Florists' Supplies—A Complete Line

Having such a large line of Cut Flower buyers who have repeatedly asked us to furnish them with Florists' Supplies, we have decided to open up January 1, 1906, a Florists' Supply Department with a complete line of all kinds of Florists' Supplies. This department will be in charge of the most competent and experienced help. Our floor space will be the largest in the west. Our stock will all be new and personally selected by a manager of years of experience in the Florists' Supply business. We will pay cash and sell for cash, thus giving you all the advantages of such transactions. We are confident we can save you money, supply you with new, clean goods, if you will hold your orders for our January opening in the Florists' Supply business.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Pot Roses for Easter.

We are a little late to give hints on H. P. roses for Easter but it is not too late as long as nurserymen can dig. The frosts have well ripened the wood. Unless you have them growing on your own place, the stock procured from our home nurserymen is the best. When received do not do any pruning at the top. Just pot them in 5, 6 or 7-inch, as they may require. Use a heavy loam with a fourth of manure and pot firmly. If the roots are long, straggling or mutilated, shorten them back. When all are potted give them a thorough soaking. Then choose a spot in your garden where surface water will not lie. Spread an inch of hay or straw over the surface. This is only to prevent the pots from sticking to the earth when the time comes to remove the plants to the greenhouse. Lay the first row of plants on the ground with their tops pointing to the end of the bed and quite close together; then lay another row with the tops resting over the pots of the first row, and so on until your space is filled. Then cover with four or five inches of earth, or till pots and roses are entirely covered.

With ordinary weather the whole mass will be sure to freeze, but the freezing and thawing will be so gradual that no harm will be done and when you lift them to begin forcing the wood and eyes will be found sound and plump. The time of Easter will determine when to bring them in. Then it is that the pruning is done. The weak shoots should be cut out entirely and the strong canes down to three or four strong eyes.

It is not our very finest H. P. roses that are best adapted to pot culture. Free-flowering and the characteristic of opening most of the buds at the same time are desired. Do not attempt to force a great variety, but have quantities of the desired sorts. A half dozen most desirable sorts for this purpose are Magna Charta, Ulrich Brunner, Mme.

Gabriel Luizet, Baroness Rothschild, Clio and La France.

Poinsettias.

Just now the small bracts of the poinsettias are assuming color, later to be brilliant scarlet, and it is also just now, or a week or two later, that mealy bug delights to settle down among the true flowers of this showy plant. We have in the past allowed these insects to form such a colony that we had to take down each pot or pan and hose each individual head of bracts. This can be prevented by the compressed air pump with nicotine extract diluted 300 times and give each head a spray. Nicotine or tobacco in any form is not death to a healthy mealy bug but this spray of the solution will go a long way in preventing them settling there.

Early Lilies.

And while you have your little pump at work, and there should be one of these useful implements in every establishment, don't forget your early Bermuda lilies. Many of them are showing their buds above the leaves. If so, they are safe, because fumigation in some form will keep them down, but before the buds show deep down in the cluster of leaves the aphid is at work and frequently does much damage and the nicotine solution will exterminate this pest.

Speaking of lilies, there is always a fine sale for the early lilies, particularly around the holidays. They will, after they once show the buds, stand a severe forcing. We know one establishment where they cut lilies in abundance through November and December, and they subject them to a night temperature of 70 degrees and even 80 degrees without injury.

Azaleas for Christmas.

Soon after received you should have put the azaleas you wanted for Christmas into a strong heat and syringe them daily until the blossoms open. Our experience with the early forcing varieties is limited, but we do not believe there are many varieties that it pays to try. From its ease in forcing and splendid habit, Deutsche Perle is, of course, the queen of them all. Helen Thielman forces fairly. It is a rosy earline. Next to Deutsche Perle in value is Simon Mardner, of fine compact habit and a rich Lawson carnation shade of pink. This variety would outsell Deutsche Perle at Christmas if you could get it in as well flowered.

You will have noticed of late that at Christmas the demand is for deep warm colors. The universal use of the holly and the scarlet berry is accountable for this. Hence the present and growing popularity of the ephemeral poinsettia. The other azaleas that will force, although habit and form of the plant are poor, is Vervaneana, a beautiful mottled pink and white. If you get those four varieties into flower you have enough for Christmas.

Stevia for the Holidays.

A very simple reminder is that if you grow that very cheap but graceful flower, Stevia serrata, or sweet stevia, that you keep it as cool as possible, anything but freezing. This flower is in great demand with us at Christmas and it is then you want it and can make it pay. In a temperature of 50 degrees it will be out and gone before that season. Florists who grow only roses and carnations may look upon it as almost a weed. Not so with our patrons, whose refined taste want it because it takes off the stiffness and formality of our expensive flowers.

Flowering Begonias.

Look out for your young Gloire de Lorraine just now and for two months to come. I allude to those you propagated from leaf or cutting in September and which make your largest plants next fall. Look over them every few days and water those that are really dry. In spite of care a good many will die, but careful watering will prevent too great a loss. I hope you grow Begonia incarnata grandiflora, especially that variety or sport, Sanderiana. This type of begonia is too often a disappointment because it is grown too warm, shady and moist. Give it about 50 degrees at night and all the light you can, with sun and air, and it will soon be profuse with its coral-pink, pendant flowers. A well grown plant of this begonia will outsell the wonderful Lorraine.

Camellias.

I notice in some neighbor's greenhouses, also at home, a few dozen pretty little imported camellias. A little camellia tree would be a novelty with many and very attractive. They are mostly well budded. Now don't try to force them into flower by fire heat; you can't do it. You will only force the buds to drop off. The only time that a camellia will bear any forcing is soon after it has flowered. When the young growth starts you can force that young growth to maturity and it will set its buds early in the spring and consequently flower early the following winter, but you can't force out the buds. Camellias at all times like lots of water.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE EXHIBITIONS

INDIANAPOLIS.

The fifteenth chrysanthemum exhibition took place in Tomlinson hall November 14 to 18, and in every way it was the most successful flower show ever held in this city. The weather was ideal all week, which aided materially in bringing in large crowds, who were well repaid for their time and money. The daily papers also took a great interest in the show and this, with a lot of posters and other advertising aroused great interest among the people, which resulted in a splendid attendance. Vice-President Fairbanks opened the show with a short speech in which he eulogized the florist profession. The hall was decorated more elaborately than ever before, the work of Edward Bertermann, whose equal in this line would be hard to find. The general management of the whole enterprise was excellent, and reflects great credit on John Bertermann, who was general manager, and his son Irwin, who is secretary.

The exhibition itself was simply grand. The quality of the stock was unusually high. In fact growers who attended other shows invariably remarked that this show contained more extra fine stock and less stock that was below par than any show they had seen. Some few feared that on account of other large shows being held at the same time there might be a scarcity of entries, but not only was the large hall well filled, but in some cases even a little crowding had to be done to find room for all. Growers all through this section know that at Indianapolis there is always a good show, good judging, fair treatment and plenty of friendly competition.

One of the most interesting features was the competition between E. G. Hill and Elmer Smith in classes calling for single blooms on short stems—on mossed tables. Other rivals have their battles at their local exhibitions, but these two gladiators in chrysanthemum culture take the whole country for their battle ground and Indianapolis always sees one of their fiercest bouts. This time it was about evenly divided. Smith took first on thirty-six varieties, with Hill second, while Hill took first on twenty-four and on twelve varieties, with Smith second, but neither could be certain of the prize until the judge was through, so close was the competition. Gunnar Teilmann was here to take a hand, too. Mrs. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, and F. Dorner & Sons Co. sent a fine lot of stock and took down their share of prizes. Besides these there were numerous vases of local blooms, all very fine and well worthy of premiums.

In carnations, the quality was very high and the competition strong. No one grower succeeded in sweeping the boards, but every large exhibitor succeeded in taking one or more premiums. Many vases that were set up with confidence had to take back seats when other vases of greater excellence were brought out by other growers. In new varieties, F. Dorner & Sons Co. and R. Witters-taetter took the prizes. Dorner's White Perfection is a grand thing and Witters-taetter's Aristocrat showed up fine. William Weber staged My Maryland, Jessica and a light pink seedling in good shape, but too late for competition. Victory was here in fine condition and won many friends. S. S. Skidelsky showed a vase of Schroeter's rose pink Enchantress and booked many orders for it.

The roses were very fine, especially the Beauties, in which class William Dittman, of New Castle, took first. Richmond was shown in fine shape and attracted much attention, as did also the varieties Joe Hill and Killarney. The two rose tables were well arranged with fine stock.

The single-stemmed chrysanthemum plants were very fine and all premiums were won by a very close margin. Theo. Bock made an excellent judge and very little criticism was heard.

On Thursday night the Indiana State Florists' Society and the Floral Festival Association jointly banqueted the visiting florists and this, too, was a great success. About eighty sat down to the feast. J. D. Carmody was toast-master. Speeches were made by many of our prominent men. We were glad to have our friend Alexander Guttman, from New York, with us, though he declined to make us a speech.

On Saturday, too late for the show, there arrived a box of fine blooms of the new rose, Miss Kate Moulton, from Minneapolis. Those who saw it commented very highly on its appearance.

The awards were as follows, the awards in each class being in the order named:

Specimen plant, white: Vaughan's Seed Store, H. W. Riegan, John Heidenreich.

Specimen plant, yellow: Vaughan, H. W. Riegan, A. Kemper.

OCEANIC, N. J. — The Monmouth County Horticultural Society will give its annual dinner January 4. The exhibition committee has been instructed to prepare a schedule of essays for each meeting in 1906. J. N. Paul was elected a member at the last meeting. The recent exhibition made a profit.

MILWAUKEE.

The exhibition November 15 to 18 was the first show Milwaukee has had in several years, but it is expected it will be an annual feature hereafter. The show was no great financial success, but it is expected that the receipts will nearly cover expenses. Many of the growers who did not exhibit this year have declared their intention to take part in future shows. The general effect of the show was excellent. Messrs. Holton, Pollworth and Hunkel are entitled to congratulations on the success of the affair.

Thursday evening a banquet was given to exhibitors and visiting florists and about sixty covers were laid. Among the out-of-town visitors were Willis N. Rudd, L. Coatsworth, Ed. Winterson, N. J. Wieter, J. C. Vaughan, James Hartshorne, F. Friedly, F. Hineks, E. Buettner, Adam Zender, N. J. Rupp, C. Pruner, Geo. Scott, Adolph and August Poehlmann, A. Lange, P. J. Hauswirth and George Asmus, Chicago; A. E. Mauff, Denver, Colo.; J. E. Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; Victor Nelson, Oshkosh, Wis.; Otto Speidel, Oconomowoc, Wis.; E. Lutz, Joliet, Ill. A souvenir stein was given by the local florists' club to each of those attending the banquet.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth, Mrs. George Asmus, Chicago, and Mrs. T. J. Pereles, Milwaukee, acted as judges on table decorations, and their work was highly satisfactory to all concerned. The judges in the general classes were W. N. Rudd and Emil Buettner, of Chicago, and J. E. Matthewson, of Sheboygan. The awards follow:

Twelve chrysanthemum plants, bushy form, not less than four varieties, F. Praefke, Milwaukee, first; Alex Klokner, Wauwatosa, second. Six plants, white, Alex Klokner, second.

profuse with its coral-pink, pendant flowers. A well grown plant of this begonia will outsell the wonderful Lorraine.

Camellias.

I notice in some neighbor's greenhouses, also at home, a few dozen pretty little imported camellias. A little camellia tree would be a novelty with many and very attractive. They are mostly well budded. Now don't try to force them into flower by fire heat; you can't do it. You will only force the buds to drop off. The only time that a camellia will bear any forcing is soon after it has flowered. When the young growth starts you can force that young growth to maturity and it will set its buds early in the spring and consequently flower early the following winter, but you can't force out the buds. Camellias at all times like lots of water.

THE EXHIBITIONS

INDIANAPOLIS.

The fifteenth chrysanthemum exhibition took place in Tomlinson hall November 14 to 18, and in every way it was the most successful flower show ever held in this city. The weather was ideal all week, which aided materially in bringing in large crowds, who were well repaid for their time and money. The daily papers also took a great interest in the show and this, with a lot of posters and other advertising aroused great interest among the people, which resulted in a splendid attendance. Vice-President Fairbanks opened the show with a short speech in which he eulogized the florist profession. The hall was decorated more elaborately than ever before, the work of Edward Bertermann, whose equal in this line would be hard to find. The general management of the whole enterprise was excellent, and reflects great credit on John Bertermann, who was general manager, and his son Irwin, who is secretary.

The exhibition itself was simply grand. The quality of the stock was unusually high. In fact growers who attended other shows invariably remarked that this show contained more extra fine stock and less stock that was below par than any show they had seen. Some few feared that on account of other large shows being held at the same time there might be a scarcity of entries, but not only was the large hall well filled, but in some cases even a little crowding had to be done to find room for all. Growers all through this section know that at Indianapolis there is always a good show, good judging, fair treatment and plenty of friendly competition.

One of the most interesting features was the competition between E. G. Hill and Elmer Smith in classes calling for single blooms on short stems—on mossed tables. Other rivals have their battles at their local exhibitions, but these two gladiators in chrysanthemum culture take the whole country for their battle ground and Indianapolis always sees one of their fiercest bouts. This time it was about evenly divided. Smith took first on thirty-six varieties, with Hill second, while Hill took first on twenty-four and on twelve varieties, with Smith second, but neither could be certain of the prize until the judge was through, so close was the competition. Gunnar Teilmann was here to take a hand, too. Mrs. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, and F. Dorner & Sons Co. sent a fine lot of stock and took down their share of prizes. Besides these there were numerous vases of local blooms, all very fine and well worthy of premiums.

In carnations, the quality was very high and the competition strong. No one grower succeeded in sweeping the boards, but every large exhibitor succeeded in taking one or more premiums. Many vases that were set up with confidence had to take back seats when other vases of greater excellence were brought out by other growers. In new varieties, F. Dorner & Sons Co. and R. Wittersatter took the prizes. Dorner's White Perfection is a grand thing and Wittersatter's Aristocrat showed up fine. William Weber staged My Maryland, Jessica and a light pink seedling in good shape, but too late for competition. Victory was here in fine condition and won many friends. S. S. Skidelsky showed a vase of Schroeter's rose pink Enchantress and booked many orders for it.

The roses were very fine, especially the Beauties, in which class William Dittman, of New Castle, took first. Richmond was shown in fine shape and attracted much attention, as did also the varieties Joe Hill and Killarney. The two rose tables were well arranged with fine stock.

The single-stemmed chrysanthemum plants were very fine and all premiums were won by a very close margin. Theo. Bock made an excellent judge and very little criticism was heard.

On Thursday night the Indiana State Florists' Society and the Floral Festival Association jointly banqueted the visiting florists and this, too, was a great success. About eighty sat down to the feast. J. D. Carmody was toast-master. Speeches were made by many of our prominent men. We were glad to have our friend Alexander Guttman, from New York, with us, though he declined to make us a speech.

 Table decoration, Wm. Zimmerman, first, with Killarney roses; Peter Kapsalis, second, with orchids, valley and adiantum; F. P. Dilger, third, with white mums.

Among the notable exhibits was the retail booth of William Zimmerman; Victory, from Guttman & Weber, New imental farms, was very instructive to our fruit and vegetable growers, who were present in large numbers.

In the floral sections, the competition was keen and the quality very high. Nearly every class necessitated very close judging. Robert Flowerday, of Detroit, who was judge, was heard to remark that the quality in most classes was such that he would like to award two or three firsts in each class.

One of the principal contests was in the decorated table, with five entries. This was judged by Mrs. Mortimer Clark, wife of the lieutenant-governor, and a party of twelve of the most prominent ladies of the city. Their awards were as follows: The Rosery, first, with a handsomely decorated table of orchids and valley; Dunlop, second, with Liberty roses and valley; J. S. Simmons, third, with Queen roses and violets. The array of cut glass and silverware in this exhibition was certainly a sight, and was loaned by our best jewelers and caterers. The other exhibitors were W. Jay & Son, with a table of American Beauties, and the T. Eaton Co., with the lovers' knot made of violets. This was a nice table but the piece was too large for the table.

The other class in which there was keenest competition was for the standing crescent wreath on a 20-inch frame. J. S. Simmons was first, with a beautiful piece surmounted on a basket base; the base was made of Harrisii lilies and mums, and wreath of valley and roses finished with swainsona with some cattleyas to give it color. The Rosery was second, W. Jay & Son third; and F. Grice, fourth.

The judge for chrysanthemums, cut, plants and groups, was Geo. Robinson, Montreal, and for carnations, roses and made-up work, R. Flowerday, of Detroit.

The principal exhibitors and premium winners in the classes for chrysanthemum and miscellaneous plants were the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., A. McHardy, Allan Gardens, Exhibition Park, W. Jay & Son, Manton Bros., D. H. Fugder and O. B. Osler.

