to hold the next convention at Toledo, O. There were present President W. H. Grenell, Secretary C. E. Kendel, C. N. Page, S. F. Willard, M. H. Duryea and F. W. Bolgiano. Of the Philadelphia seedsmen there were present W. Atlee Burpee, H. M. Earle, W. P. Stokes, H. W. Johnson, Burnett Landreth, and Chas. H. Breck, of Boston."

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

It is a matter of considerable comment and some surprise to not a few seed buyers, on receipt of the various wholesale catalogues from European seed exporting firms, to notice the very great difference in prices quoted by the leading German growers and the best Italian houses, for some of the principal articles contained in their lists. The difference is especially noticeable in asters, an article which is particularly a German specialty. Some of the leading German houses are quoting three times the quotation for Italian Dwarf Bouquet, and twice as much for the Comet section. In Victoria aster the variation is still more pronounced, and it is the same through practically all the varieties of asters and also with many other leading sorts of flower seeds. With vegetable seeds the difference is almost as marked. There can hardly be all this great difference in quality; in fact, many buyers will tell you the one is as good as the other and the mere fact of the Italian firms keeping their old customers and continually increasing their business proves the quality of their seeds is up to the mark. There may be some few lines which are not improved, even if not deteriorated, by warmer climatic conditions, but in the growing of the great majority of seeds for seed purposes only, especially flower seeds, success and failure usually depend on good weather conditions for the proper ripening and harvesting. It should also be noted the leading Italian firms particularly guarantee their asters to be in no way inferior to the German strains. It may be imagined that the wholesale seed buyer who has not already done so will not be slow to make some seed trials and see for himself which quotation is actually the best value for the money.

PUBLICATION OF SEED TESTS.

The Secretary of Agriculture has obtained the opinion of the Attorney General on the legality of the Act of Congress which directs the Secretary of Agriculture to purchase and test grass seeds and to publish the results where adulteration or misbranding is found. A part of the opinion, dated January 12, 1906, is as follows:

You say that "It has been suggested that the Congress did not have the power to authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to go into the open market and purchase samples of seeds, to test the same and to publish the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for mercial or police regulation. It does not prohibit or restrict the sale of misbranded or adulterated seeds. It simply provides for the dissemination of information in regard to those matters. It is true the effect of the information so imparted may be to lessen the sale of misbranded or adulterated seeds; but that is not sufficient to transform a measure intended for the education and enlightenment of the public into a regulation of commerce or police. Such a view would prevent the Government from publishing any information whatever upon the subjects of agriculture, manufacture and commerce, because the tendency of all such information is to promote or restrict those pursuits.

So far as the statute in question is concerned, the sale, shipment and transportation of the seeds mentioned remain entirely untrammelled. It is yet for Congress in the exercise of its power over interstate and foreign commerce, and for the states, in the exercise of their police powers, to regulate and control this matter within their respective jurisdictions. A bill was introduced at the second session of the 58th Congress (H. R. 9609) and reintroduced at the present session of the 59th Congress (H. R. 4480) which in terms prohibits the introduction into this country and the interstate shipment of adulterated and misbranded seeds, and their sale in the District of Columbia and the territories of the United States, and makes a violation of the act a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment. Here, of course, is regulation, and for that reason it is confined to subjects within the jurisdiction of Congress.

Doubtless but for the fact that Congress has directed the name of the seller of the misbranded or adulterated articles to be published, no question would have arisen in respect to this legislation. But that fact in no way alters the character of the legislation. It still remains a measure for the dissemination of useful information in regard to seeds, the publication of the name of the seller being only an incidental matter. It is true the seller may in some cases be innocent of any intentional deception. Still he has sold misbranded seed, and the publication goes no further than to state that mere fact. Besides, the question as to what information shall be published about these investigations and experiments is entirely for the determination of Congress. I see no constitutional objection, therefore, to your carrying out the mandate of the law.

France and other countries. This resolution called forth an interesting discussion by many members. The discussion was not as to whether the resolution should be adopted. Everyone present realized the crying need of such a move and the discussion was along the lines of how much good would be accomplished by such a chart. The society is to secure a copy of the chart adopted by the French Chrysanthemum Society for the use of its members. There was a nice exhibit of carnations by Baur & Smith and John Hartje. Candace shown by the latter was awarded a certificate of merit. The out-of-town members were W. W. ## The Market.

Business has improved somewhat over last week and trade is moving along at a very nice gait. Decorations of various descriptions have helped the market out and all first-class stock was sold quickly and at good prices. The price of Beauties has dropped somewhat, but is still very fair value. The supply of this flower is increasing a great deal and that will surely lower the price in a week or so, especially if the kind of weather continues which we are having at present. Maids are in heavy demand and other varieties of roses are not far behind. There is no surplus stock in roses.

Carnations are coming nicely and sell well at a little reduction in price. Lilies, both Harrisii and callas, are coming in larger numbers and sell well. Other bulbous stock, such as narcissi, Romans and valley, are all to be had and sell fairly well. Tulips are on the market at $2 to $4 per hundred.

Violets are in heavy supply, both single and double. Some fine stock is being sent in. The demand is not quite what it ought to be.

Various Notes.

The long contest as to who shall be B. P. Critchell's successor has been settled by the appointment of J. W. Rodgers, a well-known and popular florist of Price Hill, aged 34 years and engaged to be married to Miss Martha Meyer. Mr. Critchell has been a very capable superintendent, and Mr. Rodgers comes into office just as much important work is to be undertaken.

There will not be many Cincinnati florists at the Boston carnation show. So far B. Witterstaetter, Will Sunderbruch and Ed Foster are the only ones who will go. There may be others at the last moment. It is too long a journey for most of the boys, as they would have to be away not less than a week. Mr. Witterstaetter expects to stage Aristocrat and it will be in fine form. The Cincinnati delegation will leave here Monday at noon.

Wm. Murphy has been taking a trip through the south.

Julius Baer has had a large decoration in Charleston, W. Va.

A visit to the Hoffmeister Floral Co. greenhouses shows them to be in good shape. Since giving up the store on Elm street they have been conducting a retail business over the phone from their greenhouses and they report it as quite a success. Business has been fine with them. They grow all their own stock and do it in good form. They operate twenty-seven houses, making quite a large expanse of glass. C. J. OHMER.

PACIFIC COAST.

PASADENA, CAL.—The annual rose tournament January 1 was the most elaborate in history. It is estimated that 5,000 visitors were in the city to see the floral parade and to participate in the many festivities.

LONG BEACH, CAL.—The week before Christmas there was a freeze which did great injury to the outdoor carnations, so that there will be few if any good blooms for at least two months. The Alamitos Nursery is building a greenhouse 18x60 for ferns and bedding plants, and a house for roses is contemplated a little later in the season.

SEASON SHORTENED.

From present indications, and according to the prophecies of some of our oldest "weather sharps," the Pacific coast is going to have a "dry year" again this season. This condition may not appeal to our eastern horticulturists, but to the Californian it means a great deal. We are now in the middle of January and we have only had a fractional part of our usual rainfall. When it is taken into consideration that our planting must practically be completed by the first of March, things begin to look serious both for the grower and the planter.

In both central and southern California at the present writing there has been insufficient rainfall to permit digging stock properly, the ground in most instances not being moist over eight inches in depth. This rule will, of course, not apply in districts where the soil is sandy or where considerable irrigating has been done during the late summer and fall, but in the majority of our commercial nurseries the natural rainfall is relied on both for the digging and the customer's ability to replant.

Our season at the best is at least six weeks shorter than that of the eastern and middle states and when, with the approach of warmer weather, which usually comes early in March, the buds of the deciduous trees begin to swell and grow, we know we have reached our limit.

This state of affairs is especially distressing to the grower of fruit and shade trees, especially the former, as most of the dealers growing this class of stock rely almost entirely on it for their sales and another year added to cultivation means a loss of many dollars, the result being a tree probably too large and old to be handled to advantage.

With other lines of ornamental stock the effect may not be as apparent, although large planters will not handle stock after the proper season has passed and the dealers will have to carry it until another year.

Our eastern friends have a distinct autumn and spring planting time, but with us we rely entirely on our rainfall and if that comes too late or is too scanty to give the proper impetus to trade we have nothing left to do but hope for better luck next time. Fall trade is not reckoned on here to any large extent, although year before last we had a heavy rainfall in September, so that our season commenced about two months earlier than usual and continued through the year until the following March. At the present time we have not had as much rain as we had during that memorable month and as a consequence the present season will be very short in any event and will in all probability be added to the list of what is usually called "dry years." G.

SPOKANE, WASH.

With the characteristic quiet of after holiday trade we can give an outline of the rush of the past few weeks. Windows took on a gala appearance in decorations of red and green, with immortelles, Oregon grape, mountain moss, mistletoe and holly, the latter being shipped from the east, arriving in such good condition that the berries were still where they should be, instead of where they usually are after shipping, at the bottom of the crate. Supply was not nearly sufficient to cover demand in nearly all lines, and only the slight assistance rendered by near-by towns saved the situation from being a deplorable one. Violets and Beauties were received from the Chicago market and in such a perfect condition that the writer is of the opinion that it is only a question of time until the United States will be shipping to the Philippines.

Just previous to the holidays Hoyt Bros. and Miss Armstrong, after doing business for eleven years, severed partnership, the former opening a store on Riverside avenue with Mr. Yonkin in charge.

Miss Wright, who has been doing business as the Lidgerwood Greenhouses, has formed a partnership with Miss Armstrong, the firm to be known hereafter as Armstrong & Wright, and located at Miss Armstrong's old stand at 807 Riverside avenue. We predict great success for this firm, as both ladies are well known, being the pioneer florists of Spokane. Miss Luffman, who came from the east recently to be with Miss Wright, will be in charge.

The Spokane Florist Co. reports a large business, as is evidenced by Mr. Kipp's broad smile.

Visitors this week were: J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, and W. Tackman, from The Dalles, Ore. KENNEDY.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The continued dry weather has a very marked effect on business in the floral line and everyone is hoping that the next few days will bring us a copious down-pour. Flowers are more plentiful than they were last week but the prices remain stationary. Carnations give indications of heavy crops in a short time and I expect that prices will descend somewhat in the next ten days. A few outside mums are still to be seen and they are eagerly bought up by the retailers, as there is a great scarcity of a cheap white flower that can be used in funeral designs. Our narcissi are very scarce

THE PRIVATE CAR.

Any nurseryman or fruit grower who wishes to keep up with the times will find the "other side of the story" set forth by J. Ogden Armour in the Saturday Evening Post for January 6. In the article Mr. Armour takes for his father the credit for having made possible the present extent of the fruit industry, for having raised fruit and berry growing from a local industry to its present national importance. P. D. Armour found the packing business limited by his inability to ship fresh meat in warm weather; the refrigerator car was suggested; the railroads declined to build them; Armour did it himself; it revolutionized the business; he applied it to the fruit trade; it worked another revolution, and there we are, up against the present agitation against something which is, Mr. Armour says, a public blessing.

Mr. Armour contends that the fruit growers are more than satisfied with the private car system and that the excitement is being stirred up by commission men who have lost the opportunity of cheating shippers with stories of the poor condition in which stock arrived, of glutted markets, etc., for all these evils are remedied by the refrigerator car.

He says, then, that it simmers down to a question of rates. The charges are for refrigeration, not for carrying. The service is naturally costly because of the splendid national organization, affording facilities to shippers entirely beyond the possibilities for a company operating only on one road. The risks are large, the losses great, as in the case of the failure of the Georgia peach crop in 1898, when not only was there no crop to move but hundreds of thousands of tons of ice were lost, brought in ships from Maine to Savannah and thence by rail to Fort Valley and Marshallville, at great expense, only to melt. Mr. Armour says that rates are not too high because the fruit-growing industry has been built up under them and that in fact the rates have been voluntarily reduced from twenty-five to fifty-five per cent in the past ten years. He says that it is the policy of the lines to reduce rates whenever possible to stimulate traffic, but if it should be decided to go out of business the fruit growers would be left high and dry, with no way to reach the best markets.

MADISON, N. J.

On Wednesday evening, January 10, the Monmouth County Horticultural Society enjoyed its annual smoker. This was the banner one of its existence; large attendance, excelsior cigars, turkey concomitants equal to Nugent's and celery the like of which is grown only in Madison and by the author of "The Chrysanthemum." Crowning all was the Totty punch, over which the genial Charles had spent a prayerful afternoon in its concoction, and taking rank with the Westcott and Nugent dreams in unique liquid refreshments.

The regular meeting of the society, while brief, indicated by the reports a most gratifying progress in number and accomplishments. The treasury has an ample balance and harmony prevails. The handsome rooms were well filled and among the visitors were W. J. Stewart, secretary of the S. A. F.; F. H. Traendly, ex-president of the New York Florists' Club; Peter Duff and Jos. A. Manda, of Orange; A. J. Guttman and Jos. Fenrich, of New York, and the genial songster representing the Stumpp & Walter Co. All the local lights of horticulture were there except Wm. Duckham, who has not returned from the continent.

The program provided included local musical talent of a high order, and two New York artists in instrumental music and recitations that gave universal satisfaction.

When the midnight train carried the visitors away the club itself settled down to make a night of it and the last echoes as the train rolled in were the cheers of the happy crowd over one of Totty's stories. These staid old and young rose-growers unbend and forget the cost of coal and the other little discouragements of the business at least once a year if one may judge by their happy faces.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PUEBLO, COLO.

December was a cold month and used up lots of coal, but trade was good. Holiday trade was the largest on record. The greenhouse lettuce crop was kept bare; in fact all the growers are practically out of lettuce now. There has been no demand for radishes this winter. It is strange, but tastes seem to run that way.

E. H. Divelbiss has put up two new greenhouses 22x100 feet, using 16x16 inch glass. He has them mostly planted, growing vegetables only.

J. J. Thomas is now growing the third crop of lettuce for this winter. It takes 42,000 plants for a crop. He grows nothing but Grand Rapids lettuce.

DENVER.

The Market.

The market the weeks after New Year's held up well. With seasonable weather it has had an outdoor social influence. The Denver winter is an ideal one and in one way or another almost everyone has been kept outdoors. The Country Club has been the scene of much entertaining, calling for a great many flowers. Society is anticipating a number of interesting events. There are two or three fashionable weddings between now and Lent. Grand opera opens next week. There will be many theater parties followed by suppers and preceded by dinners, which all require the florists, and the ordering away of the Second Infantry at Fort Logan to the far east has caused several wedding dates to be moved up a few weeks and the decorator will again get in his work; so taking it all in all the new year starts out well.

All stock is fair in quantity and generally of good quality, meeting a proportional demand. Prices have returned to normal and are holding steadily to consistent figures. American Beauties are of good quality, quantity being about enough to meet the demand and they have sold well since the holidays, retailing at from $3 to $8 per dozen. Brides have been a little scarce but of good quality. Bridesmaids are more plentiful and in good demand at fair figures. Liberty and Richmond are plentiful and both are very satisfactory sellers. Some very fine blooms are now seen. Chatenay also keeps up well Carnations are plentiful and generally of good grade, prices being about normal. Some fine Enchantress and Fiancee are seen on the counters. Violets, both single and double, are having an even demand and are selling well. The growers still maintain the price at $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Narcissi, tulips and hyacinths are also seen in all the leading shops. Easter lilies have begun to come in but are not yet plentiful. Sweet peas are also seen at a few places, but as yet are not of first-class quality.

Various Notes.

It is generally conceded that business since the holidays has been a shade better than is usually the case and it is predicted that the January business will exceed that of last year.

The Alpha Floral Co. will move from the present location to 404 Sixteenth street on account of the tearing down and rebuilding of the block the store is now in. The New York Floral Co. will also remove to 521 Sixteenth street for the same reason.

The Florists' Bowling League now rolls at the La Court alleys, commencing the first of the year. R. S. Mahan, president of the league, joined us and rolled last week the first game of the season, making an average of 165.

Robert Kurth, for several years foreman for the Colfax Avenue Floral Co., has severed his connection and taken an interest in the Pikes Peak Floral Co., of Colorado Springs. Everyone wishes him good luck.

N. A. Benson is cutting some very fine Enchantress carnations as well as Lady Bountiful. He also has some of the finest Beauties in town.

J. A. Valentine expects to attend the American Carnation Society's convention in Boston. Perhaps he will be the only one from the Rocky Mountain region.

The Gallup Floral & Seed Co. will be compelled to seek a new location, as the property now occupied at Fifteenth and Cleveland place has been sold to the gas company for $100,000 for building purposes. E. S. K.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular meeting January 3. It was the best attended meeting in the history of the society. The society has now entered upon the second year of its existence and already has proved itself to be an organization for much good, bringing together its members in social intercourse and advancing horticultural interests. The membership roll steadily increases, which may be taken as a good omen for the future welfare of the society.

President Harrison occupied the chair. Three new active members were elected, and two nominated. Mr. E. R. Ladew was elected an honorary member. Wm. F. Ross, representing F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, was present and elected to active membership. It was decided to hold the society's annual dinner on January 27. J. F. J.

RED BANK, N. J.

The second annual dinner of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held at the Sheridan hotel January 11 and was from start to finish a howling success. Some seventy-five members and friends sat down to a splendid repast and after this was over, while the wine and cigars circulated, Dr. Whitmore, who acted as toast-master, got down to business. Speeches were made by Geo. H. Hale, president; W. W. Kennedy, vice-president; H. A. Kettel, secretary, and N. Butterbach, treasurer, dwelling on the society more particularly and welcoming the visitors. Then the fun broke loose and for five hours song and story and speech followed each other without a dull moment. Your scribe has attended lots of dinners but never in his life has he seen such hearty good fellowship and a general good time. Nick Butterbach's poem was a dream and should be preserved among the archives of the society. Wm. Turner's talk on things in general and the progress of horticulture in particular was excellent, and Dr. Whitmore, in extolling the delights of a gardener's calling, soared into superb flights of oratory. The dominant note of all the speakers was pride in past achievements and confidence to excel in future.

Visiting societies helped along the fun. Messrs. Herrington, Totty, Reagan, Schultz and Lecker represented the Morris County Society, W. F. Ross the Tarrytown Society, and all helped with speech or story, the singing of Mr. Lecker being of a very high order. Most of the seed houses were represented by their travelers.

The star card of the entertainment committee was Maggie Kline, known on three continents as the queen of Irish songs. It is doubtful if she ever sang to a more appreciative audience, and the audience did not forget to let her know it. It was a red letter night and the standard of entertainment was so high that next year the dinner committee will

ARISTOCRAT ANNOUNCEMENT

WE herewith confirm the reports, so far as our purchasing the above carnation is concerned. We intend to disseminate same January 1, 1907. We do not think it necessary at this time to commence boasting of its good qualities and commercial value that have been proven and will be proven again to your satisfaction.

We are now soliciting orders for January delivery and while we do not make a specialty of booking orders subject to cancellation, we believe that to cancel is everyone's right, if a variety does not live up to its reputation and we respect it if done right and honorably. Orders are already coming in heavily and we strongly advise your placing yours immediately as January bookings will soon be closed.

Aristocrat is O. K. and you will not be able to help yourself from buying it later, so place order now as we shall not overbook ourselves on it, as we must make good and that is one of our reasons for securing it.

Color—brighter than Lawson, a little brighter shade. Calyx does not burst. Habit of growth, taller than Enchantress, more wiry and more free. Produces cuttings freely which root easily. Has no disease of any description. Size, as large as Enchantress but form more perfect than any other carnation.

ROOTED CUTTINGS, $12 per 100; $100 per 1000; 5,000, $450; 10,000 $800.

The United States Cut Flower Co.

ELMIRA, NEW YORK,

Having a large and fine stock of this new rose, are prepared to accept contracts for delivery, Spring 1906. Correspondence solicited.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

E. H. Chamberlin has leased two houses of W. G. Kroeber and retained him as grower. He is cutting some extra fine sweet peas. He is also displaying some single daffodils, being the first of the season.

E. H. Chamberlin and his assistant, Fred C. Covell, recently made two violet blankets ninety-six inches long and forty-two inches wide, a novelty for this vicinity.

S. S. Peckham is out with a new delivery wagon. He is showing a fine line of primulas and azaleas.

William Livesey, who was with R. H. Woodhouse, is sending in some large, handsome Fair Maid carnations.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, who leased the Winsor greenhouses, is cutting a great quantity of the Winsor carnation.

F. C.

NORTH TONAWANDA, N. Y.

The King Construction Co. has considerably enlarged its buildings and plant here. This increase will enable them to at least double their output in the United States for 1906. In order to better handle their shipments a railway switch has been run to their premises.

In Canada also their growing business has demanded better accommodations and they recently purchased a down-town site opposite the G. T. R. new freight sheds, having a frontage of forty feet on Wellington street and 128 feet on Dorset street. Possession was given last week. As soon as additions can be made to the Canadian works the offices of the company will be centered on this property. A special feature of interest to the florists will be a show-room in which samples of greenhouse structures and accessories will be displayed.

MY MARYLAND

ANNOUNCEMENT

We, THE H. WEBER & SONS CO. of Oakland, Md., respectfully announce that The E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind., have withdrawn from the contract made with us last spring, whereby they would have jointly with us disseminated our new white carnation, My Maryland.

The variety has been on trial at Richmond (3000 plants), Brooklyn (300 plants), Philadelphia (1000 plants) and Toronto (1000 plants). Reports from the first two named places characterize the variety as being practically worthless, while from Toronto and Philadelphia favorable reports indicate that the variety is bearing out our claims for it.

Our own stock at Oakland is in elegant shape. An extremely wet summer necessitated the holding of stock in a semi-dormant condition after being housed, August 15 to September 1, thus making stock too late for the fall shows. Since December 1st we have been cutting grand blooms, and to prove our claims for the variety, we invite all interested to come to Oakland and look it over.

While it is a source of regret to us that the variety has not proved satisfactory in all places tried, we are satisfied that it will prove our claims for it in at least some places besides our own.

We therefore announce that we will disseminate My Maryland as per our advertisements, but before shipping any stock we give to each and every one the right to cancel all or any portion of their orders.

JESSICA,

we believe, will succeed everywhere. It is even better than last year. As a red and white variegated it has no competitors. Stock ready now.

Prices for both varieties—$2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ABUNDANCE

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known firm:

Western Springs, Ill., Nov. 15, 1905.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

Dear Sir:—We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good size and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand. Very truly yours,

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE. Per J. S. Wilson.

Price per rooted cuttings, $1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000, 500 at 1000 rate; $50 at 100 rate. Unrooted cuttings same price, with 25 extra with each 100.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been quite brisk since the holidays, receptions and weddings being added to a lot of funeral work. Beauties, as almost always, are a scarce article on this market. Best Brides and Maids are bringing from $10 to $14, while good roses for funeral work can be bought at from $3 to $5 per hundred. Carnations are becoming quite plentiful, for the first time this season, but they are still commanding good prices, from $3 to $4 per hundred for the best stock. Stevia is in great demand at 25 cents per bunch. Tulips are being shown in some stores, but so far do not move very rapidly. Schroeter has been having a good run on some fine early yellow narcissi. Violets are seemingly out of style. Although the shipments are much smaller than in former years, still there are plenty to go around.

Various Notes.

Friends of Herman Knope will no doubt be pleased to learn of his rapid recovery from his long illness.

A stag party was given by Theo Mitchell to a party of friends in remembrance of the good time at Washington. After some interesting card games a grand supper was spread before the boys, with broiled steak as a headliner.

Breitmeyer's had charge of the decorations for a very elaborate wedding at the Cadillac hotel on Monday.

George A. Rackham has been on the sick list the past few days.

James Taylor is contemplating the changing of his heating system from steam to hot water under pressure with a forced circulation.

Visitors: Wm. W. Abrahamson, Chicago; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; George F. Crabb, Grand Rapids; B. Eschner, Philadelphia. H. S.

OXFORD, PA.—All the growers in this section seem pleased with prices this winter; they are all cutting good stock. George B. Barnett is to build another house 24x75 feet, for carnations.

MACON, GA.—The Idle-hour flower store has increased facilities in the form of a conservatory at the rear, which adds much to the appearance of the establishment. D. C. Horgau, the proprietor, is well pleased with the way the business is increasing. H. E. Jephson is the manager of the store. Three or four more greenhouses will be added to the range before next season.

TWIN BOILERS.

I would like advice regarding the following: At present we are using a thirty horse-power boiler, steam heat, for heating our houses aggregating about 14,000 feet. In the near future we shall make additions necessitating a new boiler. Would you deem it best to buy another thirty horse-power and run the two in conjunction, or to buy one fifty horse-power boiler and run it alone? Which would insure greater economy of fuel and labor and at the same time provide best heating facility?

C. B.

It is probable that under steady cold, when the boiler is working to nearly full capacity, that one fifty horse-power boiler can be more economically run than two of thirty horse-power. The fact that for a considerable period during both spring and fall one thirty horse-power boiler will probably do the work of the whole plant, together with the added safety of having two boilers, leaves no question in regard to the greater desirability of having two boilers. A more uniform pressure can be maintained in firing if two boilers are employed and fired alternately; while one is cooled by new fuel the other can be making steam most rapidly under a brisk fire, and vice versa. If the boiler you have is a good one, located satisfactorily, get another with the same dimensions and set it so the water level of the two shall exactly coincide. Yoke the domes so as to maintain equal pressure on both when fired in conjunction and use a yoke on the return so that they will feed alike from the returns. Care in these particulars is necessary in order that one boiler may not rob the other of water. If the yoke on the return can be arranged considerably above the water line of the boiler so much the better, as it will largely overcome the ability of one boiler to rob the other.

ANNOUNCEMENT TO THE TRADE

WE BEG to announce that we have purchased the property and business of L. K. Peacock, Inc., including the entire stock of the Peacock Dahlias, and will continue the business on a more extensive scale.

We have secured the services of Mr. L. K. Peacock and all the experts who have been associated with him. Mr. Peacock has been identified with the trade for the past twenty years, and during that period has produced such noted varieties as Nymphaea, Clifford W. Bruton, William Agnew, Miss May Lomas, Storm King, Snow Clad and over fifty other standard varieties, not to mention the Twentieth Century and the subsequent Century collection.

The past season was a most favorable one for Dahlias, and as every plant bloomed freely we offer our stock as the best grown, and absolutely true to name.

We are prepared to fill all orders promptly and are now booking contracts for 1907.

Our 1906 Catalogue will be ready for distribution early in February and will be mailed to each of our customers and others upon application.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Nothing has occurred the past week of any special interest in the "posey" business hereabouts, but the ordinary trade has been fair, leaving just enough time for the proprietors of the various stores to look about and spare a few moments for gossip. Stock of all kinds is coming in more plentifully every day and there is quite enough to go around. One man showed me a fine lot of Enehan-tress, Lawson and white carnations which he had bought for $1 per hundred. I do not think the growers will care to see them get much lower than that in January; however, that was not the general price, but there is plenty of stock to be had at $2 per hundred. Good roses still maintain their price.

Various Notes.

Word comes from Washington, Pa., that Jos. Seaman has taken a new partner into his business. He arrived early in the year, weight about ten pounds. Congratulations are extended.

Chas. K. Hoffman sued the Mansfield Coal Co. for damage to his property caused by the removal of the coal under his greenhouses. He was awarded $1,200, not nearly the amount expected.

Next meeting of the club is Tuesday, February 6, subject for discussion "Carnations." No grower should miss this meeting. From remarks heard some varieties will be discussed, and others, mostly new sorts, will be cussed. Come and get wise before spending your money.

John Murchie and son, of Sharon, were visitors on their way to Bakerstown to visit Fred Burki.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has installed a Burroughs adding machine. Making the monthly statements on same assures their customers that the footings are always correct.

As the editor has been cutting out all by-plays and side remarks there is not much chance for a correspondent whose long suit is salve, to have very extensive notes when he has not had a chance the past week to gather news. Hoo-Hoo.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—Thomas Franks has had the decorations for a series of receptions by Mrs. J. W. Shuck.

HERE is my dollar; please send me the REVIEW during 1906; we cannot get along without it.—GEO. W. SUTHERLAND, Athol, Mass.

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. LINCOLN, ILL., January 8, 1906.

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.

GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.

Yours truly, wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

ISN'T IT GOOD SENSE

TO GO TO A CONCERN WHO MAKE A SPECIALTY OF A THING RATHER THAN A MERE SIDE LINE?

All our energies are put right into this greenhouse building matter. Along with our energies go the best materials possible, from putty to iron. Nor is it all a matter of materials either, it's the way the materials are put together! The way the heat's shut in—the light NOT shut out.

Next week we are going to tell you about some of the things that go into our houses, it will show you why so much comes out of them.

BOILER PRICES WITHDRAWN

Below find extract from official notice from three different manufacturers of cast-iron boilers

CHICAGO, Jan. 13, 1906.

DEAR SIR:—We beg to announce withdrawal at close of business this day of all existing quotations on Ideal Cast-iron boilers. New prices will be mailed in a few days.

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 13, 1906.

GENTLEMEN:—Recent advances in raw materials compel us to withdraw all prices on Carton and International boilers. This takes effect at close of business today.

BOILER PRICES WITHDRAWN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13, 1906.

We beg to withdraw all prices on Sectional Boilers and Tank Heaters at close of business today.

WM. GEENEN, Kimberly, Wis., writes:—I bought a No. 3 Boiler in 1903. We had a corrugated cast-iron fire box boiler and a sectional cast-iron boiler before we bought yours in 1903. The cost of heating with this boiler is one-half less than it was with my cast-iron boilers. Your No. 8 Boiler, which we bought recently of you, is not being run to its capacity.

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7000 sq ft. of glass; would take care of 2000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers, and do not worry about their breaking down.

KROESCHELL Boilers

Can be booked during January and February at last Season's Prices, for delivery during Spring and Fall 1906. We will not ask you to pay for boiler until it is shipped.

A SPECIALTY

Chicago June 28, 1905.

E. H. Hunt,
76 Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir:-

As per your request we give our experience with To-Bak-Ine Liquid as a spray for Thrip. We used two tabelspoonful of the liquid to a gallon of water, and found fourteen gallons sufficient for a house of Brides 25x300 ft. We applied this about two or three days apart, and found it cleaned the Thrip completely out of the house. Since then we have used it in other houses as a spray, and find this method very much better than fumigating, and think we will depend entirely on spraying with To-Bak-Ine Liquid in the future, as it does the work so much better than smoking.

Yours very respectfully,

Bassett & Washburn

Spray! Spray! with To-Bak-Ine Liquid

A positive destroyer of Thrips, Green Fly and Red Spider. DIRECTIONS—Based on a house 25x100—4 teaspoonfuls to a gallon of water, used twice the first week and once each week thereafter, will absolutely keep your houses clean from insects. Use a good air or compressed sprayer with a misting nozzle. We recommend our Simplicity Automatic Misting Sprayer as the best. (This is the sprayer used by Messrs. Bassett & Washburn.)

Can you afford to let your plants get infected before at least trying To-Bak-Ine Liquid? It is the only 45% solution on the market and has other valuable features found in no other nicotine solution. ## NEW CARNATIONS

WINSOR, WHITE ENCHANTRESS AND HELEN M. GOULD

One way to judge Carnations is to see them on the exhibition tables. A better and more convincing way is to see them growing. There is nothing about any of these varieties that we wish to conceal; therefore we cordially invite all Carnation growers to pay us a visit. Come at any time.

WINSOR—This is sure to prove a winner. Nothing approaches it in color, which is a clear silvery pink—a shade between Enchantress and Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson—and much more beautiful than either. In fact it is just the shade that we have all been trying to get. The color will make it sell in any market. The stem is just right. The flowers are considerably larger than Lawson and much better shaped. As a grower it has everything that can be desired. So far we have not seen any large-flowering variety quite so free as Winsor.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS—This is a pure white sport of Enchantress, which is at once the most popular and most profitable carnation grown today, and this on account of its size and stem and freedom with which it blooms. White Enchantress is identical in every respect but color. Those who desire quality as well as quantity will find it in White Enchantress.

HELEN M. GOULD—This is a beautiful variegated sport of Enchantress. The ground color is a lovely shade of clear pink, the variegation carmine, making an exquisite combination of colors, besides being something distinctly new. At a short distance the variegation does not show at all, the general effect being a beautiful shade of dark pink. Growth, habit, size and stem are the same as Enchantress.

We have fine stocks, from which we can deliver healthy cuttings of Variegated Lawson, White Lawson, Red Lawson, Enchantress, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Lady Bountiful, etc.

Our Variegated Lawson is all that we claimed for it last season and is giving the fullest satisfaction everywhere—the best in the variegated class.

Come and inspect our stock of new and standard sorts for yourselves. Price list on application.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 27, 1905.
Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.
Dear Sir:—It was with a great deal of pleasure that I noted the unpacking of carnations on my Christmas order. In this shipment there was not one broken bloom, and the quality was by far better than any blooms to be seen in this market, and we experienced no trouble in selling Enchantress and Fiancee at $2.50 per dozen.
With many thanks for the careful manner in which you handled this, as well as previous shipments, I beg to remain,
Very truly yours,

The packing was perfect and the flowers were the finest we handled in a long time, and we must thank you very much for sending us such nice stock put up in such nice shape.
You no doubt have complaints once in a while and will probably appreciate knowing that the flowers arrived in such good shape from such a long distance, being on the road as

Again thanking you for your good attention to our order and wishing you the compliments of the season, we are,
Very truly yours,

THE BOSTON CONVENTION

The American Carnation Society Holds Its Fifteenth, and Most Successful, Meeting and Exhibition.

President, John H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.

Vice-President, W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y.

Secretary, Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.

PLACE OF MEETING FOR 1907, TORONTO, ONT.

The fifteenth annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society is on this week at Boston. As if it were the exception which proves the rule, this year the weather leaves nothing to be desired; it is ideal. The show is the most magnificent of the many splendid exhibitions which the society has staged. The main exhibition hall is devoted to the cut flowers, which overflow into the small hall, where the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has a not large but very attractive midwinter show, which adds materially to the interest.

The Carnation Society has never had so good a place for its exhibition as is afforded by the new building of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The lecture hall affords perfect accommodations for the business sessions, while ample accommodations are provided for a considerable number of exhibits from greenhouse builders, etc. The red brick walls of the exhibition halls are covered some ten feet high with olive green paper. The temperature of the hall is excellently suited to the purpose, keeping the flowers in the best of shape. The facilities for unpacking and staging exhibits were also greatly appreciated.

The rules required that the exhibition be complete at one o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, January 24, and in this instance there was no excuse for postponement because of snow-bound trains carrying exhibits. The number of blooms staged exceeds anything in the history of the society and the quality is superb, nearly all of the exhibits having come from within a narrow radius. The big western growers are not represented to any great extent, but the principal eastern carnation establishments are in evidence more largely than ever before and in every instance show splendid stock. Everyone admits that it is the best show ever held. The Class A exhibits include seventy vases of 100 blooms each. There were eight entries for the Lawson medals. As usual, some exhibitors suffered misfortune in the matter of stock traveling poorly. The exhibits of H. Weber & Sons Co. and John E. Haines could not be staged, and Witterstaetter's exhibit from Cincinnati was not in shape to compete.

A noteworthy feature is the way in which the old standard varieties have been completely ousted. The old favorites are conspicuous by their absence. Lady Bountiful made almost a clean sweep in the classes for white. Enchantress was shown by more exhibitors than at any previous exhibition. It is easily the leading variety of the day.

The first business session was called press the city's desire to be hospitable. Mayor Fitzgerald made a witty, felicitous and eloquent speech. He spoke of Boston's historical associations and counseled all from beyond its border to visit Faneuil Hall, the old South Church, Washington elm, Concord, Lexington, Bunker Hill and other points of historic interest, from which all visitors go away better citizens. He spoke of Boston's private estates, of the fact that in the matter of well developed private grounds eastern Massachusetts leads the nation and that in commercial floriculture she is in no second place, especially considering the quality of the product. He spoke of the nature study and gardening work being done in the schools and asked that all visitors so deport themselves as to not fall into the hands of the vigilant district attorney. The Mayor was enthusiastically applauded.

E. G. Hill made a very happy reply to the mayor's welcome and compared his Jubilee, Triumph and Armazindy carnations, which were the leading varieties at the last time the Carnation Society met in Boston, with the magnificent creations of today.

Wm. P. Rich, secretary, tendered a

to order at 8 p. m. Wednesday evening, January 24. There were about 180 present. President James Wheeler, of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of Boston, welcomed the members of the American Carnation Society and called upon Mayor John F. Fitzgerald to exwarm welcome on behalf of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. C. W. Ward made suitable response, saying that as Boston is sometimes said to be exclusive and cold, so her warm welcome should be a matter of all the greater pride to the society. He said he felt a great veneration for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which has done more than any similar organization in America for the advancement of floriculture. President Peter Fisher was then introduced. He pronounced the convention the best ever held by the American Carnation Society and asked that all members stay through the business sessions and assist with their counsel. He then read his annual report, which was as follows:

President's Address.

For the second time in its history, and after a lapse of eleven years, the American Carnation Society again convenes in the City of Boston.

The avowed purpose of this organization at its inception was "The Advancement of the Carnation."

Looking backward for a moment and drawing a comparison between the carnation as grown eleven years ago, and that of today, no one will deny for a moment that the trend of improvement discussions on the same which bring out many points of value and interest, not only to the general grower, but also to those engaged in the cross-breeding and production of new varieties, whose first step, if they would be successful, must be to bring their plants up to the highest state of cultural excellence. Then it is simply summed up in the one word "selection" all the time. Prices for strictly high-grade varieties have in some instances kept pace with the best roses, unless with the single exception of the American Beauty, yet I venture to predict that a carnation will yet be produced, the pioneer of a strictly fancy strain in varied colors, that will even rival that popular rose in size and price.

Perhaps in our haste for size we sometimes lose sight of the fact that carnations are in three distinct classes: First, strictly fancy high grade, producing comparatively few but first quality blooms. The commercial class produces abundantly blooms of varied colors but smaller in size; and those exactly intermediate. Most of our popular sorts of more satisfactory to the purchaser, and the florist would derive more pleasure and profit from handling this grade of flowers. Introducers of new varieties would do well to state distinctly to which of the foregoing classes their novelty belongs, also giving to the purchaser information on printed circulars with each shipment—details as to temperature, soil, etc., to assist him in its successful cultivation.

Phenomenal varieties rarely appear, and when they do, our attention ought to be directed to the discovery of cultural methods whereby their vigor and usefulness may be prolonged, instead of constantly running after new and untried sorts, so many times to our sorrow. The conduct of originators who, after devoting much space and years to testing a new variety, finally advertising and booking numerous orders, representing thousands of dollars, and who find on the eve of dissemination that it has developed some trait rendering it undesirable as an acquisition, and who withdraw it are to be very highly commended, and I am glad to note that their number is increasing. This is a step in the right direction. We need more men of this class.

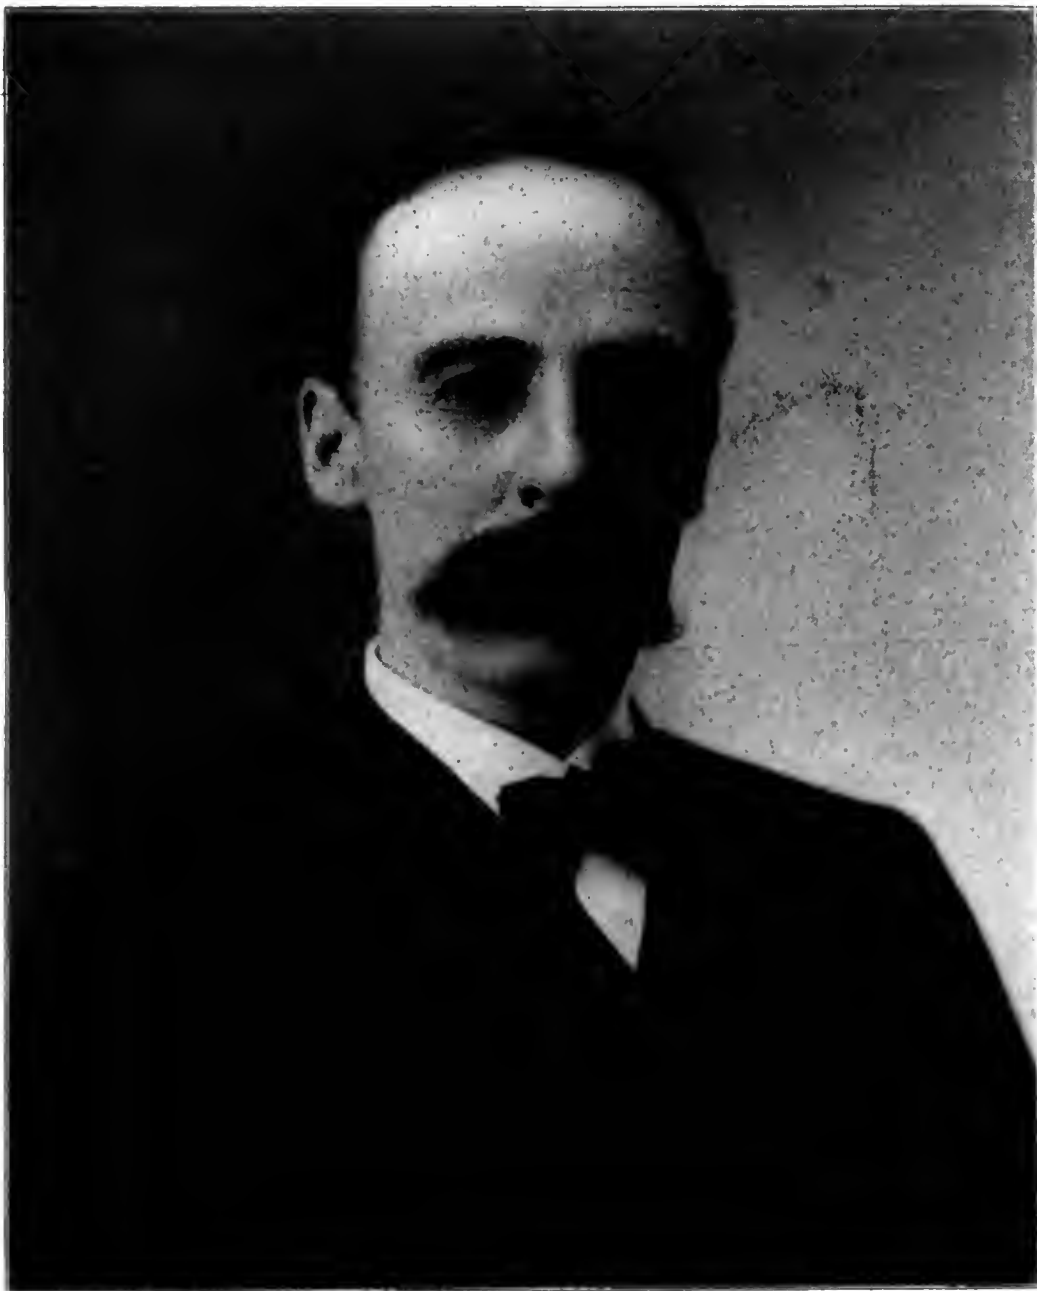

The most serious menace to the usefulness and progress of our society, in my opinion, lies in the staging at our exhibitions of varieties that have little or no commercial value. What is good for the advancement of or hurtful to this society as a body must act in like manner to every member as an individual.

The present date of our meeting (the last week in January) is to my mind just about the right time to exhibit new sorts, as they are certain during the dull short days of winter to develop any bad traits they may possess. It is easy to place on the exhibition table a variety, to all appearances almost faultless, which the exhibitor well knows will not stand inspection in his greenhouses at this season of the year. The judges must score on this exhibit according to the scale of points adopted by this society. It may score very high, so that it is awarded the trophy we all covet; viz., the Gold Medal. The prize list is published in the weekly papers, and the trade in general misled.

This prizetaker is extensively advertised and thousands of dollars' worth of cuttings sold. A wrong has been committed and that upon many who can ill afford the loss, not only in cash paid out, but much valuable time, and invariably the best bench space wasted, which must be added to the first cost, and yet our judges did their duty well; they invariably do; they would not be human did they not make an occasional mistake, but it seldom occurs. Who was to blame? The extremely charitable will say a "lack of good judgment," or was it the "honor of the man?" I hope before this meeting adjourns that this society will go on record as denouncing any one who through misrepresentation or concealment of defect disseminates to the trade worthless carnations.

What we need in the future is disseminators with a sense of honor so fine that they will not hesitate to place alongside their product, to be measured by its requirements, "The Golden Rule," and as they hear the "whatsoever ye would" ringing in their ears, not thrust it aside as I fear is sometimes done, saying, "This does not include me."

We would see less pointing of the finger of scorn at the awards of our society; its indorsement would mean what it should, and was intended to be,

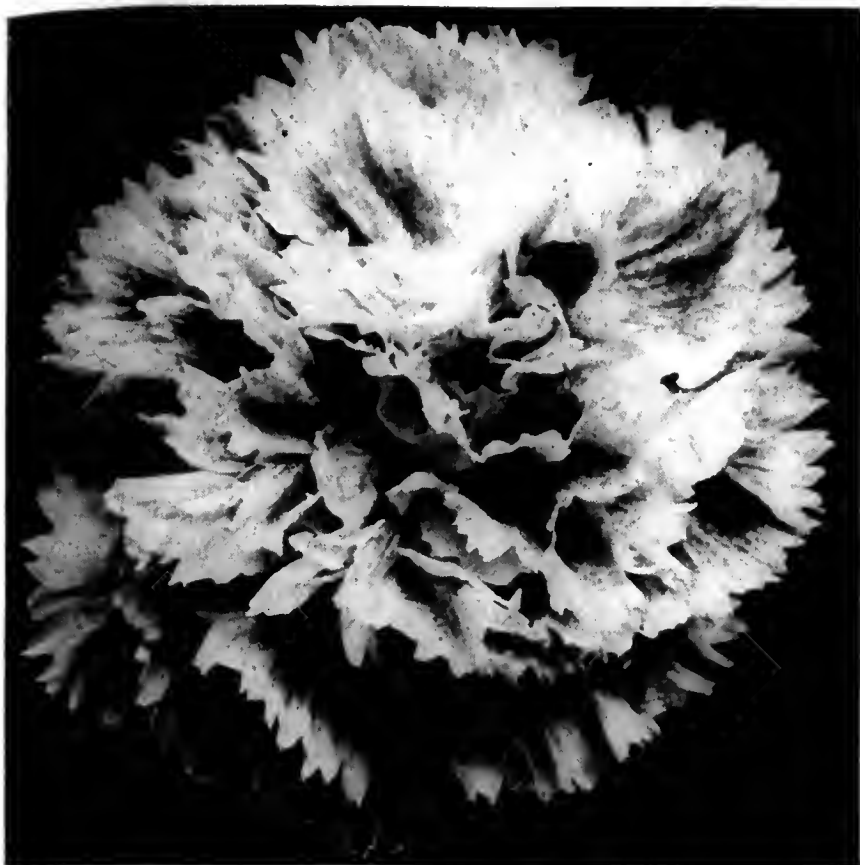

Peter Fisher.

(President of the American Carnation Society.)

has been steadily onward and upward until the carnation as a commercial commodity ranks second to none, owing largely to its increased size, long keeping qualities, and the beautiful and varied tints of new colors constantly appearing. For this advance we are indebted to a better knowledge as to cultural requirements obtained largely from the many excellent papers read at our annual meetings by growers, professors, wholesalers and retailers, and the free today belong to this latter class, which produce freely high grade blooms, that ought in my opinion to bring a better average price, at wholesale than they do at present. The country florists who usually retail the smaller commercial varieties at 50 cents to 75 cents per dozen would do well to grow also some of the better grade varieties—show their customers the difference and by degrees educate them to buying at from $1 to $2 per dozen. They would in the end prove a guarantee of excellence. A feeling of confidence would be a natural result amongst the trade, and the American Carnation Society would receive an irresistible impetus toward grander and nobler work in its mission for "The Advancement of the Carnation."

The new set of by-laws for this society will be submitted at this meeting for your consideration and acceptance. I trust members will make it a point to attend all the sessions and by their presence and counsel help to make them what they are designed to be—mutually helpful. To our visiting friends and members I would say that Boston and vicinity has left "the lathstring out" during your sojourn among us and we shall endeavor to make your stay pleasant and profitable.

At the conclusion of the reading of the president's address the annual report of Secretary Herr was presented, as follows:

Secretary's Report.

The report of the last annual meeting, a preliminary premium list, and a copy of the by-laws as drawn up by your executive committee, were mailed as issued during the year. Any paid-up members who did not receive all of these should write to the secretary at once and see that their name and address gets properly entered.

Our annual report is an important part of our work, and our discussions are important and interesting enough to be reported correctly, an impossibility with a new stenographer each meeting. What we need is a stenographer who will be with us year after year, who will learn to know a word missed in the middle of a discussion. We now pay over $200 a year for our report; why not pay a little more and have it twice as good?

Attention has been called of the members in the premium list to the yearly expenses of the society; almost $1,000 per year.

Listen carefully to the report of your treasurer and you will see how much of this money has to be made up aside from the annual membership dues. The only available way to make this money is by advertising in the premium list and the entries at the shows.

This matter of advertisements is an important one to the society and every member who has anything to advertise should use the premium list; it may not bring direct results but it does give publicity at a very nominal figure, and publicity before the members of the American Carnation Society is a paying investment.

Occasionally in meeting a fellow-member the conversation drifts to the work of this society, and the question is asked, "Why do you not do this and why do you not do that?" If any member has an idea of any kind for the betterment of the society and its work, and will put this idea into writing and send it to the secretary at any time during the year, a great amount of practical work could be done that escapes the attention of the officers. Try this for 1906 and begin right now with the question box at this meeting.

We are a live practical society but we need the assistance of every member, in order to keep the work up to the top notch of perfection we hope to attain.

Following the reading of the secretary's report, which was accepted, the report of Treasurer Dorner was read and accepted. It was as follows:

At the Wednesday evening session a paper was read by Prof. H. F. Hall, of Durham College, Durham, N. H. The subject was "Carnation Breeding." A synopsis of the paper appears elsewhere in this issue.

Discussion on the paper was opened by C. W. Ward, who described his methods of crossing. He recommended the use of a card index for all seedlings, to carefully consider ancestors of all flowers used in crossing. He advised the use of two pinks to secure a good pink; use yellow to intensify color. He fertilizes from early October to early December, and from the end of January to the middle of March. He likes all seeds to be ripe by May. R. Witterstaetter said that he fertilizes from the end of December to the end of February. Mr. Ward emphasized the importance of using healthy plants in crossing, especially those not overfed. On motion of Mr. Hill, Prof. Hall was given a vote of thanks.

The report of the judges was then read. It was as follows:

Invitations.

Following the report of the judges, invitations were received from the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for 1907 and from the Washington Florists' Club for 1908. J. H. President Fisher said a word in behalf of Toronto.

Nominations.

The nomination of officers for 1907 being in order, E. G. Hill nominated J. H. Dunlop, of Toronto, as a man of sterling worth. There were no other nominations for president. For vice-president, Wm. Gammage, of London, was nominated, and W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo. Secretary Herr and Treasurer Dorner were renominated.

Thursday's Session.

The judges, Nicholson, Valentine and Dailedouze, made a final report mentioning numerous special exhibits.

The papers of J. A. Valentine and Thomas Galvin were presented, the former being one of the best ever read before the society. Both are printed in full in this issue.

Kasting, O'Mara, Hartshorne and Hauswirth were appointed committee on final resolutions.

The matter of registering and certifying sports provoked warm debate, which included certifying varieties afterward found to be commercially of little value. This was referred to a committee consisting of Ward, Pierson and Valentine. On Pierson's motion it was voted that no final certificate be given any variety until a committee has inspected the growing plants.

Vice-president J. H. Dunlop presided at the opening of the afternoon session, called to order at 3:15. A. J. Guttman presented his paper, published in full in this issue. He received close attention and a vote of thanks. The new by-laws were taken up and adopted after discussion, principally on the question of initiation fee and annual dues. It was decided to leave them as at present, $2, in spite of the society's urgent need of increased revenue. Life membership money goes to the permanent fund.

The special committee appointed to consider the subject recommended abolishing the present certificate system, also the Lawson medals and substituting carnation society's medals. Referred.

Election.

Toronto was the unanimous choice for meeting place in 1907. J. H. Dunlop, A. M. Herr and E. E. Dorner were without contestants but Hill and O'Mara were appointed to conduct the balloting for vice-president. W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, was elected, receiving every vote cast. Eugene Dailedouze was elected director for five years. Wm. Scott was elected judge.

The Banquet.

William Nicholson.

Nashua, was toastmaster. The decorations were fine and many ladies were present.

A Retrospect.

It is interesting to refer back to the previous convention held in Boston, on February 21 and 22, 1895, and compare the varieties of that day with those seen at the present exhibition.

At the 1895 show, only the fourth of its kind held, the cut flowers were staged in one of the halls at the old Horticultural building on Tremont street, the other hall being used for the business sessions. Weather conditions were, then as now, almost ideal. Prizes for the best 100 blooms in 1895 went as follows: Alaska, white; Wm. Scott, light pink; Jubilee, scarlet; Tidal Wave, dark pink; F. Mangold, crimson; Buttercup, yellow; Minnie Cook, variegated. For fifty blooms the awards were: Storm King, white; William Scott, light pink; Jubilee, scarlet; Meteor, crimson; Bouton d'Or, yellow, and Helen Keller, variegated. The last named variety won a special prize for the best vase in the exhibition.

Some other noteworthy varieties shown at this meeting were Armazindy and Triumph from E. G. Hill Co., Lena Saling, Dean Hole, Della Fox, Bridesmaid, Nicholson, Lizzie McGowan, Hector and Daybreak. Practically every sort named is now merely a memory. While remarkable advances were made in the quality of blooms shown as compared with 1895, we think the yellow class contained flowers very little better than Southworth's Buttercup of over a decade ago.

CARNATION BREEDING.

BY H. F. HALL, DURHAM, N. H.

[Synopsis of a paper read before the American Carnation Society at the Boston meeting, January 24, 1906.]

The method of crossing which has given us the best results is as follows: Selected plants of the varieties to be used in crossing are benched about August 1 in order to have them well established and blooming freely by October 15, at which time we begin the work of crossing and continue until about December 1. This season is selected for several reasons: More favorable weather than later; greater freedom in the production of pollen; plants are then strong while later they are often weakened through production and attacks of insects and diseases. Another reason often advanced is that at this season there is less danger of an undesirable mixing of pollen by bees and flies, but in our experience such fertilizing of the carnation very seldom if ever occurs at any season of the year.

Some varieties never produce pollen, others only during fall and spring, while some are productive in this respect at all seasons. By growing in pots and keeping rather dry we have obtained pollen during the winter months from varieties which refused to do so when grown in a commercial way. Select for parents the most promising plants of the ## Uses Blotting Paper.

I have received best results in using for this purpose a strip of ordinary blotting paper three or more inches long and about one-half inch in width, one end being cut with scissors to resemble a sharpened pencil, the point of which is slightly fluffed to enable it to take up and hold the grains of pollen until lightly rubbed over the stigmatic surface of the pistil. By this method we have been successful in setting over ninety per cent of all flowers worked and requiring very little pollen, none being wasted as in other ways. This method is original with us so far as I am aware.

From 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. on bright sunny days and a fairly dry well ventilated house, are ideal conditions for pollenating. If the operation is successful the petals will wilt in from one to three days, soon after which a part of the calyx should be torn down to allow the nectar to drain off, which if allowed to remain would develop a fungus growth and destroy the ovary. The seed pod should remain on the plant about eight weeks or until the seeds are brown, when they may be gathered with their stems and put away in a dry place for a short time to ripen. A good time to plant is from January 15 to February 15.

Carnation breeding is yet in its infancy. The leading varieties of today will be little grown ten years hence;

ing a cross, we often find the old hidden faults very much in evidence in the offspring. When the inherent forces of two plants unite in a cross, a struggle for supremacy takes place, whereby the fixed or constant characters are set free, to gather again in the progeny in various combinations of form, color, etc. As no two plants of the same variety are exactly alike, it is very important that a careful selection be made and that a large number of plants be available from which to select the parents for crossing. Some varieties have unknown or hidden qualities; for instance, the color character of a flower is often compound when it appears to be simple.

In breeding we often look upon a plant as a unit when it really comprises a large number of traits or characters. The longer we work in a random way the more puzzling becomes the question of inheritance and cross breeding to one in search of definite results. We should seek a better knowledge of the laws of plant breeding as at present we are groping in the dark so far as a knowledge of past results is concerned.

I would suggest that all information obtainable upon this subject be collected by this society to be published from year to year in its report, from which conclusions could be drawn to be used as a foundation for future work, thus enabling us to slowly advance in the knowledge of the laws which underlie the breeding of this plant.

CARNATIONS IN THE ROCKIES.

BY J. A. VALENTINE, DENVER, COLO.

Most of you who attend these conventions are conversant with the methods and conditions prevailing among carnation growers in general, but Chicago has probably been your western horizon, beyond which there has been little to induce investigation. The success or failure of any industry must be the result of the conditions met with, together with the efforts made to counteract or profit by them, as the case may be; and climate, together with soil and water, are the chief natural conditions to be considered by the florist. Other factors that make for success or failure are the transportation facilities (the distance that can be covered before flowers suffer severely in transit); the population within these transit limits; the ability and the disposition of this population to buy flowers, and the competition from within and without.

