PERRY FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

The midwinter meeting of the Perry Florists' Association was held January 30, 31, and February 1 at the greenhouses of A. N. Kinsman and wife, Austin, Minn. Those present were: W. B. Perry, of Cresco; Mr. Springer and wife, of New Hampton; Messrs. Sherman, Wetherbee and Crome, of Charles City; Wheeler, of Mason City; Clawson, of Albert Lea, and Hall, of Osage. All were disappointed that Mr. and Mrs. Symonds, of Decorah, could not be with us.

The exhibit was good and showed some fine grown stock, C. C. Pollworth Co., of Milwaukee, being represented in this line. Among other pleasant features of the meeting was a trip to Owatonna to visit the Clinton Falls Nursery Co.'s greenhouses. Everything there looked fine and showed good management. At the close of the meeting an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler, of Mason City, was accepted to meet with them next summer. Mr. Wheeler was then elected president of the association and W. S. Hall secretary and treasurer.

PACIFIC COAST.
SAN FRANCISCO.
The Market.

We are in the midst of an unexpected spell of warm weather, the thermometer reaching 80 degrees in the shade several days during the past week. In consequence, flowers of all kinds are coming into town with considerable rapidity and the prices are lowering considerably.

We have had the first good crop of bulbous stock during the past week. Narcissi and daffodils are being offered by the thousands and violets can be had at any price. Carnations have felt the decline in prices somewhat and a reduction of about 20 per cent has been the average all along the line. Roses still continue rather scarce and it will be several weeks before they will be in supply enough to get lower in price. The only really scarce article at present is maidenhair fern. The wild varieties are not yet in sufficient quantities to assist the dealers and until they become plentiful, the short stemmed, closely cut stock will have to be used. Business is very good.

Various Notes.

Jas. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, is in town.

The Society Hortensia, of Alameda county, has changed its place of meeting to Gier's Hall, Oakland.

L. D. Fairbanks has gone on a two weeks' trip to Portland, Ore.

E. Hoffman, the landscape gardener of San Jose, is in town.

Owing to the large sales of hardy palms for sidewalk planting there is a scarcity of large sized stock in the local nurseries.

A great deal of funeral work was made in town on Friday of this week for the funerals of the firemen who lost their lives on the government transport Meade.

The orchid houses of J. C. Siegfried, of Alameda, are in excellent shape at this time and the display of cattleyas is the finest ever seen here.

A. D. Pryal, of Berkeley, is planting large quantities of dracenas on College avenue.

G. Rossi represents the violet market as being entirely glutted. The bottom fell out of prices during the past week and the flowers can be had at any price.

OUTDOOR ROSES FOR CUTTING.

The grower who expects to have a good crop of outdoor flowers on his roses for the early spring should keep in mind that this is quite late enough to prune, and if anything of the kind is required one spell of warm weather will quickly start the dormant branches into fresh growth and opportunities will then be lost. It is the proper season now to dig and cultivate between the plants and apply plenty of manure. It is probable that we shall still have some heavy rains, but with plenty of mulching over the surface there is no danger of the soil becoming too hard.

Regarding pruning, it should be kept in mind that there is much more danger of over-pruning than in not cutting enough. Many of our finest varieties need the least trimming; in fact, it acts to many sorts as a severe detriment and the shears should only be trusted in the hands of a skilled workman. The general rule, however, is to trim away all the small, weak wood and save the heavy, straight canes after topping them. This always encourages a growth of heavy, straight stems and they are what the grower is after.

It is noticeable that there is a growing demand for outdoor grown rose flowers in the early spring. Not but that they could be sold at any time, but there are so few grown in proportion to the amounts cut under glass that the public has little chance to obtain them. Many of the varieties considered the least satisfactory under glass are among the most magnificent when flowered outdoors. Quite a number of kinds were tried under glass first and after several years were superseded by other kinds. I might refer to Papa Gontier as one of these. This rose, when well grown and under proper treatment, is the most prolific of pink sorts. It is almost too single when grown inside, but when planted in the open it makes large, heavy buds of a most beautiful shade of deep, rosy pink, fully half a dozen degrees darker than those from under glass. This sort is a strong growing variety and an abundant bloomer. Rainbow comes under the same heading and, like the foregoing, when well grown outside leaves nothing to be desired for a good selling variety. La France is usually not quite so prolific of bloom and cannot always be depended on to produce perfect flowers.

Among the white sorts Gloire Lyonnaise is considered one of the most satisfactory. It has the quality of always forming long, heavy stems and the size and shape of the blossoms are perfect. Ulrich Brunner is much more desirable outside in any event. It is not an ever-blooming rose even at its best and for this reason it is not forced to any large extent. It acts well when in the open and is another of the varieties that need little recommendation. Mrs. John Laing is another of the same class and its color cannot be duplicated with anything grown inside. It is surprising, when one commences to think, how few varieties are grown in the greenhouse and what a list of the discarded sorts we have planted largely outside and find them the best of the marketable kinds.

VIOLETS IN CALIFORNIA.

I had the same experience as A. L. H. with my violets. I irrigated them and in about two days after I noticed that plants were dying and leaves were covered with spots. It looked as though I was going to lose all my plants. I went to work and pulled all the leaves

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

THE apple growing industry in the Pacific northwest is only in its infancy.

E. RUNYON, of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J., is in Cuba, where he has business interests.

KIRKMAN & SON, proprietors of the nursery at Merced, Cal., are establishing a nursery at Fresno, Cal.

THE latest work of the prolific pen of C. S. Harrison, York, Neb., is A Manual on the Phlox, just published by the author.

M. J. WRAGG, of Waukegan, Ia., has purchased property in Kingman boulevard, Des Moines, and will shortly erect a handsome residence.

I. E. ILGENFRITZ established the business known as I. E. Ilgenfritz & Sons Co., the Monroe Nursery, Monroe, Mich., in 1847. The concern is now managed by his five sons.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has published a pamphlet on Citrous Fruit Growing in the Gulf States, which will be of interest to all nurserymen who handle this class of stock.

LATHROP KINGSBURY, a nursery agent, asked the cashier of the bank at White Cloud, Mich., to buy some notes; the banker declined and Kingsbury struck him. After paying a fine he went back to the bank and apologized.

VISITED NEW YORK.—W. C. Barry, of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, N. Y.; Geo. C. Perkins, of Jackson & Perkins, Newark, N. Y.; W. H. Moon, of Morrisville, Pa.; F. Flemmer, Springfield, N. J.; W. H. Wyman, of North Abington, Mass.; H. T. Jones, of Elizabeth, N. J.

THE Pontiac Nursery Co., Pontiac, Mich., has filed articles of incorporation with the county clerk. The capital stock is $15,000, in shares of $25. William W. Essig, Titus G. Phillips and Edwin S. Sherrill, the latter for himself and also as trustee, are the shareholders. The nursery will be located in Bloomfield township.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

A meeting of the National Council of Horticulture was held at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, on February 5. Those present from outside of Chicago were: W. W. Tracy, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington; Prof. Greene, of the Department of Horticulture of the University of Minnesota; L. A. Goodman, Kansas City, president of the American Pomological Society; C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association; H. C. Irish, of the Missouri Botanic Garden, St. Louis, secretary of the council.

An all-day session was held, the principal subject for discussion being the method of putting into operation the plan already determined upon of supplying to the public press rational, instructive horticultural matter which will be of benefit to the several branches of the trade represented in the council. It was determined to place the preparation of the matter in the hands of representative men from four departments of the trade and to send it out through a press agent. A considerable sum of money has been contributed by firms in the trade to defray the expense necessary to the carrying out of the plans.

TEXAS NURSERYMEN MEET.

The Texas Nurserymen's Association met at Palestine, Tex., on January 25; as reported briefly in last week's REVIEW.

The meeting was called to order by President E. W. Kirkpatrick, who stated the object to be to consider the coming convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Dallas, and to consider ways and means for proper handling and entertainment.

Members of the entertainment committee, appointed by the State Nurserymen's Association, announced that they were making elaborate preparations and that it would necessitate the raising of a strong fund to be placed at their disposal. A motion prevailed that the secretary open the books at once for subscriptions, and a good liberal subscription by those present was realized. The finance committee were admonished to raise not less than $2,500 for use in the entertainment of this convention.

The program committee of the American Association, J. S. Kerr, of Sherman, chairman, reported progress. The forenoon sessions only will be given to addresses, and to reports of committees, while the remainder of the time will be given to entertainment of the visitors. Luther Burbank and Prof. Wickson, of California, have been invited to attend and take part in the program. The program committee further reported that the transportation committee and the legislative committee will be given ample time to lay before the convention the good work these committees have done, the former the important concessions they have been able to secure in transportation rates on nursery stock, the latter upon the good work they are doing in getting uniform interstate regulations in the inspection laws.

A letter from the Western Association of Nurserymen outlines that this association will meet at Kansas City and come to Dallas in a body. Mr. Knox has had made a large number of rubber stamps containing a star and in it the sentence, "Texas invites you to Dallas in 1906." Texas nurserymen are requested to use these stamps on their stationery on letters going out of the state.

SANBORN, N. Y.

On a visit at the place of C. F. Treichler everything was found in a prosperous condition. Mr. Treichler makes a specialty of carnations and, though being a grower only four years, he now has a modest place of 10,000 feet and has the glass at hand for one additional house 30x150 which will be built this spring. He is one of those honest, hard-working fellows who is bound to make a success. Here we found housed 8,000 carnations in the pink of condition and we are told he is having a steady cut of 4,500 per week. For pink, Enchantress and Lawson are grown and are highly thought of, and in red, Red Lawson and Crane. In white he has Queen and Queen Louise. Queen will be grown moderately next year. Queen Louise will be dropped. While it gives oceans of flowers they nearly all burst. The new varieties taken on for next year include Lady Bountiful, Lieut. Peary, White Lawson and Variegated Lawson. B.

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held February 3, President S. Carlquist in the chair. The society has arranged to hold the annual dinner February 17 and has set apart March 3 for carnation night and March 17 for rose night. It was decided that this society hold three shows this year; viz., rose and strawberry show, June 26; annual and perennial show, August 15, and the annual chrysanthemum show, October 24 and 25. Schedules for June 26 and August 15, also preliminary schedules for October 24 and 25 shows will be printed and any one interested may apply to the secretary who will be pleased to forward them. G. F.

FORT COLLINS, COLO.

The Fort Collins Floral Monument & Undertaking Co., has sold out to the Orth Floral Co. The monument and undertaking part will be dropped. The retiring company bought the greenhouses of Wm. Hanawalt last October. H. Orth, late of the greenhouse department of the Colorado College of Agriculture, is the manager of the new company.

Not enough rain or snow to lay the dust since November 1 is the record here this winter, with hardly a cloudy day in the meanwhile. Now the days are very warm and bright. N. E. D.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

February business has started off with a rush. All the stores report a big increase over last week's business. Prices still rule high, but people seem to be more willing to pay good prices for good quality than ever before. The faker is in hard lines in this city, as the people here have at last been educated up to the fact that high grade stuff is in reality the cheapest and the demand for cheap stuff is on the decline.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray says that he did the largest business last week that he has ever done since he has been in business here. He says that the flower business is only keeping pace with the remarkable growth of the city. Miss M. Dalley also says that her business has been something remarkable for this time of the year. Arthur Newell also did a heavy business. From all the stores comes the same report, "Business something remarkable; better than ever before."

The Shaeffer Floral Co. received a consignment of Lawson carnations from Raton, N. M., Friday. Although they were shipped this long distance in an ordinary pasteboard box, without ice, they arrived in good shape.

A. Blankenfeld has a bench of Chinese primulas that are a sight. They are the finest specimens we have seen for some time.

Miss Shiras is doing a fine business and has had to add to her force of clerks to accommodate her increasing trade.

If business continues as it has started out this year there will be a building boom among the florists. Several new ranges of houses have already been planned.

Our little spell of summer weather terminated in a blizzard Sunday.

J. M. Jansen, of Hillegom, Holland was in the city last week. KAY-SEE.

I ENJOY the REVIEW beyond words to express; we look forward to its coming each week and feel there is no florist who can afford to be without it.—A. L. VAN OSTRAND, Abilene, Kan.

White Perfection

PURE WHITE. The most satisfactory white carnation ever offered to the trade. A true florists' variety that is of the largest size and best form. It leads in production of blooms and the habit is perfect. It is the first in bloom and at all times throughout the entire season gives an even cut of flowers that cannot be equaled by any other variety. It opens quickly and does not burst the calyx. It is perfectly healthy in every respect. The orders booked to date exceed the sales of any white variety we have yet sent out, Place your order early. Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. We have a large stock and cuttings are of the best grade.

We can supply Robt. Craig, Victory, John E. Haines, My Maryland, Candace and Glendale at introducers' prices—$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

WILLIAMSVILLE, N. Y.

Byrne Bros. have three fine King houses devoted to growing stock for their Buffalo store. This place is under the care of Henry Weber and, judging from appearances, he is the right man. The stock all looks well. A house of carnations is a feature. Harrisii lilies show up badly diseased. Longiflorum are good, but a little slow. A quantity of spring bedding stock is to be seen, also a fine lot of azaleas and Easter plants.

At C. B. Shisler's everything is filled to overflowing. A specialty is made of geranium stock for the trade. Carnations are grown in moderate quantity. A carnation house 25x100 is planned for this coming summer. A fine lot of Longiflorum lilies are in evidence, also a quantity of spring bedding stock. A bed of Asparagus plumosus strings is fine. Mr. Shisler plants 10,000 to 15,000 geraniums in the field for cuttings and a trip to his geranium field in midsummer affords a sight long to be remembered.

Tobias Shank has the glass for a carnation house to be built this spring.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held January 30. President Joseph Mooney in the chair. The following were elected to active membership of the society: Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.; Francis Black, Ossining, N. Y.; E. M. Berrien, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Philip Jewell, Irvington, N. Y. The monthly exhibit and prize, a handsome clock, given by Joseph Bradley, Dobbs Ferry, for the best twelve sprays of mignonette, was won by John Featherstone, Greystone, Yonkers, with a dozen beautiful spikes. Joseph Bradley received honorable mention for a fine vase of Her Majesty mignonette. The dates for the annual fall exhibition to be held in the Music hall, Tarrytown, will be October 30, 31 and November 1. The event of the evening was the reading of an essay on mignonette, by Joseph Bradley. The paper was well received and a hearty vote of thanks accorded to Mr. Bradley for his able effort. An interesting discussion followed in answer to the questions found in the question box. Several of the members took part.

Jessica Red and white variegated.

Extra large, high-grade commercial varieties. The finest and most profitable in their respective classes. Both varieties show extra strong Lawson habits and similar height. We advise the alert grower to try both of these varieties. $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Send for our new catalogue giving full descriptions of the above and other new and standard varieties.

The Market.

Business remains about the same. The weather has taken on more of a winter aspect, it being cold and clear, with several inches of snow on the ground, producing a marked improvement in some stock. Roses are a scarce article in the market. Carnations sell about as fast as they make their appearance, with the exception of Lawson. The market is fairly drugged with this variety which seems to be getting poorer every day. Shipments from different growers all have the same fault, the flowers are considerably smaller than formerly and crippled; in fact, about the only good feature left is the stiff stems and these seem to be much shorter.

Hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, narcissi and spring flowers in general are in great demand and as the market is well supplied in this respect, this will no doubt give carnations a chance to catch up. Both single and double violets are very good at present and are selling well at 75 cents and $1 per hundred.

The plant end of the business is remarkably good this year.

Various Notes.

In a recent trip to Boston I had the pleasure of visiting the private place of Lars Anderson, at Brookline, where the greenhouses and gardening are very ably conducted by Duncan Finlayson.

In this estate is one of the most complete Italian gardens in America, over 100 bay and box trees, from the small swan shaped box to the large stately bay, are used in its completion, these at present being in their winter quarters. In the greenhouses were a general assortment of plants and flowers, including some fine orchids, all stock being above the average in appearance.

Harmonie hall was elaborately decorated by J. F. Sullivan for the Knights of St. John's ball.

Visitors: Robert Greenlaw, Boston; J. H. Thomas, John Roelker and Chas. Schwake, New York. H. S.

LYNN, MASS.

Lynn, with its $40,000,000 annual business in shoes, with the enormous General Electric factories dispensing $100,000 weekly to employes, besides many other industries, should be heard from oftener in our profession, for there are some up-to-date establishments and some thoroughly good fellows of both sexes in the business here.

Reports are that Delansky will build this spring.

Jas. Miller of Wm. Miller & Sons, recently purchased two acres of land in West Lynn, probably with the intention of building later.

Love & May, who formed a co-partnership last season, report an excellent plant business during the past year, with bright prospects for the future. They have most of our parks and public grounds to plant each season, the same being taken care of by men in the employ of the city.

Gibbs Bros. recently completed additions and improvements, among which are a propagating house, cold storage, and a coal bin with a capacity of forty tons.

The winter here has been exceptionally mild and open. The head farmer at the city home was seen ploughing last week, something unknown here for many years.

ORANGE, N. J.

The annual installation feast of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held at its rooms on February 2. The evening was spent in social intercourse, with music and refreshments. Among the speakers were J. Austin Shaw, Chas. H. Totty and Arthur Herrington. The floral display was not only large but choice, and included orchids, roses and carnations and many other flowers. Carnation Victory was exhibited by Guttman & Weber, Winsor, Helen M. Gould and White Enchantress by F. R. Pierson Co., and vases of cut orchid blooms from Lager & Hurrell and Thomas Jones, besides a large showing from the neighboring estates filled the room. The judges for the evening were C. H. Totty, Arthur Herrington and Robert M. Schultz.

PENTSTEMONS.

During the last few years, no class of hardy florists' flowers has been more greatly improved than the pentstemons, and with the many beautiful varieties now at our disposal, it is quite easy to produce a fine display throughout the summer and autumn months. For bedding purposes, no plants are more suitable;

they are not damaged by rough and wet weather, as, unfortunately, many bedding subjects are. I am convinced that when the improved pentstemons become better known their value will be appreciated, and I strongly advise all who have not yet given them a trial to do so without delay.

To have pentstemons at their best, a border not less than six feet wide should be devoted entirely to them. The most suitable position is one facing south, or southwest, where all the light and sun can reach the plants. Select a site that is not overshadowed by large trees, but, if there is a background, such as a hedge, so much the better.

The preparation of the ground is an important item, and if one has light soil to deal with, it is advisable to trench or dig it deeply, adding plenty of well-decayed manure, and any heavy material which is to spare. This can settle down before planting time arrives. On the other hand, if one has a heavy loam or clay soil, the trenching is best deferred till very early in the spring, and, in addition to well-rotted manure, any light material, such as road-grit, wood-ashes, and the like should be freely incorporated. Pentstemons respond well to liberal treatment, and root deeply in search of moisture during dry weather. Therefore, one will be well rewarded for any extra trouble which is taken in connection with preparing the soil.—Gardeners' Magazine.

DARLINGTON ON CALIFORNIA.

[The continuation of a paper by E. B. Darlington, trial ground superintendent for W. Atlee Burpee & Co., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, January 2, 1906. The first installment was published January 18.]

Palms as Street Trees.

Fan palms fifty to sixty feet in height are ornamental and a distinct novelty, with smooth trunk and crown of green leaves high in the air, but the dead leaves hanging closely to the trunk below the green crown detract from its beauty and I cannot commend it for street planting; especially when of younger growth, the spiky parts of the leaves are on a level with your eyes. The fan palm and the pepper tree seem to divide the honors in California and both are used very largely and almost to the exclusion of other trees for street planting. The foliage of the pepper tree is beautiful and glossy, but the trailing branches hang like those of a weeping-willow and are only a little less annoying than the palm leaves, while the immense crop of berries keeps the walk dirty and slippery. Some day when these trees grow larger and taller they will add a distinct feature to the towns but it seems a pity that when there are so many more graceful and suitable trees for street planting that these two should be used exclusively, as they are much better adapted for individual specimens on the lawn.

Near Ventura is the Cole bulb farm, where callas and freesias are grown by the acre, but these were just starting into growth after their summer rest and of course did not present the display that they would in the spring. Near Oceano I saw carnations growing in a garden which were finer in plant and flower than any I have ever seen in a greenhouse, the plants being sturdy and symmetrical, with beautiful foliage and stiff, erect stems surmounted by the finest and most symmetrical flowers; no stake or support was needed, and here should be the perfect field for the work of the hybridizer and seeker after new varieties.

At Pasadena I saw on the lawns a number of beautiful specimens of Phoenix reclinata, ten to twenty feet in height and of most symmetrical form, but this was the only one of the finer palms that I saw used to any extent in California. It seems to me that our large palm growers should work up this field and encourage California planters to make use of the seaforthia, latania, kentia, etc., which have a more graceful appearance than the old fan palm, with its spiky leaves and thread-like filaments.

In the vicinity of Santa Barbara are large lemon orchards nestling in the valleys between the hills, wherever there is an opening with a supply of water for irrigation. Just below Santa Barbara there is a beautiful place on the seashore called Mirainar, consisting of small cottages each surrounded with a fresh green lawn, also a country club with spacious grounds, all with the greenery of our suburbs and a splendid view of the sea.

At Los Angeles.

Just before reaching Los Angeles, the train passes through several miles of strawberry fields closely planted, with just room to walk between the rows and all under irrigation, but one has to look twice to recognize this well known plant, as each leaf looks as though it had just been washed, waxed and varnished. Looking along the rows every once in a while you see a plant with a large cluster of ripe berries, not a crop at all, but say one plant in twenty-five with ripe fruit, and affording a good picking from the large area, and as the winter season advances they become more plentiful. A little nearer Los Angeles, in fact just outside of the city, there is a pigeon establishment with 30,000 breeding birds, the whole arrangement consisting simply of orange boxes piled in tiers for nests and covered with wire netting supported by rough poles. In the Los Angeles markets I saw huge piles of the Winter Pineapple muskmelons labeled "fine Casabas" which must have originated in the imagination of some grower who had never seen the true type of the fine old Casaba, as nothing more distinct could have been conjured in the garden.

The giant redwoods near Vera Cruz resemble an enormous growth of hemlock spruce many times magnified and these trees increase in size as one ascends the mountains, culminating in a grove of fine trees averaging 300 feet in height in a valley near the summit. This grove has been enclosed for a park and will be preserved for future generations.

On many ranches there are groves of eucalyptus planted closely together, twenty to twenty-five years ago and now seventy-five to 100 feet in height, with trunks as straight as an arrow, but so far no use has been found for this tree excepting for fire-wood and it is about as ornamental as the Carolina poplar.

Among the disappointments of the trip was that I did not see any San Jose scale at San Jose. Although I inquired for it repeatedly no one seemed to be acquainted with this small pest, which is raising so much commotion here, except by reputation.

Although my stay in California was limited to two weeks, every moment was crowded with interesting sights and experiences and I have only been able to give you a very meagre account of the interesting things to be seen. To give a full account of what I saw in even such a short visit would require several evenings and would, I fear tire your patience unless you too have been there and have a fellow feeling in reminiscences. State of Business.

All the florists I have seen are busy propagating bedding stock and, judging by the amount that is being rooted, they are looking forward to a large business this coming spring. There is a large amount of shrubs and herbaceous stuff being planted and the indications are that landscape work will increase rapidly.

Carnations in most of the places visited are looking fine. Experiments are being made with some of the newer varieties, but I cannot as yet see any improvement on the older sorts. There are some fine blooms grown of The Belle but I hardly think it will meet the requirements of this country. Fiancee has an exquisite color and large flower, but as yet does not produce enough bloom to justify extensive growing. Lawsons, which do not make much stem, are now growing finely and my experience so far is that if planted early they will give good results. Queen Louise is grown in some sections to perfection, while in other places it has proved a failure. Woleott does finely as far as I can see, and seems to stand the sudden changes of the climate without a burst calyx. Estelle does not quite come up to what was expected of it, while America gives the best of results. Enehantriss is now at its best, being full of buds with stems two to three feet long and brings the top price.

Valley has never been grown much here, and is really a novelty, and is eagerly snapped up, prices ranging from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Narcissi, in fact all bulbous stock, sells on sight, and good prices are realized.

Sudden change of weather conditions is what the growers have to contend with. The thermometer may read 80 degrees today and tomorrow, with a sudden change of wind, may drop to 22 degrees. Such conditions keep us here ever on the alert and we are glad when spring comes to relieve the tension.

W. J. Palmer's establishment contains 300,000 feet of glass and is devoted almost entirely to roses and carnations. When you enter the place you will undoubtedly meet that whole-souled fellow, Barney Meyers, in whose care this place is. It is a pleasure to have his company through house after house so well grown that you are compelled to ask how he does it. It is seldom that you come across a place of this size all in such fine shape. You find here numerous varieties in carnations, but you might term this place the home of Lawson, as three-fourths are of this variety in pink, white, red and variegated. You ask Barney what is his best variety and he will promptly say Red Lawson. Lawson here has again sported several different ways. A fine non-bursting white, pink and red variegated and a Prosperity color should be acquisitions. Fiancee is here as you see it everywhere, a fine color and stem, but ninety-five per cent split. Robert Craig is here on trial, a fine bloomer and quite free. Its greatest fault found here is an inclination to get sleepy too soon.

Roses are in fine shape. One large house is being planted with Kaiserin for summer blooming. A fine lot of long-florum lilies and quantities of Easter plants are in their stages of growth, as well as a constant supply of bulbous stock which is forced. The output of this place is sold through Mr. Palmer's Buffalo stores and you can judge the volume of his business when he tells you he still has to buy. C. B. S.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—J. E. Felthousen is at Dunedin, Fla., and expects to remain there until some time in April. The plant business is starting in well here.

BERLIN, ONT.—H. L. Janzen & Son will add largely to their plant as soon as spring opens.

GREENHOUSE MATERIAL

When you contemplate building we will appreciate an opportunity to discuss greenhouse construction.

It will cost you nothing—only a little time.

If we cannot interest you or prove beyond a doubt that our material is perfect, that it is strictly up-to-date and that our prices are very reasonable—we lose your order.

At all events don't fail to write for information about our material before purchasing.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of

OUR "HOLD UPS"

Sort of a Wild West Phrase, but on East here We Use it at the Factory to designate the Manner of Foundation Side Supports, the Parts that Hold the House up and Keep the House Down.

In our little talk together last week you admitted that there was a difference in castings—that the kind of iron had a lot to do with it; that "scrap" did not make a high-class casting. Now, the cast-iron foot piece, going 2½ feet in the ground and bolted direct on the rafter post, is the vital supporting part of our houses; it's the part that carries the weight, the part most subject to rust corrosion. Don't you think it is important to have this "hold up" made the best possible? Isn't the foundation "firm as a rock" the kind of a foundation you want?

Half a century we have been building houses
The first house we ever built stands today and we expect it to stand. Don't you think a house on the half century plan pays?

DO YOU KNOW

This Beautiful New Hybrid Tea?

The Queen of all Pink Roses!

Deep coloring and heavy foliage like American Beauty; ever-blooming, not a cropper; easy to grow; good for outside as well as under glass. Any Minneapolis or St. Paul florist will tell you all about it.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 12, 1906.

MR. JOHN MONSON, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir—Regarding the new rose, Miss Kate Moulton, I wish to say that I have been acquainted with it from its birth, and I believe it has come to stay with us as we certainly wish it to do. I have been handling it in my retail store to the best trade in the city for the last four years and I have found this, that side by side with Bridesmaid and Chatenay, invariably my customers choose Miss Kate Moulton in preference to the other pink roses, as the color and size of flowers are more superb, and its lasting after cut so much better.

I am so well pleased with this rose that I prefer to handle it rather than any other pink rose now on market, and I consider this rose a grand contribution to all lovers of beautiful flowers, among which I class the Miss Kate Moulton.

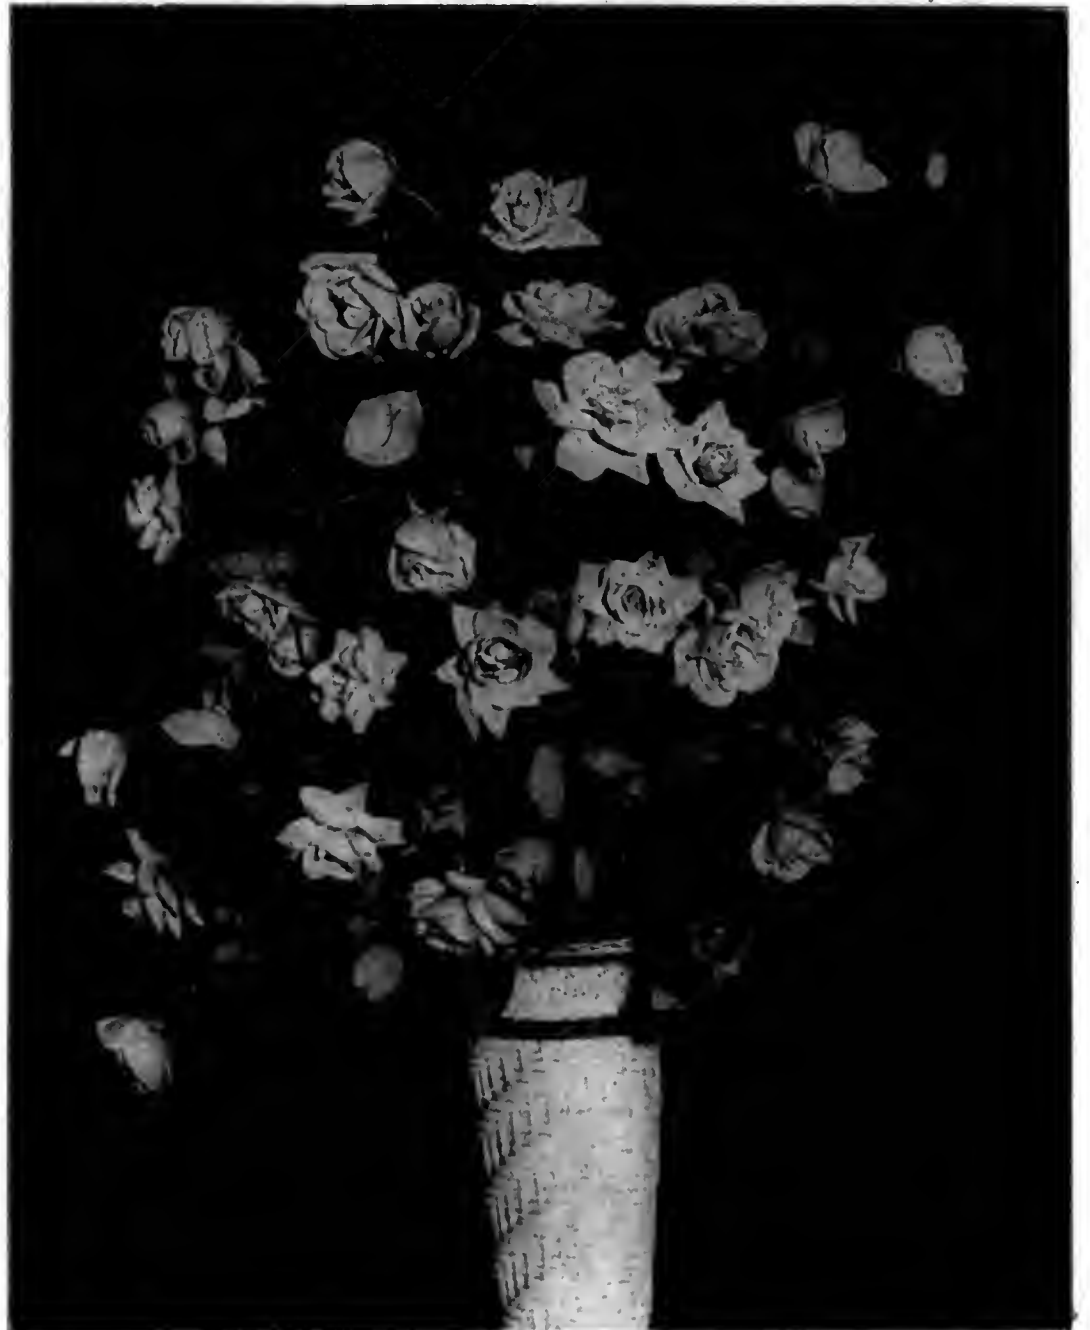

Yours truly, O. C. SWANSON.

40 E. Madison St., Chicago, Ill., Jan. 16, 1906.

MR. JOHN MONSON, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir—I am pleased to state that the Moulton roses shipped to me were received in excellent condition. There was a gathering of florists in the building and about forty florists were in and looked at them; Mr. Samuelson admired them, as did Mr. Wienhoeber. These roses added greatly to the beauty of my store and were greatly admired by all who saw them. I would ask what price you will make me to ship fifty Moultons three times per week, if possible. Trusting you will favor me with a prompt and favorable reply and thanking you for care taken in packing and shipping these roses, I remain Yours very respectfully, A. LANGE.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Genistas.

This is a good time to put in cuttings of genista (cytissus). Don't take for a cutting a small single growth, but use a little branch with several shoots and endeavor to have with it what is known to gardeners as a heel. These will root as readily as the young, tender shoots and you have the foundation of a strong, young plant. Rooted now (perhaps a week or two earlier would be better) you can have a plant as large as desirable for Easter of 1907, providing you do not allow them to become stunted in their growing season.

Australians.

Those who were fortunate enough to attend the recent Boston carnation convention must have seen in the small hall what we will call the side show. Among many beautiful plants and flowers there were a few plants of Chorizema ilicifolium. There are several species of this small shrub, but the above is the most useful to the florist or private gardener. This pretty plant belongs to that large class of small, hard-wooded plants known for many years by European gardeners as New Holland plants, because, I believe, the island continent of Australia was called New Holland for a while after its coasts were explored. It will be noticed that these antipodean plants have not lost their inherent instinct to grow in our winters and rest in summer, as our January is their midsummer and their July the depth of our winter. As specimens of Australian small shrubs I might mention eriostemon, metrosideros and others.

The Chorizema.

The chorizema is a beautiful decorative plant. The flowers of ilicifolium are pea-shaped, orange red. It propagates now from the young growths and should be grown right along. Peat is very suitable as a potting soil, but in its absence chopped up turf with leaf-mold and sand will do very well. Large plants can be plunged outside in the summer months, but young plants are better kept plunged on the bench under glass and all the resting it requires is to slightly withhold water. It bears clipping, or cutting into shape, and flowers profusely in January and February. All the heat it requires in winter is 45 degrees to 50 degrees.

Eriostemon I can say little about. It is many years since we had the care of one, but we remember that although a very pretty plant that will bear training into a fine bush, it is not showy enough to be of much profit to the commercial florist.

Salvia Splendens.

I trust you will not forget the present great popularity of the scarlet sage, Salvia splendens. Each year there are more and more asked for. After the frost has nipped our cannas and coleus, and perhaps geraniums, the salvia shines in warmth and harmonizes with the orange and scarlet tints of the oaks, maples and ampelopsis. If you propagate too early you must keep them growing or they get stunted and are quickly attacked by red spider. But you should be in a position to put in a lot of cuttings about the first of March.

Propagating Bedders.

Lemon verbena should be propagated now. Only the tender young growths that start from rested plants will root and these should have bottom heat, copious daily watering of the sand and no bright sun on them.

All other bedding plants that are propagated by cuttings should go on lively now, coleus, acalypha, achyranthes and others.

The Vincas.

If you lifted any vincas from the ground last fall now is the time to pull the roots to pieces. They will bear dividing to any extent and small pieces with a few shoots will go into 3-inch or 4-inch pots and soon send up vigorous shoots from the old crown, which will make much finer plants than any struck from cuttings. In looking at a lot lately divided, our vase specialist remarked a good job when the vinca is the only vase or basket vine grown. The ivy geranium flowers no more when put outside; the lobelia shrivels up; the moneyvine and glechoma get brown and unsightly; the feet flowers. As remarked many times, now is the time to retard azaleas and not the month of April. Besides giving a cool house, it may be necessary to shade as well.

Cyclamens.

Early sown cyclamens that have been in flats for two months and have little bulbs the size of a pea, and two or three leaves, must not be allowed to crowd. Instead of potting singly in small pots, we prefer to transplant into other flats, giving them more room. They seem to thrive better in the more uniform moisture of a flat with three inches of soil than in small pots and you are able to transplant with a little tuft of roots without losing a fibre.

Sweet Peas.

Those wishing to have good sweet peas at Easter can do so by sowing at once. A raised bench will do, but six to eight inches of soil on the ground will be still better. Sow where they are to flower, very thinly in rows eighteen inches apart. There are few flowers so influenced in flowering by sunshine as sweet peas. After seeing the wonderful peas grown by Mr. Sim there is no doubt that for pink Earliest of All is the one to grow, and for white the more expensive Mt. Blanc. It is superb.

DESIRABLE CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

Skimmia Japonica.

Skimmia Japonica, sometimes also called S. fragrantissima, while a popular ornamental evergreen in Europe, is only hardy in our southern states, but makes a pretty and very desirable pot plant

seneccio (German ivy) and tropaeolum blow into rags, and so on with the list of the so-called vines. The vinca is king and queen of them all and good vincas in June are as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

Indian Azaleas.

The extraordinary sunny days of late have stimulated growth and just now is the time that Azalea indica is breaking into growth at the base of the bud. Keep the growths pulled out if you expect per-for Christmas. It was offered in Boston in considerable numbers last Christmas and sold well, but was not mentioned as shown in other cities.

Propagation is either by cuttings in gentle heat in winter or from seed sown in the fall and carried in a cool house during winter. The little plants can be either kept potted on or be planted out, the latter method preferably. They prefer a compost of sandy peat or loam. As they are of slow growth, several years are required to produce a good salable plant. A number are imported from Europe and potted up for the Christmas trade each year. The flowers are produced in February or March and are yellowish white and sweet-scented.

As skimmias are polygamous, it is necessary with them, as with aucubas, to plant staminate plants among the pistillate to secure a good set of fruit.

Azalea Firefly.

Azalea Firefly has proven very popular the past two or three seasons in the Boston flower stores. Plants seen are principally grown in 6-inch pots, although occasional pyramidal-trained ones of larger size are noted. The flowers are smaller than in the regular A. Indica section, rosy in color, a very desirable shade for the holidays. The plant in habit closely resembles the well known A. amœna, which latter we find hardy in Massachusetts even after very severe winters. It evidently has a considerable proportion of amœna blood in it. It can be forced into bloom for Christmas as readily as any other azalea.

Erica Melanthera.

Erica melanthera with E. Mediterranea are probably the two most easily grown heaths in America. We cannot here produce ericas like the hundreds of thousands annually grown for the Covent Garden market in London, but E. melangarden soil. By keeping them syringed and cultivated, nice little plants filling 4-inch pots can be had by fall, which the second season will make nice salable plants.

Ericaceous plants dislike coddling and no forcing into bloom should be attempted. If peat is at hand, use it in potting, with a good dash of sand and leaf-mold, but fine plants can be grown in loam. It makes one of the prettiest of Christmas plants.

The photographs from which the illustrations accompanying these notes were prepared were made at Carbone's, Boston, at Christmas, 1905.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

The second called meeting of the National Council of Horticulture convened at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, February 5. There were present, Prof. W. W. Tracy, of Washington, D. C.; Prof. S. B. Green, of Minnesota; C. E. Kendel, of Cleveland, O.; L. A. Goodman, of Kansas City; H. C. Irish, of St. Louis; O. C. Simonds, P. J. Hauswirth and J. C. Vaughan.

Telegrams or letters were received from the following: J. H. McFarland, Prof. E. J. Wickson, Prof. L. R. Taft, Prof. L. H. Bailey, Prof. John Craig, Philip Breitmeyer and J. H. Dayton.

The minutes of the October meeting at licity for the Council. Subjects for preliminary articles were discussed and many suggestions given to the secretary, with instructions to take up the matter with Messrs. Thomas and Burdette and arrange for sending out the preliminary articles to such an extent as the funds in hand would provide for.

It was conceded that material on general subjects coming from a national body covering broad lines and from all parts of the country and bearing no evidence of commercialism, would be eagerly accepted through our own or other press bureaus by hundreds or even thousands of the best newspapers in all parts of the country. It is believed that this part of the Council work can be placed on a self-supporting basis.

There being a vacancy of one member in the delegates at large of the National Council, Prof. S. A. Beach, of the Iowa State College of Agriculture, was appointed.

It was voted to invite the Secretary of Agriculture to appoint two delegates from the United States Department of Agriculture to become a part of the Council on a similar basis as are the delegates from the national societies of the florists, nurserymen, and seedsmen.

Warren H. Manning, landscape designer of the Jamestown Exposition, asked for the advice and assistance of the Council in his work at the exposition and asked the Council to suggest names for committees to aid him on the following sections of the exposition work in horticulture: Classification, awards, standards of excellence, call for national congress, special events and programs. These appointments were made as requested and the secretary instructed to submit same to Mr. Manning for his approval.

DAPHNE ODORATA.

In the REVIEW of January 25, C. A. D. asks for the name of a plant in his possession, which is given by W. N. C., who well describes the plant as it is usually seen in pots. Daphne odorata is seldom seen as an attractive pot plant for the reasons mentioned. It was formerly kept in the background and brought into a camellia house or erica house when coming into bloom for the sake of its delightful fragrance. It could not stand a high temperature at any season. It makes very poor roots, no fiber under ordinary treatment, and if grown and treated as late azaleas are it is almost sure to be either killed or badly damaged by over-watering, when it should be kept on the side of dry.

The name Daphne odorata called to my mind some plants of it I once had charge of while serving my time, the regular time, two years in a place. About 1855 I went to a place and was put on as an assistant under the foreman of stove and greenhouse plants. Six months later I was put in charge of a cool conservatory, a ridge and furrow house 125 feet square, about fourteen to eighteen feet high, laid out in beds about twelve feet wide, slate walks three feet wide

thera can be grown and flowered by any one possessing a cool greenhouse. It can be easily propagated during winter by taking short tips of the shoots, one and a half to two inches long, and inserting in a propagating bench. One where carnations can be rooted is suitable. When rooted pot off into thumb pots in rather sandy soil, planting outdoors in May. If some leaf-mold, peat and sand are mixed in the soil, all the better, but the plants make good growth in ordinary between the beds, with gravel walks eight feet wide on the four sides. The beds were planted with camellias, acacias, clethras, luculias and many other things which I have quite forgotten. Each plant had a space in brickwork three feet deep and from three to six feet square, filled with suitable soil, the whole surfaced with soil and planted with Selaginella denticulata, the beds and slate walks running east and west. At the east end of each bed was a daphne trained as a pyramid, from five to six feet high, perfect in shape.