On cut chrysanthemums, the principal exhibitors were Manton Bros., J. Gamme & Son, Dale Estate, J. H. Dunlop, T. McHugh, R. Jennings, Steele-Briggs Co., W. J. Lawrence and R. Cameron.

On roses, J. H. Dunlop was first for ten yellow, white, crimson, new, ten Beauty and twenty-five Beauty, second for ten pink, light pink and any other color; third for best fifty. Dale Estate was first for ten pink, light pink and any other color; second for ten yellow, white, new, ten Beauty and twenty-five Beauty. J. S. Simmons was first for fifty any variety. Other premium winners were W. J. Lawrence, Manton Bros. and The Rosery.

Dale Estate was first for violets, W. Fendly second.

On carnations, J. H. Dunlop was first on white, red, crimson, fancy, introduction of 1905, not yet introduced and fifty arranged for effect; second on light pink and dark pink. Dale Estate was first on light pink, dark pink and fifty open to all; second on white, fancy, and variety not yet introduced. Other second and third premium winners were W. J. Lawrence, Geo. Mills, W. Fendly, J. S. Simmons and Manton Bros.

On presentation basket of mums, the winners were The Rosery, J. H. Dunlop, J. S. Simmons, W. Jay & Son; on presentation basket of other flowers, J. H. Dunlop, J. S. Simmons, W. Jay & Son; on flat basket mums for table decoration, The Rosery, J. H. Dunlop, J. S. Simmons, W. Jay & Son; on hand bouquet, J. H. Dunlop, J. S. Simmons, The Rosery, F. Grice.

KANSAS CITY.

Viewed from any point, the Kansas City show was a great success. The exhibitors were many, the exhibits fine, the attendance large, and, with the exception of the last day, the weather was perfect. Everything went smoothly. For artistic effect and arrangements this show excelled its predecessors. From Wheeler's splendid orchestra, which furnished the music throughout the week, to the Italian villa, with its myriads of electric lights at the north end of the hall, the whole effect was Italian. The ground floor of the building was an artistic arrangement of flower beds and walks. A car-load of southern smilax was used in the decorations. Samuel Murray's first-prize collection of Lorraine begonias occupied a position in the center of the hall, while W. L. Rock's splendid display of ferns on the right of the entrance was the best exhibit of the kind ever seen in this city and attracted much attention. Taken as a whole, the fern display was the best feature of the show, and, according to many of the visitors, excelled the fern displays of any of the other shows held this year. The F. R. Pierson Co. exhibited Nephrolepis elegantissima which received special mention. The Baby Rambler incubator was always the center of an admiring group.

The chrysanthemum sweepstakes went to H. W. Buckbee. The prize was a silver cup, offered by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago.

The awards of the earlier days were published in last week's REVIEW. Here are the final awards:

Twelve Richmond roses, Chas. A. Shaeffer Co., Kansas City, first; Arthur Newell, Kansas City, second; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, third.

Twelve Beauties, Shaeffer Co., first; Mrs. T. A. Mosely, Kansas City, Kan., second; Arthur Newell, third.

Twelve Kaiserln, Mrs. Mosely first; W. J. Barnes, Kansas City, second.

Twelve Brides, Mrs. Mosely, first; Arthur Newell, second.

Twelve Maids, Wm. F. Kasting, first; Mrs. Mosely, second.

Twelve Meteors, Wm. F. Kasting, first; Mrs. Mosely, second.

Twelve Perles, Mrs. Mosely, first; Shaeffer Co., second.

Twelve Liberty, Wm. F. Kasting, first.

Twelve Golden Gate, Shaeffer Co., first; Mrs. Mosely, second.

Twelve Ivory, Mrs. Mosely, first; W. J. Barnes, second.

Twelve Chatenay, Arthur Newell, first; Shaeffer Co., second.

Twelve Perle, Shaeffer Co., first; Mrs. Mosely, second.

Twelve, any other variety, Wm. F. Kasting, first.

Fifty Beauties, Wm. L. Rock, first; Samuel Murray, second; J. A. Budlong, Chicago, third.

Sweepstakes, silver cup offered by H. W. Buckbee, Poehlmann Bros., Chicago.

Five largest roses, Poehlmann Bros., first; Wietor Bros., Chicago, second.

Five varieties, Poehlmann Bros., first; Wietor Bros., second; Wm. F. Kasting, third.

Mantel decoration, Samuel Murray, first; Arthur Newell, second; Shaeffer Co., third.

Wednesday was carnation day. Guttman & Weber, New York, exhibited a vase of their new red Victory. This was the best red on exhibition, and despite its long journey this variety held up fresh and strong after all the others were asleep. W. L. Rock showed carnation plants in pots and took three firsts. On cut carnations the awards were:

Best one hundred carnations, gold medal, won by Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.

Fifty white, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, first, with The Belle; Poehlmann Bros., second, with White Lawson; Chicago Carnation Co., third.

Fifty scarlet, Guttman & Weber, New York, first, on Victory; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., second, on Craig; Poehlmann Bros., third.

Fifty crimson, Wm. L. Rock, first, on Harlowarden.

Fifty light pink, Chicago Carnation Co., first, on Enchantress; J. A. Budlong, second, on Enchantress; Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, third.

Fifty pink, Shaeffer Co., first, on Lawson; Poehlmann Bros., second, on Lawson; Chicago Carnation Co., third.

Fifty variegated, Poehlmann Bros., first; Chicago Carnation Co., second; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., third.

Fifty, Introduction 1905, Poehlmann Bros., first, on Patten; J. A. Budlong, second, on Fiancee; Arthur Newell, third.

Vase of 100, Wm. L. Rock, first; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., second; J. A. Budlong, third.

One hundred seedling, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., first, on Robt. Craig.

Twenty white seedling, Wm. L. Rock, first; J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., second.

Twenty red seedling, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., first; Guttman & Weber, second.

Twenty pink seedling, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., first.

One hundred, any new carnation, Guttman & Weber, first, on Victory; Chicago Carnation Co., second.

Five largest carnations, Poehlmann Bros., first, on Enchantress; Chicago Carnation Co., second.

Five varieties, E. G. Hill Co., first, with Fiancee, Peary, Enchantress, Lady Margaret and Cardinal; Chicago Carnation Co., second; Poehlmann Bros., third.

Table decoration of roses, Samuel Murray, first, with Chatenay; W. L. Rock, second, using Mrs. Marshall Field; Shaeffer Co., third, with Richmond.

Pompon mums, W. L. Rock, first; W. J. Barnes, second; Samuel Murray, third.

The silver cup offered by W. L. Rock for the best vase of roses was awarded to Samuel Murray.

W. L. Rock won the Foley silver cup offered for the best decorated buffet table.

Vase of single chrysanthemums, Wm. L. Rock, first; Miller Carter, second; Samuel Murray, third. Mr. Rock also won the Smelzer cup offered for the oddest mum.

Friday's table decorations, Harriet B. Jewell, first, on a decoration of cattelyas and adiantum; Shaeffer Co., second, using Sunrise roses; Samuel Murray, third.

W. J. Barnes made a fine display of calla lilies on Saturday. The winners Saturday were:

Vase of lilies, W. L. Rock, first; Shaeffer Co., second; Poehlmann Bros., third.

Table of fruit with cut flower decorations, W. L. Rock, first; Samuel Murray, second.

Decoration of violets and valley, Samuel Murray, first; W. L. Rock, second; Western Floral Co., third.

Six plants, pink, F. P. Dilger, Milwaukee, first; F. Praetke, second.
 Six plants, yellow, F. Praetke, first.
 Six plants, red, F. P. Dilger, first.
 Group of chrysanthemum plants for effect, F. P. Dilger, second; Alex. Klokner, third.
 One plant, white, Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, first; F. Praetke, second.
 One yellow, Vaughan, first.
 One pink, Vaughan, second; Alex. Klokner, third.
 Group of palms for effect, Alex. Klokner, first; Holton & Hunkel, Milwaukee, second; C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, third.
 Group of ferns for effect, C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Christ Valen, Milwaukee, second.
 Group of Boston ferns for effect, Holton & Hunkel, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second; Robert Zepnick, Milwaukee, third.
 Decorative group of plants, A. Kellner Co., Milwaukee, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second; Holton & Hunkel, third.
 Specimen fern, Holton & Hunkel, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.
 Twelve cyclamen, E. Welke, Milwaukee, first; Holton & Hunkel, second.
 Twelve geraniums, A. Klokner, second.
 Six begonias, Alexander Klokner, second.
 Six begonias, Alexander Klokner, second.
 Six Gloire de Lorraine, Vaughan, first; Holton & Hunkel, second.
 Twenty-five blooms of one color of chrysanthemums, Holton & Hunkel, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second; Alexander Klokner, third.
 Twelve blooms, twelve varieties, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., first; Otto Speidel, Oconomowoc, second; C. C. Pollworth Co., third.

Twenty-five Richmond, Pochmann Bros. Co., first; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, second.
 One hundred white carnations, Nic Zweifel, North Milwaukee, first; Pochmann Bros., Chicago, second.
 One hundred red, Nic Zweifel, first.
 One hundred dark pink, Pochmann Bros., first; Nic Zweifel, second.
 One hundred light pink, Nic Zweifel, first; Pochmann Bros., second.
 Fifty white, Nic Zweifel, first; Pochmann Bros., second.
 Fifty red, J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., first; Nic Zweifel, second.
 Fifty light pink, Mauke Bros., North Milwaukee, first; Pochmann Bros., second.
 Fifty dark pink, Pochmann Bros., first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.
 One hundred violets, Robert Zepnick, Milwaukee, first; Albert Loedler, Watertown, second.
 Lily of the valley, C. C. Pollworth Co., first; Holton & Hunkel, second.
 Pansies, Robert Zepnick, first.
 Paper Whites, Heitman & Baerman, Milwaukee, first; C. C. Pollworth Co., second.
 Chrysanthemum basket, F. P. Dilger, first; Wm. Zimmerman, second.
 Rose basket, Wm. Zimmerman, first.
 Vase bouquet, Alex. Klokner, first.
 Table decoration, Wm. Zimmerman, first, with Killarney roses; Peter Kapsalis, second, with orchids, valley and adiantum; F. P. Dilger, third, with white mums.
 Among the notable exhibits was the retail booth of William Zimmerman; Victory, from Guttman & Weber, New imental farms, was very instructive to our fruit and vegetable growers, who were present in large numbers.

In the floral sections, the competition was keen and the quality very high. Nearly every class necessitated very close judging. Robert Flowerday, of Detroit, who was judge, was heard to remark that the quality in most classes was such that he would like to award two or three firsts in each class.

One of the principal contests was in the decorated table, with five entries. This was judged by Mrs. Mortimer Clark, wife of the lieutenant-governor, and a party of twelve of the most prominent ladies of the city. Their awards were as follows: The Rosery, first, with a handsomely decorated table of orchids and valley; Dunlop, second, with Liberty roses and valley; J. S. Simmons, third, with Queen roses and violets. The array of cut glass and silverware in this exhibition was certainly a sight, and was loaned by our best jewelers and caterers. The other exhibitors were W. Jay & Son, with a table of American Beauties, and the T. Eaton Co., with the lovers' knot made of violets. This was a nice table but the piece was too large for the table.

The other class in which there was keenest competition was for the standing crescent wreath on a 20-inch frame. J. S. Simmons was first, with a beautiful piece surmounted on a basket base; the base was made of Harrisii lilies and mums, and wreath of valley and roses finished with swainsons with some cattleyas to give it color. The Rosery was second, W. Jay & Son third; and F. Grice, fourth.

The judge for chrysanthemums, cut, plants and groups, was Geo. Robinson, Montreal, and for carnations, roses and made-up work, R. Flowerday, of Detroit.

The principal exhibitors and premium winners in the classes for chrysanthemum and miscellaneous plants were the Steele-Briggs Seed Co., A. McHardy, Allan Gardens, Exhibition Park, W. Jay & Son, Manton Bros., D. H. Engder and O. B. Osler.

On cut chrysanthemums, the principal exhibitors were Manton Bros., J. Gamme & Son, Dale Estate, J. H. Dunlop, T. McHugh, R. Jennings, Steele-Briggs Co., W. J. Lawrence and R. Cameron.

On roses, J. H. Dunlop was first for ten yellow, white, crimson, new, ten Beauty and twenty-five Beauty, second for ten pink, light pink and any other color; third for best fifty. Dale Estate was first for ten pink, light pink and any other color; second for ten yellow, white, new, ten Beauty and twenty-five Beauty. J. S. Simmons was first for fifty any variety. Other premium winners were W. J. Lawrence, Manton Bros. and The Rosery.

TORONTO.

The Ontario Horticultural Association held its second annual exhibition November 11 to 18, in Massey hall, which was without exception the greatest exhibition, from the horticulturist's standpoint, yet held in Canada. The fruit and vegetables were exceptionally fine, and the entries large. This, together with the lectures and exhibits from the exper-

Show Notes.

Director Goodman has proved himself the right man in the right place. Under his direction the show has been brought to a successful conclusion without any of the hard feelings that are sometimes caused.

Thursday and Friday were the big days in point of attendance.

Special credit is due to W. L. Rock, W. J. Barnes and Samuel Murray for the success of the show. These gentlemen have done all in their power to help the show along, and have shown a public spirit that is commendable.

W. J. Barnes received two special prizes, one for a collection of fern dishes and another for six plants of Nephrolepis pectinata.

No record was kept of the visitors, who were many. Chicago was well represented. Otto G. Koenig brought a party of eight from St. Louis Wednesday. Denver also sent quite a delegation, including J. A. Valentine, A. E. Mauff and Emil Glauber. H. A. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan.; R. G. Rue, of St. Joseph, and W. E. Chapin, of Des Moines, also visited the show.

The photographs reproduced in this issue, and many others made for exhibitors, were taken by J. E. Davison, the Kansas City photographer. The large oval showing the crowd on Thursday night is a flashlight. KAY-SEE.

FORGET-ME-NOTS.

Will you please tell us if forget-me-nots will come into bloom satisfactorily if small plants are potted off now and when should they be in flower? What is the proper treatment? S. B.

When we grew this plant, which we did largely once, we planted the small plants on the edge of a carnation bench in September and they began to flower about Christmas, but flowered much more profusely as the season advanced. I am sorry I cannot give the specific name of the one we grew, but it was a good one and gave us long sprays in abundance. They propagated very easily from cuttings and almost any soil suits and a carnation house temperature is about right. W. S.

THE SOLANUM.

Will you kindly tell me when Solanum capsicastrum, or Jerusalem cherry, should be sown to have good plants for Christmas 1907, also regarding the growing of it? E. S. F.

Seeds should be sown in February or March and placed in a temperature of 60 degrees, with bottom heat if possible. As soon as they are large enough; that is, after they get the first pair of character leaves, they should be put into 2-inch pots and kept growing till after the danger of frost is past. They should then be planted out on rather poor soil, which will give a more compact plant than if the soil is rich. Lift and pot before frost and shade lightly for a few days until root action commences. A temperature of 55 degrees at night is usually sufficient to bring them into good condition for the holidays. R.

CYANIDE FOR THRIPS.

Will you kindly inform me what is the trouble with my violets? I send you a sample of the blooms. A great many of them go the same way. The plants are in good condition. Is it for want of feeding? If so, what would you advise giving them? F. P. B.

In reply to this query, I am sorry to say that the sample blooms that were sent were so dry and shriveled when they reached me that it was very hard to tell very much about them, but by the number of black aphids that survived the journey, the probabilities are that they are your principal trouble, if not the only one, as you say the plants are in good condition. This is a very unpleasant state of affairs for any grower to find things in; however, the old saying is that "misery loves company" and by the number of inquiries this fall along the same line you are evidently not alone in having to take strong measures for their immediate destruction.

The formula for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas has been given so many times in these columns that I do not need to repeat it; but, of course, this is what you will have to use, at once and thoroughly, if you are situated so that you can without danger to your help or neighbors. In all probability one fumigation will not be sufficient to entirely eradicate them, and for that reason you will want to follow it up at a few days' interval by one, two or, perhaps, three more fumigations, all depending on how well the aphids have established themselves.

You will find that some growers who use this gas for fumigating will advise setting off small charges the last thing at night and leaving the house closed until morning; while others will say to do the work in the daytime, using heavier charges and leaving the houses closed only twenty or thirty minutes, but as in everything else, I would try both ways thoroughly and follow up the plan that observation told me worked the best for me. Personally, as I said in answer to a query a short time ago, we prefer, after having given both ways trials, to use the gas in the daytime.

The effectiveness of the fumigation depends a great deal on taking a good time for it. You want a day when you have a nice, clear, dry air, and not so cold that you cannot open the houses to their fullest extent when the time is up. It is also better that the plants should not have been watered or sprayed that day, or the day previously, as the plants should be dry, although by this I do not mean that they should be wilted or over-dry, only that they should not have any moisture standing on them. It is also well, if it comes so you can, to have a cloudy day, so as not to have the temperature run up too high while the house is closed.