It is true that an overwhelmingly large proportion of the carnation business of the country is carried on in those states within a thousand miles of the Atlantic coast, yet beyond Chicago lies a territory of equal extent, which must be crossed and left behind before one reaches the eastern limits of the Rocky Mountain region. It is quite the common thing to admit that a grower will be handicapped by differences in soil and climate if he moves from England to Massachusetts, or from the Atlantic to Ohio or Indiana; yet the difference in conditions between any of these points is not so great as between either of these localities and the Rocky Mountain region. Except in a few limited areas the whole of this country east of Kansas and Nebraska is less than a thousand feet above sea level, and in the small elevated sections the differences in soil, humidity or precipitation are not extreme; but varieties to be used. If the flower selected for female or seed bearing parent contains stamens they should be removed with forceps or tweezers as soon as the flower opens or before the anthers show the pollen, otherwise self fertilization may take place. In most varieties the pollen matures before the stigma is ripe, thus eliminating much of the danger of self fertilization. When the pistil is receptive, which condition is indicated by the development of the stigmatic hairs, the pollen may be applied by the aid of a camel's hair brush or dusted on from the male flower.

what the type of that time will be no one can tell.

The object of crossing is to combine the good qualities of both parents in the progeny. This combination, however, is seldom obtained, but by knowing the pedigree of each of the parents used the breeder should be able to produce the type desired by growing a large number of seedlings from which to select.

Old Faults in Offspring.

After breeding out of a variety certain undesirable traits by selection, and using this variety as a parent in mak-when we come to the Rocky Mountains we find a territory over 1,500 miles long from north to south, and averaging 500 miles in width, with very few points less than 4,000 feet above the sea.

An Arid Region.

The air is dry, the rainfall meagre and the sunlight brilliant. In short, the whole region is arid, and ordinary farm crops cannot be produced without artificial irrigation. It is almost impossible to convey by words an adequate idea of the drying effect of the air of this region. One must actually have seen and experienced the thing to be able to appreciate it. When I say that the annual rainfall of this region averages about ten or twelve inches and that the rainfall here in Massachusetts or in Indiana is four times that, you will not get an adequate conception of the difference. After a rain here your humid air prevents rapid evaporation, while with us nature at once proceeds to rob the soil of that which she has just bestowed, so that an inch of rain is not so effective as here. Dews and fogs are rare, almost unknown, except on mountain peaks which are storm centers as they are everywhere. To me one of the most striking evidences of the drying effect of the air is the fact that a man exercising in the hot sun of summer will seldom feel his underclothing cling to his body, the evaporation being rapid enough to nearly offset his perspiration. The temperature records of the weather bureau would make it appear that Denver and Indianapolis have about the same mean temperature both for July and for January, and that the highest and lowest recorded temperature is nearly alike for both places; but owing to the dry air Denver has a great advantage in what is known as the "sensible temperature" both in hot weather and in winter. What I have said regarding the climate applies equally well to the whole of the arid region of which the Rocky Mountain country is but a part.

The natural growth of vegetation throughout this whole region is very scanty except upon the high mountains, and even there one will not find anything approaching the riotous growth to be encountered on such mountains as the coast ranges of Oregon and Washington. There are pines, to be sure, and spruce, especially on the northern slopes, but the general appearance justifies the name given to the range. The plains or high plateaus are covered with a very scanty growth of grass in little bunches, widely separated, and for ten months in the year these are brown and have a dead appearance. Owing to the fact that there is little moisture, the dead grasses do not rot and add to the soil from which they grew, but they wither and desiccate and seem to vanish into nothingness.

Soils Related to Climate.

I have gone into this matter at some length because I believe that soils are closely related to climate; in fact, largely the result of climate, and I have prepared you to understand that in many ways our soils must differ from the soils of the east and of the lake region. Frost and wind are steadily carrying on the work that they have been doing for ages, but the work of all these is mainly mechanical and the result must be largely mineral. The vegetable elements, the fibre and the humus, are sadly lacking. In a great many localities mineral salts are present in such quantity as to render the soil unfit for greenhouse use, and in some cases it is barren even in the field. We are apt to say that such soils contain "alkali," without any thought or knowledge as to the exact nature of the harmful element. My observation has been that the rose is more resentful of the presence of these salts than the carnation. I am not personally sure of its truth, but it is commonly reported that for lack of suitable soil and water, roses cannot be successfully grown under glass in the vicinity of Salt Lake City.

As the character of the soil is largely determined by the climate, so too is the character of the water largely determined by the soil of the region through which it runs. In nearly all the arid region except in the strictly mountainous portions, the water is alkaline. In some sections it is so bad that neither man nor beast can use it to drink, and vegetation suffers from contact with it; while in other cases only the test of the chemist shows the presence of any deleterious substance.

Character of Soils.

Where the soil is decomposed shale, it is generally heavy and known as "adobe," a clay heavy enough from which to make sun-dried bricks. This soil, when dried by the sun after a rain, will open great cracks an inch or more in width and a great many feet in length. It is needless to say that it would not produce good results in a carnation bench, but it does yield good crops for the farmer who understands how to cultivate and irrigate it. This heavy adobe is at one extreme, and we find all grades of soil differing in texture up to sand and gravel. In some parts of the mountains we have enormous deposits of red sandstone, and the soil adjacent will be a bright red sandy loam which yields excellent crops in the field, but lacks the necessary substance for use in the bench.

Within a small area, soils of very different character can often be found, and not infrequently the topography will indicate different rock formations as the source from which they came, but almost without exception there will be the same lack of vegetable matter. This lack is one which can measurably be supplied so far as the chemistry of the soil is concerned, but the texture of the soil cannot be as satisfactorily corrected. During the winter the carnations require a thorough watering once or twice a week and I think all growers in our section will agree with me in saying that we have been unable to find a soil that will endure this heavy watering throughout a season in the bench without becoming packed and soggy, unless it is a soil so sandy that it will not produce a good crop.

It is to be hoped that we may learn something to our advantage from the scientific soil investigations now being conducted by the Department of Agriculture and the various experiment stations. Certainly all of us have much to learn and our progress is so slow as to be disheartening.

Advantages in Arid Region.

When we come to consider the matter of propagation, I am inclined to think that the florist in the arid region has several advantages over his eastern brother, but the advantages are not all on one side. When the cuttings are taken, the parent plants have been growing in bright sunlight and the foliage is crisp and erect. The plants have not had to struggle through weeks of cloudy weather with the snow on the roof perhaps for days at a time. I think I have never seen our houses darkened by snow more than two days in succession, and probably not more than half a dozen times in ten years. But when the cuttings are taken from the plant, the dry air immediately begins to attack them and they must be put into sand promptly or they are ruined. After they are in sweet air must be provided, yet the least draught means death to the cuttings before they have roots to replace evaporation. Often in winter the temperature of the air in the house will run too high, and ventilation must be given. In mild winters like the present one the bright sun on the glass raises the temperature too high, and when air is given, the dry wind outside rushes in and does its fatal work.

Early in October last we had a light fall of snow, which quickly disappeared, and not until January 7 did any more moisture fall. The benches have been shielded from draughts by curtains, and every precaution taken, yet the story is the same on every place—"Our carnations are not rooting well." Had the winter been a severe one, with cold weather and frequent light falls of snow, the results would have been very different.

Considerable trouble is at times experienced with stem-rot and cutting bed fungus, but I think not to the same extent as in localities farther east.

Some of you will probably think me with frequent rainfalls and a humid atmosphere. I hope I may be pardoned for again referring to roses in a meeting of carnationists but they seem to forcibly illustrate some of the points I wish to emphasize. I have never seen more than three or four really bad cases of black spot on Beauties in Colorado, and they were probably due to carelessness, for it is a trouble that we have not learned to dread as you do here. So much must be placed to the credit of these drying influences but they tend to ripen each shoot too quickly and induce too quick setting of the bud, with wood close jointed and wiry. I think I am safe in saying that every progressive florist in the arid region grows his tea roses grafted on Manetti, because this tends to make a more rapid growth, a longer and a heavier stem.

Start Early in Propagating.

During the period when the young carnations are in pots they make but a slow growth and this compels us to start early in propagating, as the young stock must have a longer time in which to make plants of suitable size for field planting. Our late frosts compel us to wait until about May 10 before planting in the field. Some plant out by May 1, taking chances on a heavy frost in order to gain time, and I must admit that some of the young plants endure a pretty severe frost without permanent injury. The tips of the leaves suffer, but no permanent damage is done; in fact, if the frost is only a very light one, it seems a positive benefit, checking the soft growth and inducing the plants to break more freely. Before planting is begun the field must have a thorough soaking, either from surface ditches or with the hose, and after planting we generally water with a lawn sprinkler every night while the plants are in the field. With plenty of water and a reasonably good soil the plants make a healthy growth in the field, though they do not attain great size. The days are hot and sunny, but if well watered, the plants do not flag, and at night the air is cool and refreshing. It is not uncommon for the mercury to drop to 50 degrees or even to 45 degrees at night, following a day temperature of 90 degrees in the shade, and the carnations seem to enjoy this.

Should the plants escape the hail storms which sometimes nearly ruin them, they ought to be of satisfactory size by the first or middle of August. Lifting from the field and replanting in the houses is the operation requiring the most care of anything during the life of the plant, and plants of moderate size endure the transplanting better than very large ones. Those that were grown in pots prior to field planting endure the removal from the field to the bench much better than those that were grown in flats.

The custom of preparing the soil for the benches a long time in advance does not prevail very generally, and beyond insuring a thorough mixing by frequent turning, there is not much to be gained by it. Where soil piles are wet through by frequent rains, there is a constant change going on and the component parts are blended by the rotting or fermentation; but where the pile is dry, the mass is inert. We are compelled to use manure with caution, because age does not seem to render it harmless to the same extent that it does in sections visited by frequent rains.

the sand they must be watered, generally once a day and often twice. A low house is the most satisfactory for propagating because artificial humidity can be created. Cloth curtains under the glass and in front of the bench help to prevent wilting. I do not think propagating could be successfully carried on in high, airy houses such as one sees in use in the vicinity of Chicago and elsewhere. Clean mentally unbalanced when I say that while sunshine and dry air are fatal to fungi, they do not tend to promote luxuriant growth in anything unless it may be a cactus or some other plant whose natural habitat is the arid region. Yet stop and consider as to what countries produce what we are accustomed to speak of as a luxuriant growth of vegetation, and your mind will revert to a climate

Before beginning our planting we shade the house heavily with mud, close all ventilation and wet down the walks and under the benches. When all is ready the plants are brought from the field with all the soil that will cling to them and transferred to the bench as quickly as possible. The house is kept absolutely without ventilation for the first two or three days, and the plants are frequently syringed. The walks and the ground under the benches are kept drenched and everything possible done to prevent wilting. As soon as it seems safe, a little ventilation is given, generally starting at night, and the shade gradually removed. Within ten days the house is having full light and ventilation. As the plants grow and produce blooms, it becomes apparent that the stems are not as long or as heavy as produced by the same varieties in eastern sections. The flowers are apt to come more nearly up to standard than the stems. This tendency of the stem is so pronounced that, individually, I now make it a rule not to buy any novelty, no matter how attractive, unless it has a decidedly strong stem. The bright sun seems to produce high color in the flower, though some of the pinks fade badly unless shaded.

Among Colorado growers there seems to be a disposition to try the promising new sorts as they are ambitious to have the best. Those whose business it is to disseminate new varieties will, I hope, pardon me for calling their attention to a few facts. Our section is so remote that not many of us can spare the time or the money to inspect new varieties before dissemination and we must depend largely upon what you say in your advertisements. A great many letters of a semi-confidential nature are written by you to induce sales—letters intended to put you in close personal relations with the grower. The confidence thus engendered is the western goose and the crop of golden eggs is one whose loss you would deplore. You may have the fullest faith in a resurrection after death, but if you once kill this valuable goose it will stay dead a long time. Study carefully then the special needs of this section and be sure you have good reason before you urge a purchase. When you have made a sale, bear in mind that the journey is a long one and that when first potted, a rooted cutting in the Rockies has a hard struggle for existence. It is useless to ship cuttings to that section unless they are well rooted, and extra care should be taken to see that they do not dry out in transit. Show a disposition to advance our interests as well as your own and you will find that we are an appreciative lot.

Some Good Carnations.

I think that but two carnations have come to us in recent years that have demonstrated their ability to produce good flowers with strong stems in satisfactory quantities as grown by the average florist. These two are Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson and Enchantress, and the florists of the Rocky Mountain region all take off their hats to Peter Fisher. White Lawson is just as satisfactory as the original pink, but the short stem early in the season is an objection to both. Harlowarden has been quite satisfactory but the demand for that color is small. Piancee has proved a wonderfully fine grower and blooms freely, but she has been on one protracted "hust" since October, and unless she mends her ways we will refuse to give her lodging next year.

The region we are considering includes an area about as large as ninety states the size of Massachusetts, yet the latter has nearly twice as many people and six times as much glass within her borders as are contained in all this vast region. Denver is now but forty-two years old and is about one-third the size of Boston; Salt Lake is about the size of Springfield; Butte and Pueblo about as large as Holyoke; Colorado Springs and Ogden will compare with Fitchburg, while Cheyenne, Wyoming, Helena and Great Falls in Montana, Leadville and Cripple Creek in Colorado are in size between such cities as Pittsfield and Newburyport in this state. By the census of 1900, there were only twenty-two cities and towns in the Rocky Mountains with a population of 5,000 or over, while Massachusetts had nearly eighty in the list.

The last census showed that Colorado had more than two-thirds of the glass in the mountain region and since then two or three important places have been erected. Important additions have also been made at Salt Lake and at Butte. Small establishments with from 1,000 to 5,000 feet of glass have been started at many points in the mountains and I look for a still further increase in places of that kind. A town of 2,000 or 3,000 inhabitants, with small mining camps tributary to it and within easy access by rail, may very well offer inducements to the young man looking for an opportunity to start in a small way.

A Long Distance Business.

At present in our own establishment, in Denver, we have ledger accounts with more than a thousand people scattered all over the mountain country. There is hardly a day in the year that we do not send retail orders to places from 300 to 500 miles distant; and on holidays, especially before Memorial day, these express packages go out literally by the wagon load. Oftentimes these orders come in by telephone from some mining camp hundreds of miles away on the opposite side of the mountains. We must be in a position to know as far as possible the financial standing of the people scattered over this wide area, and keep the information so readily accessible that we can look up a man's credit while he holds the long distance telephone at so much per minute. This is made possible by index cards which show at a glance what experience if any we have had and also the reports as to credit received from other sources.

This long distance business will eventually be reduced by the establishment of small places such as I have just referred to. But a wise man changes his method with changing conditions and we hope to then sell enough in other ways to offset this loss. At any rate, we will always welcome any man who comes among us and demonstrates his ability to succeed by honorable methods.

No Wholesale Houses.

There is no wholesale commission house within the region we are discussing. Two or three earnest attempts have been made in that direction but they have all failed.

Some flowers are shipped into our territory from outside. Kansas City sends a very limited amount to New Mexico, while Minneapolis and St. Paul ship rather largely to Montana. Ten years ago Chicago found a good market in Denver but that time is past. Our real competition comes from Council Bluffs, half way between Denver and Chicago. Without any direct information, I am inclined to think the long distance trade of that point is gradually being secured concerning the prices we obtain. In Denver they will average fairly well with prices in eastern cities. We never are compelled to accept the very low prices that sometimes obtain at eastern points, but at holiday seasons our highest prices are decidedly lower than your highest prices.

Fairy tales are told of miners with suddenly acquired wealth who spend their money lavishly; but in such cases they are apt to patronize those places that carry their stock in bottles instead of vases. A few drinks often create a temporary disregard of expense and a fondness for bright colors but this is not the result of climate and the effect is no more noticeable in Denver or Butte than it is in Boston or Chicago.

As a general thing the man who has acquired wealth by his own labor does not spend his money freely for luxuries; neither is he apt to consider flowers as necessities. It is generally the second wealthy generation who consider our products necessary to their existence, and as our country is new we must wait for time to bring this class of customers. In the meantime we make up for their lack by the absence of the extremely poor. Abject poverty and destitution are rare in the mountain region.

A WHOLESALER'S VIEWPOINT.

BY ALEXANDER J. GUTTMAN NEW YORK.

You know it is said, that some are born great, others achieve greatness, and still others have greatness thrust upon them. It seems to me that I am among the last mentioned; but I assure you that I fully appreciate the honor accorded me, in being given the privilege of presentflorist's counter, until the present when it is almost the commercial equal of the rose.

It is an entirely new feature I believe, to ask a wholesaler to speak before a representative body of growers such as is assembled here. I am glad of this opportunity, however, as the growers' interests and the wholesalers' interests are so closely linked that it is imperative that we come together occasionally and exchange views on trade interests, if we would have the best results from our labors.

Of course, I cannot talk to you intelligently about carnations from the grower's point of view; that is out of the question, but I may, perhaps, be able to interest you for a few moments in dealing with the subject from the wholesaler's point of view.

An Important Item.

The carnation has become of great importance to the flower trade, and there is no doubt in my mind that this condition has been brought about mainly through the work of the American Carnation Society. The fact that although there is keen competition among carnation growers, the fact that they so well understand the principles of business and pull together on all matters that may be, or are, of benefit to the greatest number, has made the society what it is. The impetus given to the raising of new varieties can be justly claimed as the fruit of this society's work, and it is through the many new and improved varieties, well grown and liberally exhibited, throughout the country by the members, thereby being placed before the public, that has given the divine flower the prominent place it holds today with the people of the United States, Canada and Europe.

As I am only to speak of the carnation from the wholesaler's point of view, I can leave the question of its popularity with the public on one side; as that is a subject that could be better handled by a retail dealer, and which has been very ably dealt with by Thos. F. Galvin.

Carnations today are a staple feature in the market, the supply being continuous all the year around. I might also add that they are a somewhat difficult crop to handle, as their keeping qualities are so variable. Some varieties have excellent lasting powers and others, as you are all aware, are not very good keepers, and the wholesaler has to familiarize himself with the peculiarities of each variety in regard to its good and bad qualities. Perhaps I should explain more fully. Suppose I had an order for 500 each, of pink and white carnations to be shipped to a point that required an over-night journey on the cars; well, I do not want to mention any particular variety, but you know as well as I do that there are several of our commercial sorts, which, although they are excellent for home trade, will not bear reshipping to any great distance.

Another fact that I should like to draw your attention to, is that with the gradual improvement taking place in carnations, it is becoming harder all the time for the wholesaler to handle the smaller varieties to advantage. Therefore I would recommend, that growers use their very best judgment in selecting for their stock to grow only the best varieties, such as are generally termed fancies, as these find quick buyers. I would also recommend that the wholesalers give their candid opinion of the by Colorado florists, who have the advantage of the shorter haul; and that Council Bluffs is finding not only compensation but increased demand in markets nearer home, just as I have predicted must happen to us in Colorado in our turn. We trust we may be able to meet the changing situation with like success.

I think a wrong impression prevails ing a paper at this national gathering of such a representative body of our craft. I shall endeavor to give you the result of my observation and experience with the carnation from the wholesaler's viewpoint.

The history of the carnation, the divine flower as we so fondly term it, you are fully acquainted with from the time when it was an insignificant item on the selling and keeping qualities of any new varieties that are being introduced. Growers throughout the country, should also write to the wholesalers in that particular section where new carnations are being distributed, for their opinion. I think it would to a great extent prevent growers from buying undesirable varieties.

Give Wholesalers Fresh Stock.

Another feature: See that your flowers reach the wholesaler in as perfect condition as possible. You have spent your time and energy in growing them, yet all these efforts are for naught if the packing and shipping are not attended to with the proper care. The wholesaler wants good stock fresh and carefully handled, and the name of the carnation is not by itself a salable asset.

The stiff-stemmed varieties should be tied as low as possible in bunching, so as to let the flowers spread nicely, and they will then show up well. The fewer flowers in the bunch the better they will carry for shipment to the wholesaler, and twenty-five should be the most put in a bunch.

Should your facilities for shipping be such that, for instance, you can deliver stock to the wholesaler by wagon; or when they are choice varieties, then I would advise to pack the carnations in boxes, in layers; of course these should not be bunched. I need not go on to explain how they should be packed, for that point has been covered before and you know I must make my paper as brief as possible.

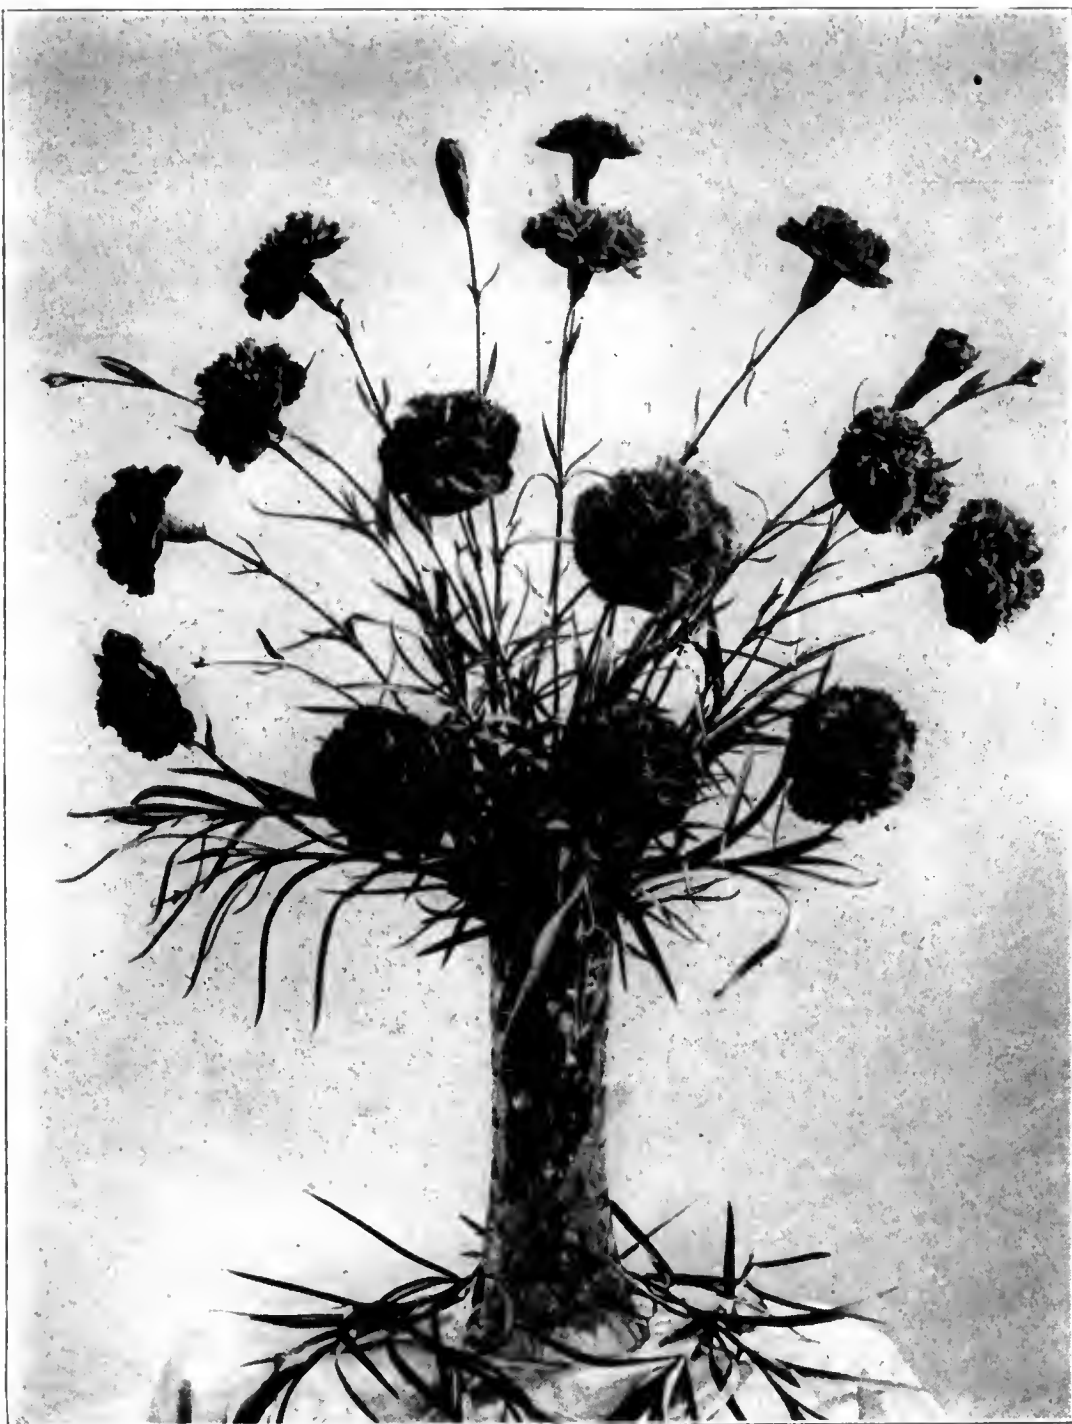

Growers should systematize their picking, bunching, packing and shipping, as well as possible. For it all helps to give satisfaction to the wholesaler, retailer and general, flower-buying public.

It is a fact that there are not so many early and small grades of chrysanthemums grown throughout the country as heretofore. For that reason I should think that varieties of carnations that could be brought in crop in good shape during the fall, should prove profitable to the grower, as good prices can be obtained for them. Fancy scarlets that could be brought in heavy crop for December are profitable to grow.

Another question which seems to me very important, is how best to keep carnations after they are cut; and in my opinion this is an important question for the American Carnation Society to solve. The wholesaler at most times through the season, has to display the stock for at least three hours; although at certain times of the year the blooms are really sold before they come in. Then they are promptly repacked and transferred to the retailer; but when it is necessary to display the stock, and the same is grown perhaps a little soft, and perhaps not picked at just the proper time, as is often the case with growers who do not pick daily; in that case I tell you, the wholesaler is up against it, as we would say, when making his returns to the growers.

For System of Grading.

I think we ought to have a better system of grading. We would not require so many distinctive grades as is given to roses, but to keep the poorer flowers separate would certainly be a good idea, for it often happens that a retailer when buying carnations, say, he has an order for 25, 50 or more, of a certain variety, and in picking up the bunch finds one or two poor flowers, he soon puts that bunch back; for he will tell you that the flower buyer detects a poor flower quickly. The first class retailer would not think of sending his customers poor flowers, and besides we do not want to do anything that will tend to discourage the flower buying public; indeed, no; we want to encourage exhibitions and flower shows and educate the flower buying public as much as we can and as fast as we can.

When the retailer can depend upon a certain grower's stock and knows that it is carefully bunched and carefully sorted, it is an advantage to him for it saves time, and invariably he will be glad to pay a little more for this grower's stock, and I need not explain further the advantage to the grower, wholesaler and retailer. Therefore I recommend that the growers make two grades; the seconds should be sold as such, and there is enough demand to clear up the small amount of second grade stock that may come into the market. I know some growers who have for several years graded number 1's and number 2's, and it would be a great thing if every grower adopted the same plan.

Ship Regularly.

I believe it is to the best interests of us all, for the grower to have the fullest confidence in his wholesaler, and to consign his flowers regularly, and not to hold them back for special occasions. I know that this is a delicate subject and I approach it only after due consideration. We can understand that in years gone by, when there were no flowering plants grown for the Christmas and Easter holidays, there was something to be gained by keeping every flower possible for the holiday sale, when flowers were scarce and prices went soaring upward. Those times, gentlemen, are a thing of the past, because flowering plants and plants of all kinds play a prominent part at holiday time, and such has been the case in the past five years, anyway, in the section of the country that I hail from.

There is no more scarcity such as there used to be at holiday time, the increase in glass has done away with that feature of the holiday business considerably. Ship your flowers when they are ready; of course you should hold back just a little, as the normal increase in demand requires that you do so; but you should use careful judgment in picking and keeping the flowers, etc. For instance, take Easter Sunday; suppose a wholesaler has an order to ship carnations to reach the retailer the day before, which will be Saturday morning. These carnations must leave the wholesaler's establishment on Friday, and if the grower has had these picked much before Thursday, it is not likely that they will give satisfaction to the retailer or to his customer. So in holding back try to govern your picking so that flowers will not have been cut too long. The wholesaler of today is equipped with cold storage facilities, and he can hold the stock if necessary, or sell it at once if that is best; and being in the market, he can take advantage of the conditions that may arise much better than he could if the grower has the flowers in his own cellar. I have seen carnations, say, right before a holiday, which, although they looked grand in the grower's cel-

FROM A RETAILER'S VIEWPOINT.

BY THOS. F. GALVIN, BOSTON.

[A paper read before the American Carnation Society at the Boston meeting, January 25, 1906.]

Being a business man, and also wholly unsuited to take up the matter devolving upon me, viz., to present the commercial aspect of the carnation to the trade and the public, I am free to acknowledge that I approach the subject with much trepi-has almost supplanted the rose in interest and importance.

From the small, weak and insignificant pink, slender and drooping in its characteristics, we now have one of the most vigorous, strongest and most important gems of the whole floral kingdom, and so general has been the interest in the development of this popular flower that, beside the above improvements, there have been added many new, brilliant and dazzling colors, which, when massed or assembled and gathered together produce an effect which is almost bewildering in its attractiveness. In fact, today perfect carnations are an indispensable adjunct of the business of the florist. They have the keeping qualities so necessary for the satisfaction of lovers of the beautiful in flowers, and many instances can be cited where they have graced the boudoir and table, and staterooms of many a transatlantic palace liner, when the charm and beauty and fragrance of all other flowers have passed away.

With the present system of growth, in many instances flowers have been produced which could not be put into a large size goblet without being crushed; with a stem so firm and rigid that it can be used for a multitude of purposes without being wired. While this might be considered a more commercial aspect of the question, it is one that is far-reaching in its results, and when we consider it in all its attractiveness of form, color and other fine qualities, the precision and regularity of its form and growth cannot be too highly recommended; and while I disclaim anything personal in this paper, I believe, truthfully, that the introduction of the Lawson carnation has done much to awaken enthusiasm amongst all classes of our people in favor of this type of flower.

Success Requires Merit.

It is a well established precedent that nothing can be made a genuine success without having the attributes of true merit behind it, and in order that the public shall appreciate and realize the good in any proposition or undertaking, it must have the ear-marks of future suc-lar, were not salable three hours after reaching the wholesaler's establishment.

On High Prices.

I would like to say a few words on high prices. Often the growers put it up to the wholesalers, especially during the winter season, to explain why prices are high today and low tomorrow. My experience has taught me that when prices are too high, that is, too high for the average retailer to be able to satisfy his customers and make a reasonable profit, that then the retailer stops buying. Therefore the moment that prices have reached the limit, the retailers stop buying for one or two days, and, as the stock continues to bloom, and flowers, as you know, have to be moved, for they do not improve with age, the wholesaler is compelled to lower prices and soon the retailers buy and the machinery is again in proper motion.

One thing more: The wholesaler can greatly help to popularize the meritorious varieties by distributing the blooms among as many retailers as it is possible for him to do with the supply at his disposal.

I wish to say here that several gentlemen of our profession have assisted me in this work, and I mention it, because I felt that since you have so honored me, it was my duty to present here as good a paper on this subject as it was possible for me to give you.

dation, but the results of the improvement of the carnation as a vital adjunct of the florists' business have been so far-reaching, and the extraordinary popularity that it has attained in recent years, lead me to venture the statement that it cess. This proud distinction I claim, without prejudice, for the Lawson carnation, and from the time that the wizard of carnation culture, Peter Fisher, first brought it to my attention, up to the present time, nothing has been produced that can in any way rival this magnificent production. Its fame is known over two continents; and indeed I might say in almost all parts of the world, where the love of flowers is predominant, the name of the Lawson carnation is a household word. Its glories have stimulated horticulturists in a laudable and ambitious rivalry to produce something which could compete with it, and while many new types have been produced, which, in many instances have been a revelation in the floral world, the Lawson pink with its brilliant color, and sturdy characteristics, in my humble opinion, still holds its proud place, as the queen of the carnation family; and therefore, owing to the subject matter of this paper, viz., "Carnations from a Retailer's Point of View," I will conclude what I fear has been a tedious and uninteresting narrative, by saying that as our good business stands today, our avocation, with the carnation eliminated from the channels of trade would be like Shakespeare's greatest production with Hamlet left out.

An Important Industry.

Since the great interest that has been manifested by the public in their favor for this popular exotic, it seems to me that our trade has increased, that a more popular demand has been stimulated in all that tends to develop and build up a business, which is increasing all over the world with wonderful progress. From a comparatively unimportant, and I might almost say, obscure line of trade, we are developing into a famous, popular, profitable and important industry.

In the older days, and now, too, when at imposing banquets and feasts, popular heroes and favorites were supplied with rare, delectable and luscious fruits, great care was ever exercised in the production to obtain the most perfect and the best, and, as we sometimes observe today, the many were sacrificed for the few, so the succulent and tasteful and attractive specimen was produced by eliminating and discarding great numbers in order that the most perfect should be obtained, and so it is in the floral kingdom.

Nature is so lavish with her favors, the wonderful resources of soil, and climate, and environment, and so prolific of results, being absolutely boundless in its possibilities, that we have a never-ending field for honorable service and ambition to cultivate. Montgomery gave to the world his magnificent results of rose culture; Coleman first brought to our notice the great possibilities of the chrysanthemum; Fisher astonished us all by his careful, patient and successful efforts on the carnation. And I take a pardonable pride, in a modest reference to the fact that here in our own good city of Boston, much that has been done in the growth and progress and good results have been introduced and brought to a successful conclusion by Boston men.

In the old days of the trade, thousands of dollars' worth of so-called Boston roses were shipped to all parts of the United States. This good, old city, with its members of the craft, have ever been forward and ambitious to promote the best interests of the trade, not only for their own ambition, but for the good of the whole country.

Our business has reached a volume and proportion beyond what the most sanguine could be led to hope for, and speaking from the standpoint of a retailer, the beautiful and popular carnation has not been the least of the adjuncts which has assisted in bringing it to the high standard which it has attained.

I might before concluding mention the commercial value of a well grown carnation, such as the Lawson. They were eagerly sought, and as high as $1 apiece paid for them at retail. Orders were received for them from all parts of this country and Europe. Nothing was considered so acceptable to the sick in the hospitals, as two or three of these beautiful flowers.

MAKING CONCRETE WALLS.

Since Ribes mentioned in the REVIEW that I had used coal ashes in making concrete for walls, I have had so many letters of inquiry from florists from almost every state in the Union that I came to the conclusion the easiest and best way to answer them is through the REVIEW. I will give you my experience with concrete walls and try to answer questions asked me.

I built a range of four houses last summer, covering a plot of 100x110 feet. I went down two feet with my foundation, eighteen inches wide, mixing it the same as for the walls, with the exception of using the large clinkers from soft coal in place of the fine hard coal cinders. I then put up a framework the length of my house, four feet high and nine inches wide, driving stakes in the ground to brace the boards well, so they would not spread while being tamped. I also fastened heavy wire through at different places, so as to make sure of it being very firm and even. I used hard coal ashes from buckwheat and rice coal, mixing my concrete to these proportions: Seven ordinary round-bedded wheelbarrows of ashes to one barrel of cement. I used the best Portland cement and by purchasing by carload lots I paid $1.15 per barrel. Mix your ashes and cement well and use enough water so that after it is tamped there will be a soft, watery substance on top. I tamped it thoroughly; by doing that you have no holes for the cold air to go through. I let it set for a day or two, then tore down the framework and put up another 100 feet. Four ordinary day laborers and a carpenter ought to put up 100 feet in a day, providing the digging has been done.

I imbedded a 2-inch iron pipe in the concrete at the top of the wall every eight feet while making my wall and left them extending above the wall two feet to rest and fasten my angle iron on—I have two feet of glass from the wall to the roof bars—making a perfectly solid foundation for my roof to rest on.

As to recommending the wall to any one, I found that when the thermometer was down to 10 degrees below zero, the coldest we had this winter, it proved perfectly satisfactory. In my opinion it is an ideal wall in every respect. It is as firm and hard as rock. I took a thin coating of sand and cement and smoothed up the outside, which filled up all small crevices, and made a very attractive wall. My coal shed, which I built the same way, has also been very satisfactory. The secret of a good wall is enough of good tamping. I do not believe any one using sand will have the same results.

THE GLASS MARKET.

The report from practically all jobbers in window glass is that the demand for greenhouse sizes is something entirely unprecedented for so early in the season. The jobbers find that the larger ranges of greenhouses are those first to be planned and that the first call is always for large lots, with the demand steadily increasing in point of number of orders, but the size of the orders steadily decreasing until late in the fall, when freezing weather comes.

The glass market has had many ups and downs during the past summer. Prices have fluctuated violently and the jobbers have been and are unable to make quotations except for prompt acceptance. At present, prices are low, but there is reported to be considerable difficulty in procuring large lots of one size of greenhouse glass. The 16x16, 16x18, 16x20 and 16x24 sizes are hard to pick up when one wants a thousand boxes or more of one size. The jobbers explain this by the statement that the glass factories will not cut the small sizes except at an extra payment. As is well known, the larger sizes of glass command a relatively higher price per square foot than do the greenhouse sizes. Consequently the factories cut as much of their glass to the larger sizes as circumstances will allow. The jobbers are all scrambling to get all the greenhouse glass possible, for they feel confident that this season's greenhouse building operations will considerably eclipse anything heretofore known.

Low priced offerings are being made on large lots of machine-made glass. It looks exceedingly good, but jobbers say it is so very brittle that it is useless for many purposes, especially for greenhouse use. One grower ordered a car of it, on price, but when he came to look into it further he canceled his order. However, if the glass-blowing machines are a success in other ways it should not be a difficult task to overcome the brittleness, and this objection will doubtless not long obtain.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Unrooted Cuttings.

It was in 1902 that I first advised, in these notes, the purchase of unrooted cuttings and from time to time have briefly referred to my preference for this method of procuring stock. Owing to recent inquiries for information regarding the result of its continued practice, I take this opportunity to again give my views on the subject with the relation of such added experience as may have been gained.

It is claimed that carnation cuttings as taken from the plants are better able to withstand a journey than those lifted from the cutting bench with roots and this would seem to be supported by the arrival of a lot of unrooted cuttings in good condition after a trip of 3,500 miles and return, while a similar lot, taken from the sand, packed with equal care and shipped with the others, returned worthless. All will agree that the sooner a rooted cutting can be gotten into soil after being taken from the sand the better; if rooted and shipped there is considerable delay, not to mention injury to delicate roots from handling in packing and unpacking.

Why is it that some varieties disappoint us the first year sent out but improve the second season?

The disposition is to lay the cause of all trouble to overpropagation, as if it were not possible to be due to some other cause. There being so many conditions beyond the control of the disseminator after stock leaves his hands and upon which depend the future success of a variety, it is obviously unfair to so magnify the evils of overpropagation as to lose sight of all other adverse conditions, slight perhaps in their influence, but likely to be met with. A new variety born and brought up under the care of one who anticipates every requirement has every advantage in its favor and it is but natural that preference for the conditions which have brought about its superior qualities should be strong. Removed to a distance where soil, climate and other conditions are different, it must first adapt itself to these before getting down to actual business.

Becoming Acclimated.

Under the method of procuring cuttings already rooted this process of becoming acclimated in many cases does not make much headway until cuttings can be obtained from the mature plants; this will be apparent in the marked difference between the stock originally purchased and that rooted the following year.

Now, instead of waiting for a variety to become acclimated, why not begin to acclimatize it at the outset by starting with unrooted cuttings?

You may call this theory but having for several years purchased rooted cuttings of new varieties and the first season's showing always being unsatisfactory, the plan of obtaining cuttings unrooted was tried with the result that the young stock when rooted and potted took hold at once; they seemed to feel at home and acted like those made from cuttings taken off our own plants. Their behavior in the field, after housing and at blooming time was evidence enough for me to decide in favor of the plan, and from continued experience with numerous varieties I feel justified in advancing the opinion (call it theory if you wish) that a variety adapts itself to the different soil, climate, water, etc., or in other words becomes acclimated sooner if cuttings of the same be obtained in the unrooted state, the whole operation of propagation being undertaken by the grower at his establishment.

It must be admitted that at first requests to have orders for stock filled with unrooted cuttings were looked upon with disfavor by some introducers who evidently saw in this an attempt to insert the point of a wedge which in its onward course would split prices in twain or perhaps what in some instances was doubtful at the start but would count as one in a lot of rooted cuttings, might not be considered worth counting in the unrooted state.

The subject of prices is one not in my province to discuss, but will say in justice to all that the owner of a new variety is entitled to the established price of his cuttings whether furnished rooted or unrooted, the buyer being equally entitled to have them supplied either way he may choose.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

CARNATION POCAHONTAS.

Carnation Pocahontas is a cross between a light red seedling and Gov. Roosevelt, and is in its third year. The color is a shade brighter than its parent, Roosevelt. Instead of the dark east, it has a scarlet east, which adds a brilliancy to the color seldom seen in a crimson, especially under artificial light. The form of the bloom is round and it has very little fringe on the petal. In size it is larger than Harlowarden and in productiveness the originators, Baur & Smith, of Indianapolis, claim that it beats Harry Fenn. The growth is strong and the stem holds the bloom up perfectly. It does not split and is a good keeper. The originators have a good stock of it and hope to disseminate it in 1907.

PICKING THE BLOOMS.

In picking blooms of carnations, is it best to break at a joint or between joints? R. B.

It will make very little, if any, difference in the keeping of your carnations whether you break the stems at the joints or between the joints. We have heard growers argue in favor of each way, but from experience we find there is no difference. We have also heard the assertion that the blooms will keep better if the stem is cut with a knife than where they are picked or snapped off. This, too, we find is a mistaken idea. When the stem snaps off clean there is no better way to gather the blooms, but there are a few varieties that do not snap off readily and these should be cut with a knife. If your carnations do not keep well I would advise you to look for the cause elsewhere.

A. F. J. BAUR.

FOR LONG SHIPMENT.

How should carnation cuttings be packed for safe shipment to European customers? P. O.

Carnations that are shipped to Europe should not be sent as rooted cuttings, but should be established in pots first. They should be strong, young plants with considerable wood on them. Pot them into 2½-inch pots and grow them cool. Do not top them at the stage you would top your own stock, but let them run up pretty well, no matter if they do begin to show the bud by the time you ship them. Before shipping them harden them just a little by withholding the water somewhat and keeping them quite cool. Even with careful preparation you will find the carnation not the easiest plant to ship across the water.

When packing, instead of wrapping them in paper you should cover the ball of soil with damp sphagnum and wrap with raffia or twine to hold it on. Do not let the sphagnum come up around the stem any more than you can help; in fact, few of the lower leaves might be removed to help keep the foliage away from the damp moss.

When packing in the box use the same method as is used in packing azaleas and in fact all plants that are shipped across the water. Put in a single row of plants with the root end against the end or the side of the box and press them together tightly, so there will be no working loose. Then nail a cleat across and tight against the upper side of the balls. Put in another layer of plants and another cleat, and so on until your box is full. You can put another lot of plants on the opposite side of the box, using the same method of fastening them. In this case, however, the box should be large enough so the plants will not switch each other too much when being handled, else there will be bruising and decay before the end of the journey is reached. Make the box air tight where the soil comes in contact with it to prevent drying out, but do not wrap with paper on the outside. Do all the lining inside, as the paper if on the outside is likely to be torn off on such long and rough journeys. Leave a few air holes in the box where the empty space between the plants is, to admit fresh air, else there will surely be decaying. Be sure you nail everything securely, as the journey is sure to be a rough one and if any part of the box becomes loose it will ruin the whole shipment.

Besides tacking on the usual shipping tag, mark the name and address on the box with crayon, both your own name and of the one who is to receive them. Also mark conspicuously "Live Plants, Perishable," etc.

By the time you get your plants into condition it will be April and there will be little danger of freezing. The fine point will be to prevent damping and we have manure hauled we do not pay for it by the ton, but by the load (usually about a cord), so I can tell you better how much to put on your ground in cords than I could in tons. To an acre I would advise you to use about twenty-five cords. That will make a good, heavy coat and need not be repeated oftener than every second or third year, according to how your ground is to start with. Much depends, too, on how much of it is bedding, as to how much fertilizing power there is in it. If you could have spread half of it on the ground in the fall and plowed it under, and then spread on the other half during the winter to be plowed under at planting time, it would do your ground twice as much good.

Be careful that you do not overdo this manuring. It is not good policy to plant in too rich ground in the field. The growth becomes soft if rain is plenty and you will have trouble in getting the stock started when planted on the benches. If you want good plants by housing time I would advise you to plant in the field from 3-inch pots and well established. Then if they take hold well in a fairly rich soil and get a moderate amount of rain you ought to lift good, strong plants by the middle of July, and they need not be soft, either. You will find, too, that frequent plowing will make the soil more productive. We always plow one field in the fall, whether we manure it or not. It gives the weather a better chance to work on it and helps to keep down weeds.

The shavings and sawdust will do no special harm in the cow manure, but they will not do any good, either. We always prefer straw bedding.

I know of no one who uses the Skinner system for watering carnations in the house. Ask Mr. Skinner.

TWO FINE HOUSES.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs taken December 19 at the establishment of Jensen & Dekema, Chicago. One shows a bench of Enchantress and the other a bench of Boston Market. Mr. Jensen was a graduate of Peter Fisher's school for capable young growers and he has had a longer experience with Enchantress than almost any other grower, for he was foreman for J. D. Thompson at the time he was sending out this now widely grown and universally liked variety. Mr. Jensen, when he went into business for himself last year planted more heavily of Enchantress than of any other sort. He knows, too, the special needs of Boston Market and does exceptionally well with it, getting good size and strong stems. It is a popular shipping variety in the Chicago market because of its keeping qualities.

CARNATION CANDACE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of Carnation Candace, which has been shown for the past year or more and is now being distributed by John Hartje and the Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. It is a very pleasing shade of light pink, a descendant of Mrs. Frances Joost, which seven or eight years ago was taking the first premiums in the open classes for light pink for the same grower with whom Candace originated. This is said to be similar to Joost in habit, but a more steady bloom. The flower is larger than Joost, averag-

MANURING THE FIELD.

I would like to ask your correspondent how many tons of stable manure to put on an acre of ground to plant carnations in. You always see to put on a liberal coat. I put on twelve to fifteen tons, but I find some say thirty to forty tons. I want expert advice, for I want big plants when I am ready to house my stock. Will shavings, chips and sawdust in cow manure taken from stock cars from the railroad be in any way detrimental to the growing of carnations? I have about fifteen to twenty tons, which is well rotted. There may be one ton of sawdust in the pile. It makes a strong liquid after being in the tank a week and I cannot see where it sours the ground, but it makes Lawson grow. Do all the florists have the Skinner system of watering for carnations? If so what results do they have? B. J. P.

I do not know how much stable manure weighs in proportion to its bulk. When ing about three inches. The stem carries the flower very gracefully, as the picture shows. The variety is said to be very productive.

IN CALIFORNIA.

What is the trouble with my violets, and the cure? I live in one of the interior valleys where the summers are hot and dry. I set my plants out last April in a lath house. Along in June or July I noticed the leaves turning yellow and the plants gradually dying. I sprayed once with Bordeaux, but it seemed to have no effect, for they are still dying. Out of 2,000 plants I have 200, perhaps, left. They are Princess of Wales variety. They have had plenty of water and good care, with light and sandy loam.

A. L. H.

This correspondent has our sympathy in losing such a large part of his stock. At this distance, judging from his description, I should say that it was too dry and hot to make a success of violets; however, he does not say if the lath house screened them sufficiently from the hot sun, or was too dark and close, or if he watered lightly and often, or at longer intervals and heavily, etc. This is a strong growing variety and ought to do well. We would be pleased to hear from some of the successful California violet growers as to their methods of culture, varieties grown, etc.

VIOLETS IN OREGON.

I have a bed of violets, 6x40 feet, and have it covered with eleven-ounce duck canvas. They are blooming finely, but the lower leaves, near the ground, are turning yellow and rotting. Is there anything to prevent this? Would it help them if I kept the canvas off on cold, cloudy, damp days? I have kept them covered except when the sun was out. I uncovered them during the forenoon. The slugs are beginning to bother them. What can I do to get rid of them?

C. L. R.

I am not familiar with the conditions in Oregon, but from the tenor of his inquiry should take it that he was only having the natural death of the old leaves, which he should pick off and remove. My impression is that he does not need the canvas at all, if he has been having it off on sunny days, unless he had it to protect them from too heavy rains. Violets certainly want all the air that it is possible to give them. As for the slugs, as we have frequently recommended, granulated sugar mixed with Paris green is as good as anything we have ever tried, scattering it in little piles wherever the slugs are in evidence.

MAGGOTS ON VIOLETS.

I would like to ask you if you have heard of any remedy for maggots? They are white and have two horns, six legs and a tail. The entire maggot is about a quarter of an inch long and not much thicker than a hair. They go very fast, back into the ground, and about a dozen on each violet. They eat the flower entirely. I used lime and tobacco dust but it did not help, and fumigating does not help. If you have heard of anything that is good for it please let me know.

G. B.

We do not recognize G. B.'s visitors as being anything that has troubled us, but I think that I should try Paris green and granulated sugar as before recommended for other insect pests, and if this does not eradicate them, I should fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas.

STARTING CANNAS.

I would like to know the best time for buying and starting canna roots to use for bedding next spring. How should I start them, also what care do they need and what varieties are best for bedding? I want both dwarf and the taller ones.

E. A. M.

First as to buying canna roots, although extensively advertised in the early spring months, it is not always easy to procure good sound roots. Many are lost during the winter, so put your order in at once to some good house and order them delivered to you the end of February or very early in March.

And here I may as well give you a brief list of desirable varieties of the taller-growing sorts: Kate Gray, Pennsylvania, President Cleveland, Charles Henderson, Florence Vaughan, Alphonse Bouvier and Mlle. Berat are among the finest, but the list does not include any of the very newest.

Cannas that will grow about three feet are of more general use and there are many fine varieties. Among those we have grown and that proved particularly fine are Buttercup, pure yellow; Tarrytown, the very best red; President McKinley, fine in flower and foliage but not as free as Tarrytown; Souvenir d'Antoine Crozy, the best of its class, orange and scarlet; Dwarf Florence Vaughan, as fine a flower as the Florence Vaughan but only three feet; David Harum, scarcely a dwarf but a most beautiful variety; and then there is a very dwarf scarlet sort called Express that seems little known yet. For a bed or for the center of a vase or for a veranda box, it is one of the finest. This list could be much lengthened, but, as with many of our florists' flowers, it is sound advice to grow few varieties, grow those in quantity and grow them well.

Cannas are started into growth from the first to the end of March. If you would prefer them in flower by the end of May, then start operations early in March. Spread one inch of sphagnum moss (cocoanut fiber will do just as well) on a bench in a house where the night temperature is about 60 degrees. Put the roots on the material quite thickly. Then cover the roots thinly with the same material. If you have heating pipes beneath the bench, none the worse. Keep the moss or fiber slightly moist. In two or three weeks the roots will begin to start their leaf growth, as well as make working roots. When three or four inches above the moss lift them out and put into 4-inch pots with a well manured compost and keep on a light, warm bench. There is nothing more to be done, except give ordinary daily care.

We have often received canna plants from very large firms that had evidently been reared in a shady, warm house and they were soft and sloppy, but we did not kick, for we know how much the headpiece of this firm had to think of and it was superhuman to expect that he could spread himself over acres.

The canna is a native of the torrid zone and enjoys our hottest weather, and if not neglected for water when their avaricious roots are crowded into a 4-inch pot, will endure our brightest suns under glass. Don't expect all these roots to start at once with the same strength and vigor, but all that are sound will start within six weeks and you will not have wasted space, pots or soil.

BEST SIX ROSES.

Will you kindly tell me what six named varieties of roses are best for greenhouse culture? I would like colors red, pink, white and yellow, and what time should they be set in the greenhouse to bring them into bloom for the holidays?

E. V. M.

The best roses to grow under glass are those which are most in demand and for a beginner easiest of culture. In whites, Brides and Ivory stand at the top. In pinks, Bridesmaids, Chatenay and Killarney. In reds, Liberty and Richmond. In yellows, Perle des Jardins and Franz Deegan. Ivory, Chatenay and Richmond, not being quite so susceptible to mildew and other troubles, and being good doers, are the varieties best suited for a beginner. Golden Gate is also a good and profitable rose. The usual time to bench roses is late in May or early in June, which gives them a sufficient length of growing season to produce a good crop in September and still another at holiday times.

RIBES.

INFESTED WITH EEL WORMS.

I am sending you a root of a rose plant and should be glad to have you state if they are affected with club root or eel worms.

E. C.

The specimen plant is badly infested with eel worms, which have undoubtedly caused this form of club root. Under a powerful magnifier these small tubercles will be found to contain from three to five and frequently more small worms almost invisible to the naked eye and which resemble eels in appearance. These worms by encysting themselves in the small feeding roots cause the tubercle to form. These tubercles are constantly increasing in size and becoming more numerous, sapping the vitality of the plants and destroying root action.

Like all low forms of animal life these nematodes are very retentive of life and hard to destroy. As yet I have learned of no means of destroying them without also destroying the plant host. They perish in solutions of acids and of most metallic compounds, but, unfortunately, these are also destructive of vegetable life.

If the rest of the stock is as badly infested as the specimen sent they should be thrown out without delay, as recovery according to our present knowledge is out of the question. It would also be very unsafe to propagate from such stock, as they are so reduced in vitality that the young plants would become an easy prey to the same trouble.

BEST GARDEN ROSES.

FORCED CIRCULATION OF WATER.

[A paper by H. S. Dodson, read before the Detroit Florists' Club, January 3, 1906.]

The forced circulation consists of the ordinary hot-water system in connection with a pump. The ordinary hot-water system is based entirely upon gravity as the force which circulates the water in the system, and by reason of the hot water being the lighter, it is forced upward by the descending cold water, but the difference in the weight is not great enough to insure rapid circulation. In order that the returning water be sufficient to cause a reasonably rapid circulation, the temperature must fall from 50 to 80 degrees.

In using the gravity system for heating on a large scale it is readily seen that this drop in the temperature of the water is something to be avoided as the heat emitted from water at this greatly reduced temperature has little heating value.

When the difference in head is six feet, the flow by gravity is from one to one and one-half feet per second, while that of the forced circulation is from seventeen to twenty feet per second. The only means by which it is possible to maintain the temperature of the water at a height necessary to obtain its most efficient heat is to assist gravity by use of a pump.

By use of a pump the circulation can be returned to the boiler to be reheated at a loss of but ten degrees in mild weather and of not more than twenty degrees in the severest weather. The pump used for the circulation is an extremely simple piece of apparatus, being but a fan enclosed in an iron casing. This fan revolves and propels the returning water through the boiler and thence through the system. The two bearings of this pump run in a reservoir of oil, as does the shaft of the motor which operates the pump, thus doing away with the constant attention of a person to keep the pump in running condition.

The alternating current motor is still a more simple machine than the direct current motor, there being no commutator. A steam, gas or gasoline engine, belt, water motor or any form of power can be used to advantage where it is available, but the electric motor is so universally used, and systems of electric power are available almost every place where heat is needed, that we can cite the electric motor as the most simple and most economical form of power for forced circulation of hot water.

Unlike any other system of heating, the coils may be of any length, and can be placed in any position or location in respect to the boiler and pump. A uniform and constant temperature can be maintained in all coils and radiators, no matter where they are located or how long they may be.

The power necessary to force the water through the coils is only the amount necessary to overcome the friction of the water in the pipes; and this power is consumed, no matter in what way the water is circulated. If it is circulated by gravity, the power is lost in the form of heat and goes out the chimney; if it is circulated by a steam engine, electric motor, gas engine, or any other form of power, it is nevertheless a loss.

The regulation of coils and radiators is independent of the boiler and can be regulated to the desired temperature by cutting down the supply of water through the coils by closing the supply valve, or by an automatic regulator which controls the supply by a thermostatic action.

The distance mains can be run is almost unlimited, there being cities with from twelve to fifteen miles of mains and millions of square feet of radiating surface. The boiler is of any type selected by the purchaser: Water tube, tubular, or a cast-iron sectional boiler, and steam boilers are often substituted.

In contrasting the forced circulation of hot water with the steam systems in general use, the economies can readily be seen. In the first place, a steam system is designed to warm the building to the desired temperature in zero weather and this same temperature must be raised in the boiler, whether the temperature of the building is to be raised to 5 or 80 degrees; therefore the heat not needed must be a loss. In the forced circulation of hot water we warm the water to the temperature necessary to heat the building to the desired temperature only, without a loss.

Carnation Helen Goddard.

The moisture which is natural in the air, and which should not be destroyed, is not overheated and burned out of the air by hot water, as in the extremely high temperature to which the air is heated when steam of fifteen or twenty pounds pressure is used.

There is no need of bleeding the system of air, as is common to the steam system after it has become cold, as one automatic air trap, which is placed at the highest point on the system, takes care of all air which is carried to it by the flow of the water.

All coils are placed level and at any place convenient to the owner of the greenhouse. The short coils which are necessary by the use of steam, require the use of numerous valves and fittings, which are needless in the forced circulation of hot water.

One feature of the forced circulation of hot water cannot but impress itself upon everyone who will think a moment of how it can be centralized in order to obtain economies. As the writer has already said, the water can be forced for miles in mains which are properly covered with a loss of but a few degrees of heat.

The forced circulation of hot water has many features which make it possible to heat places in which gravity systems are impossible. The mains, coils, and radiators can be placed and operated at any distance below the level of the boiler and any height above it. The necessity of cleaning boilers of scale and incrustation is practically eliminated by this system as the precipitation is almost nil.

THE REVIEW will send Saltford's Violet Book on receipt of 25 cents.

SIZE OF SMOKESTACK.