When I took charge of the house the daphnes were in a starved, poor state, like many of the other plants. It was then in August and many of the camellias had lost their buds. I found on examining the soil that the trouble was all caused from want of water. It took me nearly all of the first month to thoroughly water the house. There being no hose at that time, all the water had to be carried in a can from a tank at one side of the house. The foliage of everything soon showed the effect of the watering, but it was then too late and not desirable for new growth on that class of plants, so flowers were scarce and poor the following winter and spring. The following spring and summer the daphnes made new shoots six and seven inches long, foliage almost double the usual size, of a fine deep green and when in bloom they were a mass of bloom from ground to top, many of them with flower-heads two and a half inches. These were by far the finest plants of Daphne odorata seen by many old plant growers. I never could grow them like it in pots. S. TAPLIN.

A ROLL OF CARPET.

I intend to make next spring a flower design representing a roll of carpet and I would like to find out how to construct the frame and what size is best and what kind of plants are best to use. W. D.

It is not quite clear what is meant by a roll of carpet and we should think that a carpet laid out as it would appear in a room is to be represented. Make the dimensions what are usually seen in carpets, say 12x16, or 16x24 feet. A carpet is always seen perfectly flat, without any undulations in its surface; therefore it should be on a moderate incline or it would not be observed with any clearness or pleasure. We have more than once seen the great American flag, the stars and stripes, done in plants and made perfectly flat. Now, whoever saw a flag streaming in the breeze without some waves in it? A dead flat surface representing a flag was a dead flat unnatural affair and a failure.

You don't need a frame if the edge of the bed is clean-cut, rising two or three inches above the sod. That is all that is necessary, but let the edge be clearly defined. If this is not practical with your soil, then sink a 1-inch board into the soil and paint it green. I mean 1-inch thick and four or five inches broad, but only let it project two inches above the level of the soil.

You will find a carpet bed a very expensive affair, worth double the price of a bed of flowering plants such as cannas or geraniums. The plants that can be used are not very limited, but need lots of pinching and trimming to keep them of a uniform size and remember when it is all done at infinite labor and pronounced a success and "how lovely" by your lady friends, that there is not a particle of art or good taste about these beds. They are purely mechanical.

The plants suitable can be selected from the following: Alternantheras, five or six varieties; Echeveria secunda glauca and a few other species; the dwarf Tom Thumb sweet alyssum, creeping bronze oxalis, Othonna crassifolia, Pilea repens, Santolina incana, variegated sage, Pyrethrum Golden Feather and golden thyme. We could include lobelia, but it only does well in moist and cool climates.

W. S.

MAKING A START.

I wish to build a greenhouse in the fall and ask what kinds of plants can be grown successfully in one house for cut flowers and pot plants and how I can be preparing stock now and next spring? Would you kindly tell me of some books that treat fully on the subject?

T. H. H.

It would be impossible even in an extended article to answer the above. Don't put off building your greenhouse until the fall. Get at it this spring, when you will have the benefit of fine weather. It won't be finished too soon and unless you have a mechanical turn of mind and past experience in building, glazing and heating, give your order to a first-class firm of horticultural builders.

I consider Bailey's Cyclopedia of American Horticulture the best gardening book published. It is voluminous and expensive, but its chief value to the ordinary florist is that its cultural directions for all our popular flowers are written by the most practical men in the trade. A much less expensive book, which contains plain practical directions for the culture of all our commercial flowers, is the Florists' Manual written by Wm. Scott.

TEMPERATURE AND BLIND WOOD.

I would like to grow in one house a red, pink and white rose, growing Liberty for red. Now, will you kindly suggest what varieties will do the best and at what temperature they will do best?

I purchased last season, from one of the largest concerns, Brides and Maids. They started off well and have looked well all through the season. When I say they have looked well, I mean plenty of foliage and most of the time appear as though they are about to produce a fine crop, but everything is blind wood and what flowers I have cut have been short-plant. A number are imported from Europe and potted up for the Christmas trade each year. The flowers are produced in February or March and are yellowish white and sweet-scented.

As skimmias are polygamous, it is necessary with them, as with aucubas, to plant staminate plants among the pistillate to secure a good set of fruit.

Cleveland were read and approved. The plan outlined at Cleveland for securing funds from florists, nurserymen and seedsmen showed $210 in the treasury for promotion of trial work of the Bureau of Publicity. The method for carrying out the plans arranged at Cleveland were discussed and definite propositions read by D. J. Thomas, of New York, and J. H. Burdette, of Chicago, giving their views as to the best methods of securing high-class newspaper pub-between the beds, with gravel walks eight feet wide on the four sides. The beds were planted with camellias, acacias, clethras, huculias and many other things which I have quite forgotten. Each plant had a space in brickwork three feet deep and from three to six feet square, filled with suitable soil, the whole surfaced with soil and planted with Selaginella denticulata, the beds and slate walks running east and west. At the east end of each bed was a daphne trained as a pyramid, from five to six feet high, perfect in shape.

When I took charge of the house the daphnes were in a starved, poor state, like many of the other plants. It was then in August and many of the camellias had lost their buds. I found on examining the soil that the trouble was all caused from want of water. It took me nearly all of the first month to thoroughly water the house. There being no hose at that time, all the water had to be carried in a can from a tank at one side of the house. The foliage of everything soon showed the effect of the watering, but it was then too late and not desirable for new growth on that class of plants, so flowers were scarce and poor the following winter and spring. The following spring and summer the daphnes made new shoots six and seven inches long, foliage almost double the usual size, of a fine deep green and when in bloom they were a mass of bloom from ground to top, many of them with flower-heads two and a half inches. These were by far the finest plants of Daphne odorata seen by many old plant growers. I never could grow them like it in pots. S. TAPLIN.

A ROLL OF CARPET.

I intend to make next spring a flower design representing a roll of carpet and I would like to find out how to construct the frame and what size is best and what kind of plants are best to use. W. D.

It is not quite clear what is meant by a roll of carpet and we should think that a carpet laid out as it would appear in a room is to be represented. Make the dimensions what are usually seen in carpets, say 12x16, or 16x24 feet. A carpet is always seen perfectly flat, without any undulations in its surface; therefore it should be on a moderate incline or it would not be observed with any clearness or pleasure. We have more than once seen the great American flag, the stars and stripes, done in plants and made perfectly flat. Now, whoever saw a flag streaming in the breeze without some waves in it? A dead flat surface representing a flag was a dead flat unnatural affair and a failure.

You don't need a frame if the edge of the bed is clean-cut, rising two or three inches above the sod. That is all that is necessary, but let the edge be clearly defined. If this is not practical with your soil, then sink a 1-inch board into the soil and paint it green. I mean 1-inch thick and four or five inches broad, but only let it project two inches above the level of the soil.

You will find a carpet bed a very expensive affair, worth double the price of a bed of flowering plants such as cannas or geraniums. The plants that can be used are not very limited, but need lots of pinching and trimming to keep them of a uniform size and remember when it is all done at infinite labor and pronounced a success and "how lovely" by your lady friends, that there is not a particle of art or good taste about these beds. They are purely mechanical.

The plants suitable can be selected from the following: Alternantheras, five or six varieties; Echeveria secunda glauca and a few other species; the dwarf Tom Thumb sweet alyssum, creeping bronze oxalis, Othonna crassifolia, Pilea repens, Santolina incana, variegated sage, Pyrethrum Golden Feather and golden thyme. We could include lobelia, but it only does well in moist and cool climates.

MAKING A START.

I wish to build a greenhouse in the fall and ask what kinds of plants can be grown successfully in one house for cut flowers and pot plants and how I can be preparing stock now and next spring? Would you kindly tell me of some books that treat fully on the subject?

T. H. H.

It would be impossible even in an extended article to answer the above. Don't put off building your greenhouse until the fall. Get at it this spring, when you will have the benefit of fine weather. It won't be finished too soon and unless you have a mechanical turn of mind and past experience in building, glazing and heating, give your order to a first-class firm of horticultural builders.

I consider Bailey's Cyclopaedia of American Horticulture the best gardening book published. It is voluminous and expensive, but its chief value to the ordinary florist is that its cultural directions for all our popular flowers are written by the most practical men in the trade. A much less expensive book, which contains plain practical directions for the culture of all our commercial flowers, is the Florists' Manual written by

WM. SCOTT.

TEMPERATURE AND BLIND WOOD.

I would like to grow in one house a red, pink and white rose, growing Liberty for red. Now, will you kindly suggest what varieties will do the best and at what temperature they will do best?

I purchased last season, from one of the largest concerns, Brides and Maids. They started off well and have looked well all through the season. When I say they have looked well, I mean plenty of foliage and most of the time appear as though they are about to produce a fine crop, but everything is blind wood and what flowers I have cut have been short-stemmed and weak. The house has been run at 58 degrees at night. I have tried to locate the trouble but so far have failed and would appreciate very much if you will suggest what to do. I am of the opinion that they were propagated from scrubby, blind wood.

J. H.

For a house of mixed roses the following varieties do well, as they require practically the same temperature and the same care in ventilating, etc.: For red, Richmond is the best; for pink, Bridesmaid and Chatenay; for white, Bride and Ivory. All these varieties do well at a night temperature of 56 degrees, with a day temperature ranging from 62 degrees to 75 degrees, according to intensity of sunshine. These temperatures should be maintained with ventilation on whenever possible.

There are many reasons for a crop of blind wood, chief among which is want of ventilation. They may also have been propagated from poor, weak wood, or the soil may be poor and require feeding. Then, too, 58 degrees is just a trifle high, especially where they show this weakness.

I should advise trimming out a little of the superfluous blind wood and apply a sprinkling of bone meal to the surface of the soil. After a week or two they would be able to use an application of liquid food, and as the season advances they could stand this dose at least once a week. Above all give all the ventilation you can with safety, both day and night.

NOTES OF NEW CARNATIONS.

[A paper by Edw. A. Stroud, Strafford, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, February 6, 1906.]

The trade papers have so thoroughly covered the carnation convention in Boston that there seems little to add that would interest you. What you want is, we suppose, our impressions of the new varieties on exhibition at Boston. To rightly judge a carnation on the exhibition table a good idea is to scale it up according to your own judgment on the points adopted by the Carnation Society; you will be surprised how much better knowledge you will get of a variety by following this method.

Lady Bountiful showed up prominently, winning all prizes in the class of whites; if any fault, it shows a lack of substance which is against it as a shipper.

My Maryland unfortunately could not be staged by Mr. Weber, as that variety with his other exhibits, some 1,200 in all, carried poorly owing to the warm weather. The Strafford Flower Farm showed 100 of this variety and was fortunate enough to secure an award. Mr. Weber has made an announcement to the trade through the various papers which is a square deal. My Maryland, as you know, has not been successfully grown everywhere. As grown at Strafford its habit differs entirely from its growth with Mr. Weber; but we do not by any means pronounce it unworthy and feel confident that if certain grassy peculiarities can be eliminated this variety will prove a good thing, as its keeping qualities are above par.

Enchantress was shown extensively and nothing could compete with it in its color. It occupies a field of its own.

Robert Craig is certainly a thoroughbred; it looked beautiful, staged, and as seen growing at Mr. Ward's. Whether this fine condition can be duplicated by the smaller growers and whether it can be made a commercial success is a question yet to be decided.

Mr. Fisher's new red seedling, Beacon, looked well, standing out prominently from all others in its brightness of color. Seeing it growing at his place impressed me with its commercial value, being such a free bloomer; its stem seemed a trifle weak, but not enough to injure it.

Red Lawson will do when there are no other good reds about. We do not like its color. The extensively advertised Victory showed up well; many orders have been booked for it, Mr. Guttman telling us of five firms who had placed orders aggregating 120,000. We have seen it only on the exhibition table. Mr. Haines is as enthusiastic as ever about his red carnation named after him. It did not carry well to Boston, but as we saw it growing at his place last March it was a grand sight. We notice the reports from the west say it is inclined to be somewhat sleepy during the early fall months. We were further convinced of its good qualities after seeing it growing at Peter Fisher's.

The Lawson gold medal winner, Elsa Struss, a seedling of Mr. Ward's, was beautiful, and seeing it growing convinced us that it will be heard from, as it resembles Enchantress in habit and looks free.

Mrs. Ward, another seedling of Cottage Gardens, showed breeding. It is a question whether it would not have given a good run for the medal if 100 blooms could have been shown.

Aristocrat is certainly ideal in form, calyx and stem. Personally we are tiring of the Lawson shade of pink.

Helen Goddard, while not a large flower, is recommended for its commercial value. It is slightly lighter in color than Lawson. We did not have a chance to see it growing.

Pink Patten, a sport from Mrs. Patten, was not particularly interesting to us.

Evangeline, another seedling of Peter Fisher's, has merit. As we saw it growing, it looked healthy; it is smaller than Enchantress, brighter in color, has good substance, and seemed freer. Mr. Fisher told us he would not send it out unless he could eliminate its slight tendency to burst. It is a question if there is a market for Evangeline, if Enchantress keeps up its good name.

Fiancee was not largely shown, having no entry in either the hundred, fifty, or twenty-five class. We imagined it was impossible to get so many good flowers together.

Winsor attracted us especially, its color being a very pleasing shade of pink. It showed all the requirements of a first class flower. We hope you have all read Mr. Fisher's address; the points he made appealed to us strongly. Taking it all in all the show was a success. The public seemed to appreciate that it was free to all and we trust Toronto will be able to arouse the same enthusiasm when the convention meets there.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Late Propagating.

Cuttings put in sand now, if rooted successfully, will make fine plants, and, in fact, in some ways these cuttings are even superior to those taken earlier, and they are much to be preferred to cuttings taken early in November. The days are getting longer and the plants are taking on new vigor, and all the shoots have more vigor now than was the case six weeks ago. They will root in a shorter time and will not get so soft as is apt to be the case with the very early batches. It takes more skill, however, from now on to get a good strike than it did up to now, and the later it gets the more skill and judgment are required.

Lately the days have been bright and cold and the nights have been cold enough to call for steady firing. This is ideal weather for propagating and while it keeps up there will be no trouble. The weather that does the mischief is a bright, mild day, when you are obliged to open the ventilators and evaporation is rapid. Then it will tax your knowledge to the utmost to keep your cuttings standing up fresh. Often one day of this kind of weather will do the mischief and ruin what you had hoped would be a fine strike.

On days like this you will frequently find that the curtain is not sufficient protection. The curtain will keep the sun off them, but they will need more than that, because the very air will draw the moisture out of them and cause wilting. You will find it advisable to employ some closer covering than the curtain while this condition exists and we find that laying newspapers on the cuttings will answer perfectly. Do not let the hot sun beat on the newspapers, but drop the curtain to shade them and use the papers merely to hold in the moisture which will rise from the sand, or is on the foliage from syringing. These papers should not be put on until they are really needed and should be taken off as soon as the ventilators are closed and the air is more moisture-laden. You can tell when the atmosphere feels bracing and fresh.

You will find as a rule that shading the cuttings carefully and keeping away any draught is more effective, and better for the cuttings than syringing. While a light spraying will help the cuttings to freshen up, yet it will not stop wilting if a draught strikes them or if the sun beats on them.

You will also find it difficult to keep the foliage moist all day and then have them dry at night. You should not have the foliage wet over night, as it will start fungus and rust and, in fact, any of the spot diseases just the same as it will on the blooming plants. You can put on and remove the close covering at a moment's notice, however, and you can always have better control of the situation. We usually spray lightly early in the morning of a bright day, before dropping the curtain, and for some time the curtain will be sufficient. When you open the ventilators will be time enough to lay on the papers.

Watch the sand closely, so it does not dry out too much. If the sand is not fairly moist the cuttings will suffer severely on such a day. It should not be any more moist, however, than you keep it in the winter. Heavy watering will not prevent wilting. You must be more careful to keep the cuttings fresh all the way through than you were up to now, if that is possible. Take off all your cuttings early in the morning while they are fresh and crisp. Wet them with cool water and trim them in a cool place. These things will count later on, when the cutting is battling for its life. Do not take cuttings that are too young and soft, as they will wilt easily. A well-matured, fair size cutting will prove most satisfactory. Wetting down the walks, the bench boards, etc., will help to keep the atmosphere moist, too. It is too early yet to put a heavy permanent shade on the glass. There will be many days when you will want all the light you can get on the cuttings.

A FREE BLOOMER.

I am sending a carnation bloom and would like to know what variety it is. There was one plant of it mixed with some stock I bought last season. It has given more flowers than any other plant in the house. Up to February 5 I have cut twenty-one blooms, taken off twenty-five cuttings and there are now eleven buds on the plant, which will bloom before March. I would like to get some more plants that will do as well. J. C.

The carnation bloom you sent was badly frozen when it reached me and I could not say with any certainty what the variety is. The stem, calyx and the color and one or two petals looked very much like Mrs. E. A. Nelson. Thirty-two blooms and twenty-five cuttings are a good lot to cut from one plant and if it does that well for you right along it will be a very profitable sort, though the blooms may not grade as fancy. Nelson never did that well for us, but was rather inclined to run to grass; that is the only thing that causes me to doubt about your plant being that variety. I would like to see a good bloom of it.

A. F. J. BAUR.

THE CENTRAL MARKET.

For a long time it was the popular belief that the large eastern cities were in a position to claim an hereditary right to the business in florists' supplies for this country. This did not cause them to relax their vigilance in any particular, for competition has been keen between cities as well as between the several firms. Chicago has been one of their most closely contested battle-grounds and they were for years without local competition.

But it has gradually come to be the belief that Chicago is as well endowed with natural advantages as any other city in this country for the handling of florists' supplies in a large way. E. H. Hunt has built up a large business in this department and lately considerably extended its scope by handling various novelties. Winterson and McKellar are factors, L. Baumann & Co. are doing a good business with certain specialties, and the A. L. Randall Co. has now embarked in the field with a large, well selected and complete stock of florists' supplies and every facility and intention of building up a far-reaching mail order business. The Chicago Rose Co. is just fitting up and stocking an establishment in which florists' supplies will be a large feature, and it appears that Chicago men mean to have their city take rank with New York and Philadelphia as a distributing point for the innumerable requisites which have become so important a feature of every up-to-date cut flower business. At least competition will be sufficiently keen so that the trade will have no fear that undue profits are being made on the staples.

BEST AZALEAS.

A writer in the Gardeners' Magazine suggests the following as a list of azaleas "remarkable for their distinctness and high quality: Alice, rose, blotched with red, double; Apollon, white, flaked with rose; Carl Encke, bright salmon, margined with white, and striped with purple; Deutsche Perle, pure white, semi-double, invaluable for forcing; Eugene Mazel, rose-lilac; Jean Vervaene, bright rose-pink, tipped with white; Kaiser Wilhelm, rich rose, double; Leon Pynaert, rose-carmine, marked with purple on the upper segments; Madame Charles van Eeckhaute, pure white, double; Madame Dominique Vervaene, rose, marked on the upper segments with rose-purple; Mdle. Marie van Houtte, white, feathered with rose-salmon; President Oswald de Kerchove, rose-pink, margined with white; Roi d'Hollande, rich scarlet; Souvenir de Francois Vervaene, white, flaked with rose; and Temperance, rich mauve-purple, a very pleasing shade of color, and valuable for its distinctness. I have not seen this variety catalogued, and I would therefore mention that it was shown by Mr. Charles Turner, of Slough, at one of the spring exhibitions of the Royal Botanic Society."

POSTS SET IN CEMENT.

I have a lot of good sound white oak posts that I want to use for the side walls of a house. The posts are four inches square. How deep should these posts be set in the ground? Would there be any advantage in setting them in cement; that is, putting three or four inches of cement in bottom of hole stemmed and weak. The house has been run at 58 degrees at night. I have tried to locate the trouble but so far have failed and would appreciate very much if you will suggest what to do. I am of the opinion that they were propagated from scrubby, blind wood.

J. H.

For a house of mixed roses the following varieties do well, as they require practically the same temperature and the same care in ventilating, etc.: For red, Richmond is the best; for pink, Bridesmaid and Chateaux; for white, Bride and Ivory. All these varieties do well at a night temperature of 56 degrees, with a day temperature ranging from 62 degrees to 75 degrees, according to intensity of sunshine. These temperatures should be maintained with ventilation on whenever possible.

There are many reasons for a crop of blind wood, chief among which is want of ventilation. They may also have been propagated from poor, weak wood, or the soil may be poor and require feeding. Then, too, 58 degrees is just a trifle high, especially where they show this weakness.

I should advise trimming out a little of the superfluous blind wood and apply a sprinkling of bone meal to the surface of the soil. After a week or two they would be able to use an application of liquid food, and as the season advances they could stand this dose at least once a week. Above all give all the ventilation you can with safety, both day and night.

These white oak posts, although not quite as good and lasting as red cedar, will do well for posts if erected in the way proposed and ought to be good for at least twelve years. By continuing the cement between the posts in the form of a wall eight inches thick by about sixteen inches deep and bringing it a few inches above ground, thus keeping the siding from contact with the ground, you will have an ideal foundation. ### MUFF AND FERN BOUQUETS.

Can you give me a description of a bridesmaid's muff; also a fern bouquet for matrons? I want to introduce both in a wedding here February 21, but have never had an opportunity to examine the makeup of either. Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated. G. P. M.

A muff must be made on a frame the size of which should be two-thirds the size of the finished piece. Cover both sides of the inside frame with tin foil. This double covering is meant as a special protection against picks or wire which may have been driven in too far. After lining the frame, fill with sphagnum, as in other design work. Then cover the sphagnum, a strip on the muff lengthwise about the width of tin foil, which shall be the back of the muff. The muff will be heavy at best, so have moss as dry as possible and still be damp and use no more than seems necessary to hold the flowers in. Wrap closely with green thread around through the inside to hold the tin foil lining in place as well as the moss. Have the filling even and snug, so as to resist the pull of the flowers, which must hang downwards. It is well to cover the moss with wood ferns as in the best class of other design work, not forgetting the ends of the frame.

Now as to the flowers and colors; make the piece of one kind and color. Violets are especially suitable. Carnations or full blown roses could be used. Stem flowers in the same way as for a pillow except shorter. The best effect, however, is secured by setting the flower well up on a half pick. Have the stems not to exceed three inches. If violets are used, stem four or six with a leaf on one pick. If carnations or roses are used, make solid without foliage. In no case use roses in bud. Carnations are much to be preferred to roses for this purpose. Fill in the edges of the muff, so that the foil lining cannot be seen. If violets are used, the inside lining of the muff should be of violet foil. For other flowers use green foil. Use the dark foil for the strip at the back of the muff also. Fill about three-quarters of the way around, and use the vacant strip to set the piece on while making and boxing for delivery.

The muff may or may not be finished with a knot of violet cord hanging from the lower edge of each end. I would suggest that the frame be made after the fashion of the large "granny muffs" now in style, with the lower part larger than the upper.

The fern bouquet may be made either after the style of an armful, round bunch or shower, precisely as valley or roses. It is taken for granted that maidenhair is to be the fern used. From one to two hundred fronds of good size will be required. Probably the daintiest arrangement for ferns is the shower, and they are easily arranged, but for one difficulty; with their small wiry stems they bunch up too closely. To get around, or rather between, this trouble, take short stiff sprays of Sprenger and set in between the stems so as not to be seen from the top. This will throw the fronds out and apart and give the bunch an airy, fluffy effect. Wire together very tightly and make shower on gauze ribbon with sash of same just as is done with flowers.

Vegetable Forcing.

It will interest vegetable forcers in the vicinity of Chicago to know that in 1905 the Illinois Central railroad brought to the Chicago market 18,000 refrigerator car loads of southern vegetables.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, FEB. 14.—Cucumbers, $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 40c to 55c case; head lettuce, $4 to $5 bbl.; tomatoes, $1 to $2 case; radishes, 50c doz. bunches; watercress, 10c to 15c doz. bunches; mushrooms, No. 1, 25c lb.; pieplant, 25c to 40c bunch; brussels sprouts, 20c qt.; parsley, 20c to 35c doz. bunches.

BOSTON, Feb. 12.—Cucumbers, $6 to $18 box; tomatoes, 40c to 50c lb.; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2 per four-pound basket; radishes, 50c to $1 box; hothouse spinach, 60c box; parsley, $1 to $1.25 box; mint, 75c doz. bunches.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Boston cucumbers, No. 1, $2 to $2.50 doz.; No. 2 $3 to $5 box; head lettuce, 50c to $1.25 doz.; radishes, $2 to $2.75 100 bunches; mushrooms, 15c to 75c lb.; tomatoes, 15c to 40c lb.; rhubarb, 40c to 60c doz. bunches; mint, 75c to 90c doz. bunches.

MUSHROOMS.

Would you kindly give me a little information as to where I made a mistake in growing mushrooms? About November 1 I planted a bed and in about thirty days they started to appear.

They would get about one-half inch to one and one-quarter inches in diameter, with thousands at the pin-head stage, and that was the last of them. The bed was probably prepared and planted different than is practiced in the east, owing to the intense evaporation here. The manure was piled and turned several times and in fifteen days I put it under the center bench, seven feet wide, in the greenhouse, eight inches deep in center, sloping down to about two inches on the edge of bed. On this I placed three to four inches of soil, a mixture of garden clay loam and a lighter soil and some manure from the top of a hotbed, spawning as soon as the bed was completed. The spawn was placed in the soil instead of the manure and thoroughly wet down. It ran through the soil nicely and the soil was full of the white threads. I sprinkled the bed several times with water about the temperature of the building. Now, where I think the mistake was made, was when the mushrooms had started to grow I was advised to wet the bed down thoroughly, which I did, and in a few days there was nothing to be seen. There were no heating pipes under the bench and the temperature varied about 52 degrees to 60 degrees. Should the bench have been curtailed off to shut out the light and heat?

This has been my second attempt and second failure. I am naturally rather persevering and will try it again and I would like to avoid mistakes, if possible. M. E. D.

Your failure may be attributed not to one but to several points in your method of cultivation, which I don't look upon as being just right.

In the first place, your bed was too shallow, although mushrooms can be grown in a bed with a uniform depth of eight inches in a properly constructed mushroom house where the best possible conditions exist. Under conditions such as you describe the bed should not be under ten inches, and if twelve inches deep so much the better. With a bed of this depth made up with the material in proper condition, enough moisture should be retained to mature the first crop without the necessity of watering, and besides the larger body of material will naturally retain the heat better and be less liable to fluctuate with the variations of the temperature of the house. Again, the turning and working of the manure only tends to waste the chemical ingredients necessary to the development of the crop. This is an old custom, but it has been proven that better mushrooms can be produced when the bed is made up with the manure as fresh as it can be procured, the thorough packing of the material in making up the bed being relied on to prevent overheating; hence, the firmer the material is packed the better.

It is a mistake to cover the bed with soil and spawn as soon as completed. After making up with the fresh material as above, the temperature of the bed will probably rise to about 110 degrees, but in the course of a few days will begin to decline. After it has fallen to 90 degrees or a little under, spawning may safely be done. We break the spawn up into pieces about the size of walnuts and insert these about eight inches apart, in holes two inches deep in the manure, covering with the material composing the bed and beating down firmly. In the course of a week, or eight days, when the temperature has dropped to 75 degrees, the covering of soil about two inches deep is put on. The soil should not be wet, but should be in such a condition that it will pack firmly without baking and should be beaten evenly and smoothly with the back of a spade. The bed should by all means be curtained, both as a shade from light and as a means of preventing evaporation as much as possible. After the soil is put on it will cause a rise in the temperature of the bed, probably to about 80 degrees, but it will soon begin to come down slowly and after it has fallen to 70 degrees, a covering of hay or straw should be put on to try and maintain this heat in the bed as long as possible. After the bed has been spawned about four weeks, examine occasionally and when the mushrooms begin to appear remove the covering, as they would work up through this and make it very inconvenient to pull them.

Try and obviate the necessity of watering until your crop has been gathered, by maintaining as moist an atmosphere around your bed as possible. This can be done by spraying under the bench where your bed is and over the covering with water at a temperature of 80 degrees, the frequency of application being regulated by the amount of evaporation. If this is excessive, it may be necessary to spray three times a day, but twice, or even once, might be sufficient. In harvesting your crop don't pull the mushrooms straight up, but twist the stem around in the soil so as to break it away without disturbing the mycelium.

After the crop is gathered, give a good watering with water at a temperature of 80 degrees, cover over with an inch of fresh soil, beating down as before. Put a good covering over the bed and treat as for the first crop and in the course of from four to five weeks a second crop will appear, this second crop often proving about as good as the first.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEATING FRAME WITH STEAM.

I would like to know how I could build a hotbed, so that I could heat it with steam and how the steam pipes should be arranged. The hotbeds would face south.

M. F. C.

What is known and generally understood as a hotbed is made of fermenting material, stable manure, leaves, or refuse hops and the heat germinated by fermentation makes the hotbed. What you are attempting would better be called a heated frame.

A number of sash heated by steam or hot water is a most useful adjunct to any commercial place. Often they are heated by a separate heater, but there is no difficulty about heating them with steam if that is the method of heating your greenhouses. From the nearest point of your steam pipes, run a 1¼-inch pipe, one to your frames, and on entering the frames let the pipe be a foot above the surface of the bed. Let it drop gradually, if only one inch in twenty feet to the furthest end. There will be very little chance to make provision for return of condensed steam to the boiler or main return in greenhouse and don't attempt it. At the extreme end of the heating pipe in the frame put a 1-inch valve. It will be necessary to open this valve two or three times in twenty-four hours to let out any condensed steam, but that will be little loss, and if two or three feet of the end and the lowest point of the pipe should contain condensed steam it would still be hot. It would also be well to tap on a pet cock near end of pipe to let out air and admit steam. Of course it will be necessary to protect your steam pipe thoroughly if it has to pass underground or in the open air from the greenhouse to the frame, but those things will suggest themselves to you.

WILL HEAT THREE HOUSES.

We have what is called a brick-yard steam boiler ten feet long, three feet four inches in diameter; thirty-eight 3-inch flues. How many houses will a boiler like this heat up? It is good for 125 pounds of steam. Houses are 180 feet long, twenty-nine feet wide; walls are four feet six inches high; ridge, twelve feet, even span. To keep the houses at 55 degrees to 60 degrees, with the weather at the coldest at zero, how many rows of 1-inch pipe will it take to a house? Would a steam trap help to then tamping cement around the post, bringing it up about two inches above the ground? Walls to be three feet high from ground to plate. Would like to hear from those who have used cement for this purpose. N. E. B.

These white oak posts, although not quite as good and lasting as red cedar, will do well for posts if erected in the way proposed and ought to be good for at least twelve years. By continuing the cement between the posts in the form of a wall eight inches thick by about sixteen inches deep and bringing it a few inches above ground, thus keeping the siding from contact with the ground, you will have an ideal foundation. ### MUFF AND FERN BOUQUETS.

Can you give me a description of a bridesmaid's muff; also a fern bouquet for matrons? I want to introduce both in a wedding here February 21, but have never had an opportunity to examine the makeup of either. Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated. G. P. M.

A muff must be made on a frame the size of which should be two-thirds the size of the finished piece. Cover both sides of the inside frame with tin foil. This double covering is meant as a special protection against picks or wire which may have been driven in too far. After lining the frame, fill with sphagnum, as in other design work. Then cover the sphagnum, a strip on the muff lengthwise about the width of tin foil, which shall be the back of the muff. The muff will be heavy at best, so have moss as dry as possible and still be damp and use no more than seems necessary to hold the flowers in. Wrap closely with green thread around through the inside to hold the tin foil lining in place as well as the moss. Have the filling even and snug, so as to resist the pull of the flowers, which must hang downwards. It is well to cover the moss with wood ferns as in the best class of other design work, not forgetting the ends of the frame.

Now as to the flowers and colors; make the piece of one kind and color. Violets are especially suitable. Carnations or full blown roses could be used. Stem flowers in the same way as for a pillow except shorter. The best effect, however, is secured by setting the flower well up on a half pick. Have the stems not to exceed three inches. If violets are used, stem four or six with a leaf on one pick. If carnations or roses are used, make solid without foliage. In no case use roses in bud. Carnations are much to be preferred to roses for this purpose. Fill in the edges of the muff, so that the foil lining cannot be seen. If violets are used, the inside lining of the muff should be of violet foil. For other flowers use green foil. Use the dark foil for the strip at the back of the muff also. Fill about three-quarters of the way around, and use the vacant strip to set the piece on while making and boxing for delivery.

The muff may or may not be finished with a knot of violet cord hanging from the lower edge of each end. I would suggest that the frame be made after the fashion of the large "granny muffs" now in style, with the lower part larger than the upper.

The fern bouquet may be made either after the style of an armful, round bunch or shower, precisely as valley or roses. It is taken for granted that maidenhair is to be the fern used. From one to two hundred fronds of good size will be required. Probably the daintiest arrangement for ferns is the shower, and they are easily arranged, but for one difficulty; with their small wiry stems they bunch up too closely. To get around, or rather between, this trouble, take short stiff sprays of Sprenger and set in between the stems so as not to be seen from the top. This will throw the fronds out and apart and give the bunch an airy, fluffy effect. Wire together very tightly and make shower on gauze ribbon with sash of same just as is done with flowers.

MUSHROOMS.

Would you kindly give me a little information as to where I made a mistake in growing mushrooms? About November 1 I planted a bed and in about thirty days they started to appear.

They would get about one-half inch one and one-quarter inches in diameter, with thousands at the pin-head stage, and that was the last of them. The bed was probably prepared and planted differently than is practiced in the east, owing to the intense evaporation here. The manure was piled and turned several times and in fifteen days I put it under the center bench, seven feet wide, in the greenhouse, eight inches deep in center sloping down to about two inches on the edge of bed. ## Greenhouse Heating.

HEATING FRAME WITH STEAM.

I would like to know how I could build a hotbed, so that I could heat it with steam and how the steam pipes should be arranged. The hotbeds would face south.

What is known and generally understood as a hotbed is made of fermenting material, stable manure, leaves, or refuse hops and the heat germinated by fermentation makes the hotbed. What you are attempting would better be called a heated frame.

A number of sash heated by steam or hot water is a most useful adjunct to any commercial place. keep returns warm? What pressure of steam will it take to run a steam trap?
B. B.

From what you say, I judge the boiler in question is of about thirty horse-power and should be capable of supplying about 3,000 to 3,500 square feet of radiation. Each house requires about 1,200 square feet. With good management the boiler should be able to supply heat for three of the houses of the dimensions noted. To provide radiation for these houses with 1-inch pipe it will be necessary to use a 3-inch supply pipe, or riser, and twenty returns. A steam trap may be of some use if the boiler cannot be placed well below the level of the returns. If the water line in the boiler is three feet below the level of the returns, there should be no need for a steam trap. A steam trap can be worked with six to eight pounds of steam but ten pounds is better.

PIPING FOR HOT WATER.

I am in charge of a small place of one of your subscribers and would like to know the amount of 2-inch pipe necessary, with water at 160 degrees, also 180 degrees, when it is 15 degrees below zero. We have one house 18x175 feet, nine feet to ridge, four and one half feet to plate; brick wall on west side; east side, double boarded, tar paper between. A shorter house joining on the south end, ten and a half feet to ridge, five and a half feet to plate; west wall brick, eighteen inches glass on the east side, glass in south end and nineteen feet wide. We require 55 degrees.

J. A. C.

I can only give you specifications for the house seventy-five feet long as you neglected to state length of the "shorter house." This house, with water at 180 degrees, should be heated with 550 feet of radiation, equal to 880 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. With the water at 160 degrees it will be necessary to install 850 feet of radiation, equal to 1,360 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe. Hot water, i. e., 180-degree water, saves nearly one-half in amount of pipe necessary to supply the heat.

L. C. C.

PIPE NEEDED.

I intend building a house 28x100 feet, inside measurement. The walls will be five feet six inches, twenty-four inches of glass on south side; north side to be boarded. Temperature required is 50 degrees. I will have solid benches in the house and will grow carnations. Will heat with steam because I intend to add more houses. Would you please tell me how many 1 1/4-inch pipes it will take to keep the temperature at 50 degrees? Would you have two 2-inch flow pipes run up the house overhead and return in 1 1/4-inch pipes?

Will you kindly tell me which glass most florists use, double A or B, 16x24 inches? The glass will be used for carnations and roses.

O. H. C.

The house in question, 28x100 feet, to be heated to 50 degrees by the plan suggested should have a 2 1/2-inch flow and sixteen 1 1/4-inch returns, making in all 100 feet of 2 1/2-inch pipe and 1,600 feet of 1 1/4-inch pipe in the house. In regard to glass will say that both A and B qualities are extensively employed but, unless price is a big item and there is a decided saving, should advise the use of A quality D. S. glass.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Galvanized Pipes.

Some time ago I saw an inquiry in one of our trade papers as to whether the pipes used for water conductors to buildings would do for greenhouse heating pipes. Somebody in reply stated that they would not do, but I do not remember the reason he gave. I have the opportunity of procuring a lot of galvanized conductor pipe very cheaply and have been trying to find out why they would not answer for hot water heating. I would use them under the benches, both flows and returns. The top of the boiler to be used would be but eighteen inches or two feet below the lowest end of the coils and the runs but thirty-two feet long, and the tank elevated but a few inches above the highest part of the system. There would be little pressure on the pipes and I would like to know why such pipes would not answer. All the joints could be soldered and where they connected to the pipes leading to and from the boiler, unions could be soldered in, as they are to similar pipes when used with a chain pump for cisterns. Would like to hear from those who know.

A Voice From Texas.

I have been laid up a few days with rheumatism and have been looking over the back numbers of the REVIEW. It is the greatest possible help and source of encouragement to us small growers way out here in Texas, on the edge of civilization. Some of us have never seen a first-class greenhouse except our own, and are self taught as well as self made. I saw some of the best roses and carnations that my city brothers could grow this winter, and to my surprise I could beat them in size and quality. I have built a new carnation house. I live in a "30 cent town," but I grow dollar carnations. The only help I have had has been good trade papers, of which the best is the FLORISTS' REVIEW.

H. L. NEAL.

Tuberous Begonias.

The REVIEW is very attractively got up, the many articles are well written, interesting and instructive, and we have pleasure in enclosing $2.50 for renewal of our subscription. We note with regret that begonias, which are our great specialty, do not seem to be grown in America at all extensively, excepting the winter flowering varieties. Is this because the tuberous varieties are not successful owing to the great heat in summer? We should imagine that even if this is so in some districts, that there are plenty of others where a cooler and moister atmosphere would be conducive to the success of these most beautiful flowers, which are each year being grown in larger numbers in Great Britain.

BLACKMORE & LANGDON.

Dollar Carnations Again.

In reply to F. A. F.'s query how to sell $1 carnations in a thirty-cent town, the solution is quite simple. We started here a few years ago in a small way and as the business was entirely new to the town it was supposed by many that flowers were to be given away, but to sell—never. Any price was too much. With the end in view of eking out a living we sold carnations at from 35 cents to 50 cents per dozen; but as we often had to buy (in case of funerals) we couldn't get anything to sell at these prices and have any profit left. Starting in last fall with Hill, Lawson, white and pink; Enchantress and Crane, we determined to get what they were worth. Enchantress we have asked for and got $1 a dozen, the Lawsons, etc., 75 cents. We use plenty of fancy ferns or Sprengeri with all orders, and in case of funeral orders, all flowers sent out are artistically bunched and boxed. We find no more kicking than we did at the lower price. We are in a town of 2,000 population. We would advise F. A. F. to put up good flowers and ask what they are worth, but don't ask 50 cents for 30-cent flowers. People as a rule recognize merit and are willing to pay an advance price for a good article.

C. H. H.

Twenty Years But Still Learning.

Enclosed find $1 for the REVIEW another year; could hardly keep (green) house without it. Have found it pleasant and profitable. My specialty is bedding stock, filling vases, window boxes, gardens, etc. Each year I run short of some plant and have to buy. I have answered several advertisements in the REVIEW to my advantage. I think florists might almost make a living buying and selling from each other. I find my business steadily growing. Once a customer, always a customer has been the general experience with those with whom I have traded.

The most valuable thing that I learned in the REVIEW was how to grow vincas. I have grown and used them for twenty years and never knew the best way to propagate them until I learned from the REVIEW. The weather has been very fine for florists in New York State this winter; plenty of sunshine.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Despite the short month and three holidays, besides four Sundays to subtract, leaving only twenty-one working days, February bids fair to be one of the most active months of the season. The amount of business in cut flowers is limited by the supply, not by the demand. St. Valentine's created activity in violets, sweet peas, and kindred flowers supposed to be specially favored by Cupid. There was no advance in prices, simply a better average, violets especially have been in over supply during the greater part of January. Next to St. Valentine's day, the wedding of Miss Alice Roosevelt was perhaps the most important feature. Philadelphia contributed of her choicest stock to this event—Beauties and orchids, the former largely, the latter to a smaller extent, being the flowers sent to Washington. The Flower Market is an important factor in the distribution of white snapdragon, Thos. Meehan & Sons, John Holt and John Savage all contributing fancy grades of this flower to the Filbert street center. Curiously enough, the feature of the carnation market was the over supply of Enchantress last week, fairly good blooms of this variety selling considerably under the listed quotations on one or two days. This was, however, only temporary. Beauties continue extremely scarce, nearly all the crack growers having to admit defeat at the hands of the weather this season. It is confidently predicted that the vanguard of the next Beauty crop will appear simultaneously with Lent; not, perhaps, the ideal time to secure them. The deficiency in Brides noted before is more marked now, but the increase in production of LaReine tulips is more than equal to meet the requirements. Bridesmaids are in moderate supply, the best being of very fine quality. Prices are higher than at any time since Christmas. The supply of bulbous flowers is excellent, but the demand is hardly sufficient to absorb them all at satisfactory prices. A few fancy tulips, notably Keizerskroon, have been seen at S. S. Pennock's. They sell better than the ordinary varieties. The Leo Niessen Co. is strong on cattleyas, which are in demand. Wm. E. McKissick is handling quite a lot of forget-me-nots, so much prized for St. Valentine's day. He has the market pretty nearly to himself.