As the gas is very light and rises rapidly, you will want to see to it that your house is tight, as it takes only a few cracks here and there, a corner broken out of a light in one place and a hole of some sort in another, to render the fumigation quite ineffective.

Another thing that some may think I am over-particular about, is the danger connected with the use of this gas, but under no condition trust anybody who is at all inclined to carelessness to have anything to do with it, for there is no known remedy for it if you get a dose of it, "except the undertaker," as my family physician said one day in speaking of it. If you have any doubt of the rapidity with which it works, do as I did once, leave in the house a cat that you have no further use for where you can see it, yourself standing at a safe distance outside, and to the windward, and see how suddenly she will stop in her perambulations. This one was walking along as naturally as possible and had just raised her foot to step over a low cross iron to a bench, when she stopped in that position and never stirred again, evidently not knowing what struck her and not suffering at all, as it acts on the heart. R. E. SHUPHELT.

used. These long stems can only have a few eyes on their whole length equally ripe, so if we use the eyes at the bottom of the stem and the eyes near the top we cannot expect a uniform period of root formation, as the eyes which have been in the proper condition for propagating purposes will naturally be ready to pot before the others, thus protracting and making the whole bench irregular and running the risk of losing a big percentage of the foliage.

The cuttings should, if possible, have two eyes, and where the joints are close enough to admit of it, three eyes. They should have plenty of room in the bench, so that the leaves do not overlap, as this retards the drying out of the foliage after spraying, which is most essential to the well being of the cutting.

The sand should never be allowed to become dry, as this is certain to cause the leaves to drop and, however well the cuttings may be rooted, such cuttings will never attain that vigor necessary to the best success. Overwatering will produce the same result.

The bench should be shaded during bright weather for the first two weeks, or until the callus has formed, when they can be gradually exposed to the full sunlight.

To have stock ready for benching in May, propagating should be accomplished before the end of December. For June benching, January propagation is early enough. RIBES.

TOO WARM AND DRY.

I have had some trouble with my roses, the edges of the leaves turning the color of those enclosed. Can you tell me what causes this and also a cure for same? O. H.

The trouble with these roses is that

BLIND WOOD.

I notice the advice given by Ribes on page 1493 of your last issue, in a case of excessive amount of blind wood on roses. The complaint suggests two things to my mind: First, the possibility that the plants may have been propagated from blind wood, which is a great disadvantage in flower production; second, that the plants lack vigor, which might be induced by the use of a good dressing of cow manure and a severe pruning of the blind wood. The blind wood has no commercial value and serves vital functions of the plant as well as, and in the place of, profitable bloom-bearing wood. The shock to the plants resulting from a severe pruning in removing blind wood by cutting it back to a strong dormant eye, together with an application of quickly available plant food, preferably in the form of a mulch of fresh cow manure, will I believe, have the desired effect. This treatment has been used by the writer with good results and it is a common practice with fruit growers. What is needed is a flush of vigorous new wood. Food and pruning are the most certain means of securing rank new growth. It will, at least, do no harm to try the plan on a few plants. L. C. CORBETT.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

In selecting wood for the propagation of American Beauties it is wisdom to avoid all those plants the foliage of which is the least bit off color, as they will be almost certain to shed their leaves before forming roots and, even though they do form roots, they are certain to have a poor constitution.

In nearly every Beauty house there will also be found plants showing extra strong growth, but which show an obstinacy in forming flower buds. These should also be avoided, as wood taken from such plants is sure to perpetuate this characteristic to a certain degree.

The most floriferous plants will, of course, not have such a wealth of wood to select from, but an effort should be made to get this class of wood where possible.

Having used this method of selecting wood for many years with good results, I can recommend it with every confidence.

By selecting well ripened, short-jointed wood, there is a possibility of getting a batch of cuttings of the same condition of ripeness, which will naturally make a more uniform root formation in the same period than if the extra long stems are

Show Notes.

Director Goodman has proved himself the right man in the right place. Under his direction the show has been brought to a successful conclusion without any of the hard feelings that are sometimes caused.

Thursday and Friday were the big days in point of attendance.

Special credit is due to W. L. Rock, W. J. Barnes and Samuel Murray for the success of the show. These gentlemen have done all in their power to help the show along, and have shown a public spirit that is commendable.

W. J. Barnes received two special prizes, one for a collection of fern dishes and another for six plants of Nephrolepis pectinata.

No record was kept of the visitors, who were many. Chicago was well represented. Otto G. Koenig brought a party of eight from St. Louis Wednesday. Denver also sent quite a delegation, including J. A. Valentine, A. E. Mauff and Emil Glauber. H. A. Mueller, of Wichita, Kan.; R. G. Rue, of St. Joseph, and W. E. Chapin, of Des Moines, also visited the show.

The photographs reproduced in this issue, and many others made for exhibitors, were taken by J. E. Davison, the Kansas City photographer. The large oval showing the crowd on Thursday night is a flashlight. KAY SER.

FORGET-ME-NOTS.

Will you please tell us if forget-me-nots will come into bloom satisfactorily if small plants are potted off now and when should they be in flower? What is the proper treatment? S. B.

When we grew this plant, which we did largely once, we planted the small plants on the edge of a carnation bench in September and they began to flower about Christmas, but flowered much more profusely as the season advanced. I am sorry I cannot give the specific name of the one we grew, but it was a good one and gave us long sprays in abundance. They propagated very easily from cuttings and almost any soil suits and a carnation house temperature is about right. W. S.

THE SOLANUM.

Will you kindly tell me when Solanum capsicastrum, or Jerusalem cherry, should be sown to have good plants for Christmas 1907, also regarding the growing of it? E. S. F.

Seeds should be sown in February or March and placed in a temperature of 60 degrees, with bottom heat if possible. As soon as they are large enough; that is, after they get the first pair of character leaves, they should be put into 2-inch pots and kept growing till after the danger of frost is past. They should then be planted out on rather poor soil, which will give a more compact plant than if the soil is rich. Lift and pot before frost and shade lightly for a few days until root action commences. A temperature of 55 degrees at night is usually sufficient to bring them into good condition for the holidays. R.

CYANIDE FOR THRIPS.

Will you kindly inform me what is the trouble with my violets? I send you a sample of the blooms. A great many of them go the same way. The plants are in good condition. Is it for want of feeding? If so, what would you advise giving them? F. P. B.

In reply to this query, I am sorry to say that the sample blooms that were sent were so dry and shriveled when they reached me that it was very hard to tell very much about them, but by the number of black aphids that survived the journey, the probabilities are that they are your principal trouble, if not the only one, as you say the plants are in good condition. This is a very unpleasant state of affairs for any grower to find things in; however, the old saying is that "misery loves company" and by the number of inquiries this fall along the same line you are evidently not alone in having to take strong measures for their immediate destruction.

The formula for fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas has been given so many times in these columns that I do not need to repeat it; but, of course, this is what you will have to use, at once and thoroughly, if you are situated so that you can without danger to your help or neighbors. In all probability one fumigation will not be sufficient to entirely eradicate them, and for that reason you will want to follow it up at a few days' interval by one, two or, perhaps, three more fumigations, all depending on how well the aphids have established themselves.

You will find that some growers who use this gas for fumigating will advise setting off small charges the last thing at night and leaving the house closed until morning; while others will say to do the work in the daytime, using heavier charges and leaving the houses closed only twenty or thirty minutes, but as in everything else, I would try both ways thoroughly and follow up the plan that observation told me worked the best for me. Personally as I said in answer to a query a short time ago, we prefer, after having given both ways trials, to use the gas in the daytime.

The effectiveness of the fumigation depends a great deal on taking a good time for it. You want a day when you have a nice, clear, dry air, and not so cold that you cannot open the houses to their fullest extent when the time is up. It is also better that the plants should not have been watered or sprayed that day, or the day previously, as the plants should be dry, although by this I do not mean that they should be wilted or over-dry, only that they should not have any moisture standing on them. It is also well, if it comes so you can, to have a cloudy day, so as not to have the temperature run up too high while the house is closed.

As the gas is very light and rises rapidly, you will want to see to it that your house is tight, as it takes only a few cracks here and there, a corner broken out of a light in one place and a hole of

Another thing that some may think I am over-particular about, is the danger connected with the use of this gas, but under no condition trust anybody who is at all inclined to carelessness to have anything to do with it, for there is no known remedy for it if you get a dose of it, "except the undertaker," as my family physician said one day in speaking of it. If you have any doubt of the rapidity with which it works, do as I did once, leave in the house a cat that you have no further use for where you can see it, yourself standing at a safe distance outside, and to the windward, and see how suddenly she will stop in her perambulations. This one was walking along as naturally as possible and had just raised her foot to step over a low cross iron to a bench, when she stopped in that position and never stirred again, evidently not knowing what struck her and not suffering at all, as it acts on the heart. R. E. SUMNER.

BLIND WOOD.

I notice the advice given by Ribes on page 1493 of your last issue, in a case of excessive amount of blind wood on roses. The complaint suggests two things to my mind: First, the possibility that the plants may have been propagated from blind wood, which is a great disadvantage in flower production; second, that the plants lack vigor, which might be induced by the use of a good dressing of cow manure and a severe pruning of the blind wood. The blind wood has no commercial value and serves vital functions of the plant as well as, and in the place of, profitable bloom-bearing wood. The shock to the plants resulting from a severe pruning in removing blind wood by cutting it back to a strong dormant eye, together with an application of quickly available plant food, preferably in the form of a mulch of fresh cow manure, will I believe, have the desired effect. This treatment has been used by the writer with good results and it is a common practice with fruit growers. What is needed is a flush of vigorous new wood. Food and pruning are the most certain means of securing rank new growth. It will, at least, do no harm to try the plan on a few plants. L. C. CORBETT.

AMERICAN BEAUTIES.

In selecting wood for the propagation of American Beauties it is wisdom to avoid all those plants the foliage of which is the least bit off color, as they will be almost certain to shed their leaves before forming roots and, even though they do form roots, they are certain to have a poor constitution.

In nearly every Beauty house there will also be found plants showing extra strong growth, but which show an obstinacy in forming flower buds. These should also be avoided, as wood taken from such plants is sure to perpetuate this characteristic to a certain degree.

used. These long stems can only have a few eyes on their whole length equally ripe, so if we use the eyes at the bottom of the stem and the eyes near the top we cannot expect a uniform period of root formation, as the eyes which have been in the proper condition for propagating purposes will naturally be ready to put before the others, thus protracting and making the whole bench irregular and running the risk of losing a big percentage of the foliage.

The cuttings should, if possible, have two eyes, and where the joints are close enough to admit of it, three eyes. They should have plenty of room in the bench, so that the leaves do not overlap, as this retards the drying out of the foliage after spraying, which is most essential to the well being of the cutting.

The sand should never be allowed to become dry, as this is certain to cause the leaves to drop and, however well the cuttings may be rooted, such cuttings will never attain that vigor necessary to the best success. Overwatering will produce the same result.

The bench should be shaded during bright weather for the first two weeks, or until the callus has formed, when they can be gradually exposed to the full sunlight.

To have stock ready for benching in May, propagating should be accomplished before the end of December. For June benching, January propagation is early enough. RIBES.

TOO WARM AND DRY.

I have had some trouble with my roses, the edges of the leaves turning the color of those enclosed. Can you tell me what causes this and also a cure for same? O. H.

The trouble with these roses is that they have been grown in too high a temperature and with an insufficiency of ventilation at night. The scalding of the leaves is the result of the high and dry temperature, which forces the foliage to give off moisture more rapidly than the roots can supply it.

Reduce the night temperature to 56 degrees and keep the air sweet by adequate ventilation; also keep the paths wet to help maintain a moist atmosphere.

I also find evidence of the presence of red spider. By keeping the syringe going this may easily be overcome, and the very fact of using water in this manner will charge the atmosphere with a sufficiency of moisture to keep the foliage in good condition. The most of these leaves are so far enfeebled that they are of little use to the plant, and the main object should be to take care of the young foliage as it develops. RIBES.

A NEW ILLINOIS PLANT.

The accompanying illustration gives an idea of the character of the new establishment of W. B. Davis & Co., at Aurora, Ill. There are seven houses 27x200 feet. The gutters are seven feet from the ground. An interesting feature is that hollow bricks were used for the walls, set in concrete foundations. The boiler house is 40x65 feet, in addition to which there is a frame building for the office and packing shed. Two large

SUPPORTING FREESIAS.

We have 60,000 freesias growing in flats four inches deep. Would it be good to top-dress them with sheep manure? They lop down quite some. Will it hurt them? If so, how can I tie them up? A. R.

The freesias should be supported by some arrangement so that they can continue growing without falling over. I frequently see an arrangement of poultry netting supported some four or five inches above the bed, and this seems to meet the requirement. The mulching of sheep manure should be diluted with three times its bulk of soil before being applied, as the soil will absorb and retain the released gases for future use. R.

TOBACCO EXTRACT.

Would like to know if tobacco extract, taken from tobacco stems, steamed through the houses will have the same effect in killing insects as smoking has. Tobacco stems do not cost us anything and I thought of taking a pan and letting the steam pipe run through it so that when filled with juice it would steam through the house. W. A. S.

Evaporating tobacco or some nicotine extract was very much in vogue some ten years ago, especially in rose houses, where tobacco smoke is an undoubted injury. The objection to that method was that the moisture made the growth soft. The usual plan was a jet of steam into an iron vessel filled with a bushel of chopped tobacco stems. Another plan was to have small tin troughs made to fit on 1¼-inch steam pipes and keep them filled with tobacco, which would be continually evaporating. You can run a steam pipe through your tobacco liquid and it will do all that smoke will do and will be less hurtful to many plants. W. S.

EFFECT OF FROST.

Would frost damage a range of greenhouses consisting of four houses each 14x70, built on the Dietsch short-roof plan? The houses have 7-foot walls and 1½-inch supporting posts. The posts are well set in concrete. The houses have no partition walls. The temperature seldom falls to 20 degrees below zero. These houses will be entirely completed by January 1. The owner does not wish to plant until next spring, and does not wish to heat these houses. Will the frost raise the concrete posts enough to crack the glass and do other damage to the houses? L. A. R.

It depends a good deal on the character of the foundation or subsoil whether the frost will affect the walls. If the subsoil is of a gravelly nature the frost will have little or no effect upon it. I think you will be safe enough to go ahead and get the house ready, so as to be ready for spring. The writer has had houses under his care in Canada where the thermometer would run to 46 degrees below zero and these houses have for years withstood the frost without heaving and without being heated. It might, however, be advisable to spread some litter or leaves along the walls as a protection. R.

RED TUBEROSE.

I mail under separate cover a red tuberosc. This is one of three produced from the same bulb and, although this one is not so perfect or so large as the former ones, it may answer to show you the freak. steam boilers are employed for heating, with a brick chimney ninety feet high. They have a switch running past the boiler shed and the ends of the houses, which greatly cheapens the handling of coal and fertilizer.

An idea of the celerity with which this plant was put up may be gained from the fact that the photograph was taken on November 8, just nine weeks from the day work was begun.

all striped or mostly solid red. Can you explain the freak and do you know of any similar cases? S. B. S.

The specimen flower arrived in fair condition. The color appeared to be a deep red, almost a crimson. It is doubtful whether there is a great future for colored tuberoses. White is its color, as blue is for violets. I do not know that anyone can account for these variations in color in flowers, sports or bud variations as the great Darwin called them, but they have given us some of the most valuable of our florists' flowers. Possibly soil has more influence than any other. Now that you have such a radical change of color in this favorite flower, it is more than likely you will get further variation and if you could get a pure pink it would be a valuable novelty. W. S.

DISEASED PLANTS.

Will you please state what is the matter with the plants I send? The trouble began about two or three years ago, with cinerarias, then spread to geraniums, gloxinias, fuchsias, etc. The plants sent show the disease better than I could describe it. I have tried Bordeaux mixture, etc., to no avail. The disease always begins with young seedlings or cuttings. If there is a remedy please indicate it. B. B.

When the specimens arrived they were too much dried up to distinguish any particular disease. From the description this seems a very bad case and, what is strange, it spreads over such a variety. If it was one kind of plant and we knew its treatment we might find a cause. As it is we should advise your getting the nearest good gardener to examine your condition and if there was nothing visibly wrong then you should have your soil and water analyzed. W. S.

STONE WALLS.

We are contemplating using stone for the walls of greenhouses to be built next year and we would like some advice from some one in regard to their desirability. We have asked some of the greenhouse builders, but they are more interested in selling posts, etc. We thought possibly you might think it worth while to discuss that matter in your letters in the REVIEW. What we would like is an opinion on whether stone walls are desirable and how thick they need be. Also how the roof would best be placed upon them. Z. K. J.