I have a smokestack which is 9x18 inches, twenty-five feet tall. Will it be sufficient to carry a tubular boiler 30 inches by 10 feet long with twenty-two 3½-inch flues? If not large enough, give size of one suited for such a boiler.

H. D. F.

I judge the smokestack you have is ample for the boiler in question. Such a boiler should have about seven square feet of grate surface and it is estimated that the size of the flue should be one-ninth the area of the grate to give good satisfaction. The boilers should have a chimney with about 144 square inches of area. The chimney you have has 162 square inches of area.

PRICE OF LUMBER.

The price of lumber of nearly all kinds is high this season; nearly all grades have advanced during the past month. Pecky cypress, which is now the popular material for greenhouse benches, has recently had an advance of from $1.50 to $2 per thousand feet and there is a prospect that a shortage will develop before all wants are supplied. The Adam Schillo Lumber Co., Chicago, which supplies most of the growers around Chicago, advises that orders for pecky cypress be booked without delay.

I LIKE the REVIEW very much, especially for its cultural notes.—JOHN DUNSTON, Niles, O.

CORNWALL, N. Y.—H. E. Jacob, Jr., has gone out of the greenhouse business, confining his interests to hardware and house furnishings.

Cannas are started into growth from the first to the end of March. If you would prefer them in flower by the end of May, then start operations early in March. Spread one inch of sphagnum moss (coconut fiber will do just as well) on a bench in a house where the night temperature is about 60 degrees. Put the roots on the material quite thickly. Then cover the roots thinly with the same material. If you have heating pipes beneath the bench, none the worse. Keep the moss or fiber slightly moist. In two or three weeks the roots will begin to start their leaf growth, as well as make working roots. When three or four inches above the moss lift them out and put into 4-inch pots with a well manured compost and keep on a light, warm bench. There is nothing more to be done, except give ordinary daily care.

We have often received canna plants from very large firms that had evidently been reared in a shady, warm house and they were soft and sloppy, but we did not kick, for we know how much the headpiece of this firm had to think of and it was superhuman to expect that he could spread himself over acres.

The canna is a native of the torrid zone and enjoys our hottest weather, and if not neglected for water when their avaricious roots are crowded into a 4-inch pot, will endure our brightest suns under glass. Don't expect all these roots to start at once with the same strength and vigor, but all that are sound will start within six weeks and you will not have wasted space, pots or soil.

BEST SIX ROSES.

Will you kindly tell me what six named varieties of roses are best for greenhouse culture? I would like colors red, pink, white and yellow, and what time should they be set in the greenhouse to bring them into bloom for the holidays?

E. V. M.

The best roses to grow under glass are those which are most in demand and for a beginner easiest of culture. In whites, Brides and Ivory stand at the top. In pinks, Bridesmaids, Chateaux and Killarney. In reds, Liberty and Richmond. In yellows, Perle des Jardins and Franz Deegan. Ivory, Chateaux and Richmond, not being quite so susceptible to mildew and other troubles, and being good doers, are the varieties best suited for a beginner. Golden Gate is also a good and profitable rose. The usual time to bench roses is late in May or early in June, which gives them a sufficient length of growing season to produce a good crop in September and still another at holiday times.

INFESTED WITH EEL WORMS.

I am sending you a root of a rose plant and should be glad to have you state if they are affected with club root or eel worms.

E. C.

The specimen plant is badly infested with eel worms, which have undoubtedly caused this form of club root. Under a powerful magnifier these small tubercles will be found to contain from three to five and frequently more small worms almost invisible to the naked eye and which resemble eels in appearance. These worms by encysting themselves in the small feeding roots cause the tubercle to form. These tubercles are constantly increasing in size and becoming more numerous, sapping the vitality of the plants and destroying root action.

Like all low forms of animal life these nematodes are very retentive of life and hard to destroy. As yet I have learned of no means of destroying them without also destroying the plant host. They perish in solutions of acids and of most metallic compounds, but, unfortunately, these are also destructive of vegetable life.

If the rest of the stock is as badly infested as the specimen sent they should be thrown out without delay, as recovery according to our present knowledge is out of the question. It would also be very unsafe to propagate from such stock, as they are so reduced in vitality that the young plants would become an easy prey to the same trouble.

DARLINGTON ON CALIFORNIA.

[The continuation of a paper by E. B. Darlington, trial ground superintendent for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, January 2, 1906. The first installment was published January 18.]

Fine Harvest Season.

It is the climate, combined with the fertility of the soil, which makes California so desirable for seed growing, as during the harvest season there is an entire absence of rain. Seed heads develop and ripen and the harvest proceeds steadily, yet without rush or hurry; vines or seed heads are cut field by field and spread on large sheets to dry and when all have been harvested, the thresher goes from block to block, followed by the cleaners and the sacks of seeds are stacked in the open air until they are hauled to the warehouses in the fall. There is no anxious watching for passing showers or a heavy downpour, as with us, and no need for any shelters in which to dry and thresh the seed.

Next to the seed ranches the most interesting feature of the Santa Clara valley are the miles and miles of prune orchards, and in handling this crop the prunes are allowed to ripen fully and drop to the cultivated soil beneath, they are then gathered from the ground, dipped in lye to remove the bloom and are spread out on slatted crates, such as we use for onion sets, to dry. The past year the prune crop, like nearly all other crops, was cut short by the intensely hot weather in July, but the price was good and growers were having better returns than from the very large crop of the preceding seasons.

Below Santa Clara I visited the "slews" of Watsonville, where the soil is a black, fibrous peat, similar to that of the Jersey swamps, and here were crops of cauliflower in all stages, from the freshly set young plants to those in head and seeding. In these valleys there were clear streams of water running in the drains and it seemed entirely practicable to grow all moisture-loving crops at any season of the year, but it is not suited for general seed raising on account of the heavy fogs which come in from the sea. The hills surrounding these valleys are devoted to dairy farming and apple orchards and the country had more of a home-like appearance than any part of California I visited.

In the South.

Going still further south, I stopped at Lompoc, where the chief crops are mustard seed and commercial or soup beans, and still further south to Ventura was the lima bean country. Try to imagine from fifty to seventy-five miles of travel through narrow but level coast lands where the principal crop was lima beans, interspersed with orchards of English or more properly Persian walnuts. This portion of California was to me the most interesting, for here were the evidences of the early Spanish settlers: Fan palms sixty feet or more in height, araucarias forty to fifty feet high, and a grape vine with a trunk over a foot in diameter and the branches covering a trellis which extended over a half an acre of ground. This vine is at Carpinteria and coming on it unexpectedly, I at once recognized it from the illustrations in our gardening publications. The vine is in perfect health and vigor and could easily be made to cover a much larger area. On the other side of the trellis hung immense clusters of fruit, a single cluster of bunches being large enough to fill a good-size wash-tub, but owing to a lack of water the grapes were poorly developed and only fitted for the wine press.

Here also we visited a small ranch in a little valley where three generations of a Scotch family had a small fruit ranch, which was a feast to delight a gardener. Here in adjoining rows and blocks were strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, loganberries, purple guavas, figs, an extensive assortment of our finer hot-house grapes, lemons, oranges and grape-fruit, some in full bearing and others with occasional clusters of ripe fruits, according to their season. Here were trained gardeners of the old school raising in the open ground all the fruits which they had been accustomed to grow under glass in their old home.

An incident of Carpinteria was a large Magnolia grandiflora, with camellia-like blossoms a foot in diameter and on my commenting on its flowering at that season of the year, I was told that it was "a continuous performance" and that it flowered throughout the whole year.

Mrs. Shepherd's Place.

From the windows of my room in the Hotel Rose, Ventura, I could look down into the flower garden of Mrs. Theodosia B. Shepherd, which occupies an entire square in the center of the town. Here was a most interesting and varied collection of flowering plants, many of them old acquaintances of my apprenticeship days, which have now disappeared from our commercial greenhouses, as these in recent years have been turned into cut-flower factories or palm nurseries, to the detriment of a varied plant collection. In one corner there were small glass houses heavily whitewashed for propagating purposes, while along the central walk were lath shades filled with begonias and creepers, and at intervals were ornamental summer houses or pagodas artistically decorated with the leaf-stalks of the fan palm. Quite a large section of the grounds was laid out in rock work and devoted to cacti and other succulents, and the whole was a most interesting treat for any flower loving gardener.

A noticeable feature here as elsewhere in California, was the immense size of the individual florets on the geraniums, all varieties appearing to have much larger and more brightly colored flowers than with us. Near the hotel there is a rubber tree which has the size and development of a twenty-five-year-old Norway maple, and at the Mission there is an araucaria fully fifty feet in height, but a peculiar feature of the araucaria was that instead of being flatly spread, the side branches turned upwards in a V-like form, possibly owing to the dry season.

POINSETTIAS.

Will you please tell me how to store poinsettias after they have finished blooming? Does the poinsettia bear more than one scarlet bract in a season? K. C. C.

I will answer the last question first. The poinsettia does not bear but one crop of flowers in a season, and the bracts are an essential part of the flower. Nature did not endow the plant with these brilliant bracts to please the human eye, or for usefulness to the florist. They evolved because the economy of the plant needed them to attract tropical insects to their nectar cups, and so hasten the chief function of all plants, to bear seed and reproduce its kind.

As soon as you have cut the stalk and have a foot or less of stem left, lay the plants on their sides beneath the driest and warmest bench you have, and let them rest there perfectly dry till the first of May. This is for plants grown in pots. If lifted from a bench, and all the soil has fallen from the roots, then pack them in flats and pack some dry soil among the roots, but still keep the flats in a dry, warm place. W. S.

FORCING CHERRY BLOSSOMS.

How long does it take to force apple blossoms, cherry blossoms, etc., into bloom, by taking dormant twigs and placing same in water? I should like to have some in bloom for Easter if I can do it. A. C. S.

I would advise you to cut the branches or shoots of the apple and cherry at once, and place them in moist soil, and keep in a cool house or cellar till it is time to force. Allow five or six weeks from time of giving them light and heat. The last two weeks give them 10 degrees higher than you started them in. W. S.

HYDRANGEA OTAKSA.

I would like to know how to propagate Hydrangea Otaksa and when is the best time. Can I store them away in a cool basement in the fall and leave them there until forcing time and could I store roses there in pots in the same way? Will you tell me what are the best roses for pot plants in the spring? I have a large cool basement 26x50 feet. What other use can I make of it? F. J. R.

Hydrangea Otaksa propagates most readily from soft wood cuttings which may be rooted at almost any time, but preferably in the late winter or early spring months. Given a bottom heat they root as quickly as carnations or geraniums. Cuttings taken in late summer or early fall make nice single head plants in 5-inch or 6-inch pots the next spring.

If the basement is dry and frost-proof the plants will keep finely in it. A light frost, of course, would not hurt them, but if it can be kept at from 34 degrees to 40 degrees it will hold them nicely. Roses in pots or boxes will keep well in such a place. Of course they and all other plants prefer a light location, which we suppose this is. Fuchsias, wistarias, azaleas, acacias, ericas and many other plants might be wintered in such quarters. Of course, azaleas, etc., would need watering, while the hydrangeas need to be kept on the dry side.

Shelves in such a basement would do admirably for storing gladioli, galtonia and other bulbs. It would be excellent for storing bulbs in pans or pots of Dutch stock, Easter lilies, etc., until well started, or to retard them at flowering times. The uses that such a place can be put to are manifold.

Some good pot roses are Ulrich Brunner, Magna Charta, Frau Karl Druschki, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Gen. Jacqueminot and Mrs. John Laing. In ramblers, Crimson Rambler, Dorothy Perkins, Farquhar, Hiawatha, Wedding Bells and Philadelphia Rambler. The Baby Rambler, Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, also makes a good pot plant.

If the basement is warmer than necessary for stock named it might do well as a mushroom house. A dark, rather damp atmosphere and a temperature from 50 degrees to 60 degrees suits the latter.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The motor vehicle has now invaded the ranks of the horticultural trade and the heavy road wagon is now a common sight on the highroads leading in to the Covent Garden market, from the great market gardening centers around London. The most general type seems to be the motor and wagon combined and one or more large cars linked on behind as trailers.

Now that the cut bloom from the Dutch bulb forcing trade is coming in it will be interesting to note the prices realized. During buying and boxing time it was freely predicted by the growers that the prices would reach very low figures. Last season exceptionally good prices were realized, for cut tulips especially. In consequence the Dutch exporting firms on their English travels last spring, in the majority of cases booked largely increased orders. This increased business was pretty generally attributed to the frost cutting off the early bloom in France that generally floods the English markets early in the new year.

There is one very decided opinion about the English forcing of Dutch bulbs: If the prices go up much beyond what many of the later orders were booked at last season, it will mean a decreased rather than an increased trade to the Holland grower, as the prices have already reached a level above which they cannot go if a profit is to be left to the forcer. Of course if the Dutch grower found he could not book sufficient orders on account of too high prices, down would come his quotations. There are now so many smaller growers who export and travel in England that once they reach England and have spent a considerable amount on the journey they must take some orders home even if at lower figures; consequently there is not much fear of prices getting far beyond the forcers' figure. In fact, the signs are apparent that with an ever increasing production in Holland and the growth of stocks in other parts of the world, and various other causes, prices probably will in the not far distant future decline very considerably.

STORAGE OF BAY TREES.

Will you kindly ask some of your numerous writers to tell us how to take care of bay trees? I have four large ones in the north end of my store. They have plenty of air; windows always down at the top. The plants are losing their leaves.

M. E. E.

We used to be puzzled what to do with bay trees over winter, not that we did not know what they wanted, but did not have the place, so four years ago we built a wooden shed with large windows on the sides and roof, and a hot-water pipe running around the sides. In mild weather we have no need of turning on the heat and in severe weather we only try to keep the temperature a degree or two above freezing; that is an ideal place. Without that convenience you can keep them in the coolest part of the potting shed, and years ago we had no better place than the coolest end of the greenhouse. Wherever they are, especially if in the greenhouse shed, where they would be under the influence of dry heat, you must never let them get very dry at the roots. Hundreds of sweet bays are lost every winter and blamed to cold when dryness is the real cause.

A little experience may be of value. We went to the house of a wealthy patron to look at a number of sweet bays in tubs which were stored in the basement. Some three or four of them stood close to an area window which had been left open during zero weather; still, as the whole basement "except where the champagne rested" was steam heated, we could not believe the temperature could get low enough to hurt the trees. Then we found the soil in the tubs as dry as dust, and that explained the trouble, but the trees were ruined.

The writer spent his youth in the land where the sweet bay grows unprotected to a large bush, almost a tree, and has seen them pass through winters that went as low as 20 degrees of frost, but there the roots were moist, the leaves and wood full of sap, and they could stand it. It is quite different where the roots are cramped and starved in a tub. Anywhere that does not go below 5 degrees of frost, if the roots are kept wet, will do for sweet bays.

GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

What is the latest date geraniums can be rooted so that they will flower in 4-inch pots by May 30? C. A. H.

I would like to say March 1, for there would be little difference between that date and February 1. It all depends how you hurry them along. We have rooted thousands of zonal geraniums on February 1; that is, we put the unrooted cuttings into 2-inch pots on that date. They were rooted in four or five weeks; then for want of room on the benches, or want of time, they were left in the little pots till May 1. They became stunted and most of the roots perished; then it was impossible to make good plants by May 30. It would be wiser for me to say that the middle of February is as late as you should propagate, and just as soon as they are well rooted shift into 4-inch pots and you should have a nice plant in bloom by the end of May. In shifting from 2-inch to 4-inch, use a strong, heavy loam, pot firmly, and instead of animal manure to enrich your soil use a 5-inch pot of bone flour with every bushel of soil.

W. S.

FORCING SPIRAEA.

Will you please give cultural directions for forcing Spiraea floribunda and S. Gladstone, in order to have them in bloom for Easter and Decoration day?

W. J. O.

Start the roots at the end of January, and give them, at the start, a temperature of 50 degrees. They can be retarded or forced by raising or lowering the temperature, as circumstances may require. Don't subject them to the fumes of tobacco. The last two weeks before you expect to sell them stand each plant in a saucer, in which keep an inch of weak liquid manure. It will greatly improve the plant and flower.

W. S.

DAPHNE ODORA.

Under separate cover you will find a spray from a plant which I wish to know the name of, also when and the best way of propagating.

C. A. D.

The specimen shoot is from Daphne odora, also sometimes called D. odorata. This is a cool greenhouse variety, not nearly so much seen as its merits would seem to warrant. Propagation may be effected either by grafting or cuttings. The first method will sooner produce salable stock, as the plant is naturally of slow growth. Plants of one of the hardier daphnes, like D. Laureola, are generally used as stocks. If cuttings are used they should be rubbed off with a heel, or at least be from well ripened shoots. If inserted in pots or flats of sandy peat or loam and kept in a cold house over winter they will callous and send out roots in spring, when they may be potted off singly. The cuttings root slowly and should be kept in a cold house. They will not stand anything like the average propagating house temperature.

MUM MRS. THIRKELL.

Will you please tell me if it is the nature of chrysanthemum Mrs. E. Thirkell to have a weak stem? Mine were very weak the past season. What can be done to correct it? I did not find this variety on exhibition at the Kansas City show.

P. S.

The stem of Thirkell is rather weak in some sections unless it is grown particularly well. Exhibitors who grow it largely, owing to its enormous size, plant a foot apart early in May and take a crown bud as soon as one appears after August 12. The stem at best is hardly strong enough for the enormous flower and the foliage in many sections last year was diseased. Select your stock very carefully and don't grow too many of it unless you need it for exhibiting.

C. H. T.

A FINE CLIMBER.

Will Mr. Scott kindly tell me the name of the enclosed? It is a beautiful plant here in Alabama, covered with clusters of small red berries.

M. T. G.

The leaf and little cluster of orange and red berries sent is Celastrus scandens. There are many species, widely scattered, but scandens is our native, strong-growing climber and is found from Dakota to New Mexico, and in the eastern states is very commonly known as the bittersweet. It is one of our very best hardy climbers and for covering the sides and roof of rustic arbors or summer-houses it has no equal. I don't think we of the cold and snowy north-east see as much of the pretty blossoms and handsome fruit as you do in the sunny and milder south.

W. S.

BALTIMORE, MD.—The marriage of Alverda Mary Easter to Robert Halliday January 24 has been announced. Mr. and Mrs. Halliday will be at home after February 20 at 1624 Bolton street.

NEW GALILEE, PA.—William F. Lauch has removed all his greenhouses from Carriek, Pa., and is now rebuilding his plant here. The business is conducted under the style of W. F. Lauch Florist Co.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE Armour private car lines are carrying, each day during the season, forty to fifty cars of Florida head lettuce to the New York market.

A. DIETSCH, the Chicago manufacturer of greenhouse material, says that it is noteworthy the extent to which market gardeners are replacing hotbeds with greenhouses. He says that half a dozen years ago material for vegetable growers was but an inconsiderable part of the business, while now it has grown to be a quarter or a third of the total.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, January 24.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 30c to 60c case; head lettuce, $2 to $6.50 bbl.; tomatoes, $1 to $1.75 case.

BOSTON, January 23.—Cucumbers, $2.50 to $11 box; lettuce, 50c to 75c doz.; tomatoes, 40c lb.; parsley, $1.50 to $1.75 box; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2 per four-pound package; mint, 50c doz.

NEW YORK, January 22.—Boston cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.75 doz.; head lettuce, 25c to 75c doz.; radishes, $2 to $3.25 100 bunches; mushrooms, 10c to 60c lb.; tomatoes, 15c to 40c lb.; rhubarb, 50c to 75c doz. bunches; mint, 75c to $1 doz.

RHUBARB.

Rhubarb is something that is almost impossible to raise here in Arkansas. The first year it does well; the next year it dies. Gardeners say it burrs out. Now, in Kansas and Oklahoma, it grows fine, and it does not get any hotter here than it does there, and we do not have any hot winds like they have in Oklahoma. Is there any special cultivation that it requires? Does it need to be well fertilized? What kind of soil does it do best on? I can give it sandy loam or heavy, damp black soil. I want to know all about it, because I like to tackle something that all the rest fail with.

J. H. K.

I am not sufficiently acquainted with your climate to be able to say exactly what the trouble may be with the growing of rhubarb, but I see no reason why it cannot be grown satisfactorily, as it is generally looked upon as one of the easiest of subjects to cultivate. If drying out is the trouble I would, by all means, grow it in the heaviest soil you have, and a good mulch of stable litter or some such material would be of great assistance in retaining the moisture during the dry, warm spells. If, on the other hand, the trouble is not caused by dryness but by a rotting of the roots, which often takes in over-damp situations, the better plan would be to plant in the lighter soil, depending on the mulch and watering to supply sufficient moisture.

The roots being of a very soft nature and easily affected, it might be possible that some chemical ingredient in the soil may be the cause of the trouble; this could be ascertained by an examination of the roots. It is my opinion that it is a root trouble in some shape or form, more than mere drying out, that is responsible for the failure of the plants, seeing that they do well the first year. Rhubarb is a heavy feeding plant and in a light, sandy soil is hard to overdo in the matter of liquid refreshments as long as the roots are in good working order. The soil should be forked up around the plants in the spring and a good dressing of barnyard manure well worked into the soil. This I consider the best fertilizer for the purpose, and if wash from the stables can be obtained it makes the best form of liquid manure; or a good substitute may be made by soaking either cow or sheep manure in water and applying in liquid form. Chemical fertilizers, so called, I do not consider nearly as efficient as this.

Rhubarb roots require protection in winter in all situations where the temperature runs below 10 degrees above zero. Stable litter is the best material to use and the amount of this should be regulated by the severity of the climate. The best plan is to let the ground freeze to the depth of an inch or two before applying the protecting material, then put on enough to prevent the frost from penetrating much deeper. This will prevent the soil from thawing and freezing alternately, according to the fluctuations of the weather, and keep your plants entirely dormant until the proper season for starting arrives.

The plants require to be divided about every third or fourth year, as the crowns, where it does well, increase rapidly in size and soon find it hard to procure sufficient nourishment, when the plants are large, in the limited area their roots can reach. Another important point is to prevent the plants from flowering, the spikes should be cut out as soon as they appear, as allowing them to mature puts a heavy drain on the plants.

W. S. CROYDON.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices continue to hold up well and the market cleans out finely. On Saturday, January 20, hardly a flower of any sort was carried over, either in the markets or commission houses. There is a fairly good supply of all sorts of flowers, but demands for social functions are quite heavy and the prospects for continued good trade are excellent. Weather conditions continue abnormal, being more like April than January and the saving in coal bills must be considerable.

Roses clean out well. Prices remain much the same as in our last. All good stock is quickly taken. Carnations bring $4 per hundred for fancies, some going higher. Quite a number of Enchantress bring $5. The lowest figure on whites has been $2, but good flowers have made $3 and some $4. Violets average 75 cents. A few sell down to 50 cents and 60 cents and extra specials have made $1. Easter lilies are abundant and a little lower, at $8 per hundred. Callas are about the same. Tulips and daffodils are coming in more abundantly and vary from $2 to $4 per hundred. Paper Whites and Romans sell better than a year ago, averaging $2. Sweet peas are abundant and of fine quality. The best make $1. Cypripedium insigne continues in good supply. Some Cœlogyne cristata is seen and a good quantity of Cattleya Trianae. Valley is not any too plentiful.

Green stock sells well and has been in heavier call than usual; no special change in price, however.

Club Meeting.

The following is the full list of awards at the last club meeting. Reports of merit to red carnation seedling Beacon, from Peter Fisher; Pink Patten and Mikado, from Patten & Co., and Helen Goddard, from S. J. Goddard. The latter was recommended as a valuable commercial sort. Backer & Co. received honorable mention for a fine pink sport from Enchantress. Thomas F. Matthews received a vote of thanks for a good white seedling, Apollo x Prosperity, which the committee would like to see again; H. A. Stevens Co. honorable mention for vase of seedlings; James Wheeler honorable mention for a new single violet. Henry Wild, Greenwich, Conn., sent a grand dish of Rockford's forcing tomatoes.

President Wheeler appointed the following standing committee on exhibits: Alexander Montgomery, Peter Fisher, Robert Cameron, William Downs, A. H. Fewkes, Julius Heurlin, Emil Johansson, J. A. Pettigrew, W. A. Riggs and William Sim. Mr. Montgomery is chairman on the committee on rose exhibits, Mr. Fisher on carnations and Mr. Cameron on all other flowers.

It was finally voted to accept ladies as club members. The opposition to one proposed on January 16 led to an animated discussion. The constitution of the club states that all interested in horticulture are eligible for membership, nothing being said as to sex. It is unlikely, however, that further applications from ladies will be presented, owing to the opposition manifested. Forty-two supported the final resolution to admit them, thirty-five opposing it.

Peter Fisher, speaking of his red seedling, Beacon, stated that it had the fine record of one-half of one per cent burst calyxes. He had a little trouble with his new pink, Evangeline, but believed that careful propagating would eliminate this. He found that flowers kept poorly after being fumigated with tobacco dust and he now sprays with nicotine instead.

A query as to Fiancee elicited the information from Peter Fisher that ninety-six per cent of his flowers burst. Mr. Patten said nine-tenths of his did the same. Mr. Fisher thought the carnation of the future would be grown altogether indoors in especially constructed houses running from north to south in five inches of soil and that blooms would rival American Beauty roses in magnificence. He thought there was a good future for dwarf varieties as pot plants.

It was voted to accept an invitation to a banquet to be given by the North Shore Horticultural Society on February 15 and a delegation from the club will attend.

Various Notes.

A large and interested audience enjoyed the lecture on "The Garden Beautiful," by Loring Underwood, at Horticultural hall on January 20. Summerhouses and their construction, pergolas, garden seats and fences came in for special treatment by the lecturer.

Carnation is the word this week and the convention seems to be uppermost in all minds. The attendance of florists and gardeners from a distance is remarkable, showing how warm a place the divine flower has in their hearts.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report their January trade as much ahead of a year ago. Their southern smilax is remarkably fine and meets with a ready sale.

T. H. Meade, late with Jos. Breck & Sons, is now with the Schlegel & Fottler Co.

John H. Cox, late with the Stump & Walter Co., New York, arrived in Boston on January 19 from England, where he has been recruiting his health for over a year. Mr. Cox will represent the well-known English nursery firm of Richard Smith & Co., Worcester, in this country. He brought over with him plants of the new Adiantum Farleyense alaicorne.

Welch Bros. report trade as unusually good for the season, with little stock to be carried over. Brides and Maids they receive from Morris, of Wellesley Farms, are very fine, as are those of R. T. McGorum.

Carney, the florist at the Siegel Co.'s store, has retired in favor of S. Hynof, the latter going from the Back Bay railroad depot.

The plant and flower committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the Peirce Farm, Topsfield, on January 17, to inspect a house of the new carnation, Marion Peirce. The plants were a mass of bloom, stems long and stiff, flowers about same size as Enchantress, but deeper in color, almost of Joost shade, calyx good and flower very fragrant. D. J. Kerrigan, the manager, speaks glowingly of this variety. The committee was very favorably impressed with it and fine as it appeared grown under somewhat adverse conditions, it will be much better when tried in a light and up-to-date house.

Carbone is showing some good imantophyllums.

J. S. Butterworth, of South Framingham, has a grand show of Cattleya Trianae at present, including several pure white forms; also a fine lot of Cælogyne cristata, Chatsworth variety.

John Newman, Charles Cummings and Malcolm Orr are handling grand single violets at the Music Hall market. Mr. Orr and L. E. Small have extra fine Campbells. W. N. CRAIG.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

With a week of spring-like weather trade has been fully up to expectations. It has given a great impetus to the movement in pot plants. Very fine azaleas sell well at from $2 to $3. There is considerable doing in pots of lilac at $1.50 to $2 each. In all the smaller pot stocks there is good trade.

There are plenty of roses, carnations and violets to supply all demands, though an occasional large order for American Beauty or Bridesmaid is likely to cause hustling. The indications are that violets will soon be a drug on the market, at least if this warm weather continues. A few gardenias are being sold at 75 cents and $1 each. Red and yellow tulips, both cut and in pans, are fairly plentiful. Cut stock retails at 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen. Jonquils are, thus far, very scarce. Freesia in pots and cut goes well. Sweet peas, mignonette and other stocks are in fair supply.

The Decorators.

J. H. Small & Sons have had a large amount of dinner work during the week. At the Willard and Arlington hotels and numerous private residences fine specimens of their handicraft have been seen.

On the night of January 19 A. Gude

& Bro. furnished a fine decoration for a dinner at the home of Gen. Draper. Pink roses were largely used.

Z. D. Blackistone is doing a large amount of dinner and luncheon work. He is also handling a fine lot of Simon Mardner azaleas, grown by Robert Bowdler.

Geo. H. Cooke recently furnished a very fine decoration at Raucher's—the Sherry's of Washington. The occasion was a dinner of the Medical Society and a large company was present. In the square formed by the tables were many palms and ferns, purple beech foliage being used as a border. The cloth was finely decorated with roses and carnations.

The Growers.

Theodore Dietrich is sending in to George Shaffer and others very fine violets, sweet peas and mignonettes. Of the last named, some of the spikes clear of the stalks are eight and nine inches long.

J. R. Freeman, in addition to lilac, azaleas, lilies and other large stocks, is showing a fine line of primroses, the baby being very noticeable.

Minder Bros. have a good line of pot plants and are also making a creditable showing in bulbous stocks.

J. H. Small & Sons are best known as designers and decorators, but they are also growers, having a large glass area. This year their stock of lilies, valley, tulips and pot roses is showing up in excellent condition.

Alex B. Garden is taking time by the forelock in getting up a large stock of Enchantress and other carnation plants. He is also sending in good blooms of the rose Gen. MacArthur.

Various Notes.

About the time the forestry convention was in session at the Willard, up at the capitol Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, was denouncing the policy of Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot, which has been sustained by the President. "Count that day lost whose slow descending sun sees not some picturesque denouncing done"—by a United States senator. And that is well. It drives away ennui and serves as a counter-irritant to what many people are saying about United States senators. Publicity is the watchword of the hour, let its light be thrown into the dim recesses of the forests and we shall learn of the hydra-headed grafters lurking there. SCOTTY.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade during the past week was not any too good. The first part there was little stirring in cut flowers; the latter half, however, there was quite a little spurt in funeral work, and a few weddings and receptions. This made a fair demand for first-class stock, which is not any too plentiful, especially in roses. Select Richmond, Killarney and Carnot are in great demand. Fancy Lawson, Enchantress and Lady Bountiful bring top price, which is now $4 per hundred. Other varieties were sold for much less the past week. This stock was very plentiful and good, and sold as low as $15 per thousand. Bulbous stuff moves slowly. Romans and Paper Whites are over-loading the market. Lily of the valley holds its own; still more is in than the demand calls for. California violets were a glut. They were disposed of at from $1 to $2 per thousand. Doubles are fine at 50 cents, with slow sales. Fine stevia is in the market, with quite a good demand. A great deal of smilax was sold the past week and was of a fine quality. Asparagus Sprengeri is also in big demand. All other greens are in full supply.

Various Notes.

Mr. Schloss, representing Schloss Bros., New York, was in town this week, as was J. B. O'Neil, of Chicago. A. F. Longern, who represents carnation growers, visited the local growers, selling cuttings.

R. A. McPheron, proprietor of the Cottage Greenhouse, Litchfield, Ill., spent Sunday in the city, visiting the local growers.

Wm. Schray, one of the oldest florists in the city, is reported very sick at his home. Mr. Schray is 72 years old but his many friends in the trade hope for a speedy recovery.

Miss Badaracco will move from her present location, 1408 Olive street, to 1414, a few doors west, which will give her a much larger store.

Very few from here went to the carnation meeting at Boston this week.

C. C. Sanders furnished the decoration for the big Van Blarcom colonial reception the past week, at which a great many cut flowers and plants were used.

The Ellison Floral Co. had the Carter wedding last week which, according to reports, was one of the events of the social season among the upper ten.

George Schriver, better known as "Little George," is fast becoming an expert bowler, and will by next season be found in the big league company.

C. Young & Sons Co. has its spring catalogue out. They are making great preparation for a big spring trade. Their shipping trade is the largest in the city.

Nearly all the florist bowlers have entered in the city championship handicap tournament to open this week. The team gets 55 handicap in the doubles. Ellison and Meinhardt get 25, and Kuehn and Beneke get 36; in the singles, Beyer, 18; Beneke, 23; Meinhardt, 18; Ellison, 16; Kuehn, 20, and Lohrenz, 32. Ellison will not roll with the florists as he was assigned to the bankers.

The league bowlers won their match with the Enterprise team on January 18. Capt. Beyer was on hand and covered himself with glory by making an average of 215. His high single game was 257, the largest of any of the bowlers in the league. Ellison, too, was in fine form, rolling 185 average. The scores were as follows:

| Name.      | 1st | 2d  | 3d  | T'l   | Av. |
|------------|-----|-----|-----|-------|-----|
| Ellison    | 215 | 157 | 185 | 557   | 185 |
| Beneke     | 157 | 197 | 150 | 498   | 166 |
| Beyer      | 224 | 257 | 165 | 645   | 215 |
| Kuehn      | 146 | 139 | 164 | 449   | 149 |
| Meinhardt  | 161 | 181 | 138 | 480   | 160 |
| Total      | 894 | 931 | 802 | 2,629 | 875 |
| Enterprise | 824 | 860 | 842 | 2,526 | 842 |

J. J. B.

SALISBURG, MASS.

The Salisbury Co., belonging to the Hon. Wm. H. Jackson, with Frank Wrede, manager, had quite a busy time at Christmas, and a number of funerals since.

Misses L. and A. Hitch, eight miles out, report the best year since they have been in business. They opened a store in Salisbury last spring for the sale of plants and cut flowers. They will open again in March for the spring months.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

NILES, O.—John Dunston has added a house 20x100 to his plant.

EVERETT, MASS.—George Marshall has given up the florists' business.

LIMA, O.—The Swan Floral Co. has ordered material for two greenhouses to be put up early in the spring.

ORANGE, N. J.—The annual installation feast of the New Jersey Floricultural Society will take place February 2.

AURORA, ILL.—A new concern, to be known as the Aurora Floral Co., is to open a retail flower store on Downer place.

CLINTON, MO.—A. Woerner grows carnations, lettuce and bedding plants all in the same house and with good success, but he says he is badly crowded and needs three more houses.

EDINBURG, IND.—Thomas Woodard's business has been very satisfactory considering that it is his first season. More glass will soon be added. Mrs. Woodard is active in the business.

SALEM, VA.—J. Shartzler finds business very good, all stock selling as fast as ready. The holiday trade was very good, carnations being especially in demand and the crop fortunately large.

MALDEN, MASS.—E. D. Kaulback & Son have bought the Hecklet greenhouses at Wellington, taken them down and rebuilt them at their place here, giving them a total of 65,000 feet of well constructed glass.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—It seems to be the fashion these days to withdraw new carnations from the market after having booked a few orders. F. Dorner & Sons Co. has withdrawn Tippecanoe, striped, at least for this year.

ALBANY, N. Y.—H. L. Menand filed a petition in bankruptcy January 15. He filed a schedule of liabilities to the amount of $2,146.35 and declares that he has no assets. He is the son of Louis Menand, the cemetery florist.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—J. W. Smith is having excellent success with his carnations. Enchantress is not done better anywhere. White Cloud is especially fine with him, the stem being very much stronger than it is grown in other localities.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Mrs. Anna B. Machlin, who for a number of years has had a flower store here, died January 14, aged 55 years. The business will be continued by the estate, managed by C. Uttley, who came from New York and has had charge during Mrs. Machlin's long illness.

MORRIS, ILL.—On the morning of January 16 the greenhouse of T. Nelson was destroyed by fire, originating in the boiler shed. All stock was frozen, with a loss of $1,000 and $200 insurance. Mr. Nelson had not been out of the house since New Year's day, when he underwent a surgical operation.

MARSHALL, MO.—Samuel Wittrup, manager of the Marshall Floral Co., reports especially good trade in cut flowers during the holidays.

DES MOINES, IA.—Chas. Gay says it looks, from the orders he is getting, as though everyone must be short on geranium cuttings. He is sold out for the time being.

DAYTON, O.—H. H. Ritter has a very neat store in the Algonquin hotel, opened in December, just in time to catch a fine share of the holiday trade. His son, F. W. Ritter, is in charge.

SAVANNAH, GA.—A. C. Oelschig & Son are equipping a house with the Louis Wittbold watering device to give it a trial on rubbers, it having given good results in a house of these plants at the Wittbold place in Chicago.

DES MOINES, IA.—W. L. Morris has taken the management of the retail store of the Morris-Blair Floral Co. This company was organized several years ago by Mr. Morris, who sold the business to other parties, with whom he now again identifies himself.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.—Charles L. Stanley has been having a good business lately, including the furnishing of decorations for weddings, etc. Among the latter was the recent Shepard-Love wedding, at which the artistic grouping and tasteful effects were greatly admired.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Several days of exceedingly inclement weather had a depressing effect on the market and Sunday night's storm of sleet so interrupted telegraphic communication that many orders for stock which should have been shipped Monday night were not received until Tuesday. Local trade suffered through the impassability of the streets, and funeral work has been the principal item, but a change on Tuesday has served to put renewed life into the market.

About the only flowers which can be called really good are Beauties. These have lost little in color or substance during the fortnight of unseasonable warmth and dampness. They are in supply equal to all requirements, but no surplus has yet developed and each day's receipts are moved out at quoted rates. Bridesmaids have suffered more than anything else, even with the best growers, and color is very poor. Brides have also felt the effect of the unfavorable weather. Red roses are not in large supply.

Carnation crops are satisfactory in quantity and a few days of bright weather will do much to restore quality for the extra demand which is expected to develop for McKinley day, January 29. During the past week the stock has lacked the crispness which the wholesalers like to see in it and there have been many complaints of shipments going to sleep. What carnations want is good, cold, clear, crisp weather.

Bulbous stock is coming in much greater quantities. The daily receipts of tulips now run into many thousands and all colors are represented. Some have very short stems but others are satisfactory in this respect. Harrisii are much more abundant and callas are plentiful. Paper Whites are slow sale. Some fancy mignonette is offered and Randall has white lilac. Cattleyas are seen in several houses. Valley is plentiful and fine.

Once again the item which suffers most is the violet. Receipts of Hudson river stock are ahead of the demand and many of the retailers prefer home-grown singles, which are also abundant.

The market for green goods has been rather quiet the past week.

Northside Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its first outside meeting at North Clark street and Devon avenue January 18. Nearly 100 were present and much was done to arouse enthusiasm. The most effective speaker was J. F. Klimmer, whose earnestness and enthusiasm were infectious. Among other speakers were George Asmus, James Hartshorne, J. C. Vaughan, N. J. Wietor, W. K. Wood and James Psenicka, foreman for Wietor Bros. There was a bountiful Dutch supper and music was provided by Mr. Hunn and Walter Snyder, the young man with the very old head who debits and credits for Peter Reinberg. It was after 11 o'clock when the festivities closed and everyone felt that the evening had been both pleasantly and profitably spent. James Hartshorne invited the club to hold its next outside meeting a little further from town, Joliet.

Gardeners' Union.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Union has arranged a series of lectures at its hall, 106 E. Randolph street, which began January 24 with an address by Prof. J. C. Blair, of Champaign. The following is the program so far as announced:

February 14.—"Art and Practice of Landscape," by Prof. A. P. Wyman.

February 28.—"Some Reasons for Success and Failure in the Growing of Plants," by Edwin A. Kanst.

March 14.—"Entomology," speaker to be announced.

March 28.—Topic to be announced later, by Jens Jensen.

April 11.—Topic to be announced later, by A. C. Beal.

The lectures are to start promptly at 8:30 p. m.; business meeting at 7:30. The craft is cordially invited. Admission free.

Various Notes.

The large attendance at the funeral of J. A. Budlong, January 17, served to show the hold he had upon the esteem of the craft and more especially of his neighbors. The church could not accommodate nearly all who wished to attend and there were a great many moist eyes among the men of the neighborhood.

H. C. Wullbrandt, at Fifty-third avenue and Adams street, has bought ground in Oak Park and will put up three or four greenhouses in the spring.

It is reported that C. A. Hunt is in the life insurance business.

Frank Oechslin, of the Garfield Park Floral Co., is making arrangements to add six houses to his new plant this spring.

C. W. McKellar reports a very large call for orchids for use at the Field funeral.

The Chicago representation at Boston is not large. P. J. Hauswirth and George Recent visitors to the Poehlmann plant report it to be in better condition than usual. The posts are all set for next spring's big addition.

Coal is cheap. The mild weather is making business slack for fuel dealers. The railroad yards are crowded and demurrage is piling up.

A. C. Spencer, of Peter Reinberg's, reports the rooted cutting business starting rather better than usual. Fred Klingel, the bookkeeper at Reinberg's, has resigned and gone to Arizona for his health.

A. L. Vaughan's little daughter has been ill the past week and Mr. Vaughan has been away from business for several days.

Mrs. A. L. Randall has been quite seriously ill this week.

row Bros., Guthrie, Okla., getting prices on material for two 300-foot houses.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Though business has not been so very brisk the past week, still there is enough doing to keep the market pretty well cleaned up.

From the looks of things at the wholesale houses on Saturday evening one would think that flowers were becoming extinct in Detroit. Carnations, especially, are very scarce.

Bulbous stock is coming to the aid of the retailers this week, especially Romans, Paper Whites, and white tulips, or any of a delicate color which can be used to advantage in funeral work. White and light pink azaleas are also being used as a background in funeral work and last but not least, that old, faithful friend, the cape flower, is worshipped this week, for without its help we would sometimes be in a bad hole.

We are having an unusually warm winter, making it bad for stock in general. Carnation cuttings are also suffering.

Although at present writing all stock is at a premium, there has been an overabundance of Lawson carnations and those of Lawson color all along. This seems to be the case every year. What we need in this vicinity is more whole carnations, especially some grown without disbudding. Flora Hill is a very good variety for this purpose. By sell-

Florists' Club Meeting.

Although a smaller number attended than usual on account of a heavy snow storm, the last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was put down as one of the most interesting to date.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read, President Dilger started the subject for the evening, "Holiday and Christmas Trade," by calling on Robert Flowerday for his views on the subject. Thereafter every one of the boys had his little say, the condensed facts being that, as before stated, business was very good.

It was shown that plants were a great deal more in favor than in former years, but not as much as might have been expected with the prevailing high prices of cut stock. Cyclamen, poinsettias in pots, azaleas, orange trees, ferns and palms went like hot cakes; in fact, all plants sold well, excepting Begonia Lorraine, which most florists seem to have got sick of losing money on. One member suggested that the proper way to sell them is with a written notice that they would only last as long as cut flowers; then we would not have to replace so many.

The cut flower part of the business, as is usual at Christmas, was accompanied with a great deal of dissatisfaction. Flowers having been scarce long before the holidays, there was not much pickled stock in evidence, but flowers in general were poor, and scarce as radium. Red roses and carnations were especially scarce.

The bad habit of many local growers of tying short-stemmed stock and inferior flowers in with good stock and then dispose of them at fancy prices, was also thoroughly discussed, and I'll bet that many of the growers present went home with good resolutions to try and do better, being convinced that it is to their own interests as well as the business in general.

The "Christmas Green" question was also brought up; most retailers seem to have handled but very little this year and that at a very small profit. As soon as it was known that ground pine would be scarce the local papers got ahold of it and seemed to have scared out the few prospective buyers. This is another evil that we ought to try to prevent.

Subtracting from all this small profit the expenses that are necessarily incurred through the hiring of so much extra help, there is little else but that tired feeling left for the poor florist after Christmas, and, as one member put it, "It is with tears in his eyes that he thinks of the next Christmas."

After announcing the subject for discussion for the next meeting, Wednesday, February 7, "Wholesale House Criticisms," the meeting was adjourned.

A very complete collection of dwarf Japanese evergreens is the center of attraction in Breitmeyer's windows.

B. Schroeter has on exhibition a fine lot of azaleas.

Taepke's seems to be carnation headquarters in this city.

The L. Bomb Floral Co. has added a fine gilt letter sign to its already complete equipment.

PAWTUCKET, R. I.

Fifty members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club met January 11 at the Newman for the annual dinner of that organization and celebrated the tenth anniversary of the club. Routine matters were disposed of in a short business session, preceding the dinner.

Table decorations included cut fronds of the Barrows' Whitmanii fern and bouquets of Helen Goddard carnations. The Helen Goddard is a new pink of the Joost type, about the same size as the Lawson, but a little lighter in color. The carnations and the ferns were examined critically by the members, as neither is yet on the market.

After the dinner the chairs were pushed back, cigars lighted and several toasts and addresses keenly enjoyed, with Secretary W. E. Chappell as toastmaster. William Hill, chairman of the committee on arrangements, spoke on the profession of the gardener, C. S. McNair on carnations with reference to the present state of business. Other speakers were: J. B. Channing, John A. Macrae, Alexander Macrae, Thomas F. Keller, ex-President James Hockey, Charles Bellows, of Adamsdale, Mass.; Herbert Leech, Alexander M. Rennie, President J. F. Schellenger, W. S. Pino, Robert Johnston, Michael Sweeney, D. E. Newell, Henry Patry and Willard B. Wilson. Mr. Wilson told of his experiences with the subjects of the Turkish Empire during his recent visit to the Holy Land. Ex-President William Appleton and Edward O'Brien were the last speakers, after which Henry Patry gave an enjoyable reading.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Florists' Club met January 19 at Guernsey's hall, with about fifty members present. The club is growing rapidly. The membership consists of florists and growers from all over this county and growers from Luzerne. They decided to hold a chrysanthemum show in the fall. Nearly all the members who took part in the discussion were convinced that a good show would be a boon for the florists. A. J. Guttman, of New York, was present and helped to make the meeting lively. We would be glad to see him again at our meeting.

The following varieties of carnations were displayed and greatly admired by all the members, and the exhibitors will surely receive many orders: A. J. Guttman, New York, Victory; John Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., John Haines; R. Fischer, Great Neck, N. Y., Abundance; F. Dornier & Son, Lafayette, Ind., White Perfection; A. B. Davis & Son, Purcellville, Va., Red Sport; R. B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y., May Bennett; S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass., Helen Goddard; H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., My Maryland and Jessica. H.

CONCORD, N. H.—F. A. Main & Co. report business about as a year ago; no new ones started here; no room.

FORT SCOTT, KAN.—After a lapse of three years Mrs. Patterson is again conducting the Roselawn Greenhouses, with M. J. Coventry as grower. The houses will be rebuilt in the spring.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Should one, taking a stroll among the flower shops toward the last of the week, have asked about business he would have brought forth very unsatisfactory replies. It was entirely unnecessary to ask; you could see and know without asking.

Society is taking a rest and the conglomeration of weather does not seem to help matters any with the small trade, which has been decidedly off. The street stands are selling stock very cheap and the price cards stuck up on some of the stands give some of the growers a shock as they pass by, and they are wondering what they will get for their stock in May if it is being sold for almost nothing in January. However, the wholesalers are getting very good prices for strictly fancy stock in both roses and carnations and are not complaining much, but the people to be pitied are the growers who are only producing ordinary stock; their averages are sure to be low in such times.

Various Notes.

Tuesday, January 16, we had the highest wind record for a continued storm known to this vicinity and Sunday, January 21, will go on record as the warmest January day. It was a regular May day. Mrs. E. A. Williams, who was east last week, contracted a cold that has confined her to her home since. Jos. Jones has refurnished his shop and the improvements seem to be bringing increased trade.

John Baldinger, for many years with Elliott & Ulam, and afterwards with T. M. Ulam, is now located with Jos. Jones. He is one of the old timers. James Dell, who has been quite ill since before the holidays, is again able to be out, but showing the effects of his illness. Hoo-Hoo.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business the past week has been first class. Everyone seems to have had his share and there is a general good feeling all around. There was nothing special going on, but the demand seemed to be very general. We have been having a few days of weather which has broken all records since the weather bureau was established. January 21 the thermometer reached the highest ever known in this season of the year. It registered 74 degrees. Inside of greenhouses it was as high as 95 degrees. That this will have a bad effect upon stock goes without saying, but a cold wave is looked for. The supply of stock is scarcely equal to the demand. This is especially true of roses, which are snapped up as fast as they come in and at first-class prices. There has been a good run upon Beauties and the price has held up well. Carnations are just about equal to the demand. The price on them is holding up in good shape; in fact, there has been an advance all along the line. Lilies are in good demand and more could be sold to good advantage. All kinds of bulbous stock have been doing fine and the market has been kept cleaned up from day to day. Tulips are now coming much heavier and in all colors. Violets are somewhat scarce and the demand for them is consequently heavy. The price has not changed from last week. Other kinds of stock in season is moved out quickly.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Florists' Society will be the annual rose show and special efforts are being made to make it a success this year. The date is Saturday, February 10, and all entries must be made by two o'clock in the afternoon in order to compete. Schedules can be had by addressing the secretary. This will be an especially good time for growers to show anything new which they may have as the S. A. F. medals will be awarded this year same as last. R. A. Betz, while putting up a decoration, fell from a step-ladder and was severely bruised. Luckily no bones were broken, but he is confined to his bed. During a severe wind the ends of several houses in the plant of Theo. Bock, of Hamilton, O., were blown in. The damage was not very heavy. Visitors during the past week were Mike Singer, of New York; Mr. Honaker, of Lexington, Ky., Mr. Kunzeman, of Louisville, Ky., and B. Eschner, of Philadelphia.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—J. E. Yeats, one of the most prosperous of the smaller florists, is going to open a handsomely furnished retail store in the heart of the city. Mr. Yeats is an especially skillful grower of roses.

OMAHA.

Omaha is to have a flower show next November. The regular monthly meeting of the Omaha and Council Bluffs florists was held January 11, with about fifteen in attendance, including the manager of the auditorium, who is interested in having an exhibition on the same plan as that conducted by the directors of Convention hall at Kansas City. It was decided to hold another meeting on January 15 and at this meeting definite steps were taken toward the consummation of the project.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The weather establishes New York as an ideal winter resort. No need of going to California or Florida. Easter is already asserting itself, and the plantmen evidently are preparing for it heartily. Advance orders are already being booked, for the shortage of the past is not forgotten.

The market seems to be fully supplied with everything but American Beauties. Small & Sons, with their Washington dinners, and a big affair at the Waldorf Saturday evening, took everything in the market, and were buying from the retailers to meet their requirements. The dinners society gave before its departure for Ormond, the auto shows and some notable weddings kept everybody busy.

Lilac is now abundant and sweet peas, tulips and mignonette. No danger of any shortage in these staples from now on. Of white and yellow narcissi, valley, hyacinths and lilies there are always enough and to spare. Carnations are plentiful and prices have dropped fifty per cent since the holidays. McKinley's day next week will doubtless emphasize their growing popularity. Many Maids are off color.

The wholesalers seemed to have nothing left to sell Saturday evening but violets, and even these were growing scarce as the evening shadows fell. Top prices, however, held at 75 cents and many went at 50 cents a hundred during the week, while the left-overs found the streets, and at 25 cents a bunch were on sale at every corner.

Various Notes.

Cleary's ferneries and sundries were well watered last week by an overflow from a fire in the building they occupy on Vesey street.

Emil Schloss, of Schloss Bros., is visiting his western customers, and last week was in St. Louis.

Fenrich is shipping a good many violets and Richmonds out of the city. His list of growers had an addition of a rose expert last week, who is one of the "top-notchers."

Queen Beatrice, Kramer's new rose, has been on exhibition at A. J. Guttman's the past week and has attracted much interest. It is a brilliant pink, a cross between Chatenay and Liberty. At the February meeting of the New York Club a vase of the novelty will be exhibited.

Geo. Saltford is engaged in the non-elevating routine of jury duty. This is his second week of it. It's a poor remedy for a man convalescing from the grip.

Jos. Millang has also been called upon to assume outside obligations. On January 18 he was married to Miss Hattie Shakell, of Bayside, daughter of the English florist, at one time in the retail business in New York and now retired. The happy couple are now at Washington on their wedding trip. The expert horseman, Charles Millang, rode beside the carriage on his Kentucky mare, doing some expert handshaking while cantering to the station. The wedding ceremony took place in the Episcopal Cathedral, which was handsomely decorated. American Beauties were used profusely at the home of the bride. Congratulations are universal, as the bridegroom is very popular in the trade.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club will be held Saturday evening, February 3, and Walter Sheridan has 200 tickets ready for the applicants, and at least half of these should be taken. Out of such a splendid membership as this club shows, it is hard to understand why any member fails to attend its best reunion of the year. I predict over 100 present. Patrick O'Mara will be toastmaster. A fine vaudeville entertainment has been provided. The St. Denis hotel is the place, seven o'clock the hour, and Messrs. Sheridan, Haffner and Weathered the committee. You can't afford to miss it.

At 4 o'clock on Saturday, January 27, the Nassau County Horticultural Society will enjoy its first annual dinner, at the Oriental hotel, Glen Cove, L. I. A great treat is promised by Alex Mackenzie, the secretary. The Orange smoker, on February 2, is to be an elaborate affair if Peter Duff and Joe Manda are not romancing. On February 14 the long list of happy reunions will end at Poughkeepsie, which President Reynolds promises will exceed all its predecessors.

Last Thursday the stork flew over Flatbush and lit at President Scott's door with a very necessary addition to the growing business. Now it's John Scott & Son, and young Scottii will no doubt do the fern credit. The honors are coming thick and fast this year to Mr. Scott.

Mr. Crawbuck, of Hicks & Crawbuck, Brooklyn, is calling on his growers and customers and building up rapidly the firm's florists' supply department. The adjustments by the insurance company since the fire are about completed, and repairs are in progress.

On Wednesday Geo. S. Powell lectured on "The Propagation of Trees and Plants" at the American Institute. On February 14 the Horticultural Society's meeting at the same place will be a carnation night. Prizes will be offered for novelties and general exhibits. The Farmers' Institute will hold a meeting in the afternoon. "Carnations Past and Present" is the title of the evening lecture, and Robert Craig is the orator, so a great treat for those who attend is assured.

Society has begun the exodus to the sunny south. Florida, Bermuda and Jamaica will claim many a millionaire customer of the bon-ton stores, and the dinners and dances will lessen in numbers rapidly. Lent, too, already casts its shadow, and has not altogether lost its potency, and the florists know when it arrives without looking at their almanacs.

S. Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, have just begun the erection of a six-story and basement brick building, their business having completely outgrown the old quarters.

Geo. Cotsonas & Co. are handling a fine grade of wild smilax and a lot of it, large consignments reaching them almost daily. I can well remember less than fifteen years ago, the first box of wild smilax that came to New York and the sensation its graceful decorative effect produced at the annual banquet of the Lincoln Club. Now it is hard to understand how we ever managed without it.

Reed & Keller have just received an addition to their grass growing novelties. This time it is a bear. Among their Easter novelties are the white and gold German slippers tied with Easter ribbons.

McKinley day is emphasized by handsome placards in the wholesalers' windows. Traendly & Schenck distributed 1,000 of Dan Long's best announcements among their business friends.

Monday's fog in the morning delayed the Jersey shipments two hours and the Long Island shipments from 8 a. m. until noon. The "overland," however, from Madison, Summit and the Oranges, was on time, as usual.

Schuneman, of Baldwins, L. I., was in town Saturday. Phil Hauswirth and George Asmus, the advance guard from Chicago, were in New York on Monday and went to the convention by the Fall river route Tuesday night with a part of the eastern delegation.

The Old Guards' ball takes place at Madison Square Garden this week Thursday. The Emerald will next command decorative attention and on February 9 the Arion, which Hanft Bros. have made beautiful for over a quarter of a century.

The outing committee has made great progress. Wetzel's grove, the favorite resort, has been engaged, the steamer

Isabel secured and Monday, July 2, is the day appointed. Very liberal donations for prizes have already been subscribed and $40 set apart for the ladies' bowling.

Some grand specimens of cibotium ferns grace Small's windows on Broadway, forming an effective background for an orchid display and double flowering peach, forsythia and Japanese miniature gardens.

The most interesting arrangement on Broadway Monday evening was in Fleischman's window, where a complete illustration of a perfect Japanese village was exhibited. You can imagine how blase New York took notice when I tell you the street in front was so crowded that pedestrians had to use the road to pass the windows. This only illustrates how easily novelty and curiosity affects the average New Yorker and indicates the only way in which a flower show can ever be run successfully in New York. I wouldn't be at all surprised if this enterprising and original gentleman some day announces a great floral exhibition in Madison Square Garden and if

Friday afternoon the outing committee meets at ex-President Traendly's office. Succeeding the session the members bowl at Thum's alleys. ### PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The improvement in the cut flower market mentioned last week in this column has continued. Business, both in the city and out of town, is excellent, the supply in many cases being a little behind the demand. Beauties are scarce; the medium grades are almost out of the market. Long-stemmed flowers are a little higher in price, the quality excellent. The best of the short-stemmed flowers are good, but some are not presentable. Liberties are also a little off crop. There are only a few Richmonds coming in, but these seem to be popular with the buyers, who say they are fully equal to Liberty. The scarcity of white roses and white carnations of the lower grades is somewhat made up by the increase in La Reine tulips, which are used in design work. The better flowers are much sought for table decorations. Freesia is increasing in quantity; the quality is as good or better than seen here in former seasons. Acacia pubescens has made its appearance, the Leo Niessen Co. having a monopoly of this flower. Single daffodils are very plentiful. Carnations have fallen off a little in supply; the average quality is not quite so high as a month ago, due probably to the unseasonably warm weather. Violets are lower in price.

Holmesburg.