Fifty-fifth and Springfield Road.

There is an amicable feud existing between Wm. K. Harris and Phil. To sum up briefly, the situation stands this way: Wm. K. Harris says that his reputation stands so high that the newspaper men must come out to his place and tell what they see there; that if they don't they will be behind the times, and that he doesn't want any advertising! It would only bring him an order from Denver, Colo., or some equally distant, un-get-at-able place from the standpoint of a grower of flowering plants. Phil says that reputation may be all right. He has no doubt that Wm. K. Harris' reputation was all right in the days when there were only a few florists and no REVIEW, but in these present days of modern business, when new florists are springing up everywhere, and competition is keen, reputation may or may not count. There is great risk of being forgotten, cast up on the sands, as it were. However, Wm. K. Harris is such a thoroughly whole-souled, genial man that Phil determined to go out to see him, but he wants it distinctly understood that he did not have to go, that it was done out of pure good will, and had nothing whatever to do with Wm. K. Harris' reputation, be it good, bad, or indifferent.

Unluckily, Wm. K. Harris was away, and Mark B. Mills was busy with Mr. Money-Maker and a representative of M. Witt, who appeared deeply absorbed in Golden Spur and Single Von Sion. But Wm. Mills, whom the aforesaid representative addressed as Lew, probably the latitude great men allow themselves, acted as cicerone in a hasty trip through the houses. This trip was so hasty that I can only give you impressions and not any detailed notes of the stock grown. I was impressed by the transition from former days, the quantity of flowering plants, as compared with the decorative plants, being far greater. At present azaleas form the staple of the flowering plants. There were some fine specimens in bloom, with many more to follow, several houses being used for storage purposes for the Easter crop.

The advance in the cultivation of gardenias is marked. One house, filled entirely with, I think, 8-inch pots, was a sight. The plants averaging, Mr. Mills said, at least twelve buds, were in perfect condition and should be in full flower when these notes see the light. White lilacs are very fine. Bulbous stock is still grown to a considerable extent, but as compared with former years, one is impressed with the idea that it is decidedly on the wane. The various types of Boston ferns are here in numbers so great that the palms have been crowded off the place, the last arecas having disappeared this winter. Rubbers appear to be on the increase. Dracaena terminalis and Pandanus Veitchii are holding their own. Both are well done.

Primrose buttercup is not so largely grown as last year, it having proved a poor shipper. More than one large house is devoted to shamrock for St. Patrick's day. The seeds are sown in 2¼-inch pots, almost exclusively. When shamrock-shaped pans are desired these pots can be shipped with the pans, the customer filling them, as the pans do not ship well when filled. The quantity of Easter plants grown is very large, Crimson Rambler roses, Baby Ramblers, hydrangeas, genistas and the azaleas before mentioned forming the staples, rhododendrons lilies and a few other things being grown in smaller quantities. The place is in very fine condition.

Now, Wm. K. Harris, have I heaped coals of fire on your head?

Improvements.

Paul Richter, manager of the Henry F. Michell Co., pointed out improvements in the packing and shipping department by which the company's business will be more rapidly and easily transacted than in the past. The entire packing department has been transferred to the basement, heretofore used as a storeroom. This basement is well lighted, has a good cement floor, and the further advantage of freedom from interruption. Part is devoted to storing the less bulky goods required every day, and part for packing. The room on the first floor heretofore used for packing will be devoted entirely to shipping, the boxes being there divided for the different railroads or for local routes. A new system has been devised by which the possibility of errors in shipping is even further reduced.

Various Notes.

The Floral Exchange will erect one new house, mammoth size, for the Richmond rose this spring; 11,000 grafted plants will be planted therein.

Wm. Kleinheinz, of Ogontz, Pa., the only Philadelphian who was successful in winning a first prize at the recent carnation show in Boston, favors pot-grown plants, exclusively. He grows his carnations in pots, planting them out in the houses in the end of July or early in August.

Albert Harvey & Sons, of Brandywine Summit, Chester Co., Pa., are planning a new range of three houses to be used for carnations.

Theo. Edwards, of Bridgeton, N. J., has the honor of being first in this market with several items on the bulbous list.

E. H. Bower, of Chisselhurst, N. J., has given the ever active D. T. Connor, representing the Triple Alliance, an order for one new carnation house 100x20.

Wm. Munro, of Garrettsford, Pa., will rebuild one house 35x150, replacing a smaller house. It is unnecessary to say that the before mentioned representative of the Burnham-Hitchings-Pierson Company secured the order.

Geo. R. Geiger, a well known florist of Nazareth, Pa., died January 28.

Dr. Herman Burgen addressed the Germantown Horticultural Society last Monday evening, on the subject of Gold Fish and Aquarium Plants.

Edw. A. Stroud, of Strafford, Pa., is to be congratulated on the fine condition of his carnation plants. They are in full crop.

The customers of Edw. Reid are to be congratulated on securing a correspondent who spares no pains to execute their orders exactly, no easy task during times of scarcity like the present.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had another handsome decoration at the Bellevue-Stratford on the 9th inst. for a large private ball.

Pennock Bros. decorated their window

this week with Azalea mollis, both orange and crimson, with valentine favors in the corners.

H. H. Battles' show-case contains Couronne d'Or tulips, a fancy variety not much seen now. It is very beautiful.

M. Rice & Co., are doing a remarkable amount of business in supplying wedding outfits. It keeps them working overtime to prevent the orders accumulating.

William A. Leonard, of Lansdowne, Pa., plans building two houses this season.

The Whilldin Pottery Co. has just shipped an order for Honolulu by steamer. They have also recently filled orders in South America.

Bayersdorfer & Co. have bought the business of Rudolph Hantsch, 811 Lehigh avenue. They will run both places. Sydney Bayersdorfer is in charge of the uptown place. PHIL.

The Market.

Weather conditions have not been conducive to brisk business during the past week. For several days it was too cold for the street venders to handle anything and that always means poorer trade in the wholesale markets. Everything being considered, growers have no cause for grumbling, although more stock has been coming in than could be sold.

American Beauties continue in very short supply and the best grades are scarce and high. More Brides, Maids, and other sorts are coming in, but these have cleared out pretty well at former rates. Carnations have not varied a great deal. No fancy prices are being realized. Top price on fancies continues to be $3 to $4 except it be a few Prosperity or novelties. Some of the poorer grades are cleared at $1.

Violets sell all the way from 25 cents to 75 cents, varying according to the quality as well as the demand. A very fair demand is at this writing expected for these on Valentine's day.

Sweet peas are abundant and good. Valley is not over-plentiful and sells well. Callas and Easter lilies are each abundant. Double and single yellow daffodils as well as Narcissus poeticus and tulips are plentiful. They sell fairly well, however. Other flowers coming in include white azaleas, Anemone coronaria, ranunculus, wallflowers, gladioli, antirrhinums, stocks, cornflowers, Coreopsis grandiflora and acacia. There is a very good call for both asparagus and adiantum, but not much demand for smilax.

Pot plants are being brought in in considerable numbers. Those most seen are azaleas, genistas, cyclamens, Primula Obonica, bulbous stock and small ferns in pans.

Various Notes.

The seed trade bowling league closed the season with a very successful banquet at the Langham on February 12, to which about seventy-five sat down. Following the banquet there was speech-making and an excellent musical program.

Galvin had an extensive decoration at Emmanuel church on February 7 for the Quincy-Monroe wedding.

Sidney Hoffman is now passing cigars on the most recent acquisition to his household.

None can afford to miss the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on February 20. Everything points to a rousing attendance and the membership list will get a further good lift toward the 300-mark.

Wheeler Co., of Waban, who are orchid specialists, report heavy sales on cattleya flowers. They expect a large lot of C. Mossiae ere long.

The Bay State Nurseries at North Abington are clearing considerable woodland in order to further increase their nursery ground and keep pace with their rapidly increasing trade.

A. P. Calder, of Brockton, has two splendid houses of double violets which would be hard to duplicate in this state.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are receiving some splendid consignments of southern smilax and boxwood. They report business as good and have to work until 10 or 11 o'clock many nights to keep abreast of orders.

He had faithfully served in many offices, including that of vice-president, and was a warm patron of horticulture.

A good audience listened to a lecture on "Abandoned Farms and Their Capabilities" at Horticulture hall on February 10, by Prof. W. M. Munson, of Orono, Me. On February 17 E. O. Orpet, of South Lancaster, will speak on "Hardy Flowers" and will undoubtedly have a large and interested audience.

Various Comment.

With all the fine weather, flowers, except bulbous stock, are not going to waste and that is not wasting but in good demand and of the very finest quality. Von Sion and Golden Spur narcissi, Yellow Prince, La Reine and Vermilion Brilliant tulips are now at their very best and the public feels like taking spring flowers.

We lately gave ourselves the pleasure of calling on Miss Grace Newlands, 1838 Main street. They have lately built a palm house in the rear of the store and a long, narrow conservatory between the store and their range of four houses facing Delavan avenue. It was a sad blow to both family and friends when the estimable Donald Newlands was taken away and his sister has bravely given up a fine position and taken hold of the business and I can see nothing but success in view for her. They have a very compact and attractive place and are fortunate in having an excellent gardener, faithful, diligent and clever. With these favorable circumstances and Miss Newlands' tact, good judgment and splendid character there can be nothing but success, which all friends as well as contemporaries will be glad to see.

Robins have been very common here for the past two weeks. Where they put their heads last week when it was 10 degrees below zero we do not know, but it's pretty sure they were not singing, "Meet me in the Cherry Tree, Maud." An incident of this winter is worth noting. We planted three tulip beds for a customer on January 17, ground dry and friable, and they will be likely to give as fine flowers and more lasting than any planted in October.

Some one has been around this locality and was kind enough to write up several places. He was very complimentary in notices of the places and had sweet things to say about a certain establishment at Corfu. As this was signed "S" my friends might think it was W. S. Admitting many weaknesses, we are not guilty of praising our own offspring on their humble achievements. We take more pleasure in calling their attention to "things they have left undone and done things they ought not to have done." David has certainly great carnations, mignonette, sweet peas and fine roses and, last, a fine boy. It is no longer a novelty to be told of these recurring events, but when this habit is acquired in a brand new quarter it is alarming. It means new anxieties for grandma and grandpa and more Christmas presents. We must excuse young parents thinking their offspring the most wonderful that ever was. It is a natural law and without it the world would soon become depopulated. Maternal love came into the world perhaps millions of years ago and after ages had elapsed came paternal love, but not before mother and offspring needed his protection. If you want to be further posted on this wonderful subject get Drummond's Ascent of Man from your public library.

State of Business.

An immense amount of stock is being used in dinner and other table decorations. In variety this takes a wide range, from orchids and fine roses on through all available lines of stock. Bulbous stocks, the daffodils in particular, are now very plentiful and it looks as though they might soon be hard to dispose of at any price. Hawthorns and other spring flowering plants are appearing in considerable quantity and sell readily. There are better stocks of azaleas in sight than there were a week ago and the smaller sizes are soon taken.

Retail prices follow: American Beauty roses, $10 to $12 per dozen; Killarney, $4; best Liberty, $4 and $5; Bride, Maid and Gates, $1.50 and $2.50; best carnations, $1 and $1.25 per dozen; violets, 75 cents and $1 per bunch of fifty; cut Harrisii and calla lilies, $2 and $3 per dozen; daffodils, 35 cents to 75 cents per dozen; tulips, 50 cents and 75 cents per dozen; best mignonette, $1.50 and $2 per dozen; sweet peas, 75 cents and $1 per bunch. The average retail price of large pots of rhododendron, lilac, hawthorn, flowering plum, etc., is $2.50 each. Many fine azaleas are being broken up and used in table decorations. Daffodils and tulips are also being largely used for this purpose.

Florists' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the club was held in Scottish Rite hall on the night of February 6. The announcement that Prof. Woods, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, was to give a stereopticon lecture on the diseases of carnations had a good effect in bringing out the members, the hall being well filled. In opening, Prof. Woods referred to the recent destructive ravages of disease, particularly among Lawson carnations, in this District and vicinity. He alluded to the causes, and illustrated with the stereopticon the progress of the disease. As a remedy he advocated spraying, the process to continue while the plants are in the field.

James T. Scott, representing the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, was present and gave an interesting account of his experiences.

It was decided to hold a banquet in connection with the annual election of officers at the March meeting. The banquet will be at Freund's catering establishment, 815 Tenth street Northwest. Messrs. Macfarland and West and Col. Biddle, commissioners of the District, will be invited.

The carnation show was another drawing card that added interest to the proceedings. Several varieties exhibited had been seen here last season, but the majority were new. A list follows:

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown-on-Hudson, carnations Winsor, Helen M. Gould and White Enchantress.

Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., Pink Patten and Mikado.

H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., My Maryland and Jessica.

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., Beacon and Evangeline.

Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, N. Y., Abundance.

John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., variegated and pink Imperial. The latter is a sport of the former.

J. R. Freeman, G. E. Anderson, foreman, Washington, D. C., Enchantress and Lawson.

Ley & Bickings, Good Hope, D. C., Enchantress, Flamingo, White Lawson and Prosperity.

Mrs. G. G. Hubbard, Twin Oaks, D. C., Peter Bisset, head gardener, vase of Killarney roses.

Southwick C. Briggs, Washington, D. C., Carl Anderson, gardener, Killarney roses and Enchantress carnations.

By the rules of the club roses and carnations must be exhibited at three different periods of the season before a certificate can be granted. In this connection: Of what value is a certificate anyway? A strictly first-class carnation can go it alone; neither will certificates a foot deep save a "rotten" one. However, as certificates are the fashion we have laid in a stock that are things of beauty and will probably be a joy forever after the exhibitors get them.

Among so many fine blooms from growers, or originators of known repute it may seem unfair to particularize. Time only can thoroughly prove a carnation. As shown here, Winsor, Helen M. Gould, Beacon, Evangeline, Pink Patten, Mikado, My Maryland, Jessica and John E. Haines are all fine varieties. So far as keeping qualities are concerned, it is my opinion that nothing has yet been produced that can excel Pierson's Winsor and Patten's Mikado.

Haines' Imperial showed remarkable stems, three feet, stiff, and if they in time develop flowers in proportion they will be a great acquisition to the trade.

The Killarney roses exhibited were fine and served to strengthen the belief that Killarney has come to be a stayer and a money maker.

TOLEDO, O.—The Swan Floral Co. has been incorporated with $10,000 capital stock, by N. R. Swan and others.

WILMINGTON, O.—Mrs. Geo. H. Moores, wife of the proprietor of the Wilmington Floral Co., is spending the winter in Florida.

OMAJA, CUBA.—Con Plant, formerly proprietor of the Le Grande Nurseries, Le Grande, Ore., is spending the winter here and may go into business.

RALEIGH, N. C.—In their efforts to find out what are the best carnations for them to grow, J. L. O'Quinn & Co. find that their list now includes over twenty varieties and they are buying several more this season.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

MARIETTA, O.—Dyar Selby has purchased the Schoepen greenhouse on Fairview Heights.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—George Just, formerly in business here, is now at Charleston, S. C.

YALAHA, FLA.—Mr. James, of Gillett & James, proprietors of the Yalaha Conservatories, died recently.

HARRISBURG, PA.—C. G. Papsch has gone to Chicago to enter the employ of D. W. Brant, who will add largely to his range of glass the coming season.

PLEASANT HILL, Mo.—At the George M. Kellogg establishment a freak calla was recently found, one of those which occasionally are seen with a double spathe.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—C. W. Johnson, who for about five years has been superintendent for H. W. Buckbee, has resigned and will about March 1 remove to Seattle, Wash., to enter into partnership in a business there.

MANSFIELD, O.—The Berno Floral Co. has begun the erection of a block of short-span houses to cover a ground area of 112x180. The gutters are to be seven feet high, the place is to be heated by steam and is to be strictly up-to-date in all its features.

CARTHAGE, Mo.—Perry Finn's sport of Enchantress is about the color of the F. R. Pierson Co.'s sport named for Helen Gould, but the outer petals shade toward the Daybreak pink, which is also the color of the variegations, while in the Gould the markings are a still darker pink. Mr. Finn's flower is large.

RIDGEFIELD, CONN.—Pinchbeck Bros. have dissolved partnership and the business is continued by William Pinchbeck, Jr. This is the best year the firm has yet experienced at this location. Carnations are fine. Enchantress and Harlowarden are well liked. May Naylor is the best white. Of the older varieties, Genevieve Lord and Maceo are very good.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—The third annual carnation and rose show of the Kentucky Society of Florists will be held in Louisville Wednesday, February 21, and everybody is invited to send whatever they might have of interest. A large number of the craft will view the show, besides the public. Flowers should reach here the 20th, or the morning of the 21st. Address exhibits to Fred L. Schulz, secretary, 644 Fourth avenue, Louisville, Ky.

RHINEBECK, N. Y.—Under ordinary circumstances few violets are shipped from this locality on Sunday, but this week a very heavy shipment was dispatched on Sunday night to be in time to reach Chicago for the St. Valentine's day demand. It is said the shipments made practically a car load. It has not been such a bad season for the violet growers as many expected, the opening of the western markets serving to relieve the congestion in New York. Quite a little building is planned for the early spring.

JOHNSTOWN, PA.—William Schmidt has leased the building on Franklin street recently purchased by the United States National Bank.

PEORIA, ILL.—The meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, at first announced for February 27 and 28, will be held here March 3.

DANVILLE, ILL.—Rhoten Bros. & Co., who grew violets a few years ago but who have lately been growing carnations, have sold out to B. E. Wadsworth.

FELTON, DEL.—Henry Austin has been granted a patent on an apparatus for heating hotbeds and propagating beds. It consists of a bed with a chamber underneath, heated by a furnace outside the bed with a longitudinal heat conduit passing through to a chimney at the other end of the bed.

MONTANDON, PA.—The dwelling and boiler house connected with the greenhouses of John C. Wenzel were destroyed by fire at two o'clock on the morning of February 6. The fire originated in the boiler house and the direction of the wind saved the greenhouses, but much of the stock was ruined.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The Johns-Manville Co. held its annual convention of salesmen here the past week, 150 being present. The purpose is to discuss opportunities and methods of extending the business. The use of fuel saving pipe and boiler coverings was reported largely on the increase among greenhouse owners.

SHARON, PA.—The heating apparatus at the establishment of Harry Clark broke down during the recent cold spell and all the stock in six greenhouses was frozen up. Mr. Clark had purchased the business a couple of years ago from Edwin McConnell and had just got things to running nicely. He is very greatly discouraged at his loss, which puts him out of business, temporarily at least.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—The Stuppy Floral Co. has prepared plans for a range of greenhouses soon to be erected at Lovers' Lane and Ashland avenue, where the company owns thirteen acres. There will be 30,000 square feet of glass and the cost will be $10,000. The new houses will be devoted to roses and the present establishment at Mount Mora cemetery, comprising 55,000 square feet of glass, will be used for carnations.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Peter Bisset, a member of the S. A. F. peony committee, reports that the United States Department of Agriculture last fall purchased from Kelway & Son, Langport, England, one plant each of seventy-six named varieties of peonies. These were planted at Arlington Farm, under the care of Prof. L. C. Corbett, and will, when in bloom, be open to the inspection of the S. A. F., its peony committee and the public. Mr. Bisset advises Edwin Lonsdale, of the committee, that he hopes to get the Department to add largely to its list of varieties and that the trials will be of the utmost value.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Throughout last week trade progressed at a laggard pace but Monday morning opened with an influx of orders that took the market by surprise and occasioned the most vigorous rustling for stock which has been necessary thus far this year. In fact, it was a busier day than the market has seen, except at holiday time, in many months. The demand was principally for carnations and roses, but many other items also cleaned up well. Tuesday brought a large call for violets for Valentine's day and Wednesday morning also saw a brisk city demand in this department.

Beauties continue very short. The quality is nothing to brag about, but buyers are not critical. They are glad to get the Beauties without question of price and without insisting on too close selection. Tea roses have improved in quality with a few days of fine winter weather. Maids are again of excellent color and substance. The demand for select stock is considerably ahead of the supply. There is no trouble in getting $12 to $15 per hundred for the best Maids and Brides, but this does not imply that indifferent grades can be placed in the select class. Short roses are in special demand and for the past fortnight have been making exceedingly good averages for the growers. Both Liberty and Richmond are scarce. Some very fine Chatenay are seen and also Uncle John.

The weather has been favorable to carnations, the supply has increased and at the same time the flowers have taken on some of that crispness which the handlers so like to see. It means that shipping and keeping quality has improved. Last week there were carnations to spare, but on Monday orders had to be cut and again on Tuesday. While the prices were not shoved up, they were, nevertheless, firmly held at quoted rates.

The market is full of bulbous material, including practically everything on the list. The fancy tulips are selling well but so much can hardly be said for any other item. The demand for callas and Harrisii has passed. Paper Whites and common tulips are selling very cheaply. A few sweet peas are seen, but quality is not high. Violets came in heavily this week and on Monday and Tuesday sold out well at prices ranging from 50 cents to $1 per hundred according to quality. The St. Valentine's day demand was never more apparent.

The green goods market is taking on new activity.

The Season's Production.

It seems quite evident that the average grower is not producing so good or so much stock this year as last. Of course there are exceptions, and the fact is more apparent of roses than of carnations at most establishments, but nearly all wholesalers agree that, even with the considerable increase in glass, the total receipts of stock in this market are no larger, if they are even so large as last year. From reports, the same is true of many other markets.

The good growers have not done as well as usual thus far this year but it is pointed out that some who have poor houses or who practice indifferent methods have had better results than usual. This is explained by the fact of moderate temperatures and an almost unprecedented amount of sunshine during the past three months.

Death of Geo. Wietor.

George Wietor died on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock at his home at 221 Devon avenue. He was 73 years of age and had suffered for some months with dropsy. The funeral will be held from St. Henry's church, High Ridge at 9:30 this morning.

Mr. Wietor was one of the earliest to engage in the forcing of vegetables, an industry which has now become so great in the Rogers Park section where he has lived for so many years. When the two sons, Henry and Nicholas J., were ready to go into business for themselves they established the Rogers Park Rose Co. at the old place, the father at that time giving up the active cares of business, but he has, until failing strength forbade, found his chief pleasure in the work in the greenhouses. The firm name was shortly changed to Wietor Bros. and the business developed to be among the largest in the country.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met February 8. John Ziska and N. P. Miller were elected to membership. Jas. Psenecka, H. J. Stockman, J. S. Dekema and Joseph Barry were proposed. The trustees were authorized to make a new lease on Room 409 Handel hall for the second and fourth Thursdays of each month and sublet the hall for the fourth Thursday to the Retail Florists' Association. was voted to proceed with the annual carnation show on March 8 and E. F. Winterson was appointed manager. A number of out-of-town growers have indicated their intention of being present, all the season's novelties will be shown and it promises to be the best carnation show the club has ever had.

Following the club meeting there was a short meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association, both Chairman Hartshorne and Secretary Hasselbring being present. The approaching Peoria convention was informally discussed.

Various Notes.

C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, to whom the coal supply is one of the never-ending problems, says that if growers will take his advice they will at once proceed to put in a supply of fuel to last until the end of the present firing season.

Stollery Bros. are marketing a large lot of La Reine tulips in small pots.

Harry Klunder was out this week without his cane for the first time in several weeks.

E. F. Winterson spent Sunday on the north shore, a part of the day with his friend, Fritz Bahr, at Highland Park. Mr. Winterson says he thinks very highly of Mr. Bahr's seedling carnation, white with markings closely resembling Prosperity.

George Reinberg says that the rooted cutting business is starting off in fine shape but he notes that the demand is for the newer and better varieties and that the older sorts go slowly.

C. W. McKellar reports that the crop of Cattleya Trianae is passing off and that orchids will shortly be harder to get and bring more money.

Peter Reinberg has the last few days been experiencing some of the disadvantages of being alderman. He has spent most of his time listening to alternating delegations from the 240 saloons in his ward and from those who favor the proposed increase in license. At the same time his mail on the subject is about a bushel of letters a day.

Klehm's Nursery, after testing 200 feet of the Wittbold watering device in a rose house, have ordered 1,000 feet, with which to equip five more houses. F. R. Hills, at Maywood, will also put it in one house for trial.

in the hospital for his long deferred operation.

W. E. Lynch, manager of E. H. Hunt's cut flower department, was called to his old home in Massachusetts by word of the critical illness of his father.

The automobile show last week had as a feature a handsome glass-sided car, bearing the name of the Chas. A. Shaef-fer Floral Co. It was for the Kansas City firm but the builder took occasion to show it to a number of local retailers before delivery.

F. R. Hills, Maywood, whose product Miss Hills sells at the Growers' Market, is having exceptionally good results with Brides and Maids this season.

W. N. Rudd has been laid up for more than a month with rheumatism in the back, but is now getting into shape again.

Henry Wieter is building a fine new residence on the site of the old family home adjoining the greenhouses. The Foley Mfg. Co. supplied the interior finish, which is in keeping with Wieter Bros.' prosperity, as it did for the handsome new home of Alderman Reinberg.

Among the visitors: J. A. Valentine, en route home to Denver from the Boston carnation convention; Robert Greenlaw, Boston, looking for business; E. H.

R. Green, of the Green Floral and Nursery Co., Dallas, Tex., son of Hetty Green and built to hitch in a team with Phil Foley; E. H. Schmidt, Indianapolis, representing the introducers of Carnation Candace; W. H. Drake, Kenosha, Wis.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

White stock has not been very plentiful the past week. Prices on roses and carnations have not changed; some bulbous stock has, however, been sold very cheap. Business moves along very quietly, no rush to be seen anywhere; a few good decorations, but not enough to cause any comment.

The weather was pleasant part of the week, but we had several of those dark days when you could scarcely recognize a friend across the street at noon, the kind of days that Mr. Randolph says would make a stranger think, on going into one of our greenhouses, that it had a sheet iron roof.

a grower, especially in bedding plants, and has already built up a nice business, which should encourage others to take up some of the smaller towns surrounding the Greater Pittsburg instead of all crowding around the city market.

Mrs. E. A. Allen, of Blairsville, is cutting some very good freesia, Paper Whites and Lawson carnations, all of which are taken up by the local trade.

Geo. L. Huscroft is representing Hagemann & Co. in this western section of the country and reports a very successful season. George says his stock all blooms and the people know it.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club met Tuesday evening, February 6. After the regular business had been disposed of, there being no opposition for the various offices the officers for the ensuing year were declared unanimously elected. Mr. Langhans called the new president, John Jones, to the chair. Mr. Jones thanked the club for the honor conferred and said some very complimentary things of the officers who had preceded him, also of the club, which embraces 153 active members. He gave the members to understand that much would be expected of them this year in the way of assistance, as this is to be the best year of the club. The president then called on Charlie Crall to talk on the carnation convention. Mr. Crall, in his remarks, complimented the Boston florists on their kind and thoughtful treatment of their guests and on the excellent arrangements for the exhibition and the splendid show. He spoke also of the different varieties and of the methods of growing stock in that section, and wound up by stating that he had received full compensation for the time taken to make the trip.

Carnations, the subject for the evening, was taken up. A vase of Glendale, grown by Vesey & Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind., was presented and created a good impression. It was accepted as one of the best of its class, but variegated stock is not in demand in this market.

Other exhibits were:

Guttman & Weber, a vase of Victory, which was accepted as one of the good things with a good record.

John Murchie, two seedlings grown by the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., one of which was a very fine red, good color, good flower and good stem. The other, a pink one, had all of these qualities, besides being a pink shade that is not overdone. These seedlings were especially well received.

John E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., had several good things, one of them, Imperial, variegated, stems three feet long and very strong. While this was conceded to be good, it was passed as of no use in this market, but his red John E. Haines was so highly approved that a committee of recommendation was appointed to express to Mr. Haines the approval of the club. Several of the members spoke of increasing the orders which they had already placed.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. exhibited a cut from the Pittsburg Rose and Carnation Co., containing a number of each of the following: Helen Goddard, Jubilee, Flamingo, Estelle, Fred Burki, Lady Bountiful and Enchantress, all of which were well done. Mr. Burki gave a detailed history of them from the cutting bench to the exhibition table, which contained information worthy of consideration.

The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange showed about ten vases, of as many varieties, which were all good, including a bunch of Nelson, grown by Wm. Swayne, of Kennett Square, also a sport from Lawson of Enchantress color.

Blind Bros., a vase of Lawson and several others.

Mr. Hatch, gardener for D. M. Clemson, a vase of assorted carnations and pot plants, grown in the heart of the city. While the carnations would not compare with some of the aristocrats on exhibition, Mr. Randolph said a gardener who could produce such stock under the conditions, that is, in houses that occasionally looked as if they were covered with sheet iron, deserved great credit.

John Wyland was very much in evidence with his show of Fiancee, Fred Burki, Bountiful and Eclipse, one of the best commercial pinks shown. Uncle John thinks very well of Fred Burki as a white; good-sized flowers and the best stemmed white shown.

During the evening the secretary read the following report: Club membership to February 6, 1906, 153; accessions during year ending February 5, 1906, 18; resignations, 3; deaths, 2. Up to date, February 6, all bills are paid and $98.65 is in the treasury.

After which was closed one of the most interesting meetings ever held by the club. One can hardly understand how any grower can afford to miss these opportunities of meeting his friends and getting information which in many cases would take him years to learn.

Cottage Gardens, Long Island, N. Y., sent a box of Robt. Craig, which arrived one day late and were kept on exhibition at the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. All who saw the display were of the opinion that if the grower will furnish such stock, it will be good enough for them.

The Botanical Society of Western Pennsylvania held its regular meeting Thursday evening, February 8, at 8 o'clock in the Fifth avenue high school. The program was devoted to the Environment and Adaptation of Plants, with special reference to arctic plants, the subject being presented by Prof. D. R. Sunstine, president of the society. The other officers of the society are O. E. Jennings, secretary, and M. A. Lewis, treasurer.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business remains about the same. Cold, clear weather has improved stock in general, and roses especially show a marked improvement. Lawson carnations are a glut on the market, while other varieties are still quite scarce.

Club Meeting.

The subject for the evening, Wholesale House Criticisms, was very openly discussed at the last regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club.

Speaking from a general viewpoint it was shown that the commission houses take a great deal of worry off the retailers' hands. In former years if a retail florist had an order for several hundred violets he would call up every grower for miles around, but now we simply call up our commission man, and if there are any violets to be had in our vicinity we get them.

The remark was made that while fifteen per cent commission was all right for handling flowers it was too much commission on plants. Manager Wm. Dilger responded to this by saying that if the plants could be left at the growers', who also looked after the packing and delivering, the commission house acting merely as agent, then a lower percentage would be all right, but when the wholesale house has to store the plants, pack them and see to their safe delivery, and that maybe in zero weather, it is another matter.

In speaking of prices, it was shown that the matter lies to a large extent in the growers' hands. When a retailer buys a bunch of carnations at 4 cents and he is sure of twenty-five 4-cent flowers in that bunch, you will never hear a kick, but when he gets four or six 2-cent blooms in every twenty-five, then no one can blame him for protesting. If every grower ran a retail store for a time he would soon learn to grade his stock more carefully. If you haven't twenty-five 4-cent white, then put in enough 4-cent pink to make up the bunch, but don't stick in 2-cent or 2½-cent stock; keep that separate. Taking the convenience into consideration, there is no complaint of paying a local supply house a few pennies more for an article than the out of town houses ask.

Someone suggested that the local house could carry a complete line of baskets and supplies. This is impossible; besides, then our styles would remain the same from year to year and customers would soon tire of baskets, etc.

In speaking of our local commission houses one fault, hard to be remedied, is the late arrival of goods, the bulk arriving at 11 a. m. This holds everyone back on some of the morning's orders, and then when the stock arrives there is so large a number of buyers waiting that it is a wonder any of the regular orders are taken care of at all.

The result of the whole meeting was that a committee of two was appointed, namely, Tom Browne and James Taylor, to arrange for a meeting of the growers, the object being to get more, if not all, to ship to the commission houses; also to fight the peddler who sells a lot of flowers to some store man for a little below the prevailing market price, pockets his money and goes home rejoicing.

It was suggested that a scale of retail prices be set each week, but the difficulty with this is the man on the outskirts can always afford to sell cheaper than the down-town store man, who has double the expenses and more particular customers.

The committee on cement construction awarded the first prize, a box of cigars, to Ed. Beard. The Cleveland Cut Flower Co.'s exhibit was well thought of, but being a tile and not a cement bench, it was in a class by itself.

Herman Knope is back in harness again and is expected to be at the next meeting.

The questions in the box were held over until the next meeting.

A. J. Stakelin was given favorable mention for a fine vase of white Lawson. Mr. Stakelin is still young in the business, but judging from his fine stock one would think differently.

Various Notes.

Wm. Brown had charge of the decorations for the Junior hop at Ann Arbor. The ceilings in the two large halls were draped in bunting of the college colors, and the walls were trimmed with southern smilax over a white bunting background. In the gymnasium garland was used. The prevailing flowers carried by the ladies present were Beauties and violets.

winter at last and lots of it. The retailers have no complaint to make. Business has been steady and satisfactory. The grumblers are insincere; some kick, as a matter of habit, and complain on general principles, but it has been a good year for all and most of them have the grace to say so.

The wholesale rates for the best Beauties, Maids and novelties, including Richmond, have not been higher since Christmas. The supply is insufficient for the demand. It is becoming fashionable for a millionaire's family to limit the florist to no set sum for a piece of work and as New York is now a city of millionaires it is little wonder the retailers are not only all making money, but many of them putting it away. A lot of them paid $1 apiece for their beauties Saturday. Some stock came to town frozen during the extreme weather of last week.

All bulbous stock is cheap and abundant. Orchids are none too plentiful. The marriage of Miss Roosevelt will use up every available white orchid in the country. The carnation is king this week in New York, with the club's carnation night and exhibition, and the lectures by C. W. Ward and Robert Craig. Plenty of valley, lilies, mignonette and sweet peas and to spare. Green goods, too, are a sufficiency. Violets are evidently settled in the niche they have made for themselves; 50 cents for the best fresh ones, with an occasional spurt to 75 cents for the specials and a comeback to 60 cents. Leftovers go at 25 cents and the streets are full of them.

Florists' Club Meeting.

Carnation night on Monday evening at the Grand opera house developed a widespread interest beyond the New York Florists' Club's expectations, 110 members being present.

The new trustee, Mr. Miller, acknowledged the honor of his election. Mr. Haffner reported in behalf of the dinner committee, a successful gathering, a light attendance and no deficit. The outing committee reported securing Wetzel's grove for the annual excursion

July 2 and the engagement of the steamer Isabel.

Eight new members were elected, Adam J. Scott, Abram Moltz, Jas. McManus, Chas. Loechner, Chas. Grant, E. Satow, Geo. A. Burnett and W. H. Forrestel. Thirteen new names were proposed, Arthur Cowee, E. W. Finger, B. Suzuki, A. J. Ricard, W. C. Ricard, Wm. Starkey, Myer Gottlieb, S. Rodh, W. F. Nugent, Chas. Haffner, Felix Mense, Octavius Hilton and M. A. Bowe.

John N. May sent his resignation as a member of the legislative committee and Walter Sheridan was appointed to fill the vacancy.

C. H. Totty read the report of the committee of awards, which granted a preliminary certificate to Helen Gould, scoring 86 points; White Enchantress, scoring 89 points; Winsor, 90 points; all new carnations to be disseminated by the F. R. Pierson Co. Mr. Totty referred to the meeting of the award and exhibition committee and its discussion of ways and means of drawing exhibits to the monthly meetings, suggesting the offering of money prizes as follows: For the carnation meeting, February 12, for the best vases of carnations, 25 blooms in each, $15, $10, $5, with an extra prize of $5 for the best vase in the exhibit; for the March meeting, $30 for the best display of orchids; for the April meeting, $5 for the best vase of twelve blooms of Bride, Maid, red roses, hybrid tea and any other rose not specified and $10 for twelve Beauty; at the May meeting, $25 for exhibits of bedding plants; at the November meeting, $30 for mums.

A long discussion arose as to the advisability of the departure from old methods. Mr. Weathered suggested the possibility of discord and stated his preference for the award of medals, certificates, etc. He was ably seconded by Messrs. Wheeler and May. In behalf of the innovation addresses were made by Messrs. Totty, James Scott, C. W. Ward, John Birnie and L. Dupuy. Of the $140 suggested by the committee for the year's prizes, Mr. Ward offered to give the entire amount and Mr. Dupuy guaranteed the entire sum set aside for the evening's awards and Mr. Birnie for the April meeting. Mr. Guttman suggested classes in the prize offers, giving the smaller growers opportunities. Mr. O'Mara spoke in behalf of cash prizes but moved that further consideration of the subject be laid over for the March meeting.

The award committee announced the granting of a preliminary certificate to Alma Ward, 94 points; and Elsa Struss, 90 points.

The exhibitors were John Reimels, of Woodhaven, who staged Winsome, Variegated Lawson, Harry Fenn, Fiancee and Seedling No. 32; F. R. Pierson Co., who staged Winsor, Red Lawson, Variegated Lawson and White Enchantress; Velie Bros., Marlboro, N. Y., who staged Enchantress, Nelson Fisher, M. A. Patten and Lady Bountiful; Cottage Gardens Co., who staged Robert Craig, Alma Ward, Enchantress and Elsa Struss; Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, who staged Carnation Abundance and Freesia Purity; Guttman & Weber, who showed Victory; L. E. Enggren, Aqueeduct, L. I., who had a pink seedling carnation; H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., who sent Jessica and My Maryland; W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., who sent Glendale. The prizes were awarded: First to the Cottage Gardens Co.; second, to F. R. Pierson & Co.; third, to Velie Bros., and the special prize for the best vase on exhibition went to Cottage Gardens for Alma Ward.

C. W. Ward's illustrated lecture on the carnation held the interest of the audience for nearly an hour and received the hearty thanks of the club. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, gave a most enjoyable talk on the carnation, embodying his experiences of thirty-five years, from 1858, when Charles Zeller imported the Purity, which held its place as the best and most profitable sort for fifteen years, and President De Graw, the famous white, which he compared with Alma Ward. He spoke of John Thorpe's Portia, the color yet unequalled, and the first deep pink Century which he compared with Elsa Struss. He spoke eloquently of the work Mr. Ward and the other carnation experts had accomplished, the unprofitable work of raising seedlings and the reputation and accomplishments that would crown the memories of the growers long after they had passed away. F. R. Pierson spoke briefly owing to the lateness of the hour, and votes of thanks were given all the orators.

Various Notes.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week are American Institute days, with many lectures and exhibits as before announced, with Prof. Bailey, of Cornell, and Robt. Craig, of Philadelphia, among the speakers.

Chas. H. Grant, who for some time has had charge of the Abraham & Strauss florists' department in Brooklyn, is back with his old employers, J. H. Small & Sons, on Broadway. John Reese has assumed the management at the Brooklyn department store in his place. Mr. Reese was married January 24 to Miss Charlotte Strausz, of Brooklyn.

Harvey C. Mallon, son of John Mallon, of Brooklyn, celebrated his twenty-first birthday last Friday and among his presents was a handsome gold watch from his father. Harvey is one of the four heavy-weights in the family and at 227 the lightest of the quartette. His uncle, Joe, another of the old-time firm of Mallon & Sons, tips the beam at 250. His father is 260 and his grandfather, the original Mallon, now a veteran of over 70 years, makes them all look puny with his 325 pounds. It is doubtful if any family of florists in the world can show three generations to compare with this remarkable aggregation.

Frank W. Dobbs, for years with Wadley & Smythe, died of intestinal cancer at his home, Hartsdale, N. Y., on February 6, after a long illness and several painful operations. He was a great favorite and very much esteemed; a man of sterling character and the right-hand man of the firm, both at Newport and New York. His Masonic brethren had charge of the funeral services. A beautiful wreath of valley was sent by his associates and the firm sent a magnificent casket blanket of the same, his favorite flower. Messrs. Siebrecht & Son also sent handsome remembrances. Mr. Dobbs was a relative of Mrs. Wm. Siebrecht.

Charles B. Hanft, of Hanft Bros., this season will manage the Surf House, at Highland Beach, N. Y. Many New York florists find this a delightful place for their summer outings. Julian N. Hanft, one of the original Hanft Bros., is still a busy member of the aggregation at

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade conditions have been indeed very good, particularly the last few days, as all dealers have experienced a very heavy demand for funeral work. Stock has been coming in very nicely. Roses are fairly plentiful and some very fine stock is shown, particularly in pink, as we have four good varieties in Chatenay, Killarney, Moultons and Bridesmaid. Good Richmond sell well, but the grower has to have a large number of them in order to be able to cut many that can be called selects. Carnations command a good figure, bringing from 75 cents to $1.50 a dozen. Some of our violet growers have had, if anything, more than what was called for, but on account of the good season that they have had they can well afford to lose a few. White lilac has been used considerably the past week and orchids have also been used to some extent, also large numbers of valley.

Minneapolis.

Ralph Latham reports a good trade;

in fact he says he will be well satisfied if trade keeps up as well as it has the past week, from now until Easter.

O. C. Swanson says trade is good and is well satisfied at the way stock is coming in. The mild winter has had a profitable effect on not only the retailer, but likewise the grower. Mr. Swanson thinks well of the new pink rose, Miss Kate Moulton, and is able to sell them in preference to other pinks; a perfect Moulton is hard to beat, their demand for it is heavy and customers ask for it as the Minneapolis rose.

Rice Bros. are doing nicely. They have contracts with some retailers to supply certain stocks the year around. They turn over their stock on small margins and have succeeded in building up a nice trade, both in and out of town.

The New York Floral Co. makes it a practice to have from 1,000 to 2,000 carnations at all times and disposes of large numbers at 75 cents a dozen.

St. Paul.

The Ramaley Floral Co. has been doing a very nice business but was unfortunate in cashing checks. Saturday night a man about 50 years old ordered a wreath for $6 to be delivered Sunday morning and in payment tendered a check for $15, receiving $9 in cash. The delivery boy was unable to find the number and the check also came back. The same man played the same game on C. F. Haupt.