I can say little on the subject and must state at the start that those horticultural builders who talked posts and boards were not so far wrong, because good Tennessee red cedar posts and cypress boards as sheathing will last through your natural life, unless you belong to the Methuselah family. Twenty-five years ago, when we first started to build, we began nobly, with more ambition than dollars. We dug a trench three feet deep and built an 18-inch stone wall which came six inches above the grade of the surrounding surface. On to the wall we anchored a 2x12 pine sill and from that nailed on our studding, or posts. All water or moisture trickled down onto the pine plate, which in five years was thoroughly rotten. The only redeeming feature in this wasted money was the fact that two feet six inches of this wall, or foundation, was laid up dry. No mortar was used between the stones and it was the means of acting as a good drain, always keeping the surface of the greenhouse dry; otherwise it was several hundred dollars buried.

Ours is a neighborhood of many flint and limestone quarries. All the basements of our dwellings are built of limestone and I can say from the authority of practical masons that eighteen inches in thickness is the least you can build. If you have stone at a very trifling cost there is no reason why you should not use it for an exterior wall, and let the first two feet in the foundation be laid up dry. When you finish off at the top of the wall you will, of course, anchor on a plate beveled both ways to throw the water in or out and from that your roof springs. A 12-inch brick or 8-inch cement wall may look neater, but if to you the stone is cheaper, then use it. I cannot think of any reason why not. W. S.

SOOT AS FERTILIZER.

What properties has coal soot that make it useful as a fertilizer? What effect does it have on the plants? What quantities is it safe to use? N. G.

Soot from bituminous coal is frequently used by gardeners on outside crops and also by florists on greenhouse crops with good results. The analysis shows that in 1000 parts it contains: Charcoal, 371; salts of ammonia, 426; salts of potassium and soda, 24; oxide of iron, 50; silica, 31; sulphate of lime, 31; carbonate of magnesia, 2.

The fertilizing effect of a top-dressing of soot is very decided and seems in a great degree to be due to the presence of sulphate and chloride of ammonium. To get the best results as a top-dressing it should be diluted with twice its bulk of good fresh soil and put on the bench very thinly, about one bushel to each 500 square feet of surface.

in liquid feeding, if mixed with soft or rain water in the proportion of one quart of soot to each barrel of water, but this should never be applied when the plants are resting. R.

SWEET PEAS.

How would sweet peas do in a rose house, planted in a solid bed in a light, sunny position? Blooms wanted from November on. What are the best winter blooming varieties in white, purple, light and deep pink? S. K.

Sweet peas to bloom during the winter should be sown not later than September; in fact, just as soon as well-ripened seed can be procured. The soil should be of rather a light, sandy nature, as heavy, rich soil has a tendency to produce too much strong straw, which of course makes the buds late in coming. While these may be made to give fair results in a rose temperature, I have found a night temperature during the period of growing of 54 degrees to be more suitable.

Most of the growers who make sweet peas a part of their crop have their favorite strains, which they have found from experience are best suited to their soil and conditions and which they keep improving from year to year by careful fertilization and selection. Some of the best forcing varieties will be found in the following list, but doubtless there are many other suitable sorts to be found in any seed catalogue: Extra Early Blanche Ferry, pink and white; Emily Henderson, white; Blanche Burpee, pure white; Captain of the Blues; Apple Blossom, pink; Kathrine Tracy, bright pink. R.

every weed has been pulled out and the benches made of an even surface.

As to dead leaves at the base of the plant, I claim there should be none on a plant now, if the plants were properly cleaned up at the time of lifting from the field. But if there should be some dead foliage on the plants now, I do not believe in trusting its removal to any other than a very careful hand, as the covering or skin of the stem is very easily torn, thus making the plant much more susceptible to stem-rot.

If the plants are in a good, healthy condition and the white roots showing near the surface, a little stimulant in the form of a very light mulch composed of one-third or one-half well rotted cow manure and one-half soil may be spread over the surface to the depth of half an inch. A light application of wood ashes will help the stems but too strong a dose will result in a great variation of color, especially on Lawson and the red varieties.

It goes without saying that we cannot all grow prize winning carnations, or compete in the production of fine stock with the large growers who make a specialty of carnations, but a great many of us can do better than we do, by keeping everything in good order, both on the benches and underneath them. I have in mind a fair grower of mixed stock whose houses I visited some days ago, whose carnations were not yet supported, and the surface of the soil was covered by a green carpet composed of weeds, grass and green scum. The owner said he would soon get time to clean up! And yet he wonders why his stock does not sell as readily as that of some of his neighbors. Time was when "any old thing" passed as a good carnation, but that was many, many years ago, and now only those who are willing to give the necessary care and attention can hope to be rewarded with a large crop of fine blooms. Nor should he expect it without, for then he would be getting something for nothing and of course his conscience would trouble him if that were the case. RAG.

Fumigation.

The work of fumigation is no longer the disagreeable job it was some years ago, when the burning of damp tobacco stems seemed the universal remedy for green fly. At that time it was considered soon enough to smoke when the pest had staked out and nearly proven its claim, making the operation the more tedious, since two or three successive fumigations were necessary to accomplish the desired result.

At present we have the leaf in several degrees of fineness and under various brands; also numerous "eides" or "teens," all products of tobacco, so-called, though the latter I am inclined to think come from other sources than the fragrant weed. But no matter; they all do the work, and effectually, without harm to plant or flower, at a great saving of time and labor.

Of course they must be properly handled, which is a matter upon which I will touch. There is no reason why fumigation should not form a part of the routine work, as well as attention to boilers, though it need not be a daily duty but, instead, a weekly one.

By following the plan of light applications at regular intervals you run no risk of damage to stock; the insects never obtain a foothold. Instead of being a killing cure, fumigation becomes a preventive and there is no waste of material. Select a certain day of the week and, barring high winds, religiously persevere in dealing out the allowance of tobacco.

A still, stormy evening is an ideal time, as then the fumes remain longer in the house and settle more among the plants. Under no circumstances fumigate when plants are in need of water.

It is best, when beginning the use of any insecticide, to follow directions; then if your judgment tells you the dose is too strong, or not enough so, it can be varied to suit the case. Usually the quantity recommended is none too strong.

We have had excellent results with the leaf in dry powdered form by shaping into conical piles on tin pie plates, dropping a little kerosene on the apex and lighting. By the time the oil is burned the tobacco has become sufficiently ignited to slowly smoulder until consumed. Be careful not to make the piles low and squatty lest the center burn out, leaving a ring of unconsumed powder.

The term leaf as used above is to distinguish preparations thus made from those in which stems are largely used. The leaf being much higher in nicotine than stems, the advantage in using the former is plain. GEO. S. OSBORN.

NECESSITY FOR THOROUGHNESS.

It is to be presumed that all carnation supports are in place by now. If not, lose no time in getting the supports in, for you cannot get the straight stem, tipped with a good bloom that will look you in the face, without some kind of a support to hold it upright during its growth. It is to be supposed, also, that end of each bench. The first is six inches above the soil, the second twelve and the third eighteen or twenty, as the growth of the variety makes desirable. Similar supports are placed every ten feet along the bench. On these supports and between each row of plants, lengthwise of the bench, No. 16 wire is stretched. To keep this from pulling down the light supports and destroying the whole contrivance, the end supports are set a little way from the end of the bench and the wires drawn over them and down to the end board, where they are fastened. The lower support is placed about eighteen inches from the end of the bench, the second one about thirty inches and the third about forty-two inches. Then a similar row of supports is put on the end of the bench to take care of the three or four rows of plants there. Across these wires lengthwise of the bench, cross wires are placed as needed.

ENCHANTRESS SPORT.

Under separate cover I am sending two flowers of an Enchantress sport which developed last season and of which I now have eighteen plants. Thus far it appears identical with Enchantress except in color. What do you think of it?
S. T. D.

This is another deeper pink Enchantress. There are a number of these sports, as well as several white ones. The one in question is a pleasing shade of rose pink, possibly a little lighter than the one of B. Schroeter, of Detroit, of which S. S. Skidelsky says he sold 4,000 at the Chicago flower show last week and of which he expects to easily sell 50,000 before delivery begins.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

At the Washington session of the American Carnation Society, held during the S. A. F. convention, the following by-laws were prepared for the action of the society at the Boston meeting, January 24 and 25, 1906.

Section 1. The president, or in his absence or disability, the vice-president shall preside at all meetings of the society. In the absence of both president and vice-president, the secretary, treasurer, or any member of the board of directors shall open the meeting and at once elect a president pro tem.

Section 2. The secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings of the society and the board of directors, and conduct the correspondence of the society, and have charge of all books and papers pertaining to the above duties. He shall keep an accurate account between the members and the society, collect the annual dues and any other indebtedness they may have, and turn the same over to the treasurer, taking his receipt therefor. He shall keep a separate account of all the moneys due from or owing to parties outside of the society, collect and pay the same (by an order on the treasurer). He shall also turn over all moneys collected to the treasurer and take his receipt for same. He shall keep an accurate enrollment of the society's members and make an annual report.

Section 3. The treasurer shall keep an accurate account of all moneys and securities belonging to the society, and have charge of all books and papers pertaining to the same. He shall pay out moneys only on orders issued by the secretary and countersigned by the president. He shall receive from the secretary all moneys collected and give his receipt therefor, depositing the same in the name of the society and make annual report of receipts and disbursements at each annual meeting of the society. He shall give bond in such amount as may be, from time to time required.

Section 4. The annual membership fee shall be $2, payable January 1, of each year. The payment of $50 at one time shall constitute a life membership.

Section 5. All nominations shall be made from the floor at the last session of the first day, and presentation speeches shall be limited to three minutes.

Section 6. Invitations for the next annual meeting place shall be presented the opening day of the meeting, and the selection made by ballot at the morning session of the second day.

Section 7. The election of a president, a vice-president, a secretary, a treasurer, one member of the board of directors, and one judge, shall take place on the closing day of the annual meeting and shall always be by ballot.

Section 8. All members whose dues are unpaid sixty days after the annual meeting shall be notified in writing by the secretary to pay up. When in arrears eighteen months they shall be dropped from the roll of membership and reinstated only when all arrearages are paid in full, or by a majority vote of the board of directors.

Section 9. The annual meeting shall be held the last Wednesday of January each year. A special meeting may be called at the request of twenty-five active members of the society, as per Section 4 of the constitution.

Section 10. The presence of fifteen active members shall be necessary to constitute a quorum at any annual or special meeting.

Section 11. The government of the society and the expenditure of any money, excepting that pertaining to the actual running expenses of the society, shall be in the hands of the board of directors and the elective officers, as per Section 6 of the constitution.

Section 12. These laws may be amended or added to at any annual meeting of the society by a two-thirds vote of the members present. said change or amendment having previously been mailed to every member of the society at least thirty days before the annual meeting.

Order of Business.—Opening day. Calling to order; reading the minutes of all special sessions not embodied in the annual report; president's address; secretary's report; treasurer's report; reports of standing committees; reports of special committees; miscellaneous business; invitations for next annual meeting place; nominations for officers; essays and discussions; reports of the judges.

Second day. Calling to order; deferred reports; deferred business; selection of place of meetings; essays and discussion; new business; appointment of committees; election of officers; question box; adjournment.

SOME DORNER SEEDLINGS.

What impressed me most during a recent visit to Fred Dorner & Sons' establishment at Lafayette, Ind., as they invariably impress every visitor, were his seedlings, some in their first and others in their second and third years. They have whites of the "bread and butter" type that would appeal to the small grower, with whom quantity counts, and whites that are fancies in the fullest sense of the word, plus more shoots to the plant than the average "fancy" can claim. The same holds true as regards scarlets, pinks and maroons.

Thus a red seedling, No. 102, is the ideal in habit of growth, color and profusion of bloom, though lacking somewhat in size as judged by the standard of exhibition varieties. On the other hand, No. 153, another scarlet, has the size, vigor and color, but lacks in freedom as compared with No. 102. A combination of the two will give him another world-beater.

Apropos of maroons, I will mention in passing, that Mr. Dorner is working on a new strain of seedlings—distinct from any known to the commercial florist. It is a color between a scarlet and in liquid feeding, it mixed with soft or rain water in the proportion of one quart of soot to each barrel of water, but this should never be applied when the plants are resting. R.

SWEET PEAS.

How would sweet peas do in a rose house, planted in a solid bed in a light, sunny position? Blooms wanted from November on. What are the best winter blooming varieties, in white, purple, light and deep pink? S. K.

Sweet peas to bloom during the winter should be sown not later than September; in fact, just as soon as well ripened seed can be procured. The soil should be of rather a light, sandy nature, as heavy, rich soil has a tendency to produce too much strong straw, which of course makes the buds late in coming. While these may be made to give fair results in a rose temperature, I have found a night temperature during the period of growing of 54 degrees to be more suitable.

Most of the growers who make sweet peas a part of their crop have their favorite strains, which they have found from experience are best suited to their soil and conditions and which they keep improving from year to year by careful fertilization and selection. Some of the best forcing varieties will be found in the following list, but doubtless there are many other suitable sorts to be found in any seed catalogue: Extra Early Blanche Ferry, pink and white; Emily Henderson, white; Blanche Burpee, pure white; Captain of the Blues; Apple Blossom, pink; Kathrine Tracy, bright pink. It is to be supposed, also, that every weed has been pulled out and the benches made of an even surface.

As to dead leaves at the base of the plant, I claim there should be none on a plant now, if the plants were properly cleaned up at the time of lifting from the field. But if there should be some dead foliage on the plants now, I do not believe in trusting its removal to any other than a very careful hand, as the covering or skin of the stem is very easily torn, thus making the plant much more susceptible to stem-rot.

If the plants are in a good, healthy condition and the white roots showing near the surface, a little stimulant in the form of a very light mulch composed of one-third or one-half well rotted cow manure and one-half soil may be spread over the surface to the depth of half an inch. SOME DORNER SEEDLINGS.

What impressed me most during a recent visit to Fred Dorner & Sons' establishment at Lafayette, Ind., as they invariably impress every visitor, were his seedlings, some in their first and others in their second and third years. They have whites of the "bread and butter" type that would appeal to the small grower, with whom quantity counts, and whites that are fancies in the fullest sense of the word, plus more shoots to the plant than the average "fancy" can claim. The same holds true as regards scarlets, pinks and maroons.

Thus a red seedling, No. 102, is the ideal in habit of growth, color and profusion of bloom, though lacking somewhat in size as judged by the standard of exhibition varieties. On the other hand, No. 153, another scarlet, has the size, vigor and color, but lacks in freedom as compared with No. 102. A combination of the two will give him an other world beater.

Apropos of maroons, I will mention in passing, that Mr. Dorner is working on a new strain of seedlings—distinct from any known to the commercial florist. It is a color between a scarlet and maroon, something of the Harry Fenn shade, but decidedly distinct. It is Mr. Dorner's intention to bring out a carnation of this particular color, one that will likewise possess freedom, vigor and size of bloom. There are several of this type on the place that look promising, but another season's trial will be required to choose the one worthy of an introduction. It is well known that Mr. Dorner himself is the most exacting, as well as the most uncompromising critic of his own seedlings.

In White Perfection, Mr. Dorner seems to have made another advance in the line of his most successful work. As seen on his place one could not possibly wish to grow anything better. For freedom of bloom it surpasses Lady Bountiful; for size it is ahead of any in its class; on vigor of growth and general behavior in the field and under glass it scores well. The introducer of White Cloud, The Belle and Lady Bountiful may well be proud of his latest achievement.

A fact worthy of special mention is its apparent freedom from disease. Not a plant was lost this season, either in the field or in the house since transplanting.

A word about Tippecanoe may not be amiss here. Unlike Mrs. Bradt in its palmiest days, Tippecanoe has length of stem and freedom of bloom.

Of the older varieties, Lady Bountiful is still first among whites, The Belle being a close second. Fiancee, notwithstanding its vicissitudes, is redeeming its prestige in a manner that bids fair to win it a host of friends in the end. It is a grand variety, whatever be its shortcomings. Eclipse will in all likelihood be grown more exclusively next season. It is well worthy of bench room.

Chrysanthemums are looking exceptionally fine and, what is equally encouraging, are in good demand at good prices. A seedling of Yellow Eaton is being grown to perfection. It is of globular form, large, of fine habit and with no center to mar it. Golden Eagle (No. 11) is likewise in splendid condition. A white seedling of Jones is decidedly a fine commercial variety.

X.

THE BEST SORTS.

Please give me the names of the best chrysanthemums for commercial purposes, early, midseason and late, in three colors, white, pink and yellow.

E. W.

The varieties generally grown in this vicinity are as follows:

Early: Montmort, Pacific and Mrs. Coombes, for pink; Polly Rose and Alice Byron, white; Merstham Yellow and October Sunshine, yellow.

Midseason: W. Duckham and Leila Filkins, pink; Halliday and Col. Appleton, yellow; Robinson and Ivory, white.

Late: Mand Dean, Mrs. Geo. Mileham and W. S. Allen, pink; Yellow Eaton and Yellow Chadwick, yellows; Timothy Eaton, Chadwick and Merry Christmas, white.