This is the fag end of the season with the palm growers, the heavy demand of the fall and early winter having depleted the stock to some extent. Charles D. Ball's houses indicate that he has had a splendid season so far, with immense quantities of stock coming on for later sales this season and for next fall's business. Mr. Ball's palms are known all over the country for their high standard of excellence. He grows a general assortment. Kentia Belmoreana and Kentia Forsteriana are his leading varieties, but I am glad to say they are not grown to the exclusion of such old-time favorites as Areca Lutescens, Latania Borbonica, Cocos Weddelliana, crotons, pandanus and ferns in small pots for ferneries, and also larger sizes of the Boston type, the latter being used as fillers, so to speak, after the early palm sales have left spaces in the houses. Shifting palms into larger sizes is now the order of the day. A new boiler, Hitchings pattern, has just been installed. Readers of the REVIEW will be glad to know that both Mr. Ball and Mr. Taplin were hard at work and predict a great future for the palm business.

Farmers' Institute.

A very successful meeting of the Farmers' Institute, under the joint auspices of the State Department of Agriculture, the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Florists' Club, was held at Horticultural hall on the afternoon and evening of January 16. Edwin Lonsdale presided over a very select gathering of chosen spirits. The principal feature from a florist's standpoint was a very interesting talk on hybridization by Antoine Wintzer, of West Grove, Pa. Mr. Wintzer spoke with especial enthusiasm of the work done by Dr. Van Fleet, who in a quieter way, seems to be fully the peer of the famous Luther Burbank. The Hon. Thomas L. Phillips gave some interesting facts about commercial fertilizers. In the evening Dr. J. V. C. Roberts gave his illustrated lecture on plants for the sick-room, proving that growing plants and flowers are beneficial in the sick-room from a medical and scientific standpoint, to say nothing of their cheering influence on the patient. A. L. Martin, Secretary of Agriculture at Harrisburg, was among those present.

What's in a Name?

Every florist will admit that a rose by any other name would not smell so sweet, and also that the naming of a new plant or flower is a very important point in its future career. In this connection it may be of interest to speak of the naming of one of the newer types of Boston fern. This plant was first shown before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and there attracted the attention of John S. Hay, of the H. A. Dreer Co., who asked the exhibitor the name. The exhibitor replied that he intended to call it the Improved Nephrolepis Piersoni. Mr. Hay thought this would be a great mistake and suggested that the exhibitor call it after himself, so the fern was named Nephrolepis Barrowsii, and under this name the new claimant to popular favor is progressing nicely.

Various Notes.

John Degnan, of the Chicago Rose Co., was in this city a fortnight ago, buying supplies for his new concern. N. B.— This note was delayed until Mr. Degnan got safely home with the muffler which he won in New York, not Philadelphia.

W. & Harry F. Evans, of Rowlandville, have begun cutting from their wonderful Acacia pubescens, over which they erected a new greenhouse a year or two ago. This flower is much sought after for its decorative effect. The Leo Niessen Co. is handling the entire stock.

The store, wagons, etc., of the Hugh Graham Co., at 104 South Thirteenth street, were last week transferred to the Wm. Graham Co., who are now carrying on business at both this store and at their own, a few doors further south. Wm. Graham stated on Monday that he expected to carry on both stores until his lease on the old store expires, when the entire business will be carried on at 104 South Thirteenth street. The final disposition of the Hugh Graham Co.'s greenhouses at Logan has not yet been determined.

M. Rice & Co. report the sale of their new adjustable novelty baskets to be phenomenal; they are having a hard time to keep up with the orders.

The event of the week in wholesale circles has been the opening of S. S. Pennock's new building mentioned last week. This occurred on Monday, and what was intended as a quiet business move developed into quite a social feature, a gathering of over 100 doing honor to the occasion. Addresses were made by John Westcott, Robert Kift, Henry F. Michell and John Fowler. Response was made by S. S. Pennock and Edwin Lonsdale sang his "Duke of York." There were music and refreshments.

George Waterfield, of Wyndmoor, will rebuild some of his houses the coming season. Mr. Waterfield, formerly a tea rose grower, has devoted his attention to American Beauties this season.

Clarence J. Watson was married on Wednesday, January 24. His many friends wish him happiness.

H. H. Battles has been using calla lilies and Adiantum Farleyense in combination for table decorations.

W. J. Baker has been handling a very fine grade of freesia.

W. E. McKissick has some fine varieties of carnations not often seen, among them Cardinal and Moonlight, both of high grade.

Jacob Andre, an employee of Charles Fox, died last Friday. He was only 18 years of age.

T. N. Yates & Co., of Mt. Airy, are sending very fine Easter lilies to the Flower Market.

Edw. Reid believes that cooler weather will tone up the carnations wonderfully.

Eugene Bernheimer is making a success of his new side issue, mushrooms.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report many orders already being booked for Easter.

Wm. J. Muth says that business improved as soon as he returned from his trip. He does not say whether this was the result of his coming home or whether he used judgment in choosing the time of his absence. PHIL.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Trade still holds up remarkably well, and instead of falling off as is usually the case at this season, so closely following on the holidays, it shows a good increase over the last week. The amount of business done so far this month has probably never been equaled by any previous January business in this city. The wholesalers have not been able to supply the demand the past week and have had to refuse many orders. All kinds of good stock is bringing the best of prices. Beauties are in great demand and fancy carnations are retailing as high as $1.50 per dozen. The quality of stock being sent in is unusually good. Ed Ellsworth, at Geo. M. Kellogg's, is receiving some of the finest Enchantress carnations ever seen on this market. The Marshall Field funeral in Chicago last Friday caused a small flower famine, the usual amount of stock received from that city failing to materialize. The only trouble here is the lack of stock to fill the orders.

boring town of Independence Sunday and called on the growers. We found Ed Bunyar down in the boiler pit industriously working to increase his coal bill. Mr. Bunyar's greenhouse is a model establishment and shows what can be accomplished on a small place by perseverance and strict attention to business. He has only about 8,000 feet of glass, but the stock, both in quantity and quality, would be a credit to many places twice its size. Only enough cut flowers, with the exception of violets, are grown to supply his home trade, the balance of the place being devoted principally to the growing of 2-inch stuff for the wholesale trade. Mr. Bunyar says that he has never been able to grow enough to supply the demand. He has one small house in violets that are in splendid condition. He will erect two more houses for the coming summer, to be used for violets.

From here we went to Mr. Broman's place, east of town, where we found everything in good shape. Mr. Broman grows cut flowers and disposes of all his stock to a firm in Kansas City.

On the way back we stopped at R. S. Brown & Sons' new range of houses. There is about 40,000 feet of glass in this range, planted principally to roses and carnations, which are in fine shape. Being Sunday, we found no one at home here but Fred Grofsky, the carnation grower, who did the honors for us.

Various Notes.

The Shaeffer Floral Co. has received a fine new automobile which is about the swellest thing in town.

Ed Humfeld's place is looking fine. His carnations are in full crop and he is cutting some fine ones. He reports a very busy week, and has two big decorations on hand for next week.

Visitors last week were Wm. Hagemann, New York, and R. L. Isherwood, Chillicothe, Mo. KAY-SEE.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held January 17 with the weather perfect, the attendance up to the average and the menu as good as the best.

During the day the award committee of the New York Florists' Club spent the afternoon at Scarboro, passing upon the merits of the F. R. Pierson Co.'s new carnations. Messrs Traendly, John Young and William Plumb returned to the city before the banquet but Messrs.

Scott, Totty and Manda did it ample justice. Other visitors from New York were Messrs. Wheeler, Shaw and Pepper. Secretary Newbrand presided in the absence of the society's president. Frank Millard, an attorney, was toastmaster. F. R. Pierson was among the speakers, most of whom were not members of the trade. John White sang Scotch songs so sweetly that John Birnie would have been in ecstacy if he could have heard them.

The society is in a most flourishing condition, and made its usual great exhibition record during the past year, and the greatest harmony prevails. The long and faithful services of the treasurer were recognized by the presentation of a valuable gold locket, Secretary Newbrand doing the honors in commendatory terms. The gathering disbanded at midnight, declaring it was the most delightful reunion in the society's history. J. A. S.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906.

W. C. BECKERT'S market gardeners' list has the names of varieties in both English and German.

D. M. FERRY & Co. did not hesitate to price scarce items at what they are worth in the 1906 retail catalogue.

THE catalogue houses report that business is opening up in good shape, and the outlook for 1906 is bright.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, reports that contract business for 1906 is opening up ahead of all previous records.

It is interesting to note the proportion of half-tone illustrations in the 1906 catalogues. The wood-cut has had its day.

THE greenhouse gardeners are complaining that the dark weather of the past few weeks has put a heavy loss upon them, owing to retarded growth resulting therefrom to their vegetable crops.

A BERMUDA grower is offering Harrisii of the 1906 crop, delivered freight and duty paid, at New York, at the following prices to planters: 5 to 7-inch bulbs, $25 per thousand; 7 to 9, $55 per thousand; 9 to 11, $125 per thousand.

SOME of the sweet corn growers report a hard time getting their stocks into proper shape for shipping. Considerable hand picking is necessary to make the samples merchantable, and to bring the germinating quality up to standard.

WELL posted seed travelers report that the conditions prevailing two weeks ago do not apply to the present. They find that an intervening week makes a very great difference and their ideas of things in general change at each railroad station.

THE Johnson & Stokes 1906 catalogue shows an agriculturalist holding and admiring a June Pink tomato, while in the very near distance is a substantial looking building labeled "Bank," the inference being that the planter of J. & S. seeds will at least have money in the bank if he does not own the institution itself.

THE jobbing houses are more rushed than is usual at this time of the year. Reports are that the continued mild weather is forcing an early demand for seeds in all sections, and shipments that are booked for the end of February are called for immediately. To comply with such requests and keep up with the January bookings at the same time is not easy rolling.

THE present low price for market onions is explained by onion growers as being the result of an open winter. The bulbs stored have been easy to get at, the soft weather has made the quality poor in many cases, and an endeavor to unload for fear of a continued spoiling has forced the market down. They all look for very high prices for the article that will carry until the poorer lots are disposed of.

vesting of the late sorts of beans, such as Wax-podded and Scarlet Runners, was very awkward and the thrashing and preparation of these seeds for export most difficult. The unusually wet weather during the harvesting of the late and delicate wrinkled sorts of peas rendered the handpicking of them most troublesome, and caused a serious delay in the shipment of early orders. The prices of peas and beans in general are low. Borecole or kale and cabbage, though the crop in general being below average, sell at low prices on account of little demand. Carrots are not so much in demand as usual, which might be due to the somewhat high prices, though they offer no equivalent for the comparatively small crop. The same may be said of kohlrabi. Lettuces and endives are not quite so much in demand as usual at comparatively low prices, probably in consequence of the still cheaper but inferior southern-grown seeds. Onions meet with a ready sale at high prices. Leek are getting scarce at higher prices than usual. Parsley, parsnip and radishes meet with an average demand at moderate prices. Turnip and swedes are less in demand. Spinach and cress are in good demand and will soon be sold out.

Flower seeds, principally asters, zinnias, marigold, stocks, larkspurs, pansies, etc., are largely demanded and partly sold out at comparatively low prices. In general the demand for flower seeds appears to increase.

Growing crops of biennials and perennials are well advanced, due to the moist and mild autumn weather. The winter is seasonable.

There is not a great deal to be said at this period of the year regarding the seed-growing industry at Erfurt. All the wholesale firms are up to their eyes in work, trying to satisfy the demands of their customers, who generally begin their orders with the words: "I am rather late in ordering this season," and conclude with "I trust you will be able to despatch my seeds at once."

Most of the main consignments to Canada, the United States, South Africa and Australia were already on the way by January 1 and Great Britain is now occupying the lion's share of the attention of our exporting firms.

Sales on the whole are fairly brisk. Some vegetable seeds are rather hanging fire, such as carrots and cabbages, while onions and leeks, notwithstanding the high prices, are moving off freely. Of other articles, such as spinach and radishes, there will not be much left at the end of the season. The sales of flower seeds might in some cases be better. The high prices of the better classes of asters seem to have acted as a deterrent.

The weather has been unusually open. The moist conditions have been unfavorable for the drying of late articles, such as leeks and French beans, so that buyers have been perforce kept waiting for delivery. It is to be hoped that some frosty weather will soon supervene, or the old saying "that a black Christmas means a white Easter" is only too likely to be realized, and a cold and late spring is just what the Erfurt seed grower does not want.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

HOLLOW STALK OF CELERY.

Referring to the article on celery seeding prematurely on page 505 of the REVIEW for January 11, we are in receipt of the following from Thos. H. White, of the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station, College Park, Md.:

In your last edition, the remarks on the hollow stalk of celery are entirely at variance with the conclusions drawn from experiments conducted here. Seed imported from France invariably grew solid. American-grown seed ranged all the way from ten to forty per cent of pithy stalks (variety Golden Self-Branching), and all grown under exactly the same conditions. Seed saved here from pithy stalk developed into pithy celery; not a single solid stalk.

By virtue of these experiments I am willing to positively assert that by rigid selection this pithy celery can be eliminated. The percentage of green celery in most of the stocks of American grown seed certainly shows a want of close selection. To the growers here these green stalks are nearly as much of a loss as the pithy. Apparently our seed growers are paying more attention to this matter, as some California stock tested here this season was almost up to the French imported.

We take pleasure in presenting the above as throwing additional light on an important subject. The item in the REVIEW to which it refers was in substance a condensed statement of what certain celery growers of long experience thought about the different matters treated. The growing of celery as practiced by them, although it may be termed an art, is not an exact science, and for this reason even they differ as to the causes that produce defects in the crop.

That the tendency of seed grown from a pithy stalk would be toward the development of a pithy celery no one will deny, but that even the closest selection will altogether eliminate the pithy stalk and assure a crop free from that defect under all conditions of soil and weather is still a debatable question in the minds of the celery growers consulted by the REVIEW.

Not wishing to question in any way the great value of the findings of the experiments conducted at the different agricultural stations in matters of this kind, the REVIEW must hold to the substance of its item as voicing the opinions of some very successful and experienced celery growers.

The growers of celery are all aware that there has been, and in many places is yet, a predilection in favor of French-grown seed of the Golden Self-Blanching celery. Experiments similar to those mentioned above have been conducted by private individuals as well as by representatives of the colleges for a considerable time. The findings of these experiments were all in line with those mentioned by the professor, but they do not disprove this: French-grown seed has been frequently known to produce a good crop one year and a portion of the same seed retained for the next year's

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

planting has gone pithy. American seed does no worse or better, except in proportion as it has or has not been carefully selected.

Celery seeding prematurely is in my opinion caused by the plants being at some time or other too dry in the seed-bed. So many people raise their plants, especially for the early crop, in a hot-bed. This is entirely wrong, as it is next to impossible to raise good celery plants there; they should be raised in cold frames right on the level ground. If the outside is banked up and the glass covered with mats or blankets in the night, frost can be kept out. The seed should be put in in the latter part of January, and it does not hurt it if the ground freezes slightly; the bed should at all times be kept moist, not soggy, from the time the seed is put in till the plants are out.

If your ground is at any time apt to be too dry for the production of first-class celery, grow something else. If you want to grow celery get some ground that is suitable or irrigate.

A neighbor of mine has four acres of land; the top eighteen inches to two feet is a wash; it is a gravelly loam that water passes freely through and it is very rich; the subsoil is a hard sticky clay that no water can pass through and there is always water flowing on top of this clay from irrigated lands above. This land looks dry on top but you can always kick your foot down to moist soil if it is cultivated. It needs no irrigation and is ideal garden land, and, I think, ideal celery land. He raises about 2,000 stalks every year and always has a large per cent go to seed. I have raised about 10,000 and never had one go to seed. My land is a well manured but heavy clay, that if dry will crack wide open so you can stick your foot in the cracks. I irrigate once a week and always have the largest and sweetest celery when fall comes. I plant my seed in the open ground in spring in a prepared seedbed and transplant, raising radish, lettuce or beets first on the celery ground. He plants his celery seed in the hotbed and sets it out early in spring. S.

BURPEE'S EARLIEST WHITE

Origin Florists who force Sweet Peas can imagine our delight when, two years ago, our friend Mr. THOS. GOULD, of Ventura County, California, found that in a field of the Re-selected Burpee's Earliest of All, which he was growing for us, one plant—exactly similar in all other respects—produced pure white flowers. Needless to say this plant was carefully guarded and by growing two crops each season we are now able to introduce Burpee's Earliest White as the only white Sweet Pea that will be used for forcing or extreme early crop—just as soon as its unique merits are known and sufficient seed can be obtained.

Burpee's Earliest White has been carefully tested at FORDHOOK and the originator's crops thoroughly inspected in California during the seasons of 1904 and 1905. After returning from our first visit the past season (in July) we wrote that of the new crop then starting (with Mont Blanc alongside) we should like a photograph. On August 22, 1905, Mr. THOS. GOULD sent a photograph from which the above illustration has been reproduced and wrote:

"The crop planted July 12 came in bloom August 20 and is now quite white as a field with no sports whatever showing. The habit is without exception uniformly dwarf and even. The coloring is clear white and the stock is of unusual sturdiness, both in germination and in growing qualities. The plants of Mont Blanc, from seed planted the same day, are as yet showing no signs of bloom. In this line I should remark that in former tests wherein I quoted the Mont Blanc as a white variety next earliest bloomer it related only to one or two plants in the lot tested as competitors. As to the general blooming of the two varieties the Mont Blanc was too far behind for real consideration. ...A description of Burpee's 'Earliest of All' excepting as to color will correctly apply to this new pea."

Burpee's Earliest White comes into full bloom in forty-five days after the seed is planted in the open ground.

The dwarf plants, sixteen to twenty inches high, are clad in rich dark-green foliage and carry a profusion of the pure white flowers borne upon strong stems six to eight inches long. Each stem has two or three of the fully expanded well-formed flowers, of good size and placed close together.

From seed planted on May 18 last BURPEE'S EARLIEST WHITE was in full bloom on July 1, while Mont Blanc, planted the same day, was showing only a few buds. It is also wonderfully profuse blooming.

Burpee's Earliest White is not only as extremely early but also just as hardy as the famous pink and white Burpee's Earliest of All. It has black seed—and is really the only clear white Sweet Pea that has! This insures a better stand, stronger and more thrifty plants.

Burpee's Earliest White will be welcomed by florists for forcing, because there is no other variety so quick-growing or sure-cropping, excepting only The Re-selected Burpee's Earliest of All—the earliest pink and white. Like the latter, the plants under glass begin to bloom freely when only twelve inches high and continue to grow and flower profusely until, when six or eight feet tall they reach the top of the greenhouse; the plants can then be cut back, if desired, and will make an equally vigorous second growth. All florists know, of course that the regular varieties of Tall Sweet Peas are of no value whatever for forcing if early flowers are desired.

2958 Burpee's Earliest White is sold only in our original sealed packets—and only direct to planters—none to other seedsmen. The seed is all hand-picked and every seed should grow. Per pkt. (of 40 seeds) 25 cts., less one-third; 5 pkts. for 75 cts. net. Half size packets: Per pkt. (20 seeds) 15 cts.; 2 pkts. for 25 cts.; 10 pkts. for 75 cts. net.

THE WEATHER IN 1905.

Prof. Cox, in the Chicago office, has weather records of interest to growers. The coldest day in 1905 was 18 degrees below zero, February 13; warmest day, 95 degrees July 18. Days below zero were six in January and nine in February. On fifty-one days the temperature was below freezing. The mean temperature for the year was practically normal. Last killing frost last spring, April 7. First killing frost this fall, October 21. Total rainfall 35.36 inches, about two inches above normal. Heaviest rainfall in one day, 2.78 inches, May 11; wettest month, May, 5.14 inches. Longest period without rain, eleven days, in September. Average velocity of wind 15.4 miles per hour; highest monthly average velocity in January and February, the coldest months, thereby greatly increasing coal consumption. Number of clear days, 101. Of possible hours of sunshine we had 60.7 per cent, about 3.3 per cent above the normal. The later months were marked by an unusual proportion of sunshine.

PRESSURE SYSTEM.

I have a heating plant which has been in successful operation for eight years, but recently the upright steam boiler broke down and I replaced it with a coil boiler. Now it does not work. The coil boiler is two feet lower at the flows and one foot higher at the returns than the old one. The expansion barrel was one foot higher than the flows, but it refused to work with the new heater. I put it ten feet above the highest flow, with the result that all the flows get very hot, but beyond the drop to the returns everything is very cold. When I raised the tank I put a check valve on the return near the boiler; it gets hot, but refuses to open and let in the water. Could I do away with the barrel and use the city water pressure, which is 50 to 60 pounds?

R. H.

You do not state the style of check valve you installed in the return. If it is a swing check it should give no trouble, but if it is a gravity valve you cannot make it work with satisfaction on a water system. I am of the opinion that you can dispense with the barrel altogether. Connect the city pressure direct to the main return near the boiler and use a valve to regulate the pressure to suit the fire and the outside temperature. Open the valve a little in mild weather with moderate firing, but when cold and firing hard open the valve to the full extent.

MILWAUKEE.

Trade has been unusually brisk the past week, principally due to the large amount of funeral work. The weather has been extremely mild, although it was very unfavorable for the growing of stock, being cloudy and dark most of the time. Carnations led; the supply of white and light pinks was short. In roses there was also a heavy call, principally in the cheaper grades for funeral work. Prices seem to be in excess of last season at this time in both roses and carnations. Violets are selling slowly; there appears to be very little outside call for them. There are too many in the market for the local demand and to be consumed at a profitable figure. Stevia has been very plentiful throughout the entire season, but the supply is shortening up now and prices have correspondingly gone higher. Bulbous stock is beginning to make its appearance in quantity and so far has sold well. There is a nice lot of blooming plants in the market, such as azaleas, cyclamen and primroses, but the demand for plants is very light now. Smilax is getting scarce but other green goods are plentiful.

INCOG.

C. C. Pollworth Co. has secured the greenhouses of Charles Johannsen, a mile north of North Milwaukee. The consideration was $10,000.

Holton & Hunkel Co. reports a very satisfactory business. The lull after the holidays was less marked than usual and they are now handling large daily receipts to good advantage.

The Board of Park Commissioners is advertising for a site for a public park north of the city. Sealed proposals will be received until noon, March 7. Cost of the land is not to exceed $1,200 per acre.

FALLS CREEK, PA.

Grove Tyler, who sold out his greenhouse business at DuBois, Pa., some time ago, is back east again from Idaho, on a visit at the Crystal City Greenhouses. Mr. Tyler will remain east a few weeks in order to close up some real estate business at DuBois, when he will again return to Idaho, where he expects to start extensively in the dealing of seeds, implements and nursery stock. Mr. Tyler is well pleased with the western country.

O. Nelson, who has two acres under glass at DuBois, devoted to the growing of lettuce, was a visitor at the Crystal City Greenhouses recently. Mr. Nelson reports a heavy demand for lettuce all along the line. He called to see the new addition to the greenhouses here and was exceptionally well pleased with the houses. The material was supplied by Moninger, Chicago.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade, the past week, has kept up fairly well with all the dealers. Roses of all varieties are scarce and, were it not for the fact that the small towns adjacent to the Twin Cities contribute greatly to our supply, the shortage would be felt very hard by some of the dealers. Prices are maintained nicely. Good Brides, Maids, Gates, Chatenay and Richmond are wholesaling for $8 per hundred, which makes it necessary for the retailer to sell them at $2 per dozen, and by carefully grading them, the best can be sold for $2.50 and $3 per dozen. American Beauties are not grown very extensively. In consequence a great many of them are shipped in, the wholesale price being $4 and $5 per dozen and the retail $8 and $10 per dozen. Carnations keep up well in price. Some very nice ones are being supplied at $3 per 100, which can be sold readily at 75 cents a dozen over the counter. Fancy varieties are retailing for $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Miscellaneous stock is in abundance. Violets are holding their own; one grower has been able to dispose of all of his at $1 per 100 to the retailers. This grower is the only one in at least a dozen who has been successful in growing violets this season to a profit and while the others are somewhat discouraged they have not as yet reached that point where they will discard them.

Minneapolis.

The Rosary reports good business, and while some difficulty has been experienced in getting exactly what is called for they have still been able to fill all orders.

Patthey & Thompson report fair business, but they, the same as all others, could do more.

The Whitted Floral Co. has a steady trade and is well satisfied.

Ralph Latham is carrying a good general stock and is handling some fine single violets, which are shipped in by a nearby grower.

The Powers Mercantile Co., also Donaldson & Co., department stores, are handling considerable stock and are preparing for their seed trade, which is quite heavy in packet seeds, lawn grass and bulbs.

St. Paul.

E. F. Lemke has been busy the past week with funeral work, being favored with a large number of designs; and, like all the rest, has experienced some difficulty in being able to fill some orders for different varieties of roses.

C. F. Vogt reports good business, but finds it hard to get good stock, especially in roses. He received a shipment of Perles, which was a pleasure to see, as yellow roses have almost been a thing of the past in this market.

L. L. May & Co.'s greenhouses look good under the care of Ludwig Anderson. He has some nice Harrisii lilies twelve or fifteen inches high, good stocky plants, and which bear every indication of good crop. He is cutting some fine Richmonds, which sell fine at a good figure.

The cold wave has just reached us and will no doubt cut a big figure in the coal bills.

Visitors the past week: C. W. Scott, Chicago; W. McKenzie, representing Stecher Litho. Co.; A. Rolker, New York.

FELIX.

PACIFIC COAST.

SALEM, ORE.—C. F. Ruef, of the Salem Carnation Gardens, will build two houses 20x100 next summer.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—Walter Gilbert Grant Olive is the newly arrived grandson of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Grant.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Public school grounds here are to be beautified with gardens. The work is in charge of a garden committee who plan to have the gardens both educational and ornamental.

DIFFICULTIES OF IMPORTING.

Much more flowering stock would be imported by the California nurserymen from European nurseries than there is at present if there was any possible way of getting such articles as azaleas and rhododendrons packed so that they would be of some value when opened.

I had the opportunity of seeing a shipment from France unpacked during the past week. One case contained 100 azaleas, all of them entirely worthless for this season's sale, owing to the fact that they were packed too dry and the leaves entirely gone from the plants. Two other cases, each containing rhododendrons, were just the reverse. The plants were packed too closely together and the heavy foliage, owing to the absence of sufficient air around it, had almost entirely dropped, and the flower buds molded off for the same reason. The balls of earth, however, strange to relate, were sufficiently moist and did not appear to be damaged in any way, but the entire shipment, which cost the dealer over $200, he offered to sell for $25 on the spot.

I have on various occasions had the same experience, and I think the shipments arriving in good order will not average more than one in three. It seems to be impossible to get the European growers to realize that the Pacific coast is from four to six weeks distant for freight, and that much cold weather is encountered enroute before the stock finally lands in California. We had the same trouble years ago with our eastern nurserymen in our efforts to get them to line the insides of their crates with heavy paper, but there is now little trouble in this regard.

Owing to our peculiar climate it must be borne in mind that it is necessary for us to have most of our stock in the months that are the coldest in other places. We consider March the latest time that it is advisable to handle many kinds of outdoor plants, and February is usually much better. April is too late owing to the fact that deciduous stock here is well out in leaf at that time and to handle it means that quite a risk will be taken.

But to return to the subject of packing, it is evident that the workmen attending to that branch of the business in Europe have no idea as to the length of time the stock will remain in the boxes, and it should be the special aim of all the growers expecting to cater to Pacific coast trade to personally see that such packages that are intended for this end of the world are correspondingly packed. This fact should be impressed on the French and Belgian growers by their New York representatives when orders are handled through them, as a great deal more goods would be used if there was any chance whatever of their usually being received in good order.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The continued rainy weather, although greatly needed by the country at large, is quite a detriment to business in the floral line. Flowers, especially roses, are very scarce, owing to the absence of sunshine, and the prices are fully as high as they were three weeks ago. Carnations are a little more plentiful but are also bringing extra good prices for the season. Violets are in great abundance and are being used largely in funeral work, which at this time represents the bulk of the business in our line. Outside mums are still in evidence, but are getting very scarce. Wild ferns are improving in quality daily and maidenhair and smilax are getting in short supply.
 A few daffodils and narcissi are coming into town and we may expect them in great quantity in a few days. Valley and Roman hyacinths are in sufficient numbers to fill all demands, which appear to be rather light for this class of stock.

Various Notes.

Domato Bros., of Elmhurst, are receiving large consignments of Japanese ornamental stock.

John Fromenweiler, of Elmhurst, is in with a good crop of Brides and Maids.
 The San Francisco dealers handle his entire crop.

W. W. Saunders is handling wild ferns and other native green stuff.

 the pioneer nurserymen of the coast, re-

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

PRICES on apple trees for delivery in spring in a wholesale way are showing a steadily hardening tendency.

THERE is increasing interest in the growing of chestnuts for commercial purposes. Some of the new Japans are very productive.

THE Western New York Horticultural Society, of which Wm. C. Barry is president, is holding its fifty-first annual meeting today at Rochester.

THE Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., will enlarge its acreage and has authorized an increase in capital stock from $5,000 to $25,000. A down-town office will be opened in the Mercantile block. The concern is only two years old and its business is much larger than was expected by the management.

ON January 14 fire destroyed a large packing house and storage building belonging to Kelley Bros., Dansville, N. Y. The building was full of stock, a part the property of Kelley Bros., but most of it belonging to Morey Bros., whose loss was $5,000. The loss on the building was $1,500. Both parties were insufficiently insured.

THE Wisconsin State Horticultural Society, through the secretary, Frederic Crane, of Madison, has issued a bulletin of advice to farmers on the purchase and planting of nursery stock. It is advised to buy stock held in storage over winter, shipped early, planting quickly; better results are said to be thus obtained than by fall planting.

THE Minnesota State Horticultural Society, in its efforts to encourage the raising of apple seedlings, has decided to offer a premium of $100 each year for five years, beginning in 1912, for the best winter apple keeping until at least March 1 under ordinary storage conditions. Competition is open to contiguous states. The seeds are to be planted the coming spring.

OKLAHOMA NURSERYMEN.

The Oklahoma Association of Nurserymen closed its session at Guthrie January 16 by the election of the following officers: President, J. A. Lopeman, Enid; vice-president, J. W. Teterick, Blackwell; secretary and treasurer, C. E. Garee, Noble; executive committee, C. E. Garee, J. W. Teterick, J. T. Pierce, J. B. Taylor and Mr. Collins.

The meetings were held at the office of W. N. Spurlock and were attended by the representatives of some fifteen territorial nursery firms. The program was of an informal character, all tending to strengthen the members along lines of better nursery and commercial practice. E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind., president of the American Association, who is an indefatigable traveler, one who does not rest well elsewhere than in a berth in a sleeper, was present and added much of interest from the store of his wide experience. He said that the nurserymen of the north and east are just beginning to appreciate the importance of the southwest and there will be a large attendance at the national society's meeting in Texas in June. Wm. Bernadine, of Parsons, Kan., and Mr. Cooper, of Winfield, Kan., were also present.

The next meeting will be held the first Tuesday in July.

RETAIL NURSERYMEN DINE.

The National Association of Retail Nurserymen held its third annual dinner at the Whist Club, Rochester, N. Y., January 23. More than 100 were present and the affair was one of the most pleasant in the history of social gatherings of the craft. Of course most of those present were from the central New York nursery region but a number came considerable distances. J. M. Pitkin, of the C. W. Stuart Co., Newark, was toastmaster. The principal speaker was Stanley Watson, the silver-tongued orator from the Lone Star state, the judge of human nature whose portrayal of the charms of fried chicken and certain native beverages caused the American Association to vote to meet in Texas next June. Other speakers were John Craig, Judge J. D. Lynn and Rev. Murray Bartlett.

SOUTHERN ASSOCIATION.

Paul Abele, Jas. Newshorn, Joseph Steckler, C. W. Eichling and H. A. Despommier, a committee of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, have sent out the following:

TO THE FLORISTS OF THE SOUTH: The New Orleans Horticultural Society, having in view to promote the industry of horticulture in the southern states, have proposed the organization of an inter-state association, which would naturally bring the horticulturists of the south in touch with each other, and would concentrate more of our southern trade within our midst than has been the case heretofore. We have gone east for our wants, when perhaps, had we known of the stocks of our brother florists in the neighboring states, we could have found the goods nearer home.

We think an inter-state association would be the means of supplying information by which our trade that now goes east could be confined among southern florists and nurserymen.

We contemplate annual conventions, at which papers on southern methods of horticulture are to be read and discussed. Trade exhibits should form an interesting part of these conventions and be the means of becoming personally acquainted with our brother florists of the south.

The success of this movement depends upon your co-operation, and we should be pleased to hear from you, giving us your opinion on the subject.

A CANNA DEAL.

The Southern Floral Nursery Co., Fruitdale, Ala., states that it has sold a new canna, Queen of Beauty, to the Frank Cummings Bulb & Plant Co., of Meridian, Miss., for $1,000, which they say is probably the highest price ever paid for a canna. This new canna is one of six seedlings from Chautauqua grown in 1904 and is, they say, without a doubt, the best scarlet canna in existence. Although belonging to the Crozy class, its flowers are nearly equal in size to those of the orchid-flowering type and its texture is so much heavier that the flowers last very much longer. This canna will be placed on the market at once by the Frank Cummings Bulb & Plant Co., together with twelve other new varieties procured from the Southern Floral Nursery Co.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Club Meeting.

At the December meeting the Florists' Club decided to hold a small exhibition of plants and cut flowers at the date of the regular March meeting and a committee composed of O. Krueger, T. Magee and E. Kuhnke, was appointed to work the matter up. At the last meeting, on January 17, it was decided to invite the general public as well as the trade to inspect the same. Some of the members thought that the Toledo florists would not be able to make any kind of a showing, but if everyone will bring some of his best stuff there should certainly be no trouble to make an interesting show.

At the last meeting Krueger Bros. showed a fine bunch of Enchantress. J. Gratopp showed a fine bunch of Lawson, with a variegated, light pink and a red, sport of the same, all produced by himself. The introducers of the new carnation Candace sent a fine bunch that was very much admired. E. A. Kuhnke had a bunch of seedlings, a few of them fair, but most of them no good, as seedlings are apt to be. He also showed a bunch of cyclamen in 6- and 7-inch three-quarter pots that were thought to be all right.

Business is reported as a little slow, but carnations are so scarce that even with the slow sales there are not enough to supply the demand. Everybody is busy.

LONDON, ONT.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Association held its annual meeting January 13, the attendance being very good. Officers for 1906 were elected as follows: President, R. Dengate; vice-presidents, Wm. Trott and A. McInnes. Tom Wistow, the secretary, was retained.

Keen interest was manifested in the way the government grant to the vegetable growers of Ontario had been spent, the whole of it, $800, being monopolized by the Toronto growers and spent in a show last fall, which turned out to be a failure, it was said. The London society considered that it had been unfairly dealt with.

A deputation was also appointed by the society, consisting of Messrs. Gammage, Darch and Johnston, to interview the honorable members for London and East Middlesex, and further explain the wishes and aims of the London Gardeners' Association.

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held January 20, Vice-President F. Heeremans in the chair. President Carlquist fell on the icy sidewalk and broke his arm, and was not able to attend. The society has adopted a scale of points for judging vegetables and fruits at future exhibitions. The ball committee reported progress and has engaged Gartland's Tenth Regiment orchestra from Albany for the event, to be held February 6.

A paper on "Greenhouse Heating and Boilers," by Chas. W. Cary, secretary of the Greenhouse Fitters' Association for New York and vicinity, was read, and was esteemed by all members to be a very valuable one. Mr. Cary strongly recommends putting valves on all flows and returns on each coil, also mains and boilers. Then in case of accident the crippled parts can be shut off and, if in winter, the house prevented from freezing, as is too often the case on plants that are not valved. He also gave a history of hot water heating, which is believed to have been first used in the year 1777 in France. After adjournment the members enjoyed a social hour. G. F.

Floth, Omaha, American Beauty, third. Louis Henderson, Omaha, American Beauty, first; vase roses, second; vase carnations, third; vase violets, first. Dale Floral Co., Beatrice, vase roses, third; vase carnations, first; vase violets, second.

MY MARYLAND

ANNOUNCEMENT

We, THE H. WEBER & SONS CO. of Oakland, Md., respectfully announce that The E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind., have withdrawn from the contract made with us last spring, whereby they would have jointly with us disseminated our new white carnation, My Maryland.

The variety has been on trial at Richmond (3000 plants), Brooklyn (300 plants), Philadelphia (1000 plants) and Toronto (1000 plants). Reports from the first two named places characterize the variety as being practically worthless, while from Toronto and Philadelphia favorable reports indicate that the variety is bearing out our claims for it.

Our own stock at Oakland is in elegant shape. An extremely wet summer necessitated the holding of stock in a semi-dormant condition after being housed, August 15 to September 1, thus making stock too late for the fall shows. Since December 1st we have been cutting grand blooms, and to prove our claims for the variety, we invite all interested to come to Oakland and look it over.

While it is a source of regret to us that the variety has not proved satisfactory in all places tried, we are satisfied that it will prove our claims for it in at least some places besides our own.

We therefore announce that we will disseminate My Maryland as per our advertisements, but before shipping any stock we give to each and every one the right to cancel all or any portion of their orders.

JESSICA,

we believe, will succeed everywhere. It is even better than last year. As a red and white variegated it has no competitors. Stock ready now.

Prices for both varieties—$2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

ABUNDANCE

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known firm: Western Springs, Ill., Nov. 15, 1905.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

Dear Sir:—We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good size and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand.

Very truly yours,
VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE. Per J. S. Wilson.

Price per rooted cuttings, $1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000, 500 at 1000 rate; 50 at 100 rate. Unrooted cuttings same price, with 25 extra with each 100.

NEW ORLEANS.

Thinking of many past winters, we do not remember of one which has given us so many good outdoor flowers as this one. Our Marechal Niel, Marie Henriette, Lamarque, and Climbing Malmaison are still blooming. No doubt they are soon going to rest till the month of March will start them again, but this has created an unusual demand for rose plants, and business is generally good for this time of the year. Spring plants at the market are fairly well advanced.

The erection of new dwellings in New Orleans has been for the past months enormous. Everyone has more or less a plot of ground for flowers, so the prospect for a good spring business is quite encouraging. We know of many florists who are propagating as much as they can, or are sending orders to other quarters for whatever they cannot grow.

Visitor in town, J. A. Bauer, of the Paducah Pottery Co., Paducah, Ky.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was well attended. The organization of the Interstate Association among the horticulturists of the south was the first subject taken up. H. A. Despommier distributed to each member one of the circulars which have been mailed to many of the southern florists, asking them for their coöperation and their opinion on the subject. C. W. Eichling made a few remarks on the coming State Horticultural Society convention, requesting all the members of the society to attend the meetings. The report of the treasurer, which was turned over to the financial committee, showed a nice standing.

After routine business the society proceeded to the monthly exhibit. This part of the meetings is becoming quite an attraction and should be encouraged. The committee on this matter was instructed to prepare a list of what should be entered for competition for each of the next six months, so that every member should have time to prepare. At this meeting the competition was for bulbous plants, three kinds, and for foliage plants, one plant in not to exceed a 6-inch pot. H. Papworth won the first prize, with lilioms, Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths; C. W. Eichling, second, with lilies of the valley and calla lilies. In the foliage plants the first prize went to M. M. deLapouyade for Pteris tremula; second, C. W. Eichling, for Cocos Weddelliana. Four new members were admitted: Rob. Lockerie, John Doddes, John Betz and Jos. Bernard, superintendent of the city parks. M. M. L.

TO RELIEVE CONDENSATION.

I propose putting in steam pipes under a gutter which has a rise from boiler of six inches in 100 feet, but want pipe to run an equal distance from the gutter all the way up. Now then, if I turn off steam at the valve at the top of the riser connecting the 2-inch main from the boiler with the flow pipe the condensation will run to this valve and when steam would be turned on would cause snapping because of the cold water in pipe. Could I remedy this by connecting the flow to the 1 1/4-inch return with 1/4-inch pipe to allow the water to drip into the return? Where would be the proper place for the air valve? Is the proper place for the check valve at the lowest point on the return next to the boiler? W. F. W.

While you can tap the riser near the valve and relieve the condensation it will not be as satisfactory as to grade the riser so as to cause the condensation to follow the grade back to the boiler. If the riser falls two inches to 100 feet it will provide sufficient drainage for the riser. The returns can of course be given a greater grade. If a check valve is to be used place it on the pipe leading from the manifold at the end of the returns leading to the main return to the boiler and use a swing check only. Why not run the riser under the gable instead of under the gutter? L. C. C.

BOILER AND PIPE.

I am building a house 18x60 for carnations, north wall four feet, half glass, and south glass, ten feet to the ridge. How many feet of 2-inch pipe will it take to heat it? Which is best, uphill or downhill system? Sometimes it gets as cold as 15 degrees below zero. What size of boiler ought I to use? How will a self-feeder work with soft coal? W. R. W.

To provide heat for the greenhouse in question a small boiler carrying only seventy-five or eighty square feet of heating surface will do the work. A boiler rated to provide heat for 1,000 square feet of radiation will be ample. I know of no self-feed boiler which will work well with soft coal. There are many boilers of this type designed for hard coal, but soft coal cannot be fired in this manner. If you install eleven 2-inch pipes in the house 18x60 feet they should maintain an adequate temperature for carnations, about 675 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe will be required. L. C. C.

WATER CIRCULATION.

In the issue for December 28, on page 420, under the heading "Limit to Hot Water," the statement is made by L. C. C. that with a circulating pump hot water can be carried 200 to 300 feet, but without some artificial means of hastening the flow it is not advisable to exceed 100 feet in 2-inch pipes. I would like to have the mode of applying and using a circulating pump explained, also the kind of pump used and the motive power required to run it; whether any extra pressure is put on the system generally or does the extra pressure affect only the circulating pipes, or boiler and pipes equally? What amount of pressure is put on, how regulated, etc.? Where are such pumps made or sold? Please give such particulars as a fellow can understand who does not claim to be an expert, though having had some years' experience in a small way with both steam and hot water. I. McA.

In large plants, where water heat is used, the circulation is hastened by installing steam pumps of proper size to handle the water in the system as rapidly as is desired and as rapidly as the heaters can raise it to the desired temperature. These pumps are operated by auxiliary steam boilers maintained at high pressure. In towns where electricity is available, electric motors can be substituted for the steam to operate the pumps. A very neat device of this description has recently been placed upon the market. It consists of a rotary pump of a very simple nature. The rotating and water propelling portion, consisting of a rapidly rotating auger pod, which has sufficient power to move the water in the system with a very slight expenditure of energy. The only form of pump of this type which has come under my notice was operated by electricity but there is no reason why they should not be propelled by steam or water turbines. In any case the pump is placed on the return for the purpose of drawing the water through the system more quickly. L. C. C.

I FIND the REVIEW reliable and get much useful information from it much cheaper than I could get it any other way.—G. A. DUDLEY, Newmarket, N. H.

PLANT FOOD

"Arnott's Horticultural Manure gave Excellent Results with strawberries. They made a grand stool and set many berries of size up to standard of each variety. It had the effect of producing an extra early variety of 'Hero' and a late medium of 'Maximus.' We used 300 lbs. on one acre in two applications with a Planet Junior Seed Drill, three weeks apart, as recommended. We want 500 lbs. more Arnott's Chemical Plant Food, as before, 200 lbs. for greenhouses and 300 lbs. for strawberries."—E. H. Ruestow & Co., Barnards, N. Y., August, 1905. ### BOILER.

I intend to erect greenhouses with a glass surface of 40,000 square feet of glass for lettuce growing and would like to know how much boiler capacity I need with a temperature of 52 degrees in the houses and 10 degrees below zero outside? Would you advise me to put in one large boiler or two smaller boilers? Which is the most economical for this purpose? What boiler is considered the most economical of fuel, tubular or cast-iron sectional? M. L. R.

It would have been much more satisfactory had you given the dimensions of the houses you propose to use for growing lettuce, rather than stating the number of square feet of glass the range is to contain. The size of the heating plant is determined by the amount of radiation necessary and this in turn is determined by the size, shape and exposure of the houses. A rough estimate only can therefore be made of your needs. If you wish to use hot water the boiler plant must carry about 1,400 square feet of heating surface in the boiler or boilers. If steam is employed 1,000 square feet of heating surface in the boilers will probably do the work. The type of boiler is largely a matter of personal preference; get the boiler men's literature and figure it out for yourself. Where the plant is large enough to justify the expenditure two boilers are preferable to one. L. C. C.

MONETT, MO.

After serving an apprenticeship at Springfield, Mo., we started a business of our own at this place last September. This is a lively little town of 8,000 inhabitants, with a good railway service on the 'Frisco System. It has all trains for leading points south, west and east, including all of the fast trains. The place at Billings, Mo., conducted by Geo. Rauch, has been discontinued.

We have 6,000 feet of glass devoted to lettuce as the principal crop just now, as we were too late to provide with necessary arrangements for mushrooms and other hot-house vegetables which will be grown in the near future. We are twin brothers, 24 years old, and the height of our ambition is to have, some time in the future, a business built in most up-to-date style, and conducted in first-class manner. RAUCH BROS.

CERTAIN CARNATION CERTAINTIES

When we build for you, you are certain that certain things go into the house; certain that the best carnation returns will come out of it.

Here is a section of an up-to-date, light and economical IRON FRAME CARNATION HOUSE; a house that's cheaper to build, in houses of reasonable length, than well constructed ridge and furrow houses. There're plenty of arguments for both houses—good stiff, can't-back-down arguments—but a house that meets every condition the most economically, is the only safe argument. When it comes to dollars and cents you can't afford to hold on to a "time honored custom"—money is the only thing to hold on to.

On the other hand there are conditions under which a ridge and furrow house is best—we know these conditions, know them pretty thoroughly and it's our business to sell you the best house for the best purpose.

A half-hundred years of building has taught us some pretty tough lessons—we have passed the theory stage—it's a case of know NOW. Some of the things we know, shown in catalog L-G.

DO YOU KNOW

This Beautiful New Hybrid Tea?

The Queen of all Pink Roses!

Deep coloring and heavy foliage like American Beauty; ever-blooming, not a cropper; easy to grow; good for outside as well as under glass. Any Minneapolis or St. Paul florist will tell you all about it.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 12, 1906.

MR. JOHN MONSON, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir—Regarding the new rose, Miss Kate Moulton, I wish to say that I have been acquainted with it from its birth, and I believe it has come to stay with us, as we certainly wish it to do. I have been handling it in my retail store to the best trade in the city for the last four years and I have found this, that side by side with Bridesmaid and Chateaufort, invariably my customers choose Miss Kate Moulton in preference to the other pink roses, as the color and size of flowers are more superb, and its lasting after cut so much better.

I am so well pleased with this rose that I prefer to handle it rather than any other pink rose now on market, and I consider this rose a grand contribution to all lovers of beautiful flowers, among which I class the Miss Kate Moulton.

Yours truly, O. C. SWANSON.

MR. JOHN MONSON, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir—I am pleased to state that the Moulton roses shipped to me were received in excellent condition. There was a gathering of florists in the building and about forty florists were in and looked at them; Mr. Samuelson admired them, as did Mr. Wienhoeber. These roses added greatly to the beauty of my store and were greatly admired by all who saw them. I would ask what price you will make me to ship fifty Moultons three times per week, if possible. Trusting you will favor me with a prompt and favorable reply and thanking you for care taken in packing and shipping these roses, I remain Yours very respectfully, A. LANGE.

NOTES ON VARIETIES.

This is the season at which the average carnation grower is debating in his own mind as to the varieties which he shall plant in quantity for next season. In an endeavor to throw some light on the problem, which is becoming more difficult each year as meritorious varieties multiply, a number of leading growers were asked to state briefly their opinions as to the characteristics of standard varieties. The comments of J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.; S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I.; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont.; Chas. Knopf, of the B. K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, Ind.; Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass.; August Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Morton Grove, Ill.; Bate Bros., Cleveland, O.; Wietor Bros., Chicago, Ill.; A. H. Budlong, greenhouse manager for J. A. Budlong, Chicago; N. A. Benson, Denver, and C. H. Roney, of the Lake View Rose Gardens, Jamestown, N. Y., are given here:

The Queen.

J. F. Wilcox.—Good producer but with us stem hardly strong enough to support the flower.

S. J. Reuter.—Consider this the best white to date; free and good keeper.

J. H. Dunlop.—Not many grown; inclined to be weak; fairly free.

Chas. Knopf.—For a money-maker it can't be beat; a good mate for Lady Bountiful.

Patten & Co.—Not so successful with us as at many places; evidently wants a heavy soil.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Very productive; fair size bloom; fine in some localities; stands cool temperature; early to bloom and keeps on.

Bate Bros.—A very free bloomer but stems are weak at this time; believe it should be grown very cool, say 46 degrees at night.

C. H. Roney.—We consider it one of the best commercial whites.

Boston Market.

Wietor Bros.—A very good white; not a fancy.

S. J. Reuter.—Too much of a cropper and generally off crop during December and January.

J. A. Budlong.—Best paying commercial white; best shipping qualities.

Patten & Co.—Good, but discarded for varieties with larger flowers.

Bate Bros.—Like it very much; shall grow it next season.

J. H. Dunlop.—Good; medium size flower; growth and blooming qualities O. K.

N. A. Benson.—A good variety for anyone who wants an ordinary, cheap line; we discarded because it split too much.

J. F. Wilcox.—Up to this year considered it the best paying white we had but now it seems to be failing.

C. H. Roney.—Fair, but not as profitable as The Queen.

Queen Louise.

S. J. Reuter.—Splits quite badly during midwinter; otherwise good.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Dropped it; far outclassed.

J. H. Dunlop.—Discarded; other whites superior.

N. A. Benson.—Free but sleepy.

Bate Bros.—Our principal white; can cut from it from the time it is planted until it is time to throw it out.

C. H. Roney.—Very good; we like it very much.

J. F. Wilcox.—For a medium size flower we consider this the most profitable we have.

Gov. Wolcott.

Patten & Co.—A first-class flower but bursts badly with us.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—For nine months of the year this is a good one; early to bloom in fall; good stem; if crop is off before cold weather, so much the better, for it avoids the splitting; when they do come again after February they hold out and bring fine blooms until field-grown plants again take their place; 54 degrees at night.

J. A. Budlong.—Dropped; split too many in winter.

J. F. Wilcox.—Grand flower but not free enough.

S. J. Reuter.—No good with us; too shy.

Bate Bros.—Our last season with it; not profitable.

J. H. Dunlop.—Discarded on account of bursting.

N. A. Benson.—Splits too much; otherwise good.

Lady Bountiful.

Chas. Knopf.—Best white today; shall grow more of it.

J. A. Budlong.—Slow in fall but good in winter; too single to ship well.

Wietor Bros.—A very fine flower and a good bloomer.

N. A. Benson.—Best white for first-class blooms; early and fairly free.

S. J. Reuter.—An elegant bloom and free; hear some complaint of not keeping well.

C. H. Roney.—Very fine for a fancy; we consider it the best one we know.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—One of the best; fails to ship well up to December and inclined to be single early in fall, but recovers quickly, giving fine blooms around November 1.

J. F. Wilcox.—Well formed flower; good shipper, but not as productive as some others.

Patten & Co.—Does well with us; has some poor flowers the early part of the season.

J. H. Dunlop.—Best white for midwinter; chaste in color; fine form; very popular.

The Belle.

Patten & Co.—A fine, large flower, bursts some but will grow it again.

J. H. Dunlop.—Pure white; next to Bountiful; a trifle better than the former in spring and fall; a grand carnation.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—A grand flower, full, good size, good stem, but not one of the best shippers; goes to sleep when sent long distances.

The Lawson Medal Exhibits at the Boston Convention Last Week.

J. F. Wilcox.—A good grower and a grand flower, but we have had a good many split calyxes.

White Lawson.

S. J. Reuter.—Elegant bloom; same good habit as the pink Lawson.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Like its parent, very free; fully as vigorous, if not more so; a good variety to add to the general list of commercial sorts; one that will be universally grown where Lawson does well; 52 to 54 degrees.

Bate Bros.—Like it very much; shall plant it heavily next season.

Wietor Bros.—It is like pink Lawson in all but color; "nuff said."

Patten & Co.—Has done exceedingly well; inclined to have short stems if lifted late in the fall from the open ground.

J. H. Dunlop.—Good; tendency to blotch; free bloomer and excellent stem.

N. A. Benson.—The best white, next to Bountiful.

C. H. Roney.—White Lawson has not done well this season but shall give it another trial.

J. F. Wilcox.—With us might be called Variegated Lawson; good producer and seller.

J. A. Budlong.—There are better whites; too short stemmed.

Fred Burki.

Wietor Bros.—One of the coming whites.

Bate Bros.—Fine large flower but does not seem to be free enough; will try it again.

J. F. Wilcox.—Good flower and stem, but do not consider it a profitable variety for us to grow.

S. J. Reuter.—No good; too shy on flowers.

C. H. Roney.—A very fine flower but too slow with us.

White Cloud.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Very good when well done; when soil and conditions suit, a hard one to let off; plant late; grow 46 to 48 degrees.

S. J. Reuter.—Out of date; The Queen is a big improvement over this once fine sort.

J. A. Budlong.—Too weak in stem; there are better whites.

N. A. Benson.—Discarded.

J. F. Wilcox.—Have discarded it.

Wietor Bros.—One of our old stand-bys.

J. H. Dunlop.—Good flower and prolific but stem inclined to be weak; discarded.

N. A. Benson.—Good flower but stem too weak.

Other Whites.

S. J. Reuter says that Vesper is a strong grower, healthy and free, with large flowers on 3-foot stems; not a glistening white.

C. H. Roney says they like Vesper very much and next in favor to Queen; very profitable. They still grow Norway and consider it a very fine commercial white.

Wietor Bros. say that Lieut. Peary is the best white of 1905 introduction.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says that Mary Wood is a fine shaped flower; much called for when in evidence; not very productive.

J. H. Dunlop says that Glacier has been a stand-by for years, but shall discard it this season for Bountiful, Belle and White Lawson.

Mrs. Lawson.

J. A. Budlong.—Still a good pink, but think it goes a step backward each year.

Patten & Co.—Discarded for Pink Patten.

Bate Bros.—Better than ever this season; was planted from 3-inch pots direct to benches.

J. H. Dunlop.—Best of its color; still in the pink of condition with us.

N. A. Benson.—Slightly disfigured but still in the ring; the best yet.

S. J. Reuter.—With us the best paying sort.

Chas. Knopf.—Shall discard; don't think it will hold its own.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Still a very good one; more universally grown than any other at present, but three or four more years will see its finish; plant early.

J. F. Wilcox.—Without doubt the best all-round pink we grow.

Wietor Bros.—So far unexcelled by any other of its color.

C. H. Roney.—Our standard dark pink but this season it has not done so well; we were troubled a great deal with stem-rot.

Nelson Fisher.

J. A. Budlong.—Better formed flower, longer stemmed and more productive than Lawson.

J. H. Dunlop.—Only a small quantity grown; has been in good form; deeper shade of cerise than Lawson.

N. A. Benson.—Not as good as Lawson.

S. J. Reuter.—Not as free with us as Lawson but a better color.

J. F. Wilcox.—Does not do well with us; shall discard it.

Patten & Co.—Will grow again; stem inclined to be short if lifted late; should be grown indoors.

Wietor Bros.—A very good bloomer and deeper in color than Lawson.

Fiancee.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Grand in fall; finest yet; don't know how it will behave hereafter.

Bate Bros.—Fine, big flower in fall; now splitting badly; shall try it again.

J. H. Dunlop.—The early part of the season the flowers were good; since beginning of December about seventy-five per cent burst the calyx; disappointing; may grow a few next season, but not many.

J. A. Budlong.—Has split seventy-five per cent under our culture; believe it will prove all right with our own propagation and improved culture.

N. A. Benson.—So far the best I ever grew, but starting to split too much and hard to root.

J. F. Wilcox.—With us it splits badly; will try it another season and hope for better success.

Wietor Bros.—Shall try it again next year.

Chas. Knopf.—Will give it another year.

S. J. Reuter.—First flowers split badly; have raised temperature to 56 degrees; much improved; splendid flower in color and form; very strong grower.

Patten & Co.—A failure to date.

Fair Maid.

S. J. Reuter.—Not free enough during midwinter; fine in hot weather.

Patten & Co.—Shall not grow it again.

N. A. Benson.—Too small here.

Mrs. Nelson.

J. A. Budlong.—Don't succeed with us, while some of our neighbors seem to get good results.

Patten & Co.—Not profitable with us; discarded.

J. H. Dunlop.—Discarded.

N. A. Benson.—Too much grass and not large enough; a poor keeper.

J. F. Wilcox.—A fine flower and good grower but a cropper.

Eclipse.

J. H. Dunlop.—Flowers medium in size; extra long stem; very promising; think well of the variety.

J. F. Wilcox.—Long wiry stem; good flower.

Enchantress.

Patten & Co.—Have shared the universally satisfactory experience with this.

J. F. Wilcox.—Seems to be the one sort no one can find fault with.

S. J. Reuter.—This we consider our finest sort; have heard it called a poor keeper but find it keeps as long as any sort if grown cool, 48 to 50 degrees.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Best carnation introduced since Lawson; everybody ought to grow it; potted stock planted in bench not so liable to crop; field-grown plants stand transplanting well; very satisfactory carnation in every way; 52 degrees at night.

J. H. Dunlop.—Magnificent; clean, free growth and bloomer; the best light pink; most sought after.

N. A. Benson.—In my opinion it stands head and shoulders above every other variety I ever grew.

J. A. Budlong.—One of the best and most profitable varieties.

Bate Bros.—We all agree on this.

Wietor Bros.—Beautiful shade, prolific bloomer and a money-maker.

J. A. Budlong.—Good, but a little slow and superseded by Enchantress.

Estelle.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Outclassed; very fine flower if perfect, but in some localities won't do at all; not productive enough for wholesale trade.