L. L. May & Co. report good business. At the greenhouses they have a big lot of Easter lilies and from all appearance they will have them ready by the thousands.

Owing to the death of T. C. Field, one of our leading merchants, all retailers have been kept very busy the last few days. Some dealers have reported delivering for this one funeral as many as three wagons well filled with designs. FELIX.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The business the past week did not develop anything very startling, but it moved along in good shape and in the long run was first-class. The wholesale houses report shipping trade quiet. Home trade has been good and has made up for the lack of out-of-town business.

The supply of stock has not been heavy, so the demand has cleaned up all that was to be had. Roses and carnations have been in about equal supply. Bulbous stock has been coming in larger quantities and has been selling very well at good prices. Some extra good Dutch hyacinths are offered and meet with ready sale. Good long-stemmed tulips in all colors are very good stock and sell well. Green goods are selling only fairly.

It is to be hoped that Valentine's day will make a boom in the violet market, as this flower sadly needs a boost. At this writing prospects are good for that day and with the supply

WHITE LILAC a Randall Specialty, finest quality, $1.50 doz.

Carnations a large supply of standard and fancy sorts.

The Rose Show.

The annual rose show of the Florists' Society took place last Saturday. The exhibition this year, while not large, was very good as to quality and was well worth seeing. The majority of the stock shown came from out of town and was a credit to the growers.

Peter Reinberg, Chicago, made a very nice exhibit, staging Beauty, Bride, Maid, Ivory, Meteor, Uncle John and Chatenay. The vase of Uncle John deserved special mention.

Weiland & Olinger staged Beauty, Maid, Bride, Uncle John and Chatenay.

Sunderbruch & Meier staged Bride and Bridesmaid which were a great credit to that firm.

The Minneapolis Floral Co., Minneapolis, sent a vase of their new rose, Miss Kate Moulton, which certainly made a fine showing. It showed fine shipping and staying qualities. It is a beautiful medium shade of pink, very long stem, a very large flower which opens in a very pleasing manner. It is a little single, but it is such a beautiful thing that the general opinion was that there is a place for it.

One of the chief attractions of the show was a vase of Carnation Aristocrat. It was in fine form and made a great showing.

The prizes were awarded as follows: Peter Reinberg received first on Beauty, Ivory, Meteor and Uncle John; third on Bridesmaid and Bride. Weiland & Olinger received second on Beauty, Maid, Bride and Chatenay; third on Uncle John and first on best general display. Sunderbruch & Meier received first on Bride and Bridesmaid.

For the S. A. F. medals the Miss Kate

Moulton received ninety points. These medals are not awarded till after our March meeting.

A meeting of the society was held in the evening. Two new members were voted in, J. P. Olinger and Wm. H. Gardener. It was decided to send out invitations to all florists who possibly can do so to come to our carnation show, March 10. Not only will the show be well worth seeing, but the Cincinnati boys will spread a banquet for the visitors. All growers of seedling carnations are requested to make note of this date.

Various Notes.

Miss White, of Lexington, Ky., left last week on a trip through California, to be gone a month or more.

Visitors were Wm. Heintz, of Jacksonville, Ill., and Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorf & Co., Philadelphia.

C. J. OHMER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business for the past week has been only fair, very poor some days and good the others. First-class roses have been scarce, especially fancy grades in Bride and Maid and Richmond. In first and second grades the commission men have a fair supply, which, of course, sell well at good prices. Of Beauties there are enough for the demand.

Carnations are very plentiful in all grades and varieties, top price being $5 for extra fancy Enchantress, Lawson and Lady Bountiful. Some extra fine Nelson Fisher were seen the past week. The best red in the market is Cardinal, but it is not very plentiful. Violets continue to arrive in large quantities. For the best Californias 40 cents is asked, and 60 cents for doubles. Bulbous stock of all kinds is very plentiful, especially Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites. Von Sions are just coming in and sell well. Tulips are somewhat scarce. Callas are easy, but Harrisii have a good call. Lily of the valley is in demand and not overplentiful.

Smilax is plentiful, the demand being rather slow the past week. Other greens are equal to all demands.

Club Meeting.

The carnation meeting held February 8 drew the largest attendance the club has had this year, the number being forty-eight. The exhibition was very large and the stock of fine quality. Among those who exhibited were: W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., who staged a red sport of Glendale, Lawson, Lady Bountiful, Glendale, The Belle and Enchantress. H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., showed My Maryland and Jessica. D. C. Noble, of Columbia City, Ind., showed a fine vase of light pink sport of Lawson. John Hartje, Indianapolis, sent that fine pink, Candace. The Minneapolis Floral Co., of Minneapolis, Minn., staged a fine vase of the new rose, Miss Kate Moulton. Among the local growers Wm. Winter, Kirkwood, had Enchantress, Patten, Lawson and Bountiful; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Enchantress, Patten, Lawson and Lady Bountiful; Henry Braun, foreman for A. Jablonsky, Wellston, brought Eclipse, Lady Bountiful, Enchantress, Flamingo and Patten; Theo. Klockenkemper, Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and Flamingo; John Steidle, a fine pink sport of Enchantress.

The meeting opened at 2 o'clock, with all the officers present. The by-laws were adopted and ordered printed. The discussions for this meeting were laid over until next spring. The question of holding a flower show this year came up for discussion and on a vote the club decided to hold no show this year. It was also decided to hold our annual rose show at the next meeting of the club Thursday, March 8, with classes as follows: Best twenty-five red, pink and any other color, with prizes of $5 for first and $3 for second in each of the four classes.

The president appointed Messrs. Guy, Herzog and Ude judges for the carnations on exhibition. Their report was as follows: For best vase of red, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, first, on red sport of Glendale; second, Theo. Klockenkemper, on Flamingo. Best white, H. Weber & Sons Co., first, on My Maryland; second, W. J. & M. S. Vesey, on Lady Bountiful. Best light pink, Wm. Winter, first, on Enchantress; second, D. C. Noble, on pink sport of Lawson. Best dark pink, first, W. J. & M. S. Vesey; second, J. F. Ammann, both on Lawson. Best variegated, first, Wm. Winter, with Patten; second, H. Weber & Sons Co., on Jessica. John Steidle received honorable mention on his pink sport of Enchantress. The new pink rose Miss Kate Moulton received the club's certificate of merit. John Hartje's Candace was also well spoken of by the judges. Mrs. Vesey also showed a fine lot of sweet peas worthy of mention.

This was by far the club's best carnation exhibition. A good word must also be said for the trustees, Messrs. Beyer, Weber and Fillmore. They were on hand early and had everything staged and the hall in shape to open the meeting promptly.

Visitors were C. C. Mayhew, of the Texas Nursery Co., Sherman, Tex.; R. E. Ruuolph, of Paducah, Ky., and Geo. M. Kellogg, of Pleasant Hill, Mo. President Ammann had to leave early and Vice-President John Steidle closed the meeting in his usual good style. The next meeting promises to be as interesting as this one was and a full attendance is expected.

Various Notes.

Pilcher & Burrows sold a carload of pots for A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., to the local growers the past week.

Theo. Klockenkemper is cutting a fine lot of smilax. He reports 5,000 strings ready to cut.

Wm. Winter is cutting a fine lot of carnations. He has a fine white seedling, which he showed at the club meeting.

It has been rumored that Alex Siegle and John Burke will open a store at the corner of Newstedt and Olive streets before Easter.

Henry A. Jones, traveler for Ralph M. Ward & Co., of New York, is here this week.

Wm. Schray, who has been reported very sick, is still confined to his bed, with very little improvement.

At Ellis' place, in the absence of the boss, Wm. H. Osseck, assisted by J. William Patton, is running things in first-class style.

Frank Fillmore was at the bowling alley on Monday night. He says he is still a bowling crank, but not as young as he used to be.

John Kunz, formerly in the business, meets many of his friends now as he is carrying the mail in the wholesale district.

The bowlers rolled six games on last week Thursday with the Reliance team and lost five of the games. The games were rolled under protest and all five will

KANSAS CITY.

The Prospect.

Kansas City is destined to become one of the great cut flower centers in the country. Its location makes it the natural distributing point for all the great territory lying west and south of us. The trade in this city is awakening to this fact, and the remarkable volume of business that has been done this season has demonstrated how far short we are of having the facilities for producing the stock to supply the great demand that the wonderful development of this great southwestern country is already causing. The business here has made great strides the past year and it is safe to predict that the coming year will see a greater advance than has ever been before. We now have two first-class wholesale houses and a general supply house that compare favorably with any in the country. Several large ranges of houses are projected for the coming summer and many others are figuring on building. The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co., and R. S. Brown & Sons have the largest ranges of houses here and will probably add to their area of glass this summer. Geo. M. Kellogg's place at Pleasant Hill is one of the largest in the west and is considered a Kansas City institution, as a large part of the output is sent to the wholesale house here. Kansas City has as good growers as any city in the country and the majority of them have the "Kansas city spirit," which overcomes all difficulties.

The Market.

The past week's business was up to the standard. The weather has been cool and there has been a steady demand. Stock is arriving in large quantities but the supply is still short of the demand. The quality of the stock is excellent, especially in carnations. Bulbous stock is fairly plentiful. Some tulips of extra good quality are being received. Prices are advancing. Beauties are still scarce, not nearly enough to go around. The Enchantress carnation seems to be the most in demand, the best grade selling at retail for $1.50 a dozen.

Various Notes.

The Shaeffer Floral Co.'s retail department has a fine display of potted plants this week. Their window decorations are unusually good.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting a large quantity of high grade carnations. This concern makes a specialty of this flower.

It is rumored that one of our most popular south side florists will open two stores soon, one in Westport and another in the down-town district. Although the gentleman very modestly denies any such intentions we have it from a very reliable source.

Miss E. H. Newman, of the Kansas City, Kansas, Floral Co., reports a fine business the past season. She is in a good location and is building up a fine trade.

From present indications there will be a splendid lot of lilies for Easter this year.

We are sorry to have to report the illness of Miss Hayden.

Alex Henderson, of Chicago, was a visitor last week. KAY-SEE.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, G., June 26-28, 1906.

EARLY-FLOWERING cosmos seed is in short supply.

W. H. BARRET, Adrian, Mich., has been at Chicago this week.

SPINACH seed is reported short and the demand for it on the increase.

SEVERAL of the large onion set jobbers report that they are cleaned out of stock.

AMERICAN grown nasturtium seed of the dwarf and tall mixed is short. The foreign supply is also limited.

CHICAGO—S. F. Leonard accompanied by Mrs. Leonard is in attendance at the canners' convention at Atlantic City.

REPORTS from the mail order seed houses are very encouraging. It is stated that even in the poultry departments the force has to work overtime to keep up.

It is reported that Gradus peas will hardly go around. The Thos. Laxton is more plentiful and is growing in favor. Some of the market gardeners prefer it to Gradus.

BELATED shipments from foreign parts are badly needed by some of the seed houses. Considerable complaint at the slow clearances of goods upon arrival at the ports of entry is registered.

H. F. HENRY, receiver for the Clucas & Boddington Co., New York, is rapidly winding up the affairs of that concern. There will be an early dividend to creditors, but not one to relieve the failure of any of its disastrous features.

TWELVE million six hundred thousand is the estimate of the number of Rocky Ford cantaloupes shipped from the Rocky Ford district, in Colorado, last season. Seven hundred cars were sent out, as against 524 car loads the previous year.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—The canners and packers of America are holding their annual convention here this week. The seed trade is well represented, looking after the seed needs of the canners and the interests of their respective houses.

It is reported that good stock of the Country Gentleman sweet corn is not plentiful. The wet fall was against a good drying out of the deep-kerneled varieties and that the Country Gentleman is the hardest to cure of any of these is said to be the cause of a considerable quantity of it being of low germinating power.

THE variety of prices on supposedly the same type of onion seed in the retail catalogues is causing the retail buyer to think that the high-priced man is making more money than he should. In reality, however, the buyer usually gets his money's worth and no more, or less, whether he takes the high priced stock or the low. The name is not everything.

A NOTICEABLE feature of the season's seed advertising is that so many of the leading catalogue houses have diverted a considerable part of their expenditure from the general publications to those devoted to farm and outdoor interests, these classes of publications having a larger amount of seed advertising than ever before. Returns thus far are said to have in most cases justified the move, but at least a part of the increased calls for catalogues may be due to the weather conditions, which started the season earlier and heavier than usual.

THE story of "Seeds that Grow" is a 68-page thirtieth anniversary supplement to W. Atlee Burpee & Co.'s catalogue for 1906, with descriptions of the trials at Fordhook, the seed growing operations, the packing, filling of orders and shipping, all fully illustrated, even down to a picture of the adding machine for finding out how much money is coming in. It is stated that in 1905 there were 7,161 trials at Fordhook and the new farm at Sunnybrook, N. J., 4,549

The Seed Grower

Cloth, 12 mo, 191 pp. Price $1.25 postpaid.

A new book by Charles Johnson, author of The Seedsman's Assistant.

This is a practical treatise on growing vegetable and flower seeds and bulbs for market or commercial purposes, describing operations for each variety in detail, when to plant, harvesting, drying and cleaning; with crop yield per acre, prices paid to growers, market status, where the best seeds are now grown, contract forms for growers, how to originate new varieties, how to take care of seeds.

The only complete work on seed growing published in any country.

The chapter on raising, cleaning, storing and keeping onion sets is itself worth the price of the whole book. The same can be said of chapters on other varieties, beans, cabbage, corn, cucumbers, melon, peas, tomatoes, etc. Every seedsman, every florist, every gardener, every farmer should have a copy. Know how the best seeds are grown. The more you know about seeds the better.

ALVA J. HALL, Harrogate, London, reports that English seedsmen and nurserymen are taking much interest in trade affairs in America, as business relations become closer.

In response to an inquiry as to how business is opening up in their new seed department, Montgomery Ward & Co., general mail order house, Chicago, say February 9: "Our regular customers and the general public seem to have taken very kindly to our seed proposition and orders for seeds of all three classes, garden, field and flower, are already flowing in in increasing size and number. We are busy enlarging our quarters and anticipate a very active season." The seed department is in charge of H. W. Fisher. Only a small part of the edition of the catalogue has as yet been mailed, but it is, as noted several weeks ago, not only unique in size and shape, 4x11 inches, but is one of the best pieces of printing turned out a force of habit that they still keep up this picaresque graft of a perverted seed farce, which nobody wants or appreciates and which only lowers the congress in the mind of the recipient. I hope that you will not take this as a personal reflection, for it is not intended as such. I know there are plenty members of the opinion I am on the matter, only unfortunately not enough.

A number of congressmen who are seeking re-election are sending to constituents, franked letters with or regarding the seeds. The question has been raised if this is not a "personal use" of the franking privilege laying the congressman liable to a penalty for each letter.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Seed Notes.

Wm. E. Everett, of Indianapolis has purchased the seed end of the business of the receiver of J. A. Everett, his brother, and will continue in business at the old stand. No catalogue will be issued this season, but it is the aim of W. E. Everett to carry on the mail order business again another year.

D. F. Bash, formerly a member of the firm of S. Bash & Co., Fort Wayne, Ind., is opening a seed store in Indianapolis and will conduct a general seed and farmer's supply business and in the course of time do something in the way of jobbing both garden and field seeds.

Most of the leading seedsmen are busily engaged at Atlantic City this week attending the canners' convention and trying to dispose of a surplus lot of sweet corn. G.

EUROPEAN GRASS SEEDS.

Conrad Appel, Darmstadt, Germany, makes the following report under date of January 27:

"Just to touch the crop-results of the several clover seeds, there is but little red clover raised in the Palatinate. Austria has a medium crop. Russia is not in the market owing to the unsettled conditions, and from France and Italy, who as a rule take an active part in the trade, arrivals are missing. Lucerne has suffered in quality during the harvest by unfavorable weather; superior grades of Provence seed are scarce and have consequently gone up in price. White clover is a small crop, but stocks of yearling seed will not allow the prices to rise. Alsike scarce and in good demand. Sainfoin, one and two cuts, have started with moderate prices although the yield is not a large one."

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The grass and clover seed trade has opened this year in rather an unsatisfactory state. The crops of many articles, especially red clover, are very light. France and Italy have very little for export. White clover is a bad crop, but prices will probably not rise much, owing to large supplies of yearling seed still on hand. Russian supplies appear to be totally missing. Buyers may look for prices in this particular branch of the trade to advance considerably as the season goes on.

Lucern appears to have suffered through unfavorable weather conditions. There are conflicting reports, but prices will probably rise sharply. Alsike looks like also going up in price; it appears to be short all over Europe, but the United States will have a plentiful supply in the good Canadian crop of this article.

In spite of the reports of Italy being short of red clover, I notice Italian firms are quoting for really fine samples, slightly under the offers of German houses, and considerably less than English red clover where an extra fine sample is on offer. The reports from the London seed market are of an active demand for all clover and grasses.

There is a report of quite a shortage in sweet peas, and there will probably not be sufficient to go the rounds of orders. Some stocks are already exhausted and orders still continue to come in to the wholesalers. There appears to be some prejudice against American grown seeds on account of an alleged tendency to come somewhat weak and straggly in their growth; they do not appear to have sufficient stamina in some instances to withstand our climate and some dealers and growers hold somewhat aloof from buying American seed. This tendency is also noticeable in the vegetable varieties. I remember seeing a large breadth of peas for pulling green, growing in Lincolnshire, from seed obtained in Ontario. During one of our not very prevalent hot, dry summers they were simply grand in the way of a heavy crop, long and well podded straw. They were eventually, owing to the bad state of the green pea trade, harvested and thrashed for seed, and a finer sample was never seen. They did not require the slightest hand picking for seed purposes. But the fault of the crop was they were longer and weaker in their growths and the color of their leaf and haulm was much lighter and weaker than is general with English-grown stocks of the variety in question. It is generally found that American seed is excellent when we have a favorable summer and autumn, but should we have a damp, cold and choppy season they are not so reliable and satisfactory as English grown stocks, especially the wrinkled varieties; but in spite of this fact some of the British seedsmen would be very short if there were no American seed to be had, especially the last two or three years, which have been very disastrous for home-grown pea crops for seed purposes, more especially the wrinkled varieties. B. J.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The cut flower trade in Covent Garden market and other large centers is quite off. Prices, especially for cut tulips and narcissi, are about as low as they can be to leave a return for the grower. The markets generally have been quite overdone, as was anticipated by many in the trade during the bulb buying season last year. The French stock has come in very heavy quantities, and quite upset the home growers. The trade for asparagus, smilax and other greenery appears also to have shared in the general depression.

On account of the low prices for bulbous stock there probably will not be such a good demand for Dutch bulbs during the coming season, and the representatives from Holland will not have quite such a profitable trip as last year. Were it not for the fact that stocks of many leading articles are already short in Holland, a decided fall in prices might reasonably be looked for.

It is satisfactory to notice American varieties of carnations are receiving more attention here and are being more and more grown. Enchantress is at present the most popular sort for market work and always commands big prices, fine blooms on long stems making just now, although trade for almost all cut flowers is off, anything from 3 shillings to 6 shillings per dozen, and the supply is not anything like equal to the demand. It will be a good thing for all concerned when the lovely American varieties are extensively grown here, they are such a decided improvement in every way, and will really fill up a big deficiency in the market florists' business.

Reverting again to the question of forcing bulbs, Narcissus Ajax Golden Spur seems to be holding its own against all competition. It is a variety which could be profitably placed on the market in much larger quantities. It is a fine, stiff upstanding and lasting bloom in water and for table and other decorations is always in excellent demand and there never hardly seems to be too many even in the dullest times of bad trade. The last few years the price of the bulbs has fallen considerably and were procured last season in best forcing quality at from 35 shillings to 45 shillings per thousand. Perhaps as much on account of its poor constitution and unadaptability to some bulb growing soils and districts as from its popularity in its cut state in the very early months of the year, it is a bulb that will never become too plentiful. There is much talk among Dutch growers of the large and ever increasing demand for this particular variety met with in America. Golden Spur is a particularly good forcer and will come in bloom some ten to twelve days earlier than Henry Irving under the same treatment. J. B.

a greenhouse where the temperature is 55 degrees to 60 degrees the water will be warm enough for the hardy soil. For the exotic species the water should be 70 degrees, and for Victoria the water can be 80 degrees. The latter are best raised singly in 5-inch pots. Sow the seeds of all in early April. W. S.

NEW SWEET PEAS

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;
$1.75 per doz. (Retail, 25 cents).

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

Various Notes.

Business the past week was rather quiet owing to the very severe cold spell we had and the thermometer down to zero mark kept the boys going. Some very fine carnations are to be seen in the windows.

Jacob Schulz has a house of cyclamen that are beauties and worth while to go and see. His carnations are also in fine shape.

Nanz & Neuner have a bench of Enchantress carnations that, for size and length of stem are hard to beat; also their Lady Bountiful is fine. The foreman, Geo. Renisen, is proud of his success with these two carnations.

Henry Fuchs' rose houses will be in fine shape and will yield him quite a number of rose buds. Henry knows when to come in.

Chas. Rayner, out at Anchorage, Ky., is cutting some of the finest Maids and Brides and Golden Gate that come in this market.

J. V. Bohrman's place is in apple pie order; his spring stock is showing up in fine shape. A middle bed of Kaisers which were kept dormant is making a fine break and some very fine buds will be had.

Frank Lichtefeld, father of Henry Lichtefeld, is still in very poor health. He is going on his eighty-fifth year.

Leo Zoeller, out on Burnet avenue, is cutting some of the finest Joost ever seen here.

The Kentucky Society of Florists held its meeting at the residence of Jos. Wetterle. Lots of business was transacted. After the meeting the members were in-

DEUTZIAS FOR EASTER.

When should deutzias be started for Easter and what temperatures do they require at various dates? P. O.

Start deutzias six weeks before Easter. Start in a temperature of 50 degrees and increase 5 degrees by flowering time. Weather and amount of sunshine has much to do with bringing these hardy shrubs into flower, but growing them six weeks in the forcing time you will be safe. W. S.

A FEW QUESTIONS.

I have a few questions I would like you to give me light on:

1. How to propagate begonias to multiply them rapidly, Thurstonii and Ar-genteo-guttata.

2. May carnations be planted twice in succession in the same soil in the greenhouse with good results?

3. Are gladioli bulblets of any account? How and when should they be planted? Pan-American strain.

4. Should cinerarias be pinched back to make more flowers, and how long before Easter for bloom then?

5. Should the small flowering begonia seedlings be cut back? Main shoot now flowering.

6. What is the botanical name of the trailing plant usually called Jacob's ladder, green and variegated-leaved.

7. Has Happy Thought geranium gone out of date, and what color is true flower? R. S.

I will attempt to give an answer to these many questions by number, as they are presented.

1. The begonias belong to what is known as the shrubby section. They will propagate from the terminal growths, now or later, or if you have cut off the strong shoots, the plants make a lateral growth affording the best of cuttings and they will root readily as late as May and June without bottom heat.

2. Many of the early carnation growers grew good carnations for two and even three years without change of soil.
This was largely practiced in the so-called carnation belt, in Chester county, Pa., but these flowers would not rank as first-class today. With very strong-growing varieties some use one-half old soil and with good results, but the up-to-date, first-class growers renew the entire soil every season and it is the safest plan for you to follow.

3. The bulblets of gladioli are the means of multiplying all good varieties.
Plant and treat the bulblets the same as you would your flowering bulbs, only with more care and use finer prepared soil than you would the stronger bulbs.

4. It is not usual to pinch the cinerarias. They make broad, handsome plants without it, yet we have pinched them. If grown cool and with the best of light they do not need pinching and if it is done at all it should be when the plants are small.

5. As you do not say what variety or type of begonia you refer to, I must leave the solution of this to a lady clairvoyant.

6. Polemonium caeruleum.

7. You see very little of that pretty geranium nowadays, but it is not extinct by any means and you will often find it in private greenhouses. It was an excellent bedding variety, having a variegation entirely its own. The color of blossom is magenta or magenta rose.
Here endeth the seventh lesson. W. S.

PORTLAND, ORE.—M. Andrews has sold out to Jos. Botano, who will grow lettuce.

SEATTLE, WASH.—A meeting of the trustees of the King County Horticultural Society was held February 7 at the office of George B. Kittinger. The members of the committee voted to hold a mass meeting on March 14 at the Chamber of Commerce, to represent the various improvement clubs, churches and civic organizations of the city. Aid will then be asked for the big flower, fruit and vegetable show, which will be given June 13, 14 and 15. The programme of exhibits was prepared and adopted unanimously by the committee. This will be submitted at the next regular meeting of the Horticultural Society. It is proposed to rent a large auditorium for the flower show, and if this is not available to give the big show in a large tent.

DECORATIVE HARDY STOCK.

We have in California many native growths which are becoming more popular year by year with the general public and with many of our florists they now represent quite a portion of their monthly sales. It takes quite a time to get the public interested in any thing out of the ordinary, but when once a demand is created the dealers have to keep many articles on hand that used to be classed as rubbish. It is only within a few years that huckleberry and Oregon grape were introduced to the people of San Francisco and vicinity and now they are both indispensable.

I find the California manzanita is rapidly coming to the front as a decorative article and justly so, for it is one of our most beautiful shrubs. It is known botanically as Arctostaphylos tomentosa and grows abundantly here. The plants grow from five to twenty feet in height, with pale green leaves and purple-brown bark and the flowers, which are borne in great profusion, are of a delicate pinkish white color and very waxy. It is well known here and closely resembles the Madrono. Arbutus Men- ziesi, the branches of which are in great demand the last few years for holiday decorating on account of the profusion of bright red berries. At this season of the year it is quite as pretty for its great panicles of small white, bell shaped flowers and polished green leaves.

The California wild currant, Ribes glutinosum, has also found great favor as a decorative green. It grows in shrubs six to ten feet high and is particularly abundant in our southern country. In the early winter, in the south and somewhat later in the north, the wild currant becomes a thing of beauty hardly to have been expected. The young foliage of a clear, brilliant green is gaily decked with the long clusters of peculiarly fresh pink blossoms, making a very pleasing contrast. The cut branches keep well in water and have a characteristic heavy fragrance.

Acacia mollissima, although not a native of this state, is used more than ever this season by the florists. Its time of flowering is but a few weeks, but quantities of the branches and blossoms are used at this time.

The holly leaved cherry, Prunus ilicifolia, is a very ornamental shrub growing from eight to twenty feet in height. It has shining prickly evergreen leaves and is coming more and more into favor, especially for the making of wreaths at holiday time and for decorating when long graceful branches are needed.

The California buckeye, Aesculus Californica, is closely allied to the horsechestnut and the branches and blossoms are among our most beautiful native productions. They are rather delicate to handle to advantage, but very effective when used.

The Berberis repens, Oregon grape, is now so well known as to need no description. Within the past few years it has taken front rank as a decorative plant and there is danger of it becoming very scarce from the constant recutting of it in our wooded country. We have several other varieties of the barberry in California, but the most beautiful one is the well known sort I speak of.

The yellow lupine, Lupinus arboreus, although a very common shrub here, is quite extensively used in decorating and furnishes a color that is hard to duplicate in more expensive flowers.

I have spoken only of our hardy shrubs that are used by the florists in the line of decorating, and these only within the past few years. We have an almost endless array of wild flowers, some of which have already begun to make their presence felt and will go a long way toward making the florists' windows bright for the next few weeks. G.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Spring has come. At least, so say the birds and flowers. Snowdrops January 1, daffodils (Henry Irving) January 25; Iris reticulata January 20; our wild Sisyrinchium grandiflorum January 31. These dates probably chronicle a record in this part of the world. From January 22 to February 3 we had such warm weather that it was possible with banked fires to keep air on carnations and roses all night. Since then we have had a light frost at night, but the days so bright and warm that summer ventilation was needed, and we could water and spray to our heart's content.

A. J. Woodward had a fire in his boiler house some six weeks ago, but very little damage was done. He has a fire hose on the place and soon got the blaze under control.

Mrs. Farrington has also had trouble. The bottom of her boiler dropped out and it took sixty hours to make repairs. Luckily, no damage was done.

A. J. Woodward has bought the lease and stock of the Vancouver Floral Co. Bob Withers is still retained as manager. Mr. Woodward also has opened a store in the Arcade in addition to the one on Granville street.

Mrs. M. A. Flewin has a fine bed of freesias. They are two feet high and strong in proportion. They carry three and four spikes to the bulb.

ous kinds occupy the center of the stage at the present time and they are to be had in any quantity. They can be bought as cheap as 50 cents per hundred. Violets are also in very heavy supply and the retailers pay about 75 cents per dozen bunches, each bunch containing about 100 flowers. Carnations are somewhat easier and the prices have not declined any in the past week. Roses are only in fair supply, with fancy stock really scarce. Valley is plentiful and Roman hyacinths in only limited numbers and only limited demand.

Green stock is scarce. Good maiden-hair is very difficult to get and smilax has been almost annihilated.

Orchids, especially cattleyas, are in fair supply. Yellow acacia is being used to some extent in decorations and in a few weeks we can have a good supply of other outside hardy flowers.

Various Notes.

Thos. A. Cruess, of Vallejo, is in town on a short visit.

Joseph A. Furtado, head gardener for the Realty Syndicate, of Oakland, will soon commence the replanting of hardy evergreens on the Berkeley Hills.

Jas. Nivens, gardener to John Martin, of Ross Valley, is making large improvements in replanting the grounds.

L. D. Martin is up from southern California on a week's visit.

Miss M. J. Johnson has opened an establishment for floral decorating in Oakland.

It is rumored that another Japanese company has purchased twenty-five acres of land north of the town of Berkeley and will immediately commence the erection of several large greenhouses for the growing of carnations.

The Misses Worn, the well known decorators, report several extensive decorations on hand for the next few weeks.

POULTRY MANURE.

Will some experienced grower please answer the following questions? If wanted for carnations, geraniums and chrysanthemums, how can the following be used: Manure from the poultry house mixed with ordinary soil; that is, no fertilizer in it, where trash had accumulated and rotted, the proportions being one to two; that is, one bushel of manure and two bushels of soil, thoroughly mixed and covered so it cannot get wet. Is this ready for immediate use or must it stand; if so, how long? If it needs more soil, give the amount of this to be used to a bushel of soil.

How much manure from the pigeon house can be used for chrysanthemums to be grown in the garden, size of bed 12x50 feet? Now please do not say this had better be used only by experienced hands; I should like to gain from the experience of others, without having to experiment too far by myself. As I have this I should like to use it. L. A.

Chicken manure, being very much stronger than ordinary barn-yard manure, should be handled with great caution when applied to greenhouse crops, and as this manure has in all probability been further strengthened by allowing it to absorb the wash, even greater caution is needed in applying it. I should, for safety, advise that this compost be further diluted by mixing with at least six times its bulk of good fresh loam. This should be turned over a few times at intervals of ten days, choosing bright, sunny weather for the operation, to get it thoroughly incorporated and to take the sourness out of it.

Pigeon manure, being also of a strong nature, should be used sparingly, even in garden culture. For chrysanthemums one bushel to every 100 square feet of surface is sufficient. This should be plowed in rather deep; say seven inches.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

C. A. BUTTERFIELD, of Farmington and Lees Summit, Mo., is contemplating establishing another nursery, probably at Dallas, Tex.

MAX C. MEYER, of the Phoenix Nursery Co., Delavan, Wis., and Mrs. Stella A. Ellis, of Barker, N. Y., were married January 31.

E. W. KIRKPATRICK, of McKinney, Tex., was elected president of the National Nut Growers' Association at the recent convention.

CONRAD APPEL reports a very limited crop of German forest tree seeds. The varieties of pinus, except strobus, will meet all requirements.

To the list of shrubs which have been produced so largely that prices are bordering on demoralization, including only the commoner sorts, must be added in nearly every instance the California privet, which, though planted in enormous numbers is still pressing for a market.

THE big western nurseries, many of which have handled nothing but fruit trees and which are famous for such specialties as apple and plum seedlings, are taking note of the rapidly increasing demand for forest and ornamental stock and are preparing to offer seedlings and cuttings in quantities.

THE nurserymen of Pennsylvania had a delegation at the statehouse at Harrisburg February 6 to discuss the regulations covering the re-inspection of all nurseries in the state. The conference resulted in a better understanding between Inspector Engle and the members of the State Nurserymen's Association.

THE National Association of Nurserymen is preparing a circular setting forth the gain in the recent concessions as to freight classification and urging the good work done in this particular as a reason why every nurseryman should support the association by maintaining a membership and attending the conventions.

AT Des Moines, Ia., W. M. Memenga and others are endeavoring to evade the payment of notes given to B. F. Bone-well & Co., nursery agents. The notes were signed in the form of contract orders for the planting of orchards, with the clause pledging the payment of sixty per cent of the price in case of the non-acceptance of the stock.

ANY nurseryman, especially if he deals in evergreen and deciduous ornamental stock, can spend a pleasant and profitable half hour with the 1906 catalogue of the Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa. It was a good book in 1905, but is a much better one this year, entirely reset, longer pages, new running head, new halftones and many more of them, mostly from special photographs. For its size, eighty pages, it appears to be the most costly nursery catalogue of the year, and to one selling good stock to a good class of people it looks to be worth the money.

REPORTS are now coming to hand of damage done to fruit buds by frost after the mild weather of January.

THE plant of apple grafts at E. S. Welch's Mount Arbor Nurseries, Shenandoah, Ia., last spring amounted to over a million and about the same number of store fruit stocks were set out. They are going quite extensively into roses, evergreens and deciduous ornamentals.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

Warren H. Manning, of Boston, was some time ago commissioned to prepare the landscape plan for the Jamestown exposition, which is to open at Norfolk, Va., in April, 1907, to commemorate the event of the first permanent English settlement in America in 1607. Mr. Manning has recently been appointed chief of the Department of Education and Social Economy, and sends out a circular to horticulturists and dealers in horticultural supplies, of which the following is a part:

"Recognizing the importance of the horticultural interest, a place is offered for growing exhibits in the three planting spaces between the two roads and the two walks of the great main avenue of the exposition. These planting spaces are divided into units of 1,000 square feet each, which may be subdivided. Ground is thoroughly prepared and well fertilized. The Exposition Company will arrange with a competent gardener to be responsible for the care of the plants during the exposition period. A charge will be made for exhibition space probably not less than 5 cents or more than 10 cents per square foot.

"Early decisions are necessary, especially when hardy plants are concerned, as a year's growth before the opening of the exposition is essential to make a creditable display and such planting ought to be in place before April 1.

"Applications for growing exhibits should be filled out and returned immediately, as this space will be assigned on February 20. You can, of course, withdraw at any time before the contract approved by both parties is accepted."

YOUR paper is good company.—UNITED STATES NURSERY CO., Rich, Miss.

TAKING into consideration the general information the REVIEW gives and the usual reliability of the advertisements it prints, I consider it would be poor business policy to do without it when it can be had for the small sum of $1 a year.—W. G. NEGLE, Beaumont, Tex.

LILIES FOR FALL CUTTING.

We want to grow some Lilium speciosum for next fall and until spring cutting. Would it be best to grow cold storage stock for fall bloomig and use the imported for later use? Also give us method of growing them. Can the candidum or Annunciation lily be grown the same way? J. H. J.

Lilium speciosum, if wanted for blooming in August or September outdoors, should be planted as soon as the ground is open in the spring. Cover the bulbs eight inches deep. If needed for winter and early spring flowering it would be necessary to secure bulbs from cold storage and pot during the summer or early fall. This lily is now obtainable in the Covent Garden market, London, England, the year round as is L. auratum. It must be remembered that L. speciosum cannot be forced in the same way, however, as L. Harrisii. It prefers cooler treatment, which also suits L. candidum. L. candidum for spring flowering requires to be potted about the end of August, as soon as the bulbs are matured and ere they start to produce leaves, which it does very quickly after potting. After potting keep outdoors until well frozen; then place in a cold frame or pot.

Our plants for Easter blooming have been housed about three weeks and are just commencing to push their spikes. A night temperature of 50 degrees is high enough to start this beautiful lily in; never let it exceed 55 degrees. For later flowering, say for Memorial day, plants should be kept frozen in a cold frame until March 1. Do not be afraid to freeze them well; half the success in their culture depends on it.

W. N. CRAIG.

IN FREEZING WEATHER.

Although it is advisable under ordinary circumstances to discontinue cement work in freezing weather, Portland cement may be used without serious difficulty by taking a few simple precautions. As little water as possible should be used in mixing, to hasten the setting of the cement. To prevent freezing, hot water is frequently used in mixing mortar or concrete, and with the same object in view salt is added in amounts depending upon the degree of cold. A common practice is to add one pound of salt to eighteen gallons of water, with the addition of one ounce of salt for each degree below 32 degrees. Either of the above methods will give good results, but it should be remembered that the addition of salt often produces efflorescence. It seems to be a fairly well-established fact that concrete deposited in freezing weather will ultimately develop full strength, showing no injury due to the low temperature.

MOLES OR MICE.

In the REVIEW for February 1 G. S. asks what to do for moles in a carnation bed. We think it is the woods mouse that is the matter. Quaker drab, white waistcoat, can climb a greased pole too spry for the cat. We used a wooden mouse trap, baited with doughnut and sweet apple, placed on an inverted saucer. We have caught three and they cost us $10 in good carnations. L. S.

To Exterminate Rats.

L. A. G. and others will find the following a quick method: Stand a barrel in the walk of your house, with enough water in it to let a brick placed on its end project an inch or so; then cover the barrel with stiff smooth paper and fasten with a hoop. On the paper place meat, grain, etc., for a few nights in succession until they are accustomed to feasting there. Then cut two slits in the paper crossing each other in the middle, with the result that the first rat will take a plunge, and by screaming will call all others within earshot to the scene of danger, and into the pit. G. A. BELLING.

More About Moles.

A face(tious) reader writes that he notes in the last REVIEW there is much interest in the subject of moles and that the methods of becoming rid of them are no two alike. He says that some florists who are troubled with moles may be interested in the following paragraph clipped from the "beauty column" of a daily paper: "While the electric needle is the only sure cure, and that is dangerous except in the hands of an expert, some moles will disappear if touched nightly with acetic acid on a camel's hair brush. If this treatment is going to suffice, a week's application will show a result."

I LIKE the REVIEW very much and probably shall take it as long as I am in the business, for I should miss its weekly visits were I to try to get along without it.—SAMUEL WHEELER, Berlin, Mass.

My Maryland

Pure white, and

Jessica

Red and white variegated.

Extra large, high-grade commercial varieties. The finest and most profitable in their respective classes. Both varieties show extra strong Lawson habits and similar height. We advise the alert grower to try both of these varieties. $2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Send for our new catalogue giving full descriptions of the above and other new and standard varieties.

UNITED STATES CUT FLOWER CO.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Committee Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Executive Board will be held at Dayton, Ohio, on Monday, March 5, 1906. Members of the society or others having suggestions to make whereby the usefulness of the organization may be increased and the good of the profession promoted in any of its branches, are cordially invited to send such suggestions in care of the secretary and they will receive careful attention.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

Department of Plant Registration.

A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., submits for registration the following named new Christmas-blooming sweet peas: Mrs. Alex Wallace, seedling from Florence Denzer x Lady Hamilton, lavender; J. K. Allen, spotted pink on white ground; Christmas Enchantress, soft pink; Jack Hunter, yellow, black seeded; Mrs. C. Wild, Zvolanek's Christmas x Salopian, carmine; Christmas Meteor, scarlet.

W. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

SCALE ON PALMS.

I am sending phoenix leaves that have some dark flat scale on them. I have tried lemon oil and fir tree oil but do not seem to get rid of them as yet. They are on palms, pandanus, allamandas, rubbers, etc. Will you kindly advise me the cause of these pests and the best way to get rid of them?

B. R. T.

The scale in question is unfortunately a very common one on palms, pandanus and various other plants, and is also one that spreads very rapidly. On the palms the safest method would be to sponge them with a solution of whale oil soap and tobacco extract, and the same would apply to the rubbers. Other plants that are more troublesome to sponge may be given a dipping in a similar solution and then laid on their sides to drain. Lemon oil and fir tree oil are both reasonably effective against this scale, but both these preparations should be used carefully, else they may injure tender foliage. One dipping will probably not be enough to kill the adult scale or if it does, the foliage would be likely to suffer from so strong an insecticide.

W. H. TAPLIN.

I GUESS it would be a hard thing to do without the REVIEW.—PETER MOOTZ, Dodge City, Kan.

MOLINE, ILL.

A meeting of the Tri-City Florists' Association was held in Moline February 9. Several matters of importance were taken up and a committee of five was appointed to draft a petition to be sent to the Iowa and Illinois delegations in congress asking them to lend their aid to the passage of the parcels post law which is now pending. The committee which will have charge of this matter is as follows: Adolph Arp, chairman, and Henry Pauli, of Davenport; Henry Gager and Henry Meyers, of Rock Island, and William Knees and Julius Staack, of Moline. In taking up the matter the members drew attention to the benefits that would arise by the passage of this bill, in allowing them to send a good many packages to surrounding towns where now they have to either patronize the express companies or lose the business.

A discussion as to what seeds should be planted at this time of the year and what plants should be grown for Easter, was entered into by all the members.

POINSETTIAS.

We bought a quantity of cut poinsettias last Christmas which did not sell, so we cut up the stems to single-eye cuttings and placed in sand. Nearly all of them rooted and are now potted up with green shoots about two inches long. How shall we treat them now, as this is the season when poinsettias should be resting? If we start to dry these young plants off, will they not die? Shall be pleased to know how to treat them. A. J. N.

Don't by any means attempt to dry off these little plants. Starting them so early, they will most likely make taller plants than are desirable, but if you keep them growing, you can later make cuttings of the young growths and from where you take off the cuttings, you will get other breaks for propagating. We have found from many years' experience with these plants that for a single plant in a 5-inch or 6-inch pot, or for planting on a bench for cutting, that cuttings struck in July is early enough and for pans September is as early as is desired. ## PACKING PLANTS.