This selection is, as stated, what are generally grown in this section; whether they will do equally well with E. W. is another story. I have avoided any mention of new kinds in this list, but as a matter of fact the ones that have proven the best for me, from a financial point of view, are new things, comparatively—Mrs. W. Duckham, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Mrs. Geo. Beech, Mrs. Swinburne and others.

SUCCESS WITH APPLETON.

A. N. Crouch, at Knoxville, Tenn., has had such fine Appleton chrysanthemums this season that he has attracted more than local attention. The stock was grown by Henry L. Lauseher, who has made rose growing a specialty and was entirely new at chrysanthemums when he took hold of this crop in Mr. Crouch's establishment last spring. Mr. Lauseher says that he planted his stock June 20 in solid beds. A heavy loam was used, mixed with a moderate quantity of cow manure. Throughout their growing season they were kept liberally supplied with water, but each week they were permitted to dry out thoroughly be-able throughout the season. No artificial heat was given, although several frosts occurred, one morning the thermometer registering 26 degrees. One mulch was given, about August 20, since which time two applications of liquid manure have been made. The second crown bud was taken on each plant between August 23 and 25. Some of the plants in the center of the house ran as high as seven feet and the stems might have been stronger in proportion to the size of the flower, although they were sufficiently strong to answer all purposes. Very fine prices have been realized and Appleton will be grown largely next year.

Among other varieties, Willowbrook did very well indeed, but Polly Rose and Monrovia were not so good. Robinson does splendidly everywhere in this section. When the flowers are fully developed they are sometimes ten inches in diameter and no better white is needed. Wm. Duckham was a very profitable variety this season, but Mr. Crouch grows A. J. Balfour largely and thinks it the best of all the pinks. Mrs. O. P. Bassett has given the highest satisfaction. Timothy Eaton, Dr. Enguehard and Golden Wedding are very promising for a late November cut.

The growers in this section prefer solid beds for almost all crops, the principal exception being carnations. Roses grown in raised beds gave only moderately satisfactory results, but since put on solid beds have done very much better. This is especially the case with Beauties grown in a cool house, not above 56 degrees at night.

The accompanying illustration shows H. L. Lauseher and his wife in the house of Appleton mums above referred to and shows the growth the plants made.

EARLY MUMS IN ENGLAND.

The National Chrysanthemum Society of England held a big exhibition at Crystal Palace, London, October 4 and 5. The principal class, so far as trade interest went, was for five blooms of separate colors. In pink varieties there was nothing equal to Mrs. G. Mileham, which was very fine. In yellows there was more variety. Bessie Godfrey secured first prize and Merstham Yellow second. Other good yellows were Mrs. Greenfield, Soliel d'Octobre, Mrs. H. Emmerton, Duchess of Sutherland and Mrs. A. R. Knight. In the class for white, Miss Elsie Fulton was the only variety shown by the four exhibitors. Gustave Henry was well shown, the blooms being large enough to satisfy any one.

Chrysanthemum Dr. Enguehard, Two and Three to a Plant, Grown by H. S. Hopkins, Binghamton, N. Y.

A SUCCESSFUL CROP.

Harry S. Hopkins, Binghamton, N. Y., has had an exceptionally successful season with chrysanthemums. He has a good local demand but not many calls for exhibition stock and he grows two and three blooms to the plant. How well Dr. Enguehard adapts itself to this method of culture is shown by the accompanying illustration, which is from a photograph of a bench of this variety which Mr. Hopkins has just cut. All of the plants carry at least two flowers each and many of them three.

BEST YELLOW MUMS.

What good yellow chrysanthemum can be grown in place of Appleton? I have tried Appleton for three years and cannot get a strong neck. I have tried the different buds, also different methods of cultivation, but with no results. I grow Halliday and Omega, but would like to grow a good yellow to take the place of Appleton. H. C. H.

I hardly know what to recommend to grow in place of Appleton. This variety is so generally satisfactory that it would seem hard to mention anything that would be likely to have a better neck. Locality, of course, makes a difference, and a big one some times, in the behavior of different varieties and it might be well, perhaps, for H. C. H.

Some growers of my acquaintance make out very well with Cheltoni following Halliday, but this variety needs a longer season of growth than is usually given by the commercial grower, and it does not have the incurving shape, without which some growers seem to think a variety is worthless commercially. Mrs. W. Duckham has proved itself a splendid keeper and good, kind, satisfactory grower. Why not try that? The season was a bad one for keeping blooms on the plant, but this variety did not lose a petal and some of the flowers exhibited for the Wells gold medal last week in Philadelphia had, to my certain knowledge, been cut for three weeks.

Yellow Eaton with some growers comes early enough to follow Halliday, but in this section it is November 6, about, before it is in good shape, and if H. C. H. has a weak neck with Appleton, I fear he would with Eaton also. C. H. TOTTY.

WHAT IS JAPANESE?

In exhibiting in a chrysanthemum show, will Duckham and Quo Vadis be eligible in a class of six Japanese chrysanthemums? Please define a Japanese chrysanthemum. Is there any difference between a Japanese incurved and a Japanese reflexed? Does not Japanese include both? A. A. S.

Answering A. A. S., I would say that I hold he is justified in exhibiting a variety like Duckham in a class calling for six Japanese so long as the schedule calls for six Japanese and not six Japanese reflexed. Duckham is a Japanese incurved. The original appellations used to be Japanese and Chinese, or incurved, and the difference was quite marked since one variety was purely reflexing and the other strictly incurving. As time went on and the varieties became mingled more every year, the Japanese class resolved itself into two types, the one showing the original type of a reflexing petal only, and being called the Japanese reflexed, and the other showing about half the flower incurving and the lower half of the flower reflexing back to the stem, and being called Japanese incurved. The true incurved is seldom seen now at exhibitions, as it is too small to stand much chance in a competition. Bonaffon is one of the best types of an incurved variety.

The types are getting merged now to such an extent that a certain variety often gives a reflexed flower from a crown bud and an incurving flower from a terminal, and an arbitrary ruling as to what class such a variety would belong to is hardly possible. C. H. TOTTY.

LEAF-BURN OF LETTUCE.

We are growing lettuce under glass and find a good local demand, but recently we have been troubled by small brown spots on the edges of quite a few leaves, which has impaired the value of the crop. We send a sample. Will you please name the disease and remedy? C. H. T.

The disease known as leaf-burn is a very common source of annoyance to let-maroon, something of the Harry Penn shade, but decidedly distinct. It is Mr. Dörner's intention to bring out a carnation of this particular color, one that will likewise possess freedom, vigor and size of bloom. There are several of this type on the place that look promising, but another season's trial will be required to choose the one worthy of an introduction. It is well known that Mr. Dörner himself is the most exacting, as well as the most uncompromising critic of his own seedlings.

In White Perfection, Mr. Dörner seems to have made another advance in the line of his most successful work. As seen on this place one could not possibly wish to grow anything better. For freedom of bloom it surpasses Lady Bountiful; for size it is ahead of any in its class; on vigor of growth and general behavior in the field and under glass it scores well. The introducer of White Cloud, The Belle and Lady Bountiful may well be proud of his latest achievement.

A fact worthy of special mention is its apparent freedom from disease. Not a plant was lost this season, either in the field or in the house since transplanting.

A word about Tippecanoe may not be amiss here. Unlike Mrs. Bradt in its palmiest days, Tippecanoe has length of stem and freedom of bloom.

Of the older varieties, Lady Bountiful is still first among whites, The Belle being a close second. Fiancee, notwithstanding its vicissitudes, is redeeming its prestige in a manner that bids fair to win it a host of friends in the end. It is a grand variety, whatever be its shortcomings. Eclipse will in all likelihood be grown more exclusively next season. It is well worthy of bench room.

Chrysanthemums are looking exceptionally fine and, what is equally encouraging, are in good demand at good prices. A seedling of Yellow Eaton is being grown to perfection. It is of globular form, large, of fine habit and with no center to mar it. Golden Eagle (No. 11) is likewise in splendid condition. A white seedling of Jones is decidedly a fine commercial variety.

X.

THE BEST SORTS.

Please give me the names of the best chrysanthemums for commercial purposes, early, midseason and late, in three colors, white, pink and yellow.

E. W.

The varieties generally grown in this vicinity are as follows:

Early: Mountfort, Pacific and Mrs. Coombs, for pink; Polly Rose and Alice Byron, white; Merstham Yellow and October Sunshine, yellow.

Midseason: W. Duckham and Leda Filkins, pink; Halliday and Col. Appleton, yellow; Robinson and Ivory, white.

Late: Maid Dean, Mrs. Geo. Mileham and W. S. Allen, pink; Yellow Eaton and Yellow Chadwick, yellows; Timothy Eaton, Chadwick and Merry Christmas, white.

This selection is, as stated, what are generally grown in this section; whether they will do equally well with E. W. is another story. I have avoided any mention of new kinds in this list, but as a matter of fact the ones that have proven the best for me, from a financial point of view, are new things, comparatively. Mrs. W. Duckham, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Mrs. Geo. Beech, Mrs. Swinburne and others.

SUCCESS WITH APPLETON.

A. N. Crouch, at Knoxville, Tenn., has had such fine Appleton chrysanthemums this season that he has attracted more than local attention. The stock was grown by Henry L. Lauscher, who has made rose growing a specialty and was entirely new at chrysanthemums when he took hold of this crop in Mr. Crouch's establishment last spring. Mr. Lauscher says that he planted his stock June 20 in solid beds. A heavy loam was used, mixed with a moderate quantity of cow manure. Throughout their growing season they were kept liberally supplied with water, but each week they were permitted to dry out thoroughly before more water was applied. Top and side ventilation was given day and night, weather conditions being favorable throughout the season. No artificial heat was given, although several frosts occurred, one morning the thermometer registering 26 degrees. One pinch was given, about August 20, since which time two applications of liquid manure have been made. The second crown bud was taken on each plant between August 23 and 25. Some of the plants in the center of the house ran as high as seven feet and the stems might have been stronger in proportion to the size of the flower, although they were sufficiently strong to answer all purposes. Very fine prices have been realized and Appleton will be grown largely next year.

Among other varieties, Willowbrook did very well indeed, but Polly Rose and Monrovia were not so good. Robinson does splendidly everywhere in this section. When the flowers are fully developed they are sometimes ten inches in diameter and no better white is needed. Wm. Duckham was a very profitable variety this season, but Mr. Crouch grows A. J. Baltour largely and thinks it the best of all the pinks. Mrs. O. P. Basset has given the highest satisfaction. Timothy Eaton, Dr. Enguehard and Golden Wedding are very promising for a late November cut.

The growers in this section prefer solid beds for almost all crops, the principal exception being carnations. Roses grown in raised beds gave only moderately satisfactory results, but since put on solid beds have done very much better. This is especially the case with Beauties grown in a cool house, not above 50 degrees at night.

The accompanying illustration shows H. L. Lauscher and his wife in the house of Appleton mums above referred to and shows the growth the plants made.

EARLY MUMS IN ENGLAND.

The National Chrysanthemum Society of England held a big exhibition at Crystal Palace, London, October 4 and 5. The principal class, so far as trade interest went, was for five blooms of separate colors. In pink varieties there was nothing equal to Mrs. G. Milham, which was very fine. In yellows there was more variety. Bessie Godfrey secured first prize and Merstham Yellow second. Other good yellows were Mrs. Greenfield, Soliel d'Octobre, Mrs. H. Emmerton, Duchess of Sutherland and Mrs. A. R. Knight. In the class for white, Miss Elsie Fulton was the only variety shown by the four exhibitors. Gustave Henry was well shown, the blooms being large enough to satisfy any one.

A SUCCESSFUL CROP.

Harry S. Hopkins, Binghamton, N. Y., has had an exceptionally successful season with chrysanthemums. He has a good local demand but not many calls for exhibition stock and he grows two and three blooms to the plant. How well Dr. Enguehard adapts itself to this method of culture is shown by the accompanying illustration, which is from a photograph of a bench of this variety which Mr. Hopkins has just cut. All of the plants carry at least two flowers each and many of them three.

BEST YELLOW MUMS.

What good yellow chrysanthemum can be grown in place of Appleton? I have tried Appleton for three years and cannot get a strong neck. I have tried the different buds, also different methods of cultivation, but with no results. I grow Halliday and Omega, but would like to grow a good yellow to take the place of Appleton. H. C. H.

I hardly know what to recommend to grow in place of Appleton. This variety is so generally satisfactory that it would seem hard to mention anything that would be likely to have a better neck. Locality, of course, makes a difference, and a big one some times, in the behavior of different varieties and it might be well, perhaps, for H. C. H.

Some growers of my acquaintance make out very well with Chelton following Halliday, but this variety needs a longer season of growth than is usually given by the commercial grower, and it does not have the incurving shape, without which some growers seem to think a variety is worthless commercially. Mrs. W. Duckham has proved itself a splendid keeper and good, kind, satisfactory grower. Why not try that? The season was a bad one for keeping blooms on the plant, but this variety did not lose a petal and some of the flowers exhibited for the Wells gold medal last week in Philadelphia had, to my certain knowledge, been cut for three weeks.

Yellow Eaton with some growers comes early enough to follow Halliday, but in this section it is November 6, about, before it is in good shape, and if H. C. H. has a weak neck with Appleton, I fear he would with Eaton also. C. H. Torry.

WHAT IS JAPANESE?

In exhibiting in a chrysanthemum show, will Duckham and Quo Vadis be eligible in a class of six Japanese chrysanthemums? Please define a Japanese chrysanthemum. Is there any difference between a Japanese incurved and a Japanese reflexed? Does not Japanese include both? A. A. S.

Answering A. A. S., I would say that I hold he is justified in exhibiting a variety like Duckham in a class calling for six Japanese so long as the schedule calls for six Japanese and not six Japanese reflexed. Duckham is a Japanese incurved. The original appellations used to be Japanese and Chinese, or incurved, and the difference was quite marked since one variety was purely reflexed and the other strictly incurving. As time went on and the varieties became mingled more every year, the Japanese class resolved itself into two types, the one showing the original type of a reflexed petal only, and being called the Japanese reflexed, and the other showing about half the flower incurving and the lower half of the flower reflexed back to the stem, and being called Japanese incurved. The true incurved is seldom seen now in exhibitions, as it is too small to stand much chance in a competition. Bonaffon is one of the best types of an incurved variety.

The types are getting merged now to such an extent that a certain variety often gives a reflexed flower from a crown bud and an incurving flower from a terminal, and an arbitrary ruling as to what class such a variety would belong to is hardly possible. C. H. Torry.

LEAF-BURN OF LETTUCE.

We are growing lettuce under glass and find a good local demand, but recently we have been troubled by small brown spots on the edges of quite a few leaves, which has impaired the value of the crop. We send a sample. Will you please name the disease and remedy? C. H. T.

The disease known as leaf burn is a very common source of annoyance to lettuces growers. It attacks the plants, as a rule, just when they reach the hearting stage. Plants that have been perfectly healthy up to that time are often so severely attacked by it that in the course of a few days they are so badly disfigured that they are worth little or nothing when exposed for sale. It is, to say the least of it, a very discouraging state of matters and my advice would be to harvest and sell the crop just as soon as possible after the disease has made its appearance, for as far as I know there is no means of stopping the spread of the disease, once it has got a start, though keeping the atmosphere of the house, and also the soil, as dry as possible will help to keep it in check.

Several theories have been advanced in explanation of the cause of this disease. Some claim that the cause is to be found in the soil and recommend sterilizing. Others claim that it can be kept in check by the regulation of soil moisture, while others believe that atmospheric conditions have all to do with it. My opinion is that a check to the growth of the plant will cause the trouble, no matter from what source arising.

Lettuce grown indoors is grown under artificial conditions and it is hard to supply all the natural requirements of the plant. While the plant is young and vigorous the trouble never appears, but as soon as it reaches the hearting stage, the outside leaves have practically reached the limit of their growth and the plant begins to concentrate its strength in the building up of a heart. This causes a sort of reaction and natural check, to which any weakness of the plant naturally accentuates. The secret of success lies in having enough power behind your plant to tide over this critical period.

I have observed that plants grown on raised benches are much more susceptible to attacks from this trouble than plants grown in solid beds. The cause for this undoubtedly lies in the fact that the plants in solid beds are in a healthier state because grown under less artificial conditions. They have the natural moisture of the soil and natural coolness; hence the roots are sure to be in a more active and healthy state than those of plants grown on raised benches, where the soil must inevitably be the same temperature as the air of the house. The benches, as a rule being right over the pipes, the soil is apt to dry out in the bottom of the bench even faster than it does on the top. This necessitates the too frequent application of water and often leaves the soil on the surface overwet, while that on the bottom is quite dry. Under such conditions, the roots of the plants cannot be expected to be in a perfectly healthy condition and the plants are very apt to fall a victim to disease as soon as the critical stage is reached.