J. H. Dunlop.—Bright red; fairly free bloomer; our standard red.

N. A. Benson.—Good when done right, but I can't do it.

J. F. Wilcox.—Fine color but with us too short of stem for a commercial variety.

J. H. Dunlop.—Our best crimson; free, of fine size and good, long stem.

C. H. Roney.—Good but we like Fenn better and shall grow most of that variety.

S. J. Reuter.—Strong grower and perfectly healthy; have cut stems four feet long; free, of good form and color; with us the best crimson.

Harry Fenn.

Chas. Knopf.—The best variety in its class.

J. A. Budlong.—Very fine color; not large enough flower; like Harlowarden better.

Patten & Co.—The best crimson with us.

C. H. Roney.—Our standard variety; we think a great deal of it; a profitable sort.

J. F. Wilcox.—Discarded in favor of Harlowarden.

J. H. Dunlop.—Discarded.

Prosperity.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Without doubt the best variegated; dropped by some on account of shyness; good strong plants from 3½-inch pots should be benched early in August; sixty per cent added to the price of ordinary varieties will about pay for the growing.

S. J. Reuter.—Profitable only for fancy trade.

J. A. Budlong.—Too slow; more money to be had from the space.

Patten & Co.—Not profitable with us.

J. H. Dunlop.—Does well; require some of this variety, as always admired and in demand.

N. A. Benson.—Certainly fine when grown right but too shy a bloomer.

J. F. Wilcox.—A grand flower, but discarded it as it was not profitable.

C. H. Roney.—We shall increase on this another season; we consider this a very profitable sort.

Mrs. Patten.

J. F. Wilcox.—A good flower and good producer; the best variegated we have.

S. J. Reuter.—Best variegated by far; free and healthy; no splits.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—A good standard variety; good grower; fine habit.

J. H. Dunlop.—Good fancy with us; stem not as stiff as desirable; free.

C. H. Roney.—We shall still grow a few, but variegated sorts do not sell well.

J. A. Budlong.—Too slow with us to be profitable.

Bate Bros.—Best variegated we ever grew.

N. A. Benson.—Fair is all I can say of it.

Patten & Co.—Best variegated with us.

Variegated Lawson.

Chas. Knopf.—The best variety in its class.

Patten & Co.—Early; shall grow again.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Free bloomer; not so long in stem as Patten or Prosperity but very prolific; good addition to list; same habit as pink Lawson; 52 to 54 degrees.

C. H. Roney.—Will continue to grow a few of these; we like this better than Mrs. Patten.

J. H. Dunlop.—Very good; similar to parent in all respects of habit and growth except scarcely as liable to burst.

Other Sorts.

Wietor Bros. say that Red Bradt, or Chicago, is the most prolific and best paying red on their place.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says that Liberty must be taken into consideration when buying reds; nothing compares with it for shipping, a most important item to the wholesaler who ships distances.

Patten & Co. say that they like Ethel Ward and will grow it again.

BOTHERED WITH MOLES.

Could some one tell me what to do for moles in carnations? They work the most on Queen Louise and Joost. We have used rat biscuit and rough on rats put on cheese, Paris green on fat meat, apples soaked in strychnine, and set traps and still they are happy. The cats will not bother them for some reason. They take on an average of 140 each night. I hope some one who has had experience with them will tell us what is good for them. G. S.

You have used about all the remedies for moles I know of. I do not know of anything they are especially fond of. Perhaps some one else can suggest a remedy. A. F. J. BAUR.

TO DESTROY WORMS.

I enclose a few samples of carnation buds destroyed by a small white worm which eats the inside out of the buds and stems. Would you kindly tell me what to do to check this pest, as it is becoming very troublesome? H. N. L.

I am not acquainted with the worm you complain of, but I cannot see why you should not get rid of them. As they eat into the buds and stems the proper remedy would naturally be poison. Try Paris green in the various ways of using it and see if that does not destroy them. Mix some with sugar and drop a little here and there on dry places. Also spray them with water and Paris green, using a tablespoon good level full to three gallons of water. There are many other insect poisons which you might resort to if you find it necessary. The specimens you sent were as dry as tinder and were of no value. A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATIONS RUN TO GRASS.

Can you give me some idea as to what would cause my White Cloud carnations to run to grass and no flowers? The flower stalk runs up to about eighteen inches, then breaks at every axil. The breaks continue to grow till they are about twelve inches long, when they also break at the axils, so I have now a dense mass of foliage but no buds. Soil is a light loam, with about one-third rotted cow manure, a little bone meal mixed with it. Temperature 55 degrees night, and 60 degrees day. I am sending sample.

Can black loam be used to grow carnations and roses? If it can, please state how to prepare it. I find it impossible to procure upland soil heavy enough for the above plants. J. B.

I cannot tell you what causes carnation plants to run to grass instead of making buds as they should. Occasionally we find such a plant in the midst of plants that are in fine condition and blooming freely. This proves that it is not the soil or the treatment. It may have been in the cutting. Do not take any cuttings off such plants, by any means, as they will produce just such plants the next season. Perhaps that is how you came to have so many of them this season. These plants usually look robust and strong and as there are plenty of cuttings on them the novice is apt to take all the cuttings he can get from them.

I remember a few years ago seeing a bench of Lizzie McGowan that was that way from one end to the other, and on questioning the grower I found that he had propagated from such plants, believing that he had obtained a strong growing McGowan. It is not caused by the variety running out, because I have seen such plants among new varieties the first or second year we had them on our place. All you can do is to avoid these plants when selecting your cuttings. But why grow White Cloud any more when you can get plenty of white varieties that are so far superior to what White Cloud ever dared to be in its palmy days?

There is no reason why your black loam should not be made to produce good roses and carnations, even though it may be not an ideal soil for either one. Around Chicago the soil is all black, though some of it may be heavier than yours and there are no better roses grown than are grown in that vicinity. If it is inclined to be too light, use cow manure altogether, as it will tend to make the soil heavy, while stable manure will lighten the soil. A. F. J. BAUR.

SOIL LACKS STRENGTH.

Can you give me any idea what I ought to put on the soil in my carnation beds to give it the growing quality it seems to lack? I unfortunately took the soil for my compost last year from near some large oak trees, and I think the trees must have taken the strength out of it. Have given, in the last two months, two light applications of wood ashes, and in the last month, three applications of liquid cow manure. The plants look better, but grow very slowly and lack strength in stem and size in the bloom. I thought perhaps you could suggest some chemical. J. L. D.

If your plants are healthy and the soil is in good condition, except that it lacks in richness, I would advise you to give your carnations a light mulching instead of using liquid manure. Pulverize some old cow manure and mix into it a 4-inch potful of ground bone to each bushel of manure and spread this on the bench a scant half-inch thick. Water well after spreading it on and then water when the plants need it. That is about all you can do until the plants get to growing strong and along toward spring, when you can give them a good mulch of cow manure, or liquid. A. F. J. BAUR.

THE CONVENTION AFTERMATH

A Few Impressions.

For once ideal weather favored the Boston convention; no loss in travel of flowers and all on time. Horticultural hall was in all respects the most fitting place that we have ever had for the exhibition. It is so lofty and spacious that the carbonic acid gas expelled by so many lungs made little difference to the volume of oxygen and the blooms on the second day were in fully as fine condition as the hour they were staged and in some notable cases much improved.

Last week's REVIEW contained a most complete report of the convention, so only a little can be added. It is doubtful if the exhibition contained more flowers than some previous shows, notably Detroit and Chicago, but in quality there is no doubt there were never so many fine flowers brought together. In fact, it was bewildering to determine which was the best pink, or white, or scarlet. The labors of the three regular judges were so large that three additional judges were called in and there was a merry time in awarding the Lawson gold medal. It took all six judges to carefully inspect and weigh all the points. At last four votes were cast in favor of Mr. Ward's Elsa Struss, Frank R. Pierson's Winsor second and the splendid scarlet, Robert Craig, third. There were eight contestants for these much coveted prizes, and each one was worthy of a gold medal and a very few years since would have won it. Alma Ward is a wonderful white for size and form and one or two of the judges would have given it the gold medal.

Aristocrat arrived showing signs of fatigue and Mr. Witterstaetter thought it best not to stage it against flowers that had traveled but a few miles. Aristocrat was packed on Sunday afternoon. No wonder the long, warm journey had made it weary, but it speaks volumes for this fine variety that these very flowers had wonderfully recovered on the second day and looked as bright and fresh as any in the hall. Flowers of Aristocrat grown in the neighborhood by Mr. Nicholson easily took the first in its class.

Robert Craig as exhibited was grand, and Victory is a splendid scarlet. There is yet another scarlet which will not be sent out until next spring. It figured high wherever shown. It is Peter Fisher's Beacon. We saw it growing. It is not scarlet, but a bright orange red, and has all the earmarks of Mr. Fisher's varieties that have made him immortal in the carnation world.

There were a few varieties that have not had the advertising benefit of having been sold at fabulous prices, yet are proving standard, money-making varieties. Of these Helen Goddard showed up in magnificent form, a light pink that I believe is a money-maker; and Lieut. Peary, a splendid white which has proved a much greater carnation than its raiser grow another season. We cannot say much about this yet as we have only a limited quantity of plants.

S. J. Reuter.—Splendid color; seems to be very free and fair grower but somewhat sleepy with us.

Crusader.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—A good early bloomer; plants and flowers better than they were last year; a little off color for a red.

J. F. Wilcox.—A good red but with us not profitable.

J. A. Budlong.—Too slow; color too brickish.

Patten & Co.—No earthly good; consider it the poorest variety we ever tried.

Harlowarden.

N. A. Benson.—The best in its color.

J. F. Wilcox.—Does well with us; best crimson we have.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Grown only in limited way; very long stems, easy to propagate.

Wieter Bros.—The best crimson we ever grew.

Patten & Co.—Discarded for Fenn.

J. H. Dunlop.—Our best crimson; free, of fine size and good, long stem.

C. H. Roney.—Good but we like Fenn better and shall grow most of that variety.

Of these Helen Goodland showed up in magnificent form, a light pink that I believe is a money maker; and Lieut. Peary, a splendid white which has proved a much greater carnation than its rival.

had any idea of. To quote Eugene Dailedouze: "The best large white there is grown," and so you may keep on writing up the numerous splendid new varieties. Never before was such a collection brought together.

As you will see by the premiums given, Lady Bountiful beat everything in white and Mrs. Patten scarcely had a rival in its class, while the great but easily grown Enchantress had a clear field in that shade of pink. There has been an impression with me for some months that this great Enchantress does so well and easily with the great majority of growers that it will become too common and the flower buyers will tire of its shade of color and some flower of the shade of Helen Goddard or Winsor will supplant it in public favor.

The business sessions were well attended, although there are a number who do not realize that it is their duty to attend the business meetings. It is poor encouragement for the essayist to see half the audience rise from the seats and leave the room when the essay is announced as next on the program.

The gem of the meeting was Mr. Valentine's essay on carnations in the Rocky mountains. It was broad and intensely interesting and widened into the peculiar soil, water and climate of that vast region which covers such a considerable portion of our continent. It was, indeed, a treat and would have delighted not only a carnation specialist but any intelligent person wishing to know more of his country.

The lecture by Prof. Hall on "Carnation Breeding" was very technical and would have been more suited to a classroom than a mixed audience. However, it brought Mr. Ward to his feet to tell us of his elaborate method of keeping the pedigree of all his crosses. All this is very proper and perhaps essential if you want to perpetuate or accentuate any particular color or characteristic in the offspring, but is it not true that any one having in his houses the leading varieties of the day and wishing to do a little in the seedling business can begin where Mr. Ward and all the other laborious scientists left off? The law of heredity is well understood nowadays, not only by florists but by scholars in our high schools. There is no doubt Mr. Hall is a very smart young man and delivered his address in a very attractive manner.

The most important part of the business transacted is undoubtedly changes looking to greater caution in giving certificates of merit to varieties. No doubt the able committee in whose hands this is left, F. R. Pierson, C. W. Ward and J. A. Valentine, will give us some regulations that will guard the florists against purchasing new varieties sailing under false pretenses and make a certificate of the society something of real value both to the raiser and prospective buyer.

It was a foregone conclusion that our next meeting was to be in Toronto, and I feel sure there will be no disappointment in any particular. In latitude it is north, but in longitude it is ideal for suiting both east and west and there is no community of florists on the continent more loyal to the profession or more hospitable. We can all look forward to a fine convention in Toronto while we are still looking backward with most pleasant memories of the great show at Boston.

There were many little incidents and side trips occurring, all of which I should like to speak of, but enough for this week, or the editor won't print it. The trip to Mr. Matthew's large houses to see the water circulator in operation and explained by Mr. Castle was a very jolly time. This revolving screw which drives the water through the return pipe not only accelerated the circulation of hot water, but several other things besides, as those in attendance can testify. It was a hot and merry time and it appears that the circulation set in motion had not entirely subsided after a long ride back to town, but appearances are deceiving. Circulation was back to its old normal condition.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Some of the Seedlings.

Dailedouze's Rob Roy, which received special mention, has an immense flower, but lacks stem. Given a stiff stem it would be a wonder.

J. H. Dunlop had one or two nice seedlings. One striped in the way of Mrs. Bradt stood up very nicely; also a nice Lawson sport of Scott shade.

R. C. Pye's Senator Crane is of a delightful color. It has size, odor, calyx and form, but was a little lacking in stem. We think this can be remedied another season. Mr. Pye also showed a good crimson.

H. W. Field's scarlet, which received special mention, is not large, but very bright and has a fine stem. It should prove a good commercial sort.

Backer & Co. seem to have the field almost to themselves in yellows. One received special mention. It has a good stem and is of a nice clear yellow color.

E. L. Enggren, Aqueduct, N. Y., had a promising flesh-colored variety.

A. Roper had several excellent sorts, including a very good white and scarlet. The latter should be heard from later. John Kuhn, Philadelphia, had a Lawson sport of a pleasing light pink shade.

Peter Fisher's Beacon, which secured the S. A. F. bronze medal, showed up well. It is not a scarlet, more of a brick-red color, and is said to be a wonderfully prolific bloomer. Among his other seedlings were Evangeline and Ruby.

John Murchie, Sharon, Pa., showed a very good scarlet which we hope to see again.

Pierson's Helen Gould and White Enchantress had many admirers. The latter should prove popular, though it lacks the stem of Lady Bountiful.

H. A. Jahn's white, which scored 90 points and received the only preliminary certificate, should prove a winner. It has a grand stem, size, calyx and form. We hope to see it growing shortly and will report on it again.

C. W. Ward's Alma Ward was the most admired white in the show. It came very near securing one of the Lawson medals. His Mrs. C. W. Ward and Mrs. Merzhont also had hosts of admirers. These varieties will not be introduced for three years yet.

Quite a number of other seedlings were shown, none of them, however, of special merit.

Convention Echoes.

Enchantress was more largely shown than any other variety, there being forty-nine vases of it in the show. Mrs. Patten made a good second, with forty-four, Lady Bountiful third, with thirty-nine. These three varieties were practically the whole show in their respective classes.

Too bad that Aristocrat and Afterglow arrived off color. They would have been well in the running in the Lawson medal class but for this.

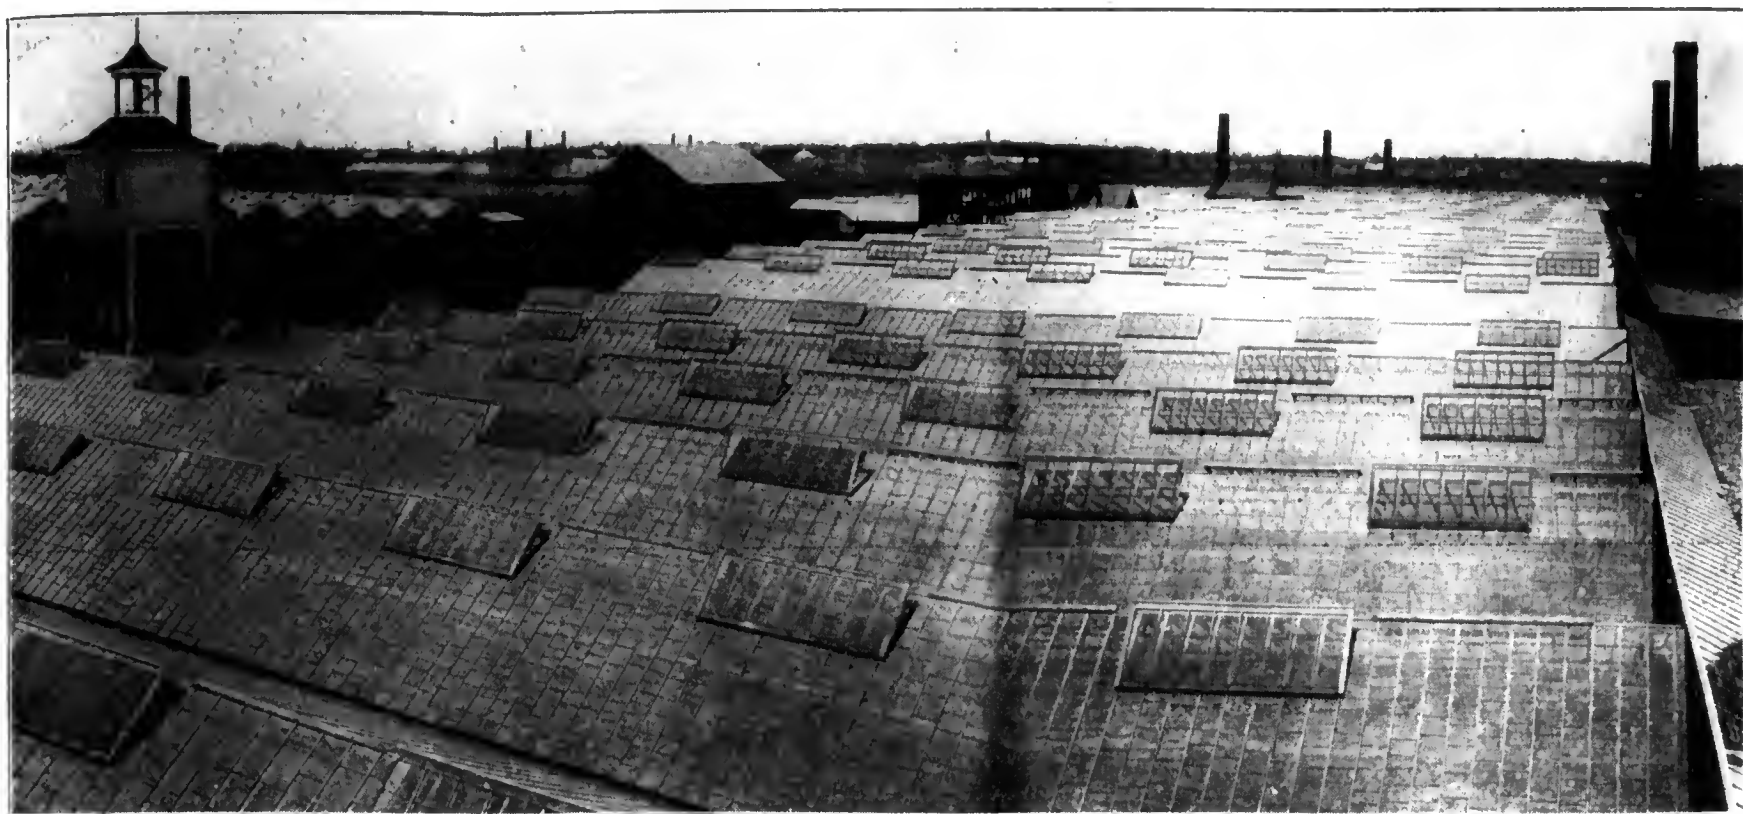

Pierson's Winsor was one of the greatest favorites with the ladies. It stood up finely through the show and will be in big demand next season.

C. W. Ward and Patrick O'Mara had a little passage of arms over Burbank during post prandial exercises at the banquet, which enlivened things a little.

Many of the delegates visited Waban Conservatories, Peter Fisher, Patten & Co., W. Nicholson, S. J. Goddard, William Sim, Peirce Bros. and other prominent growers before going home.

The Principal Range at the Establishment of Wietor Bros. Rogers Park, Chicago.

John Birnie was there, but we did not see his pipes. We also failed to get a sight of Robert McGorum in kilts, but hope to do so at the coming rose show. We haven't had the pleasure of listening to some of John's favorite Scotch melodies.

J. A. Valentine's paper was one of the best we ever listened to and merited the applause it received. It was well read, too, and his hearers could catch every word distinctly.

One of the officials estimated the attendance at the show on the second day at 10,000. Certainly there was a jam the whole day. All were delighted with what they saw.

The banquet room at the Copley Square hotel was far too small for the 240 who attended. It was too bad that many had to leave to take late trains home so soon after the speech-making started.

We believe the only variety shown which was also shown in 1895 was Eldorado, staged by Backer & Co.

Three small vases of Fiancee were shown. L. E. Small's had been held together by rubber bands. How are the mighty fallen!

One vase of Flamingo from Elm Court Farm, Lenox, was well grown. It was the only exhibit of that variety.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society's exhibits in the small hall added greatly to the interest in the show and were even more attractive to many than the large hall on account of the diversity of exhibits.

Helen Goddard showed up splendidly. Had it been a little larger it would have been one of the Lawson medalists.

Several exhibitors were disqualified for using spreading glass vases instead of fibrotta ones. The blooms looked far better in the former than in the latter.

Competition in the private gardeners' classes for the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club prizes and Farquhar cup, was keen. William Kleinheinz, the winner in each class, showed extra fine flowers.

Robert Craig was finely staged by Cottage Gardens and loomed up among the scarlets. Victory also had a host of admirers.

In crimsons Harry Fenn was mostly shown, although Crimson Glow and Octoroon were represented by splendid vases.

Variegated Lawson as staged by Stevens Co. in the small hall took everyone's eye. F. R. Pierson Co. also showed it well.

If as much advance takes place among carnations during the next decade as between 1895 and 1906 a 6-inch bloom would seem to be quite a possibility when next the A. C. S. meets in Boston.

We hope pot plants will be made a feature at succeeding shows. Not a single carnation in a pot was seen at the recent show. What possibilities there are in this direction, especially where there are private estates to grow and show them!

Sweet peas from Wm. Sim and J. T. Gale were grandly grown and greatly admired.

W. N. CRAIG.

Convention Memories.

Messrs. Pettigrew, Farquhar and Nicholson were a potent reception committee at the banquet and made everybody feel at home.

Hugo Schroeter, of Detroit, and his fiancée, Miss Russell, of Newport, were interested visitors. Next year it will be Mr. and Mrs. Schroeter who register at Toronto.

Guy Bate and his everlasting tile bench from Cleveland seemed to appeal constantly to a crowd of growers.

Gurney Hill's nominating oration in behalf of John H. Dunlop was a tribute of which any man might feel proud. It's no wonder he was elected by acclamation.

Washington was so delighted with its S. A. F. convention last year that it is already in the field for the carnation meeting in 1907, and W. F. Gude usually gets what he goes after.

Everybody was loud in praise of Boston hospitality. Many remained over Friday to visit the establishments of Fisher, Patten, Nicholson, Peiree, Montgomery, Elliott and the fine retail places.

Elsa Struss, a beautiful cerise from the Cottage Gardens, won the much coveted Lawson gold medal. It's not an easy name to remember, but flower buyers will have to get used to it, for it has come to stay.

Some of the delegates came long distances. J. A. Valentine would greatly like to coax the convention some day to Denver.

F. H. Kramer, of Washington, and his Queen Beatrice rose were there showing up brilliantly, both of them, under artificial light.

F. R. Pierson's Elegantissima and Winsor are children of which any father may be proud. They were both at their best for company.

Dailedouze Bros. had a mammoth flower, Rob Roy, very near fulfilling President Fisher's prophecy. It seemed abnormal and is about the limit to which it seems possible or advisable to develop size. Enough is as good as a feast and six inches is sufficiency.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Some very interesting exhibits in addition to those in the competitive classes were staged in the small hall. Mrs. A. W. Blake had plants of Laelia superbiens and Cypripedium nitens. Robert Cameron, from Harvard Botanic Gardens, showed a splendid collection of Primula Sinensis and P. Obconica, lachenalias, cyclamens, strobilanthes and Calanthe Veitchii. Julius Roehrs Co. had vases of named lilacs, also Phalænopsis Rimestadtiana and oncidium. J. E. Rothwell, Emil Johansson gardener, showed cut odontoglossums and other orchids. For Laelio-cattleya General French, Cattleya Trianae x Laelia cinnabarina, he received a silver medal.

Alexander Ogg secured a cultural certificate for amaryllis. He had bloomed these in seventeen months from seed. The Lowthorpe School of Horticulture for finely flowered baskets of Mahernia odorata received a similar award. N. F. Comley secured honorable mention for a promising seedling acacia flowering freely in small pots. Mrs. Frederick Ayer had some well bloomed Chorizema ilicifolium.

Oakes Ames, Sabin Bolton gardener, had a unique and interesting lot of botanical orchids which merited the silver medal awarded.

Mrs. E. M. Gill had a nice assortment of cut flowers and H. A. Jahn several very promising carnation seedlings.

had any idea of. To quote Eugene Daillidouze: "The best large white there is grown," and so you may keep on writing up the numerous splendid new varieties. Never before was such a collection brought together.

As you will see by the premiums given, Lady Bountiful beat everything in white and Mrs. Patten scarcely had a rival in its class, while the great but easily grown Enchantress had a clear field in that shade of pink. There has been an impression with me for some months that this great Enchantress does so well and easily with the great majority of growers that it will become too common and the flower buyers will tire of its shade of color and some flower of the shade of Helen Goddard or Winsor will supplant it in public favor.

The business sessions were well attended, although there are a number who do not realize that it is their duty to attend the business meetings. It is poor encouragement for the essayist to see half the audience rise from the seats and leave the room when the essay is announced as next on the program.

The gem of the meeting was Mr. Valentine's essay on carnations in the Rocky mountains. It was broad and intensely interesting and widened into the peculiar soil, water and climate of that vast region which covers such a considerable portion of our continent. It was, indeed, a treat and would have delighted not only a carnation specialist but any intelligent person wishing to know more of his country.

The lecture by Prof. Hall on "Carnation Breeding" was very technical and would have been more suited to a classroom than a mixed audience. However, it brought Mr. Ward to his feet to tell us of his elaborate method of keeping the pedigree of all his crosses. All this is very proper and perhaps essential if you want to perpetuate or accentuate any particular color or characteristic in the offspring, but is it not true that any one having in his houses the leading varieties of the day and wishing to do a little in the seedling business can begin where Mr. Ward and all the other laborious scientists left off? The law of heredity is well understood nowadays, not only by florists but by scholars in our high schools. There is no doubt Mr. Hall is a very smart young man and delivered his address in a very attractive manner.

The most important part of the business transacted is undoubtedly changes looking to greater caution in giving certificates of merit to varieties. No doubt the able committee in whose hands this is left, F. R. Pierson, C. W. Ward and J. A. Valentine, will give us some regulations that will guard the florists against purchasing new varieties sailing under false pretenses and make a certificate of the society something of real value both to the raiser and prospective buyer.

It was a foregone conclusion that our next meeting was to be in Toronto, and I feel sure there will be no disappointment in any particular. In latitude it is north, but in longitude it is ideal for suiting both east and west and there is no community of florists on the continent more loyal to the profession or more hospitable. We can all look forward to a fine convention in Toronto while we are still looking backward with most pleasant memories of the great show at Boston.

There were many little incidents and side trips occurring, all of which I should like to speak of, but enough for this week, or the editor won't print it. The trip to Mr. Matthew's large houses to see the water circulator in operation and explained by Mr. Castle was a very jolly time. This revolving screw which drives the water through the return pipe not only accelerated the circulation of hot water, but several other things besides, as those in attendance can testify. It was a hot and merry time and it appears that the circulation set in motion had not entirely subsided after a long ride back to town, but appearances are deceiving. Circulation was back to its old normal condition.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

Some of the Seedlings.

Daillidouze's Rob Roy, which received special mention, has an immense flower, but lacks stem. Given a stiff stem it would be a wonder.

J. H. Dunlop had one or two nice seedlings. One striped in the way of Mrs. Bradt stood up very nicely; also a nice Lawson sport of Scott shade.

R. C. Pye's Senator Crane is of a delightful color. It has size, odor, calyx and form, but was a little lacking in stem. We think this can be remedied another season. Mr. Pye also showed a good crimson.

H. W. Field's scarlet, which received special mention, is not large, but very bright and has a fine stem. It should prove a good commercial sort.

Backer & Co. seem to have the field almost to themselves in yellows. One received special mention. It has a good stem and is of a nice clear yellow color.

E. L. Enggren, Aqueduct, N. Y., had a promising flesh-colored variety.

A. Roper had several excellent sorts, including a very good white and scarlet. The latter should be heard from later. John Kuhn, Philadelphia, had a Lawson sport of a pleasing light pink shade.

Peter Fisher's Beacon, which secured the S. A. F. bronze medal, showed up well. It is not a scarlet, more of a brick-red color, and is said to be a wonderfully prolific bloomer. Among his other seedlings were Evangeline and Ruby.

John Murchie, Sharon, Pa., showed a very good scarlet which we hope to see again.

Pierson's Helen Gould and White Enchantress had many admirers. The latter should prove popular, though it lacks the stem of Lady Bountiful.

H. A. Jahn's white, which scored 90 points and received the only preliminary certificate, should prove a winner. It has a grand stem, size, calyx and form. We hope to see it growing shortly and will report on it again.

C. W. Ward's Alma Ward was the most admired white in the show. It came very near securing one of the Lawson medals. His Mrs. C. W. Ward and Mrs. Mershout also had hosts of admirers. These varieties will not be introduced for three years yet.

Quite a number of other seedlings were shown, none of them, however, of special merit.

Convention Echoes.

Enchantress was more largely shown than any other variety, there being forty-nine vases of it in the show. Mrs. Patten made a good second, with forty-four, Lady Bountiful third, with thirty-nine. These three varieties were practically the whole show in their respective classes.

Too bad that Aristocrat and Afterglow arrived off color. They would have been well in the running in the Lawson medal class but for this.

Pierson's Winsor was one of the greatest favorites with the ladies. It stood up finely through the show and will be in big demand next season.

C. W. Ward and Patrick O'Mara had a little passage of arms over Burbank during postprandial exercises at the banquet, which enlivened things a little.

Many of the delegates visited Waban Conservatories, Peter Fisher, Patten & Co., W. Nicholson, S. J. Goddard, William Sim, Peirce Bros. and other prominent growers before going home.

The Principal Range at the Establishment of Wietor Bros. Rogers Park, Chicago.

John Birnie was there, but we did not see his pipes. We also failed to get a sight of Robert McGormin in kilts, but hope to do so at the coming rose show. We haven't had the pleasure of listening to some of John's favorite Scotch melodies.

J. A. Valentine's paper was one of the best we ever listened to and merited the applause it received. It was well read, too, and his hearers could catch every word distinctly.

One of the officials estimated the attendance at the show on the second day at 10,000. Certainly there was a jam the whole day. All were delighted with what they saw.

The banquet room at the Copley Square hotel was far too small for the 240 who attended. It was too bad that many had to leave to take late trains home so soon after the speech making started.

We believe the only variety shown which was also shown in 1895 was El dorado, staged by Backer & Co.

Three small vases of Fiancee were shown. L. E. Small's had been held together by rubber bands. How are the mighty fallen!

One vase of Flamingo from Elm Court Farm, Lenox, was well grown. It was the only exhibit of that variety.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society's exhibits in the small hall added greatly to the interest in the show and were even more attractive to many than the large hall on account of the diversity of exhibits.

Helen Goddard showed up splendidly. Had it been a little larger it would have been one of the Lawson medalists.

Several exhibitors were disqualified for using spreading glass vases instead of fibrota ones. The blooms looked far better in the former than in the latter.

Competition in the private gardeners' classes for the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club prizes and Farquhar cup, was keen. William Kleinheinz, the winner in each class, showed extra fine flowers.

Robert Craig was finely staged by Cottage Gardens and loomed up among the scarlets. Victory also had a host of admirers.

In crimsons Harry Fenn was mostly shown, although Crimson Glow and Octo-ron were represented by splendid vases.

Variegated Lawson as staged by Stevens Co. in the small hall took every one's eye. E. R. Pierson Co. also showed it well.

If as much advance takes place among carnations during the next decade as between 1895 and 1906 a 6 inch bloom would seem to be quite a possibility when next the A. C. S. meets in Boston.

We hope pot plants will be made a feature at succeeding shows. Not a single carnation in a pot was seen at the recent show. What possibilities there are in this direction, especially where there are private estates to grow and show them!

Sweet peas from Wm. Sim and J. T. Gale were grandly grown and greatly admired.

W. N. CRAIG.

Convention Memories.

Messrs. Pettigrew, Farquhar and Nicholson were a potent reception committee at the banquet and made everybody feel at home.

Hugo Schroeter, of Detroit, and his fiancée, Miss Russell, of Newport, were interested visitors. Next year it will be Mr. and Mrs. Schroeter who register at Toronto.

Guy Bate and his everlasting tile bench from Cleveland seemed to appeal constantly to a crowd of growers.

Guiney Hill's nominating oration in behalf of John H. Dunlop was a tribute of which any man might feel proud. It's no wonder he was elected by acclamation.

Washington was so delighted with its S. A. F. convention last year that it is already in the field for the carnation meeting in 1907, and W. F. Gude usually gets what he goes after.

Everybody was loud in praise of Boston hospitality. Many remained over Friday to visit the establishments of Fisher, Patten, Nicholson, Peirce, Montgomery, Elliott and the fine retail places.

Elsa Struss, a beautiful cerise from the Cottage Gardens, won the much coveted Lawson gold medal. It's not an easy name to remember, but flower buyers will have to get used to it, for it has come to stay.

Some of the delegates came long distances. J. A. Valentine would greatly like to carry the convention some day to Denver.

E. H. Kramer, of Washington, and his Queen Beatrice rose were there showing up brilliantly, both of them, under artificial light.

E. R. Pierson's Elegantissima and Winsor are children of which any father may be proud. They were both at their best for company.

Darlington Bros. had a mammoth flower, Rob Roy, very near fulfilling President Fisher's prophecy. It seemed abnormal and is about the limit to which it seems possible or advisable to develop size. Enough is as good as a feast and six inches is sufficiency.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Some very interesting exhibits in addition to those in the competitive classes were staged in the small hall. Mrs. A. W. Blake had plants of Laelia superba and Cypripedium acaule. Robert Cameron, from Harvard Botanic Gardens, showed a splendid collection of Primula sinensis and P. Obconica, including eyelanensis, strobilanthus and Carlotta Venturi. Julius Roehrs Co. had cases of named lilies, also Phalenopsis, Rhipsalis, and oncidium. J. E. Rothwell, Emil Johansson, gardener, showed out odontoglossum and other orchids. For Laelia cathartica General French, Cattleya Trianne x Laelia cinnabarina, he received a silver medal.

Alexander Ogg secured a cultural certificate for amaryllis. He had bloomed these in seventeen months from seed. The Lowthorpe School of Horticulture for finely flowered baskets of Mahernia odorata received a similar award. N. F. Conley secured honorable mention for a promising seedling acacia flowering freely in small pots. Mrs. Frederick Ayer had some well bloomed Chorizanthe ilici foliage.

Oakes Ames, Sabin Bolton, gardener, had a unique and interesting lot of botanical orchids which merited the silver medal awarded.

Mrs. E. M. Gill had a nice assortment of cut flowers and H. A. Jahn several very promising carnation seedlings.

The Banquet.

A fitting conclusion to the best convention and the finest exhibition of the divine flower ever seen was the banquet at the Copley Square hotel given by the allied horticultural societies of Boston to the members and guests on Thursday evening. The number of ladies present was especially gratifying, and most of them remained with their husbands or escorts until the close at one o'clock. About 250 were present altogether. Judge Hoitt, of Nashua, N. H., is an able and witty toastmaster and kept his audience in good humor. The ladies were lauded by L. E. Marquisee, of Syracuse, in his usual happy strain, his stories with natural acting accompaniments demonstrating that an Irving or a Talma had missed his calling. President Kasting responded for the S. A. F., and especially urged the claims of the Dayton convention. E. G. Hill gave interesting references to his European trip and to the origin of his rose Richmond. Prof. Elson spoke in verse.

The presentation of the silver cups to Messrs. Kleinheinz, Fisher, Nicholson, Ward and Pierson furnished a delightful interlude and the responses of these gentlemen were vociferously applauded.

President-elect Dunlop emphasized his invitation for a record crowd at Toronto in 1907 and feelingly appreciated the honor of his election. Patrick O'Mara's toast was "The Bachelors," whom he handled carefully for personal reasons, and on the subject he would have selected if he could, "The Fakes in Horticulture," he waxed serious and retributive. Mr. Shaw responded to the toast of "The Press," and Miss Wither, Mr. Carroll, and the sweet tenor of Toronto, Mr. Lawrence, added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening with their songs.

It was a Boston banquet in the style the Boston horticulturists do things, and everybody present voted it "the best ever," as indeed it was. But wait and see how the Toronto boys do things when they get a chance to welcome their American brethren. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

Mr. Shaw's Dream.

The following is the "dream" portion of J. Austin Shaw's speech at the banquet. He asserts that he had the name of every variety staged at the exhibition woven into his "nightmare."

"I had a funny dream last night and I didn't eat a rarebit either. I thought that William Scott and I were wafted through the mystic hours, from midnight on, from earth to sky; from Boston to the land of flowers. On a White Cloud we safely sat, our Guardian Angel, Mrs. Bradt. We both felt like Aristocrats. It was a day of Jubilee. The Cardinal and his Fair Maid gave audience to Scott and me, and told us not to be afraid. The Queen, enthroned in royal state, smiled a bright welcome as we knelt close by her side. The Enchantress waits and next to her was Roosevelt.

"It was an Imperial day, a day of Abundance and Prosperity, when the spirits of the immortals of floriculture paid homage in this Eldorado of the Gods. Far away we could hear the echoes of the Vesper music, and the sweet strains of My Maryland. Lady Bountiful, the Fair Maid of Queen Louise, with Ruby lips made Melody, while the Prospector, with his Beacon light, filled all the great dome with the effulgence of Daybreak as bright as when the sun's beams fall upon the Glacier on the coasts of Norway. Never so entrancing a vision greeted one's eyes at the royal palaces of Winsor.

"Shouts of Victory were heard and approaching us with all the regal grace of the Mikado, a golden medal on her breast, and the insignia of the Queen's Ward crowning on her brow, was the Ideal, Elsa Struss. Following in her train, radiantly beautiful, were Robert Craig and his Fiancee, Nelson Fisher, Mrs. E. A. Nelson, Harry Fenn and his Estelle, Senator Crane and Mrs. M. A. Patten; the Manley Crusader and the Winsome White Enchantress, Helen Gould, Pink Patten and the whole Lawson family, John Haines and his Evangeline, Joost and Flora Hill, Wolcott and his Belle, Dukemanni and Mrs. C. W. Ward, Lieut. Peary and Fair Jessica, the Red Warrior and Helen Goddard and all the sweet ladies of the court, Marion Peirce, Floriana, Genevieve Lord, Ethel Crocker and Ethel Ward, whose sweet, pure face some said eclipsed them all. Feathered songsters, Flamingoes and birds of every kind came flying toward us from the Boston Market in Perfection; in fact, a perfect Avalanche of beauty, scintillating in the Afterglow and irradiating Glenn and Dale with loveliness.

"It isn't any wonder we woke up, is it? But it was a lovely dream. And, though the carnations themselves are not immortal, they have made so the men who gave them birth."

Gaedeke to the Rescue.

August Gaedeke, Nashua, N. H., with his usual alertness, proved himself equal to the emergency on the closing day of the carnation convention. At almost the last moment Secretary Herr discovered that the number of railroad certificates necessary to secure the reduced rates home lacked seven tickets. M. A. Patten and P. J. Hauswirth called up Mr.

Gaedeke by telephone, requested him, after explaining the situation, to find seven men, procure tickets and certificates for the same and send the men to Boston. Having only one hour to find the seven men and receiving the message in the midst of a large funeral order meant some good, quick headwork, but with his usual habit of hustle Mr. Gaedeke landed his men at the Copley Square hotel at 8:40 p. m. with the necessary certificates, thus saving members from a distance between $400 and $500. #### A WARD HOUSE.

To the large body of carnation growers who have managed to turn out marketable stock from pretty nearly "any old kind" of a greenhouse, the accompanying illustration will be of special interest as showing "the latest wrinkles." This is one of the houses at the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., where many growers go, not only to see the latest things in carnations and peonies, but also to have a look at the newest ideas put into the visible form of greenhouses. Mr. Ward is certainly nothing behind the moment in his practices and has, indeed, been accused of being a little in advance of the times in some of his ideas; at least he must be given credit for the courage to invest early in anything which promises to be of advantage in the conduct of his business.

Quite naturally the disseminator of a novelty gives it good space in his place and it is Robert Craig that occupies the beds in the house illustrated. The photograph was taken early last November. The house is wide, of iron throughout and with continuous ventilation on both sides of the ridge. It will be noticed that the sash are operated by an automatic ventilating machine which Mr.

Ward has had in use for several years and has found very satisfactory. It is made by the Chadburn Mfg. Co., Newburg, N. Y.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, January 31.—Cucumbers, 40c to $1.50 doz.; leaf lettuce, 40c to 50c case; head lettuce, $2.50 to $8 bbl.; tomatoes, $1 to $4 case.

BOSTON, January 29.—Cucumbers, $3 to $12 a hundred; lettuce, 30c to 60c doz.; tomatoes, 35c lb.; parsley, $1.50 box; mushrooms, $1 to $2 per four-pound basket; mint, 50c to 60c doz.

NEW YORK, January 29.—Boston cucumbers, $1.25 to $1.75 doz.; head lettuce, 25c to 85c doz.; radishes, $2 to $3.25 100 bunches; mushrooms, 10c to 60c lb.; tomatoes, 15c to 40c lb.; rhubarb, 50c to 75c doz. bunches; mint, 75c to $1 doz.

CUCUMBERS.

With the growers of cucumbers the most troublesome part of the year will soon be over. As the brighter days arrive, they make freer growth, flower freer and, on account of the pollen maturing better, the setting of the flowers is considerably facilitated. Where hand pollination is necessary it can be done almost every day now, as the strength of the sun makes it necessary to give more air and insures the thorough drying of the pollen, which not only works freer but accomplishes its function better, thus insuring a larger percentage of fertilized flowers. Insects, also, begin to move around as the weather becomes warm and materially assist in the work of pollination.

The only drawback to the brighter and warmer weather is that insect pests are apt to become more troublesome, especially thrips and red spider. These little beggars cause endless annoyance, as they are without doubt the two hardest insect enemies to destroy of all the legion that infest greenhouses. On plants with harder foliage, they can be kept down with hard and frequent syringing, but the leaves of the cucumber are so tender and easily lacerated that water cannot be applied with sufficient force to dislodge them; hence, the necessity of using some sort of insecticide and applying in the form of a spray.

We have found more benefit from the use of tobacco extract than anything we have tried. This we make ourselves, for cheapness, simply by soaking some stems over night in a pail of water. In the morning we strain off the liquid and dilute to the proper strength, applying with a sprayer so as to thoroughly wet all the underside of the foliage. Applied thus, about once a week as a precautionary measure, the pests can be kept from getting a foothold.

It is hard to designate just the proper strength to which to dilute the liquid. I might say to the color of brandy, but there is so much variation in both the color and quality of this that it cannot be taken as a guide, but by beginning weak, to be on the safe side, and increasing in strength as required, the operator will soon get to know just what strength the plant will stand and what strength

These little beggars cause endless annoyance, as they are without doubt the two hardest insect enemies to destroy of all the legion that infest greenhouses. On plants with harder foliage, they can be kept down with hard and frequent spraying, but the leaves of the cucumber are so tender and easily lacerated that water cannot be applied with sufficient force to dislodge them; hence, the necessity of using some sort of insecticide and applying in the form of a spray.

We have found more benefit from the use of tobacco extract than anything we have tried. This we make ourselves, for cheapness, simply by soaking some stems over night in a pail of water. In the morning we strain off the liquid and dilute to the proper strength, applying with a sprayer so as to thoroughly wet both the underside of the foliage. Applied thus about once a week as a precautionary measure, the pests can be kept from getting a foothold.

It is hard to designate just the proper strength to which to dilute the liquid. I ought to say to the color of brandy, but there is so much variation in both the color and quality of this that it cannot be taken as a guide, but by beginning weak, to be on the safe side, and increasing in strength as required, the operator will soon get to know just what strength the plant will stand and what strength it takes to accomplish the work of destruction.

The work of pinching and tying will also need closer attention as the plants make a more rapid growth. The sooner unnecessary growths are pinched out after they appear, the better the strength of the plants will be concentrated into the proper channels and loss of energy averted.

A NEW INDIANA PLANT.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs of the newly erected plant of the Johnson Floral Co., Kendallville, Ind. There are eight houses. Seven are 15x60 feet and the other is 12x40. The place was built since July 1, 1905. Three houses are in carnations, one in roses, one for ferns, smilax, etc., one for mums and bedding plants, one for a cold house and one for potted stock for forcing. The stock is all in good shape for so late a start. Kendallville is an excellent little city of 5,000 prosperous people and trade is starting off well.

The Glen Cove Dinner.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society's first annual dinner on Saturday evening, at Glen Cove, L. I., was a great success. Thos. Harrison, of Elsinore, the La Dew estate, is president of the society, and his splendid address on the laudable ambitions and future of the club, its harmony and success, was a fitting close to an evening of great enthusiasm and enjoyment.

The tables were handsomely decorated with azaleas, roses and mounds of foliage plants by the members. There were vases of Long Island Beauty, a splendid pink carnation, from F. Boulon & Son, of Sea Cliff; Victory, from Guttman & Weber, and Abundance and his fine white freesia, Purity, from Rudolph Fischer, of Great Neck, L. I.

Buell G. Davis gave a stirring address in which he spoke of the wonderful progress of gardening in Nassau county during his twenty-two years in Glen Cove, predicting great triumphs for the vigorous young society and giving praise for its splendid exhibition in the fall. Every member and visitor present contributed his share towards the evening's enjoyment. The society's tenor, John McNichol, was in fine voice. The Ricard brothers, of Thorburn's and the Stumpp & Walter Co., sang old and new songs by the dozen and added greatly to the happiness of the occasion. Other speakers and songsters were: F. L. Atkins, of Rutherford; G. A. Burnett, of Burnett Bros.; W. Ross, of F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown; John White, with J. H. Troy, New Rochelle; A. J. Guttman, New York; Rudolph Fischer, F. Boulon, Jr., Charles Lenker, Chas. Jenecke, of John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, and a score or more of the well-known gardeners on the princely private estates of the neighborhood, club members and others. A more willing, versatile, genial, harmonious gathering of the bone and sinew of the gardening profession it would be hard to find.

Various Notes.

The military funeral of General Wheeler on Sunday was an imposing ceremony. Great loads of flowers were in evidence, and from the President's orchids to the ivy wreath of the old soldier all classes paid sympathy and honor to brave Fighting Joe. Very many of the florists of Brooklyn and New York were called upon to share in the provision of these beautiful emblems of esteem and affection.

S. Masur, Brooklyn, had charge of the funeral decorations for Attorney Sherman last week, a prominent lawyer of the city of churches. A blanket of pink roses was the special feature. Mr. Masur also had charge of the Dryer wedding, the house being elaborately decorated with nearly 2,000 pink roses and many boxes of wild smilax.

The annual dinner of the New York Florists' Club is to be held at the St. Denis, at 7 p. m. sharp, this week Saturday. Chairman Sheridan has already the pleasure to announce an assured success. Very many visitors from adjacent horticultural societies will be with us. A week earlier and we would have caught the celebrities on their way home from Boston. A goodly number "stopped over" on Sunday, Vice-President Altick among them. The officers were looking over the ground with a view to the carnation convention here during the World's Fair year, 1909.

Poughkeepsie dines its Dutchess County Horticultural Society on February 22. Elberon, N. J., contemplates its first "annual" in February. "That will be about all" this season.

Alex McConnell was very busy Sunday with funeral work. Among other offerings were some fine orchid wreaths from the Goulds for General Wheeler.

should be almost over. Monday the temperature fell to freezing, clear and cold, the day ideal, and boomed the retail business to the satisfaction of all. McKinley day was observed more loyally than any year since the movement began. Prices remained normal. No excessive rates were demanded and when the wholesalers closed at 6 o'clock hardly a carnation remained unsold.

Good Beauties are still scarce and for the best $9 a dozen was obtained readily. Richmond is selling well and commanding fine prices, the best retailing easily at $10 a dozen. Its lasting quality and perfume make it very popular. Brides, Maids and the other standard roses hold about the same as last week.

Violets do not go above 75 cents for specials, and with the anticipated flood I will not be surprised to see 50 cents as top price.

Tulips are abundant. Freesias and narcissi are increasing daily. Lilac and cattleyas are equal to the demand.

Mr. McConnell, has decided to assume the responsibility of a store on his own account. He has rented the store on the corner of Fifty-seventh street and Madison avenue, formerly occupied by Owen McDonald, and opposite Hanft Bros. His fellow employees presented him with a handsome pearl scarf pin on his departure and Mr. McConnell has many good things to say of him. The location is an excellent one and he has had the best possible schooling, and should succeed.

The Rosary was very busy Monday with the decorations and bouquets for the coming out ball of Miss Dorothy Whitney. Orchids and American Beauties were used.

The Limprecht Company's factory is working overtime. This and Mr. Limprecht's residence are over on the Palisades, in Jersey, where he has one and one-half acres near the new park and overlooking New York. This firm has just secured at auction the entire stock of the Tropical Decorative Plant Co., whose headquarters were at the Grand Central Palace, and later next to J. K. Allen's on West Twenty-eighth street.

Beaulieu, the seedsman of Woodside, came near planting his last onion last week, owing to an oversupply of charcoal gas in his sleeping apartment. With the usual good fortune of his French countrymen, he came up smiling.

U. G. Schollay, of Brooklyn, tells of the honor accorded by the engineers' society in re-electing him to the presidency at its annual meeting last week in New York City.

Siebrecht & Son have three houses of Cattleya Trianae in bloom at their New Rochelle conservatories, well worth a visit. Over 10,000 blossoms are a rare sight.

The next club meeting will be carnation and ladies' night. A large display and attendance is expected. C. W. Ward will deliver an illustrated lecture.

The wholesalers' employees announce another ball March 19.

J. B. Nugent was 47 years of age on Wednesday, and kept open house.

A final account of the trustee in bankruptcy handling the assets of Geo. R. Bradshaw has been filed. The creditors will hold their final meeting February 6 at 2:30 p. m., 68 William street.

After a long illness, from asthma and other diseases, one of the old-timers, Robert Payne, passed away, and on Sunday was buried. Jos. Fenrich, Lecakes & Co., and other wholesalers sent handsome floral designs. The firm was Payne & Dehnert, of 44 Catherine street.

Death of John Reck.

John Reck died January 24 in New York, at the German hospital. Death came as the result of the amputation of a leg, which was performed January 23 in an attempt to save his life from blood poisoning. Mr. Reck was kicked in the leg by a horse last summer and the wound bothered him greatly ever since.

The deceased was 60 years of age on January 10. He was born in Nurnberg, Bavaria, and when a child showed a strong liking for plants, trees and flowers. He was encouraged in his desires and was sent to Paris to study under a noted landscape gardener. Later he traveled through Europe and the British Isles, working and studying at the same time. He spent considerable time in southern Russia, England and Ireland. When the Franco-Prussian war broke out in 1870, John Reck held a lieutenant's commission in the Fifteenth Bavarian infantry. He saw service in a number of engagements, besides taking part in the siege of Paris.

Mr. Reck came to America in 1873 and after a short stay in New York came to Bridgeport. Shortly after his arrival here he became gardener for Nathaniel Wheeler. Later he went into business for himself and today the nurseries established by him on Oak street are among the largest in the state.

He was president of the Board of Charities for six years. It was he who hit upon the idea of giving groceries to the poor instead of money. Mr. Reck took great pride in educating his children, and for several years he made trips to Europe accompanied by either one or two of his children. Undoubtedly the saddest blow ever suffered by Mr. Reck was caused by the death of his two eldest daughters, Mamie and Elsie, which occurred during the past two years.

He is survived by the widow and two children, Carl, who is a member of the firm, and Miss Harriet.

The funeral was held January 27, the craft being well represented and the flowers many. S. D. Horan was among the pallbearers.

KENOSHA, WIS.—Louis Turner, who has been in the south for some time, is resuming business here.

Shasta Daisies.

In reply to a query by L. G. on page 429 of the issue for January 4 I would say that Shasta daisies are easily propagated from cuttings. There is no need to wait for roots. Cut off the young shoots below the ground and place in the sand. In a few weeks they will be rooted. Pot into 2½-inch or 3-inch pots. Plant out as soon as danger from severe frost is gone. If liberally treated they will need four square feet the first season and give not less than fifty blooms. If the young plants show a bud early in life pinch it out, otherwise there is no need to disbud. Don't let them seed. The better you treat them the better they will treat you.

His collar bone was broken and he sustained other injuries, but is standing the shock as well as could be expected and his recovery is looked for.

ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS.

Does Asparagus plumosus compactus seed the same as Asparagus Sprengeri? C. F. M.

Asparagus plumosus nanus is doubtless the variety referred to in this query as compactus, and in reply it may be stated that this plant does seed, though not with the same freedom as Asparagus Sprengeri. There is also a difference in the seeds, from the fact that ripe seeds of Asparagus plumosus are nearly, or quite, black, while the berries of Asparagus Sprengeri are light red. The original Asparagus plumosus seeds more freely than the variety nanus, and it is claimed that unscrupulous dealers sometimes mix the two. W. H. T.

time the question came up it was on a protest by the American Express Co., which was clearing at Buffalo a shipment for Heller Bros., New Castle, Ind. That appeal is still pending in the circuit court for the southern district of New York. In the REVIEW of January 18 two similar cases were reported, where the collector of customs had assessed duty on rooted rose cuttings at 2½ cents each, only to be promptly reversed by Board of General Appraisers. Under date of January 19 the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury directed the collector to file an appeal to the courts.

TO MAKE MUSLIN WATERPROOF.

Can ordinary muslin be prepared in any way so that it will shed water? R. B.

I do not know of any special way to prepare muslin so that it will shed water except a thin solution of linseed oil and white lead. That may not answer for what you want to use it, which you do not say. Perhaps some one else can tell. A. F. J. BAUR.

The Great Central Market.

We have had a week of very bright, warm weather and the effect has been apparent in all departments of the trade. The receipts are larger; city business is not so brisk as it would be with crisp, wintry weather; country customers who have some glass of their own have also increased cuts as well as we and are buying lightly. The result has been a considerable weakening in prices, although quality has been on the up grade ever since the sun came out. Beauties are in splendid shape. The cuts are large and prices have taken a drop. Best Brides and Maids still command the figure which has prevailed for the past two or three weeks, but there is a more critical selection. Maids again have good color. Red roses are not abundant and Chatenay is not so large a factor as it was earlier in the season.

The carnation receipts have increased materially. McKinley day did not make a ripple; in fact, the market was weaker on Friday, Saturday and Sunday than at any time in weeks past. Quite a few growers expected something would be doing for McKinley day, as did a number of the wholesalers, and preparations were made accordingly, with the result that some stock received on Friday was still on hand Monday morning. Quality is excellent in all varieties.

Bulbous stock is becoming very abundant. There are more callas than the market needs and the price on Harrisii is weakening. Tulips are also lower because of large supplies and Paper Whites, Romans and daffodils are equal to all requirements. Stevia is disappearing. Violets are not coming in as heavily as usual, but there are, nevertheless, all the market can consume. Grand Rapids is beginning to ship Lady Campbell. The very best of each variety sell, but the poorer stock makes the average very low.

The green goods market has been a little slow, but is picking up.

Various Notes.

If the month of January has in any way disappointed growers as to returns, which it probably has not, the difference is very much more than made up by the saving in fuel. The weather bureau does not record a January which has been so mild, so bright or with such light winds. In the month the difference between the daily mean temperature and the normal has been an excess of 296 degrees, showing each day to have been about 10 degrees warmer than usual.

The mild weather may have its effect on the wholesalers next summer. The large ice companies have not yet stored a pound and high prices are likely to result. Weather-sharps say it will be a hot summer, at that.

The Retailers' Association held a regular meeting at the Heyworth building Monday evening. The board of directors presented a set of resolutions put in circulation that afternoon, setting forth the principal aim of the body. There was discussion as to the attitude toward donating flowers, commissions to undertakers and other topics of interest to the retail trade. Andrew McAdams, treasurer of the retailers' organization of 1902, turned over a balance of $31.31.

H. E. Klunder is laid up this week with rheumatism.

E. C. Amling calls attention to the fact that on February 12 and 22 there will be but one mail delivery, leaving the postoffice about 9 a. m. Orders not mailed in season for this delivery should be telegraphed. February 14 is Valentine's day. Last year many violets were required.

Among the week's visitors are Carl Hirsch, of Hillsdale, Mich., and Charles Heite, of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade among the local retail florists the past week was reported as being good. The weather has been exceedingly mild for January and has created a large supply of cut flowers throughout the month. There was a liberal demand for first-class stock, but the supply in this grade was not enough. With the first and second grades the supply was much more than the demand.

Really fine roses are rather limited. During the past week there was a big demand for Richmond and Killarney, also fancy Brides and Maids. Fancy American Beauties are in demand, with top price at $5. Fancy carnations have been selling well, especially for McKinley day. Colored stock had a great call at advanced prices. The large amount of funeral work cleaned up a big lot of white and Enchantress carnations, which were quite plentiful.