The proper packing of plants and cuttings shipped chiefly to long distances seems not to be well studied by many growers. The express charges are high, even with the so-called special rates, and neither the shipper nor the receiver wants to work for the benefit of the express company. Generally the packages are too heavy; too much wet sphagnum, excelsior, or paper of different kinds and color. To illustrate, I will tell you what happened to me these last few weeks. From one of the leading houses I received a box of cinerarias. When packed, the plants were surely in the best condition of growth. Every one was surrounded by wet sphagnum and entirely wrapped in a piece of paper, lying flat, one on top of the other, like sardines in a box; half of them rotted enroute. During the next week I received two boxes from Wisconsin. The ball of soil of the plants only, not the leaves, was wrapped in paper. The plants were packed in layers with the bottoms of the pots against the sides of the box, the foliage towards the middle, each layer being well secured by a small cleat of wood. The plants were perfect, not one single bruised leaf, no excelsior, no sphagnum, no extra nails except what were necessary to secure the box well.

PLANTS SEE AND FEEL.

Plants can see, feel and taste, according to Dr. Henry S. Conrad of the botanical department of Johns Hopkins University, but he has never been able to find any evidence that they can hear. Dr. Conrad made this statement while discussing the theory of Dr. Haberlandt of the University of Gantz, that in the leaves of plants and trees are organs that resemble the eyes of animals. Although he is not prepared to accept this theory without reservation, Dr. Conrad says: "We have never been able to discover any way in which plants are susceptible to sound, but in seeing, feeling and tasting they are developed. With a single exception they can recognize light and the direction from which it comes; they feel the slightest wound, they discriminate in taste, they have a sense of direction—whether they are turned in the right direction or not—and are influenced by electric currents passing near them."

ROSE G. GRUNERWALD.

All lovers of the rose for garden purposes should get Peter Lambert's new hybrid tea, Gustav Grunerwald. It is perfectly charming and one of the best of the year. Color bright carmine-pink, with yellow shading, quite distinct. One would not class it as an exhibition rose, for it lacks substance; nevertheless, we staged a few blooms of it in the exhibition stands this year. Its value lies in its perpetual, free-flowering habit. It is very active, throwing up a constant succession of flowers branching off on long-jointed wood from the main shoot, coming into flower with the early roses and continuing to bloom late in the autumn. At the time of writing these notes, November 12, we can still cut blooms of it. To grow it for exhibition would necessitate severe disbudding, whereby the chief characteristic of this rose would be lost. If classed, as it should be, as a decorative rose, we shall soon see it staged in attractive bunches.—Gardeners' Magazine.

CALLA AETHEOPICA.

F. E. Myatt, Hextable, Swanley Junction, makes a specialty of callas for wholesaling at Covent Garden, London, and has immense quantities now, well advanced, house after house being filled with them. The houses are 225 feet long and most of them thirty feet wide. I have seen them well done in various nurseries, but never in such large quantities, or flowering so well. Mr. Myatt told me that the most he had cut in one week was 500 dozen, or rather just under that number, and he may exceed that number this season, as he has increased his stock. The ordinary sort has been most extensively grown, but Mr. Myatt is now working up a large stock of Godfrey's variety, which, if not quite so large, is more prolific and a beautiful clear white.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Joseph Kinney, gardener for L. C. Smith, has returned from a trip to South America, having collected a large number of orchids to be added to his employer's collection.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

With clear skies and thermometer registering between 65 degrees and 70 degrees, the greatest trial of the florists here is to keep stock cool enough. Everything is growing so fast that it is almost impossible to say what amount of material they will be able to hold until Easter. Winter in this section ends practically the last of February, and the last of March planting begins. There is unusual activity among citizens who wish to beautify their homes and the demand for hardy stock is increasing at a very satisfactory rate.

Carnations are looking much better than earlier in the season. Bulbous stock is very hard to keep. Harrisii at most places are showing bud and the question with the grower is whether there will be any at all at Easter. Roman hyacinths are about all in, the warm weather making it impossible to hold them. Tulips and Von Sions are coming along all right and Dutch hyacinths are doing well. Violets are immense, but there is very little call for them.

Trade the past month has about equaled the corresponding month of last year, and everything points to a brisk period coming.

Social affairs are at a standstill, but the death of some prominent people has taken all the available stock in sight.

Mr. Munson, of Denison, had some large funeral orders last week and reports business as first-class.

Mr. Farley, of Denison, reports business as brisk and he is growing some good stock.

C. P. W. Nims, representing A. H. Hews, of Cambridge, Mass., is finishing his first tour in this section and reports business as very much better than he expected; he has booked some large orders in Dallas and surrounding towns.

Mr. Green, son of Mrs. Hetty Green, is making arrangements to build some extensive houses in Dallas. We understand that the contract has been let for the greenhouses, which will be iron frame and thoroughly modern. The plant will be run as a commercial enterprise and cut flowers and plants will be grown.

DENVER.

State of Trade.

Conditions have been variable for the past fortnight, some days a strong demand, others lagging. However, the past week has averaged fair and dealers are generally satisfied, although they say they could have done more business. There has been a dearth of large jobs, but there have been numerous small dinners and receptions which counted up fairly well.

There is a call for Brides and Maids but not beyond the possibility of the supply. Long Beauties have been under the demand, while the shorter stemmed grades are not taken as freely as might be expected. Carnations are quite plentiful, the demand hardly running up to the supply, red perhaps being the scarest, but there has been enough white and pink to leave a few in the ice boxes nearly every night. At the same time prices are reasonably well maintained, and the quality was never better, Enehan-tress and Lawson being especially fine.

Violets have been selling well and are in good supply. Many of the dealers anticipate a good call for them on Valentine's day. Bulbous stock is now showing up strong. There are plenty of daffodils, which move well. Romans, Paper Whites, valley and sweet peas are in limited supply and good stock finds ready sale. Tulips are now in good shape, but do not bring better prices than when quality was lower.

Various Notes.

A. H. Bush, of the Daniels & Fisher Stores Co., who has been on the sick list, is again on deck.

J. A. Valentine has returned from his eastern trip.

J. G. Esler, secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, was in town last week.

WICHITA, KAN.

There will be no more Sunday funerals in Wichita except in cases of absolute necessity. This was decided by the board of managers of the Highland and the Maple Grove cemeteries, upon the receipt of a petition signed by the ministers, undertakers, florists and livery men asking that the two cemetery companies close their gates to Sunday funerals. The florists all approved the change and F. Keuchenmeister, C. A. Rose, W. H. Culp and Chas. Mueller signed the petition to the cemetery officials.

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.
GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.

Planing Mills

There are many planing mills which turn out good work — in their line — but as a rule they know nothing of greenhouse construction. * * We make it a special study—in fact we have manufactured nothing but greenhouse material for years and feel that we know something about it. Many of the large growers claim that we know all about it. * * * * * If you have never used our material let us tell you about it—write today. Try it on your next house.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW

ABOUT CYPRESS AND CYPRESS QUALITY ?

Can you tell whether a piece is sap free by the look of it? Do you suppose that after two years' air drying the sap is going to show on the surface? Well, it don't and a plank good and sappy is detected only by an expert. That expert costs us good money. No dealer "grades" the qualities up for us! Straight from our mills in the South to our wharfs, then WE do the selecting. We say a lot about this cypress matter and there's a lot to say about it! What we want to anchor at both ends in your mind is the word EXPERT and the word QUALITY.

Then there's another thing; you can't put a pint in a quart jug and expect to take out a quart. If you want a quart, go to the quart people. Same way with a house—on what you put into it in building will depend what you get out of it in growing.

THE WHITE HOUSE WEDDING.

The event of the past week, not only socially and officially, but also floriculturally, was the wedding of Alice Roosevelt. The public prints have been filled with column after column of description and so great was the public interest that the press was provided with a type-written description of the floral decorations in minute detail. The work was under the direction of George H. Brown, the government landscape gardener, and no florist had a hand in it other than supplying a portion of the cut flowers. The work was nevertheless of some interest to the trade, for it was as elaborate as was possible in view of the large number of guests and the limited space at disposal.

In the east room a platform or dais was constructed in front of the great east windows. This was covered with an oriental rug in which red predominated. The background was a group of palms fringed at the base with Astilbe Japonica and Dracæna Sanderii. At each side there were two tall vases of Easter lilies. Above the platform was a light garlanding of smilax and asparagus, with Bride roses and pink carnations scattered through the green. On the mantels were vases of Harrisii and on the tables at the ends of the room were profusely flowered rhododendrons in jardinières. This was all the floral decoration in the room in which the ceremony was performed.

The adjoining green room had no other decoration than vases on the mantels, of Enchantress carnations with ferns.

The vases in the blue room were filled with Easter lilies and asparagus, the two tall vases, one on each side of the mantels, having a quantity of stock in proportion to their size. In the window recesses were palms and flowering plants.

In the red room the vases held red flowers, roses, carnations, etc., with asparagus.

A buffet wedding breakfast was laid in the state dining room. The vases on the mantel were filled with Bride roses, the table decorated with vases of Beauties and Brides. About the room were a few flowering plants but nowhere in the White House was there a use of plants which would, in any way, encroach upon the limited floor space. In the private dining room there were the same vases of roses and in the main corridor and along the stairway from the lower corridor the niches were filled with rhododendrons, palms and ferns in jardinières. There were also vases of flowers on the mantels in all the other apartments which were open to the guests.

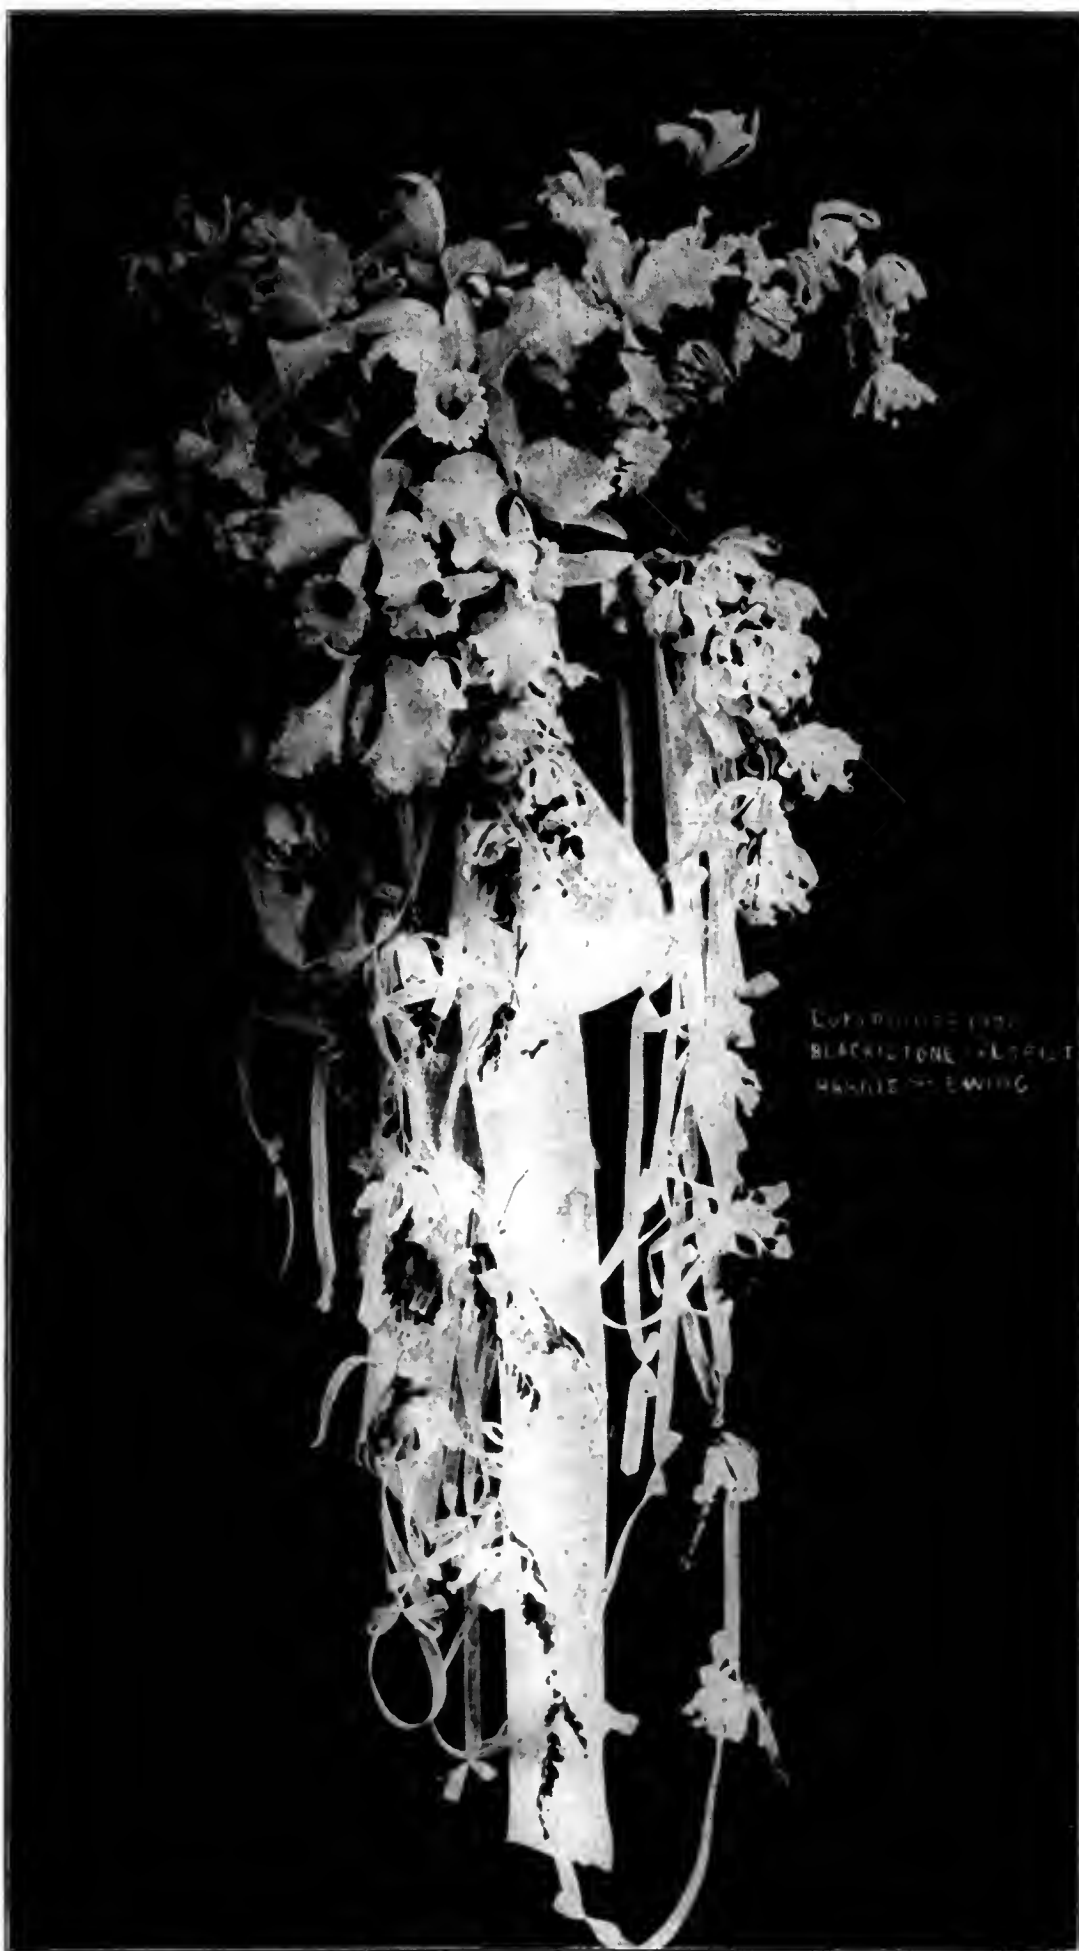

The principal advantage to the trade which came from the wedding was in the number of orders for other social events which took place at the same time, but Blackstone received the order for the bridal bouquet, which was photographed, copyrighted, and is reproduced in this issue of the REVIEW. The flowers were Cattleya Trianae, Cymbidium eburneum and Cœlogyne cristata. The green used was Adiantum Farleyense. The orchids were furnished by George Field, the well known veteran grower of Washington.

VALENTINE'S DAY.

Reports to hand show that the St. Valentine's day business of 1906 was a distinct advance over the record for 1905 and any previous year. The call was especially for violets, most of which were put up in special violet boxes and tied with violet ribbons. There was also a very good demand for American Beauties, which were in short supply. Red roses are not equal to the demand and other flowers shared in the general business. The carnation was sold in all markets in probably greater numbers than any other flower.

As the general prosperity of the country advances the florists are upon every occasion receiving their full share of the increased business. As cost becomes less of a consideration the demand for improved quality increases and all good stock becomes readily salable without much question of price. On the other hand, the poorer grades become less salable in the better class of stores.

THE STREET FAKIRS.

For the past two or three years there have been no curbstome flower dealers in Chicago, and there has been agitation to prohibit their activities in other cities. The present opinion of a leading Chicago retailer may therefore be of interest.

"I was among those most active in opposition to the street fakirs, but I have seen a great white light. The street fakirs are now nearly all installed in attractive stores, well located and doing a good business. They are still handling low grade stock at cheap prices, but people go to them who would never notice them in the streets. They hurt the legitimate retailers far more than they did on the street, and this is laying aside the fact that the street flower dealers are a primary school for the education of flower buyers for the retailers handling a better class of goods."

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Starting the Cannas.

There is one important detail which needs attention just now: Start the cannas. If they have been in a dry and not too warm cellar, they will be all right. Ours have been resting beneath a bench, on boards to keep them dormant, and the roots are plump and fresh. Time was when we did not know any better than to pot pieces of the root and place the pots on a bench. This was waste of space, waste of material, and altogether crude. Spread one inch of sphagnum moss on a bench. If hot-water or steam pipes are beneath the bench, so much the better. After dividing place the roots on the sphagnum and cover the roots only lightly with the same material. Coconut fiber is quite as good a medium. Every dormant eye that is sound will soon start and when the leaf growth is up a few inches they can be then lifted and potted in 4-inch or 5-inch pots, or whatever size you intend to grow and sell them in.

If terribly crowded for bench room, which all thrifty and progressive florists should be, you can put the roots into flats in three inches of sand and place the flats on the pipes beneath the bench, where they will get busy in a few days, and soon be ready to put into pots. I like the daylight bench and the sphagnum moss better.

Many florists in cities are cramped for room for their summer stock and have to buy cannas in the spring. They should not be difficult to procure, and you should buy them under name, so that if asked to supply a bed of one variety there will be no mix-up. A most satisfactory assortment can be obtained from the following varieties and none very expensive. The Italian section of this showy plant is not generally very desirable for outdoor culture. The flowers are handsome, resembling some of the orchids, but the flowers are not persistent and soon lose their beauty. What you want for outside show is a persistent bloomer and a good spike. Souv. de Antoine Crozy, President McKinley, Buttercup, Tarrytown, Florence Vaughan, Mille. Berat, David Harum, Egandale, Mont Blanc (almost pure white), Charles Henderson and J. D. Eisele, are all good.

Keep Doing Business.

It has occurred to me lately that we often save, or reserve, too many of our attractive plants for the great harvest of Easter, while there is a sale all the time for showy plants. Too many force a hundred or two of azaleas for Christmas and then attempt to have no more till Easter. If you observe any plants that are precocious in flowering, even if kept cool, move them into a temperature of 50 degrees and let them flower. They are sure to be wanted. Lilac and Azalea mollis, and perhaps rhododendrons, will be showing color. They want no actual forcing now, and will flower nicely in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and will be very acceptable at this time. Keep as brilliant a show as you can all the time. If you don't seem to get immediate returns, you have at least made an impression on all your visitors, and that is bound to tell on your eventual prosperity.

In this connection I might mention that the double tulips, Couronne d'Or, Murillo and the Tournesol, flower well at this season. Your single tulips will not need any more heavy shade and strong heat. They will send up a good stem and fine flower without shade and a La Reine or Yellow Prince is a poor thing without a robust stem.

Get Good Seed.

Sow seed just now of petunia. It is not my place to tell you where to buy it, but get the very best you can hear of, and don't be afraid to pay a liberal price for a good strain. I should like to enlarge a little on this seed-saving business, but I am not going to. I will merely say that one man has half an acre of petunias or asters and saves the seed of every flower, good, bad and worse, while another selects only the seed from the finest flowers. That is selection, and the way that all species have been improved except the human race. Should you not be willing to pay more for seed that is the product of the finest rather than what has been gathered in large quantities and indiscriminately? It is just the same with cyclamens, cinerarias, primroses and all other florists' flowers.

Lorraine Begonias.

Our little plants of Lorraine begonia may want some attention about this time. It is not desirable to encourage them into active growth but you can pinch off all flowers, and, if the original cutting is growing, it can be stopped, which will only strengthen the root, and it is from the root that you expect the vigorous growth to make the plant for next Christmas. Also carefully stir the surface of the soil in the little pot. This will help and encourage the semi-tuberous root to send out growths. Keep them on a light bench in about 50 degrees at night.

Two Invaluable Plants.

Sow Dracaena indivisa and Grevillea robusta now. Those who do little veranda box or vase filling may not need these plants, but those who do know how invaluable they are. The finely divided foliage of the grevillea is graceful everywhere and the cast-iron dracaena is the most useful plant we have for a cemetery vase. After a cyclone, earthquake, or visit from Carrie Nation, it is always smiling and robust.

The Lilies.

There is nothing that will require more care or cause more anxiety just now than the condition of your Easter lilies. There is the long month of March to come and two perhaps bright weeks in April. If the lilies are not showing any sign of bud at the present time it will be well to increase the heat 10 degrees. As observed in early winter, after the buds are once visible, is the time when, in my opinion, the lilies will endure a strong heat without harm. And remember, when the buds have turned white you can easily keep them cool from that on and keep them from spoiling for several weeks. Don't be late with them, for it usually means a big money loss.

Roses for Easter.

Roses, both the Rambiers and the hybrid perpetuals, will come along nicely in a night temperature of 50 degrees, and are stronger and better color than when forced. It is rather early to be sure of their date of flowering. They may need 55 degrees all night next month, which is not too warm to produce good flowers and color. We know you cannot get a hybrid perpetual with all its buds developed at one time, but our customers much prefer two flowers and some buds to open, to four or five expanded flowers and no buds to come.

Forcing Valley.

The illustration on page 915 is from a photograph of the lily of the valley, grown in 8-inch azalea pots, on the pipes under the benches, as described in the notes in this column February 8. As you will notice by the 2-foot rule which was resting on the surface of the soil, the tallest are fully fifteen inches long. I am fully aware that this is of little interest to the valley specialist, or large grower, yet it may be to many who desire to have a few on hand at all times and have no other convenience than a few hot-water pipes beneath a bench. One advantage in this method is that you can, when all the bells are developed, remove the pots from beneath the bench to a shaded bench in a temperature of 50 degrees, and they will go on increasing in size and substance, and if you don't have occasion to use them they will last in the pots for at least two weeks. Remember the roots are almost entire as they were imported and they are in ordinary soil from the potting bench. WILLIAM SCOTT.

JASMINUM PRIMULINUM.

Plants of Jasminum Primulinum shown at the Royal Horticultural Society, London, on January 23, created quite a sensation, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser. It was about six years ago that Veitch & Sons introduced it. Some growers took it up at once, but it was not until the plants referred to above were seen that its value was fully recognized. I have since then had several inquiries from market growers respecting the plant. I understand that it requires rather careful treatment in ripening the wood to flower it so well as those shown. These were specimens about five feet high, with long drooping branches, covered with clear yellow flowers, which were much larger than in J. nudiflorum; just the sort of plant for decorative purposes, and one which would be sure to be appreciated by florists who do decorations.

Some years ago we used to have Jasminum grandiflorum flore pleno grown as a pot-plant, and this should be worth reviving, for it comes in early without forcing and always flowers freely. The flowers have a pleasant perfume, reminding one of spring. The plants I have seen have been grafted, (on officinale probably) and have formed compact bushes.

distinct colors and also the foliage will have grown in the meantime in sufficient proportion to the height of the flower stalks. Before selling the valleys harden them off in a cooler house, at 46 degrees to 50 degrees.

I am forcing retarded valley throughout the summer and autumn until Christmas, planting during October and November daily 20,000 to 30,000 retarded crowns and have for many years obtained the best results in the way described.

The most important matter upon which depends a good share of the success with retarded valley is the selection or condition of the crowns which are used for storing. In my long years of experience as a wholesale grower and exporter of lily of the valley crowns I could often observe that American growers sometimes make very grave error when ordering the crowns.

Valley pips with abundant fibrous and bunchy roots are most adapted and appreciated for Christmas and early forcing. Being grown in a light soil, where they mature the quickest, they should not be used for cold storage for reasons which only the producer of the crowns is able to explain:

After a wet and cold summer, even these early forcing crowns do not mature enough and sometimes give unsatisfactory results when forced very early in the season, though the appearance of the crowns and the roots was exceptionally good, and after such years they will give favorable results even as cold storage valley. In normal years, however, and such are prevailing in this country, the American growers will make the experience that such abundant rooted cold storage crowns will develop too much in foliage at the expense of the flowers, which to the grand astonishment of the grower remain short-stalked and set with small bells. If such retarded valley are grown in benches with bottom

COLD STORAGE VALLEY.

In the REVIEW of January 11 a reader told of his trouble in forcing cold storage lily of the valley pips, in part as follows: "In a lot of 2,000 about one-fourth have thrown up good flowering shoots with eight to twelve bells, but without a particle of foliage. Others are coming with foliage and flower and are ready to cut, but about one-half have made no growth at all. These pips were flatted up and kept in a house at 60 to 65 degrees for a few days, then put in the forcing case, with 80 to 90 degrees of heat under the flats, or about 75 degrees of heat in the sand in the flats. We have had success with the following treatment: Four or five days in the warm house without bottom heat, ten to twelve days with 75 degrees heat in the sand and four to five days without bottom heat to harden off in a house at 55 to 60 degrees."

In his reply W. S. said in part: "It is difficult to say what the trouble is, but I will say that there was no need of your putting these cold storage pips into any such heat as 80 to 90 degrees. That is the treatment for the newly imported roots, which you are forcing into growth and flower three or four months before their normal season of flowering. It is entirely a different story with the cold storage stock. You have arrested their natural growth and at any time after the first of last May, directly they were relieved from the arresting cold, they were ready and anxious to grow, so 60 to 65 degrees was warm enough for their roots or pips. You mention flats as being used. That would be of little consequence, but I would rather hear of six inches of sand on an ordinary bench without bottom heat and only protected from draughts or bright sun."

This has brought forth a long and interesting letter from E. Neubert, Wandsbek, one of the largest valley growers in Germany, who annually exports millions of pips to America and who says that the above notes "greatly interest me, as I am forcing myself very large quantities of cold storage valley." This is what he says:

As the writer, W. S., already states in his article, the correspondent made the chief failure in the culture of his retarded valley pips by overheating the greenhouse. Retarded valley must be slowly thawed up after being drawn from the freezing rooms, in which the average temperature should not be less than 24.8 degrees.

Small boxes about four inches high, filled either with light sandy soil or any other material like sand or sawdust, are best adapted for planting the roots, which may be cut off at their ends, up to the breadth of a hand.

Never apply bottom heat to cold storage valley, but provide for an average air temperature of 60 degrees to 65 degrees and for a constantly damp atmosphere in the house. During the first forcing period keep the retarded crowns quite dark, which will be of benefit to the development of the flower embryo and prevent the foliage coming first.

After about ten to twelve days place the boxes under glass, protected, however, from bright sunshine. Some days left here, they will finish the development of their flowers, have the natural heat, the success will undoubtedly be a disaster.

Just the opposite experiences will be made with a "late forcing" valley. These are cultivated in a heavy and generally loamy soil. Their appearance is from the first less favorable compared with a bundle of standard early forcing crowns, the roots being less fibrous, thought vigorous in habit, and in fact the pip itself, supposed it is a first class late forcing valley, is just so strong as any other valley.

Coming from a heavy and damp soil, they do not arrive to maturity so fast, which makes them unfit for early forcing; they even do not show activity in growth before late in the season.

Taken from cold storage, being forced in the above way, they show a most regular and uniform growth. The stalks are strong and tall, the bells large and just so numerous as may be expected from another first class valley with many fibrous roots, forced early in the season.

To meet with the often expressed demand for a first-class cold storage valley, I have introduced a special brand. My stock of retarded valley for sale in European countries exceeds annually four and one-half million crowns, among which you do not find a single crown with such fibrous and bunched roots, which in your country are thought the best valley even for cold storage purposes.

CHRISTMAS CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

This season I have grown as bush plants the variety W. Duckham, and have found it to be very satisfactory; its color is of pale mauve, and it is much appreciated because it is of a delicate shade such as is most suitable for indoor decorations. Another variety of beautiful soft coloring is Mme. P. Radelli. Flowers of Miss Alice Byron can be arranged to very good effect in vases. Lady Osborne is also well adapted for flowering late in the season and lasts for a long time after being cut. The variety Glorious, crimson or scarlet, is particularly beautiful at this season, and admirably adapted for associating with white flowers where a striking contrast is desired. In its earlier stages this variety is a weak grower, and more than ordinary care is needed in affording water to the plants. Mrs. Greenfield, rich yellow and having long stems, rivals the old variety W. H. Lincoln. It has an elegant appearance when arranged, but is not a variety to be recommended where much packing has to be done, the petals being so easily bruised. I still grow the old incurved Harold Wells, pale primrose, and it is very floriferous. Mme. Louise Charvet is a variety well worthy of extended cultivation; the sprays of flowers are of large size, well supported on long, stiff stalks, and the color is of a beautiful rich rose. Guy Hamilton is a first-class white variety, useful alike for cutting and for a pot plant on account of its dwarf habit and excellent foliage.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

PROPAGATING.

It is time to begin thinking of propagation once more, and while fairly good flowers can be had from plants propagated much later than this, still February and March are not too early to propagate many kinds, and more particularly does this apply to the growers for exhibition. If you want good flowers, you must have an early start, especially so in the case of dwarf, slow-growing varieties. It is not at all unusual for a new thing to be condemned the first year because the buyer has propagated it late and to the utmost limit and the plants have not had a chance to prove themselves. One cannot strike cuttings in June and get as good results as if the plants were struck in February or March, only in the case of some five or six kinds, like General Hutton or the Eatons, which will grow at the rate of a foot a month when started. If a plant is started into growth before the hot weather, it makes a hardier, stockier, short-jointed growth and will not bolt up like the soft, sappy growth of early June.

The operation of making cuttings and putting them in the sand is so simple that every boy who works in a greenhouse knows it and it is unnecessary to go into detail here. I would simply say trim off enough foliage so that the air can circulate between the rows and place the cuttings in the sand deep enough so that they will not fall over when watered or sprayed. If you have a regular propagating house facing north the cuttings will need little attention at this season of the year, after being watered in, but if you are propagating in a corner of one of your cut flower houses provision must be made to keep sun and drafts away so that the cuttings will not wilt and lose their vitality.

Select only the best cuttings for use. Any that have become too long and are throwing a bud should be discarded and only the suckers coming right out of the ground should be used. Shoots that are produced up the old stems almost invariably run to bud after they start to grow.

If your stock plants have been resting under a bench somewhere, get them up to the light at once, even if you have to throw something else out to do so. A good start is everything and you cannot expect your plants to throw healthy cuttings if they are hidden away from the sunlight. A few plants in the end of a carnation or violet bench will not take up much room and will well repay for the care and space.

As soon as the cuttings have roots half an inch or so in length get them out right away and pot into soil. Many cuttings are permanently weakened by being left in the sand and allowed to make a weak, attenuated growth and long, spindly roots. There is no nutriment in sand. It is just a medium to induce rooting and as soon as the roots are formed the nourishment they are

REPOTTING YOUNG STOCK.

The season of repotting being now in full swing, with all its hurry and bustle, in order to keep up with the rapid progress of growth, when a certain amount of work must be accomplished within a limited time, we must not lose sight of the fact that in order to be successful and produce good, healthy stock, the work must be efficiently performed.

Repotting is one of these duties that require care and skill and to be profitable must be done with speed. There is, however, a speed limit which it is unsafe to exceed, else some of the work will be certain to be done in a slovenly manner. To have the work performed in a thorough, tradesmanlike manner, with a fair regard to speediness, should be set as the standard of excellence.

Stock carefully handled from the start, being so much more reliable, will always be worth more in the market than soft stock propagated from any kind of wood that can be scraped up and handled expressly to get it on the market in quantity, irrespective of quality. If a reputation for good stock is desired, careful work and careful elimination of all ailing and weak plants should be practiced at repotting time.

The soil for repotting should be in a nice, mellow condition; that is, neither too wet nor too dry. If too wet it packs too firmly and if too dry it fails to pack in a satisfactory manner. It is safest to add no feeding or fertilizing material at this time, avoiding particularly bone flour and all nitrates. Soil left over from last season's planting should be of about the right quality.

This should be pulverized fine enough to make it easy to pack around the bulb.

Some growers still use drainage, even in half-inch shifts, but where a fairly porous soil is used there is no necessity for this. The addition of soil to the pot is so small that there is ample evaporation without it. Where large shifts are used, such as from 2¼-inch to 3½-inch or larger, it is always safest to use drainage. However, this is a question that the student can best determine for himself by experimenting.

Potting too deeply is frequently the cause of checking growth and should be guarded against, the original ball requiring to be placed just deep enough in the pot so that there will be left ample room for watering.

Repotted stock should have the soil uniformly moistened before being placed on the bench. This is particularly true of Beauties, the young wood and foliage of which suffer severely from any neglect of this nature.

Pressure of other work should be no excuse for postponing repotting of rose stock, as any delay, particularly in bright weather, will cause a check from which they do not recover for a long time, if ever.

MISS KATE MOULTON.

The accompanying illustration is from a very excellent photograph of a pot of John Monson's new pink rose, Miss Kate Moulton, which is now being exhibited at florists' club meetings by the Minneapolis Floral Co. The photograph is one of the best which has reached the REVIEW office in a long time and gives a better idea of the character of the flower than any heretofore published. The rose has been known to the florists of the Twin Cities for a number of seasons and has made a distinctly favorable impression. It was shown for the first time to the general public at the World's Fair flower show at St. Louis in 1904 and at the Chicago show in 1905 it was one of the most attractive features. Now the various florists' clubs are having an opportunity to pass upon it. Mr. Monson reports that he is receiving many inquiries for stock of Miss Kate Moulton and that many large growers are visiting his place to see the stock growing. The variety promises to be very generally planted for trial next season.

A ROLL OF CARPET.

In the REVIEW of February 15, W. D. states that he intends to make a design next spring, representing a roll of carpet and asks for information on constructing the frame, etc. In replying to him, W. S. says he does not understand what is meant. It seems to me the only thing he means is that he wants to make a bed representing a roll of carpet, that is, a roll with a piece of carpet extended as it is shown by salesmen in carpet stores. W. S. gives quite definite information as to making a bed representing a carpet laid out in a room and his selection of plants is all that could be desired.

To make a design representing a roll of carpet, mark out on the lawn a bed of size best suited to your requirements; 4½x9 feet is a good size. Put it in good shape for planting. Get a piece of common poultry netting four feet wide and long enough to make a cylinder two feet across. This cylinder is the rolled part and is placed at one end of the bed. Ends of the proper size should be cut from the same kind of netting and wired into place.

Choose your pattern, the simpler the better, and work it out in the bed, starting at one end and going to within about three feet of the other end. Have a basket of wet sphagnum at hand. Place the cylinder across the end of the bed and drive a couple of stakes through the bottom to keep it from rolling. The seam in the cylinder should be on top and left unfastened until planting is nearly finished. Through this opening line the bottom with moss and up about three inches on the sides and ends, inside.

Fill with soil to the same height, knock out your plants and put them through the netting into place. Put another rim of moss around, and more soil and plants. Here is where you get in your fine work, as the pattern must be worked out on the cylinder to match the flat portion of your bed or carpet. When about half full, put through the center of the cylinder what may be called a core, of sphagnum, about five inches in diameter but do not run it clear to the ends. Place three pieces of old 1-inch pipe so that when the roll is complete, the bottom of the pipes will be in the core and the top just hidden by the plants on top of the roll, which can be kept moist better by pouring water down the pipes than by watering outside alone.

Now, I do not know that I have made it clear how to make and fill this cylinder, but with this starter I am sure that any one accustomed to bedding out can figure out a way.

Properly arranged bedding of flowering plants and natural effects in perennials and shrubbery are desirable.

While the ordinary mortal publicly delights in "Vogner," "Batovan" and Mozart, he has, perhaps privately, a well-developed regard for Charles K. Harris and ragtime.

As an example of what can be done by skillful planting, and as a novelty, something that everybody will stop to look at, and that will be talked about long after it has disappeared, put in an occasional carpet bed. When the writer has made the balance of his million and does not need advertising, then and then only, will he cut out entirely, the "ragtime" bed.

C. H. G.

In a recent issue of the REVIEW W. D. asks for information about planting a bed to represent a roll of carpet. W. S. says he is not quite clear about what W. D. wants, but he gives a very good list of the plants suitable for planting such a bed.

Well, I worked in a place for some time where a bed was planted on the lawn in front of the big house to represent a roll of carpet. I would call it a stair carpet. The lawn sloped from the house to the street and a bed about three feet wide and twenty-five to thirty feet long was cut out in the grass, the sod being removed entirely. The bed was dug and made ready for planting just as any other bed and at the top

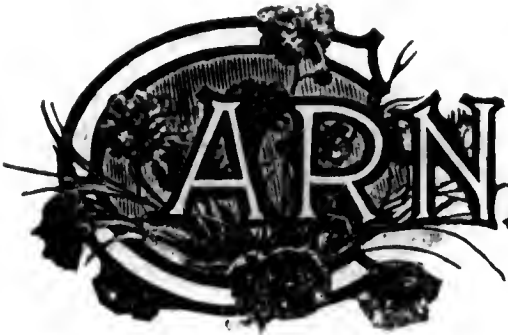

we placed a roll of wire the width of the bed and fastened it there by driving two stakes into the ground at either end of the wire. The wire would be about ten inches or twelve inches high and of 1½-inch mesh. This was filled with good soil and we then proceeded to plant our bed. We used alternantheras, two or three varieties, and echeveria. Anyone can choose his own design. We planted right over the roll, placing our plants between the mesh of the wire. When all was planted it looked like a stair carpet partly rolled up and certainly was a very nice bed.

We kept it trimmed during the summer. In the fall, when the alternantheras had good color, it looked fine. I hope I have made this clear enough for W. D. to understand.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Season of Strong Growth.

While you are busy with your propagating and potting and caring for your young stock you must not neglect your blooming plants on the benches. As the season advances the growth will come stronger and more rapidly. Disbudding must be looked after carefully and when you are through propagating, when disbudding, take off all the side shoots down to where you will cut the stem in gathering the blooms. These side shoots will come stronger and more frequently than they did earlier and if they are taken off it will help the blooms some.

Watering requires closer attention now, too. The sun is quite strong on a bright day and will dry out the soil wherever it strikes it and the plants being rather soft, can not stand much of that without suffering considerably. Look over the south edges of the beds carefully on bright mornings and water wherever the soil is not quite moist. In fact, the whole beds will enjoy more liberal watering than during the past three months. Instead of leaning toward the dry side, step over and lean toward the moist side from now on, except, of course, in case of a long cloudy spell of weather. There are many reasons for this. In the first place, the plants are thoroughly established; then again, the soil is well filled with working roots and will dry out quicker, thus eliminating the danger of souring. The plants are soft and, on bright days when the ventilators are open, evaporation is more rapid and the plants must be able to draw copiously to prevent severe wilting. This wilting, if it occurs repeatedly, will destroy the quality of your blooms quickly.

Use Bone Meal.

If the mulch you put on last fall has disappeared or has been washed toward the middle of the bed, you should put on some more loose material along the edge where the soil is bare to help hold in the moisture. It is a little early to mulch the whole beds yet, but a little extra feeding can be done from now on with good results. A moderate dose of bone meal at this time will help them a good deal and will carry them up to the mulch you will give in a month or so. Instead of sprinkling the bone right on the soil we prefer to mix it with about three times its bulk of soil. Turn this mixture once or twice each day to prevent heating and use after it has been mixed two or three days. The main reason for doing this is because, when sprinkling the bone on the beds and when you water it in, the dust will rise and settle on the blooms and in the axils of the leaves and not only cause an ill smell on the blooms, but in decaying is liable to cause disease, while, if mixed with soil, the moisture in the soil will cause this dust to be taken up by the soil and no trouble is experienced in applying it to the beds. You merely put on three or four times as much as you would of the pure bone, say a good big handful to each row across a five-foot bench. Water in well after putting it on.

At this time of the year you do not want to be stirring the surface of the soil much, nor the old mulch either, as you will find them full of feeding roots and they don't want to be disturbed. About this time you will find lots of young weeds starting up and, as soon as they are large enough to pull, they should be pulled. Most weeds are gross feeders and will rapidly impoverish the soil.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Care of Young Stock.

It would seem unnecessary at first thought to remind a grower that his young stock needs careful attention, but I know from experience how apt we are to give as little time as possible to the non-producers. A casual glance over the bench in the morning, a hurried watering of those needing it, a mental note that ere long they must be gone through thoroughly and the matter is dismissed from the mind for the day.

From the moment a cutting is severed from the mature plant its future is dependent on the conditions which surround it and it is during the first few months of its existence as a separate plant that these conditions may be said to have the greatest influence in shaping its course. Under prevailing methods the carnation spends practically its whole life under artificial surroundings, the only time presented for getting close to nature being a brief sojourn in the field, even this being denied in the case of continuous culture under glass.

It is not in any sense my purpose to criticize present cultural methods, but to call attention to the fact that there should be a period during the life of a plant that partakes of the nature of a rest, a call from labor to refreshment as it were. It is clearly out of the question to provide this for mature plants, but it can very easily and without expense, be furnished the youngsters.