But don't run away with the idea that growing in solid benches is a certain preventive. Here also they are liable to attack if the plants are not in a perfectly healthy condition, for, as I said before, a check from any cause is sure to be a fruitful source of trouble. The prevention of this disease hinges on the whole cultivation of the plant from start to finish.

Softness of growth is sometimes put forward as a source of trouble and no doubt it sometimes is, and advice is often given to avoid soft-growing varieties, but where do you find a softer or more tender variety than Grand Rapids,

a variety which is practically immune from this disease if given anything of a fair show. This I lay to the fact that it is not a heading variety. This I would advise you to grow, if you can find a market for it. I think it is the nicest variety we have for forcing purposes, and as a table article, I would prefer it to any variety grown, but there is no accounting for tastes and head lettuce is the article most generally called for in eastern markets; still though you have to sell it for less money, if the head varieties do not succeed with you, a half loaf is better than no bread, and it is better to grow something you are sure of than depend on the uncertainty of the other.

Something is evidently wrong with your cultivation or the conditions under which your plants are grown, and just what it is I am not in a position to state, unless I knew more about the construction of your soil, situation and adaptability of the house in which your lettuce is grown, and the general treatment your plants have received. This is a trouble that cannot be treated like a dose of greenfly, but, as I said before, hinges on the whole life of your plants.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—Arthur E. Singleton, who was employed for several years by George Just, has been continued as manager of the establishment since its recent purchase by C. D. Mills.

PUEBLO, COLO.—We have had the coldest weather ever known for so early in the season. Much of the celery, which is grown here in large quantities, was badly frozen before it was trenched. Cabbage was a short crop and prices $20 per ton. The crop is now mostly out of the growers' hands and selling at $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred pounds in small lots. J. J. Thomas says that Grand Rapids lettuce is the only sort which it pays to grow, as there is no market for the heading varieties. He grows lettuce, radishes and parsley and closes up in the spring with a crop of cucumbers. This year a few egg plants are being tried.

DAVID W. FRASER.

Like so many of our best cultivators, David W. Fraser, the new secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, is a native of Scotland, born at Craigo, Forfarshire, in 1866. As a lad he served an apprenticeship at Usan house, near Montrose, but he came to America when only 20 years of age. His first position was at Canajoharie, N. Y., where he worked in the gardens of Mrs. Smith for five years. Then he spent two years at the well-known E. D. Adams estate in New Jersey, and then gained the very valuable experience of three years under William Faleoner during the formative period at Dosoris. Later he spent two years at Ophir, the country home of Whitelaw Reid, two years on the Havemeyer estate at Mahwah, N. J., and then removed to Pittsburg to take charge of the H. C. Friek estate, where he has remained for eight years, during which time the conservatories have become very popular with the people of Pittsburg, being open to the public at certain seasons each year and visited by thousands. The chrysanthemum show by Mr. Fraser is an annual event of more than local importance. Mr. Fraser, while skilled in widely varying branches of the gardeners' art, is in no department more efficient than in his treatment of the chrysanthemum. Like all successful cultivators, he is most painstaking and methodical in his work, and this characteristic extends to all other affairs with which he is associated. He will make the Chrysanthemum Society a most capable secretary.

OBITUARY.

Denys Zirngiebel.

Denys Zirngiebel, whose critical illness was referred to in the REVIEW issue of November 9, died at his home in Needham, Mass., on November 16, aged 76 years, 9 months and 10 days. For over half a century the deceased has been closely associated with Boston horticulture and his removal is a distinct loss to the members of his profession, by all of whom he was ever held in the highest esteem.

A native of Switzerland, he secured an excellent horticultural and botanical training before coming to America some fifty-seven years ago. His first position was at New Orleans, on a plantation, where he had only been located a short time before being called to the Harvard Botanic Gardens in Cambridge. For nearly fifteen years he had the management of these gardens, under the well known Prof. Asa Gray, and there he largely added to his already wide knowledge of plants.

In 1865 he bought land at his late home in Needham and built greenhouses in 1866. His present houses are the third range erected since his residence there. Mr. Zirngiebel was a pioneer in the introduction of many florists' flowers. His name is perhaps best known as a raiser of prize pansies, in which he did a great business and attained a national reputation. In carnations, too, he led the way by bringing over some of the leading French perpetual blooming sorts from which have emanated our present magnificent types. To mention all the flowers introduced or improved by Mr. Zirngiebel would require much space. Suffice it to say that up to the last he was ever on the alert to get new things and as keen an observer as in his younger days.

For many years he had been a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and was a frequent exhibitor at its shows, securing many medals, certificates and premiums. He was a stallholder in the Park street flower market, his son who was associated with him in business, being the salesman. Another son is in the florists' business on his own account nearby and his only daughter, married, lived close to him. For a number of years he belonged to the S. A. F. and when that society visited Boston in 1890 the deceased worked hard for a successful convention.

Few men in America had a wider and more intimate knowledge of plants, whether viewed from a botanical or commercial point of view, and it has fallen to the lot of few to live more useful lives. He has done much to advance floricultural interests for which he will long be tenderly held in remembrance.

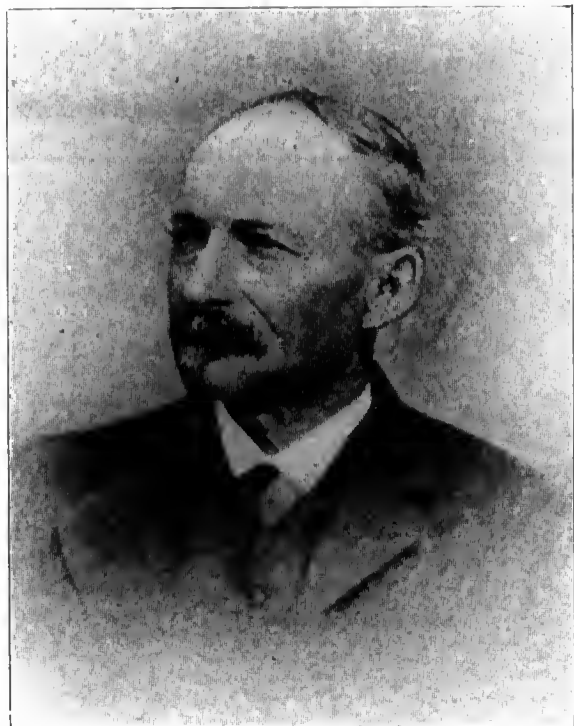

Funeral services at Needham on November 18 were very largely attended, many of his confreres from the Park street market and elsewhere being among those to pay the last tribute of esteem.

THANKSGIVING ADVERTISING.

John L. Parker is a florist and druggist at Birmingham, Ala. He is a believer in advertising and he applies the publicity more or less to both ends of his business at the same time. "Purity at Parker's" won't fit every business, but the rest of the advertisement reproduced herewith will be a help to any flower store.

Get up something along this line and print it in your local paper, if you can get it in a few days before Thanksgiving, and remember that Christmas is not far away. A little good newspaper advertising the first three weeks in December will bring in many people who continues the outdoor street merchants as a menacing factor for the legitimate winter trade.

Violets seem to have reached their top for the present at $1.25. Even the horse show could not budge them, and that, too, was for the specials. It was a disappointment. Perhaps there will be no advance above this before Christmas. It is a fair price and if it can be maintained, and raised on special occasions to $1.50, no one will have cause for complaint.

Narcissi and sweet peas are here and plenty of lilies of all kinds, including valley. Cattleyas are advancing and "cyps" are extra good. Carnations are quite independent. Good novelties touched $4 often, some even higher. All grades are selling well and the general quality was never better.

Roses were last week too abundant for satisfactory disposal. While the very best are always sure of recognition at good prices, many thousands have to go at "buyers' option." Chrysanthemums have passed their zenith and the rosarians begin to rejoice at the retreat. Such a mum year one does not remember, not so much for prices as for quality and novelty.

The Rosary.

I see the Detroit Free Press has been using some "hot air" in behalf of one of the citizens of "the beautiful city." But none of us believe Phil Breitmeyer ever said the saucy things attributed to him. His trip here was not a "disappointment," and he did get some "new ideas" about store decoration which Detroit will soon see in execution. He was particularly impressed by the Rosary, the wonderful beauty and unique conception here achieved in white birch bark never having been equaled in this country. It is a triumph of Mr. Troy's artistic genius. Florists visiting New York may well give a day to observation of this and other great studies in decorative art as illustrated by a score of the finest florists' stores in the world. The wonder is any florist anywhere fails to make this the great distinctive feature of his business. An attractive store, with some original ideas, will do more to build up business than all other methods put together.

The Rosary carries out its scheme of rustic beauty to the minutest detail. The office, the ceiling, the ice-box, the chairs, the legs of the tables, the palm vases, the entire front, all are in birch bark and built to last a score of years. The vases for cut flowers are of solid silver. Here, as in front of many other stores, a grand assortment of evergreens in tubs is seen, adding to the charming rustic effect and opening the blase eyes of even the New Yorkers, to whom the beautiful in everything is summed up as a daily feast for the eyes and who will not "sit up and take notice" unless something away out of the ordinary appears.

Various Notes.

C. H. Grant has done himself credit in the opening of the Abraham & Straus large retail floral department. His many years of experience with the best retail stores of New York gives him ability to steer the ship into paying waters. In his palm department, among other features, is a contract for 1,000 Scottii ferns in 6-inch and 7-inch pots, an indication of the enterprise of the big house that secured his services.

At the auction last week, one of the most interested of the old-time buyers was the venerable James Mallon, of Brooklyn, stocking up for the winter decorations. Property of the firm held for half a century, where the original store stands, has advanced rapidly in value. The branch on Fulton street, where the sons preside, has been very greatly improved this year and business there is uniformly good.

tree growers. It attacks the plants, as a rule, just when they reach the hearting stage. Plants that have been perfectly healthy up to that time are often so severely attacked by it that in the course of a few days they are so badly disfigured that they are worth little or nothing when exposed for sale. It is, to say the least of it, a very discouraging state of matters and my advice would be to harvest and sell the crop just as soon as possible after the disease has made its appearance, for as far as I know there is no means of stopping the spread of the disease, once it has got a start, though keeping the atmosphere of the house, and also the soil, as dry as possible will help to keep it in check.

Several theories have been advanced in explanation of the cause of this disease. Some claim that the cause is to be found in the soil and recommend sterilizing. Others claim that it can be kept in check by the regulation of soil moisture, while others believe that atmospheric conditions have all to do with it. My opinion is that a check to the growth of the plant will cause the trouble, no matter from what source arising.

Lettuce grown indoors is grown under artificial conditions and it is hard to supply all the natural requirements of the plant. While the plant is young and vigorous the trouble never appears, but as soon as it reaches the hearting stage, the outside leaves have practically reached the limit of their growth and the plant begins to concentrate its strength in the building up of a heart. This causes a sort of reaction and natural check, to which any weakness of the plant naturally accentuates. The secret of success lies in having enough power behind your plant to tide over this critical period.

I have observed that plants grown on raised benches are much more susceptible to attacks from this trouble than plants grown in solid beds. The cause for this undoubtedly lies in the fact that the plants in solid beds are in a healthier state because grown under less artificial conditions. They have the natural moisture of the soil and natural coolness; hence the roots are sure to be in a more active and healthy state than those of plants grown on raised benches, where the soil must inevitably be the same temperature as the air of the house. The benches, as a rule being right over the pipes, the soil is apt to dry out in the bottom of the bench even faster than it does on the top. This necessitates the too frequent application of water and often leaves the soil on the surface overwet, while that on the bottom is quite dry. Under such conditions, the roots of the plants cannot be expected to be in a perfectly healthy condition and the plants are very apt to fall a victim to disease as soon as the critical stage is reached.

But don't run away with the idea that growing in solid benches is a certain preventive. Here also they are liable to attack if the plants are not in a perfectly healthy condition, for, as I said before, a check from any cause is sure to be a fruitful source of trouble. The prevention of this disease hinges on the whole cultivation of the plant from start to finish.

Softness of growth is sometimes put forward as a source of trouble and no doubt it sometimes is, and advice is often given to avoid soft-growing varieties, but where do you find a softer or more tender variety than Grand Rapids,

His first position was at New Orleans, on a plantation, where he had only been located a short time before being called to the Harvard Botanic Gardens in Cambridge. For nearly fifteen years he had the management of these gardens, under the well known Prof. Asa Gray, and there he largely added to his already wide knowledge of plants.

In 1865 he bought land at his late home in Needham and built greenhouses in 1866. His present houses are the third range erected since his residence there. Mr. Zirngiebel was a pioneer in the introduction of many florists' flowers. His name is perhaps best known as a raiser of prize pansies, in which he did a great business and attained a national reputation. In carnations, too, he led the way by bringing over some of the leading French perpetual blooming sorts from which have emanated our present magnificent types. To mention all the flowers introduced or improved by Mr. Zirngiebel would require much space. Suffice it to say that up to the last he was ever on the alert to get new things and as keen an observer as in his younger days.

For many years he had been a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and was a frequent exhibitor at its shows, securing many medals, certificates and premiums. He was a stallholder in the Park street flower market, his son who was associated with him in business, being the salesman. Another son is in the florists' business on his own account nearby and his only daughter, married, lived close to him. For a number of years he belonged to the S. A. F. and when that society visited Boston in 1890 the deceased worked hard for a successful convention.

Few men in America had a wider and more intimate knowledge of plants, whether viewed from a botanical or commercial point of view, and it has fallen to the lot of few to live more useful lives. He has done much to advance horticultural interests for which he will long be tenderly held in remembrance.

Funeral services at Needham on November 18 were very largely attended, many of his conferees from the Park street market and elsewhere being among those to pay the last tribute of esteem.

THANKSGIVING ADVERTISING.

John L. Parker is a florist and druggist at Birmingham, Ala. He is a believer in advertising and he applies the publicity more or less to both ends of his business. At the same time, "Purity at Parker's" won't fit every business, but the rest of the advertisement reproduced here will be a help to any flower store,

Get up something along this line and print it in your local paper, if you can get it in a few days before Thanksgiving, and remember that Christmas is not far away. A little good newspaper advertising the first three weeks in December will bring in many people who would not otherwise remember that cut flowers and plants are among the most acceptable of Christmas gifts.

continues the outdoor street merchants as a menacing factor for the legitimate winter trade.

Violets seem to have reached their top for the present at $1.25. Even the horse show could not budge them, and that, too, was for the specials. It was a disappointment. Perhaps there will be no advance above this before Christmas. It is a fair price and if it can be maintained, and raised on special occasions to $1.50, no one will have cause for complaint.

Narcissi and sweet peas are here and plenty of lilies of all kinds, including valley. Cattleyas are advancing and "cyps" are extra good. Carnations are quite independent. Good novelties touched $1 often, some even higher. All grades are selling well and the general quality was never better.

Roses were last week too abundant for satisfactory disposal. While the very best are always sure of recognition at good prices, many thousands have to go at "buyers' option." Chrysanthemums have passed their zenith and the rosarians begin to rejoice at the retreat. Such a run year one does not remember, not so much for prices as for quality and novelty.

The Rosary.

I see the Detroit Free Press has been using some "hot air" in behalf of one of the citizens of "the beautiful city." But none of us believe Phil Breitmeyer ever said the smug things attributed to him. His trip here was not a "disappointment," and he did get some "new ideas" about store decoration which Detroit will soon see in execution. He was particularly impressed by the Rosary, the wonderful beauty and unique conception here achieved in white birch bark never having been equaled in this country. It is a triumph of Mr. Troy's artistic genius. Florists visiting New York may well give a day to observation of this and other great studies in decorative art as illustrated by a score of the finest florists' stores in the world. The wonder is any florist anywhere fails to make this the great distinctive feature of his business. An attractive store, with some original ideas, will do more to build up business than all other methods put together.

The Rosary carries out its scheme of rustic beauty to the minutest detail. The office, the ceiling, the ice-box, the chairs, the legs of the tables, the palm vases, the entire front, all are in birch bark and built to last a score of years. The vases for cut flowers are of solid silver. Here, as in front of many other stores, a grand assortment of evergreens in tubs is seen, adding to the charming rustic effect and opening the blase eyes of even the New Yorkers, to whom the beautiful in everything is summed up as a daily feast for the eyes and who will not "sit up and take notice" unless something away out of the ordinary appears.

Various Notes.

C. H. Grant has done himself credit in the opening of the Abraham & Straus large retail floral department. His many years of experience with the best retail stores of New York gives him ability to steer the ship into paying waters. In his palm department, among other features, is a contract for 1905 S. A. F. ferns in 6 inch and 7 inch pots, on exhibition of the enterprise of the big house that secured his services.

At the auction last week, one of the most interested of the old time buyers was the venerable James Mallon, of Brooklyn, stocking up for the winter decorations. Property of the firm held for half a century, where the original store stands, has advanced rapidly in value. The branch on Fulton street, where the sons preside, has been very greatly improved this year and business there is uniformly good.