Violets increase in quantity daily and the quality is very good. Prices on Californias are very low. Doubles are fine in color but demand is slow. Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful each day and prices are down, especially on Romans and Paper Whites. Fine white tulips are in the market at $4 per hundred. Valley is steady at the usual price. Daffodils and jonquils are now coming in and will soon be plentiful.

The Florists' Club's meeting will take place next week, Thursday afternoon. This meeting will be of great importance to growers and retailers. The annual carnation exhibition will be held and all new varieties will be exhibited. John Steidle will lead a discussion on "New Carnations" which should be of great interest. The other discussion will be on "How to Advertise a Flower Show," by J. J. Beneke. A great many visitors are expected from nearby towns.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A decided slump took place in prices last week and flowers sold at very low rates on one or two days. Slightly improved conditions now prevail, but supplies continue much too heavy for the demand. Roses hold their own fairly well and have suffered less than other flowers, not being overabundant, but carnations have dropped considerably. Few select blooms now exceed $3, while a good many go at $1 to $1.50. On some days a number went even below the dollar mark. Continued warm, clear weather has made the output very large for January.

Violets vary all the way from 30 cents to 75 cents. Some have sold as low as 25 cents. Sweet peas have made 50 cents to $1, daffodils and tulips $2 to $3, Paper Whites $1.50 and lily of the valley $2 to $4. Easter lilies are abundant at $8. There is a good supply of freesia, antirrhinum and other seasonable flowers. Asparagus and adiantum are both in active demand and rather scarce.

Various Notes.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. delivered fourteen team loads of greenery for a recent decoration at the Hotel Somerset.

Patrick Welch is the proud father of another daughter. She arrived January 24 and prevented him from attending the Copley Square hotel banquet the next evening.

We continue to get abnormally mild weather and each day we read in the daily press of budding trees, sprouting bulbs and other indications of spring. It is certainly rare to find winter aconites, snowdrops, dandelions, pansies, Spiraea Thunbergi and Cydonia Japonica in flower in January, as is the case this year.

The distribution of 10,000 complimentary tickets swelled the attendance of the public at the late show very materially. The very liberal press notices were also a great aid.

For more than a week we have been experiencing the finest spring weather. Grass is showing green and in one instance dandelions are reported in bloom. As a result the streets are crowded every afternoon and small trade has been much better. This, with a number of large decorations the past week, has helped things generally, but there is still room for improvement. Bulb stock of all kinds is coming in more plentiful and better in quality. Carnations are right in crop with most of the growers in this vicinity.

Various Notes.

Theo. F. Beckert is sending the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. some very fine lilac and freesia.

A fire which partly destroyed the market house January 20 kept the market people out of business for several days, among them Geo. Eichhorn, H. Baldinger, and Chris Hausen, but they are all now down to business again. Blind Brothers' stand, which was enclosed in glass, was entirely demolished.

Business is very brisk in all lines of cut flowers. Roses are a little more plentiful, but with quite enough demand to maintain prices on good stock. The features of the market are the improvements in tulips; La Reine and Yellow Prince are both in fine form and can be had in quantity; freesia, of a quality never surpassed in this city, can be had in great quantity at the price formerly asked for ordinary grades. Cattleyas are also plentiful and of fine quality. Some disappointment was experienced in shipping cut flowers during the abnormally warm weather of last week. Fortunately, these conditions have changed and the stock is now arriving in much harder condition, assuring its keeping qualities. McKinley day created quite a demand for carnations, pink being preferred. William Graham stated that he had sold 20,000, 10,000 in one order. Some of the department stores distributed these flowers on this day. The Union League also presented its members with carnation boutonnieres.

Through the courtesy of Edward Habermehl, I am able to give the REVIEW readers a few ideas about what the street pronounces the handsomest decoration ever seen in this city. This decoration was arranged in the ball-room of the hotel on the evening of January 25 for Mrs. E. C. Knight. The ball-room being too large for the occasion, a balcony was arranged around the entire room at the proper distance from the walls. The idea carried out in the decoration was that of a French garden, the masses of foliage rising behind the balcony in some places to a height of fifteen feet, being relieved by magnificent vases of fancy American Beauty roses which were placed on the posts at regular intervals around the balcony. Azaleas, perfect pyramid specimens, matching the Beauties in color, were also used, especially on the stage. White lilacs were the only other flower in the decoration. It is estimated that nearly two thousand Beauties were used, two-thirds of them being of the fancy grade. The shorter-stemmed flowers were used on trellises near the entrances. Mrs. Knight was greatly pleased with the effect produced, complimenting the decorators on the ability with which they had carried out every detail of a French garden. The tables were ornamented with vases of fancy Beauties, rose foliage being used on the cloth. Two days later, January 27, the same decorators arranged very handsome floral effects for the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Clothier for Miss Roosevelt. The ladies' table was a hollow oval, the centre being filled by Azalea Vervaeana, bordered with white lilacs. Each guest had a bouquet of eighteen fancy Bridesmaid roses. The gentlemen's table, in another room, was arranged in a horseshoe shape, the guests sitting on the outside, and a little way up the inside of the horseshoe table, most of the space inside being reserved for a Japanese garden, which was skillfully planned and executed. American Beauty roses were freely used in this decoration.

The rooms and corridors were also adorned.

The Disadvantage of Shows.

Much has been said and written of the great benefits of shows, and I am a warm advocate of these exhibitions, believing that they do much to advance the interests of horticulture. There is, however, something to be said on the other side. A friend tells me that an amateur, whom he met frequently, always spoke in the most glowing terms of his gardener's accomplishments, believing that he could do almost anything with plants that grew. One day, however, the amateur talked about other topics, and finally, when pressed to know how his gardener was doing, he admitted that things were not well. He said that he was very fond of bulbs, imported a good many, and liked to have them throughout the flowering season. But his gardener insisted on flowering them all at once, so that he could pick the best for the show. There some other amateur, recognizing his ability, offered him a higher salary than he was receiving, with many other inducements thrown in. "Well," my friend said, "I suppose he went!" "Went!" the amateur echoed, "no; he just flew."

Best Market Carnation.

In view of the carnation show at Boston last week, the REVIEW requested Edward Reid to give his ideas on the best varieties for everyday bread-and-butter. Mr. Reid states that in white he considers Boston Market as the most satisfactory. Flora Hill is very desirable, especially in warm weather, because of its keeping qualities. Queen, he also considers excellent. In pink, Mr. Reid thinks there is room for another good variety. Mrs. Nelson Fisher is so far the most satisfactory of the Grace Wilder shade. Mrs. Lawson is not thoroughly satisfactory on account of its color. Enchantress is superb among soft pinks. In scarlet, Flamingo is the best, though curly in the fall and possibly not very free flowering.

Charles Beunning and Mrs. Beunning, of Easton, Pa.

Fire broke out in the home adjoining the store of Geo. H. Berke, 1505 Pacific avenue, Atlantic City, N. J. Fortunately, it was checked before serious damage had been done. The fire was due to a curtain coming in contact with a gas stove.

The street has it that Robt. Scott & Son will erect a range of short span houses at Sharon Hill, to be used for growing Richmonds. That is, the extra glass is erected for Richmond, but the new houses will be used for something else.

D. T. Connor, who, as is well known, represents the Burnham-Hitchings-Pier-son Co., has been very active in arranging for the erection of new houses. Besides those already reported he will furnish roofing material for two houses for Lehr Bros., of Baltimore; for one house for Mrs. Fleming, of Ocean Heights, near Atlantic City; two houses for the Philadelphia Carnation Co. (Robt. Crawford & Son), Secane, Pa.; one house for A. Gontram, violet specialist, Holmesburg, Pa.; four houses 16x150 feet for David Anderson, of Garrettford. This is virtually rebuilding, as Mr. Anderson will use the glass that was in his father's place.

W. E. McKissick, E. Bernheimer and the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. have joined the ranks of freesia specialists.

George A. Stroblein, of Riverton, N. J., has received a letter from J. D. Eisele, written on his steamer's arrival at Liverpool. Mr. Eisele is well and enjoyed a pleasant voyage.

Carnation Night.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, to be held Tuesday evening, February 6, A. M. Herr, secretary of the American Carnation Society, will review the carnation meeting recently held in Boston, and the committee in charge earnestly requests those having some of the bread-winners among divine flowers to forward same, or better still, bring them to the meeting, so that the essayist may use them to illustrate his remarks; besides it will give those who were unable to attend the annual meeting an opportunity to examine them. Kindly forward same express prepaid in care of David Rust, Horticultural hall, Broad street above Spruce street, Philadelphia, Pa., when they will be properly taken care of and staged. Kindly forward them in time so that they may reach destination not later than Tuesday afternoon, February 6.

SUBJECT TO MARKET CHANGE.

lesson to one open to learn. So in company with the Hon. Wm. F. Kasting, we journeyed up the Lake Shore to the city of Erie, a thriving, growing city. The name Erie was familiar to us many years before we ever expected to see the beautiful lake. Campbell, the Scotch poet, says, "Lo, the poor Indian, on Erie's shore," and ever since that the dusky aborigine has been known as Mr. and Mrs. Lo.

Mr. Kasting occupies and is prospective owner of a fine place built by S. Alfred Baur. It appears that Mr. Baur built with the best of intentions, but before the houses were fully equipped he ran short of the necessary and collapsed before any benches could be built. The place consists of seven houses, each 33x150, well built and well heated, with a shed 210 feet long that you can drive a load of hay in at one end and out at the other. There is every convenience for an extensive business; a spacious cool cellar and a boiler pit that will hold ten carloads of fuel, with two forty horse-power boilers. John Milley, a Buffalo boy, is the present manager and, though handicapped for want of benches, is doing well. It is essentially a cut flower place, but there are many other crops at present, all of which enter nicely into Mr. Kasting's business. There are twenty-one acres of land, including every quality of soil, some ideal for roses; two large ice houses and pond to supply the ice, several large barns and stables; altogether a model place for a very large florist's plant. It is situated in a fine growing part and only a few yards outside the city limits. When Mr. Baur gave up possession he left affairs rather tangled up, which it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to explain, but eventually there is little doubt that Mr. Kasting will be the proud possessor of this fine property, which, when fully equipped, would afford a handsome income to any industrious florist. The best Pennsylvania coal can be bought there at $1.45 per ton. We pay $2.45 in Buffalo. Mr. Milley lives on the place, in a very neat house and, with a pretty young wife, should be very comfortable. The day was glorious, mud abundant, and having developed an abnormal appetite we greatly enjoyed the day.

A Trip to Attica.

The following week, and on a day more like June than January, we ran out to see Mr. Stroh, of Attica. His place consists of about 60,000 feet and is almost entirely devoted to carnations. His latest addition is two houses, each 40x200 feet, up-to-date in every respect, divided in the middle by a house occupied with material for local trade asparagus, smilax and adiantum. The houses are filled with Lawson, Flora Hill, White Cloud and Morning Glory. Mr. Stroh has not been carried away with every late introduction and sticks to what suits his ground and skill. Morning Glory has been a sight. Lawson is now a sight, but best of all is White Cloud. With all the wonders lately introduced, it would be scarcely reasonable to expect a grander or more perfect house of carnations and I begged for a photograph of this house.

The gravity system of steam heating is here adopted and as there is facility to put the boilers down twelve feet, no other system would be advisable; still there is the ashes to hoist out. The boiler house is arched with steel and cement and the loads of coal drive on and above it and the coal drops from the wagon into the boiler house. It is as handy a way of handling fuel as I have yet seen.

Attica is the home of Mr. Stevens, a prominent senator of the New York legislature, and he has a princely farm with palaces for his fancy stock of high steppers that have carried off so many blue ribbons at Madison Square. He has a nice range of glass at his summer home, but unfortunately the houses were locked and the gardener where he should be, at his home.

Then Mr. Stroh drove us through the beautiful estate to the home of Mrs. Stevens, the elder, in the village. Here we found Mr. Copsey, the gardener. Four small greenhouses and a warm grapery reminded us vividly of olden days. There were many familiar plants that it was interesting to see for a change, in a land where you see nothing but roses and carnations by the acre. Mr. Copsey and the venerable Mrs. Stevens are great admirers of the REVIEW and it was pleasant to hear of such mutual trust and kindness between employer and gardener. Mr. Copsey's hospitality was both timely and welcome and fully appreciated.

The principal object lesson at Mr. Stroh's place was that you should never discard a variety that does well and pays well for any variety for which you have only another man's word as to merit. The day was well spent and we kept on learning, the more so because we had with us the genial, unassuming but wise Barney Myers, manager of W. J. Palmer's place at Lancaster, where the now famous Red Lawson originated.

Various Notes.

Speaking from personal experience, business for January has been greatly better than January, 1905, no particular feature, but good all along the line. The weather may partly account for this. Don't let anyone persuade you that snow and ice are conducive to brisk business. Far different. When people can with comfort promenade the sidewalks or take a carriage ride without freezing to death any retail business will thrive. W. S.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Thomas Peaker has started to build a greenhouse 20x32 and hopes to enlarge soon, as business increases.

GUTHRIE, OKLA.—Furrow Bros. will soon begin the construction of two 300-foot houses to be used in connection with their present place. The addition will comprise 16,000 square feet of glass.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Jacob Schulz took full advantage of the opportunity afforded by McKinley day. He published in a Saturday evening paper, January 27, one of the strongest possible advertisements, printed in three colors and surrounded by reading matter. The advertisement was three columns wide and nine inches deep. In the center was a portrait of McKinley in black, surrounded by a wreath of carnations in red and green. At the bottom was a card stating that Mr. Schulz would have a full line of the finest carnations. He felt the effect in largely increased trade on Monday and the general effect of so good an advertisement will be lasting.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The pleasant spring weather is still with us, and is undoubtedly the cause of the slow demand for all kinds of flowers, trade being very dull, and, fortunately, the supply limited, so that the loss was small. Prices hold about as follows: Roses, $6 to $12 a hundred; Beauties, $1 to $6 a dozen; carnations, $1.50 to $5 per hundred; sweet peas, short, $1, long, $1.50; tulips, $3 to $4; Paper Whites and Romans, $2 to $3; daffodils, $3 to $4; violets, single, 40 cents to 60 cents; double, 75 cents to $1.

Various Notes.

Smith & Fetters report things a little quiet at present, but have nice orders booked for coming events. Their store always looks fine and the display window has all the latest novelties in cut flowers and artistic supplies.

Bramley & Mann, who recently purchased the Collins & Harrison Co.'s store at 164 Euclid avenue, have moved to the corner of Payne avenue and Fifty-fifth street, where they have a large store and basement. The location is fine and the trade wishes them success in their new place.

The Cleveland delegation to Boston was small, but what they lacked in numbers was made up in the enjoyment and benefits they derived from the trip.

At Akron.

A recent visit to Akron found the retail trade a little quiet. N. Laskaras had a fine lot of palms, rubbers and ferns in his display window.

Heepe's Sons had a fine window of bulb stuff in baskets and hampers and were busy with funeral orders. A visit to their greenhouses found everything in good condition and a good crop of carnations just coming.

Aug. Schmidt, of the Oak Hill Greenhouses, was busy with the carnations, and has everything growing nicely.

J. Salmon & Son were busy on funeral orders, and a table decoration. This firm certainly has some fine houses of carnations, and is cutting good flowers and lots of them.

At the North Hill greenhouses, Edward Schwerdtfeger was busy with the bulbs, bringing in a batch and getting them on the forcing bench. Business has been very good with him, and he says he has nothing to complain about. C.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

The past two weeks have been quiet ones with the trade in this section, and business is just commencing to pick up, heavy rains and gloomy days having kept people indoors. The weather while not being cold, the mercury not going below 24 degrees, was disagreeable, necessitating continuous firing. The first snow of the season fell here last Thursday but it did not last long. At the present writing the mercury is hovering around the seventies with the nights at fifty, doing away with the boilers for awhile.

Stock at the different places is looking good. Carnations are doing fine, especially Enchantress, Lawson and Wolcott. Estelle is nearly a failure in this section and a good red is badly needed. Experiments are being carried on with some of the new varieties, and it is hoped that a good commercial red can be procured that will stand the climatic conditions here.

Prices are keeping up well and trade is reported brisk all over the section. Roses are selling for $1.50 per dozen; carnations, 75 cents and $1; valley, $1.50; Romans, $1; narcissi, 75 cents; mignonette, 75 cents; callas, $3. Excessively warm weather the last few days is causing bulbous stock to grow too fast. Considerable funeral work is being done, which takes up all the surplus stock.

The city of Dallas, having taken charge of the County Fair which until the past year has been run by private parties at a considerable loss, was able to clear a handsome profit. The city is taking steps to improve the city with a park system, and is in communication with eastern landscape gardeners relative to the work, which will be started as soon as possible.

It is understood that the Sherman Nursery Co., owned by J. S. Kerr, of Sherman, has been absorbed by the Texas Nursery Co., of the same place, and will be carried on by the last mentioned firm. Mr. Kerr has become widely known and will be missed greatly by his large circle of customers, as it is expected he will have charge of the growing end of the business.

Mr. Fitzpatrick, of the Texas Nursery Co., has some fine carnations at his place and is finding a ready market at Dallas for them. He reports a large business during the holidays.

Miss Mangum, of Sherman, reports a good trade during Christmas and a very satisfactory amount of business since. Miss Mangum has a small place but is getting her share of the business.

The Dallas Floral Bazaar, of Dallas, reports business as exceedingly good and is buying large quantities of material. The firm has not been in business long, but is rapidly pushing to the front.

J. L. Downing, of Wichita Falls, a prominent nurseryman of northern Texas, was visiting among the florists, inspecting construction, heating, etc., with the intention of erecting some houses shortly. Mr. Downing reports a good demand for flowers at his town and as stock must be sent from other towns, he intends to erect houses and supply the demand himself.

NARCISSUS.

WASHINGTON.

State of Business.

Business has been excellent during the past week and there are good prospects that the coming month will be a record breaker, particularly in decorations. American Beauty roses are still scarce and the quality is poor. The situation is relieved, however, by the fact, surprising as it may seem, that there is no great demand for them, a large majority of hosts preferring tea roses and other cheaper stocks in their decorations.

The scarcity of Bridesmaids continues and several retailers have had trouble in filling orders.

Carnations of the common sorts are being sidetracked by tulips and daffodils but there is still a good demand for the fancies at $1 and $1.25 per dozen retail. Violets are moving very freely but prices are breaking. Cut Harrisii retail readily at $3 and $4 per dozen. Daffodils are more plentiful and retail at 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Both this stock and tulips are being largely used in table decorations. Poinsettias, considering that most of the stock is inferior, sell readily at $3 per dozen. A good quality of sweet peas may be had at 75 cents and $1 per bunch of twenty-five. Freesias and aliums are in fair supply and quickly taken. In pot stocks, lilac is more plentiful and 8-inch pots have dropped from $2 to $1.50. Good azaleas are rather scarce, the successions being slow in coming in.

With the possible exception of Paper White narcissus, which is growing rather stale, there is little surplus stock in sight, though, with a week of fair weather, carnations and violets are likely to accumulate.

Various Notes.

There is considerable speculation with reference to the probable decorations at the White House for the wedding of Miss Roosevelt and Congressman Longworth. It has been "authoritatively" stated that they will be very simple, but authoritative statements are not always correct. For instance, a local authority on society events recently stated that at a White House reception there were pans of "pink and white poinsettias."

Fred Michell has been in town and modestly agrees that Philadelphia is now about as good as it can be.

SCOTTY.

The Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., will meet in the Scottish Rite Hall, 1007 G street, Northwest, February 6 at 8 p. m. There will be an exhibition of carnations and other flowers from out-of-town growers, as well as from local men; also a lecture on the diseases of the carnation by Prof. A. E. Woods, Pathologist and Physiologist of the Department of Agriculture. This will draw a full attendance, as Prof. Woods is one of the best posted men on the subject in the country. Any one desiring to make an exhibit at this meeting can do so by sending same to the above address in care of the Secretary, express charges prepaid, and shipment timed to reach Washington on the morning of February 6.

WILTON JUNCTION, IA.—E. Friederichsen & Sons report cut flower trade very good, carnations being especially fine. They grow vegetables quite extensively and report lettuce and radishes as going a little slow just now.

NOVOHRAD, TEX.—J. R. Jasek reports trade better than a year ago by fifty per cent. He had chrysanthemums in bloom outdoors January 18. Many shrubs were in full bloom at the same date. He is handling much nursery stock for ornamental purposes.

TROUBLE WITH A BOSTON.

I am sending you a branch of a fern, variety unknown. The plant is in an 8-inch pot in the public library. It was thrifty till last November when all old wood was cut off. Since then the ends of the leaves turn brown and drop off; also the ends of the branches wither and die. The plant more than fills the pot. It was repotted in November. Can you give a remedy? H. S.

The fern frond forwarded with this query appears to be one from a Boston fern, but the leaflets of the specimen in question had almost all dropped off by the time it was received.

The cause of the difficulty no doubt was the fact that the roots were disturbed by repotting so late in the season. Any plant that is to be placed in a dwelling, or in a public hall, such as this, should be well-established in the soil, and would better be repotted not later than August or September. The trouble is quite likely to continue and may grow worse if the plant remains in the library, but it is quite probable that two months' care in a greenhouse may re-establish it, and bring forth a healthy growth.

W. H. T.

DES MOINES, IA.—An incipient blaze was discovered last week in George Pappa's store and extinguished by the fire department.

NEWARK, O.—A. J. Baldwin has been at Milwaukee attending the convention of cement manufacturers, in which business he is interested.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

The demand for stock the past week has exceeded the supply on a great many varieties. Roses are scarce and prices keep up nicely. Brides have been indeed scarce; but bulb stock has helped out wonderfully. There has been very little doing in the social line and colored stock has not sold any too well.

Tulips are selling for 75 cents a dozen and, as we have had springlike weather the last few days, large numbers of them have been sold. Nearly all of the stores have a number of azaleas on hand, but they are slow sale.

Some very nice Beauties are coming in daily from outside points; in fact, they are the best I have seen since shortly before Christmas.

Minneapolis.

I called on John Monson, proprietor of the Minneapolis Floral Co., and found his stock all in good condition. He has about 22,000 carnations growing and is cutting large numbers of them daily. Mr. Monson is a strong believer in growing his carnations in houses at about 65 degrees and, judging from the growth made and the flowers cut, his practice is a good one. Shortly after making a cut he sinks the stems in water within about five or six inches of the bloom, and the water, according to Mr. Monson, stiffens up the stems and the carnations keep fine. He says carnations put in water and allowed to stand eight or ten hours will keep longer than carnations grown in houses kept much cooler. His theory is no doubt a profitable one as it gets the flowers in bloom much quicker; consequently more can be cut and sold.

His new rose, the Miss Kate Moulton, is given good care and shows the effect of it, as his stock looks fine. The foliage is a perfect green and the blooms are as handsome a pink as one would care to look at. The stems are strong and as many as twenty-five blooms had been cut off one plant. It is a fine shipper, but should be cut in the tight bud and allowed to open in water. His lilies are looking good, and probably a week or so before Easter the houses of lilies will be a mass of bloom.

Retailers report a fair business the past week, notwithstanding the fact that the fine weather has brought a number of Greeks on the streets, but the uncertainty of the weather prevents them from making any expensive arrangements for a continuous steady supply.

St. Paul.

Holm & Olson are kept busy and experience some difficulty at times in getting what they want in stock, especially white.

A report that E. F. Lemke had experienced some difficulty with his heating plant lacked basis in fact. Some one went so far as to say that his stock had all been frozen.

Sunday morning business is good with all dealers and a call will nearly always find them busy.

A visitor the past week was B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia.

FELIX.

MONTCLAIR, N. J.—A defect in the heating plant in Herbert Bradley's greenhouses last week caused $500 damage.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Emile Popp, formerly foreman for L. S. Donaldson at the Mendenhall place, has taken charge of James J. Hill's place at St. Paul.

The Seed Grower

Cloth, 12 mo, 191 pp. Price $1.25 postpaid.

A new book by Charles Johnson, author of The Seedsman's Assistant.

This is a practical treatise on growing vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs for market or commercial purposes, describing operations for each variety in detail, when to plant, harvesting, drying and cleaning; with crop yield per acre, prices paid to growers, market status, where the best seeds are now grown, contract forms for growers, how to originate new varieties, how to take care of seeds.

The only complete work on seed growing published in any country.

The chapter on raising, cleaning, storing and keeping onion sets is itself worth the price of the whole book. The same can be said of chapters on other varieties, beans, cabbage, corn, cucumbers, melon, peas, tomatoes, etc. Every seedsman, every florist, every gardener, every farmer should have a copy. Know how the best seeds are grown. The more you know about seeds the better.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S. Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, G., June 26-28, 1906.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Chas. P. Braslan, San Jose, Cal.

HOLLAND bulb growers are experiencing another undesirably mild winter.

THERE are a few of the catalogue seed houses whose issues for 1906 have not yet made an appearance.

ADAM CURRIE, JR., is on the road for Currie Bros. Co., of Milwaukee, making two trips a year to the Pacific coast.

W. W. BARNARD, Chicago, has been alarmingly ill with pneumonia the past week, but on Tuesday was reported as improving.

THE weather has been the warmest known in January for years. The mean temperatures have been 10 degrees above normal for the entire month.

VISITED ST. PAUL.—H. A. Johns, of the Sioux City Seed and Nursery Co., Sioux City, Ia., F. L. Hogue, wholesale seed grower, Carpinteria, Cal.

THE Montgomery Ward seed catalogue is unique in shape and size. Half-tones are used as illustrations, the subjects being well chosen and the work well executed.

THE canners' convention, which meets at Atlantic City within the month, is looked forward to by the seed trade. Pointers on peas and sweet corn for sowing purposes usually develop when the canners meet.

J. A. ROBINSON, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., has spent the month of January in the west and says he booked orders to the amount of over $92,000. He says it promises to be a banner year for his house. He finds all in the trade anticipating a good spring season.

THE belated delivery from growers of some of the early varieties of sweet corn is causing considerable annoyance in filling orders. It is suggested that the corn grower should arrange some sort of a drying plant to get sweet corn in shape quickly, instead of depending on the weather to dry it out.

RETURNING from a short trip taken to southern points, S. F. Leonard, Chicago, reports the unseasonable weather of January has thrown things off in a measure and the seed dealers throughout the section covered are wondering where they are at. A good, stiff, cold snap is needed to adjust things.

JANUARY shipments of onion sets are reported to have gone out in good shape. The weather throughout the month was favorable for shipping. February business, which is always the heaviest of car-load lots, will settle the question of where prices will land. Well posted onion set dealers are not worrying.

WRITING under date of January 23, C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, say that recent weather conditions in central California have been very favorable indeed for crops. There has been an abundance of rain and the streams overflowed their banks but they do not think any serious damage resulted. Most of the planting is done and the crops are beginning to grow nicely.

"THE INSIDE WAYS."

James R. Mann, candidate for reelection as congressman from the second district of Illinois, has favored his constituents, including some of the staff of the REVIEW, with the following interesting communication:

If you wish them, I can send you an assortment of five kinds of flower seed, or five kinds of vegetable garden seed. I get great pleasure out of such things myself and hope that you do. If you care for them, please let me know at once which you wish, as I must send to the Agricultural Department my final list of names within a few days.

As your Congressman, I am here attending to your interests. After an experience of nearly nine years I am gradually learning the inside ways of Congress and I hope am acquiring influence, so that I can help care for the many interests of a great city like Chicago in the various propositions for legislation which come before Congress. It is often an aid to me to know the positive views of my friends and constituents and I shall at all times be glad to hear from you on any public question.

DUTY ON VALLEY PIPS.

In 1895 F. E. McAllister imported at New York a quantity of valley pips on which duty was assessed under the provision in paragraph 234½, tariff act of 1894, for "lily of the valley * * * and other plants for forcing." The importer protested that they should be free under paragraph 558, relating to crude vegetable substances, or paragraph 611, relating to roots not specially provided for. On June 24, 1895, the Board of General Appraisers overruled the protest and McAllister appealed to the courts. The U. S. circuit court for the southern district of New York has just handed down the following decision:

The articles in controversy are bunches of lily of the valley roots having several sprouts or crowns thereon. The importer testifies that they are thus imported for forcing, and that he has never known of their being imported with foliage. The collector classified them for duty under paragraph 234½ of the tariff act of August 28, 1894. The provisions of said paragraph are "orchids, lily of the valley, azaleas, palms and other plants used for forcing under glass for cut flowers, . . . ten per centum ad valorem." The importer protested, claiming that the articles were free under paragraph 558 as "moss, seaweeds and vegetable substances," or under paragraph 611 as "roots not specially provided for." The Board of General Appraisers overruled the protest and sustained the action of the collector, and the importer appeals.

These articles are not vegetable substances in the class of moss and seaweeds under said paragraph 558. It seems clear that while these articles are not botanically and technically plants, yet they are plants in the broadest sense, with the operation resultant from planting already started. They would be popularly considered as plants and are imported to be planted. I think it is manifest that Congress, in view of these circumstances and in view of the fact that they are imported in this way only, intended to use the word in its broadest sense and to assess them denominatively for duty under paragraph 234½ as lily of the valley plants used for forcing under glass for cut flowers, etc.

The decision of the Board of General Appraisers affirming the classification of the collector is therefore affirmed.

THE AMERICAN HOLLAND.

Enclosed I send you a weather report for December, 1905. It shows a maximum temperature of 57 degrees and a minimum of 28 degrees. The precipitation was 4.20 inches. This is where the Holland bulbs grow to perfection. I planted all the month. We have ten feet of sandy loam, all made land, on top of forty feet of glacial gravel. All southwest, west and northwest winds bring nothing but mild and soft weather, with a moist air that makes everything grow. Our proximity to so large a body of warm water as the Pacific ocean is the key to our very mild winter climate. This water, as it rushes into Puget sound, is never lower than 43 degrees and never higher in summer than 55 degrees; hence our equable weather conditions. The wealth of our moist atmosphere must be felt to be appreciated. The steam donkey engines are now just coming into use for pulling stumps and logs into piles to burn, and this clearing is going on faster each year. The commercial orchards of west Washington have yet to be planted. Great opportunities are offered for young men with pluck and muscle to get started with a fine young orchard.

Clearbrook, Wash. GEORGE GIBBS.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

It is probable that those nurseries which look forward largely to bedding stock to obtain them a little ready cash and some quick trade in the spring of each year, may be somewhat disappointed in the coming spring. The trade of 1905, for geraniums in particular, was exceptionally good, and practically all nurserymen cleaned out of all plants that could by any possible means be used for bedding purposes. The consequence is, every one throughout the whole of last summer propagated bedding stuff in the way of geraniums for all they were worth.

It was remarked by some growers that the trade of 1906 would be even better than 1905 on account of there not being sufficient left for stock to make an over-supply next spring, but the geranium is a very prolific subject under proper treatment; it is surprising what an immense quantity of plants can be produced of the 3-inch pot size from a few old stock plants. Propagating from these can go on practically all the year round.

It is probable that even if prices do not fall during next spring many growers will not clear out nearly so easily as they did last season. It is a great fault of growers to always rush into a thing because it has done well one season. The result is, practically every grower has a full supply; and a good season is invariably followed by a more or less bad one. Experience has shown that it is often far more profitable to carefully follow a bad season than to follow an exceptionally good one.

Those seed houses in England which handle seed potatoes, but more especially the seed growers and wholesale merchants in the big growing districts of Lincolnshire, Cambridgeshire and elsewhere, will have almost as much cause to remember the winter and spring of 1905-1906 as they have to remember the winters and springs of 1903 to 1905; not this time, however, because of high prices for seed potatoes, but just the reverse; prices for better class varieties and best samples have hardly ever been so low.

Of course there is the usual trade among the seed houses which have good retail connections, but even this trade is very slack.

The variety recently introduced from America, Noroton Beauty, appears to answer its description well as an early and good cropping sort; it is probably as good as any new English sort. It is noteworthy that some sorts imported from America many years ago still hold their own and are as much sought after as ever, notably the Early Rose and Early Puritan, although there is some diversity of opinion as to whether the latter variety did originally come from America or not. The writer has repeatedly heard some English leading seedsmen assert it came direct from America, and they say

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

they can even refer to the importers, and on the other hand, it is claimed to have been raised by a leading midland retail seed house in England. However, it matters little, now, where it came from, it is probably the best quality early potato yet seen in England. If American seedsmen could give us another variety covering the same good quality with improved cropping powers and a more lasting constitution, they would indeed confer a lasting blessing on English potato growers and consumers.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I am going to build two greenhouses 20x100, ten and one-half feet to the ridge, and I want to know about the heating of them. I have a coil furnace in an old house, but I don't know its capacity. I have a lot of 4-inch cast-iron pipes and wondered if I could use them as flow pipes. I want to know how I could use the boiler and what capacity it would have to be to heat the two houses. I want the temperature of one of the houses to be 50 degrees and the other 55 degrees or 60 degrees at night. The thermometer rarely falls below zero. The average is 40 to 45 degrees. Will you please tell me what I can do? The pipe in the furnace is 1¼-inch or 1½-inch. C. F. R.

It is impossible for me to even guess at the capacity of your present pipe boiler, without an accurate description of its construction, stating its dimensions. The two houses you propose to erect, if to be heated with hot water, can be piped as follows: The house to be run at 50 degrees should have a 2½-inch flow under the ridge, returning by eight 2-inch returns, and the house to be run at 55 degrees to 60 degrees should have a 2½-inch flow and ten 2-inch returns. The boiler to heat these houses should have a rated capacity for 2,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

RATING FOR BOILER.

We have a Case ten horse-power boiler, forty 2-inch flues. How many feet of 4-inch boiler flues will it carry for hot water? Also how many feet of 1¼-inch pipe will it heat with steam, with the necessary flows? C. H. H.

As the length of the tubes is not given, I can only state an approximate rating for the boiler under consideration. The size and number of tubes stated do not tally with the specifications of any boiler now catalogued by the Case Co. However, a boiler with forty 2-inch tubes five and a half feet long, will contain about 130 feet of heating surface, which should be sufficient to provide heat for about 850 lineal feet of 4-inch pipe or 2,400 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe with low pressure steam. L. C. C.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business shows no diminution the past week and prices for good stock have ruled high. The quality of stock being offered is exceptionally good and the warm, sunny weather of the past few days has done much toward making the supply of cut flowers more plentiful. Several large decorations were put up, being pretty evenly distributed among the different florists. The wholesalers have also had their share of the business, having had an unusual amount of shipping business. The first daffodils of the season are now on the market, the W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. sending in the first ones. Funeral work has been plentiful. This has been a very satisfactory week in trade circles in this city.

WHEN THE WEDDING SEASON

is here, you will want satisfactory ribbons. The Right Ribbons are such and will add a wonderful tone of effectiveness to your decorations, bridal bouquets, etc. A $5.00 order will start you on the right path.

Various Notes.

The Alpha Floral Co.'s store was broken into a short time ago and $30 taken.

Manager Bastian, of Shaeffer's wholesale department, says his branch of the business is increasing right along and that they are gaining new customers daily.

Mr. and Mrs. Kessel, of Muskogee, I. T., were in town this week buying supplies for their new flower store that they will open in that city soon. Muskogee is a booming town and Mr. Kessel says there is a splendid opening for this business.

W. J. Barnes has one of the neatest places in the city. His roses are in good shape and everything else on his place looks well.

Theodore Kahma seems to be making a specialty of bulb stuff just now and the quality of the stock he is sending in is certainly fine. He is growing some high grade valley.

The women's auxiliary of the Manufacturers' Association held a meeting Saturday afternoon to discuss the work of the garden committee. A special effort will be made this spring to arouse an interest in beautifying the yards of the city. Arrangements were made to have L. A. Goodman, secretary of the State Horticultural Society, deliver a lecture in the near future on the small garden and the beautifying of yards. The lecture will be illustrated and free to the public.

James Hayes, Jr., son of the well known Topeka florist, is ill with an attack of tonsillitis. KAY SEE.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—A gardener has brought suit against Miss Helen Gould for injuries said to have been sustained through his spraying her fruit trees with an insecticide which poisoned him.

BALTIMORE.

Business the past two weeks has been more satisfactory all around. Roses and carnations have been clearing up from day to day. The rose market is perhaps in the best shape of any line, and the stock is generally pretty well cleaned up during the day; present prices are from $6 to $10 a hundred. There are plenty of all colored carnations, the supply equal to demand and prices firm on all good stock. Freesias are beginning to arrive; the pure white find ready sale, but the yellow tinted ones no one wants. Callas, Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are over-plentiful and hard to move at a decent price. We have had spring-like weather for the past couple of weeks.

NEW ORLEANS.

The State Horticultural Society opened its convention as announced January 25 and carried out the program as stated in one of my last reports. Major Behreman opened the ceremonies; the attendance was small, though the second day was better. The most practical and interesting paper was read by A. N. Athen, on the culture of cucumbers under glass. This business pays well in New Orleans; 60 degrees for night temperature and 80 degrees in the day time are required; blight is the only disease. Henry A. Athen has secured 160 acres above Southport, where every known equipment will be installed. Capital is $30,000. The hothouses already built cost him $16,000. Truck raising for some select vegetables is a very profitable industry around New Orleans.

Visitors in town: Henry A. Jones, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., of New York.

PACIFIC COAST.

ORNAMENTAL TREES.

It seems to be a recognized fact that the acreage devoted by nurseries to the growing of ornamental trees in California is by no means keeping pace either with the increasing demand or the destruction of native growths. The constant influx of settlers to our new country and the consequent devastation of many thousands of acres of magnificent oaks, redwoods and other magnificent evergreens, will result in a few years in a tremendous shortage of verdure, which even at the present time is becoming very noticeable to our eastern visitors. With the increase of wealth and the desire for handsome surroundings, and the fact that we have so few nurseries of size enough to cater to the demands sure to be made, the outlook is not bright for the beautification of our landscape and it will be but a short time until there is an entire absence of available stock.

It is indeed commendable that there are in existence at present, and also in the course of formation, many societies throughout this coast for no other purpose than to encourage the planting of trees. These have been principally directed toward the improvement of sidewalks and streets. That the newspapers are taking a healthy interest is greatly to the advantage of the state. Thus far, it has been possible for the local dealers to supply about all required for this sort of work, but on the same lines other committees are endeavoring to interest their various localities in the laying-out and planting of parks, as well as private domains, and it should not be overlooked by our local dealers that a great deal of large, heavy ornamental stock will certainly be required to plant them.

California is but a young state and our citizens have not previously given the subject of extensive improvements in the tree planting line much attention, but owing to the creditable efforts of our newspapers and magazines, the same public is becoming alive to the value of enhancing our natural charms by the addition of judicious foliage. We have heretofore planted flowering plants, roses and small shrubbery almost exclusively, and these are all steps in the right direction, but to make a lasting impression both for our own benefit and for the stranger within our gates, it behooves every one with a love for the beautiful to do his share to encourage the use of lasting evergreens.

I have spoken on this subject, it will be noticed, both from the standpoint of a grower with goods for sale, and as such see the pecuniary advantage of being able to share in the proceeds, and also from a strong fondness for the beautiful in nature, especially that portion pertaining to a growing tree or shrub, both of which are in order at this time.

The Market.

The rainy weather of last week has been succeeded by plenty of sunshine and warmth and as a result flowers of all kinds are somewhat earlier. Roses, while scarce enough, are being brought into town in larger quantities than at any time since Christmas, and the prospects are for continued good crops. Carnations are somewhat cheaper than they have been and the quality throughout is excellent. A few mums are still in the ring, but they have ceased to cut any figure. Narcissi and daffodils are surprisingly scarce for some reason and tulips are but little in evidence. Roman hyacinths and freesias are becoming more plentiful. Business is very fair, especially in the line of funeral work. Several large weddings are scheduled for the next few weeks, so stock of certain kinds will be in big demand.

Various Notes.

The Alameda Improvement Club, of Alameda, will plant out several miles of sycamore trees alternated with dracaenas along the sidewalks within the next few weeks.

Prof. Wickson, of Berkeley, is calling the attention of the authorities to the fact that there is great need for a forestry experimental station in California.

The Society Hortensia, of Oakland, had its regular bi-monthly meeting on Saturday evening of last week. Several interesting papers were read.

Wm. Barry, of Niles, has published his annual report as horticultural commissioner of Alameda county. He calls attention to the fact that the nursery and florist trade is in a very flourishing condition.

John H. Sievers & Co. are cutting an extra large and fine crop of their new carnation, Hannah Hobart, at present.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

EVERGREENS, by C. S. Harrison, York, Neb., a companion to his Peony Manual, has just been issued.

THE spring season will see stiffening prices on nearly all lines of clean, well grown nursery stock.

THE business in peach trees in the fall season of 1905 was the greatest of any autumn season to date.

THE discriminating planters are calling for the newer sorts of lilac in constantly greater number.

WHILE stocks of Baby Rambler rose are large, it is predicted that the supply will be far short of the spring demand.

THE Department of Agriculture has issued a pamphlet showing the organization of the Forest Service, what it is and how it deals with forest problems.

W. T. MANN, chairman of the committee on fruit statistics of the New York State Horticultural Society, figures the apple crop of the state in 1905 to have been about 17,000,000 barrels.

L. L. MAY & Co., St. Paul, will introduce this season a new Minnesota seedling apple, Minnetonka, for which it is claimed that it will restore the lost art of apple-growing in that state.

IN their local horticultural society in Orleans county, New York, 100 men each pledged themselves at one time to pay any sum required, pro rata, up to $10 each to fight the San Jose scale. Their motto is: "Better fight it out on the other man's place than ours."

W. L. WADDELL, an agent for the Henry Lake Sons Co., Black River Falls, Wis., has been arrested, charged with forging orders for nursery stock and securing the commissions on the sales. He recently visited Madison, Janesville and Beloit, Wis., and had just begun work at Rockford, Ill.

THERE was a meeting of the Texas Nurserymen's Association January 25, at Palestine, called by President E. W. Kirkpatrick and Secretary John S. Kerr for the purpose of preparing for the entertainment of the American Association of Nurserymen when it meets at Dallas in June. As the State Horticultural Society meets at the same place the same day, there was a good attendance. Texas proposes to do credit to Stanley Watson and his persuasive oratory.

MILLEPEDES.

I am sending you an insect and would like to know what it is. I have had a very fine crop of them. I have got them killed and the ground was covered with the dead by the million. They come out of the ground in the night and work on the foliage. E. H. G.

The insects in question are millepedes, of which there seems to be an unusual number this season, judging from the number of inquiries that have been received regarding them. The eggs of this insect are buried under the surface of the soil, and hatch out in a few weeks, and it is at this stage that they have appeared in such numbers. It is generally considered by scientists that the millepedes eat decayed vegetable matter chiefly, though we sometimes find them feeding upon the young growths and roots of certain plants. Strong nicotine vapor will kill many of these insects after they come to the surface of the ground.

LACKS RADIATION.

I have a house 18x102, eleven and a half feet to the ridge, 7-foot walls all exposed. The main 3-inch flow from the boiler to the house is twenty-five feet; that is, I run the 3-inch main that far before I enter the house. I then run four 2-inch flows from the 3-inch main overhead, and return in six 2-inch returns; some are under the benches and some are on the walls. The pipes are all both flows and returns, equally divided in the house. At the highest point, which is at the end of the greenhouse, are put cocks or air valves on the four flows. The pipes have a gradual incline toward the farthest end and slope gradually back to the boiler. This is the open tank system hot water. The tank is elevated about six feet from the highest point of the system to the bottom of tank; the boiler is rated for 9,000 feet of glass, with two 4-inch openings for flows and two 4-inch openings for returns. The other flow takes care of another house 18x102 and a lean-to 6x102, but does not keep warm anything great.

What I want to know is this: In zero weather I can only keep the temperature up to 40 degrees or 43 degrees. I want about 54 degrees. Have I enough main flow or would a larger main be better?

F. W. H.

From what you state of the quantity and arrangement of the piping in your house, you lack radiation. The 3-inch riser if not broken up into 2-inch subdivisions, should be large enough to supply the necessary radiation to maintain the desired temperature in the house. Your easiest plan would, in my judgment, be to continue the 3-inch riser to the most distant end of the house and there break it up to return by twelve 2-inch returns. The riser is large enough to supply this number of returns, which will furnish sufficient radiation to maintain the desired temperature. The four 2-inch pipes now used as risers can be dropped and used as returns. The additional pipe needed will be the 3-inch riser the length of the house and two additional runs of 2-inch the length of the house.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Propagation is in full swing at the establishment of the United States Cut Flower Co., and in spite of the gloomy weather we have had for the past eight weeks, stock is in good healthy condition. If E. G. Hill could see the Richmond rose, as grown under the supervision of Jas. J. Curran he would feel satisfied.

Fred La France reports fairly good business and notwithstanding the dark days George Barker still wears his sunny smile and is pushing things along right merrily.

H. N. Hoffman is supplying his customers with some fine carnations.

Altogether business looks rosy and the growers are only waiting for Old Sol to burn a hole through the clouds and get into action again, when they will be ready to meet all orders. J. E. S.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

The indications are that there will be great activity in this city in the spring, owing to the fact that three if not four of the rose growing concerns will be greatly enlarged. It is stated that the Bentley-Coatsworth Co. and Weiland & Olinger will each erect three new rose houses as soon as the weather will permit. Will Dittman will also build additions, but how many no one can say at the present time. It is also stated that the South Park Floral Co. will add to its large plant. This year has been quite successful for all of the greenhouse men.

Very few people realize what the greenhouses are to New Castle, many thousands of dollars are invested and many more thousands are paid out annually to employees and the money so expended, or a great portion of it at least, is kept here at home.

BOSKYDELL, ILL.—J. H. Bradley, proprietor of the Jackson County Nurseries, has sent out 20,000 catalogues to the trade.

WASHINGTON, PA.—At the recent meeting of the Washington Floral Co., J. M. Dickson was made president, and J. W. Warrick secretary-treasurer and manager.

NEW CARNATIONS

WINSOR, WHITE ENCHANTRESS AND HELEN M. GOULD

One way to judge Carnations is to see them on the exhibition tables. A better and more convincing way is to see them growing. There is nothing about any of these varieties that we wish to conceal; therefore we cordially invite all Carnation growers to pay us a visit. Come at any time.

WINSOR—This is sure to prove a winner. Nothing approaches it in color, which is a clear silvery pink—a shade between Enchantress and Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson—and much more beautiful than either. In fact it is just the shade that we have all been trying to get. The color will make it sell in any market. The stem is just right. The flowers are considerably larger than Lawson and much better shaped. As a grower it has everything that can be desired. So far we have not seen any large-flowering variety quite so free as Winsor.

WHITE ENCHANTRESS—This is a pure white sport of Enchantress, which is at once the most popular and most profitable carnation grown today, and this on account of its size and stem and freedom with which it blooms. White Enchantress is identical in every respect but color. Those who desire quality as well as quantity will find it in White Enchantress.

HELEN M. GOULD—This is a beautiful variegated sport of Enchantress. The ground color is a lovely shade of clear pink, the variegation carmine, making an exquisite combination of colors, besides being something distinctly new. At a short distance the variegation does not show at all, the general effect being a beautiful shade of dark pink. Growth, habit, size and stem are the same as Enchantress.

We have fine stocks, from which we can deliver healthy cuttings of Variegated Lawson, White Lawson, Red Lawson, Enchantress, Mrs. M. A. Patten, Lady Bountiful, etc.

Our Variegated Lawson is all that we claimed for it last season and is giving the fullest satisfaction everywhere—the best in the variegated class.

Come and inspect our stock of new and standard sorts for yourselves. Price list on application.

ANNOUNCEMENT

We, THE H. WEBER & SONS CO. of Oakland, Md., respectfully announce that The E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind., have withdrawn from the contract made with us last spring, whereby they would have jointly with us disseminated our new white carnation, My Maryland.

The variety has been on trial at Richmond (3000 plants), Brooklyn (300 plants), Philadelphia (1000 plants) and Toronto (1000 plants). Reports from the first two named places characterize the variety as being practically worthless, while from Toronto and Philadelphia favorable reports indicate that the variety is bearing out our claims for it.

Our own stock at Oakland is in elegant shape. An extremely wet summer necessitated the holding of stock in a semi-dormant condition after being housed, August 15 to September 1, thus making stock too late for the fall shows. Since December 1st we have been cutting grand blooms, and to prove our claims for the variety, we invite all interested to come to Oakland and look it over.

While it is a source of regret to us that the variety has not proved satisfactory in all places tried, we are satisfied that it will prove our claims for it in at least some places besides our own.

We therefore announce that we will disseminate My Maryland as per our advertisements, but before shipping any stock we give to each and every one the right to cancel all or any portion of their orders.

JESSICA,

we believe, will succeed everywhere. It is even better than last year. As a red and white variegated it has no competitors. Stock ready now.

Prices for both varieties—$2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

The Market.

The past week has not been the best in the world from the florists' point of view. Things seemed to drag a good deal and there was no life in the market. The demand was slack for all kinds of stock. There did not appear to be any special reason why it should be so, but every one was affected alike. The weather had something to do with it, I believe, as we have been having a spell of such as seldom comes at this time of year. It is now some colder than it was last week, still, it is far from what one is used to expect at this season of the year. This weather is making itself felt in the quality of stock; a good part of it is now soft and weak stemmed and consequently the price suffers.

There is an increase in the quantity of stock coming in. Carnations are coming in much heavier supply. Roses, also, are easily equal to the demand. Beauties are not in such good demand at times and, though there is not such a large supply of them, there is enough for all purposes. Short ones are going best. Violets are not doing so very well. Single ones are going for the best price. Bulbous stock of all kinds is now to be had. Dutch hyacinths made their first appearance this week and sold very well. Harrisii lilies have been moving slowly. Narcissi were in heavy supply and sold fairly well. Tulips moved nicely. Green goods are in good supply with but a moderate call.

Various Notes.

A week from Saturday our annual rose show will be held, and from present indications it will be a very good one. We are especially anxious that growers who have anything new send exhibits at this time. There will be many growers present.

Dick Witterstaetter was the only representative from this city at the carnation show and it is with considerable regret that we learn his stock did not arrive in shape to stage. Dick certainly suffered a great disappointment in this. He has not returned as yet and we have not heard the story from him, but thirty-six hours is too long to ship blooms for any purpose and it would have been a lucky thing for him if they had arrived in good shape.

George & Allan have had some trouble with their heating plant and had it not been for the mild weather the consequences might have been very bad; as it was, no serious damage was done.

Harry Bunyard, of A. T. Boddington, New York, was a caller. C. J. OHMER.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The past week has not been the best in the world from the florists' point of view. Things seemed to drag a good deal and there was no life in the market. The demand was slack for all kinds of stock. There did not appear to be any special reason why it should be so, but every one was affected alike. The weather had something to do with it, I believe, as we have been having a spell of such as seldom comes at this time of year. It is now some colder than it was last week, still, it is far from what one is used to expect at this season of the year. This weather is making itself felt in the quality of stock; a good part of it is now soft and weak stemmed and consequently the price suffers.

There is an increase in the quantity of stock coming in. Carnations are coming in much heavier supply. Roses, also, are easily equal to the demand. Beauties are not in such good demand at times and, though there is not such a large supply of them, there is enough for all purposes. Short ones are going best. Violets are not doing so very well. Single ones are going for the best price. Bulbous stock of all kinds is now to be had. Dutch hyacinths made their first appearance this week and sold very well. Harrisii lilies have been moving slowly. Narcissi were in heavy supply and sold fairly well. Tulips moved nicely. Green goods are in good supply with but a moderate call.

Various Notes.

A week from Saturday our annual rose show will be held, and from present indications it will be a very good one. We are especially anxious that growers who have anything new send exhibits at this time. There will be many growers present.

Dick Witterstaetter was the only representative from this city at the carnation show and it is with considerable regret that we learn his stock did not arrive in shape to stage. Dick certainly suffered a great disappointment in this. He has not returned as yet and we have not heard the story from him, but thirty-six hours is too long to ship blooms for any purpose and it would have been a lucky thing for him if they had arrived in good shape.

George & Allan have had some trouble with their heating plant and had it not been for the mild weather the consequences might have been very bad; as it was, no serious damage was done.

Harry Bunyard, of A. T. Boddington, New York, was a caller. C. J. OHMER.

NEWTON HIGHLANDS, MASS.

I have a place consisting of only two houses. One house is for carnations and measures 23x90 feet. It holds 2,000 plants, which are of extra fine quality. In regard to the famous Lawson, I have heard many times that it has fallen back; that it is losing its vitality. I think it is better with me this year than ever. The color is excellent and its flowering is as free as a weed since the first of September. I think most people root their cuttings in too warm a place. I root mine in the violet house, where the temperature is oftener 40 degrees than it is 50 degrees, no bottom heat whatever. I give them all the time they want, about two months, and I get about eighty per cent. They do not string out again tender and soft plants. When I box them I put them out in frames as early as possible, as it hardens them off before setting out in the ground. They make excellent plants during the summer.

I also grow the following well known varieties: Fair Maid, Enchantress, Boston Market and The Queen. I think the latter is a fine plant. I have also a few seedlings which promise well.

In regard to violets, I grow Campbell and Princess of Wales. I also take an early crop of chrysanthemums out of this house before I put in violets.

Business has been very good this season.
P. J. MELIA.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The following attended the annual show in Boston: S. S. Peckham and wife; R. H. Woodhouse; Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, and August Jahn, who is exhibiting his new white carnation. It is an exceedingly large flower. He has been experimenting with it and says he has it at perfection.

Business is dull and flowers are plentiful.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The transaction of business here was much larger during the past week than probably any since the holidays, the demand seeming to be for almost everything. Carnations and roses were very scarce, which of course kept the prices high. Even violets kept out of sight toward the end of the week, and their demand caused some anxiety. Medium Beauties were very prominent; the cause, in general, being the exercises at the many schools, but that they were available was a point to the good. Red roses sold lively also for that purpose.

Much design work was in evidence during the past week, which helped to swell the business, and also afforded an outlet for much of the bulbous stock, together with azaleas. The market was kept busy supplying the demand for the calla lily, the past week showing a marked improvement in its use. Dutch hyacinths and tulips of the different colors have made their appearance, and a large number are being sold. Their use in the flat bouquet is popular.

The daffodil, Yellow Spur, came in for much appreciation, its color and size taking well with the people. Orchids were also used to some extent, but their supply was limited.

This week started off well and the outlook is good. Carnations were more plentiful Monday, but perhaps its being McKinley day was the reason. That day seemed a failure here with the displaying point in view, and carnations were not as popular as the president was on election day.

Various Notes.

Last week Boston was the center of attraction. B. Schroeter sent a number of his rose-pink Enchantress, only a few being available on account of the unfavorable weather conditions.

With the holiday business still fresh in our minds, we find in most every day's mail, cards announcing the coming of traveling salesmen, which means get ready for more holidays.

C. B. Knickmann, traveling for Me-Hutchinson & Co., of New York, spent several days in Detroit.

John Van Leeuwen, representing J. Van Leeuwen & Son, and Mr. Beerhorst, of Beerhorst & Son, both of Sassenheim, Holland, reached Detroit last week and brought news of much business throughout the States.

DENVER.

The Market.

The continued mild weather has affected the retail trade in general, but the flower business keeps on about the same, although the past week was not up to the preceding one. Grand opera was the charm that lured society from the drawing rooms this week and many guests from out of town were entertained at Denver homes and there were many dinners for these guests, all of which used flowers, more or less.

Roses have continued to hold their own pretty well, for the cut of these is not the heaviest. Some of the largest growers have their Beauties off crop and the quantity of select stock coming in is much smaller. A few select reach $50, a more popular grade going at $35. Brides and Maids have made $8 to $10 for good stock, but there are rather too many second and third grades coming in.

There is not much change in prices of carnations, about $3 to $4 being as much as select stock has brought, a few fancies selling higher.

There are plenty to go around but there is much poor grade stock, one store selling at retail last Saturday at 35 cents a dozen. Violets are coming in much more abundantly, and have taken a slump in prices, the best making 75 cents per hundred and ordinary, 50 cents a hundred. Tulips are arriving in a greater variety, some colored ones appearing, and good prices are realized for them. Some fine plants are seen at the different shops; viz., azaleas, begonias, etc.

Various Notes.

The Alpha Floral Co. is in its new store, with a new coat of paint inside and out, new ice box and more floor room, as well as basement. They are in much better shape to attend to their customers' wants.

There are three holidays or anniversaries next month, Lincoln's birthday, St. Valentine's day and Washington's birthday, all three of which are observed, more or less, here, St. Valentine's day, especially, calling for a large number of violets. Mr. Peterson and Mr. Dankworth are cutting some extra select ones now and say they will have a fine lot for February 14.

J. A. Valentine is still in the east, having been in attendance at the American Carnation Society at Boston, reading a paper on the carnation in the Rocky Mountains. He is expected back the coming week.

"What, buy material from an outside firm? Not I.
For twenty years I have purchased my greenhouse

We would like to tell him why our material is

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally suc-

wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of

ABOUT THIS IRON

That goes into the castings of the B.-H.-P. Co.'s houses

Now there is just as much difference in iron as there is in anything else—especially a difference in price—some iron has greater bearing strength, stands sudden changes of temperature, with less cracking liability.

Then there is the question of SCRAP for castings: Now iron is at its best in its first casting, when all the parts unite freely, evenly and with their greatest strength. Put that casting to certain strains and just that much strength is taken from it. Melting it up and re-casting cannot give it back that strength, neither will that casting be as fine in its granulations.

The finer the granulations are, the stronger the iron, the less the action of rust upon it.

Every iron part, from the foot piece up, that goes into our houses is high-class.