As soon as potted and sufficiently established to stand full sun, remove to a house so arranged in the matter of heat and ventilation that there may be no sudden fluctuations in temperature; gradually reduce the temperature so that when well established the thermometer will range between 38 degrees to 40 degrees at night and 50 degrees during the day. Growth will be slower, which is the object sought. It is not so much size that is wanted in the early life of a carnation plant as it is that sturdy look so pleasing to the eye of the true gardener. As an aid in maintaining this season of partial rest, the soil used in potting cuttings should consist of new soil composed of rotted sod without manure or fertilizer of any kind. This low temperature is also a preventive against the development of insect pests, but nevertheless, keep a sharp lookout as there is nothing that will sap the vitality of young stock like greenfly or spider.

Topping Young Plants.

The matter of topping having so much influence on the future shape and productiveness of the plants, this operation should be the subject of some study; more, perhaps than is usually thought necessary.

While there is a proper time and way to top a cutting of any variety, there can be no arbitrary rule made that will apply to all varieties as to the most desirable point at which to top. A cutting is ready to top when grown to such length as the formation of a stem may be clearly seen between the joints at the point it is to be cut and I would insist that a sharp knife be used in the operation. In deciding just where the point in question is, one must be governed by the general habit of a variety; each has a natural manner of growth peculiar to itself and to accomplish the best results in plant building it is necessary to acquire definite knowledge of this peculiarity.

Varieties of sprawly growth, unless kept well under control in the early stages, become exceedingly difficult to manage later and consequently must be closely watched. If allowed to run up to a considerable length there is not only danger of giving the plant a severe check by the removal of too great an amount of tissue at one time, but the stem is quite likely to have arrived at that stage where strong breaks cannot be looked for. High temperature, insufficient light and over-rich soil all conspire to aggravate sprawliness in growth, while the cool treatment before referred to will be found a valuable aid in inducing more compact growth in varieties of this habit, at the same time preserving the natural bushy habit of those possessing it. ### A MAYWOOD PLACE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the establishment of H. Luedtke, Maywood, Ill. The range consists of three houses devoted entirely to carnations, which are grown very successfully. Mr. Luedtke grows only a few varieties for cut flowers, but these are of the best, both in selection of varieties, in culture and in results obtained. He tries all the new ones as they come out, taking up those which suit his purpose and doing quite a business in rooted cuttings. His main crop this year is Enchantress and his product has ranked with the best offered in the Chicago market. Prosperity was grown extensively last year and the blooms were very fine, but it was not found as profitable as others, and has been dropped. Fiancee is on trial and Mr. Luedtke believes that another season it will prove its worth. Sweet peas are grown as a spring crop. E. C. Amling handles the product of this establishment.

THE CARNATION OF TODAY.

[A paper by Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, presented to the Horticultural Society of New York on February 14, 1906.]

The carnation, as grown today, is almost exclusively a florists' flower, and hybridizers have been breeding to improve this strain, but there is a wider field and an important field for them—the development of garden carnations hardly enough to live through the winter without protection, in the latitude of Philadelphia and New York, and with the quality of blooming through the summer. The discussion of this idea might form a lengthy paper in itself, so I will confine my remarks to varieties grown under glass for winter bloom.

It would not be wise for me, in view of the fact that at the present time the literature of the carnation is so voluminous, to attempt to give you a comprehensive and detailed history of the wonderful flower, as we know it today, and as we see it here on the tables tonight.

There is more space in the gardening papers devoted to the carnation than to any other plant or flower. The minutest details as to soils to be used, and methods of culture to be observed, as well as criticisms and descriptions of new varieties as they appear, with histories of the achievements of each in the competitive exhibitions throughout the country, with able discussions on the ancestry of each pedigreed variety; its vigor of constitution or lack of it; its freedom of bloom or its failure to have this very desirable quality; its desirable habit of commencing to bloom early in the fall, or its undesirable tendency to defer blooming until a later period. Detailed and frequent information on every thing pertaining to carnations is so easily accessible that every one interested must have his desire for knowledge almost fully satisfied, as far as the printed page can give, and little further can be learned except by personal culture of the plant, which occupation I recommend to every amateur as one of the most charming that can engage his or her attention. So, I feel that if I am to interest you tonight, it may be by a brief expression of my thoughts as I review my experiences of the past forty years, with mention of the most famous varieties which have appeared from time to time, remaining with us until they were either overtaken with disease or were displaced by better varieties of similar color and character. Of the hundreds of sorts introduced in that period I will speak in about the order of their introduction, and of each color separately, so as to bring clearly to your minds the wonderful improvement which, notwithstanding many failures, has gradually been made.

Improvements Maintain Interest.

The frequent appearance of improved varieties is the principal factor in maintaining the lively interest in the carnation; there is always something to be said about a distinguished new-comer and comparisons to be made with those that have preceded it. Scarcely a year passes by without bringing us one or more real improvements; other kinds of plants and flowers, with the possible exception of the chrysanthemum, do not appear to be so susceptible of improvement.

Take the rose, for instance, particularly the varieties which are forced for cut flowers; we see few changes for the better. Bride and Bridesmaid have remained for many years the leading teas, and the peerless American Beauty has had no rival for a quarter of a century. It is true that quite recently there have been introduced several good forcing roses, Liberty, Killarney, and, last, the very valuable Richmond rose. The latter is destined to be very largely grown; all honor to E. G. Hill for the Richmond. In his enthusiasm for novelties, he has sometimes given us sorts which did not pan out, but his services in giving us this last new rose have atoned for all his previous shortcomings. He is busy raising rose seedlings, has thousands on the way, and with the experience of so many years to help him, is almost certain, soon again, to give us something we will all be proud of.

But we cannot hope to get good, new roses as frequently as carnations, it is not in the wood. Take again, another class of plants, the palms, so deservedly popular as house plants. Nothing new appears at all equal to the old-time kentias and arecas. New palms, it is true, are introduced from time to time, but none equal to those which we have had so many years.

While the constant introduction of new carnations is very interesting and fascinating, it is alas, true, that where we get one real improvement, there are several introduced with exaggerated praises which are practically worthless. But it will be more difficult in the future to send out poor or mediocre sorts; the trade is becoming more and more critical and the National Carnation Society is doing all it can to prevent the introduction of inferior sorts. If there be a really good sort ready for the market, this very critical inspection and wide publicity will only serve to advertise its merits and increase its sale.

The First Valuable Carnation.

The first valuable carnation to come under my notice was La Purite, which is generally spoken of as of a deep pink color; it was rather a carmine with violet flame. The shade was very pleasing. It was imported from France in 1858; in 1862 my father bought one plant which cost $2.50 and proved to be a good investment, as it was of easy propagation, and two years later we had a good stock which was in brisk demand at $20 per hundred. I once heard the late George Wilson, of Malden, Mass., who was a very successful florist, say that the best investment he ever made in floriculture was the purchase of fifty plants of La Purite at $5 per plant. This was probably in 1861. This carnation was for fifteen years or more, the most largely cultivated of the time. It was very productive. I have seen a house of it at the late Wm. Bennett's, at Flatbush, which had on every plant from seventy-five to one hundred buds at the one time. I never saw it grown in quantity quite so well as he grew it, but it came to pass, after he had grown it so well for a number of years, it was attacked by stem-rot, and on calling at his place one day early in the winter, I found more than one-half the plants dead. It was so attacked with more or less virulence, in all sections of the country and, I believe, the once grand old variety is now extinct. I last saw it at Karl Muller's place in West Philadelphia, about fifteen years ago. This fine old German gardener managed to grow it successfully five or six years after it had generally disappeared. The blooms of La Purite were about one-third the size of our now famous Enchantress, and the mental comparison between the two is to me very interesting. No carna-

we placed a roll of wire the width of the bed and fastened it there by driving two stakes into the ground at either end of the wire. The wire would be about ten inches or twelve inches high and of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  inch mesh. This was filled with good soil and we then proceeded to plant our bed. We used alternantheras, two or three varieties, and echeveria. Anyone can choose his own design. We planted right over the roll, placing our plants between the mesh of the wire. When all was planted it looked like a stair carpet partly rolled up and certainly was a very nice bed.

We kept it trimmed during the summer. In the fall, when the alternantheras had good color, it looked fine. I hope I have made this clear enough for W. D. to understand.

Season of Strong Growth.

While you are busy with your propagating and potting and caring for your young stock you must not neglect your blooming plants on the benches. As the season advances the growth will come stronger and more rapidly. Disbudding must be looked after carefully and when you are through propagating, when disbudding, take off all the side shoots down to where you will cut the stem in gathering the blooms. These side shoots will come stronger and more frequently than they did earlier and if they are taken off it will help the blooms some.

Watering requires closer attention now, too. The sun is quite strong on a bright day and will dry out the soil wherever it strikes it and the plants being rather soft, can not stand much of that without suffering considerably. Look over the south edges of the beds carefully on bright mornings and water wherever the soil is not quite moist. In fact, the whole beds will enjoy more liberal watering than during the past three months. Instead of leaning toward the dry side, step over and lean toward the moist side from now on, except, of course, in case of a long cloudy spell of weather. There are many reasons for this. In the first place, the plants are thoroughly established; then again, the soil is well filled with working roots and will dry out quicker, thus eliminating the danger of souring. The plants are soft and, on bright days when the ventilators are open, evaporation is more rapid and the plants must be able to draw copiously to prevent severe wilting. This wilting, if it occurs repeatedly, will destroy the quality of your blooms quickly.

Use Bone Meal.

If the mulch you put on last fall has disappeared or has been washed toward the middle of the bed, you should put on some more loose material along the edge where the soil is bare to help hold in the moisture. It is a little early to mulch the whole beds yet, but a little extra feeding can be done from now on with good results. A moderate dose of bone meal at this time will help them a good deal and will carry them up to the mulch you will give in a month or so. Instead of sprinkling the bone right on the soil we prefer to mix it with about three times its bulk of soil. Turn this mixture once or twice each day to prevent heating and use after it has been mixed two or three days. The main reason for doing this is because, when sprinkling the bone on the beds and when you water it in, the dust will rise and settle on the blooms and in the axils of the leaves and not only cause an ill smell on the blooms, but in decaying is liable to cause disease, while, if mixed with soil, the moisture in the soil will cause this dust to be taken up by the soil and no trouble is experienced in applying it to the beds. You merely put on three or four times as much as you would of the pure bone, say a good big handful to each row across a five-foot bench. Water in well after putting it on.

At this time of the year you do not want to be stirring the surface of the soil much, nor the old mulch either, as you will find them full of feeding roots and they don't want to be disturbed. About this time you will find lots of young weeds starting up and, as soon as they are large enough to pull, they should be pulled. Most weeds are gross feeders and will rapidly impoverish the soil.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Care of Young Stock.

It would seem unnecessary at first thought to remind a grower that his young stock needs careful attention, but I know from experience how apt we are to give as little time as possible to the non-producers. A casual glance over the bench in the morning, a hurried watering of those needing it, a mental note that ere long they must be gone through thoroughly and the matter is dismissed from the mind for the day.

From the moment a cutting is severed from the mature plant its future is dependent on the conditions which surround it and it is during the first few months of its existence as a separate plant that these conditions may be said to have the greatest influence in shaping its course. Under prevailing methods the carnation spends practically its whole life under artificial surroundings, the only time presented for getting close to nature being a brief sojourn in the field, even this being denied in the case of continuous culture under glass.

It is not in any sense my purpose to criticize present cultural methods, but to call attention to the fact that there should be a period during the life of a plant that partakes of the nature of a rest, a call from labor to refreshment as it were. It is clearly out of the question to provide this for mature plants, but it can very easily and without expense, be furnished the youngsters.

As soon as potted and sufficiently established to stand full sun, remove to a house so arranged in the matter of heat and ventilation that there may be no sudden fluctuations in temperature; gradually reduce the temperature so that when well established the thermometer will range between 35 degrees to 40 degrees at night and 50 degrees during the day. Growth will be slower, which is the object sought. It is not so much size that is wanted in the early life of a carnation plant as it is that sturdy look so pleasing to the eye of the true gardener. As an aid in maintaining this season of partial rest, the soil used in potting cuttings should consist of new soil composed of rotted sod without manure or fertilizer of any kind. This low temperature is also a preventive against the development of insect pests, but nevertheless, keep a sharp lookout as there is nothing that will sap the vitality of young stock like greenfly or spider.

Topping Young Plants.

The matter of topping having so much influence on the future shape and productiveness of the plants, this operation should be the subject of some study; more, perhaps than is usually thought necessary.

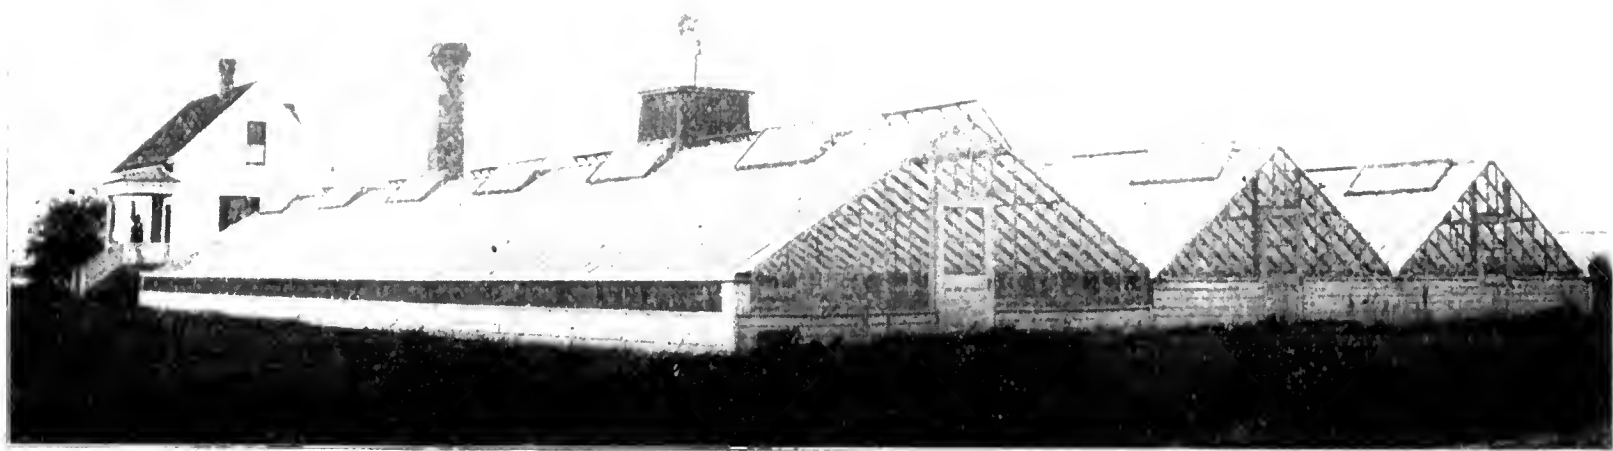

While there is a proper time and way to top a cutting of any variety, there can be no arbitrary rule made that will apply to all varieties as to the most desirable point at which to top. A cutting is ready to top when grown to such length as the formation of a stem may be clearly seen between the joints at the point it is to be cut and I would insist that a sharp knife be used in the operation. In deciding just where the point in question is, one must be governed by the general habit of a variety; each has a natural manner of growth peculiar to itself and to accomplish the best results in plant building it is necessary to acquire definite knowledge of this peculiarity.

Varieties of sprawly growth, unless kept well under control in the early stages, become exceedingly difficult to manage later and consequently must be closely watched. If allowed to run up to a considerable length there is not only danger of giving the plant a severe check by the removal of too great an amount of tissue at one time, but the stem is quite likely to have arrived at that stage where strong breaks cannot be looked for. High temperature, insufficient light and over-rich soil all conspire to aggravate sprawliness in growth, while the cool treatment before referred to will be found a valuable aid in inducing more compact growth in varieties of this habit, at the same time preserving the natural bushy habit of those possessing it. ### A MAYWOOD PLACE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken at the establishment of H. Luedtke, Maywood, Ill. The range consists of three houses devoted entirely to carnations, which are grown very successfully. Mr. Luedtke grows only a few varieties for cut flowers, but these are of the best, both in selection of varieties, in culture and in results obtained. He tries all the new ones as they come out, taking up those which suit his purpose and doing quite a business in rooted cuttings. His main crop this year is Enchantress and his product has ranked with the best offered in the Chicago market. Prosperity was grown extensively last year and the blooms were very fine, but it was not found as profitable as others, and has been dropped. Piancee is on trial and Mr. Luedtke believes that another season it will prove its worth. Sweet peas are grown as a spring crop. E. C. Auling handles the product of this establishment.

THE CARNATION OF TODAY.

A paper by Robert Craig, of Philadelphia presented to the Horticultural Society of New York on February 11, 1906.]

The carnation, as grown today, is almost exclusively a florists' flower, and hybridizers have been breeding to improve this strain, but there is a wider field and an important field for them—the development of garden carnations hardy enough to live through the winter without protection, in the latitude of Philadelphia and New York, and with the quality of blooming through the summer. The discussion of this idea might form a lengthy paper in itself, so I will confine my remarks to varieties grown under glass for winter bloom.

It would not be wise for me, in view of the fact that at the present time the literature of the carnation is so voluminous, to attempt to give you a comprehensive and detailed history of the wonderful flower, as we know it today, and as we see it here on the tables to-night.

There is more space in the gardening papers devoted to the carnation than to any other plant or flower. The minutest details as to soils to be used, and methods of culture to be observed, as well as criticisms and descriptions of new varieties as they appear, with histories of the achievements of each in the competitive exhibitions throughout the country, with able discussions on the ancestry of each pedigreed variety; its vigor of constitution or lack of it; its freedom of bloom or its failure to have this very desirable quality; its desirable habit of commencing to bloom early in the fall, or its undesirable tendency to defer blooming until a later period. Detailed and frequent information on every thing pertaining to carnations is so easily accessible that every one interested must have his desire for knowledge almost fully satisfied, as far as the printed page can give, and little further can be learned except by personal culture of the plant, which occupation I recommend to every amateur as one of the most charming that can engage his or her attention. So, I feel that if I am to interest you tonight, it may be by a brief expression of my thoughts as I review my experiences of the past forty years, with mention of the most famous varieties which have appeared from time to time, remaining with us until they were either overtaken with disease or were displaced by better varieties of similar color and character. Of the hundreds of sorts introduced in that period I will speak in about the order of their introduction, and of each color separately, so as to bring clearly to your minds the wonderful improvement which, notwithstanding many failures, has gradually been made.

Improvements Maintain Interest.

The frequent appearance of improved varieties is the principal factor in maintaining the lively interest in the carnation; there is always something to be said about a distinguished new comer and comparisons to be made with those that have preceded it. Scarcely a year passes by without bringing us one or more real improvements; other kinds of plants and flowers, with the possible exception of the chrysanthemum, do not appear to be so susceptible of improvement.

Take the rose, for instance, particularly the varieties which are forced for cut flowers; we see few changes for the better. Bride and Bridesmaid have remained for many years the leading teas, and the peerless American Beauty has had no rival for a quarter of a century. It is true that quite recently there have been introduced several good forcing roses, Liberty, Killarney, and, last, the very valuable Richmond rose. The latter is destined to be very largely grown; all honor to E. G. Hall for the Richmond. In his enthusiasm for novelties, he has sometimes given us sorts which did not pan out, but his services in giving us this last new rose have atoned for all his previous shortcomings. He is busy raising rose seedlings, has thousands on the way, and with the experience of so many years to help him, is almost certain, soon again, to give us something we will all be proud of.

But we cannot hope to get good, new roses as frequently as carnations, it is not in the wood. Take again, another class of plants, the palms, so deservedly popular as house plants. Nothing new appears at all equal to the old time kentias and arecas. Now palms, it is true, are introduced from time to time, but none equal to those which we have had so many years.

While the constant introduction of new carnations is very interesting and fascinating, it is alas, true, that where we get one real improvement, there are several introduced with exaggerated praises which are practically worthless. But it will be more difficult in the future to send out poor or mediocre sorts; the trade is becoming more and more critical and the National Carnation Society is doing all it can to prevent the introduction of inferior sorts. If there be a really good sort ready for the market, this very critical inspection and wide publicity will only serve to advertise its merits and increase its sale.

The First Valuable Carnation.

The first valuable carnation to come under my notice was La Purite, which is generally spoken of as of a deep pink color; it was rather a carnation with violet flame. The shade was very pleasing. It was imported from France in 1858; in 1862 my father bought one plant which cost $2.50 and proved to be a good investment, as it was of easy propagation, and two years later we had a good stock which was in brisk demand at $20 per hundred. I once heard the late George Wilson, of Malden, Mass., who was a very successful florist, say that the best investment he ever made in floriculture was the purchase of fifty plants of La Purite at $5 per plant. This was probably in 1861. This carnation was for fifteen years or more the most largely cultivated of the time. It was very productive. I have seen a house of it at the late Wm. Bennett's, at Flatbush, which had on every plant from seventy-five to one hundred buds at the one time. I never saw it grown in quantity quite so well as he grew it, but it came to pass, after he had grown it so well for a number of years, it was attacked by stem-rot, and on calling at his place one day early in the winter, I found more than one-half the plants dead. It was so attacked with more or less virulence, in all sections of the country and, I believe, the once grand old variety is now extinct. I last saw it at Karl Muller's place in West Philadelphia, about fifteen years ago. This fine old German gardener managed to grow it successfully five or six years after it had generally disappeared. The blooms of La Purite were about one-third the size of our now famous Enchantress, and the mental comparison between the two is to me very interesting. No carnation has had, as the theatrical men say, such a long run on the stage as La Purite. Its successors in the deep pink class were Tidal Wave and Thomas Cartledge, both useful, but Tidal Wave attained the greater popularity.

The Light Pink Class.

Of the light pink class there have been several notable ones. Grace Wilder, introduced by Mr. Dailley, was a very useful variety, for many years the best of its color. Later, we had the famous Wm. Scott, and if Mr. Dorner had done nothing else, he deserves a monument for raising and introducing this. It came out at the same time as Richmond and Albertini, both of which excelled it on the exhibition table, but both fell so far behind it in productiveness that they were soon dropped, while Wm. Scott for many years had no successful rival, until Mrs. Frances Joost appeared. Later we had Nelson and Genevieve Lord. The famous Lawson then appeared. The introduction of this variety gave a greater impulse to carnation growing than any variety before or since. In many respects it was superior to anything preceding it; it was brilliantly advertised, and best of all, justified every claim made for it. It made Peter Fisher's name a household word in carnation circles, and when he introduced Enchantress, saying that it was better than Lawson there were many doubters, but Peter was right. We hope he may live to give us more as good or better. The parents of Lawson were Tidal Wave (locally known as Van Leeuwen) and Daybreak, which latter was a distinct and valuable break. Out of Lawson have come several famous sorts, Enchantress, Mrs. M. A. Patten and Nelson Fisher; and Mr. Fisher has a brilliant red on the way. It is certainly a rich strain of blood.

And we are ready for another one of this color. Helen Goddard bids fair to be a winner, and when Helen Gould and Winsor are introduced next year, particularly Winsor, they will certainly prove valuable. I am in love with Winsor; it is just the shade of pink that is wanted, has a vigorous constitution, a fine, stiff stem, and is very productive. I have had no opportunity of seeing Candace, a western variety now being disseminated, but I have heard it well spoken of by competent judges.

Another shade of color which has been very popular may be called very light pink. The first one of these that I was familiar with was Miss Joliffe, a light flesh, tinted with salmon. I knew it well thirty years ago as the best in its class. Later we had Daybreak. This was a very valuable variety with flowers larger than any which had preceded it and with, for that date, wonderful, long, stiff stems, and of a very lovely light flesh shade, and unusually productive; for many years, the best of its class, but it finally succumbed to disease and was displaced by Fair Maid and Enchantress, both excellent varieties. In fact, I think Enchantress the best carnation, all things considered, ever sent out in this country. It is still very popular, and as long as it continues to be as good as it is now, it will take a wonder, indeed, to displace it. It is a model in all that constitutes a good carnation, and raisers of new varieties should aim to get its qualities in their seedlings. What a boon a clear yellow Enchantress would be!

The Scarlet Class.

But I find my paper likely to take too much of your time, so in considering the important scarlet class, I will pass over them with brief mention. What a demand for this color at Christmas, it goes so well with the holly berries, the cheerful chimes and the general joy! Century was raised in 1878 by the late Charles T. Starr, and while more of a carmine than a scarlet, was very bright and was very useful until the advent of John Thorpe's Portia, which was a brilliant scarlet, and very largely grown for many years. Its color has never been excelled; it was very productive; lack of size was its greatest drawback. Then we had in rapid succession Lady Emma, Alegatiere, Garfield (this is the variety that Donald McCallum called Robert Craig, thinking he had a sport, but after being considerably grown as Robert Craig turned out to be Garfield), then Estelle, still grown in some sections; G. H. Crane, for years a good one; then America, Adonis, and finally Cardinal. This has proved to be a good one in the western states, but has so far, hardly come up to expectations in the east; in fact, it has been a great disappointment, producing a large percentage of worthless blooms.

The White Class.

Now, we will briefly consider the white class, so largely used for funerals, weddings and in general floral work. The oldest white one that I know was President Degraw, imported from France about the same time as La Purite, and introduced to commerce by the late lamented Chas. Zeller, of Flatbush, the original carnation enthusiast of America, whose stock of more than fifty varieties I had the pleasure of inspecting some thirty-five years ago; carnation growing was in its infancy then. They were most grown in pots, although they were beginning to be planted by a few growers, mostly in solid beds and a few on benches, which is now the most popular way of growing. President Degraw had a long run, many years of popularity. Then came Peerless or Edwardsii, followed by Kinzie's White, Peter Henderson, Snowden, Silver Spray, a good one; Lizzie McGowan, none better in its time; Flora Hill, for a long time famous and still grown to a considerable extent; Glacier, Queen Louise, The Queen, Lady Bountiful, most beautiful (the greatest defect in this fine variety is the tendency to be a shy bloomer in the fall and early winter); white Lawson and, finally, Lieut. Peary, which I think is the most valuable white to date. Vesper is another good one, and not as well known as it deserves to be; it is vigorous, early and continuous, very satisfactory with many growers. White Enchantress promises well. The Belle is a very good white with many growers.

In crimsons, which is one of the least important, commercially, we have had Black Knight, Louis Lenoir, Anna Webb, Crimson King, F. Mangold, Seawan, Gomez, Maceo, Daheim, Harlowarden and Harry Fenn; the latter two are the best in this class and are still cultivated.

White Variegated.

The class known as white variegated has been represented by a number of varieties, enjoying a large measure of popularity; the best have been Hins-dale, a good variety extensively grown fifteen or twenty years ago. I never saw it better than at John H. Taylor's, Bayside, L. I. For several years he grew it in large quantity; Chester Pride; Variegated La Purite, a sport from the great La Purite; Mrs. Bradt and Lilly Dean, Olympia, Prosperity, M. A. Patten and Variegated Lawson. The latter two are the latest and best. Jessica, which is being introduced this year, looks promising.

In yellow variegated, we have had Astoria, introduced by Wm. Wilson, of Astoria, about thirty years ago, a fine variety in its day. Then came Chas. T. Starr's Buttercup, introduced to the trade in 1884, and the best one we have ever had; followed by Andalusia and Sunrise and Eldorado, which are now probably both out of cultivation. We need a good, new one in this class.

American Carnation Best.

Now, I have named in all the classes most of those that have been specially valuable in the past and those which are the best at the present time. I have also had the temerity to pick the winners of those being introduced this year. It is interesting to note that the early and free blooming qualities of the American carnation are beginning to be recognized by some of the wide-awake English growers. Among the kinds that have done well over there may be mentioned Enchantress and America. Fair Maid, The Belle and Harlowarden have done particularly well. I recommend our English friends to try Helen Goddard, and, when they are introduced, Winsor and Beacon. Although there is a lack of sunlight in England, the free-blooming American varieties produce some flowers in the fall and winter and in March, April, May and June bloom freely. As the London fashionable season runs into July, there is always a good demand for the blooms. The method of growing, heretofore, in England has been in pots, but the American method of growing on benches has been introduced. Mr. Ditton, one grower near London, has been quite successful.

One thing seems clear: The best of the American sorts are superior in productiveness to any on earth, and equal in form and color to the best anywhere. Although there have been many disappointments, the advances are surprising, almost bewildering, and it is to be hoped that those who have devoted so much time and thought to seedling raising, may continue with enthusiasm in the good work and that the number of those who are so engaged may be largely increased, for when success comes to any, it may be enjoyed by all, both professional and amateur, who are willing to participate. We owe much to those who are willing to grow hundreds of seedlings, and to test them at great expense for several years in the hope of occasionally getting one good enough to send out. The cool, calculating, sure-thing, business man is not likely to spend much time raising seedlings, but the intelligent enthusiast in the carnation field is always likely to become a benefactor to us all.

I WOULD like to congratulate you on the phenomenal results obtained from my advertisement. I have sold several hundred thousand Asparagus plumosus nanus seeds. The REVIEW surely does the work.—F. GILMAN TAYLOR, Glendale, Cal.

PERMANENT BENCHES.

Because of the very great interest now felt in the matter of more enduring bench construction, the following description of the benches lately built by the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, will be particularly valuable. The Wittbold Co. has had the experience common to all growers who have used wooden tables. They have suffered the annoyances of break-downs where rebuilding was too long postponed and have been compelled to devote precious time to rebuilding at busy seasons. They have figured the expense of renewing wooden benches every three or four years and have experimented with various styles of more enduring construction, with the result that all benches now being built are built as follows:

Vitrified drain tiles are used for supports, set in concrete. A temporary board bottom is built on these, of any light material that may be available. Sheet-iron sides seven inches high are used, but wood would serve with occasional renewals. The side pieces are fastened in position by  $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch tie rods every two feet. These have lock nuts. Over the tie rods chicken wire is placed. Then an inch or a little more of cement is worked in, to surround the wire and rods, making a solid bottom and protecting rods and wire from rust. To provide drainage holes are punched with a chisel before the cement has set. These should be scattered irregularly, but not more than six or eight inches apart. When the cement has set the temporary flooring is knocked away, permitting the bench to settle into its permanent place on the tiles.

Louis Wittbold figures out the cost of such a bench,  $5\frac{1}{2} \times 100$  feet, 550 square feet, as follows:

|--------------------------------|---------|
| Cement, 22 bags @ 40c.....     | $ 8.80 |
| Sand .....                     | 3.00    |
| Chicken wire .....             | 4.00    |
| Iron for side.....             | 15.00   |
| Cross rods, 50 @ 5c.....       | 2.50    |
| Tiles for posts, 75 @ 12c..... | 9.00    |

Total .....$42.30

This is at a very small fraction above  $7\frac{1}{2}$  cents per square foot, not counting labor, which is only a little more than is required to build one wooden bench and not nearly so much as is expended on wooden tables in the course of a few years. For another thing, these cement tables are smooth-bottomed and easy to empty.

TO GROW VIOLETS.

I have read your notes on the violets and I now take the liberty of writing for a little information and advice. I have an even-span house running east and west,  $10 \times 100$  feet, seven feet high, heated by steam, ample roof ventilation for carnations, etc. Air is always dry; by that I mean never close and muggy. I have been considering putting the house to violets on beds or border, about twelve inches high. What variety would you suggest for planting such a house?

Cement Bench in Course of Construction at Wittbold's, Chicago.

Would want some single and balance, about 1,000 plants, of doubles. I want the best and finest bloomers and variety most sought, fragrance and keeping qualities to be taken into consideration. Could give them careful attention. My soil is of clayey make-up in which my roses do most beautifully. There are no violets grown about here, to speak of. Any suggestions or information you may see fit to impart will be appreciated.

H. M. H.

H. M. H. has sent a query covering ground that may be of interest to others in planning for next season's campaign, so I will answer through this department for the benefit of those that may be similarly situated and yet wondering if it is best to make a change.

While houses running north and south are generally conceded to be the best for growing violets, still, if the east and west house was all that we could use for them we should not hesitate to give it a trial. The ventilation and shading will require closer attention than the other houses would, but, with the care you can give them, I see no reason why you should not be fairly successful. If the house is seven feet high, I suppose the walls are about three or four feet. You suggest having the beds or borders about one foot high. This, I think, would be rather low, as the violets like to be near the glass and, if I could, I should have them as close as a foot from the glass. As to using benches or borders, much depends on local circumstances. As your soil is heavy or clayey, if you make a solid border for them, which we always prefer, care should be taken to provide ample drainage in the bottom of same, else in the dark, cloudy days of winter you will not be able to properly dry out the soil between the waterings without employing more heat than is good for them and which you will be likely to do if you have the house piped for carnations and are using steam. You will want valves enough in the coils so that you can keep the temperature low.

As to the varieties to plant, there are two considerations that will nearly always settle that question, and these are: First, what your trade calls for; and second, what variety takes to your soil and treatment most kindly. For real beauty and fragrance, when properly grown, the Marie Louise type stands at the head. When you can get good stock of the Farquhar; this is an improved Marie Louise and all right aside from its tendency to throw "bullheads" at certain times; but if you find you cannot succeed with these two kinds, or your house is rather warm for them, then the chances are that the Lady Hume Campbell will succeed. This is a beautiful violet when well grown and exceedingly fragrant, its only drawback being its lighter color which absolutely kills it if mixed with the others, the contrast making it look as if faded. As a pot-plant for Easter and such times it is without a rival; therefore, if just commencing to grow violets, give all kinds an equal show, both single and double. A year or two will prove which kinds will succeed with you and which your customers desire and that will naturally determine what you will then settle down to growing for a regular thing.

Now, as regards the stock, be sure you purchase only thoroughly clean, healthy stock; preferably from a locality north of you, for as a rule stock taken from a point north and carried south does better than stock taken from the south to the north. If possible, go and see the stock before purchasing it, for poor stock is money thrown away.

In crimsons, which is one of the least important, commercially, we have had Black Knight, Louis Lenoir, Anna Webb, Crimson King, F. Mangold, Seawan, Gomez, Maceo, Daheim, Harlowarden and Harry Ferry; the latter two are the best in this class and are still cultivated.

White Variegated.

The class known as white variegated has been represented by a number of varieties, enjoying a large measure of popularity; the best have been Hins-

dale, a good variety extensively grown fifteen or twenty years ago. I never saw it better than at John H. Taylor's, Bayside, L. I. For several years he grew it in large quantity; Chester Pride; Variegated La Purite, a sport from the great La Purite; Mrs. Bradt and Lilly Dean, Olympia, Prosperity, M. A. Patten and Variegated Lawson. The latter two are the latest and best. Jessica, which is being introduced this year, looks promising.

In yellow variegated, we have had Astoria, introduced by Wm. Wilson, of Astoria, about thirty years ago, a fine variety in its day. Then came Chas. T. Starr's Buttercup, introduced to the trade in 1884, and the best one we have ever had; followed by Andalusia and Sunrise and Eldorado, which are now probably both out of cultivation. We need a good, new one in this class.

American Carnation Best.

Now, I have named in all the classes most of those that have been specially valuable in the past and those which are the best at the present time. I have also had the temerity to pick the winners of those being introduced this year. It is interesting to note that the early and free blooming qualities of the American carnation are beginning to be recognized by some of the wide-awake English growers. Among the kinds that have done well over there may be mentioned Enchantress and America. Fair Maid, The Belle and Harlowarden have done particularly well. I recommend our English friends to try Helen Goddard, and, when they are introduced, Winsor and Beacon. Although there is a lack of sunlight in England, the free-blooming American varieties produce some flowers in the fall and winter and in March, April, May and June bloom freely. As the London fashionable season runs into July, there is always a good demand for the blooms. The method of growing, heretofore, in England has been in pots, but the American method of growing on benches has been introduced. Mr. Ditton, one grower near London, has been quite successful.

One thing seems clear: The best of the American sorts are superior in productiveness to any on earth, and equal in form and color to the best anywhere. Although there have been many disappointments, the advances are surprising, almost bewildering, and it is to be hoped that those who have devoted so much time and thought to seedling raising, may continue with enthusiasm in the good work and that the number of those who are so engaged may be largely increased, for when success comes to any, it may be enjoyed by all, both professional and amateur, who are willing to participate. We owe much to those who are willing to grow hundreds of seedlings, and to test them at great expense for several years in the hope of occasionally getting one good enough to send out. The cool, calculating, sure-thing, business man is not likely to spend much time raising seedlings, but the intelligent enthusiast in the carnation field is always likely to become a benefactor to us all.

I would like to congratulate you on the phenomenal results obtained from my advertisement. I have sold several hundred thousand Asparagus plumosus nanus seeds. The REVIEW surely does the work. - F. GILMAN TAYLOR, Glendale, Cal.

Greenhouse Heating.

PERFECT HEATING APPARATUS.

Here is a perfect heating apparatus for the man with a shallow boiler pit and using low pressure steam: Instead of using a pump or steam trap of any kind that I have ever seen, place a barrel or tank twelve feet above the return pipe, and run a  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pipe from the return to the top of the tank; also run a  $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch or  $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch pipe from the bottom of the tank, with check valve near the boiler to keep the steam from backing up when throwing the cold water out of the pipes. As soon as the water gets out of the pipes, it relieves the pressure; the water starts from the tank to the boiler and keeps a steady heat with less trouble or expense than any device I have ever used. I am at present using a fifty-gallon barrel with success, heating 4,500 square feet of glass and the pump I have been using is idle.

If anyone wishing further information in regard to this method will let it be known, I will tell freely what I can in regard to it.

NUMBER OF PIPES REQUIRED.

How many flow and return pipes do we need in our two houses running north and south? We would like to use a 3-inch flow and a 2-inch return, as we have some of this on hand. We have a No. 3 Kroeschell hot water boiler located at the north end of a house 22x80 feet, twelve feet to the ridge, one row of 16x16-inch glass in the west side. One house ninety feet long joins the 80-foot house and boiler shed, thirty feet wide and thirteen feet to the ridge, with no inside wall. There are thirty-two inches of glass in the east side, with ventilators and glass in the north end. We want to hold the temperature at from 45 degrees to 50 degrees. The temperature outside often falls to 22 degrees below zero. These houses will have solid benches.

F. W. B.

Your house 22x80 feet can be piped with one 3-inch flow under the ridge, returning by twelve 2-inch returns, and the house 30x90 can be piped with a 3-inch flow under the ridge, although I should prefer this to be  $3\frac{1}{2}$ -inch, and ten 2-inch returns. The total amount of radiation needed in both houses is between 1,600 and 1,700 square feet, which is much less than the rated capacity of your boiler.

L. C. C.

SIZE OF STEAM BOILER.

What size steam boiler would it take to heat the following houses: Three houses each 20x150 feet with fifteen feet slope, 5-foot walls of concrete; also, a show room on east end connecting all together, 20x40 feet? Which uses the most fuel, a locomotive boiler or a bricked-up tubular? Which is the better way to build houses for general stock, east and west or north and south? The temperature goes to 30 degrees below zero sometimes.

E. R. B.

One thirty horse-power boiler, i. e., a boiler forty-two inches in diameter and twelve feet in length, is just about large enough to care for the radiation you have. To be on the safe side, however, it will be wise to install a forty horsepower boiler. The type of boiler here considered is the horizontal tubular bricked-in, which is the most economical type of boiler for heating purposes where less than 150 horse-power is required. There are advocates of north and south houses and equally strong and persistent advocates of east and west houses. Personally, I prefer the north and south ridge. From the standpoint of construction, to give most light, the north and south house has advantages not offered by any other type, but this carries with it a pitch of roof suited to the latitude in which the house is located, as well as for the crop it is to carry.

L. C. C.

PLAN FOR PIPING.

Will you give us a plan for piping a connected house, 18x106 feet, with hot water for roses? There is a 16-inch glass on one side, two 4-foot side benches, one 6-foot ground bench. It is three feet from the bottom of the side bench to the top of a No. 16 Hitchings boiler, twelve feet to ridge.

M. B.

A good plan for piping the house 18x106 feet would be to run a 3-inch riser or flow pipe under the ridge to the end of the house farthest from the boiler and there divide it to return by two coils consisting of four 2-inch pipes each, one coil under each of the two side benches and four other 2-inch pipes arranged eighteen inches to two feet above the level of the 6-foot solid bed, if such an arrangement can be made to work with the crops to be grown. If pipes over the middle bench are not desirable the four pipes can be added to the coils under the side benches, in which case each coil would contain six instead of four 2-inch returns. Twelve 2-inch pipes the length of the house are necessary to supply sufficient radiation in the house.

L. C. C.

REARRANGING OF PIPES.

We have lately taken over some greenhouses in which the piping is very poorly arranged. The system is hot water. Some of the runs are 200 feet; and, to add to the trouble, the main flow, 6-inch, rises seven feet, then falls six feet; then the pipes rise again to the ends of the houses and turn in every direction. We have a powerful boiler but the circulation is, of course, bad. We were proposing to pull down and arrange the pipes properly this summer, but if we understand your article on circulating apparatus correctly one of these devices would obviate the necessity of so doing. We have about 2,000 feet of 4-inch pipe. What horse-power motor should we need to run a circulating pump in the main 6-inch return? Should we save the cost of running the motor, using an alternating current, by a corresponding decrease in our coal bill? Of course, we know that the pump would have much more friction to contend with in our bad system than if the piping were properly arranged, but we want especially to know if it would work satisfactorily under present conditions.

E. A. W.

If, as you state, the piping, particularly the flow pipes, are so poorly arranged I doubt if the use of circulating apparatus will make up for the deficiencies of the system. Poorly arranged flow pipes which impede the flow tend to cause the water to lose its heat where the circulation is restricted and if this is in the flow the heat is thrown off where it is least desired. This will be true, only to a less degree even with the aid of the circulating system. If the flows are not too long, to avoid the use of the pump it will be most satisfactory to rely upon rearranging the pipes to work on a gravity system. The more complicated the system and the more machinery there is to it the more trouble it usually gives. I have no evidence at hand which would warrant the statement that the circulating apparatus would reduce the fuel bill to an amount equal to the cost of operating the motor. I have an idea that it would at least come near doing so, however, and I have heard it stated that it would do much better than that. Even if it seems desirable to install the circulating pump I still believe that it would pay to eliminate as many defects in the piping as practicable. The power required to drive the circulating apparatus depends upon the rate of flow desired and the volume of water to be moved, which without having a detailed description of your plant I can not estimate.

L. C. C.

NATURAL GAS.