VICTORY

The best scarlet carnation—requires only ordinary culture

One of the old landmarks on Cortlandt street seems to be in the line of the march of progress and must come down. Just where the firm of J. M. Thorburn & Co. will locate is yet undecided.

Alfred U. Van Praag, late secretary and treasurer of the Fleischman Floral Co. and for eight years past, opens on November 28 at 1207 Broadway, near Twenty-ninth street, a florists' shop of his own, right in the best part of "the great white way," as they call it.

Interesting changes in helpers have been made lately in some of the big retail stores and many of the familiar faces of last year have changed their outlook. But still the openings for floral artists are many and a really fine artificer need not more than make good his claim to ability to be assured a prompt engagement and at a salary, too, that makes acceptable even the interminable hours of a successful retail business in New York.

W. H. Dorohoe had a fine dinner decoration at the New Haven Club last Sunday and gave it his personal attention. An abundance of wild smilax and 2,000 Liberty roses were used.

New Haven won its big football match last Saturday, but was much more shy on violets than expected. Even the horse show failed to exert its usual influence.

LeMoult, of the Bowery, had a finger in the British pie last week on the ship that took "his majesty" up the Hudson. Most of the "bon tons" felt the effect of his presence in the dinner decoration orders.

Prospect park, Brooklyn, had its best mum show last week and the Brooklyn papers boomed it in illustration and generous notices. Some forty new varieties were on exhibition, and the attendance was enormous.

Thanksgiving would hardly be itself without holly nowadays. All the supply men will have it in good quantity and say that quality is excellent this year; $6 a case seems to be the prevailing price.

It is wonderful how popular retinospira window and step decorations are becoming in New York. Hotels and halls, too, are elaborately "summerized" with bay trees and box and evergreens until we begin to look quite tropical, considering the depressing severity of our damp winter climate.

John Scott, of Flatbush, was fortunate enough last Thursday to save a little fellow's life, a grandson of Mr. Kepner, one of the old-time florists of Rutland road. A heavy truck was within six inches of crushing out the little fellow's life when Mr. Scott succeeded in stopping the horses.

Bowling.

New York seems to have lost all ambition as to a bowling club this winter, but it may be a case of the "sleeping lion" and soon we hope to hear him roar. Meantime the members of last year's almost champion aggregation have seattered into other city clubs and are making excellent records. Theo. Lang has been averaging over 200 all the season and last week had a score of 268 to his credit.

But you never hear of reliable old Flatbush hauling down the flag. Every Thursday there's a quorum there and sport devoid of inharmony and welcome that warms the cockles of the heart. Last week the scores below were made and Thanksgiving night the annual struggle for the twenty-pound turkey will take place. Perhaps a vegetarian will win it. The scores are:

The Great Central Market.

It would require a stretch of the imagination to call the market strong the past week, but at the same time a very large volume of business has been done. Bright skies and moderate temperature have resulted in a pronounced increase in supplies and, in spite of the best of quality throughout the list, prices have weakened because of the abundance of almost everything. Even white carnations, which money would not buy two weeks ago, have been more than the trade would consume at the prices wholesalers are willing to consider. Tuesday was exceptionally weak.

The general report among growers is that Beauties are coming into full crop and that supplies will be very large for Thanksgiving. Quality leaves nothing to be desired. Brides, Bridesmaids, Chatenay and other roses are showing fine color and excellent substance because of favorable weather conditions. The best stock is still selling at satisfactory figures but the lower grades have suffered in the last few days. The call for Thanksgiving promises to be exceptionally heavy because of the high prices at which carnations are quoted, but Richmond and Liberty will be first in demand. Both are abundant and very fine in quality. Carnation cuts show a considerable increase this week and there is enough of every color to supply the demand, with prices weakened. It looks as if the Thanksgiving supply would be greater than was at first estimated. Chrysanthemums have eased off in values. Receipts are large and naturally the growers are holding back more or less for Thanksgiving. Violets have been scarce, doubtless because of a brisk New York market. Harrisii and callas are also hard to find. There is plenty of valley. Green goods are moving satisfactorily.

Hunt's New Rose.

C. M. Dickinson returned Saturday from Minneapolis, where he closed a deal with John Monson, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., for the dissemination of the new pink rose, Miss Kate Moulton. Mr. Dickinson is very enthusiastic on the rose after seeing it at home, examining its record and talking with the local florists who have handled it. Holm & Olson told him that when they had the Moulton rose in stock they had no sale for Maid. The originator's records show that last season he cut forty-seven blooms to the plant and made an average of better than 4½ cents on them. Mr. Dickinson states that they will be able to supply 150,000 plants for delivery before April 1, 1906.

J. H. Holden, the well known former retailer, is now in charge of Hunt's department for the manufacture of the curled crepe paper Christmas bell, which is making such a hit.

Various Notes.

P. J. Foley was taken sick the day after the Florists' Club's banquet and on November 16 suffered a surgical operation at St. Andrew's hospital. He is progressing nicely and will be out in a week or so.

In the flower show report, C. Frauenfelder should have been credited with first prize on the basket of Liberty roses, instead of C. A. Samuelson.

L. Coatsworth spent flower show week in Canada shooting ducks and on his way home lost his baggage, including gun and game, but recovered all but the latter a day or two ago.

George Reinberg has figured in the city newspapers this week as the grower of "electric" roses. He has been experimenting with the use of electric light in accelerating growth in one of his greenhouses. It is known to help in growing cucumbers, but Mr. Reinberg finds little in it for the rose grower.

Leonard Kill, who attended the Kansas City show with Mrs. Kill, spent Saturday and Sunday at Seneca, Kan., where the latter has relatives, and returned home Monday. Peter Reinberg also came back Monday for the council meeting. He had been at Marion, Ill., and greatly increased the mortality among quail.

Fleischman had one of the largest orders of the season for the decoration at the semi-centennial of Mandel Bros. this week. Kennicott Bros. Co. supplied most of the stock used. E. E. Pieser states that the order delivered Sunday included 3,000 Bonnaillon chrysanthemums and those who visited the store will agree with him that it was a fine, even lot. Mr. Pieser says that they also delivered to Fleischman 1,000 strings of asparagus for use in this decoration.

N. J. Wietor says he believes that the outcome of the Beauty contest at Kansas City has done his firm more good than it would have obtained from any place on the premium list. Word has gone out that a mistake was committed in scattering the Beauty exhibits so that the judges could not see them side by side.

A. L. Randall Co. has announced that January 1 it will enter the supply business. This has been one of Mr. Randall's pet projects for a long time. They have a very large, well lighted room in the rear of their store, which will be devoted to the supply department, and they propose to become a factor in the supply business of the United States.

A. L. Vaughan returned Monday from a tour of Michigan growers, sizing up Thanksgiving crops. He says roses and mums will be abundant.

John P. Risch says the demand for Killarney is growing every day. They get orders for it from far distant points. Several retailers used it in their decorations at the local show. In a dark receptacle and under artificial light it shows up to best advantage, and the local call is increasing rapidly.

John Degnan is again suffering with blood poisoning in his face.

Phil Shoup, of Budlong's, was at St. Louis early this week and went thence to Louisville. He is expected home today.

C. W. McKellar says the best stores are using orchids much more freely than they did last season. Oncidiums and cypripediums are especially fine this week.

The A. Dietrich Co. say that this has not only been their best season but that, while they are still delivering material for this year's houses, they have already booked a number of orders for next year. As a rule the larger the order the earlier the material is wanted.

The south park commissioners have announced that because of the very great protest they have reconsidered their determination to fence Washington and Jackson parks.

The trade feels an interest in the unexpected resignation of F. A. Palmer as assistant general passenger agent of the Wabash railroad. Mr. Palmer has many friends in the trade and convention delegations have always taken pleasure in riding with him whenever he was going their way.

Among the week's visitors were C. Hinz, Leavenworth, Kan.; E. T. Rhoten, Danville, Ill.; B. Eschner and Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia; John N. May, Summit, N. J.

Chicago Show Notes.

How could it have been otherwise than a success—the date was November “7 come 11.”

One of the pleasures of the exhibition was to see Edgar Sanders there. He said he had never seen a flower show to compare with this one. Mr. Sanders looks very well, indeed, but is not strong.

The attendance increased steadily all the week. The weather following the opening day was pleasant and the way the crowds poured in was a pleasure to everyone concerned. A Chicago show never had better press work and to the newspapers a large part of the success is due.

The Chicago City Railway should be good for a very fine silver cup for next year's show at the Coliseum.

It was greatly regretted that E. G. Hill was not able to be present. That enthusiastic showman would have been delighted.

Admitting children at 10 cents on Saturday morning brought out 339 kids. One lad showed up at 7:30 and waited an hour and a half for the doors to open.

The Coliseum is an ideal place for a show. Besides floor space it has separate offices for manager and treasurer, with a safe for the latter. Ample police facilities are furnished and the City Railway has a car starter in front of the building to handle the passing cars, which stop in front of the door.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We are now getting a somewhat improved market, consequent on the near approach of Thanksgiving. While prices are not materially changed, flowers are moving rather better. Chrysanthemums are selling a little better. A continued scarcity of whites is noticeable. There is a good field for the introduction of one or more serviceable commercial sorts of this color. In spite of all the new introductions, year after year Ivory is still the most grown as a white, Bonnafon as a yellow, Balfour for a pink and Shrimpton for a crimson. A few nice Jeanne Nonin are seen. This promises to be a good late white. Some very nice Jerome Jones, white and yellow, and Maud Dean are also seen. Prices vary from $6 to $12 per 100, a few large blooms going higher.

Roses have been the toughest proposition to dispose of lately. Large numbers of small Brides and Maids have gone as low as 50 cents per hundred. None of the sizes have sold readily, unless we except such sorts as Wellesley, Killarney and Liberty. Carnations have held their heads up very well. Whites have been rather in oversupply, but colored sorts have sold well. Violets have been in big demand and rather under supply. Valley remains about the same. Some Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths are coming in, going at 35 cents per bunch of a dozen. We think the glut season is now practically over and higher prices will be made from now onwards.

Horticultural Society.

At the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society on November 18, the sum of $6,700 for prizes for 1906 was appropriated. The officers elected were as follows: President, A. F. Estabrook; vice-president, Walter Hunnewell; treasurer, O. E. Richardson; secretary, W. P. Rich; delegate to state board of agriculture, W. H. Spooner; trustees, for three years, Oakes Ames, C. F. Curtis, W. H. Elliott, A. H. Fewkes; trustee for two years, John Lawrence; nominating committee for 1906, James H. Bowditch, T. D. Hatfield, Robert Cameron, C. W. Parker, W. H. Spooner.

A children's garden conference will be held at Horticultural hall on December 2, at which there will be very interesting exercises, including addresses by a number of prominent supporters of this class of work. The annual exhibition of children's herbariums will be held on December 1 and 2.

Among the new classes to be introduced at the November show of 1906 will be one for dinner table decorations. The first prize will be $75 and a silver gilt medal; second, $50 and a silver medal; third, $35 and a bronze medal. Society ladies will officiate as judges.

The schedule for 1907 will be issued very shortly and will contain many sweeping changes. Many new features will be introduced, many small classes struck out and much larger prizes offered for collections and groups than heretofore. Issuing a schedule two years ahead will allow would-be exhibitors to make proper preparations.

The net profits from the late chrysanthemum show are about the same as in 1904, when the C. S. A. met here.

Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

The club meeting on November 21 was again a rousing one, there being over 100 in attendance and much enthusiasm shown. The lecture by Prof. B. M. Watson on "Botany for Young Gardeners," was deeply interesting. A good discussion followed and the lecturer was tendered a unanimous vote of thanks. The annual election of officers resulted in the selection of the old board, these having been recommended by the nominating committee: President, James Wheeler; vice-president, Thos. Westwood; treasurer, Edward Hatch; secretary, W. N. Craig; directors, Messrs. Patten, Fisher, Lumsden and Anderson.

Samples of the new club buttons were on exhibition, a sprig of mountain laurel in the center, with the club name in a circle around it, making a very pretty design. The president announced that in future all applications for membership would be referred to the executive committee before being acted upon, also that at the meeting on December 19, members were requested to bring ladies, an interesting program being in preparation for the same. As usual, a good number of new members were elected.

It was voted to donate special prizes of $25 each to the rose and carnation societies for the coming conventions.

Refreshments and music were again a feature and some interesting exhibits graced the tables, but of these and other matters we must defer reference to our next issue.

Various Notes.

Considerable changes are taking place at the Park street flower market. The regular market teams will be discontinued until further notice. On and after December 1 there will be a discount allowance of ten per cent on all goods consigned to the corporation. The sale of florists' supplies will be discontinued. The genial manager, John Walsh, will sever his connection with the market on December 1. Mr. Walsh has meditated this step for a considerable time, owing to an attack of rheumatism. His place will be difficult to fill, for his long service with the market has given him knowledge which it will take a newcomer a long time to acquire.

A change in managers has also taken place at the Music Hall market. James Rough now finds that his services are needed all the time at his Huntington avenue store and has resigned. His place is taken by James F. Knight, of Dorchester, who is a good practical florist and who will give his full time to the market.

W. N. CRAIG.

AUSTIN, TEX.—Carnival week saw a very successful chrysanthemum show for Faith-Home and a floral parade for automobiles and other vehicles.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The situation has slightly improved, chrysanthemums being less plentiful. The market is not quite so badly overloaded. The supply of nearly all flowers is, however, a little ahead of the demand, with prices steady, except on violets. Violets seem scarce. Frequently there are not enough to fill the orders, especially of the high grades. The differences in grades in this flower are very marked, the fancy stock bringing top prices far more readily than ordinary stock brings the lowest figure on the price list. The novelties in the market this week are the white lipped cypripedium, Leeannum, pink and white sweet peas at S. S. Pennock's and a scarlet seedling carnation which W. & Harry F. Evans are sending the Leo Niessen Co. In chrysanthemums, there is a pink Chadwick sent this week by E. A. Stroud to S. S. Pennock. American Beauties are more plentiful, of fine quality and averaging a little lower in price. Tea roses are improving. Valley is very fine, the fancy grade being more plentiful. The Flower Market is offering daisies in quantity. These flowers, as well as bouvardia and mignonette, are coming into greater prominence daily.

The Park Show.

The interest manifested by the public in the chrysanthemum show at Horticultural hall in Fairmount park is really wonderful. The attendance on each Sunday during November has been so large that it was necessary to station a dozen or more guards throughout the hall in order to keep the crowds moving. The east room is the center of attraction. Here the palms are arranged in the middle, while at each end are great banks of chrysanthemums in pots, showing a wealth of color most dazzling to the eye. Whether this be artistic or not, it is certainly most effective, and as an educational feature its value cannot be overestimated. The cactus room is also beautifully decorated with the queen of autumn, while a smaller number pots of the same flower are scattered through the temperate house. It was impossible to make any notes of the varieties, but the stock was well grown.

Chestnut Hill.

The chrysanthemum exhibition of the Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society was held in Jocelyn hall November 14 and 15. The hall was completely filled with a very choice display of plants and flowers, the queen of autumn and foliage plants predominating. The show was almost entirely formed of the exhibits from the large private places at the Hill. The quality proved beyond question that the standard among these gardeners is being raised to a high level. I noticed in a stroll around the room a few outside exhibitors. Dreer and Michell were there, the one with a display of choice foliage plants, the other with effectively arranged hardy chrysanthemums, also bulbs. The mighty Kleinheinz was there with some wonderful mums, his cut blooms of W. R. Church being very handsome. Of the many local exhibitors, John Little was most prominent, his exhibits being good and varied, roses, chrysanthemums and vegetables all coming in for a share of his attention. His mushroom rooms were enormous. I cannot go through a list of the other exhibitors and their exhibits. I can say they were all there. Chestnut Hill should be proud of them. There was music, a good attendance and many congratulations for President Morris, Secretary Day and Manager Knapp.

The Germantown Show.

Not a great big affair but none the less enjoyable and inspirative to a large audience that completely filled the lecture room of the Y. M. C. A. building. George Redles gave one of his able talks, which was followed with close attention. The exhibits were effectively arranged and a most creditable showing.

John F. Sibson, Fernhill, was the successful exhibitor in the cut flower classes of chrysanthemums. His blue ribbon winners were Dr. Enguehard, his best pink very fine; Indiana, a superb flower with rather long neck; Col. Appleton, Garden Queen, Chadwick, Bentley, Eaton, Rustique and Pembroke. Albert Woltemate won the red ribbon in the same classes with some nice flowers. Thomas Meehan & Sons showed some good vases of hardy pompons.

John S. Hay brought an exhibit from Henry A. Dreer, of ornamental foliage plants that was much admired. It included Adiantum Childsii, Nephrolepis Barrowsii, Ficus pandurata, Maranta Sanderiana, Dracaena goldcana, Kentia Belmoreana, auriculas, etc.

All this year's officers were re-nominated.

Price of Scottii.