This is a good starting point to think over about our houses—you knew there was a difference in Cypress but you never thought the difference in iron made any difference—but it does.

Next week we shall talk over with you the matter of cast-iron foot pieces—the holding parts of our houses.

WHAT THE GROWER SAYS ABOUT IT

KENNET SQUARE, PA., Jan. 5, 1906.

MESSRS. A. B. DAVIS & SON, Purcellville, Va.

GENTLEMEN:—Replying to yours of the 4th inst. will say, we consider Red Sport by far the best red we are growing. Have not had a bursted flower yet, notwithstanding plants have been blooming since November 15. The stem and color are fine and it is wonderfully productive.

Very truly, WM. SWAYNE.

WHAT THE RETAILER SAYS ABOUT IT

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 19, 1906.

MESSRS. A. B. DAVIS & SON, Purcellville, Va.

GENTLEMEN:—We have handled and watched the Red Sport Carnation for more than two years, and we wish to say that we think just as much of it today as ever. We find it one of the very best, if not the best, commercial scarlet Carnation of today.

Very truly yours, GUDE BROS CO.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Geranium.

We often get inquiries about the common, ever-popular zonal geranium and will repeat our treatment at this time of the year. They were shifted from 2-inch to 3-inch pots early in January, or as soon as the rush and clean-up after the holidays were over. By this time they have drawn up and are sufficiently grown that most of them will give a cutting. Pass them over the bench carefully and those with four or five joints will afford a cutting, but never cripple or injure the plant for the sake of producing another. If the little plant will be left with only one pair of leaves, and perhaps not more than an inch of stem, do not attempt to take a cutting. Only pinch out the slightest part of the leader to induce a lateral growth.

We always propagate several thousands from these fall struck plants and have many times found at the bedding time they were small and stunted, but always in flower and in that condition would make good bedding plants, but not large enough to satisfy our customers, who have little knowledge of a plant's future and only judge by present appearances.

The cause of this failure was that when these small plants were well rooted in the 2-inch pots, we had, with the pressure of work, neglected to shift them into their flowering pots, with us a 3½-inch. This was a great mistake. The roots had become crowded; nothing more to feed on, and were no longer working. Six weeks after putting these cuttings into 2-inch pots they will have sent out active working roots, and then is the time to shift them into their flowering pots, and they will make almost as good plants as those propagated in September or October.

The cultural directions are brief. Use a heavy loam with a fourth of sifted manure. Make the soil solid around the base of the cuttings and place them on the lightest bench. After the first thorough watering only water when they are decidedly on the dry side.

Narcissus Golden Spur.

We have discovered, more by accident than design, that the grand narcissus, Golden Spur, can be forced easily to be in flower by January 15 and perhaps, with a little greater effort, several days earlier. We force Trumpet Major and it is not easy to get flowers before February 1. Golden Spur is much easier, more attractive in color and far more beautiful in every way. This may be no news to the old heads, but it was to us. See that you get a liberal quantity of it.

Azalea Hexe.

In ordering your azaleas from the Belgian or domestic gentlemen see that they give you some Hexe for Christmas forcing. This is altogether the most desirable Christmas variety. Its color is brilliant, it does not drop its flowers, is of compact habit and forces without great heat. Demand that your order shall be ten per cent Hexe.

Forcing Valley.

The same old scribe that is now scribbling has often written his opinion on how to make a bed for forcing lily of the valley, and we are absolutely certain we know how. A younger generation did not want to go to so much trouble and pursued a different plan with such great success that I feel it my duty to comment upon it. Remember that I fully realize that where a large number of this sweet flower is forced the method I am about to describe would be fussy and laborious, but there are thousands of florists who force only a few thousands, and to have a few all the time is more profitable than to have a thousand today and none next Saturday.

Put twenty-five roots into an 8-inch azalea pot, or half pot, as it is sometimes called. Use ordinary potting soil or loam in preference to sand, because it does not dry out as quickly. Do not cut anything off the roots. Manage to get them all into the soil. Place the pots on the top of the hot-water pipes, but raised above the pipes by two thin strips of wood. Keep moist and if too much light penetrates below the benches hang curtains on the edge of the bench. By this method we have raised for the past four weeks the finest of spikes of valley and it is suited to a small grower who has not the facilities for making a special bed. When fully developed you can bring the pots up to full light, which will give color to the foliage and harden the flowers.

Gas and Red Spider.

I notice some one has been grumbling that hydrocyanic acid gas does not kill red spider. Of course! No one should expect it to. The red spider has a proboscis, or nose, which it has the faculty of burying deep in the tissues of the plant it infects and is oblivious to the fumes of the acid.

Years ago this gas killed C. W. Ward's cat, that was snoozing under a greenhouse bench, and the odor lingered long. Mr. C. W. thought it was the odor of the gas, when it was really only the Thomas.

Anything that breathes the gas dies quicker than a jiffy, but it is useless against the things that don't breathe it.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Committee Meeting.

There was a meeting of many of the officers and directors of the Society of American Florists at Boston, January 25. An informal discussion was had as to the plans for the advancement of the society's interests during the present year. It was determined that March 5 would be the most convenient date for the annual meeting of the board of directors, to be held this year at Dayton. A call to that effect will doubtless be issued in due season.

PANSIES AND FORGET-ME-NOTS.

When would be the best time to take up pansies and forget-me-nots to have them in flower for Easter? Would 50 degrees temperature at night be all right?

F. E. V.

You can lift pansies from the bed any time now when the ground is thawed. Pansies are often very disappointing in the winter months. Plant them on a bed near the glass; or, in other words, where they can get the most perfect light and every ray of sunshine. If too cool they will not flower enough to pay for the trouble. Fifty degrees at night is about right. If you have not a bed or bench suitable, then put them in 5-inch pots and place the pots on a hanging shelf near the glass, where we have seldom seen them fail to flower.

We have no experience in lifting forget-me-nots and would scarcely think it worth while to lift the little common species that flowers so profusely outdoors in May, as you would only get one burst of bloom and that not very desirable. There is a species of myosotis which we grew for many years and have dropped simply through neglect or indifference. We planted it in the fall on the edge of carnation beds. It flowered throughout the winter and with great profusion in April and May. Its specific name is unknown to us. We will have to ascertain and then write more about, for it is valuable. W. S.

TO EXTERMINATE WHITE FLY.

Can you give us the formula for using the fumigation to exterminate the white fly? W. T. B.

It seems to be pretty well determined that the only antidote or destroyer for this little pest is hydrocyanic acid gas. The best formula we have found for this, and which is a modification of several we have heard of, is: One pint water, one pint sulphuric acid, two and one-half ounces of cyanide of potassium. This is for 1,000 cubic feet of atmosphere in your greenhouse, and keep your ventilators closed all night.

The pint of sulphuric acid should not be equal in bulk to a pint of water, but only equal in weight to a pint of water, because the acid is much heavier than water. This is easily done by two cups or cans of equal weight and a pair of scales. The above will destroy the fly and hurt nothing that does not breathe. W. S.

plan by employing not more than one additional green with the foliage belonging to the flower.

As to size of basket with regard to the quantity of flowers, have a smaller basket full and running over rather than a large one scantily filled. One of the charms of a well arranged basket is the impression of a superabundance of flowers.

Suppose two very different kinds of flowers are to be used, taking an extreme case for example: American Beauties and pansies might illustrate the point. Select a shallow, low basket. Fill in the body of the basket with the pansies stemmed long with their own foliage. Tie a moderate size cluster of the roses in the handle, allowing one or two to fall downward and rest on the pansy patch beneath. It would be easy to make such a cluster too heavy in such a case. From this illustration gather that the proper relationship of flowers and foliage of different habits of growth should be given a position in accord with the same inclinations.

Treatment of Handles.

In the treatment of handles, there is a great diversity of styles. A large simple cluster, two opposite clusters, a garland running its whole length, a bow of ribbons into which are tied two or three choice flowers, a green spray only, a close wrapping of silk or ribbon, a drapery of chiffon and slender green sprays, are only a beginning of the many attractive ways of garnishing basket handles. Possibly the one thing to avoid most of all, is the heavy appearance caused by the use of too much material.

To recapitulate the whole subject, do not attempt Chinese puzzle effects in color. Never plant a celery bed in your basket, but be content if you can trace a resemblance between your finished product and a good full hill of potatoes with some straggling weeds not forgotten.

A LANSING STORE.

A new flower store was recently opened at 333 North Washington avenue under the name of the Lansing Floral Co. While not finished in marble and mahogany, it is nevertheless tastily fitted up and bears evidence of good judgment and up-to-date methods.

The show window is fitted up after the style of Cleveland stores, although

BASKET ARRANGEMENT.

The everlasting fitness of certain flowers to certain styles and sizes of baskets is not always considered sufficiently in the selection of the "make-up" of a basket. Upon deciding as to the kind and color of flower or flowers to be used, the next question is to select the basket best adapted to display the stock. Time was when short and long stemmed flowers all looked the same to the designer; but it is happily no longer the case. If possible use the flowers as they are; if long, find a basket suitable for them, rather than denude them of foliage and stem. To avoid loading the handle, select a basket which has plenty of room, and start a generous cluster at the base of one side of the handle. Let it taper one-half or two-thirds of the way around the handle, falling toward the other base. In a simple cluster like this all the flowers should take the same direction, or in other words, be headed the same way. Or have two clusters, one starting at either side of the handle, and reaching toward each other, but not touching, at their tips.

If two styles of flowers are to be used, fill the body of the basket with the low growing flower, and use the longer all on the handle, potted or cut ferns alone filling the basket itself and a graceful spray of flowers over the handle is a good basket design.

Basket Selected First.

Sometimes, the basket is selected first, and one is confronted with the question, what flowers would be best to fill the basket? The color, shape and make-up of the basket must be sized up at a glance; also the available stock and accessories. Suppose it is a low basket without a base or handles. American Beauties in such a receptacle would induce a most uneasy feeling in a spectator, simply because their weight of stem and foliage would overtop the base—while the same basket filled with Roman hyacinths, violets or pansies might be a delight to look upon. Don't attempt to trim a handle basket with such flowers as violets, pansies, valley or such small stock in any other style than a knot or short clusters.

Do not attempt a trailing spray as with roses.

Beware of many kinds of flowers and foliage. By "many" is meant more than two kinds. To be perfectly safe, if not sure of even the two color combination, use one color alone. It is absolutely necessary to have a knowledge of color, and the best way to obtain the same is to take a short course in painting and color blending; no amount of instruction in type can give one a definite conception of coloring.

Care in Color Mixtures.

Be careful, not only of color mixtures in the flowers, but in the green also. Roses require very little extra foliage; if a light touch is needed use that green which harmonizes best with the foliage of the rose; for instance, for American Beauties, select the dark green of Asparagus plumosus or a well developed dark adiantum like Croweanum. Avoid Asparagus Sprengeri and Adiantum Farleyense as being too yellow. Use the latter freely with Ivory, Golden Gate, Bridesmaid or Killarney. With violets, use the dark olive or myrtle greens. Do not use smilax and asparagus together if it can be avoided. Simplify the color the fret work is an original pattern. The walls of the store are finished in dark green with drop ceiling of a yellow pattern, while the woodwork, counters, ice box and other furniture are finished in white. Electric lights fitted in a white moulding on the side walls eight feet from the floor on the line where the green and yellow meet, distribute the light quite evenly and produce a very pretty effect at night. The ice box set in white lattice-work in the center of the store has a double oval glass in the front and when lighted up inside, the contents are visible from the street. To the left of it is a cozy office, while to the right is a neat work room, each being separated from the store room by red draperies.

It was my pleasure to be present on the evening of the opening, which was a great success. The attendance was large, as the public had been invited through the city papers. Visitors were presented with a rose and souvenir card, and an orchestra sent forth sweet music from behind a screen of southern smilax.

The show window was very attractive, being trimmed with pink and white mums, streamers and bows of ribbon to match and Boston ferns. A standing sheaf of wheat filled with Chatenay roses was a feature of the display. The side walls of the store were decorated with garlands of green and southern smilax to which were fastened artificial white and yellow mums. Southern smilax and red roses adorned the white lattice-work over the ice box. Banks of palms and ferns, tall vases of mums and other cut flowers, also several floral pieces, were arranged about the room and made a pretty background. Among the pieces was a large floral horseshoe from Cleveland friends.

The Lansing Floral Co. is composed of young men, with Wm. R. Degner, of Cleveland, as manager. The store is not only a credit to this young, enterprising firm but to Lansing as well. Upon being told that the store was a bare room without any fixtures at the time possession was taken and that it was fitted up in the short space of two weeks, the transformation seemed almost incredible.

A McKINLEY WINDOW.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken January 29 at the Main street establishment of W. J. Palmer, Buffalo, N. Y. It is remarkable, not only from the fact that it shows a very elaborate and effective decoration, but also from the fact that the photograph is taken through the plate-glass window and shows the decoration in exceptionally good style. Such a photograph taken through glass usually shows more reflection of the buildings on the opposite side of the street than it does of the display within the window.

Buffalo is one of the cities in which McKinley day has been of increasing importance ever since it became an institution. Buffalo is the city in which McKinley met his death and her citizens have done possibly more than those of any other community save Canton, O., in remembrance of him upon his birthday. Such decorations as this of Mr. Palmer's cannot fail to impress the public and, for his own part, Mr. Palmer finds such a decoration amply paid for, not only by the comment it creates, but by the direct business which it brings.

TIME TO SOW ALYSSUM.

I would like to know if this is the right time to sow sweet alyssum, verbenas and phlox as this is my first season in growing plants. I have always bought them wholesale. I would like to have the above plants in bloom by the middle of May. Please state the usual way of planting and bringing those plants to perfection.

D. P. C.

Sweet alyssum is not an annual and the seed will only produce the single form. The little, single, dwarf variety is always raised from the seed, but the most useful of all the alyssums is the double variety. It is good for baskets, vases and veranda boxes. It is largely grown in winter for cutting and is very useful in designs. It is always propagated by cuttings. Verbenas you can sow now or very shortly.

As to the other plant mentioned, we think Phlox Drummondii is meant, the showy and lasting annual. Sow phlox from March 1 to March 15.

SOWING CYCLAMEN.

Is it yet time to sow cyclamen seed so as to have them in bloom in 4-inch pots by Christmas, 1906? If not, tell me the right time to sow.

Also tell me the time to sow Primula obconica so as to have them for the fall wholesale trade.

S. A. P.

It is late for cyclamens. The best time to sow is from October 1 until January 1. Cyclamens are very slow the first few months of their growth. Still, you might sow at once and have them in bloom a year from now. Our cyclamens are now in flats with a pair of leaves as large as silver quarters and bulbs the size of large peas.

Primula obconica, if you want well flowered plants in November, should be sown in April or, at least, early May.

grew for many years and have dropped simply through neglect or indifference. We planted it in the fall on the edge of carnation beds. It flowered throughout the winter and with great profusion in April and May. Its specific name is unknown to us. We will have to ascertain and then write more about, for it is valuable. W. S.

TO EXTERMINATE WHITE FLY.

Can you give us the formula for using the fumigation to exterminate the white fly? W. T. B.

It seems to be pretty well determined that the only antidote or destroyer for this little pest is hydrocyanic acid gas. The best formula we have found for this, and which is a modification of several we have heard of, is: One pint water, one pint sulphuric acid, two and one-half ounces of cyanide of potassium. This is for 1,000 cubic feet of atmosphere in your greenhouse, and keep your ventilators closed all night.

The pint of sulphuric acid should not be equal in bulk to a pint of water, but only equal in weight to a pint of water, because the acid is much heavier than water. This is easily done by two cups or cans of equal weight and a pair of scales. The above will destroy the fly and hurt nothing that does not breathe. W. S.

plan by employing not more than one additional green with the foliage belonging to the flower.

As to size of basket with regard to the quantity of flowers, have a smaller basket full and running over rather than a large one scantily filled. One of the charms of a well arranged basket is the impression of a superabundance of flowers.

Suppose two very different kinds of flowers are to be used, taking an extreme case for example: American Beauties and pansies might illustrate the point. Select a shallow, low basket. Fill in the body of the basket with the pansies stemmed long with their own foliage. Tie a moderate size cluster of the roses in the handle, allowing one or two to fall downward and rest on the pansy patch beneath. It would be easy to make such a cluster too heavy in such a case. From this illustration gather that the proper relationship of flowers and foliage of different habits of growth should be given a position in accord with the same inclinations.

Treatment of Handles.

In the treatment of handles, there is a great diversity of styles. A large simple cluster, two opposite clusters, a garland running its whole length, a bow of ribbons into which are tied two or three choice flowers, a green spray only, a close wrapping of silk or ribbon, a drapery of chiffon and slender green sprays, are only a beginning of the many attractive ways of garnishing basket handles. Possibly the one thing to avoid most of all, is the heavy appearance caused by the use of too much material.

To recapitulate the whole subject, do not attempt Chinese puzzle effects in color. Never plant a celery bed in your basket, but be content if you can trace a resemblance between your finished product and a good full hill of potatoes with some straggling weeds not forgotten.

A new flower store was recently opened at 333 North Washington avenue under the name of the Lansing Floral Co. While not finished in marble and mahogany, it is nevertheless tastily fitted up and bears evidence of good judgment and up to date methods.

The show window is fitted up after the style of Cleveland stores, although

BASKET ARRANGEMENT.

The everlasting fitness of certain flowers to certain styles and sizes of baskets is not always considered sufficiently in the selection of the "make-up" of a basket. Upon deciding as to the kind and color of flower or flowers to be used, the next question is to select the basket best adapted to display the stock. Time was when short and long stemmed flowers all looked the same to the designer; but it is happily no longer the case. If possible use the flowers as they are; if long, find a basket suitable for them, rather than denude them of foliage and stem. To avoid loading the handle, select a basket which has plenty of room, and start a generous cluster at the base of one side of the handle. Let it taper one-half or two-thirds of the way around the handle, falling toward the other base. In a simple cluster like this all the flowers should take the same direction, or in other words, be headed the same way. Or have two clusters, one starting at either side of the handle, and reaching toward each other, but not touching, at their tips.

If two styles of flowers are to be used, fill the body of the basket with the low growing flower, and use the longer all on the handle, potted or cut ferns alone filling the basket itself and a graceful spray of flowers over the handle is a good basket design.

Basket Selected First.

Sometimes, the basket is selected first, and one is confronted with the question, what flowers would be best to fill the basket? The color, shape and make up of the basket must be sized up at a glance; also the available stock and accessories. Suppose it is a low basket with out a base or handles. American Beauties in such a receptacle would induce a most uneasy feeling in a spectator, simply because their weight of stem and foliage would overtop the base, while the same basket filled with Roman hyacinths, violets or pansies might be a delight to look upon. Don't attempt to trim a handle basket with such flowers as violets, pansies, valley or such small stock in any other style than a knot or short clusters.

Do not attempt a trailing spray as with roses.

Beware of many kinds of flowers and foliage. By "many" is meant more than two kinds. To be perfectly safe, if not sure of even the two color combination, use one color alone. It is absolutely necessary to have a knowledge of color, and the best way to obtain the same is to take a short course in painting and color blending; no amount of instruction in type can give one a definite conception of coloring.

CARRYING BEAUTIES OVER.

We have a house of American Beauties planted last August, blooming now and in good condition. We wish to carry these over for another season. When should they be rested, and for how long, to bring them in bloom again sometime between next Thanksgiving day and Christmas? Should they be pruned close to the ground? Ought they to be occasionally syringed while they are resting? I would like to have full description of the treatment they ought to have from the time we commence to rest them.

A. J. N.

While not advocating the carrying of Beauties for a second season, I have yet seen some fair results from the practice. The method adopted in these cases by reference to records was as follows.

By the beginning of June they should be partially rested by withholding water for a week or so where raised benches are in use and for a longer period if the benches are solid, using just as much water as is necessary to hold spider in check, but never allowing them to become so dry that the soft tips of the young wood shows wilting. During this ripening process they must have an abundance of air, keeping the ventilators open night and day. A judicious pruning out of all useless wood, especially of long wood running blind, in order to divert the flow of sap to those eyes at the base of the plant which may have remained dormant, is advisable.

The surface of the soil, or as much of it as can be removed without interfering with the roots, should be taken off and the exposed portions given a dusting of air-slaked lime. To replace this soil, a compost of rich loam three parts to one of decomposed cow manure, thoroughly incorporated, should be used, and the whole bed should be thoroughly soaked. Keep the house as near 56 degrees as the weather will permit and use the syringe freely. As soon as root action has commenced, the ordinary treatment for Beauties will suffice.

ROSE BETTY.

One of last year's introductions in England was the hybrid tea rose Betty. Of this the Gardeners' Chronicle says it is "a rose of great merit, especially remarkable for its great depth and stoutness of petal; semi-double; the first probably of a new type. The flowers are borne on long-jointed wood, and stand erect. It is primarily a decorative rose, but, like Killarney, we may hope to see a bloom sufficiently full to warrant it a place in the exhibition stand. The growth is vigorous, with branching habit, very free flowering. One can hardly venture to describe its color, it is so variable. One bud will remind one of a deep-petalled Safrano, while another will be more golden and less copery. There is a great deal of tea in its constitution. As a long-stalked rose for house-decoration Betty is decidedly good."

BEST RED ROSE.

Of Liberty and Meteor, which is the better and freer bloomer? At what temperature should they be kept? Should they be ventilated the same as Brides, Maids and Gates? W. K. H.

Meteor is the most free blooming, but to do this rose well it requires a night temperature of 68 degrees and consequently should have a house devoted wholly to it. The high temperature required will of course make it a little more expensive to grow and will also demand greater care in keeping down such insects as red spider, green-fly, etc.

Liberty is a very fine rose and when properly handled is hard to beat, but even in the hands of experts it has proved so erratic that it has in many places been discarded.

Richmond, which gives fair promise of superseding all other reds, is a very easy doer, free bloomer and thrives well in the same temperature as Maids and Brides. It also seems to be less susceptible to fungoid troubles, can stand more feeding, and is less sensitive to under or overwatering than either Maids or Brides. Ventilation requires the same study and practice with this variety.

THE SOW BUG.

I started in last March to grow roses and carnations and have noticed on rose benches that at night they are literally covered with what I call wood-lice or sow bugs, also what we called thousand-leg worms or bugs that disappear at daylight. What I wish to ask is, do these bugs injure the roses in any way by eating off the tender bottom shoots as they appear or even under the surface or otherwise? If they do, how do you get rid of them? L. I. N.

The sow bug (Oniscus Aspidiotus) is very destructive in a greenhouse, as they live principally on the tender outer skin of vegetables and are very fond of rose petals. They can be quickly destroyed by arsenic if they can be coaxed to eat it. A preparation which I have used for many years with success is composed as follows: Bran middlings finely sifted, sixty parts; Paris green, one part; mix thoroughly and spread lightly along the side-boards. The sweetness of the bran seems to attract them and one or two doses a week will soon clear them out. A sprinkling of gas lime on the walks and under the benches will also expel them from their haunts.

The thousand-legged worm does not injure the plants, strictly confining its operations to the manure in the soil and mulch and helping to pulverize it, so that it may be the more readily converted into food for the plants. RIBES.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Potting Cuttings.

Those cuttings you put in sand in December will likely be ready to pot now, and as soon as they are well rooted you should lose no time in potting them. After a cutting is well rooted it does not improve by remaining in the sand; in fact, it is liable to draw up and weaken because there is little nourishment in the sand and usually the cuttings set in the sand too close together to spread out much; hence, the drawing upward, the only direction they can grow.

Before potting, you should ripen them just a little by giving them more sunlight than they had while they were rooting. In fact, this should be begun as soon as they begin to shove out the roots. Gradually give them a little more sun each day, until, by the time the roots are strong enough to pot them, they will be able to stand the full sun on a bright day. There will be less wilting and suffering after potting and the young plants will take hold much quicker. Cuttings that are potted during January and early February should be potted in 2-inch pots and shifted in March to 3-inch. This is where many growers make their mistake and they would be much better off with a cutting taken out of the sand early in March than with these early struck cuttings. Room is scarce and other work is crowding on most places during March and as the young plants look healthy they are just left in the small pots until planting out time.

During the last few weeks before planting out, when the sun is quite warm and evaporation is rapid, the young plants which are very pot-bound, dry out severely and become stunted as a result. It is too late to repot them then, because they would not even root through by the time they should be planted out, much less recover from the stunt in growth. That is the one thing in favor of planting the cuttings in flats or on a bench in two and a half inches of soil. They will not become stunted, though, as a general proposition, pot culture is much to be preferred. So, pot them into small pots and in light soil so they will become established quickly and ready to shift into larger pots, when you can use a heavier soil to make a strong, robust plant, with close joints and leathery foliage.

Use Fresh Soil.

Use fresh soil that has been exposed to the weather and, to lighten it, add a little sand and old rotten manure from the hotbed if you have it. Screen it through a  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch mesh screen and see that it is about right in moisture. It should be so that it will press together well when potting, but it should not be too wet to crumble readily. This is important. If it is too dry it will draw the moisture from the plants and cause wilting and you will find it difficult to water so it will penetrate to the bottom of the pot. If it is too wet it will pack and bake when it gets dry and no plant will thrive in it.

When taking the cuttings from the sand give them a slight shake to shake the sand from the roots. Don't take out more than you can pot in an hour or two, as it does them no good to stand around with the roots exposed. Keep the box containing them covered. When potting, do not pot too deep, as deep potting tends to rotting at the stem. If the root crown is a half inch below the surface of the soil it is deep enough to hold the plant upright and that is all you want. The roots naturally grow downward. Press the soil firmly and do not fill the pots too full, but be sure there is a little loose soil on top to prevent baking. Water them as soon after potting as practical and be sure the water penetrates to the bottom of the pot. If the soil is in the proper state, filling the pots once should be enough. An hour or two after watering turn one of them out of the pot and see whether it went to the bottom. If it did not, then water again immediately. After that water only when needed to keep the soil fairly moist, not wet. The plants will be healthier and stronger if watered moderately, especially during cloudy weather. Set on a light bench where they will get the full sunlight all day if possible. Many growers err along this line by using the worst bench on the whole place for their young stock. Naturally, the plants on that bench are poorer than the rest and these are pulled up to make room.

Are Next Season's Crop.

If you will but bear in mind that these young plants are your next season's stock and that everything you do for them from the beginning will have its effect next winter, you will see the wisdom in giving them every advantage possible. True, they will have all spring and summer to recover and grow, but don't you think a young plant in the pink of condition will make a better plant than one that has been neglected and stunted or drawn up? Look after them and top them after they are planted in the field, so that you may have good plants by housing time. Close attention and good care before planting them out will save you much work and worry while they are in the field. A sturdy, healthy plant will break more readily when topped and will stand upright better than a weakly one. So give them the best bench on the place if you can.

After potting, shade them from the sun for a few days. We lay newspapers over them. This keeps the sun off and at the same time checks evaporation by keeping drafts away. After the third day, put them on a little later and take off a little earlier each day, until by the end of a week they can take the full sun all day. There will be dry spots here and there and along the edge to be touched up with the sprinkling can. Do this in the morning before placing on the papers and keep the foliage dry at night, the same as you do on the blooming plants. The temperature should be the same, or a few degrees less than you keep your blooming plants in; 48 degrees to 50 degrees is about ideal for the young plants.

Not Too Late for Good Plants.

If you have not put in your cuttings yet, don't fear that you are too late to get good plants. Cuttings put in sand now, or within the next few weeks, will make as good plants by August 1 as any one could wish for if given proper care right through. In fact these cuttings are less liable to meet with any check before being planted out than the earlier struck cuttings, and in many cases will outstrip them by fall. Propagation from now on will require a little more skill than during the last two months on account of the stronger sunlight and more ventilation required to keep the houses at the proper temperature. If you put in a second batch on the same bench and if the previous batch rooted perfectly and you were careful to remove all dead foliage, roots, etc., you can use the lower half of the sand again by replacing the upper half with fresh sand. But if there was any damping off or trouble of any kind you would better renew it all and whitewash the bench besides.

The cuttings now will be strong and will take less time to root than during the last two months. In fact, they will be better in every way except for this slight lateness. I will have more to say about caring for late struck cuttings shortly.

ADHERING OF SHOOTS.

Please tell me the cause of the tips of carnation shoots adhering instead of opening naturally; also give a remedy. The worst cases were in a group in a bed of Boston Market, but some were in a bed of Lawson. Tips thus affected immediately form a weak flower bud. Also give directions for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas for red spider.

J. W. C.

This adhering of the leaves on the young shoots is not so common at this time of the year as it is in the fall. A few weeks after housing, when new growth commences, and especially if the soil is very rich, some varieties will show this kind of growth a good deal. For that reason I think it is caused by a quick, perhaps unnatural, growth after a severe check to the plant. Mrs. Joost is especially prone to this trouble. At this time of the year this condition might be caused by the plants being kept on the dry side too much and then mulched and watered heavily; also, if the soil happened to become dry at the bottom of the bench and left in that state for some time, and then watered heavily, perhaps with manure water; in fact, I might say too liberal treatment when the plants are not in condition to appreciate it. The remedy would be a return to rational treatment, eliminating all stimulants for a time. A light dusting of lime over the

I started in last March to grow roses and carnations and have noticed on rose benches that at night they are literally covered with what I call wood-lice or sow bugs, also what we called thousand-leg worms or bugs that disappear at daylight. What I wish to ask is, do these bugs injure the roses in any way by eating off the tender bottom shoots as they appear or even under the surface or otherwise? If they do, how do you get rid of them?

L. I. N.

The sow bug (Oniscus Aspidio) is very destructive in a greenhouse, as they live principally on the tender outer skin of vegetables and are very fond of rose petals. They can be quickly destroyed by arsenic if they can be coaxed to eat it. A preparation which I have used for many years with success is composed as follows: Bran middlings finely sifted, sixty parts; Paris green, one part; mix thoroughly and spread lightly along the side-boards. The sweetness of the bran seems to attract them and one or two doses a week will soon clear them out. A sprinkling of gas lime on the walks and under the benches will also expel them from their haunts.

The thousand-legged worm does not injure the plants, strictly confining its operations to the manure in the soil and mulch and helping to pulverize it, so that it may be the more readily converted into food for the plants. RIBES.

Potting Cuttings.

Those cuttings you put in sand in December will likely be ready to pot now, and as soon as they are well rooted you should lose no time in potting them. After a cutting is well rooted it does not improve by remaining in the sand; in fact, it is liable to draw up and weaken because there is little nourishment in the sand and usually the cuttings set in the sand too close together to spread out much; hence, the drawing upward, the only direction they can grow.

Before potting, you should ripen them just a little by giving them more sunlight than they had while they were rooting. In fact, this should be begun as soon as they begin to shove out the roots. Gradually give them a little more sun each day, until, by the time the roots are strong enough to pot them, they will be able to stand the full sun on a bright day. There will be less wilting and suffering after potting and the young plants will take hold much quicker. Cuttings that are potted during January and early February should be potted in 2-inch pots and shifted in March to 3-inch. This is where many growers make their mistake and they would be much better off with a cutting taken out of the sand early in March than with these early struck cuttings. Room is scarce and other work is crowding on most places during March and as the young plants look healthy they are just left in the small pots until planting out time.

During the last few weeks before planting out, when the sun is quite warm and evaporation is rapid, the young plants which are very pot bound, dry out severely and become stunted as a result. It is too late to repot them then, because they would not even root through by the time they should be planted out.

much less recover from the stunt in growth. That is the one thing in favor of planting the cuttings in flats or on a bench in two and a half inches of soil. They will not become stunted, though, as a general proposition, pot culture is much to be preferred. So, pot them into small pots and in light soil so they will become established quickly and ready to shift into larger pots, when you can use a heavier soil to make a strong, robust plant, with close joints and leathery foliage.

Use Fresh Soil.

Use fresh soil that has been exposed to the weather and, to lighten it, add a little sand and old rotten manure from the hotbed if you have it. Screen it through a  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch mesh screen and see that it is about right in moisture. It should be so that it will press together well when potting, but it should not be too wet to crumble readily. This is important. If it is too dry it will draw the moisture from the plants and cause wilting and you will find it difficult to water so it will penetrate to the bottom of the pot. If it is too wet it will pack and bake when it gets dry and no plant will thrive in it.

When taking the cuttings from the sand give them a slight shake to shake the sand from the roots. Don't take out more than you can pot in an hour or two, as it does them no good to stand around with the roots exposed. Keep the box containing them covered. When potting, do not pot too deep, as deep potting tends to rotting at the stem. If the root crown is a half inch below the surface of the soil it is deep enough to hold the plant upright and that is all you want. The roots naturally grow downward. Press the soil firmly and do not fill the pots too full, but be sure there is a little loose soil on top to prevent baking. Water them as soon after potting as practical and be sure the water penetrates to the bottom of the pot. If the soil is in the proper state, filling the pots once should be enough. An hour or two after watering turn one of them out of the pot and see whether it went to the bottom. If it did not, then water again immediately. After that water only when needed to keep the soil fairly moist, not wet. The plants will be healthier and stronger if watered moderately, especially during cloudy weather. Set on a light bench where they will get the full sunlight all day if possible. Many growers err along this line by using the worst bench on the whole place for their young stock. Naturally, the plants on that bench are poorer than the rest and these are pulled up to make room.

Are Next Season's Crop.

If you will but bear in mind that these young plants are your next season's stock and that everything you do for them from the beginning will have its effect next winter, you will see the wisdom in giving them every advantage possible. True, they will have all spring and summer to recover and grow, but don't you think a young plant in the pink of condition will make a better plant than one that has been neglected and stunted or drawn up? Look after them and top them after they are planted in the field, so that you may have good plants by housing time. Close attention and good care before planting them out will save you much work and worry while they are in the field. A sturdy, healthy plant will break more readily when topped and will stand upright better than a weakly one. So give them the best bench on the place if you can.

After potting, shade them from the sun for a few days. We lay newspapers over them. This keeps the sun off and at the same time checks evaporation by keeping drafts away. After the third day, put them on a little later and take off a little earlier each day, until by the end of a week they can take the full sun all day. There will be dry spots here and there and along the edge to be touched up with the sprinkling can. Do this in the morning before placing on the papers and keep the foliage dry at night, the same as you do on the blooming plants. The temperature should be the same, or a few degrees less than you keep your blooming plants in; 48 degrees to 50 degrees is about ideal for the young plants.

Not Too Late for Good Plants.

If you have not put in your cuttings yet, don't fear that you are too late to get good plants. Cuttings put in sand now, or within the next few weeks, will make as good plants by August 1 as any one could wish for if given proper care right through. In fact these cuttings are less liable to meet with any check before being planted out than the earlier struck cuttings, and in many cases will outstrip them by fall. Propagation from now on will require a little more skill than during the last two months on account of the stronger sunlight and more ventilation required to keep the houses at the proper temperature. If you put in a second batch on the same bench and if the previous batch rooted perfectly and you were careful to remove all dead foliage, roots, etc., you can use the lower half of the sand again by replacing the upper half with fresh sand. But if there was any damping off or trouble of any kind you would better renew it all and whitewash the bench besides.

The cuttings now will be strong and will take less time to root than during the last two months. In fact, they will be better in every way except for this slight lateness. I will have more to say about caring for late struck cuttings shortly.

ADHERING OF SHOOTS.

Please tell me the cause of the tips of carnation shoots adhering instead of opening naturally; also give a remedy. The worst cases were in a group in a bed of Boston Market, but some were in a bed of Lawson. Tips thus affected immediately form a weak flower bud. Also give directions for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas for red spider.

J. W. C.

This adhering of the leaves on the young shoots is not so common at this time of the year as it is in the fall. A few weeks after housing, when new growth commences, and especially if the soil is very rich, some varieties will show this kind of growth a good deal. For that reason I think it is caused by a quick, perhaps unnatural, growth after a severe check to the plant. Mrs. Joost is especially prone to this trouble. At this time of the year this condition might be caused by the plants being kept on the dry side too much and then mulched and watered heavily; also, if the soil happened to become dry at the bottom of the bench and left in that state for some time, and then watered heavily, perhaps with manure water; in fact, I might say too liberal treatment when the plants are not in condition to appreciate it. The remedy would be a return to rational treatment, eliminating all stimulants for a time. A light dusting of lime over the soil and watered in will help matters some; then water rather sparingly for a time, but do not let the plants suffer for water.

I would advise you to use hydrocyanic acid gas only as a very last resort on account of its dangerous nature. You can rid your plants of red spider without it by spraying them sharply with the hose. Select a bright day and in the morning spray them first with a nicotine solution and in the middle of the morning syringe them from both sides as sharply as you can. Two or three doses like this a few days apart will do the work effectively. There is too much about hydrocyanic acid gas, to use it effectively and with safety, to tell you here. It has been published many times in the REVIEW. If you have not preserved your back copies and are determined to use it, write to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Division of Entomology, for bulletin No. 27; new series, revised edition. It explains fully the method of using the gas and the necessary precautions to be taken. No doubt this is a good thing to use on plants that are not easy to reach with a spray of water, such as violets, but you can reach every part of a carnation so easily that we have never found it necessary to use anything but a strong spray of water.

CARNATION MY MARYLAND.

The white carnation, My Maryland as exhibited last season by the H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., won encomiums everywhere, but this season it did not do well in one or two of the several places at which it was on trial. This lowing letter from A. J. Tormey, dated January 26:

You will likely call to mind that last fall, about September, my brother-in-law, Mr. J. O. Devries, while on a visit to your place, bought of you six plants of My Maryland carnation, and a little later placed with you an order for rooted cuttings for delivery this spring, of the same variety. This order was placed in my name, and you were requested to advise me before making the shipment. I have read in the Florists' Review reports which were not favorable to My Maryland in several localities. It is with satisfaction that I can say that the few plants we bought of you have all along shown up strong and hardy, and today have on them about two dozen blooms and buds, with strong stems fully two feet in length and stand without supports; the flowers are of great size, and average from three to four inches.

Our florist, Mr. Chas. Rhodes, has put the plants to several severe tests and now says in his opinion they are the strongest of any variety he has in the houses. Knowing that you have had some unfavorable reports on My Maryland, I feel that it is due you to let you know how well we are pleased with it, and the strong hardy growth the plants have made with us. I will further state that if it would be of any benefit to you, to have your friends and customers see these plants as they now stand in our house, it will be a pleasure to have them visit our place, corner of Garrison and Oakford avenues, Arlington, Md. Our Mr. Rhodes will show them the plants and give them his opinion of the same. I will state that we have not up to this time let it be known that we have this variety in our house.

Quite naturally this was very welcome to the Weber Co., for they have every faith in My Maryland and believe that it will succeed in the majority of places. As a constant and prolific yielder of high grade blooms, they declare it to be absolutely without a rival in its color at their place.

CARNATION WHITE CLOUD.

A great many growers have deemed it expedient to discontinue the growing of White Cloud, giving its place to one or another of the numerous good white varieties which have come upon the market in the past two or three years. But ture. It is among the freest bloomers on the place, the flowers are of excellent form and substance and the stem is long and sufficiently strong to carry the flower gracefully. The illustration on page 779 gives a view of the variety in one of their older houses. Lient. Peary is liked by them better than any other new white.

WORMS IN SOIL.

We have one house of carnations, Lawson and Enchantress. We gave them a top dressing of fresh cow manure and the manure is now well rotted. Testing the soil the other day we found many little white worms about one-fourth of an inch long, looking like little maggots. Please give me some way to get rid of them; we have tried lime to some extent. What they are called? The plants are not yet affected, although we fear they will be. E. W.

I doubt whether the worms you complain of would bother your carnations, though of course it will do no harm to get rid of them. Try a good sprinkling of tobacco dust over the soil and water it in. Use about a 2½-inch pot to each row across a 5-foot bench. I think that will clean them out. A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION RUTH MORGAN.

J. W. Adams & Co., Springfield, Mass., have for five years or more grown Carnation Ruth Morgan for cut flowers. It is a variety of local origin and has never been disseminated generally in the trade. The illustration on page 776 gives an idea of the shape of the flower and the length and strength of stem. The color is about the same as that of Lawson, but the flower is only of moderate size although of excellent form. The principal merit of the sort is its floriferousness. Adams & Co. say they have never grown anything which could equal it and stock has always been free from disease. The calyx does not split.

Adams & Co. are among the oldest firms in the trade, the business having been established in 1849. The present partners are J. W. Adams, Charles Adams, Walter Adams and E. J. Oatman.

NEATNESS.

There are very few growers who do not feel a sense of pride in the neatness of their establishments, but there are a very large number of growers who do not have the faculty of keeping their houses in the condition they would like to have them. And this includes a number whose places are visited by the public. The illustration on page 777 is from a photograph taken early in December at Mount Greenwood, Ill. Mr. Rudd is a firm believer in system and order and the houses are kept as clean as the office. It entails little additional expense, and very little work after the habit has been acquired of seeing that the little things are attended to.

The variety occupying most of the space in the house is Lady Margaret, planted early in August and certainly showing up very well as seen in the picture, but the plan of disseminating the variety has been abandoned. On the further bench there are miscellaneous seedlings. Nothing is to be said of these at the present except that there are several which give excellent promises.

announcement was first made by the Weber Co. itself, at the same time offering those who had placed orders for cuttings an opportunity to cancel. Quite naturally this novel procedure on the part of the disseminators created much interest and was responsible for the folat the establishment of Wietor Bros., Chicago, while the new sorts are grown and with excellent success, still nothing has developed of sufficient merit to cause them to discard their old stand-by. White Cloud seems perfectly at home in the Wietor soil and under the Wietor cul-

EXTERMINATING MOLES.

Regarding moles in carnations, will say that we have been troubled with them in our Joost benches for the past few years. The only way we caught them was by setting little 5 cent or 10 cent spring mouse traps with ham rind as bait. Place them near the holes, fastened with wire securely, or they will carry the traps away, as they certainly are tough little things. Last year we had one house of Joost on wooden benches, and one on the everlasting tile bench; those on the wood benches were simply undermined, while those on the tile were not bothered at all. It seems to me they like a bench with holes in the bottom to travel through, as we found piles of soil a foot high under the wooden benches and none under the tile.

H. B.

A year ago I was troubled with moles in the same way as G. S. The cats would not touch them, so I took a piece of board, put on it a small pile of wheat flour and then took a common tin mouse trap and placed over it so they had to run their heads through the holes the same as if it was baited for mice. The first night I caught two in the same trap and that happened to be all there was this winter. If G. S. will try this remedy I think he will find it will work all right.

E. B.

I was bothered with moles in the same way as G. S. They cleaned the pinks all out. I tried about everything he did, and the last thing I did was to soak oats in strong Paris green water and spread them around among the pinks. That finished the moles. I could pick them up anywhere.

R. S. H.

In regard to the inquiry of G. S. for a remedy for moles, some years ago I was in the same fix. After trying a number of different poison and trap baits I had the good luck to leave in the carnation house one night a piece of Ivory soap and found it next morning eaten all around the edges. I baited two common mouse traps and next morning I found five caught. Ivory soap has done the job for me, since it has never failed to entice them to get their necks broken. If G. S. tries it I hope he will report his success in the REVIEW.

W. P.

In the REVIEW of February 1 G. S. wants to know what will kill the moles which are eating his carnation blooms. I never knew of moles eating carnations, but if he means the large, short-tailed field mouse, tell him to try soaking a handful of corn in water until soft. Then take a knife and make a small incision in the eye of each grain and force a small portion of strychnine into the grain with the point of the knife, pressing the skin into place again. We are frequently troubled with this pest with carnations and tomatoes, but one or two feedings with the corn generally rids the place. Arsenic does not seem to do the work.

F. T. WAY.

In reply to the note of G. S. in the issue of the REVIEW for February 1, I would say that I have experienced the same trouble with moles. I have used all kinds of remedies, and find the only thing I can get the moles to touch is arsenic mixed with dry cornmeal, about a teaspoonful of arsenic to a pint of meal, of which they will eat freely.

J. W. S.

MINERS' STRIKE IMMINENT.

A strike of 300,000 coal miners, involving every colliery in the anthracite and bituminous coal fields in the country, seems inevitable on April 1. The operators at a meeting at Indianapolis February 1 definitely and finally rejected the miners' demands for an increase in wages. The United Mineworkers immediately voted to raise a defense fund of $6,500,000 by the assessment of $1 a week until April on every miner belonging to the union. The United Mineworkers already have in their treasuries $6,500,000. So, by April 1, the miners will have a total strike fund of $13,000,000. Over 600,000 miners in both anthracite and bituminous fields are declared as sure to strike on that day.

WORMS ON SMILAX.

Is there any remedy for a worm, resembling the cut worm, that climbs the vines and trims the tender foliage off, mostly at night or on cloudy days? Have caught about 400 in a bed of 1,200 plants in about two weeks. Is there any other remedy than picking them off.

S. R.

The caterpillar in question is a very destructive one in a smilax bed, for it has a most voracious appetite. Spraying with a weak solution of Paris green would probably put a stop to the mischief, but if too much Paris green is used the leaves of the smilax are likely to be scorched. Hand-picking is the safest method, but does occupy a great deal of time, and unless this can be done regularly there is likely to be much damage done before the crop of caterpillars is destroyed.

W. H. T.

RATS IN GREENHOUSE.

I am so tormented with rats in my greenhouse that I would ask you if you know of any way to get rid of the pests. I have used six bottles of strychnine containing four grains each, some of it in poisoning lard and spreading the same on bread; I used it with meat, with corn the same way as we used to poison gophers but they seem to be as bad as ever. They eat the corn, sometimes clean, but after they have had a dose they won't touch it for some time; they eat the bread and lard inside of an hour, but it doesn't seem to do any good. The last bottle I used the druggist told me to put the four grains to one and one-half pints of water and put enough corn to absorb all of it; but they only ate a little of it. I used to put the four grains in nearly two quarts of water; then they ate the corn but I don't think it killed them. They are carrying away my carnation cuttings and are also in the carnation beds, cutting down the new shoots and even flowers and buds and pile them up in some convenient corner where they eat them up.

L. A. G.

Rats are a serious pest in a greenhouse and frequently do great damage in a very short time, for they seem to delight in chewing off the tender shoots of many plants in addition to those they actually eat.

The poison used in this case must surely be of poor quality, or else the animals must be very numerous, for that quantity of strychnine ought to dispose of a great many rats. Try a common steel trap, placed in the run that is most used by the rats, completely covering every part of the trap with fine, dry sawdust, and then placing a bait of some cracked corn or other grain in a tiny pile right over the plate of the trap. This device has served me well in a similar difficulty, and although but one rat was caught in the trap, yet the others disappeared, as frequently is the case after one of their number has been trapped. Another way to discourage them is to locate the holes by which the rats enter the greenhouse, and then to fill up the holes with broken glass and tar.

MIGNONETTE.

[A paper by Joseph Bradley, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., read before the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, January 30, 1906.]

Mignonette is like most other flowers we grow indoors. It is easy to grow providing the right means are at hand. The first requirement is a proper house. The next is the right kind of soil and manure. The next and the most important requirement is plenty of time to attend to it after it is planted. The kind of house to grow mignonette in is, in my opinion, a house such as is commonly used to grow violets, with the benches somewhat farther from the glass. They should be from two to three feet, according to the variety you intend to grow, as the different varieties vary a great deal in their height.

For instance, the old variety called Machet and one of the newest, called Her Majesty, the former is only half as tall as the latter. But in my opinion the nearer to the glass it can be grown the better, providing there is headroom to keep it straight. The house should be so constructed that both side and top air can be given, as mignonette likes an abundance of air.

Solid benches should be used where possible, as there is not so much danger of the bottom roots becoming dry. This should be six inches deep at the least and if boards are used at the bottom they should be far enough apart to allow good drainage.

Mignonette should be sown where it is expected to bloom, without transplanting it. After lines have been drawn crossways and also lengthways of the bed, say twelve inches apart crossways and ten lengthways, place three or four seeds at each point where the lines cross. When the plants are one inch high they should be taken out, leaving one in each place. After the plants have attained a height of four inches they should have the top pinched out to cause them to make side shoots and according to the size of the spike you wish to get, the quantity of the shoots should be allowed to remain. If you wish very large spikes then only four or five, but very nice spikes can be had if eight or nine shoots are left.

It is very necessary to keep them tied up straight, and there are several ways of doing this. One is just to place a stake in the middle of the plant and run a string around. Some use carnation stakes, some also run wires lengthways of the bed and strings crossways, the same as carnation growers do, and I think this way the best; it keeps them upright without crowding.

After the shoots have been taken, keep all side shoots from these; if they are allowed to remain no good spikes may be looked for.

If you wish to cut mignonette for the holidays the seed should be sown by the middle of August. All the air should be left on the house night and day until near frost. This makes the plants very stocky. But after it is closed I like to have it from 47 to 50 degrees, with as much air as it is possible to give at all times. I know that some growers advocate from 40 to 45 degrees but in my opinion this is too dead, especially so after the month of January, when we get more sun.

not quite so large but you get a great many more of them and they come much quicker.

The best variety to grow that I know of is the one called Her Majesty. It is rather tall but it gives good satisfaction.

The greatest pest we have to contend with on mignonette is the common cabbage worm, or the larvæ of the yellow butterfly, and if this pest it not kept in check it will soon eat up all the plants. There are several ways of getting rid of this pest. I find Paris green very good in exterminating it, but it must be used very carefully, not to get it too strong, for it will burn the plants. It ought to be mixed in water and put on with a fine spray; put enough Paris green in the water to just color it. Salt can also be used dissolved in water; while hellebore, slug shot, pyrethrum powder and tobacco dust can also be used dusted on the plants. But the best way is to keep the butterfly out of the house by placing mosquito netting over the ventilators or by building a light framework over the bed and covering it with netting.

The earth worms also become troublesome in the solid benches if lime water is not used from time to time.

I should also state that after the first crop has been cut and the plants are making new growth they will require abundance of water and a good top dressing of well rotted cow manure will help them a great deal, but the liquid manure should be used as before. The spikes will be greatly improved if cut twenty-four hours and placed in a cool house before using them.

PLANT BREEDING.

[A paper by C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., read at the annual meeting of the American Breeders' Association at Lincoln, Neb., January 17, 1906.]

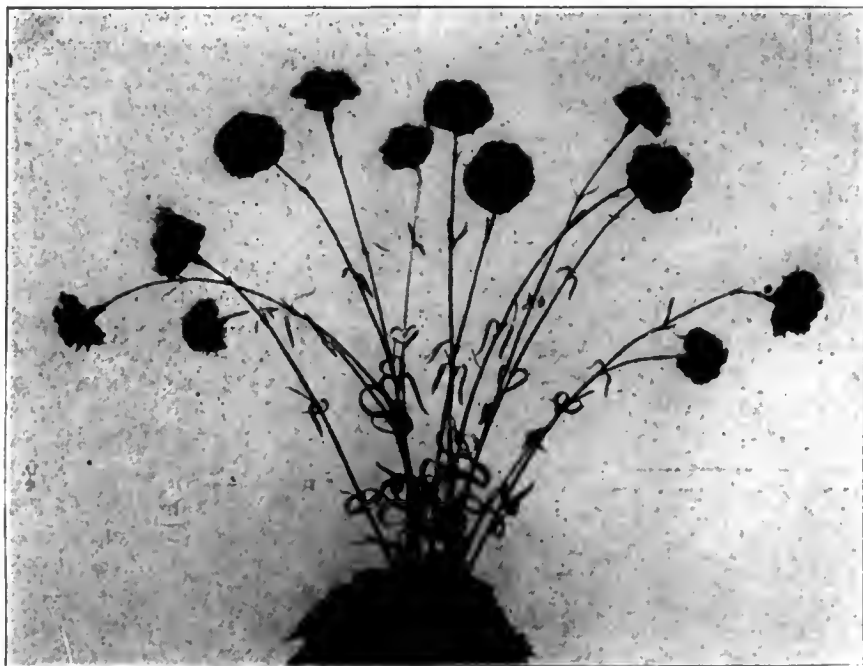

The economic importance of producing improved varieties of grain, forage plants, fruits, nuts, vegetables, flowers and timber trees, is fully as great as that of improving animals, fowls, fish and economic insects.

The wealth which may be added to our country by improved grains, plants and trees cannot now be estimated; but by such improvement we can largely increase the productive capacity of the soils contained in our agricultural areas, as well as of those areas which may prove suitable only for maintaining forests.

The sustaining power of the country may well be much increased by the introduction and cultivation of such improved grains, forage crops, vegetables and fruits. Further benefits may be secured by extending northward the area of cultivation for grains, forage crops, fruits and vegetables, by patiently crossing the native hardy strains found in most northern latitudes with the temperate growing species now at our command and gradually acclimatizing the progeny of those crosses.

In my own work upon the carnation, I have succeeded, within the period of ten years past, in producing a strain of carnations that have been grown under glass all the time, and now have benches of plants that have been grown three years without renewal and are still producing abundant crops of fine blooms, although the general custom of the craft is to renew the benches every year from plants cultivated in open fields during the summer season. This may be quoted as a practical example of acclimatization.

The grazing capacity of the country is very injurious to mignonette; we do not see so much effect in the plant, but we cannot expect such fine spikes. If solid benches are used the soil should be removed about ten inches deep and filled with good, stiff loam and manure. The manure should be well rotted. I use three-quarters loam to one-quarter manure, with a good sprinkling of air-slaked lime.

If hollow benches are used they

After the spikes have begun to form they should have liquid manure about once every ten days. I find horse manure suits first-class; also nitrate of soda, about three barrels to fifty gallons of water. After the first crop has been cut, if proper attention is given to pinching and feeding good cutting can be kept up until June. I think it a mistake to throw it out after the first crop has been cut. The later spikes are may be largely increased by the introduction and cultivation of improved forage crops, and better meats will thereby be produced by the use of better and more abundant feeding material. Advantage can also be taken of the variation in the feeding value of different wild grasses as applied to different purposes, such as the cultivation of the softer, more succulent grasses, for the maintenance of breeding herds, and the slower growing, harder and more fattening Buffalo grasses for fattening herds. It might well be asked why we should not improve our native forage grasses by cultivation, the selection of the improved, and even by hybridization. It might also prove that foreign grasses can be acclimatized, hybridized with our native species and made to largely increase the stock raising capacity of our ranges and pastures. It is even possible that a portion of Mr. Burbank's energies may be practically employed in some such work as this.

Reproductive Forestry.

We might also dwell upon the importance of the work of reproductive forestry, which seems to be the sole hope of lengthening our timber supply. I doubt if it will prove practicable to materially preserve old forests by any process of cutting or thinning out matured trees, but that, on the contrary, plantings of young trees upon such soils as are not best fitted for agricultural or horticultural purposes, and the natural seeding of cutover lands, will likely prove the sole hope of forestry reproduction.

Mr. Burbank has succeeded in producing a rapid-growing hybrid walnut which in his estimation should prove of considerable value for timber purposes, inasmuch as it will produce a matured timber tree in about one-half the time that one could be produced with the native species. Now if he could originate similar rapid-growing pines, spruces, redwoods, larches, oaks, poplars and hickories that would produce larger, taller and more symmetrical trunks, the productive timber capacity of our forest lands would be greatly increased.

It may well be asked, if he can originate this improved walnut, why can he not produce an improved Douglass fir, a spruce, a white pine, or a sugar pine? Why cannot he cross the white, Norway, yellow and sugar pines and get something different from either of them? Why not take the magnificent timber hemlocks of the Pacific coast, cross them with the hardy hemlocks of the east, and secure a hardy hemlock, that will produce on eastern land as fine lumber as is now afforded by the Pacific coast hemlocks? And cannot the same thing be done with the white cedar and cypresses?

The importance of keeping records of work done and intelligent pedigrees so that the practical results obtained may be studied and reviewed at leisure, should not be underestimated. Judging by hindsight, or by work accomplished, will in the end prove far better than judging by foresight of work we would like to accomplish. In my own work upon the carnation, I have kept records for the past ten years, so that at present, instead of working at random, I am proceeding in a methodical way and producing better and surer results. The general principles discovered in plant breeding can probably be applied to all breeding, even to the reproduction of the human species.

Should Not Neglect Human Species.

If we are to improve our plants, grains, fruits, flowers, grasses and all our domestic animals, and even the wild fowls, as well as the animals from the wilderness, are we justified in neglecting our species, and allowing it to be reproduced in a haphazard way with the possible result of serious degeneracy in the end? Should not the principles discovered in the intelligent improvements of plants and animals be applied to the reproduction and perpetuation of the human race, so far as may be practical without destroying or impairing the tenets of our religions or the morality of our peoples? I will hazard the prophecy that the nation which first possesses the foresight to effectually prevent or practically restrict the reproduction of its degenerate or criminal elements is destined to take the leading position among the civilized nations of the globe and will become the future model for the advancement of civilization.

If at the judgment day, mankind has not applied the intelligence with which it has been endowed and the knowledge gained by centuries of thought and study to the advancement and physical and mental improvement of its own species, will it not have failed to improve the talents entrusted to its keeping by the Creator?

Can the human family neglect properly endowing its progeny with strong, vigorous, healthful bodies and normal minds that they may be better able to fill life's allotted tasks successfully, and, finally, to approach the great bar of judgment with the consciousness of a life's span well filled with good and useful works, and to hear from the divine judge, "Well done, good and faithful servants, you have made good use of the talents which I placed in your keeping"?

DRACAENA INDIVISA.

Kindly advise me as to the age of Dracaena indivisa for seed bearing. Will a single plant fertilize its own seed?