Will you kindly ask some of your writers if they have used natural gas for fuel? I have a 10-section hot water boiler which I use in heating about 5,000 feet of glass. You will do me a great favor in advising me on this subject. A part of my boiler room is under one of my houses; the rest of it is under the potting shed, which is connected with two houses. Does the odor from natural gas injure plants?

G. P. S.

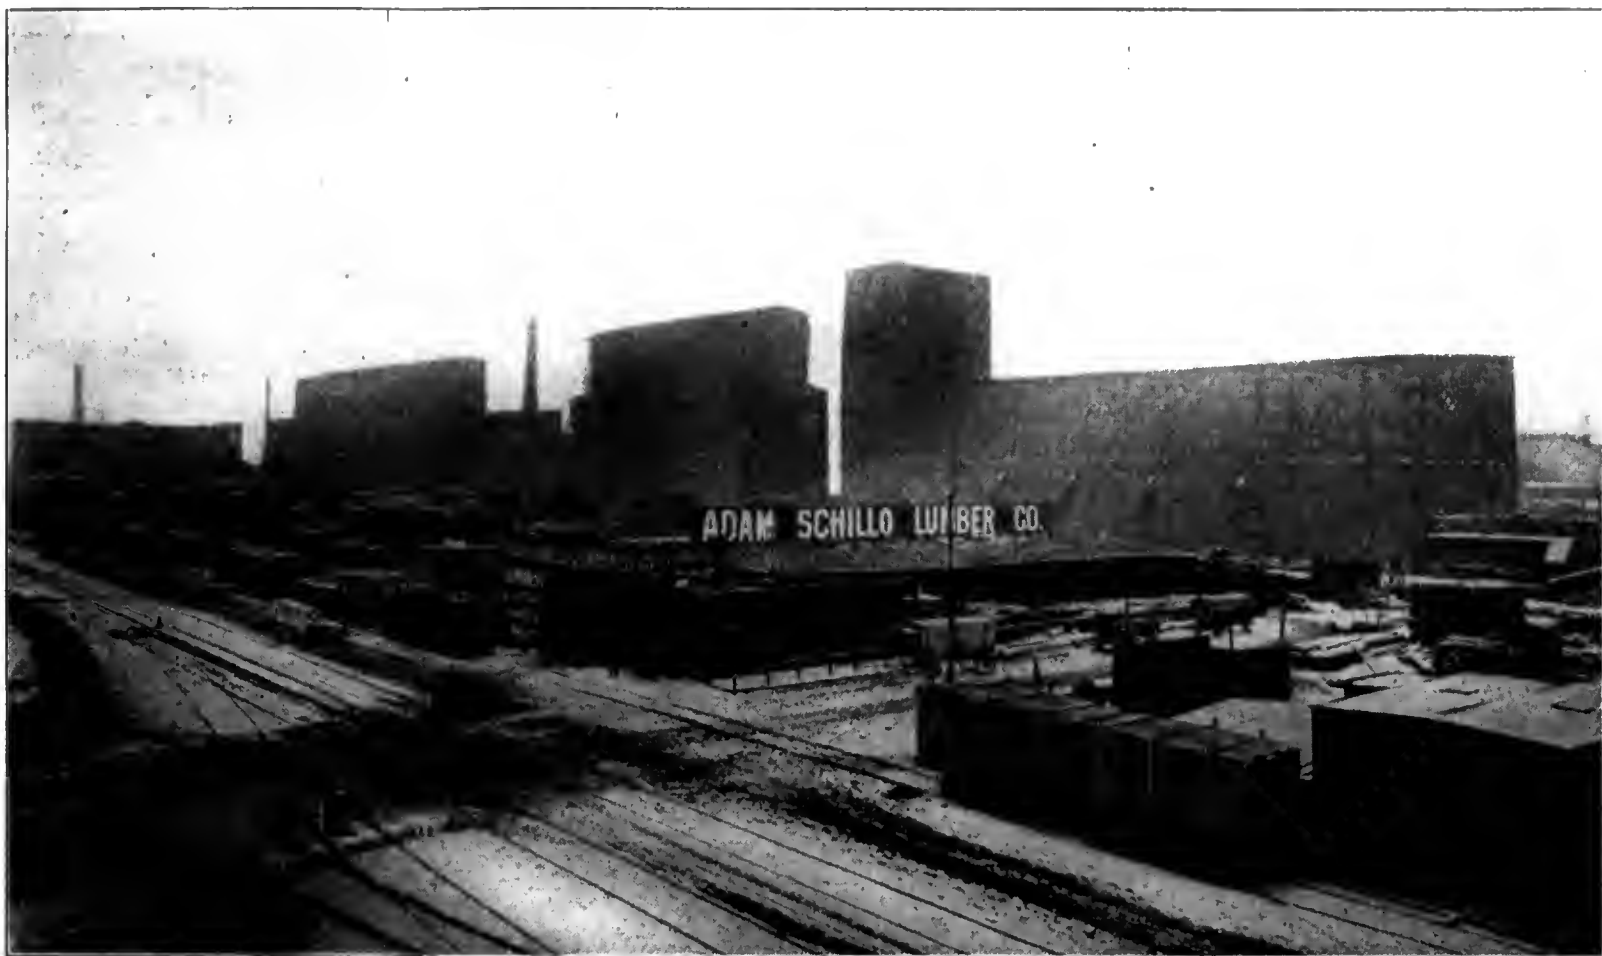

I have had no personal experience in using natural gas with the cast iron sectional boiler under the conditions you mention, but have used it for heating a house with flue in which a direct air intake was provided above the furnace door and the heated air discharged directly in the house. I have also used it under return tubular boilers for generating steam, but in this case the boiler pit was separated from the greenhouses by some distance. If you have good chimneys and use care in turning off and in lighting the gas there will be even less danger of injurious fumes than in the use of coal with a boiler pit arranged as you describe.

L. C. C.

HEATER TOO SMALL.

I have built a coil heater. It consists of nine 2-inch pipes thirteen feet long, manifold at each end, on two trenches thirteen feet long, one two feet wide and one sixteen inches. My grate is 2x3 feet; the pipes are sixteen inches above the grate. The fire travels to the end of the trench two feet wide, returns in the sixteen-inch trench and enters the flue. Over the two-foot trench I have another coil consisting of five 2-inch pipes with a manifold at each end. The draft is good, the flue 8x12 inches. This heater is intended to heat a house 17x100 feet, glass at one end. Side walls are three feet, double boarded, with tar paper lining. I have seven runs of 3-inch pipe, three for flows on one side and four for returns on the other side, all under the benches. The returns are one and one-half feet higher than the flows and have a decline of one and one-half feet. The house runs east and west. The east end is one and one-half feet higher and the pipes, both flow and return, follow this grading. The heater is at the west end. Now, this heater will not do the work. The pipes heat up, but not hot enough; I can get only 40 degrees in zero weather and I thought it ought to be 60 degrees with that number of pipes. Have I too many pipes for the heater or where can the trouble be? The circulation seems slow. Would I increase it by placing one 3-inch flow under the ridge and will one flow be sufficient for six returns. Are not seven 3-inch pipes too much for this size house? G. O. K.

If your pipe heater contains nine 2-inch pipes, thirteen feet long, it has a heating capacity for about 580 square feet of radiation when working under full fire. Your house, however, requires about 650 square feet of radiation. This is equivalent to saying the heater is too small. It should be increased about one-fourth to have sufficient capacity. So far as the piping of the house is concerned this is slightly deficient. There should be 650 square feet and you have provided in the seven 3-inch pipes 639 square feet of heating surface. With a good boiler the pipe in the house ought to do the work. L. C. C.

COST OF PRODUCTION.

A writer on violet culture in an American contemporary has the following passage in his remarks on profits obtained: "In interviewing a number of growers it was the general opinion that it costs about 23 cents per square foot of bed to grow violets."

We call attention to this entirely apart from the subject of the article from which the extract is made, and would like to put the question as to how many nurserymen or growers here would be prepared to answer an inquiry as to what it cost them to grow any particular crop of flowers, plants, etc. It is an axiom so obvious as to scarcely need repetition, that if a man can only tell what his stock costs to grow, he knows at what price he has to sell to make a living profit. If our producers would only go into the matter, we should hear less of "cut throat prices," "ruinous competition," etc. There would naturally still be glutted markets, and other occasions when stuff must be sold below cost of production, but the producer would then know what he was doing and take measures accordingly, and not wait until the bailiffs were in, to find out that he was working on a rotten system.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

THE TREND OF TRADE.

It is interesting to watch the way in which trade moves in certain well defined channels. There are in every large city many sources of supply for most articles of florists' use, but as a rule trade naturally flows to and is practically monopolized by one or two establishments. For instance, there are in Chicago a number of houses dealing in steam fitters' supplies, but the John Davis Co. has practically all the greenhouse business. It is the same way in the matter of bench material, posts and other lumber not supplied by the manufacturers of roof material. There are at Chicago dozens of great lumber yards, but the florists' business practically all goes to one concern, the Adam Schillo Lumber Co., which was established in 1869. Adam Schillo was related by marriage to some of the pioneer growers north of Chicago. His associations were such that he had a personal acquaintance with those who established the great greenhouse and vegetable forcing industry of Cook county. The result was that he had the business of the early greenhouse builders and, as years have passed, the corporation which was organized at his death has been equally favored.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph showing the Schillo establishment. It will be of particular interest to the growers from the fact that, although they have spent thousands of dollars with the company, many of them have never seen the place. Practically all the business is done by mail or telephone, few of the customers taking the trouble to visit the yards. Under the management of John Schillo, who became the head of the company at his father's death, the business has been extended to include car load shipments to florists in widely separated parts of the country. This has been facilitated by the general adoption of Pecky cypress as a bench material. When growers became interested in the enduring qualities of this ill-appearing wood they asked Mr. Schillo to procure small lots of it for trial. The results were so satisfactory that the handling of Pecky cypress for greenhouse benches has become an important specialty with the company. They have in recent seasons not only supplied many thousands of feet to Chicago growers, but have sent many cars to growers throughout the Mississippi valley. They have booked orders for larger quantities than ever for delivery this spring, much of which will be shipped from the Louisiana mills direct to the greenhouses, several cars being booked to go direct to the growers' own sidetracks, for many greenhouses, and practically all the new places, now have track facilities to save the teaming of coal.

Mr. Schillo says that because of the great popularity Pecky cypress has attained for bench material, the mills are steadily advancing the price. It was marketed with difficulty before the greenhouse people took it up.

CALDWELL, KAN.—Mrs. George H. Yantz, proprietor of the Border Queen Greenhouse, has some very good seedling geraniums raised from seed procured from the Templin Co. One in particular is a bright red, with an unusually large truss of flowers carried on stems a foot long. The plants are very floriferous. Mrs. Yantz will work up a stock of this variety.

NOTICE

Because of the new wage scale which the Printers' Union has enforced upon those employers not willing to suffer interruption of their business, especially because of that part of the scale which makes overtime practically prohibitive, it is of first importance that the Review obtain its advertising "copy" earlier.

It is therefore earnestly requested that all advertisers mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday morning, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

LOVELAND, O.—Miss Ida Clark has succeeded to the business of Mrs. C. Franke.

EATON, O.—W. S. Guckain is looking for greenhouses with the idea of going into the florists' business.

ELLIS, MASS.—It is reported that Peter Fisher will himself disseminate the new carnation, Beacon, in 1907 and that a 300-foot house of it will be planted for next season.

TORONTO, ONT.—The executive committee of the Canadian Horticultural Association held a meeting here February 15, during the local club's carnation show, to plan next summer's annual-convention.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

WAUKEGAN, ILL.—Barwell's Agricultural Works is putting up fertilizer in small cans for florists who wish them to give or retail to their trade.

NORTH PLATTE, NEB.—A $15,000 range of greenhouses is to be built here by the Union Pacific Railway Company to supply flowers for its dining cars.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—The annual dinner of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society takes place tonight, Washington's birthday anniversary.

PRINCETON, IND.—W. J. Ritterskamp has placed John D. Cahill, of Muncie, in charge of the florists' department of his business. Miss Ida Vierling is in charge of the store in town.

SCIO, O.—Tony Toerner reports a very strong demand for dormant plants of Egandale canna. The sale for cannas started in pots promises to be very heavy this spring.

SADDLE RIVER, N. J.—J. G. Esler, secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, has returned from a two weeks' trip as far west as Colorado on a tour of inspection of the season's hail losses.

GIRARD, KAN.—Sourdry Bros. Plant Co. will build a range of six Dietsch patent short-roofed greenhouses early in the spring. One house is to be used for cut flowers and the others for plants.

WILMINGTON, DEL.—It is reported locally that H. P. Potter has under consideration an offer of $10,000 for a seedling carnation, a cross of The Queen and Mrs. Lawson, of which he has worked up considerable stock.

LIMA, O.—The incorporators of the Swan Floral Co. are: N. R. Swan, Esther A. Swan, Dora Swan, Georgiana Embry and Otilla Swan. The company will conduct its flower and plant growing establishment upon a much larger scale than formerly.

CHAMBERSBURG, PA.—Fire last week at the establishment of W. B. Reed destroyed the office building and left five of the nine houses unprotected at one end. A temporary protection of canvas was provided and great loss to growing plants thus prevented. The hot-water heating plant was not damaged.

TRENTON, N. J.—Articles of incorporation have been filed here for Hitchings & Co., of Elizabeth, N. J.; licensed to erect greenhouses; capital, $20,000. Incorporators: William S. Miller, Somerville, Mass.; Charles Armitage, Montclair, N. Y.; Frederick Armitage, New York City; Henry C. Griffin, Delos Griffin, Tarrytown, N. Y.

HITCHCOCK, TEX.—Trade is very well in all lines of plants. Grade raising in Galveston has destroyed many gardens that are being replaced, making the purchase of quite a number of flowers as well as shade trees. Cut flowers are always in demand. Cape Jasmine is a favorite; it is field grown with us. Oleanders are in immense quantity. The banana and palm can be seen on every side.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Herman D. Schilling says that he finds the dahlia rapidly growing in favor with the public.

DES MOINES, IA.—Chris Anderson died suddenly February 14 while working in the greenhouse of Charles Bantner on Walnut street.

WICHITA, KAN.—W. E. Bidleman, who has for eighteen years grown lettuce under glass, is planning to enlarge his place and devote part of it to roses and carnations.

W. DE PERE, WIS.—The Burns Boiler Co. has recently been reorganized, with a large increase in capital stock. Facilities are to be enlarged and the business extended.

INDEPENDENCE, IA.—Dr. D. R. Backus has sold his interest in the greenhouses here to his partner, E. M. Bissell, and will locate at Iola, Kan., where he has purchased greenhouses.

MONONGAHELA, PA.—Alfred Engelmann, formerly with I. Shelby Crall Co., who left here to go to Washington, Pa., is now at Joliet, Ill., with the Chicago Carnation Co.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—On the night of February 15 fire destroyed the office and service building protecting the ends of John Burling's two greenhouses, considerable stock being destroyed.

ADRIAN, MICH.—The first edition of Elmer D. Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual being practically exhausted, Mr. Smith is at work on a revised and enlarged edition, for which the price will be increased to 40 cents.

MADISON, PA.—John Lyons died on February 16. He was in apparently good health until within a few minutes of his death. He is survived by a wife and two sons, who will continue the business.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Wm. Scott, foreman on Plant A for Pochlmann Bros. Co. at Morton Grove, Ill., has severed his connection with that firm and has bought a half interest in the retail business of Wm. Cunningham. The new firm commences operations March 1.

CANTON, O.—Charles Brown, of the Brown Floral Company, is preparing to add 25,000 square feet of glass to the present range of 32,000 square feet. Some of the material is now on the ground and will be put up early in the summer. Roses, carnations and chrysanthemums will occupy most of the space.

NEW YORK, N. Y.—It is stated that Lincoln Pierson, of the Burnham-Hitchings-Pierson Co., has severed his connection with that firm and organized the Pierson U-Bar Co., with offices in New York. It would appear that Mr. Pierson's company intends devoting its efforts exclusively to the U-bar construction. For private estates and work of high character the U-bar has won for itself a most enviable reputation and we wish all success to Mr. Pierson and his associates in their new enterprise.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There are few who make other than a thoroughly satisfactory report of the business in the past week. It is undeniable that with a majority of growers production is not so heavy as we might expect it to be in view of the mild temperature and unusual amount of sunshine in the past month. It has not taken an especially heavy demand to keep the market well cleaned up and to maintain prices at an unusually high level for the season.

Beauties are somewhat more abundant but are still good property. Brides have been in better demand than Maids, but both have sold out quickly when of satisfactory quality for the shipping requirements. Low grade Brides and Maids have not sold this week as well as they did in the past fortnight. Uncle John is steadily winning friends. Liberty and Richmond are short of the market requirements.

A few days of especially good weather have brought along the carnations in fine shape, but the demand is so good that it has been necessary for some houses to cut their orders quite severely. The quality of the stock was never better and its ability to travel and then stay awake in the retailers' ice boxes is much improved. The market is overloaded with bulbous material. The receipts of Harrisii have slackened off, but on all other items there has been an increase. Tulips of the better sorts sell well, but there are enough of them for all requirements. Valley is very fine.

Violets did exceptionally well for Valentine's day and have maintained their position in the days which have since passed. Some fine stock is coming from Rhinebeck and there are large receipts of fragrant home-grown singles, which many retailers find are preferred.

E. C. Amling reports that the green goods market is showing increased activity. There is complaint from several sources as to the quality of ferns, arriving shipments and cold storage.

Various Notes.

The funeral of George Wieter, held at St. Henry's church last Thursday morning, was largely attended. Mr. Wieter had lived on High Ridge for more than fifty years and had seen the neighborhood grow from a wilderness to one of the principal greenhouse and market gardening sections of the United States. He was known and liked by practically every man, woman and child in the region. Mr. Wieter was related to the Reinbergs by marriage and one of his two daughters is the wife of John Muno.

The wholesale florists have never had a permanent organization. They propose to have one, and will hold a meeting on Friday for the purpose of adopting by-laws, etc., preparatory to incorporating.

E. F. Winterson, who is manager of the Florists' Club's flower show scheduled for March 8, says that everything indicates the best exhibition the club has ever enjoyed. Out of town exhibitors who cannot personally stage their stock are invited to send exhibits in his care, to 45 Wabash avenue, arriving on the morning of March 8.

The financial columns of the city papers announce the reorganization of the Ravenswood Exchange bank and state that the board of directors has been "strengthened by the addition of the name of Peter Reinberg." In the city council last week Mr. Reinberg voted for high license in spite of the fact that the Columbus Brewing Co., of which he is vice-president, has interests which might have been expected to prompt him to vote the other way.

Weiland & Risch have a new crop of Brides and Maids just on. The Maids show particularly fine color.

L. Coatsworth, of the Bentley-Coatsworth Co., expects to go to New Castle the latter part of this week to superintend building operations.

Bert Budlong was at South Bend a day or two ago to attend a dinner given by Mr. Treanor, of Treanor & Rettic.

Mrs. C. W. McKellar left on Tuesday with a party of friends to attend the Mardi Gras at New Orleans.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has been missing stock from the greenhouses and early Monday morning the night watchman caught the son of a fireman making off with an armful of carnations. Flamingo is giving them very fine flowers at present, but it doesn't follow that it is because of the rarity of good results from this variety that the boy stole them.

L. Baumann, the supply dealer, is quite seriously ill.

Vaughan & Sperry state that it gives them pleasure to report that the week of February 11 to 17 was the best in their history, with the single exception of Christmas week. It was even better than Christmas of 1904.

Carl Thomas, who is engaged in set-

Mr. Hartwick has left H. E. Klunder's since Chas. Klunder has returned from Kansas City and Hot Springs.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett are at Royal Poinciana hotel, Palm Beach, Fla.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, reached home last Thursday from Northampton, Mass., where he had been called by the illness of his father. On Saturday he received a telegram announcing his father's death.

C. L. Washburn is suffering from a severe cold contracted on the evening prior to the Marsman Field funeral. Samuelson required an additional 200 lilies on the funeral order and Mr. Washburn sent a man in from the greenhouses with them. It was necessary to flag a train at an exposed station on the Burlington and it was while waiting for the belated train that Mr. Washburn suffered the chill, from which he has not yet recovered.

George Reinberg's Beauties have felt the sun and are coming in finely. It doubtless is true, as frequently stated, that many growers are cutting less stock this year than usual, but it does not apply to Mr. Reinberg.

Among the recent visitors were: S. B. Wertheimer, the New York ribbon man; J. G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., secretary of the Hail Association; Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; W. H. Gullett, Lincoln, Ill.; Vaclav Bezdek, Wilmette, Ill.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Last week was considered by the wholesale houses as one of the very best of the season, stock of every kind having sold entirely out at excellent prices. While business is excellent, it is not quite so brisk this week; the quantity of flowers coming in town is larger and prices have fallen off a trifle on some items on the list. Fancy Beauties are a shade more plentiful, but the scarcity in good medium and short Beauties continues. The finest Beauties brought a dollar each all last week, a record price for this season. Tea roses are also more plentiful, the demand for red being in excess of other colors. Cattleyas are the only orchids in the market, except a few whites. They are very fine. Carnations are plentiful and of excellent quality. Violets and sweet peas have been a little scarcer since St. Valentine's. Freesia is slowly declining. Bulbous flowers are plentiful. It is thought that fancy tulips and daffodils will average better returns for the growers this season than for several years.

Tasher H. Lorrimer, of Croyden, Pa., is sending exceptionally fine daisies to the Flower Market.

The epidemic of fires continues, but thanks to Wm. J. Muth, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., an early morning greenhouse blaze at Lansdowne was nipped in the bud.

C. W. Ward was essayist at the February meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

H. K. Hicks & Son, of Kennett, sent choice forget-me-nots in quantity to this market last week. W. E. McKissick was able to handle them advantageously.

Geo. K. Kester, of Cardington, will remove his greenhouses to Bucks county this summer.

The Leo Niessen Co. filled an order for 500 special American Beauty roses on Thursday of this week. One hundred orchids also went in this order. This company is very strong on choice cattleyas.

Robert and George Craig have the sympathy of their friends in the loss of their mother. Mrs. Craig died last week in her eighty-eighth year.

Wm. J. Moore has developed a large trade in carnations, sweet peas and bulbous flowers.

Mr. Moore requires additional consignors of good stock to meet the demands of his business.

Miss Florence Harris, famous from the beautiful chrysanthemum that bears her name, was married on St. Valentine's day. In honor of the occasion, her father, Wm. K. ## ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade for the past week was even better than anticipated by the local florists, both retail and wholesale. It was estimated that over 50,000 violets were disposed of on St. Valentine's day, and all other flowers sold well. This day seems to be better each year and may now be counted on as one of the florists' busy days.

Roses of all kinds are in great demand and none of the commission houses is receiving half enough to supply the call. All consignors report off crop. American Beauties are very poor, the bulk of the blooms being deformed. Carnations, too, have been selling pretty clean of late, as this stock is not nearly so plentiful as it has been. Lawson and Enchantress are extra fine, with top price at $4 per hundred. Very few good red carnations are in the market. White is more plentiful than any other color.

California violets have been cleaning up every day the past week. Bulbous stock continues plentiful, with a good demand in all lines and no advance in prices. All green goods are selling well.

Various Notes.

We have had an unusual number of visitors the past week. Among them were A. C. Canfield, Springfield, Ill.; L. A. Barnett, of Reed & Keller, New York; H. A. Jones, making his first trip for Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York; J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, on his way home from the coast; Robert Greenlaw, of Boston, and Jos. Rolker, of New York; Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, and Col. Ringier, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago.

The engagement is announced of John Cannon, of Webster Groves, and Miss Sallie Watson, of Kirkwood. Both young people are well known in the trade.

streets, under the Equitable building. This is considered a choice stand and they should do well.

Bourdet & Roehr, at Vandeventer and Shaw avenue, have some fine blooming plants. They will build four new houses this spring. Jules Bourdet, of this firm, was with the French exhibit during the World's Fair.

George E. Kessler, landscape architect, was one of the principal speakers at a meeting last week of the Civic Improvement League. His talk was on the restoration of Forest park, that portion which is still in the hands of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co.

George & Allan, of Cincinnati, are shipping a fine lot of bulbous stock to this market.

The discussions for the March meeting of the Florists' Club will be by J. F. Ammann, on "The Newer Varieties of Roses," and by James W. Dunford, on "Appliances for Greenhouse Ventilating and Heating." These, with the roses on exhibition, should make an interesting meeting.

Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, was over Saturday buying supplies. He reports that trade is keeping up very good.

John R. Steinecke, of Old Orchard, is sending the finest Enchantress carnations that come to this market.

Hugo Gross' California violets are in great demand at Ellis'. Mr. Gross picks daily from 8,000 to 10,000 of the finest quality.

The florist bowlers were all in poor form last week Tuesday in their match with the Hyde Parks and lost all three games. This week Tuesday they met the Unions. Ellison and Beneke are the

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business has been on the boom for the past week. All kinds of flowers have met with a prompt sale at the regular prices and they are still going at $6 to $10 for roses, $2 to $5 for carnations, .75 to $4 for valley, 75 cents to $1 for violets, $3 to $4 for tulips and daffodils. Sweet peas and pansies are in good demand at $1 to $1.50 per hundred.

Various Notes.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. reports Valentine's day sales as being double that of a year ago and impossible to get enough violets to fill orders.

On Friday all the down-town florists were busy with funeral orders for Mr. Holden, a prominent young business man of this city.

F. W. Griffin has moved into his new store at 5711 Euclid avenue, almost directly across the street from his former place of business, and to say that his move was for the better would be placing it very mild. He has spared no expense to make it one of the finest stores in the city. His large plate glass ice box is certainly a beauty. It is cooled by a new process without the aid of ice, and a temperature of 45 degrees can be maintained at a very small cost. His store lease includes all the electric lights that he cares to install at so small a figure that one can hardly believe it costs him anything for light; he certainly is using a lot of it and to very good advantage. Mr. Griffin caters to the best of Cleveland's trade and he is doing a fine business.

At the last meeting of the Florists' club a vase of the Glendale carnation was on exhibition and was much admired by those present. The club desires to tender thanks to W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Port Wayne, Ind., for their kindness in sending the flowers. February 26 the club will have an exhibition of carnations and any other cut flowers or plants the members or their friends care to show. A good show and a fine time is expected.

It is reported that the Essex Greenhouses will make a change in the management, Messrs. Kennedy and Merri-man retiring and Mr. Tapper, formerly of James Eadie, taking charge. C.

Carnation Show.

The annual carnation show held under the auspices of the Toronto Electoral Districts' Society, the Toronto Horticultural Society and the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association was held in St. George's hall February 15, and was a successful and instructive exhibition. Although the quantity of bloom may not have been as large as former years, the quality was certainly all that could be desired and the number of new varieties of merit testifies to the steady advance of carnation culture. The coveted prize of the show was the Toronto challenge cup for the best vase of carnations in the show. This was won by Aristocrat, shown by the Chicago Carnation Co., which scored eighty-nine points according to the scoring of Wm. Gammage, of London, and A. H. Ewing, of Woodstock, who were the judges. This is the third time the Chicago Carnation Co. has won this cup, and it is now left our shores for keeps, as after three wins it becomes the property of the successful exhibitor. When Mr. Hartshorne wrote that he would be in Toronto with the goods, he, in all probability, did not know how close other growers were on his trail. My Maryland, exhibited by Weber & Sons, of Oakland, Md., Winsor, exhibited by R. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, N. Y., and Alma Ward, exhibited by C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., were close competitors, each scoring eighty-eight points.

Alma Ward is certainly a beautiful white, but was scored down on color on account of having a slight shade of pink running through some of the blooms. This technically throws it out of being a pure white, but commercially it would scarcely be noticeable. My Maryland was scored down on color on practically the same ground. It is not quite as heavy a flower as Alma Ward, but gives the impression it would develop quickly, and thus be a free bloomer. Winsor is a pleasing shade, lighter than Scott, but much darker than Enchantress. It has good stem and good substance, but lost on fragrance. Aristocrat is a very dark pink, but can hardly be said to be a large flower; it has good bloom, good substance and good stem. It is claimed to be a very free bloomer, and the appearance of the flowers would give an experienced carnation grower that impression.

Mr. Pierson also had some new varieties which he exhibited in small lots. Among these was White Enchantress. C. W. Ward also exhibited Elsa Struss and Robert Craig. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., showed Evangeline and Beacon. Other exhibitors were: The Dale Estate, Brampton, carnations; J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, carnations and roses; Wm. Fendley, Brampton, violets; E. Crowhurst, Mimico, carnations; Mantion Bros., W. Jay & Son, and Exhibition park, flowering plants and orchids.

Among the out-of-town visitors were Jas. Hartshorne, of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; E. Lutz and C. W. Ward, Queens, L. I.; Wm. Gammage, London; A. H. Ewing, Woodstock; J. Morgan and F. Foster, Hamilton; E. Dale and

W. Fendley, Brampton; Dr. Roe, of the Georgetown Floral Co., Georgetown.

Various Notes.

Trade during the last two weeks has not been as good as previously, and stock has been coming in a little more plentifully. This may be accounted for by the large quantity of bulb stock now coming in, thus cutting down the demand for more expensive flowers. Violets have been slaughtered to such an extent in the Toronto market that the trade in that line has been practically ruined.

Dunlop's King street store was visited by fire last week and, although the damage was not great, everything was thoroughly smoked up. The fire originated in the cellar; cause is not known.

We are informed that the new firm, Lampert & McArthur, who opened up at 275 Yonge street, has dissolved partnership.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

We have been enjoying a period of very good business. Stock has not been in oversupply except bulbous material, which is, as usual at this season, somewhat too plentiful to bring first-class prices. Beauties are scarce and all other roses in demand. There are large receipts of carnations, but this is the popular flower and sells out quickly.

Valentine's day brought an unexpected increase in business. There was more call for violets than has ever before been experienced for this occasion. Other stock also sold well.

Various Notes.

The numerous friends of Clemens C. Pollworth will be surprised at the announcement of his marriage, at New York, February 17. The bride was Miss Josephine Reinhard Siekert, a Milwaukee girl who has been spending considerable time in New York the past year. Mr. and Mrs. Pollworth are stopping at Washington and Philadelphia on their way home.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club will give a dancing party at the Builders' Club on Saturday evening, February 24. Everyone in the trade is looking forward to a very pleasant evening. The entertainment committee consists of Herman V. Hunkel, Wm. Zimmerman, and Allister Currie.

Holton & Hunkel Co. report the season as an unusually busy one. They say

The Florists' Club will hold a carnation exhibition on Tuesday, February 27, at 3 o'clock, in the commodious establishment of W. F. Kasting. The show will be under the management of Charles F. We have asked most of the good-natured seedling raisers to send in a few flowers of their aspirants to favor, as well as any standard variety of which they are making a specialty, and if we have omitted to write anyone we shall be thankful if they respond, anyway. Send flowers addressed Florists' Club, care W. F. Kasting. We also expect a gentleman from the east who will discuss the divine flower, its many phases and attributes.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The vagaries of the New York climate are remarkable. We have had snow, zero temperature, rain and spring all within the last seven days, and at the beginning of the week it is balmy, building going on as in midsummer, and Easter less than eight weeks away. The retail windows are already beautiful with primroses, acacias, lilacs, snow-balls, camellias, azaleas and forsythia. One cannot feel chilly long while standing in front of these delightful reminders of the fast approaching vernal season.

Now that Mrs. Longworth has departed on her honeymoon, American Beauties and white orchids will "go away back and sit down." The shortness of the supply was marked, and all other first-class rose stock had no difficulty in holding at top quotations.

Old St. Valentine came to life again this year in fine condition and proved that sentimentality is not yet dead in this very practical business center of the earth. There were dinners innumerable. Fine designs appropriate to the day in silk hearts and baskets were in the windows and golden sedan chairs and trunks and fancy concoctions of various kinds added interest to the day and were largely used in the sending of love tokens. Violets seemed to regain their popularity for the occasion, and 75 cents per hundred was willingly paid for the best. A car-load or two was attached to a train headed west from Rhinebeck, with Chicago as its destination, we were informed, and this may account for the sudden spurt, which was soon over; 60 cents was top on Monday except for a few specials.

Bulbous stock is a drug. What will the southern narcissi bring when the native go now at $10 a thousand? It was not very long ago that $4 per hundred was the bottom for good stock of this kind. The day of abnormal values is forever past.

A movement is on foot to close the wholesale houses at 6 o'clock. The majority already favor it. There seems no good reason for the long hours which prevail.

Various Notes.

The annual dinner of the New York Farmers' Club took place this week Tuesday, February 20.

Thursday, February 22, Washington's birthday, will be celebrated by the Dutchess County Horticultural Society at Poughkeepsie, where the annual banquet takes place. This is one of the events of the year. The best local talent, including the city officials, always takes part, and several New Yorkers will be there.

Arthur Merritt has a large stock of wreaths and his storehouse is made artistic by their arrangement. These wreaths are patented and are novel and practical, and they will doubtless be in demand as the season progresses for outdoor decorative purposes.

Joseph Fenrich will move to 110 W. Twenty-eighth street on March 1. The new store is just beyond that of the veteran, J. K. Allen, and in size and convenience is far in advance of Mr. Fenrich's old quarters on West Thirtieth street.

G. T. Schuneman, of Baldwin's, was in the city last week and made his usual display of violets at the American Institute exhibition. He has a sport from Enchantress which he is keeping dark until next season, of rare size and not for sale "even at Aristocrat's figure."

Starke & Klein dissolved partnership on February 14, Mr. Starke continuing the business at the same address.

Wm. H. Gunther celebrated his forty-fifth birthday last week. For twenty-six years he has been in the wholesale flower business. The years sit lightly on him. If he could live as many years as he has sold boxes of violets, Methuselah wouldn't be in it with him.

The Geller Florists' Supply Co. has many novelties for the Easter celebration and reports a rapidly growing business in the new quarters on West Twenty-ninth street.

V. H. Pilat, formerly with the New York Cut Flower Co., as salesman, and now in the growing business on his own account at Ossining, is shipping superb carnations and freesia to George Saltford. The freesia has 30-inch stems. Mr. Saltford calls the supply of yellow tulips a "flood" and values have gone as low as $10 a thousand.

Reed & Keller have some more inventions for the coming Easter. It's a poor week when some convenient and seductive "florists' supply" is not evolved from Mr. Reed's productive brain.

John Miesem, of Elmhurst, has been sending grand azaleas to Charles Millang, just advanced sufficiently for the New York market and of all the popular varieties. Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, is sending his fine stock of Scottii and Boston ferns to the same house and Mr. Millang thinks they are unequalled.

Van Praag has had a unique window decoration at 1207 Broadway during the past week, representing an old-fashioned farm, with lake, house, barn and domestic animals, that kept the crowds interested. Ed. Ladiges is the artist at this establishment.

Thorley had a large decoration at the Royal Palm hotel at Miami, Fla., on February 5 for one of his New York customers. McKenney was in charge, and American Beauties, violets and valley were used profusely, as well as the home-grown orange blossoms. Thorley and Small were under the Beauty market for the last ten days and together used everything they could lay hands on.

J. H. Troy, of the Rosary, is enjoying a trip south.

Julius Roehrs returned from Porto Rico last week and on Thursday took passage on the Savoy for Europe and his annual visit to his foreign shippers. Anton Schultheis is recuperating at Lakewood, N. J., after a serious illness.

The offices of the Pierson U-Bar Co. are in the Metropolitan building, where all facilities are thoroughly up-to-date and in keeping with the reputation and experience of Mr. Pierson, who is a thorough florist in every sense of the word.

The carnation meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York, held at the American Institute February 14, was a most successful affair. There was a large display of new and standard varieties. F. R. Pierson Co. was awarded a silver medal for Winsor and Guttman & Weber received a bronze medal for Victory. Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, was the essayist, but was prevented from being present by the death of his mother, who was in her eighty-eighth year. His paper, which appears elsewhere in this issue, was read by Patrick O'Mara.

The Burnham-Hitchings-Pierson Co. is building six iron frame orchid houses 18x150 for the Julius Roehrs Co., also two large ridge and furrow houses for A. L. Miller, of Jamaica. The company has tripled the oven capacity in the foundry at Irvington. Recently they have perfected the use of trussing in greenhouses, doing away with supporting posts and heavy purlins. They have also introduced a new gutter, a decided innovation, increasing the waterway, decreasing the shade.

Last Sunday evening at Arlington hall John Seligman was married to Miss Rebecca Saltzman, the families and intimate friends attending. His brother, David Seligman, was best man. Congratulatory telegrams came from many in the trade. The honeymoon trip will be enjoyed after Easter.

Mr. Thompson, of Slinn & Thompson, has returned from his four weeks' wedding trip, part of which was spent at his country home near Albany.

Ralph Armstrong, for many years with Siebrecht & Son, has accepted a position with Wadley & Smythe.

The outing committee of the Florists' Club meets at the office of Traendly & Schenck on Friday afternoon.

The National Florists' Board of Trade has added fifty new names to membership since Christmas. The organization is doing very effective work.

NEW ORLEANS.

A few more days to pass and our spring business will open. March is the best month of the year for the sale of plants. After all, this winter has been very mild.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society had its regular monthly meeting last week. The attendance was good. The committee on the Southern Interstate Florists' Association made a good report. Numerous replies to our circular have been received and the prospect for a large support is very good. The reports of the finance committee and of the secretary on the final settlement of the last flower show were so encouraging that a proposition was made at once to prepare another chrysanthemum show for next fall. It will be the main discussion at our next meeting.

The resignation of John Eblen as treasurer of the society was read and a committee appointed to visit him and try to induce him to keep a position which he has so well filled for the last fifteen years.

The result of the monthly exhibit was, in the flowering plants: M. M. de Lapouyade, first prize for begonia; H. Papworth, second for azalea. For the nephrolepis varieties: H. Papworth, first prize with an Elegantissima; Abele Bros., second with the same variety.

James Newsham has just completed a new greenhouse 20x100 feet. It is a substantial structure, most adapted to the south and to the keeping of pot roses, of which he has a great quantity.

J. Bolninke has moved his seed store into the house next to his former stand. He is in the place which was occupied for years by Troshler, the veteran seed merchant of the south. His business is increasing and he says he is well satisfied.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

The condition of trade the past week has varied somewhat from former reports. Stock has been scarce and nearly all dealers have experienced more or less trouble in filling orders. White and red roses have been the hardest to find and the demand for them apparently is heavier than for pink. Yellow roses are also very scarce and an inspection of the different greenhouses will find but few being grown. The supply of carnations has about equalled the demand. Tulips, daffodils and valley have sold very well; in fact, much better than for some time past, on account of the scarcity of roses. Easter lilies are coming in nicely and help out wonderfully for funeral work. Violet sales have been unusually heavy the past week.

The trade for Valentine's day was probably the heaviest ever experienced in this locality. Ordinarily dealers in this section do not expect any great rush and they were all surprised at the heavy demand. Some retailers state that their sales on that day were fully double what they were a year ago. The increase in trade was not only in the Twin Cities, but country orders were heavy.

Minneapolis.

The Whitted Floral Co. reports a big valentine business and an exceptionally heavy demand for single violets. Bulbous stock also sold well. They experience a heavy demand for the Moulton rose.

The Rosary reports a good trade, even if surrounded by Greeks, who sell at almost any price.

Donaldson's Glass Block also reports good sales and one could not but believe that they are doing a large business from the appearance of their place. They seem to be able to keep four clerks going nicely in that department.

The New York Floral Co. is displaying large numbers of carnations and on a fine day succeeds in disposing of them to good advantage.

The weather has been very mild, but not warm enough to permit the street dealers making any great show; trade, therefore, has been confined to the florists, who pay good rents and are justly entitled to the trade.

St. Paul.

The Swanson Floral Co. has some very nice violet plants in fancy baskets. August Swanson was successful in getting some fine novelties early in the season. Their Endicott Arcade store is also very attractive.

L. L. May & Co. have had some very nice show windows of plants in bloom, which sell well during the mild weather. They report the demand for violets the past week the heaviest they have had for some time. The single varieties seem to sell a great deal better than the double. The long distance telephone is being greatly used by their trade in the outside towns.

Holm & Olson are always well stocked, both with flowering plants and cut flowers, and trade is good with them.

FELIX.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business has kept up remarkably well since the new year; in fact, the demand has been away ahead of home production for some months past. The Baltimore Florists' Exchange has been unable to catch up with orders. With its increased number of new shippers and additional new glass put up by old consignors there is still a shortage.

Prospects are good for an increase of roses and carnations, since we are having brighter weather. Prices have kept up well on all good stock. Freesias, callas and yellow tulips are the only flowers carried over, but in a good many cases are bought up when nothing else is in sight. Smilax is scarce and asparagus is coming in only in limited amounts.

Various Notes.

St. Valentine's day is annually becoming more of a feature in the cut flower business. Violets and red roses were in big demand and the retailers' windows were appropriately decorated.

The prize of $10 went to Thomas Patterson for bringing in the largest number of new members to the Gardeners' Club during the past year, thirteen being the lucky number.

Akehurst & Sons and Lehr Bros. are sending in the finest Enchantress of this season.

Albert G. Fiedler & Co. have bought the property at 902 South Charles street which they have occupied for the past six years and intend to rebuild this summer.

Mrs. Stewart, for many years on Pennsylvania avenue, will retire. A. F.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions are very much improved in the market. A general cleaning up and empty ice boxes at the close of business was the rule all last week and prices hardened considerably, especially in the case of carnations. Valentine's day was one of the best on record for florists. Violets and carnations were in heavy demand, while roses and valley were also in demand. American Beauties continue very scarce and few of the best grade are seen. Brides and Maids are a little more plentiful, but sell well, nothing going below $4 per hundred and best quality bringing $2 per dozen. Wellesley is coming of good quality and sells well, as does the ever popular Killarney. Liberty and Richmond are not abundant and sell slightly higher.

Carnations have brought $4 for best stock, some making $5. Nothing has gone below $2 and only poor blooms have sold at the lower prices. Violets are of very fine quality. A fair average price has been 50 cents. Some days as much as 75 cents is made, especially on Princess of Wales, which makes a better price than Campbell. Sweet peas were never seen of finer quality and vary from 50 cents to $1 per hundred. Easter lilies are abundant, as are callas, at $8 to $10 per hundred.

Paper White narcissus is practically done, but plenty of N. poeticus ornatus comes in. Golden Spur, Emperor and Horsfieldii are the leading single yellow daffodils. Princeps does not sell so well. Prices on these and tulips run from $1.50 to $2. There is a good steady call for asparagus and adiantum.

Club Meeting.

There was a magnificent attendance on February 20, 130 being present to hear Robert Cameron speak on his recent trip through Jamaica, Trinidad, and others of the West Indian Islands. Mr. Cameron, being a thorough botanist, as well as a first-class practical gardener, made his address replete with interest from start to finish and well merited the warm applause he received at its close. He had a collection of 200 large photographs with which to illustrate his remarks.

Some discussion took place over the selection of field days, some members saying they would prefer some other day than Saturday. It was announced that the next field day will be held with W. W. Edgar and Peirce Bros., on or about March 31. The membership list was swelled by the addition of twelve new names.

Exhibits were unusually good and included several new carnations not previously seen, from George B. Anderson. Montrose Greenhouses exhibited young rose plants grafted on English Manetti. Barrows & Son's Nephrolepis Whitmanii was awarded a report of superior merit. A shipment of sweet peas from A. C. Zvolanek did not arrive. A committee was appointed to arrange classes in landscape gardening for the younger members and give prizes for assistant gardeners and florists shown at the meetings.

At the March meeting, just preceding the exhibition of the American Rose Society, roses will be the subject, and the speaker will be Alexander Montgomery, Jr. It will undoubtedly prove the banner meeting in the club's history. The annual banquet will be held in April.

Various Notes.

Peirce Bros. are handling quantities of splendid carnations at present. They made a shipment of 10,000 to Providence on February 17.

Some of the finest carnations seen at the Music hall market are coming from George Hemingway, South Sudbury; H. A. Stevens Co., John Barr, D. Carmichael and A. Roper.

McMulkin had a very pleasing yellow window the past week, composed of genistas, Mahernia odorata, tulips and narcissi. He is showing some pretty 5-inch pots of Coelogyne cristata well flowered.

H. T. Capers is handling especially fine Lilium Harrisii at the Music hall market for Wm. T. Walke, of Salem.

William Nicholson has, as usual, a grand lot of white and yellow marguerites this season. Witterstaetter's new carnations, Afterglow and Aristocrat, are fine with him at present.

S. J. Goddard reports heavy sales for

MANCHESTER, MASS.

The annual banquet of the North Shore Horticultural Society was held at the Town hall February 15. Nearly 300 were present, including twenty-five visitors from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of Boston, who came down on one of the morning trains and visited the estates of W. S. Spaulding, W. B. Thomas, Miss A. G. Thayer, R. C. Hooper, Judge W. H. Moore and E. C. Swift before proceeding to the banquet. The hall was tastefully decorated with palms and flowering plants from various private estates.

The banquet was served at 6 p. m. and was in keeping with the previous high quality always given by the society. Afterdinner speeches were made by Rev.

Father Pavers, Rev. E. H. Brewster and J. B. Dow. James Wheeler spoke on behalf of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. J. W. Duncan, as press representative, made one of his usual happy speeches. James Farquhar spoke entertainingly on Porto Rico. James McGregor, president of the local club, presided over the postprandial exercises.

An excellent musical program was interspersed, comprising orchestral selections, readings by Miss Brewster and Messrs. Fish and Peabody, and solos by Mr. Lincoln, Miss C. E. Allen and Miss Gertrude Goldsmith. The floor was cleared for dancing at 10 o'clock, at which time the Boston party were obliged to take a train home after a very delightful outing. W. N. C.

MADISON, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its second meeting of the year February 14. It was really the first so far as business is concerned, as the first was a meeting of a social character.

C. H. Totty's paper on the New Chrysanthemum was the principal event. It was listened to with close attention, and after it was read, Mr. Totty invited discussion and criticism, which were given by Messrs. Herrington, Heeremans and Vince, but it came out unscathed.

It was decided to make the next meeting carnation night. Many of the best novelties will be on hand as well as some vases of standard varieties from our own members; we expect much. Mr. Vince promised a paper on the carnation. Six new members were elected: Harold Vyse, Henry Heeremans, Wm. Inglis, Thomas Stokes, Herbert Entwistle and Lincoln Pierson; more new members, more new ideas and more progress.

It was decided to have the next fall show November 1 and 2, 1906. This will give our boys time enough to get in on the ground floor, and outsiders as well, for we like immigration at that time.

Replanting for Second Crop.

Plants that have been bearing all winter will by this time be pretty well played out. It doesn't pay to keep them hanging on for the sake of ripening the few fruits that may still be hanging on. The better policy is to throw them out and replant in time to get a good crop of the others before the outdoor product from the southern states becomes too plentiful in the market to run the price down. If proper judgment and forethought have been used in the matter, good, strong plants will be ready to fill the place of the others and, now that the days are longer and brighter, it does not take them long to get under way.

If the compost in which they were growing in benches or solid beds is fairly good it won't be necessary to change it for the new crop; but where boxes have been employed, the soil had better be new, as the roots, having been confined into small space, are sure to have taken all the substance out of it so that the plants would be slow to start in it and after they have started, even with feeding, the progress of growth would not be at all satisfactory. In the benches or solid beds, where more soil space has been allowed, the plants ought to do well enough if the soil is well broken up and liberally enriched either with barnyard manure or some good commercial fertilizer. We find bone meal about as good for this purpose as anything we have tried.

From this out there should not be a great deal of trouble with the setting of fruit, as, with bright weather, the pollen matures better and can be depended on to dry out so that by shaking the vines it is distributed in sufficient quantity to insure pollination. Besides, bees and other insects will soon be on the move and will prove helpful agencies in the distribution of the pollen.

Use of Hydrocyanic Acid Gas.

A good deal has been said lately regarding the use of hydrocyanic acid gas in the destruction of the white fly, often so troublesome on tomato plants. But I would just like to say here that we have used nothing else for the last two years and that the more we use it the better we like it. It is surprising how little of the gas will destroy this fly, seeing that it is almost impossible to reach it with anything else. We use it in the proportion of one ounce of cyanide to 2,000 cubic feet of space and find that it does the work perfectly. Only when they once get a foothold it is necessary to apply the gas at least three times, allowing about one week between each application. This catches them as the eggs hatch out. The gas will not destroy the eggs and it takes these about three weeks to hatch out from the time they are laid. We always use the gas in the evening, leaving the house closed all night and by morning it is quite safe to go in the house. We try to reduce the temperature of the house to as near 60 degrees as possible before generating the gas. This reduces the danger of injury to the plants, and we also study to have both the foliage of the plants and the atmosphere of the house dry.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at Toledo, G., June 26-28, 1906.

MONTGOMERY WARD & Co., Chicago, have put in a Brown packeting machine.

W. W. BARNARD, Chicago, returned to business on February 19, for the first time after a month's siege with pneumonia.

THE demand is unusually large for what are termed special stocks of onion, cabbage, cauliflower, and other market gardeners' seeds.

THE Chicago Rose Co., 56 Wabash avenue, Chicago, will put in a full retail stock of vegetable and flower seeds, roses, shrubs, etc.

It is reported that some of the onion set dealers who have been talking low prices and an abundant stock are unable to fill their orders.

Most of the pea growers report that arrangements for the coming year's plantings are well under way. The acreage is likely to be smaller than last year.

THE Minnesota Seed Co., successor to Fred Meier, of Sleepy Eye, has removed to New Ulm, Minn., and erected a warehouse for field seeds. Mr. Meier continues with the company as secretary.

THE onion set growers are reported to be going slow for the coming year. Louisville reports a short supply of home grown seed, and seed from outside does not appeal strongly to the growers there.

SEEDSMEN who handle lily of the valley pips, especially those who share in the constantly increasing demand for retarded stock, will be interested in the letter of E. Neubert, of Wandsbek, Germany, which appears on another page of this issue.

THE Templin Co., Calla, O., has issued an edition of 150,000 catalogues devoted exclusively to collections. There are thirty-two pages, each page carrying an offer of one collection, the whole embracing a wide range of choice. The cover is a lithograph, a sweet pea collection on the front, a pansy collection on the back.

ONE of the press associations dealing in "patent insides" is supplying its customers with a four-column illustrated article on "American Seed Growing" which gives color to the belief that wide and valuable publicity may be gained for horticulture through the press bureau of the National Council of Horticulture. An interesting feature of the article, which evidently had its source in the Department of Agriculture at Washington, is that emphasis is laid on the fact that the free seed distribution is "no scheme of the secretary's but purely a congressional affair" which "should be stopped and the work of supplying the ordinary farm and garden seeds, the results of which are known to everybody, left to the regular seedsmen."

It remains a secret whether sweet corn is long or short. Surpluses were mentioned but nobody has the figures.

FIGURES as to this country's agricultural exports during January are in several ways remarkable. The total value of all such shipments in the seven months since the country's fiscal year began on July 1, surpasses by more than $25,000,000 every precedent. January itself breaks the record for that month, the nearest parallel, January, 1901, coming only within $11,000,000 of last month's figures.

season is a little backward, owing to the fall rains coming rather late. With good, warm spring weather no doubt everything will catch up.

There seems to be about the usual acreage this season, some of the growers adding to their acreage somewhat, but as a whole the increase will not amount to over ten per cent.

The trade has been taught a lesson in placing the contracts early in the season. Last fall the harvest proved short on many items. This was especially true of the onion seed crop. Many of the growers are already contracted for their full acreage as far as onion is concerned, the high prices being hard to resist.

EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.

In 1905 the seedsmen of the United States exported grass and other seeds to the value of $3,347,024, as against $2,257,085 in 1904.

At the same time we imported seeds to the total for 1905 of $4,207,739, as against $3,394,094 for the year 1904.

MORE TROUBLE.

Under date of February 7, but actually mailed on February 10, the Secretary of Agriculture issued Circular No. 15, as follows:

"Seeds of Kentucky bluegrass and of orchard grass have been obtained and tested in accordance with the following paragraph contained in the act of Congress making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture:

The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to obtain in the open market samples of seeds of grass, clover or alfalfa, test the same, and if any such seeds are found to be adulterated or misbranded, or any seeds of Canada bluegrass (Poa compressa) are obtained under any other name than Canada bluegrass or Poa compressa, to publish the results of the tests together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale.

"In carrying out the provisions of this act 251 samples of seed of Kentucky bluegrass and 265 samples of orchard grass were obtained in the open market and examined. Of these, forty-one samples of seed of Kentucky bluegrass European origin and inedible have been held (G. A. 4233) free, but in the present case the assessment was upheld.

CALIFORNIA SEED NOTES.

Up to the middle of February the seed districts of the Santa Clara valley have had about fifteen or sixteen inches of rain. About the same amount has fallen in southern California. While this amount of rain is satisfactory as far as the season is advanced, we must still get several inches more to make a crop. It is the late spring rains that count the most in the making of a big yield.

As far as the present crop is concerned, it is a little early in the season to make any prophecy as to yields. Still, everything looks well. As a whole the were found to be adulterated with seed of Canada bluegrass, while 133 samples of orchard grass seed were found to be adulterated, the seeds most commonly used as adulterants being English ryegrass and meadow fescue, the value of neither being more than one-third or one-half that of orchard grass seed. That the adulteration of orchard grass is very general is evidenced by the fact that samples containing adulterants were obtained from twenty-four states.

"While Canada bluegrass is imported into the United States in quantities varying from 600,000 to 700,000 pounds per annum, it is used only occasionally in this country, and it is evident that the bulk of the seed imported is sold as Kentucky bluegrass.

"In accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress quoted, publication is here made of the names and addresses of the seedsmen who sold the lots found to be adulterated, together with the percentage of adulteration in each lot."

Here follow the names of twenty-three seedsmen from whom adulterated seed of Kentucky bluegrass were obtained, together with the addresses, quantity examined, percentage of Canada bluegrass, and total adulterants. There are also the names and addresses of sixty-nine seedsmen from whom adulterated samples of orchard grass were procured, with the percentage of meadow fescue and ryegrass. The list contains the names of some of the largest and strongest firms in the trade. Of course, as in the case of the previous publication, the excuse will be offered that the seeds were purchased as offered and that responsibility for adulteration really belongs to the earlier hands, but the Secretary aims to render this excuse futile by the following paragraph at the bottom of the list:

"In order that seedsmen, as well as farmers, may avoid the purchase of adulterated seeds, this department will examine and report promptly as to the presence of adulterants in any samples of seeds submitted for that purpose."

THE HOLLAND BULB CROP.

Ten hours of snowstorm is all that we have had in Holland so far this winter, notwithstanding that the new year opened with a keen frost and easterly wind. Mild summer weather has been prevailing nearly all the time of this month, accompanied by a more than ample supply of water and the bulbs in the ground have had nothing in the shape of cold to keep them back. Nearly all the fields have had to be thinned of their winter covering, many sorts of bulbs being already considerably above the ground and if we should have to put up with a good dose of winter weather now, as would not be out of season, there is no saying what the consequence might be, especially for the hyacinth crops, which are more tender than any of the others. It is a matter of grave doubt to have to quote prices on the results of a crop that may turn out just as well a complete failure as a very abundant one.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The weather continues very open and no one need be behind with any kind of outdoor work. The English seed potato trade is showing a little increasing activity, although there appears no prospect of a rise from the abnormally low prices prevailing. Some years or so ago our friends in America considerably relieved the congested state of London ware markets and it would be a good thing if some shipments would now be profitably made to the States. Disease is very rampant in many samples, in spite of the late influx of so-called disease resisting new varieties. It is satisfactory to note that the variety from America, Noroton Beauty, is very free from disease and out of some thirty new sorts grown by the writer Noroton Beauty is one of the very few that is quite untouched by disease or blight of any sort.

There is a scarcity of palm seeds of the leading sorts and prices are high in consequence. This is in a great measure a blessing in disguise, at least to the growers of decorative palms; it will check the extensive growing of palms for the large flower markets. The public taste of late years has been quite sickened of palms, especially the everlasting stock sizes of nice plants in 48's of kentias. The trade can very well stand a year or two of rest from production and would probably after that revive and be once more a profitable line for market growers.

There is much talk and probably quite unnecessary scare regarding the scarcity of Victoria aster seed. The result of high prices has soon made itself felt; the demand has been quite unhinged and prices have come down with a rush. There is reported to have been a certain quantity of last year's crop of seed on hand and this has been placed on the market, but quite apart from this, the Victoria aster is not an article that will at any time stand a very high price. There are plenty other sorts which will always serve the same purpose. B. J.

THE CANNERS' CONVENTION.

Some of the seed firms represented at the canners' convention at Atlantic City last week made fairly good seed displays, of peas, beans and sweet corn.

It has come to be the proper thing for the seedsmen to put up a good front at the canners' convention. A good idea of the way the seed trade is expanding may be gathered from the increasing number of firms who line up at canners' meetings. The following firms were represented at Atlantic City: W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich.; Rogers Bros., Chaumont, N. Y.; J. B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.; Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, Ohio; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.; Cleveland Seed Co., Cape Vincent, N. Y.; N. B. Keeney & Son, Cape

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The trade for cut bulb bloom has improved somewhat, good cut tulips making on an average 6 shillings per dozen bunches of twelve blooms. Tulips can be profitably forced at these figures, provided no extravagant prices are given for the bulbs. Daffodils are holding their prices. Sicily outdoor daffodils and narcissi are arriving in large and daily increasing quantities and are making fairly good prices.

An unusual feature of the markets this year has been Dutch spiraea in varieties in bloom in 5-inch and 6½-inch pots, nice bushy plants. Of course, the plants are from retarded clumps. The line is somewhat of an experiment and I am afraid will not prove a financial success. The spiraea will be an expensive article to retard, taking up, as it does, too much space. The spiraea trade has of late years been so very bad that growers would probably have done better to have given it an absolute rest for a few years. Even at Easter the public is quite sickened of spiraea. Now that we are to have them practically all the year around they will be more than ever tired of them.

Quotations of Liliun Harrisii, Bermuda grown, are somewhat lower this year. I have a quotation before me which is about as low as has been for some years, but if Harrisii are to be grown at all in quantity in this country they will need to be still lower. The retarding of Liliun longiflorum has quite crippled the trade in Harrisii. Longiflorum can now be had in bloom almost all the year round and first-class retarded bulbs can be had at £7 per 1,000 which is very amercant from the prices asked by Bermuda growers for Harrisii. Much, however, is still to be learned to make the retarding process of Liliun longiflorum a certain success, although probable success depends more on the skill with which they are handled by the grower than by the retarding. In my travels lately I saw in the south of London four fine houses of longiflorums growing in 6½-inch and 8-inch pots and they were a perfect lot. The grower informed me the bulbs cost not more than £5 per 1,000. A few days later I came across three houses growing near Manchester which were a total failure. The bulbs were planted out in the greenhouse border and were miserable specimens, not more than eight to ten inches high, with hardly a good bloom and many had quite rotted away. The grower asserted the bulbs cost some £7 per 1,000 and were a magnificent sample when un-

LOBELIAS FROM SEEDS.

Lobelias are so easily raised from seeds, and give such excellent results in the flower garden, that there is really no need to preserve old plants through the winter. A packet of seed will yield hundreds of plants, and so great is the vigor of these seedlings that they should be planted out nine inches apart. Emperor William is one of the best and cheapest lobelias in cultivation, and may be recommended to the grower who wants a good, free-flowering, general utility lobelia.

Seeds should be sown about the middle of January, merely sprinkling them on the surface of a pan of well-drained, sandy soil, and covering with nothing but a square of glass. If the structure is warm and moist, signs of life should be seen in about a fortnight, and the young plants will be ready for pricking off in another three weeks. The glass should be removed when growth commences, and care should be taken not to water the pan through a can, even if rosed. Carefully immerse it in a vessel of water, and allow it to become fairly dry before repeating the operation.

Pricking off is best performed with a pointed stick, and it should be done early, as, however carefully sowing is done, the seedlings are sure to come up too thickly. Well drain a number of pans or boxes, fill them with soil containing plenty of leaf-mold and sand, finishing off with a layer of sand on the surface. In each of the receptacles make the necessary number of holes with a pointed stick, which will ensure the young plants being one and a half or two inches apart. Now lift the seedlings carefully with the stick, and drop into each of the holes made, using the stick to make the soil firm about its roots. Water with a fine-rosed can, and stand the pans or boxes in a warm corner, where they can be shaded should strong sunshine show a desire to get to them.

The spindling growth made by the plants after this need not alarm the grower as it is perfectly natural and will right itself eventually. To assist it in doing this, and to ensure stocky, bushy plants, it is well, when the plants are an inch or so high, to cut them down almost to the soil with a pair of scissors. By deferring this operation until the plants are stronger, the removed tops can be inserted as cuttings and will readily strike and grow.

Flowers should be snipped off as they form, and the pans moved to the coolest part of the house in readiness for transference to a cold frame. They should reach this latter shelter by the first week in May, and be thoroughly hardened off by the end of that month, when they should be planted out. — Gardeners' Magazine.

I COULDN'T get along without the REVIEW, or at least I wouldn't.—E. HUSTON, Sistersville, W. Va.

Galvanized Pipes.

In the REVIEW for February 15 we find an inquiry in regard to using galvanized iron conductor pipe for heating greenhouses. We have a house 17x50 heated with hot water, galvanized iron conductor pipe being used. It has run two years and we have had good results. Our system is simply a flow and return around the house, rising gradually from the boiler to the far end of the house into an expansion tank of the same material; thence back to the boiler. We used iron pipe from the boiler to the straight runs, all elbows and tees made of galvanized iron. Extra care must be taken in soldering.

CHARLES FISHER.

Try a Cat.

I have read with much interest of the troubles related in the last two numbers of the REVIEW by those who have had difficulty in getting rid of rats in their greenhouses. I had quite an experience some years ago. At that time our two carnation houses were literally overrun with the rodents. They almost stripped the carnations of buds, strewn on the benches as if I had sown them there. We tried all sorts of poisons, in every shape and form, but of no avail. The rats got so daring that they would eat the buds of a night only a few feet away from me.

We had been thinking about that old-fashioned remedy, a cat, but could not get one at once, but we finally secured two, with the result that the rats gave up the battle the same night. The cats caught one occasionally, but their presence seemed to keep them away and though, like the poor, we have them always with us, they do no more harm, as we are always provided with a cat.

To keep the cat or cats and get them tame to their new surroundings we give them a little bread and milk for a few days and do not allow them to get out of the houses until they are thoroughly familiar with their new abode. The cat we have now catches quite a few of the pests and always keeps them at a respectful distance. Had it not been that this old-fashioned remedy proved a success I think I should have been somewhere where wits would be at a premium, as I was almost bereft of what little I had in that line.

Dipped in Tar.

I dipped my split white cedar posts in boiling tar, so that every part was covered. The hemlock planks were treated the same way, only that I used an old mop to apply the tar. How many years longer will these posts and planks last in greenhouse use than those that are not painted or tarred at all?

Muslin Waterproof.

R. B., inquiring February 1, may use the following formula which is excellent and keeps the cloth from rotting:

Three pints old pale-colored linseed oil; one ounce sugar of lead (acetate of lead); four ounces white resin. Grind the acetate of lead to a paste with a little of the oil; then add the rest of the oil and resin. Melt in an iron kettle over a gentle fire. Apply with a brush while hot.

IMPERISHABLE CYPRESS.

When Pharaohs ruled in days of yore
Upon the Nile's historic shore,
It was the custom of the land
To build upon the desert's sand
Great pyramids and towering piles
Where, as in some cathedral's aisles,
The death-struck kings, each by himself
Were laid embalmed upon a shelf.

Each mummy had his separate place,
With cerements bound round his face,
While o'er his body a winding sheet
In many coils, wound to his feet;
And for each mummy, thus wound about,
A cypress case was hollowed out.

Three thousand years have passed since then,
Yet there they lie—those mummied men,
The mystic drugs, forced in their veins,
Have well repaid th' embalmer's pains.
Shrunk are the muscles, parched the skin,
But no corruption lies within;
And e'en the cases of cypress wood
Time's ravages have all withstood.

No drugs preserved the cypress case
Or gave the wood th' immortal place
Held by it ever since the flood—
And Noah's ark of shittim wood,
Its every fibre seems to say—
"Cease, Time! I never will decay."
No storms that blow or winds that beat,
Or winter's cold or summer's heat
Can cause the cypress to decay;
It wears, but will not rot away.

NARCISSI AND DAFFODILS.

Narcissi and daffodils have not proven a well paying crop when grown for cut flowers in California for the past few years. It is but a few seasons ago when the wholesaler could easily figure on getting a regulation price for his product and, the demand being usually better than the supply, bulbous stock of all kinds was regarded as one of the best paying ends of the business.

Narcissi of all kinds have made themselves greatly at home here and, the climate seeming to favor their growth, they have multiplied to such a great extent that we now have a superabundance of them. At no time during the present season have the Paper White varieties sold at over 75 cents per hundred stems and at the present writing they can be bought at about $2.50 per thousand in any quantity desired. Daffodils are only a trifle higher in price and at no time during the past few weeks have they been worth more than $2 per hundred; they can be bought now for less than half that figure. They grow luxuriantly here and, with our sudden change into warm weather, they come into blossom in such profusion there is little opportunity to market them at remunerative prices.

Wholesalers who have facilities for forcing the early varieties of daffodils have made fair returns, such sorts as Ard Righ when brought into bloom in the early months of the winter easily netting from $4 to $5 per hundred. Narcissi of the white kinds are not forced here at all, as they have not proven paying investments. Some of the very late daffodils are also money makers for the growers. Emperor has proven to be well adapted for our purpose.

Narcissi for Thanksgiving.

I have spoken principally of bulbs that are allowed to flower naturally with the advent of rainfall and the beginning of warm weather afterwards, but if some care is taken and the land on which the bulbs are growing is not too valuable, it is possible to bring the plants into bloom much earlier than is usually done and this without forcing. This is easier to accomplish with narcissi than with daffodils and if the weather is not too frosty a good cutting can be had at Thanksgiving instead of the middle of February. The bulbs die down with us about the middle of April and are thoroughly dormant by the end of June. At this time, if it is desired to transplant the stock, it can be done with perfect safety provided the bulbs are not allowed to remain exposed too long and thereby become too much dried out. They should be allowed to remain at least two months longer in the ground, to thoroughly mature and given a thorough soaking about the middle of August. The soil can then be spaded deep between the rows and a second watering be given about two weeks later. Keep the ground well worked and give them another thorough soaking not later than four weeks afterward and they will probably require nothing further until the fall rains begin.

In this way a good crop of flowers can be cut for Thanksgiving and at that time when there is usually a dearth of bulbous stock they can be used to advantage and will prove a very remunerative article. They are susceptible to frost if very severe but as we usually are not troubled in this latitude much before the first of December I have found it possible to get good returns from a bed of narcissi that if left to their natural growth and allowed to bloom at the present time did not pay for the trouble of picking them. store windows are gay with thousands of daffodils. Violets are in great profusion and the price of all classes of flowers has made another drop. Narcissi are now at their best and the few days of sunshine have brought in enormous cuttings.

Roses and carnations are in better and larger supply than we have had them this year and the retailers are no longer troubled about getting supplies enough to fill their orders. Valley and longiflorums are offered only in fair quantities and there is only a fair demand for them.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

J. A. GAGE, Beatrice, Neb., has sold his nursery and business to P. L. Bower.

B. E. GAGE, of the Peterson Nursery, Chicago, has returned from a trip to Cuba.

J. H. STARK, of Stark Bros., Louisiana, Mo., is on a trip to the Pacific coast.

CHAS. E. GREENING, Monroe, Mich., president of the Greening Nursery Co., is known locally as "Commodore."

THE Jackson & Perkins Co. states that its sales of Dorothy Perkins rose were over 100,000 plants last season.

RICHARD ROTHE, for several years in charge of a leading private estate at Laverock, Pa., has taken charge of the Mount Desert Nurseries, Northeast Harbor, Me.

THE REVIEW would be glad to receive from nurserymen photographs showing any of the interesting features of their establishments, or photographs of well-grown specimen trees or shrubs.

IN 1905 the value of nursery stock imported into the United States was, as tabulated by the Department of Agriculture under the heading plants, trees, shrubs and vines, $1,574,477 as against $1,501,521 in 1904.

EARLY reports of the damage to fruit buds in western New York are now said to have been exaggerated. The below zero cold of early February, following the 70-degree temperature of late January was naturally looked upon as threatening the safety of the buds.

CANADA has a fruit marks act and the apple growers of western New York believe that export business would be much aided were congress to enact similar legislation for the United States, so that buyers might know from the marks the exact grade of the contents of the package.

THE diversity of state regulations as to the interstate shipment of nursery stock is so great that an inspection law expert is almost a necessity at a nursery doing a large interstate business. The efforts of the National Association of Horticultural Inspectors looking to more uniform regulations have the hearty sympathy of everyone in the trade.

THE increased interest in trees led many city officials to seek to make known the names of trees growing in streets and parks. The United States Forest Service has devised plans by which its co-operation may be secured in correctly identifying the public trees of any community which may care to call upon it. There are two ways in which assistance may be given. Where the work is on a large scale a representative of the service will visit the town and identify the tree by examination on the spot. In most cases, however, identification by correspondence will prove entirely adequate. This will require merely that specimens be sent to the forest service.

SOME of the eastern landscape architects, whose business is now so great as to go beyond the possibilities of personal attention, have solicitors in the Mississippi valley this winter seeking orders for plans.

ONE of the Holland nurserymen encloses a card with the catalogues sent to the American trade requesting a visit and advising that at the railway station will be found a cab to convey them free of charge to the nurseries, an hour's drive away.

ALABAMA NURSERIES.

W. F. Heikes, of the Huntsville Wholesale Nurseries, is president of the Alabama State Horticultural Society. At its recent meeting he took occasion to say a good word for the Alabama nurseries, as follows:

"It should not be overlooked that the supply of trees needed for planting in this state can be procured from nurseries within its borders. The nurseries of Madison county, Alabama, rank with the best and largest in this country and it is probable that more trees are grown in this county than in any other in the United States, not excepting Monroe county, New York, of which Rochester is the county seat. These nurseries, near Huntsville, Alabama, ship hundreds of car loads of trees annually, which are distributed to all parts of the United States.

"The remarkable growth of this industry is largely due to the character of the soil and climate, which are most favorable to the production of vigorous, shapely, well-rooted trees and plants. The marked increase in the number of nurseries throughout the state within the past few years is evidence of the rapidly growing demand for trees and plants, and that the nursery industry is making notable progress, in keeping with the trend of the times."

EMPLOYER AND EMPLOYEE.

The other day the owner of a small range of glass came into the REVIEW office in search of a grower. He said his man was "leaving again" and he needed another right away. He was given the addresses of a couple of unemployed gardeners and as he was leaving he was asked:

"Where did you get that REVIEW sticking out of your pocket?" We knew he was not a subscriber.

"Oh! I picked that up around the market."

"Why don't you give us a dollar and have the paper sent regularly?"

"Not much! I would not have a trade paper around the place."

"What do you mean by that? You do not hesitate to call on the paper when you want help."

"No, but if I had it lying around my place my men would answer all the 'help wanted' advertisements every week and I couldn't keep a grower a fortnight; but I see it somewhere every week—and my men do, too, for every now and then one of them gets a letter from somebody whose 'ad' he has answered. Then I have to come and bother you to find another in a hurry."

This was all the more interesting from the fact that the same morning's mail brought in a letter from a well-known Indiana grower giving a list of eight employees and asking that each be sent the REVIEW for 1906. Just the day before a letter had come from one of the largest and best-known growers in Michigan as follows:

"Here is a list of our section men. We think they are all getting the paper, but if not, please put them all on for 1906 and send us the bill."

And there you have it; one man can never keep, if he can get, a good grower; for the employees of the liberal, progressive, fair-minded men, the seductive want "ad" has no charms. When you want to find the ideal employee, as Pat. O'Mara says, it will be a short hunt if you can spot an ideal employer.

To my way of thinking, by all odds the best paper.—H. L. CLAPP, Ripon, Wis.

HERE is a money order for $2; please send me two copies of the REVIEW after this.—C. T. GUENTHER, Hamburg, N. Y.

HERE is a check for $2 for which please renew our subscription for 1906 and also send the REVIEW to our foreman.—E. D. KAULBACK & SON, Malden, Mass.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Last week was one of the best of the season. Prices are still advancing and the demand shows no abatement. The supply continues to be inadequate. A great many of the roses are of very good quality, but anything in the way of flowers seems to sell. Carnations are good and continue to bring good prices. Beauties are in demand, but are rather scarce. There is a fair supply of violets, which find a ready sale. Some handsome lilacs are shown at Shaeffer's retail store and are the first we have seen so far.

Various Notes.

W. J. Barnes is making an enviable reputation as a decorator. His business in this line is increasing rapidly and it is noticeable that wherever Mr. Barnes puts up a decoration once he always gets the next one. He has had about all the work he could handle this season. He put up the largest decoration of the season last week for one of our leading citizens.

P. H. Rushmore, of the Rushmore Produce Co., at Tulsa, I. T., was here this week purchasing supplies. He conducts a cut flower store in addition to the produce business. He says the business is good in his locality.

W. A. Bastian says he never saw stock so scarce at this season of the year. They have had to turn down many orders on account of not having the stock to fill them. The business activity does not seem to be confined to Kansas City as the consignments received from other places are falling off.

Ed. Ellsworth has a window full of fine araucarias at Geo. M. Kellogg's.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business has been moving along in a satisfactory manner and everyone is in a good humor, consequently. The demand has been general and all kinds of stock had its share. Bulbous stock sold better than at any time so far this year and the price moved up to a very good figure. George & Allan, our big bulb growers, were kept busy day and night and their large plant was kept cleaned as fast as the blooms were ready to cut. Roses have been in heavy demand and the price is stiff. There is some mighty good stock to be had. The wholesale houses are cleaned out as fast as the stock can be unpacked. Carnations are the same as roses, and after the morning rush is over there is none to be had anywhere. Green goods are not very plentiful, and are selling well. Good asparagus is in especially good demand.

We are having bright, warm weather and the frost is nearly all out of the ground. This kind of weather will surely force into bloom a large quantity of blooms of all kinds and I believe we can look for a large supply of stock in a week or so.

Various Notes.

Philip Popp, of Covington, Ky., well known in this city as the grower of fine pot-plants, is receiving the congratulations of his many friends. It is occasioned by the announcement that he will be married shortly to a most estimable young lady, Miss Martha Holler. The date for the wedding has not yet been announced.

B. P. Critchell has been confined to his bed for several weeks. He slipped on the ice and fractured a rib. He is getting along nicely.

J. A. Peterson has also been on the sick list.

There was a large fire in our retail cut flower district the past week. For some time it looked as if there would be a great deal of damage done, but owing to the fast work of the fire department, the danger was averted. Julius Baer was the only one to suffer any damage and that was due to water. The loss was covered by insurance.

Visitors: Chas. Dietrich, of Maysville, Ky., and J. T. Herdigen, of Aurora, Ind. C. J. OHMER.

LENOX, MASS.

The twelfth annual banquet of the Lenox Horticultural Society took place in the society's rooms, Lenox Town hall, Saturday evening, February 17. Seventy-six sat down and partook of an excellent repast, at tables decorated with numerous vases of cut flowers, also some well colored plants of Pandanus Veitchii and aracaenas, and some well flowered plants of cyclamen. After the dinner President Carlquist spoke a few words of welcome to all present and introduced A. H. Wingett as toastmaster. The list of toasts is as follows:

The Horticultural Society, responded to by E. J. Norman, first president of this society, and E. Jenkins, president for 1904.

The Town of Lenox, R. Stanley, chairman of the board of selectmen.

Florists, F. Howard, Pittsfield.

Cottagers, Eustace Jaques.

The Press, W. Harger.

The Ladies, J. Johnson.

Our Toastmaster, called by President Carlquist.

The talent of the members was well represented by A. McConnachie, E. R. Russell, W. Jack and Thos. Page, who amused and entertained the company between the speeches. Letters were read from our judges for the past year who we all regretted were unable to attend. Preceding the dinner a brief business session was held.

The next meeting, March 3, is carnation night. The society respectfully solicits some of the new varieties to be exhibited that night, so that those members who were unable to attend the Carnation Society's meeting in Boston will be able to see their respective merits. Kindly forward same to Geo. Foulsham, secretary, Lenox, Mass., not later than Saturday noon, March 3.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

We have had disagreeable weather the past week. Rain followed by cold weather has been the rule here lately, but I am told there will be no more winter after this month, and then we can look for genuine spring. Valentine's day was a red-letter day in this section, flowers taking the place of valentines, and reports from this section indicate a large business in both plants and cut blooms. Stock is looking well and although there are some large cuts, the demand is more than the supply. Some very fine carnations are being grown in this section, both in east and west, as well as in north and south houses, and with wholly different treatment. First-class stock is being grown with plants kept on the dry side, and first-class stock grown with soil the reverse; one with liquid manure as a fertilizer, the other with the commercial article, so it is hard to tell yet which method will win out. Constant agitation is bringing results and the demand is increasing, not for quantity as formerly, but for quality, regardless of price. What few roses are being grown in this section are better than expected. Some very good stock is grown, but the great majority has proved a failure so far.

Narcissi and bulbous stock on account of the excessive warm weather the past few weeks are pushing too fast and it will be a question whether there will be any for Easter. The same also is true of Harrisii. Callas this year are almost a failure; whether it is the excessive dampness of the atmosphere, or whether the fault lies in the bulbs is hard to determine as yet. Some good valley is being grown and the demand is increasing satisfactorily. There has been so little of what is grown in the north grown here that customers are not familiar with it and it will take some time to convince them that these are good things to grow. Bedding stock is looking fine and the indications are for a good trade in the spring.

Mr. Farley, of Denison, reports good business the past week in funeral work. Mr. Munson, of Denison, had a rush of funeral work last week, there being three funerals of prominent people there, and all the available stock to be had was sold easily.

H. O. Hannah & Son, of Sherman, had a busy time Valentine's day. They sold all the stock on hand early in the day and good prices were realized.

We understand that a new firm will commence to build a range of houses in the spring at McKinney. Who the parties are we cannot say at present but expect to in the next letter.

TOBACCO- "NICO-FUME" LIQUID PAPER

KILLS APHIS, THRIPS, RED SPIDER, ETC.,

For LESS MONEY than any competing articles.

JUST BEAR THIS IN MIND—For, when purchasing

"NICO-FUME" the florist obtains MUCH MORE NICOTINE For his money than he secures from any competing preparations.

IN ADDITION, he obtains the following advantages:

"NICO-FUME" PAPER is stronger per square inch than any other; is packed in special friction-top tins, preventing loss of strength by evaporation; is folded and punched ready for use; is of a special size, furnishing the best distribution of vapor; is of uniform quality.

"NICO-FUME" LIQUID contains NEVER LESS THAN 40 per cent NICOTINE—The best formula for the general florist trade.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The dealers here, both wholesale and retail, have just completed a very trying week. Stock of all kinds has been short and trade has been long. Valentine's day was a wonder and has stirred the cut flower people up to a considerable extent. They are now predicting that in a few years Valentine's day will be competing with Easter, and, instead of paper hearts with silly verses to express the tender feeling in their manly bosoms, the young men will be sending floral valentines in the shape of boxes and baskets of flowers; and they may not be very far wrong, as this custom has been steadily growing and last Wednesday was, in the language of one of the retailers, "A young Christmas." The sale of violets was one of the features and while all of the stores had ordered an extra supply, all were sold out by noon. Among the wholesalers there was but little of anything to be had after noon any day the past week. While it was pleasant for the wholesalers it was trying for the man who had orders and no stock.

Various Notes.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, was in the city attending the wedding of his brother-in-law last Thursday.

Congratulations are due F. H. Westhoff, the carnation grower of DeHaven. It is the first boy and there are four sisters to worship him.

Miss Hoffman, the eldest daughter of Chas. Hoffman, of Alison Park, had her feet frozen while skating during the last blizzard.

Patrick Maier is cutting some very fine bulb stock in the way of tulips.

H. L. Blind & Bros. had the decoration for the Merchants and Manufacturers' Lincoln day banquet at the Hotel Schenley.

L. I. Neff for a few days before Valentine's day had a special window arrangement of floral valentines in the shape of small baskets. The result was a surprise even to Mr. Neff.

Joe Crill, formerly with A. W. Smith, has accepted a position with a firm in Spokane, Wash. Hoo-Hoo.

WASHINGTON.

A Busy Week.

With the sweet perfume of orange blossoms and roses in the air and myriads of Cupid's darts concealed in St. Valentine's boxes of violets, the past week has served to shed a halo of sentiment over business. Of business, the week was full, and for once even the kickers seemed to be happy. Beginning with the birthday of the bride-elect at the White House, for whom many choice and costly gifts of flowers were ordered, on through a great number of social events, with the wedding as a climax, there was a great demand for cut stock of finest quality. It was fortunate that trade and weather conditions were favorable for such a series of events. There was a good supply of everything at reasonable prices.

Though the White House wedding was not a great money-maker for any individual retailer, what with the cut stock furnished the landscape department and the many floral gifts, the aggregate was considerable. The happiness at the White House seemed to pervade the whole city, even to the extent of softening business rivalry, which here, as elsewhere, is keen.

Though not a part of the house decoration, two elegant baskets of flowers were seen in the east room of the White House. One was of American Beauty roses and Boston ferns, the other of rare orchids, orange blossoms and A. Farleyense. The former was a gift to the bride from the Honorable Justices of the United States Supreme court; the latter from the Brazilian ambassador. Both were executed by J. H. Small & Sons.

The attaches of the British legation sent, through George H. Cooke, an elegant offering of Bride and Killarney roses.

Many fine carnations seen in the White House were grown by Mr. Dawson, carnation grower at the United States propagating gardens.

Fred H. Kramer is now showing Queen Beatrice roses with stems that rival American Beauty.

I note with very much regret that in my account last week of the club's carnation show I failed to mention the exhibits of the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., and W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind. The former sent Robert Craig, the latter Glendale, both worthy of special comment.

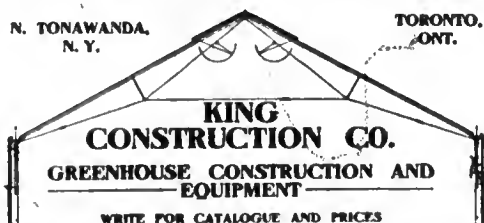

Mr. McClements, of Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg, Pa., was in the city during the week. SCOTTY.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Pierson U Bar Company has been organized to place vigorously before the public the U bar type of greenhouse construction, knowing it to be far in advance of any other construction used for greenhouse purposes.

The originators of the U bar construction, Lincoln Pierson and Paul M. Pierson, are president and secretary-treasurer, Henry S. deForest, sales manager. The identification of these men with this company assures the public that the great reputation of the U bar construction will be fully maintained. The patent rights are owned and solely controlled by this company.

With those anticipating the erection of a greenhouse, we will be pleased to correspond or confer in person.

To our friends we extend a most cordial welcome.

THE REVIEW surely gets there as an advertising medium; when I sent you an advertisement of Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemum stock plants, the orders began coming even before the paper reached me.—W. J. OLDS, Union City, Pa.

Toadstools vs. Mushrooms

Toadstools resemble mushrooms very closely. Experts can easily distinguish the difference between them.

One way to tell is by eating them—but this is rather risky.

It is the same way with greenhouse material—it makes a difference where you get it and the kind you buy.

Better buy your material from those who have experience.

Let us demonstrate to you why it will be to your interest to use our material. If interested write us.

WE LEFT YOU

last week just after warming up thoroughly on the cypress question; you seemed only half convinced, so the only thing to do is to turn the other barrel on you.

Now isn't it after all a pure matter of confidence in a firm? Suppose you buy your material, it comes to you painted; how can you tell what grade that cypress is, if nine-tenths of the men don't know it when not painted? Here is the way we do it: Some parts of a piece may be sap free, these parts we saw out, discard the rest. An average of 20 per cent is thrown out. That's just the reason our materials cost a bit more than the other fellows, for the same reason, it's the reason why they last longer.

Don't make the mistake of putting off ordering; we can't promise against delays if you do.