C. F. M.

The age at which Dracaena indivisa will bear seeds depends very much upon the conditions under which it is grown, but it is probable that plants grown under glass seldom flower at less than ten to twelve years of age, unless some check in growth has caused premature flowering. Where this plant may be grown outdoors permanently, as in southern California, and, also, in some portions of Europe, it is quite possible that it may attain maturity earlier, and bring forth a crop of seed within less than ten years. The flowers of this plant are perfect from a botanical point of view, and thus a single plant may produce a crop of seeds. W. H. T.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE Chicago lettuce growers have had the best season to date in many years. Prices have been unusually good, one authority says largely because of the mild weather which has permitted safe shipment.

BOSTON, February 5.—Cucumbers, $5 to $15 a box; lettuce 25c to 75c doz.; tomatoes, 50c lb.; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box; mushrooms, $2 to $3 per four-pound basket; mint, 75c doz.

LETTUCE.

Planting in Cold Frames.

The time that lettuce plants can safely be planted in cold frames depends a good deal on the season, but, as a rule, after the middle of February is past, they can be carried through if proper attention is given to covering up at night. After the time just mentioned the strength of the sun's rays is sufficient to so warm up the soil under the sash that enough can be retained to keep the plants quite comfortable over night, if the sashes are closed early and sufficient covering put over them to prevent the cold from penetrating. Before trusting the plants in the cold frames it is very important that they be well hardened off, as, if put out in too soft a state, they are sure to suffer from the sudden change. They should be kept in a temperature of about 40 degrees for at least a week previous to setting in the frames and in these they should be allowed to stand for a few days in the flats so as to get climatized before planting out.

Previous to planting out the soil in the frames should be well forked up and a liberal dressing of well rotted barnyard manure worked into it. So that the soil will be warmed as well as possible the sashes should be left closed all day and covered up at night for a few nights, at least, before planting takes place. Handled thus it is usually possible to get a nice early crop of lettuce from the cold frames. It is not always possible to accomplish this, as the weather is sometimes quite severe up to the beginning of March and sometimes later, but that is the exception, not the rule, and cold snaps at that season are usually of short duration. The mild spells intervening give a chance to get the soil thawed out and warm enough for planting under sash. When it can be done it is a great advantage, as it not only relieves the congestion in the greenhouses where every inch of available space is needed during the spring months, but better lettuce can be produced in the cold frames than can be grown in the most up-to-date greenhouse, the atmosphere and surroundings being much more to their taste.

Varieties for Frames.

As to variety for planting thus early we prefer Boston Market, as it is about the hardiest of the family. It hearts up well and makes a very showy lettuce when finished, besides being equal to any in quality. Big Boston is another very desirable variety; it is larger growing than the former, but, being softer, is not so suitable for very early work. For second planting it is just the thing as it makes a beautiful head, is first class in quality and can be depended on to command the highest price in the market. Its softness, however, renders it not quite so good for shipping a long distance as Boston Market, but where the market is not too far away there should be no trouble in getting it there in prime condition. W. S. CROYDON.

Greenhouse Heating.

TO CLEAN HOT WATER PIPES.

We have three houses heated by hot water. The pipes have been run for fifteen years and I do not think we can get the heat from them that we could when they were new. Is there any way we could clean the pipes without hurting the boiler so they would give out more heat? W. L. S.

There are a number of boiler compounds upon the market which might be used with good results in this instance. If it were possible to disconnect the pipes from the boiler and thoroughly flush them with a high pressure hose all mud and loose scale would be removed. The boiler should also be flushed and frequently blown off. Pure cone molasses used in small quantities with the feed water will remove and prevent the formation of scale in the pipes and boiler. L. C. C.

STEAM OR HOT WATER.

Kindly give me capacity of boiler, steam and hot water, required to heat a plant of four houses, 105 feet long, sixteen feet wide, even span, ten feet to ridge; two lean-to houses the same length and a propagating house, facing north three-quarter span, 18x35 feet, twelve feet to ridge. Also best way to pipe for steam and hot water to maintain a temperature of 54 degrees to 60 degrees in 10 degrees to 15 degrees below weather. Would steam or hot water be most economical? Might possibly double establishment in a few years. F. A. W.

If these houses are to be heated with hot water, a boiler with sufficient capacity to carry 3,000 square feet of radiation will be none too large. A boiler with about 400 square feet of heating surface should be sufficient. With hot water each of the 16-foot houses can be piped with a 2½-inch flow under the ridge to the far end of the house, the highest point in the system to be at the far end of the house. There the flow may be divided by 2-inch pipes to supply a coil under each side bench as well as the center bench. If 2-inch pipe is used in these coils, three pipes in each coil beneath each of the three benches, nine pipes in all, it will supply sufficient radiation to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in the house. The lean-to houses should carry a 2-inch flow and five 2-inch returns, three of these to be placed under the bench next to the exposed wall.

A steam system can be installed with slightly less expense. The boiler should not be smaller, but the less expensive pipe used with steam will cut down the first cost somewhat. Each of the 16-foot houses should have a 2-inch flow, returning by ten 1¼-inch returns and the lean-to houses should have a 2-inch flow, returning by six 1¼-inch returns. With steam the highest point in the system should be as near as possible to the boiler. Directly over it is ideal, with all risers and returns so graded as to cause the water from condensation to pass through the system and reach the boiler via the returns.

Steam requires more attention than hot water. The cost of labor in one is an offset for cost in installation in the other. Each man must consider for himself which, under his conditions, he will choose. L. C. C.

SHOULD HAVE SINGLE SYSTEM.

We would appreciate it if you would tell us how best to arrange the heating pipes for greenhouses as described. We have ten houses and an office. Houses Nos. 4, 5 and 6 extend north and south and are, respectively, 22x110 feet, 11 feet to ridge, 12x110 feet, 8 feet to ridge, and 16x45 feet, 8 feet to ridge. House No. 2 is a boiler cellar where an upright steam boiler is located. This house extends across the north end of No. 4 and No. 5. No. 3 is a boiler cellar where are located one Kroeschell hot water and one small Wilks hot water. It adjoins No. 2 on the west. No. 7 is a propagating pit extending 57 feet west from No. 3 and is six feet wide and six feet to ridge. Houses Nos. 8, 9 and 10 extend west from No. 5, parallel with No. 7. Their dimensions are, respectively, 18x78 feet, nine feet to ridge, 10x78 feet, ten feet to ridge, and 10x78 feet, ten feet to ridge. No. 11 is a lean-to, 6x78 feet, seven feet to ridge. It adjoins and parallels No. 10, extending west from house No. 5. The office is at the northeast corner of house No. 5. There is no partition between No. 4 and No. 5, between No. 5 and No. 6, nor between No. 8 and No. 9 and between No. 10 and No. 11. Nos. 4, 5 and 6 are to be heated with steam at low pressure; we would also like to have a steam radiator in the office. Nos. 7 and 8 are to be heated with hot water from a Wilks boiler; Nos. 9, 10 and 11 also with hot water from a Kroeschell boiler.

We have plenty of 2-inch pipe on hand and also a few 2½-inch which we would like to use. Houses Nos. 10 and 11 we wish to pipe for a night temperature of 56 degrees and the balance to a temperature of 52 degrees to 55 degrees zero weather. We are intending to do all of the plumbing and steamfitting ourselves and would like to get particulars in detail. M. F. C.

Before answering your questions I wish to call your attention to a condition which I am sure you will later have deep cause to regret. With a plant as large as the one you have it is unwise to run three fires and two systems of heating. Either put it all on a steam or a hot water basis and get adequate boilers to do the work. The patchwork system you have planned will give you trouble and will prove more expensive to handle than will a single system.

Your house No. 4 can be heated by a 2-inch riser running under the ridge and returning by twelve 1¼-inch returns. House No. 5 should have a 2-inch riser under the ridge and seven 1¼-inch returns, while house No. 6 will require ten 1¼-inch pipes supplied from a branch from the 2-inch riser running through house No. 5. House No. 7 requires 110 square feet of radiation which can be supplied by three runs of 2-inch pipe. House No. 8 if piped with 2-inch pipe will require at least six lines of pipe. Houses Nos. 9 and 10 will each require four lines of 2-inch pipe, while house No. 11 should be provided with three lines of 2-inch pipe. This is all based on the water in the boiler being maintained at 180 degrees. L. C. C.

BOILER CAPACITY.

What rated capacity should a boiler be for heating with hot water to a temperature of 60 degrees with the temperature outside 20 degrees below zero, a greenhouse, 20x70 feet, east end and south wall glass, and how should the piping be arranged? I expect to add two more houses of the same size in the future. Would it be advisable to get a sectional boiler, and add sections as needed; or, would it be better to get a boiler large enough for all at first, and what capacity boiler would it require for all three houses? M. J. B.

The one house 20x70 feet to be carried at 60 degrees during severe weather should be provided with a 2½-inch flow pipe and eleven 2-inch returns; the flow to be carried under the ridge and the returns either under benches or along side walls.

Either plan mentioned can be successfully employed to provide the necessary boiler capacity. At present, with one house, a boiler rated to carry 800 feet of radiation will be sufficient, and when all three houses are completed the boiler for the whole plant should have a rated capacity for about 2,000 square feet of radiation. A boiler with about 250 square feet of heating surface will finally be needed, although one with 100 square feet of heating surface will provide for the one house. The most economical plan, all things considered, would probably be to install a boiler of sufficient size in the beginning, particularly if the additional houses are to be erected within the next year. L. C. C.

TWIN CITIES.

Trade the past week has kept up tolerably well notwithstanding the fact that we have very changeable weather; at this writing the thermometer is about zero and from present indications will be much colder, which, if anything, is considered much better for the trade than warm weather is at this time of the year. A bright day will always bring out a number of Greeks on the streets, which cuts into the trade to some extent. Stock has been coming in very good. Roses are all right, but unless we have some sunshine will no doubt be scarce again as they were last week. Carnations have been coming in fairly well, but our growers have not as yet got them to a point where they can be favorably compared with what are being shipped in; whether it is the lack of glass or not having planted a sufficient number, it is hard to say, but to be frank they must admit that what they are cutting are not as good or as large as those coming in from outside points. Bulbous stock is plentiful; some very fine early varieties of tulips are seen. There are, however, more Yellow Prince and La Reine than all other varieties. Romans and Paper Whites are also plentiful. Prices are maintained nicely by the trade. Plant sales are small, although all dealers have some good flowering stock. Some very nice azaleas, Dutch hyacinths, tulips in baskets and flats are to be seen, but are acknowledged to be slow sale. Harrisii lilies in small numbers are noticed but are of course all used in funeral work, the demand about equaling the supply.

Minneapolis.

The department stores that handle cut flowers report good business the past week, and they are getting good fair prices. Donaldson's is doing an immense business and as this is one place that does not handle cheap merchandise, it is able to do business with some of our wealthiest citizens, but as a rule, that class of trade wants to deal with the best florist.

The best grade of John Monson's new rose, Miss Kate Moulton, is in the greatest demand and is easily sold at a good price.

O. C. Swanson reports good business and believes in getting good prices. Even when stock is plentiful he maintains the figure. It is his policy to throw away some stock rather than cut prices, but the experience of nearly all is that a retailer who buys his supply from day to day rarely throws away much.

THE WEEKLY
FLORISTS' REVIEW

I find your paper too valuable to be without it and unquestionably the best florists' paper of the day.

F. H. WALRATH.

Rochester, N. Y.

Jan. 14, 1906.

HOUSTON HEIGHTS, TEXAS.—W. H. Hawkins grows roses outside for cut flowers with good results. He will soon plant 32,000 bushes, giving a total of 46,000. Beauty does well with him.

SAVANNA, ILL.—J. Y. Lambert reports trade very fair, but weather too warm for propagating. His carnations are blooming well, but the stems are not as strong as he would like.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—At the meeting of the Louisiana State Horticultural Society held February 2 and 3, C. W. Eichling was elected president of the organization for the ensuing year.

MURPHYSBORO, ILL.—Claude Wisely is probably the youngest florist in the state who is conducting his own establishment of over 2,000 square feet of glass. He is only 17 years of age and has been actively engaged in the business for three years. He began with a house 8x10, which was later torn down and replaced by the two structures he is operating at present. He has carnations in one house and a stock of miscellaneous plants in the other. Business has been good with him, McKinley day especially so.

FRANKLIN, PA.—McEthinney Bros. are building a rose house 18x135.

MONTROSE, MICH.—Otto H. Cran is figuring on a house 28x100 feet for carnations.

ALBION, MICH.—M. & S. L. Dysinger report 1905 the best business year they have ever enjoyed and they have been very busy with funeral work during January.

CONSTANTINE, MICH.—H. C. Drake's greenhouse is idle, he having abandoned the business. He says it seems that the place is too small to maintain even one greenhouse.

COLUMBUS, O.—Graff Bros. report that McKinley day 1906 was not to be compared with 1905 or 1904. They did some extra business but not as much as they had prepared for.

LAFAYETTE, IND.—F. Dorner & Sons Co. reports having booked more orders for White Perfection than they had booked to a corresponding date on any white carnation they ever sent out.

OWATONNA, MINN.—Four greenhouses each 30x180 feet are soon to be added to the plant of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co. An eighty-five horse-power boiler is to be added to the present equipment.

KOKOMO, IND.—Thos. L. Knipe, who has been working for leading growers over a wide section of country, has returned to his home here and will put up a house 14x150 for violets for the wholesale market.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—The Pikes Peak Floral Co. will more than double its glass in the coming season, the business in their first year having exceeded expectations. W. H. Evans has been in the east the past week buying material.

PORT HURON, MICH.—C. W. Asman has a miniature forest for a window display and it is attracting much attention. In the foreground is a pool of water in which are a number of gold fish. Additional life is given to the display by means of canary and other birds which fly about among the trees.

WHITEHALL, MICH.—W. E. Pew has succeeded Whitehall Floral Co. Mr. Pew says he has proved that $1 carnations can be sold in what has been known as a thirty-cent town. He found that when the $1 carnations were produced the customers were found and that he could get all the customers he wanted for them by going after them.

BELLEVILLE, ILL.—A. S. Halstead has just finished a new house 25x100 and has bought material for six others, four of them 15x100, one 20x100 and one 25x100. He has a set of four fine new geraniums which he is planning to distribute to the trade. He also has several seedling carnations, one of which, a white which has made a favorable impression on many who have seen it, will be disseminated in 1907. One of its merits is that it will stand as low as 40 degrees without injury. Dr. Halstead has a bright scarlet he proposes to send out in 1908.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has been distinctly quiet the past week. At the same time receipts have also been on the down grade, so that there has been no great over-stock in any line. Roses are scarce. Beauty crops have come off all of a sudden and receipts are not equal to the daily demands. Much of the quality has also been lost, particularly in the shorter stuff.

Brides have been in particular request this week and first-class stock hard to find. The best of each day's receipts have sold quickly at very good prices and the low grade stock is commanding values much better than usual. Maids are more nearly equal to requirements. Some very fine Uncle John are seen. Chatenay is not in large supply but red roses are probably shorter than anything else.

The carnation market has continued fairly steady. Demand is not heavy, but receipts have shortened up in proportion, so that market values have not been greatly disturbed. There is enough good stock to meet requirements but just at present it is wise to put in orders early in the day wherever possible. Poehlmann Bros. Co. has some very fine Prosperity, readily bringing $6 per hundred. Very few of this variety are seen this year. Enchantress and Lawson are the two principal sorts.

Violets have been coming in rather heavily and, with light demand, prices have weakened. A deluge is feared for February 14.

The one department in which supplies are rapidly increasing and prices steadily tending downward is that of bulbous stock. Harrisii and callas, which have been in exceedingly brisk demand and high in price for some weeks past, are now too plentiful for the requirements and prices have fallen fully one-third in the last couple of weeks. Freesia is a drug on the market. Paper Whites and Romans sell fairly well for funeral work but seldom go above $3 per hundred and many are sold much below that. Fancy tulips still bring a fair price, but short stuff, especially if white, is sold very cheaply. Valley is abundant, some of it without foliage, bringing very small returns. There is no change in the green goods market.

Various Notes.

There will be a special meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Handel hall tonight at 7:30. The call is issued by Chairman James Hartshorne.

With the announcement that a strike of coal miners is in prospect, growers who needed fuel this week found the price advanced 25 cents to 50 cents per ton.

Vaughan & Sperry are handling some very nice Golden Spur narcissus.

On Monday morning the Chicago Rose Co. opened for business at 56 and 58 Wabash avenue. They have a large double store on the street floor which will supply accommodations at least the equal of those of any wholesale house in town. They are busy getting the store fitted up and getting their stock. George Scott, formerly at Winterson's, is assisting Mr. Degnan.

The E. F. Winterson Co. closes its business year with the last day of January. E. F. Winterson reports that he is more than pleased with the total of business for the year. The teamsters' strike cut a big hole in their record for the spring months and it was with much satisfaction that the aggregate for the twelve months was found to slightly exceed that of the year before.

C. S. Stewart has sold his retail store on the west side to parties by the name of Simpson, not hitherto connected with the trade.

C. W. McKellar received a shipment of cattleyas from Lager & Hurrell on Monday so badly frosted that they were valueless. He also had a shipment of orange blossoms on that day.

John R. Risch, of Weiland & Risch, gives it as his opinion that when planting time is nearer the demand for Killarney rose plants will be even stronger than at present. Peter Reinberg is one of those who will plant Killarney heavily for next season.

Klehm's Nursery is sending the Novelty tulip to Kennicott Bros. Co. in very nice shape.

George Reinberg is still getting a very large cut of Beauties, but his stock, in common with that of other growers, has lost something of its high quality because of the very unfavorable weather conditions of the past few weeks.

E. C. Amling is again receiving bouvardia.

The A. L. Randall Co. finds itself already overcrowded in the supply department and will erect a balcony in the rear of the cut flower room, which will give the supplies something like 1,000 feet of additional space.

The George Wittbold Co. has a stable of twenty-five horses kept constantly busy

Work has commenced on an addition which will make the Auditorium Annex the largest hotel in the United States. The space now occupied by P. J. Hauswirth's store is to be part of a new grill room. Mr. Hauswirth has a lease for two years more and will be provided with a store in the new building.

Ed Hauswirth has been ill this week.

Mrs. E. H. Hunt is in Florida.

This is club night.

Visitors the past week included A. S. Halstead, Belleville, Ill., buying building materials; John Walker, Youngstown, O.; Robert C. Whitehill, Fishkill, N. Y., representing Benj. Hammond; W. H. Evans, Colorado Springs, Colo., enroute to Buffalo; Geo. F. Struck, of Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J.; M. R. Cashman, of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn.; Mr. Daniels, of Daniels & Crittenden, Waterloo, Ia.; J. J. Van Leuven, Brighton, Mich.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have just experienced a very peculiar week, the weather varying from 74 degrees above down to zero Saturday morning. However, trade has been very good. Roses still remain scarce and prices have held well. Carnations, while more plentiful, clean up every day, good stock bringing $4 to $5 per hundred.

Freesia seems more plentiful than ever before and it is impossible to move all of it; valley, violets and lilacs are almost as bad; good Sprengeri remains scarce but plumosus strings and bunches are plentiful. As a whole, business has been very satisfactory for the wholesalers. Among the retailers they are not bragging; not many large orders, but the regular trade is very fair.

Various Notes.

F. M. Stafford, formerly manager of Blind Bros.' south side store, has severed his connection with that firm and opened a new store at 1726 Carson street, almost opposite Blind Bros., making three flower stores in the one block. He is thoroughly familiar with the trade on that side of the river, having lived there all his life. His friends wish him success in his new venture.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor last Thursday and, while here, had an experience which he can probably laugh over better now than at the time. Mr. Falconer, who was showing him around, commissioned one of his friends to provide something to eat by the time they returned to the city. He hied himself to a favorite cafe and ordered a dish which is the pride of the house, to be ready for the party at 5:15 p. m. The party returned about 5:20 and this same man conducted them to the table, expecting the meal to be served at once. After waiting a few minutes he tried to hurry the waiter, who in turn hurried the chef; but the minutes flew until Mr. Hill had to go for his train. Just as he was departing, the waiter came hurrying in with a large platter containing a most appetizing looking supper, but too late for Mr. Hill, who only got a look in and a smell and hurried off to his train, leaving two of the party to eat a meal ordered for five. Their hopes are that at some future time they may be able to prove to Mr. Hill that all Pittsburg chefs are not so

The South View Floral Co., Carrick, Pa., composed of Geo. Kramer, president; John Eichert, secretary and treasurer, and Ernest Fischer, is the name of a new floral company which has taken out a charter. They have bought the establishment of Ernest Fischer and will erect six new houses, 30x250 feet, even span. They expect to grow cut flowers for the Pittsburg trade.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

All branches of the retail business are active with a steady demand for good stock, prices remaining firm. Good roses are rather scarce but not to such an extent as to cause great inconvenience. Spring flowers are much in evidence, the daffodils and tulips being much used in table decorations. There are plenty of carnations of the common and small varieties but no abundance of fine stock. Even Enchantress seems to be off crop with most of the growers. Violets of all grades are plentiful and have been having a great run, but the cold snap somewhat checked sales. It had the same effect on the pot-plant trade. Some of the azaleas seen about the stores are getting stale. There is an over-supply of lilacs and the price is down. Fine specimens of rhododendron are on the market.

The Decorators.

For a dinner given by Gen. and Mrs. Draper, on the night of February 3, to the Austrian ambassador and other notables, the Gude Bros. furnished the decorations. It was a beautiful execution in pink roses, A. Farleyense, lily of the valley and smilax. On the same day this firm had another fine decoration for a masquerade ball for young people, at the home of Commander and Mrs. Richardson Clover. The ball room, drawing room and dining room were draped with southern smilax, while great bunches of poinsettias, carnations and other blooms were everywhere seen. Red bells were effectively used. A very novel feature was a full rigged ship of generous proportions, placed in one of the rooms in partial concealment. At the proper time it was beautifully lighted up with many miniature electric globes, disclosing a "full cargo" of floral and other presents for the young folks. This idea originated in the fertile brain of the charming hostess, Mrs. Clover.

George H. Cooke has had a very busy week, having executed a large number of decorations. Several of these, in cut azaleas and A. Farleyense, at the home of Mrs. Slater, were models of the decorators' art.

Various Notes.

Fred H. B. Kramer has returned from Boston and pronounces the carnation show a success.

The Market.

We are now having our first touch of real winter. There is a lot of snow on the ground and the temperature drops to very near the zero mark every night. This kind of weather has put new life into business and now it has a very healthy look. The demand for all kinds of stock has improved greatly and roses and carnations are getting positively scarce. Bulbous stock is more plentiful and it is selling first class. Jonquils are now to be had in fairly large quantities and they go well. The demand for lilies, which has been rather slack, is now increasing greatly; the market is fairly well stocked with them.

Roses and carnations sell out as fast as they arrive and at top prices. There is a great deal of improvement in this respect over last week. Violets are selling somewhat better, but large quantities of them find their way into the fakers' hands. They are not averaging the best of returns. Violets have not done so very well here this year, except early in the season. Green goods are moving very slowly as a rule. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii are rather scarce and in good demand consequently, but they are the only exceptions.

Valentine's day looks to be a good one this year, as already many orders have been booked. Violets are always good property on this day and they will bring a very nice price this year, but they need it to make up for the poor returns they have been showing right along.

Our rose show takes place Saturday, February 10, and promises to be a good one. Several out of town growers have written that they will stage blooms and many of our home growers will compete. I want again to call to the attention of all growers who are introducing something new in the rose line, that this will be the very best time for them to send a vase to this city.

Visitors the past week were Miss White, of Lexington, Ky., and J. T. Herdigen, of Aurora, Ind.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is steady, with hardly a ripple on its surface. Cold weather scatters the street merchants and down go violets; 50 cents looks like top for specials before the week is over, and yet the report comes down from the Dutchess county hills, on good authority, that fifty new violet houses are already contracted for and fifty more are contemplated. Merchants, clerks, farmers and spinsters all have the fever.

Good roses hold firm at excellent prices and much of the stock now coming to market is beyond criticism. Special Maids often touch $15 per hundred and Beauties hold at $75 with ease.

Bulbous stock is very plentiful. Tulips and narcissi especially so. Froment handles immense quantities of these, and some grand Long Island lily of the valley. Freesia is abundant. Orchids hold their own as to popularity and great quantities are daily shipped to adjoining cities.

Perhaps the cold weather may add some snap to business. Since Christmas it has been less active than was anticipated. Ten weeks only to Easter. Everybody seems to be laying plans for it already.

Club Affairs.

The club's annual dinner on Saturday evening at the St. Denis hotel was attended by about the usual number of members, nearly sixty, a small average in a membership of over 200. President Scott presided ably. The committee, Messrs. Sheridan, Haffner and Weathered, are greatly to be commended for their indefatigable efforts to make the occasion a success. The F. R. Pierson Co., Lager & Hurrell and A. J. Guttman provided the flowers for the tables. Other blooms were given but were overlooked until too late. The menu was quite up to the reputation of the popular hostelry.

The presentation of a valuable diamond pin to Ex-President Traendly was a delightful interlude. Mr. Traendly was "too full for utterance," but managed later to emphasize the great pleasure the gift afforded him. It was well deserved. Two years of devotion to the club's welfare has borne abundant fruit. Mr. Traendly's history of the club's rapid growth, his suggestion as to the probability of "a waiting membership list" in the near future seemed to touch a responsive chord in all. T. Arthur Baker and his vaudeville corps gave many songs and stories during the evening. Prof. Nash gave an interesting address on the relation of the botanic gardens to horticulture and paying tribute to the enterprise of Veitch and Sander and the rare and beautiful collections in the private gardens of Europe. E. V. Hallock, of Queens, spoke feelingly of his experiences and his love for horticulture. C. B. Weathered made the speech of the evening, full of happy reminiscences, covering the club's long history from its inception nineteen years ago. It was a heart to heart talk and his hope and prophecy as to a permanent home for the club met the approval of all. Other speakers were James Scott, of Tarrytown, C. H. Totty, of Madison, and A. L. Miller, of Brooklyn. W. H. Donohoe, the only retailer present, spoke for the retail florists and urged the club's influence in behalf of a larger representation of this important branch of the business in its membership. Alex. Wallace spoke for the press. The Ricard Bros. added much to the enjoyment of the evening with their songs. P. O'Mara was toastmaster. The young men of the club were much in evidence. "Auld Lang Syne" with John Birnie leading closed the happy night.

February 12 is carnation night at the New York Florists' Club. Premiums of $15, $10 and $5 are offered for the best twenty-five blooms in four distinct varieties and $5 for the best twenty-five blooms in the room. C. W. Ward will lecture with stereopticon illustrations. Many new members will be with us and all interested in the club or intending to join are cordially invited. There will be the usual refreshments. Many carnation novelties will be staged. Secretary Young will attend to all shipments for exhibition and novelties from any distance are sure of a warm reception. Be on hand at 7:30 Monday evening. Ladies' night and orchid night will be March 12. Prof. Nash, of the New York Botanic Garden, will give a stereopticon lecture.

The members of the outing committee are requested to meet at the club rooms on Monday evening, at 7 o'clock.

The program mapped out for the club this year is the most complete and varied in its history. President Scott has a busy official life ahead of him.

Various Notes.

The Ricard brothers are popular and their songs at the horticultural dinners and their abounding good nature have been a season's feature that has been greatly appreciated. They will join the New York Florists' Club.

fornia, and J. W. Stemmler, of the same town, has decided to spend the two months of bad weather coming in North Carolina. Both these gentlemen ship to the veteran, James Hart, who is going south with Mr. Stemmler for two weeks, his first holiday in a quarter of a century.

George Perkins, brother of John J. Perkins, has purchased Patrick Byles' plant of five houses at South Orange, now devoted to roses and carnations. At East Orange Mr. Perkins has five houses and a fine retail business that uses all their output.

Jas. Greer, of South Orange, has purchased a plot of land adjoining that of Mr. Perkins and will erect five modern greenhouses 200 feet long this summer. As usual with the Madison experts, roses will be grown exclusively.

Ford Bros. have a harbinger of spring in their windows, violet plants, the advance guard of their usual Easter specialty, when they dispose of shoals of them. The early season has brought southern daffodils to the market, reducing the home product, they tell me, already to $10 a thousand.

The seventy-fifth fair of the American Institute, the winter exhibition, opens next Wednesday, February 14, at 19 West Forty-fourth street. Apples, pears and carnations will compete for the society's prizes. The farmers' institute at the same time and place, assisted by the New Jersey State Horticultural and Connecticut Pomological societies, will be conducted by the Hon. D. P. Witter. Wednesday evening Robert Craig will lecture on "Carnations Past and Present."

At Secaucus, N. J., on April 1, a new orchid firm will be established. The name is Carrillio & Baldwin. Seven greenhouses will be devoted exclusively to orchid growing. Mr. Carrillio is now in South America collecting for the April importation. Mr. Baldwin has had charge of the orchid department of Siebrecht & Son, at New Rochelle, for the past six years. The display of C. Trianae now on exhibition there is one of which Mr. Baldwin is especially proud. Mr. Smith, of North Easton, now with W. N. Craig, will succeed Mr. Baldwin at New Rochelle.

The club smoker at Orange, N. J., last Friday evening was a success. Among the visitors were Ed. Roehrs, of Rutherford; J. Heeremans, of Morristown; C. H. Totty, A. Herrington, Robert Schultz and M. Hand, of Madison; W. F. Ross, of Newark, and Messrs. McManus, Guttman, Ernshaw, Campbell, Burnett and the Ricard brothers, of New York. These musical enthusiasts with local talent and general chorus accompaniments made abundant melody until midnight.

A new greenhouse building concern, with the title of Frank Van Assche, has located at 1133 Broadway, which seems to be headquarters for this line of business in New York. The factory is in Jersey City.

Starke & Kleine have been shipping plants as far as Rochester.

Foley, of 226 Bowery, with greenhouses at Madison, enjoyed much helpful publicity last week by an illustrated display description of his enterprises in the New York News. Some of the retail florists understand advertising thoroughly; one of them, on Broadway, has it down to a science. Hard to tell what will be the next surprise.

Hoffmeyer, the up-town florist, had a fine wedding decoration Wednesday of this week at St. Thomas Church, on Fifth avenue, and at the home of the bride on West Seventy-eighth street. Nothing but pink roses in every style of arrangement, including an aisle of rose trees now so popular here.

Joseph Leikens had a brilliant affair last week at the St. Regis, the reception of Mrs. Judge Rockler, of Providence, R. I., to eighty ladies. The effect was entirely Japanese. The sunken table in horseshoe was filled in the center with Japanese evergreens and primroses. The same effect was carried out around the table by cut flowers and branches of the same. The whole Louis XV floor was beautifully decorated with pink and white roses and carnations. In one of the rooms a great Japanese vase with 100 long-stemmed Beauties was the only feature. The whole effect was quite out of the ordinary. The ladies all wore camelias.

White lilacs in pots, fancy tubs and baskets are very popular. They come from Roehrs and Steinhoff, and many retail windows are made charming by them.

The "Flower Girl," of Hoboken, died on Sunday at the age of 82. She has made a living for fifty years, selling flowers at the balls and receptions over there, and everybody knew her.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., is in Porto Rico.

Anton Schultheis, who has been very ill, is now convalescing and full recovery is hoped for.

Frank White and wife, of Elizabeth, were recently in the city, guests of J. K. Allen, to whom Mr. White's father has been shipping for nearly twenty years. John White is one of the oldest of florists, having been foreman for Peter Henderson forty years ago. He is now over 80, but attending to all departments of his business and conducting a fine wholesale and retail trade. The plant totals over 25,000 feet. Just now he is shipping as fine smilax as ever reaches New York.

The ball contemplated for March 19 by another employees' association known as the "Victor Young" has interested many of the wholesale houses and gives promise of much success. This may be amalgamated with the retail association and together, with Madison Square Garden as headquarters, the Arion would not be in it. Geo. Hildebrand is one of the moving spirits in the enterprise.

H. A. Stoothoff has returned to New York from a very successful western trip.

From all reports of the local retailers, wholesalers and growers, despite winter's mild weather, trade results have been satisfactory. As to stock, fancy roses are selling well and are somewhat scarce. The demand bids fair to continue brisk until Lent. In the first and second grades the market is well supplied, especially on Brides and Maids. Red roses of all kinds are scarce. There is a fair supply of Beauties in all grades, with a steady demand.

Carnations are selling well, with extra fine quality of stock in the market. Enchantress, any good white and Lawson have the call. Stock cleans up fairly well each morning, with top price $4 per hundred. Scarlets are not any too many.

Bulbous stock is, as usual at this time of the year, very plentiful in all lines. Callas and Harrisii are selling well; so are tulips and Dutch hyacinths. Freesias, Romans and Paper Whites drag somewhat. Violets sold better the past week, with not so many in the market. The bulk of them are California. The market has plenty of adiantum, smilax, leucothoe sprays, galax and asparagus. Common ferns have gone up.

Florists who carry blooming plants say that trade was quite brisk the past week.

Thursday for a stock of supplies. He also says trade is quite good, especially funeral work. Dr. A. S. Halstead, also of Belleville, passed through here Tuesday on his way to Chicago to contract for building material for his new houses. He is president of the St. Clair Floral Co.

Robert Thompson, a local contractor, has the contract to build the four new houses for John Steidle at Central. The houses will be used for growing roses.

Frank M. Ellis left last Thursday for a six weeks' trip to Panama in the interest of his chocolate plantation. He says he will have an interesting story to tell of his trip at the March meeting of the Florists' Club.

Robert Meinhardt, formerly of the firm of Meinhardt & Dirckies, is now in the employ of Ostertag Bros.

Henry Braun, foreman at Jablonsky's, was the happiest man in the trade last week. "It's a boy," is the way the proud father puts it.

Charlie Kuehn's wire department was so busy the past week with shipping orders that Mr. Kuehn himself had to be pressed into service to help pack.

Ostertag Bros. have been preparing the last four days for one of the largest decorations of the season at the Union Club.

The Riessen Floral Co. had the decorations for the big Liederkrantz ball last week.

A. G. Greiner, the local cactus grower, reports that he is busy with shipping orders, most of them going east.

J. W. Dunford, in Clayton, will have a fine lot of Harrisii in pots for Easter.

J. F. Ammann is cutting a fine lot of roses, including Ivory, Killarney and Rosalind Orr English. As usual he has a fine lot of Harrisii in pots for Easter.

Jacob Pflueger, who was formerly with J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, and who for the past four years has made St. Louis his home, left Saturday night with his family to again reside in Cincinnati, where he will open a bowling alley.

Bowling.

The florists finished their bowling in the city handicap championship, each rolling four games, single, double and in team. In the single game H. Lohrenz came in first by the following scores:

| Player.         | H. | T.  | Av. |
|-----------------|----|-----|-----|
| Lohrenz .....   | 32 | 744 | 186 |
| Meinhardt ..... | 18 | 728 | 182 |
| Ellison .....   | 16 | 709 | 177 |
| Kuehn .....     | 20 | 683 | 170 |
| Beneke .....    | 23 | 670 | 163 |
| Beyer .....     | 18 | 650 | 163 |

In the doubles the scores were:

|                            | H. | T.    | Av. |
|----------------------------|----|-------|-----|
| Meinhardt and Ellison..... | 50 | 1,430 | 357 |
| Kuehn and Beneke.....      | 72 | 351   | 351 |

The team in its four games made 3,261, average 815, their handicap being 55 per game. The list of the standing of the players has not yet been made public and it is hard to tell if any of the boys come in for any of the prizes, which amount in total to $1,000. J. J. B.

I GUESS it would be a hard thing to do without the REVIEW.—PETER MOOTZ, Dodge City, Kan.

DENVER, COLO.—Maler & Dankworth are considering the feasibility of equipping their houses with tile benches the coming season.

The Market.

Business is still very slow and everyone is complaining of not having more to do. It is a very good thing that the cuts of all flowers have been short; otherwise a glut would have been with us and prices cut to low water mark.

Various Notes.

Isaac Kennedy, of West Park, is still cutting very fine blooms from his new white rose and it does not seem to go off crop.

Bate Bros. are sending the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. some very fine carnations.

A. Weaver, of Massillon, was a recent caller.

Mr. Peat, of Peat & Fanning, Norwalk, Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Salmon of Akron were calling on the trade last week. C.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

February, the last month of the social season, has opened briskly, the demand for fancy roses keeping prices above the average for this season. The supply is wonderfully short. It seems as though nearly all the growers were cutting less than usual, despite the increased quantity of greenhouses. Carnations are also in good demand, with the supply below the average for February, the month when carnations are at their best. Violets do not receive the attention they should, but better things are looked for next week. St. Valentine's usually creates lively demand. Forget-me-nots appear to be nearly out of market, inquiry at the leading wholesale centers failing to elicit information of any quantity expected for next week. The novelties of the day are pale pink ten-week stocks at Eugene Bernheimer's and double daffodils (Narcissus Von Sion) at S. S. Pennock's and W. J. Baker's. Greens are scarcer than at any time this season, the bunches of asparagus showing the effect of the season's demand.

Two Flower Seeds.

Johnson & Stokes are making a specialty of asters. They report the six leading varieties to be Truffaut's Peony-flowered, Queen of the Market, Comet, Queen Victoria, Hohenzollern and Semple's Branching. Of these the first five should be grown from German seed, the last one, Semple's Branching, being the only one that California produces in really first-class form. This is of interest, as the German seed costs from forty to fifty per cent more than the American. The disadvantage of our home-grown aster seed is that the flowers are more apt to come with a yellow disc in the center and do not show the vigor of the full and perfect German flowers.

In speaking of alyssum, Mr. Sherry, of this firm, named three varieties: A. maritimum, the true sweet alyssum; A. maritimum Benthami and A. compactum procumbens, the last named being the true Little Gem so much prized for baskets, borders, etc. Either the first or second are superior for cut flowers.

Carnation Night.

The carnation meeting of the Florists' Club, held Tuesday evening, February 6, was a brilliant success. The attendance was large and the interest keen. Exhibits were very numerous and quality excellent.

W. J. and M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., sent Glendale in perfect condition. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., sent My Maryland, Jessica and No. 9, a handsome fancy flower. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., sent Evalina and Beacon. F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., brought Winsor in grand shape, also White Enchantress, Variegated Lawson and Helen Gould. The Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., sent Robert Craig, very fine. A. J. Guttman, New York, brought a splendid vase of Victory. J. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., was present with the carnation bearing his name. The Strafford Flower Farm exhibited My Maryland, Lawson, Lady Bountiful, Lieut. Peary and Enchantress. John Kuhn exhibited No. 24, soft pink, and No. 15, deep pink. Charles Leisy exhibited a number of seedlings.

The speakers of the evening were Robert Craig, F. R. Pierson, E. A. Stroud, A. J. Guttman, Wm. Kleinheinz and John E. Haines.

Garrettsford.

Floriculturally Garrettsford is famous as the residence of David Anderson, Wm. Munro and James Verner. Garrettsford has other claims to prominence. It is beautifully situated, high rolling country, picturesque cottages scattered about, not too closely, to take away from its rural appearance, and last, but by no means least, Garrettsford has a station on the new Chester trolley, which, as the inhabitants tell you, will carry passengers to City hall in twenty minutes. They look at you earnestly when imparting this information to see whether you believe it or no. In fact, I am somewhat inclined to doubt whether they believe it themselves, as the railroad takes fully that long, but when you consider that the cars on this Chester trolley line are to cost from $10,000 to $12,000 apiece and will go through the subway, you are prepared almost to believe the twenty minutes.

Wm. Munro, who achieved his reputation as a Beauty grower with Myers & Samtman and Robt. Scott & Son, has the place formerly run by James Anderson. It is devoted to roses, Beauties, Brides, Maids and Kaiserins being the varieties grown. The last named have just been cut back and started for Easter, the plants being very strong. The other roses were clean and healthy, the foliage showing that deep green that indicates perfect root action, so difficult to secure after a number of dark days.

Jas. Verner, who is right next door to Mr. Munro, devotes his attention entirely to Brides, Maids and Kaiserins. His place justifies Mr. Munro's comment that it is always a pleasure to visit there, the plants invariably being clean and healthy, the place in perfect condition. Mr. Verner was also at work on his Kaiserins, giving the impression that both his notebook and Mr. Munro's must call for February 1 as the time when Kaiserins should be started on their growing season, when Easter comes on April 15.

David Anderson, whose place is just around the corner, devotes his attention to Brides and Maids exclusively, I think, his stock of grafted plants being especially fine. It is pleasant to visit three such clever growers, living so near together, helping each other, as good comrades should.

Various Notes.

A fire broke out in the boiler room of the Millbrook Lea Greenhouses (Maull & Howell), Whitford, Pa., last Saturday evening. It destroyed the boiler room, the recent addition to the plant, and the apartments of J. Lardner Howell. Mr.

Howell estimates the damage at $14,000. Much sympathy is expressed.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons decorated Horticultural hall for the midwinter ball on the evening of February 2. The decorations were pronounced unusually fine.

Wm. Thompson some time ago succeeded Mrs. Moore as manager for the Finley Acker Co.'s flower store.

Alfred Burton is sending some exceptionally fine Liberties and Beauties to the Flower Market.

J. A. Smith, of the Henry F. Michell Co., speaks in glowing terms of the cordial reception he received from the many florists throughout the state on whom he recently called. He only regrets having missed John Merchant, of Sharon, Pa., whom he had looked forward to seeing with pleasure.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have some exquisite heart-shaped baskets of silk fiber for St. Valentine's day.

John Savage, of Gwynedd, Pa., is sending some Madame De Watteville roses to the Flower Market.

Edward Reid has joined the ranks of the freesia specialists. His stock is very fine.

Edward McConnell, son of an old-time florist of Sharon, Pa., has taken charge of a plant of about 25,000 feet of glass for A. B. Service. The houses are devoted to carnations and lilies. It is a model establishment with everything in first class condition.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was a visitor in this city last week.

I note with pleasure the advanced ideas of business integrity gaining favor among our leading carnation specialists.

H. Weber & Sons Co., of Oakland, Md., deserve great credit for the notice with regard to My Maryland. In line with this is S. S. Pennock's notice to a customer that Fiancee bursts its calyx in this locality. This notice caused a cancellation of the order, but makes Mr. Pennock immeasurably stronger with his clientele.

Wm. K. Harris has a very fine house of gardenias just coming in bloom. It is understood they will be handled by the Flower Market.

The Leo Niessen Co. has made a hit with Acacia pubescens, which was in great demand for the parties during the past week.

W. E. McKissick is preparing for an active demand for wild smilax during this month.

Among the jurors in Common Pleas, No. 4, Wm. J. Moore, might easily be singled out from the careful attention he was giving to the evidence presented.

John A. Shellem will build a new greenhouse at his place on Magazine Lane, South Philadelphia.

M. Rice & Co. have just received a large consignment of cape flowers. They are also in receipt of a large shipment of moire two-tone crepe paper for Easter.

PHIL.

THE Carnation Number was fine.—M. & S. L. Dysinger, Albion, Mich.

The Market.

With colder weather prevailing, less flowers are arriving than a week ago and are bringing slightly better prices. The fakers who have been handling large quantities of flowers up to date have been unable to ply their vocation on one or two days of late, with the consequence that a good many second and third grade flowers have remained unsold at the markets.

Roses continue to sell very well and are not very plentiful. Best Beauties make $50 and $60, Brides, Maids and Chateaus from $3 to $16, only extra select stock bringing the top price. Some very nice Richmond are seen. They sell at higher rates than Liberty. As usual, Killarney sells well at about the same rates as for Brides and Maids. Some good Mrs. Oliver Ames and Morgan are seen.

Carnations vary from $1.50 to $3, a small number of fancies going higher. Violets sell all the way from 25 cents to 60 cents and sweet peas at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.

Easter lilies and callas are quite plentiful, averaging $8 per hundred. Double and single yellow narcissi sell at $2 to $3, tulips about the same price. Paper Whites are too abundant and hard to sell. Valley is not very plentiful at $3 to $4. Asparagus and adiantum sell very well and are each a little soft at present and none too abundant.

Various Notes.

W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, was the speaker on February 3 in the regular winter lecture course at Horticultural hall. In the course of his remarks he spoke on the advantages of electric light for forwarding greenhouse crops. An animated and interesting discussion followed.

Anderson & Williams, of Waltham, are handling some finely grown cyclamens at the Park street market. They also sell quantities of small ferns in pans.

Good Narcissus poeticus ornatus is coming in from Frank T. White, Mann Bros. and one or two other bulb specialists.

Preparations for the coming convention of the American Rose Society are now being actively pushed and there is every prospect that the coming exhibition will be the finest ever seen in America. Taken in conjunction with the spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society it will, of course, be much more extensive and varied than the one seen at the carnation convention. It has been decided to hold the banquet at the Hotel Brunswick. We hope to see some roses from our western friends at the coming show.

Houghton & Clark are showing, among other flowers, some nice Chorizema ilicifolium and Lilium speciosum.

Carbone is showing some pretty made up pans of Azalea Firefly, four small plants to a pan, also the pretty pink Azalea Temperance and nice gardenias.

Galvin is displaying some well flowered plants of Dendrobium Wardianum, also Cypripedium villosum and other orchids.

Penn, on Bromfield street, always has a neat window. Dendrobium nobile, cælogynes and Cattleya Percivalliana were noticeable in last week's arrangement.

The members of the Music hall market will be able to move into their new sales-room at the end of the present week, the alterations being almost completed.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on February 20 should prove a rousing one. Robert Cameron's lecture on his West Indian tour will prove very fascinating. Exhibits will be unusually numerous and as further applications for membership are being received, everything points to a first-class gathering.

At a meeting of the North Shore Horticultural Society on February 2 a paper was read by James Salter on vegetables. P. R. Sanborn, on behalf of the club and other members, in a felicitous speech presented James McGregor, the respected head gardener on Miss A. G. Thayer's estate with a handsome roll-top desk and chair. Mr. McGregor made a feeling reply. The club is making active preparations for its annual banquet and ball on February 15. A good delegation from the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club will attend.

With the exception of 1876, the January just ended proved the warmest since the establishment of the Boston weather bureau. A normal January has a mean temperature of 27 degrees. This year it was 35.8 degrees. December and January are 12.2 degrees ahead of the schedule for well-behaved winters. February is striving to make good some of the preceding months' deficiencies. February 3 was the coldest day Boston has had for two years.

W. C. Bowditch, of Grove Hall, is handling some well-grown azaleas, cyclamens and other pot plants at the Music hall market.

Seed stores report that there is an extra early demand for seeds and business is well ahead of previous years.

Various Comment.

A sudden and decided change has arrived. Snow enough for a cutter to slide, and the mercury down to 5 degrees below zero. This will shorten up supply and also custom, for the few people who tell you they delight in frozen noses are too odd to indulge in our products. They delight more in sucking icicles and lurching off fried snowballs.

The visitors to Boston have arrived home all the better for the hospitality of our Boston friends and the sight of the great flowers we saw, and all hands feel delighted that the next convention is so near. If it were summer it would be a delightful boat ride across Lake Ontario. As it is likely to be frigid weather, many will be inclined to save ear fare and skate across the forty miles that separate the Dominion from the Republic.

Visitors have been plentiful of late, among them Mr. Knickman, Rutherford, N. J.; Benj. Hammond, Fishkill; Harry Balsley, Detroit; A. Ringier, Chicago; Mr. Zirkmann, representing Rice & Co., Philadelphia. Mr. Z. is such a clean-cut, good-looking young man, with teeth as immaculate as his linen, that it's no wonder he was captured quite young, and was a husband and father at 21. Such boys don't wander around loose very long.

The failure of Mr. Foss has been mentioned. The failure was worse than we had first supposed. The stock in the greenhouses was recently sold at $150. We believe this was the only asset, while the liabilities amount to $10,000, mostly borrowed money. Mr. Foss does not seem to have been particular or partial in spreading his favors in this line, but touched a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, including several shrewd bankers. Where all these contributions went is a mystery, but those most deeply interested seem to trouble little to find out. It's high finance all right, but not frenzied and too deep for the ordinary mortal to understand.

If you want to know the state of trade and who is in town, Kasting's wholesale house is the place to learn it all, and there we found Mr. Gilmann, of violet fame, from Rhinebeck. Mr. Gilmann is a violet man and there is no spot or fly on him. As he ships his entire product to Mr. Kasting, it is natural he should pay us a visit occasionally. Mr. Gilman says: "I could grow violets in the neighborhood of Buffalo as well as I do on the Hudson." There is no doubt about it, and he that says you cannot grow violets in this or that locality is laboring under a fallacy. They have never really tried. They have given up the struggle as soon as met by a minute but stubborn foe. That is the moment a good gardener fights and conquers.

CORFU, N. Y.

One wishing to be well repaid should make a visit to the Wm. Scott Co.'s Corfu place. Carnations as grown here are the best I have seen this season. Nine large houses are devoted to this flower, but the variety that is first and last to my mind in this place is Enchantress, with its 3½-inch bloom on a 3-foot stem, and lots of them. White Lawson, Queen, Red Lawson, Mrs. Lawson and Harlowarden are grown and well thought of. We found Boston Market here in fine shape and Glacier fine but off crop. Flamingo is good but a trifle shy. David Scott says that with early cuttings he thinks this variety will pay. Prosperity here is all but what its name would indicate. The plants are healthy and fine but so shy that David says you have to hunt to find the blooms. David's time these days is pretty well occupied going from residence to his houses, as he is recently the father of a young Scott of the third generation and judging from his smiles it is his first. Five houses here are all devoted to roses, which are looking well, but are now in light cut.

WICHITA, KAN.

The temperature has been more like spring than winter, no cold, stormy weather of any kind. Business has been somewhat better than last year. There is not so much large decorating this winter but more funeral work.

At the banquet during our Freight Rate Convention, there were 600 plates. Bouquets of roses and carnations were used on all but one table and on that table, in the center, was a freight depot. Bronze galax leaves were used for the roof to represent shingles. A track was made of No. 9 galvanized wire for rails, with baby ribbon for ties. At the door at either end of the depot was a small engine and tender, with freight cars laden with cigars and matches. Just as the toastmaster began, the engine started and each one helped himself to a smoke. It was quite a card for the occasion.

Chas. P. Mueller is making a success in growing roses at his new greenhouses, showing some very good fancy varieties. He has just installed feeding tanks. There is one large tank, 10x14 feet, three feet deep. When manure is to be put in, this tank is connected with a steam pipe. When ready, the gate is opened; the liquid passes through three screens of different sizes into a large cistern and is there pumped up to a tank by a windmill, using the regular water pipe to conduct the liquid manure when needed. Everything is doing fine. He has a fine bed of violets and is cutting good carnations. Business in his downtown store is on the increase and it is thought it will pay.

Mrs. C. A. Rose was called to her old home in Aurora, Ill., on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. Stevens.

W. H. Culp & Co. reports business good.

There was a shortage of flowers last week but they are coming in again. Carnation day for the first time increased the call for that popular flower, especially by the school children. All are looking for a good spring and Easter trade. M. P. C.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Minn.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, O., June 26-28, 1906.

W. W. BARNARD, Chicago, continues to gain in his fight with pneumonia.

ENGLISH growers are enthusiastic over Burbank's Crimson Winter rhubarb.

VISITED CHICAGO: Prof. W. W. Traey, Sr., Washington, D. C.; E. C. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

The European sources of supply all report a very strong demand for spinach, which is cleaned out in most growing localities.

MRS. GUELF, wife of Chas. Guef, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., who has been seriously ill in a Chicago hospital, is now improving.

THE quotations of cloverseed at New York are nominally $13 for No. 1 and $12.50 for No. 2. Chicago timothy was $3.40 for March, and cloverseed $13.25 for cash.

J. W. RATEKIN, Shenandoah, Ia., says they began shipping car lots of seed corn December 28, and that since that date the business, including catalogue trade, has been much heavier than usual.

AT some of the principal onion seed centers there is a feeling that the California growers should confine their efforts in making onion seed sales to seedsmen only, or at least to growers who buy in larger quantities than fifty-pound lots.

It is reported that a considerable quantity of onion seed of the red and yellow flat varieties is available. Investigation fails to locate it, however, and it is thought that the same lot has been inventoried several times over and credited up to different individuals.

THERE is considerable activity in onion sets. February shipments are going out in good shape. The quality of the stock is all that could be desired. The bulk of the quantity put into storage last fall has carried well. The even temperature of the winter has made it easier than usual to winter the sets.

THE demand for onion seed is in no way lessened by the present drop in the price of onions. As reported in the REVIEW a week or two ago, there is a feeling among the onion growers that the next month will show a sharp advance in the price of good sound bulbs and that conditions warrant a firm holding of such onions for the advance.

REPORTS in general indicate a healthy condition of trade. The wholesalers are feeling good over the outlook, fill-in orders are expected to be of good volume and bookings for the coming year continue to come in in a satisfactory manner. The houses which cater to the market garden trade are busy and the mail order houses report good returns from

HOLLOW STALK OF CELERY.

I have been very much interested in the articles published in the late numbers of the REVIEW about celery. I grow several thousand bunches every year, and have had some trouble with it getting hollow, and also with running to seed. Last year I thinned my plants and transplanted the ones I took out as soon as they were large enough to handle, cutting off a small portion of the root and also the top. I set them in the garden the latter part of May. Those that had been transplanted had an abundance of fine roots, while those that were not transplanted had a large tap root with but few feeders, and most of them went to seed, while those that had been transplanted did not run to seed. My experience is that early sown seed will have to be transplanted. I would like to hear what other celery growers think about it. I was troubled very much with ground mice eating my celery in October and November. Would like to know how to get rid of them. H. C. Oregon.

I was very much pleased with the articles on hollow stalks of celery, published in the REVIEW of recent dates. Mr. S. says he prepared his seed bed in the open ground in January. Now would that do here in Indiana? I have about four acres of peat lake bottom and raised a large crop of potatoes, sweet corn and field corn. Now I want to plant something that will pay better than these crops. Could you suggest anything? Ireland has its peat bogs; so has Holland, and I would like to know what pays best; also any suggestions about draining and managing where the water level has its ups and downs. What are the best works on market gardening in Holland (English translation)? J. C. HENNESSEY.

The Seed Grower

Cloth, 12 mo, 191 pp. Price $1.25 postpaid.

A new book by Charles Johnson, author of The Seedsman's Assistant.

This is a practical treatise on growing vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs for market or commercial purposes, describing operations for each variety in detail, when to plant, harvesting, drying and cleaning; with crop yield per acre, prices paid to growers, market status, where the best seeds are now grown, contract forms for growers, how to originate new varieties, how to take care of seeds.

The only complete work on seed growing published in any country.

The chapter on raising, cleaning, storing and keeping onion sets is itself worth the price of the whole book. The same can be said of chapters on other varieties, beans, cabbage, corn, cucumbers, melon, peas, tomatoes, etc. Every seedsman, every florist, every gardener, every farmer should have a copy. Know how the best seeds are grown. The more you know about seeds the better.

HOW TO GROW AMARYLLIS.

Some of our customers having complained at different times that they do not succeed with their amaryllis, we offer a few suggestions, which, if intelligently followed out, will produce satisfactory results.

Amaryllis may be had in bloom from January to July without any trouble, but nine failures out of every ten in growing these bulbous plants are caused through watering the bulbs at starting time, or before the flower-spike is visible.

The right time for repotting the bulbs is at the beginning of January, but there must be a frequent examination of stock for repotting, as in a large batch there is always a great difference in the growth.

When potting, cover the thicker part of the bulb with soil composed of two parts turfy loam, one part river sand, and one part leaf-mold and some well decomposed cow manure. Then the pots should be plunged up to the rims in a bed of tan, and started in a temperature of about 55 degrees. Take care the plants are put where they will receive a fair amount of light. Commence to give water about twice a week after the flower-bud is visible. In a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees (if not plunged in tan, 65 to 70 degrees), the amaryllis will soon push up their flower stems. When in full bloom, watering will be necessary at least thrice a week, but discontinue watering when the foliage shows signs of dying off, and when it shrivels remove the pots to a frost-free and dry shelf, and keep the bulbs quite dry until January.

When at rest, from October to January, water should be withheld, and, moreover, amaryllis do not require water before the flower-spike is visible, some two to four weeks after starting.

TUBEROUS BEGONIAS.

When should tuberous begonias be started to have them in bloom for the third week in May? Please give brief cultural directions. P. O.

If you want these begonias for flower gardening the less they are forced under glass the better. To have them attractive plants by the third week in May, start in 3-inch pots the first of March and shift on as they grow. A soil that is one-third leaf mold and sand and two-thirds decayed sod will suit them well. If for flower garden, start in flats from the middle to the end of March and when they have made a few leaves pot into 4-inch and place in a mild hotbed. On warm days in May the sash can be

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

PEORIA, ILL.

February 27 and 28 have been selected as the dates of the meeting of the state convention of florists, which will be held in Peoria and at which a state organization will be perfected. The event will be made a flower show at which the large growers of Peoria and other cities of the state will have exhibits.

Chicago florists announce that they are coming in force. A number of them have but recently returned from the carnation show at Boston and will come to Peoria enthusiastic over the results of that affair.

The convention will select a committee to go to Springfield and urge an appropriation for the establishment of an experiment station at the State University which the florists of the state have been advocating for some time. Between 150 and 200 delegates will be here and the convention will close with a big banquet given by the recently organized Peoria association, to the visitors.

The following are the officers of the Peoria organization: President, Chas. Loveridge; secretary, James U. Cole; banquet committee, G. A. Kuhl, Nelson Cole, B. Juerjens; decoration committee, Nelson Cole, Mr. Klopfer, Mr. Brothers, Mr. Miller.

CANDIDUM LILIES.

When should candidum lilies be started to have them bloom for Easter? Please state briefly how they are best handled.

P. O.

Lilium candidum is usually potted in September and October, stood in cold frame until December 1 and then brought into temperature of 50 degrees. If they do not promise to be in flower by Easter, 10 degrees higher temperature can be given the last month. As they are inclined to grow tall and rather weak-stemmed they should at all times have the fullest light.