Last winter the Scott firm sold at $15 a hundred, $125 a thousand, in 2¼-inch pots. This price was steadily maintained until late in the spring, when it gradually fell until in midsummer it reached $6 a hundred. The why and wherefore is rather interesting. One of our growers noticed an advertisement in the REVIEW offering rooted runners at $4 per hundred. He only allowed this to appear once, procuring the grower's entire output from February until August, thus strengthening the market. The same grower, however, found he had most too many this fall, and the price of 6-inch pot plants, which started at $1 each, has fallen to 50 cents, which is virtually the price of the old Boston. There are, however, indications of an advance for the best stock. It is probable that all good plants will bring 75 cents at Christmas.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received some very large consignments of the new heads for sowing with grass seed. As stated in the REVIEW, these heads are making quite a hit here. This firm is also receiving new styles of Pompeian ware. The smaller vases suitable for cyp, violets and orchids are very pretty for table decoration.

C. Eisele has just completed moving his stock from his old greenhouses at Eleventh and Jefferson streets to Eleventh and Roy streets, where he will carry on a wholesale business exclusively. Mr. Eisele has a number of interesting plants not often seen on commercial places, among them Asparagus duplexus, and scandens, a very graceful plant.

A local daily in reporting the Germantown show states that "Albert Woltemate won first prize for raising twelve chrysanthemums of not less than six varieties in a pot six inches in diameter." He certainly deserved it.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Prices remain about as quoted last week, with an increased cut in all lines, violets being the exception, with good demand at stiff prices. Mums and carnations are the leaders and roses take a back seat, where they undoubtedly will stay until after Thanksgiving. The retail stores all report good, steady business, and the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. is disposing of large quantities of stock every day; it makes a person wonder where the great quantity all goes to.

Various Notes.

James Eadie had a fine display window of mums the past week.

C. M. Wagner was very busy the past week. He, too, was showing some very fine mums in his window.

Thomas. Kirchner, of Quincy and Baden streets, was quite busy with funeral work. His place looks fine, and he now has the capacity for filling unlimited orders at a moment's notice.

F. W. Ziechmann's place, corner of Quincy and Cemetery streets, is in the usual good condition, and Mr. Ziechmann was hustling to keep up with his work.

Gordon Gray, on the opposite side of the street, has some very good mums, of which he makes a specialty, having the best of success every season.

Bate Bros., of East Cleveland, are cutting some very good mums and carnations.

A great many flowers were used at the Stoffts funeral, and the orders seemed to be divided among a great many florists.

F. L. Evans, secretary of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., was operated on for appendicitis November 15, and is doing as nicely as can be expected under the circumstances.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

In a visit to the establishment of John Bohrman, on Von Borries avenue, the writer met the proprietor at home and received the glad hand. John Bohrman started as an apprentice at the age of sixteen years, in the employ of Joseph Coenen, and through hard work has risen to be a successful florist. In 1890 he was admitted as a partner, the name of the firm being Coenen & Bohrman for several years, and they did lots of cemetery work. In July, 1905, John Bohrman bought out Jos. Coenen's interest, as the latter intended to locate in California. Mr. Bohrman's establishment consists of fourteen large, up-to-date greenhouses. One house is devoted to palms and ficus, one house to asparagus, one to Boston ferns, including some of the finest plants, some in 18-inch pots, some in 12-inch, and so on. There are two houses in roses, Ivory, Kaiserin and Golden Gate; three houses in carnations. The varieties growing here are chiefly Enchantress, Moonlight, Joost and Prosperity, all in fine condition. The other six houses are used for bedding plants, such as are required for cemetery work. At the front of the establishment is a handsome office, where funeral work is put up at short notice. Mr. Bohrman is an active member of the Kentucky Society of Florists and always willing to do his share when called upon. He was born in Louisville, in 1867, thus being at the age of 38 years. He is respected and always has a good word for everybody.

Charles Reimers has some of the finest poinsettias that were ever seen here. He can cut some with stems six to seven feet long. Mr. Ingram is the foreman and his place is in fine shape for the Christmas trade.

Frank Lichtefeld, father of Henry Lichtefeld, is in very poor health.

Current Comment.

The month of November has been a time of good business and a great improvement over the beautiful October. Chrysanthemums have not had it all their own way, although they have sold very well, and those who have a nice lot for Thanksgiving will reap a harvest. It has been demonstrated more than ever this year that buyers of mums over $3 a dozen are scarce. If people with fat pocketbooks are plentiful, then they do not care for the big fellows. From $2 to $3 is the price and quality wanted.

Roses are greatly improved in quality and the demand is good. Carnations

VICTORY

The best scarlet carnation—being remarkably prolific are always wanted. Enchantress seems to have been most plentiful this fall and of splendid quality. Deeper colors are scarce. I notice Flamingo is much earlier than last year.

On a recent visit to Neighbor Christenson, a few days ago, I was much impressed with a small bench of Carnation The Queen. For quantity of flowers and buds it carried me back to the old days of President Degraw. "My dear boy, there is only one house and one bench on this place that will grow that fine carnation, and that is on this spot, where I can get abundance of ventilation and 42 degrees at night." It certainly looked at home.

Mr. Christenson's place looked well. A fine lot of Bermudas will be in plenty of time for the holidays; several fine tables of mignonette and the carnations are in excellent order. He goes light on mums, only growing a few to give him room when cut for spreading his pot stuff. He had but three varieties (sensible man) Halliday for an early variety, Maud Dean and a fine white which he calls Mrs. Weeks. I think there is a slight confusion of names here, for it looked identical with the variety Adelia. It is a grand commercial white. Mr. Christenson's place is always a pleasure to visit, not only to see good culture, but to realize the beauty and comfort of perfect order and cleanliness. Oh, what a multitude of sins these virtues do cover! "Come, my boy; let's go to the shed and have another snoozer."

Some of our young blood has been traveling of late. President-elect Kasting is a very young man, but a much traveled one. He has been visiting the big cities of the west, much as he needed the rest, for the week previous to his departure he and his good wife passed through a most strenuous time. Mrs. Kasting had charge of the flower booth at the German Hospital bazaar and Billy was chairman of the committee on ways and means.

The other traveler was David, of Corfu. How delighted we are to see the boys travel and see what older heads and longer experience are doing, but if you have the faculty of observation and tact to listen and converse with your brother florists, your time and money in travel will be well spent. Never in the history of this great country, or of horticulture, has there been a brighter future than there is today, and young men should realize and rejoice in the fact. The measure of your success will be in exact proportion to your application and ability for business. We almost all of us reap what we sow. I feel our profession is only in its infancy and a great future is before the rising generation.

We recently had a call from Mr. Gilman, a violet specialist of Rhinebeck, the locality that produces those sweet little flowers for New York and several other states. Mr. Gilman's violets are superb and all come to Buffalo and are handled by Mr. Kasting. I think it was the product of Mr. Gilman that captured first prize at Chicago's great show.

I am sorry to announce that Charles Foss, proprietor of the Central Park Greenhouses, has recently made an assignment. The published statement of his affairs gave his liabilities at $8,000 and his assets at $800.

It is seldom we have any news of the florists' national game of bowling, but I want to tell you that we have a full-fledged florists' bowling team and they bowl weekly and stand third in a tournament of eight teams. The team consists of George Rathron, Sam Wallace, Wm. Weber, Carl Reish, Charles Sandiford and "Old Hoss" George McClure. They are all bowling strong except McClure. He falls down below 150 occasionally. He suffers slightly with stage fright and admits that he cannot shake off the feeling that John Westcott is watching him. Several of the old and young boys go down to root for them, and if they practice until spring they will be a dangerous quintet in the town of the cash register, Altickville.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Although there was a little improvement in the cut flower trade the past week, the retail business is not what it should be at this time of the year. Funeral orders and weddings have monopolized the time for the past two weeks. Cut stock of all kinds is piled high in the wholesale houses, with very little demand except at cheap prices. The wholesalers claim that prices and demand are far behind the average for the season but Thanksgiving day is only a week away, when prices are bound to go up, regardless of the glut that is on at this writing.

Chrysanthemums are still holding the fort and they are really the cause for the big glut in roses and carnations. Some extra fine stock is seen but the top price this week seems to be $2 per dozen.

Roses are in full supply in all varieties. While a few choice lots brought $5 per hundred it is nothing unusual to see lots of 1,000 sold at $10, short Beauties included.

The market is well supplied with fine Enchantress, Lawson, Mrs. Patten, Cardinal, Lady Bountiful and Boston Market. Some poor stock has gone to waste. Valley and Paper Whites sell fairly well. Violets, too, are cleaning up satisfactorily.

Plenty of good smilax is to be had, also adiantum, asparagus, galax leaves and common ferns.

Reports from the west end florists, who handle a great many plants, are that trade with them is good.

Various Notes.

The chrysanthemum show given by the Missouri Botanic Garden was a great success and the crowds were estimated at 1,500 per day. The show was held in a large tent, the entrance being through one of the show houses. The sight was a beautiful one and the directors were complimented on all sides. George McClure also came in for a great deal of praise. A great many varieties were shown and the quality of the stock left little to be desired. Paul Roper and a number of students were in attendance to answer questions. The exhibition was free to the public.

While in the neighborhood I paid a visit to my friends at Tower Grove park, where I found James Gurney, young Mr. Gurney and Mr. Bazil, of Bellefontaine cemetery, looking through the big houses, where we saw crotons and pandanus, which are a great credit to Hugo Schaff and Phil Gieble, the gardeners of the park, by whom we were shown through.

Treasurer Weber, of the flower show committee, has been busy making out checks to the prize winners and all have been paid in full. The show was not a success financially, but as the guarantee fund was quite large, the guarantors will probably receive in return about one-third of their subscriptions.

Fred C. Weber and John Steidle were at Kansas City last week. Fred Meinhardt and O. G. Koenig went up Wednesday night. Theo. Miller and Fred Weber, Jr., left Thursday night for the same place. Most of them are back and report a great show, with a big attendance.

W. E. Burrows and W. J. Pilcher, who left Thursday night for Indianapolis, to attend the show at that place, have returned and report that Indianapolis, too, had a big show and a fine exhibition.

Henry Ostertag, who has been sick for some time, is out and around again. It is reported that he will open a big store down town, near Broadway and Olive streets.

The Ellison Floral Co. has been very busy the last week, with receptions, having no less than five.

Theo. Miller is making a fine display of plants and cut blooms of chrysanthemums in his show house at Delmar and Euclid avenues.

Rudolph Windt, the club's official photographer, obtained some extra fine views of the late show, especially the prize winners.

Henry Baer, of Peoria, is shipping an extra fine lot of carnations to C. A. Kuehn.

Alex. Waldbart & Sons, on Horton place, report a good trade.

A. G. Greiner's display of cacti at the flower show was a great attraction for the visitors.

Mr. Barnett, representing Reed & Keller, New York, called the past week.

Mrs. W. J. Vesey, returning from Kansas City, spent the day in the city on Friday.

The florists' team lost two games to the Unions November 14, although they averaged 871 per game and 174 per man. Ellison was high man, 574; Beyer, 529; Kuehn, 524; Beneke, 517, and Meinhardt, 455. J. J. B.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

It is reported that even yet there are seedsmen who are expecting a good delivery of onion seed.

HEALY BROS., Belle Center, O., report a shipment to one firm of seventeen cars of Improved Leaming field corn for seed.

THE next question that will arise in the seed line is likely to be, "How many beans am I going to get?"

WITH onions, potatoes and cabbage resting easy on a rising market, the average market gardener is not worrying at the prospect of high seed prices. They all express a willingness to divide with the seedsman.

SOME of the surplus lists that are arriving at different points agitate the recipients. They find, however, that in most cases anything they want is disposed of before their telegram ordering same reaches the offerer.

A. E. MCKENZIE, of Brandon, Man., reports that the two cars of onion sets spoken of in the REVIEW a week or two ago, reached Brandon safely and he is more convinced than ever that his method of getting onion sets forward safely is the right plan.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. A. Berry, of A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Iowa; Andrew Morton, representing Peter Henderson & Co., New York; Eugene Schaetle, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, France; H. M. Clair, representing C. L. Allen & Co., Philadelphia.

ROBT. BUIST Co., Philadelphia, is advertising American tuberoses in English gardening papers, offering to lay down in London Dwarf Double Pearl at $10.66 per thousand. They give a list of forty or more customers, to whom they say they ship annually, which reads like a clipping from Burke's Peerage.

IN England there is continued discussion as to the priority of the names Ailsa Craig and Excelsior as applied to onions which most in the trade concede to be identical. It is widely grown in England and many private gardeners in the United States grew it this season, especially for exhibition.

FROM reports it is quite a while since the average onion set grower was in such a quandary over what he would best do about securing seed. A high price for seed has not prevailed at this time of the year for several seasons and that the price of sets after the harvest of 1906 will be any higher on account of it the growers very much doubt.

THE seed trade committee of which Charles N. Page is chairman, has a new idea on the government seed distribution. It is hoped to interest President Roosevelt in the matter and possibly so appeal to his ideas of fairness that he will, in his forthcoming message to Congress, pronounce against the distribution for which appropriation must be made at this session.

It is reported from the southwest that crops of melons and other vine seeds, which often yield well in that section have yielded quite poorly this year.

THE Helen Lewis sweet pea, which won the silver medal as the best variety of 1905 at the National Sweet Pea Society's show in London, England, has been sold by the raiser, John Watson, Jr., to Chas. W. Breadmore, the Winchester seedsman, for dissemination in 1906.

A. A. BERRY, Clarinda, Iowa, says that the amount of hardship the government free distribution of seeds imposes upon the seedsmen, is just about half the extent of the 38,000,000 seed packets put out, as no doubt half of the packages are used, the others being dropped into the waste basket as useless, which they are to a great extent.

THE government seed distribution for 1906 will begin December 1. Thirty-eight million packets are to be sent out this year.

W. J. FOSGATE, Santa Clara, Cal., left Chicago Tuesday, continuing on his annual tour east. The other California growers are expected to reach Chicago about Thanksgiving time.

ON November 18, fire destroyed the building at Knoxville, Tenn., occupied by Broyles, McClellan & Lackey, wholesale dealers in seeds and agricultural implements.

HERE is another dollar; we cannot get along without the REVIEW.—C. E. MANSFIELD, Fitchburg, Mass.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, must seek a new location, as the building they occupy at 36 Cortlandt street, New York, is to be razed.

E. S. THOMPSON, trading as the Michigan Seed Co., and the Central Seed & Bulb Co., has moved to 194 Randolph street, Chicago, and will do a retail as well as wholesale commission business.

THE L. A. Budlong Co. has been advertising a big fall crop of spinach by means of cards in thousands of Chicago street cars. Backed up by a force of salesmen calling on all grocers, hotels and restaurants, they report that the advertising was very successful.

DEATH OF T. W. WOOD.

Timothy W. Wood, senior member of the firm of T. W. Wood & Sons, and president of the Implement Company, of Richmond, Va., died November 12. Mr. Wood had been in failing health for some time. Early in June he left for Europe and spent about three months abroad, hoping to improve by a change of air and scenes.

A native of Lincoln, England, where he was born sixty-six years ago, Mr. Wood came to this country in 1873 and early settled in Richmond, where he laid the foundation for what has since become one of the leading seed houses in the south. The beginning was unpretentious, but Mr. Wood brought to the business a sound judgment, which, with the experience gained during his connection with similar enterprises in England, made a success from the first. Today the firm covers a territory including practically the entire south. The house also does considerable foreign business.

The other chief business connection of Mr. Wood was the Implement Co., of Richmond, of which he secured control about eight years ago. His sons were associated with him in this business until the time of his death, with the exception of one, who withdrew from the firm to open a seed house of his own in Louisville, Ky.

The first wife of Mr. Wood was Miss Elizabeth Price, of England. About two years ago he married Mrs. Anna Ingram, of Manchester. He leaves four children: Henry W. Wood, William P. Wood and Mrs. H. Stuart MacLean, of Richmond, and C. F. Wood, of Louisville.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Uncle Sam runs not only one of the largest seed shops, but the largest publishing house in the United States, each located at Washington, and he makes about as much out of one as the other. The publishing department has recently been turning out an unusual quantity of matter of interest to seedsmen, prepared in the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Department of Agriculture.

In line with the Department's recent publication of the results of tests of adulterated grass seeds, The Seeds of the Bluegrasses is the more important of the pamphlets just to hand. The work is in two parts, one bearing the sub-title, The Germination, Growing, Handling and Adulteration of Bluegrass Seeds, by Edgar Brown, the other Descriptions of the Seeds of the Commercial Bluegrasses and their Impurities, by F. H. Hillman. The second part is freely illustrated, not only with drawings from which, with the aid of a magnifying glass, the various Prof. Galloway says in the letter of transmittal that "the descriptions and illustrations will be of great value in furnishing seedsmen the necessary information to enable them to distinguish the different species," which may be taken to mean that "didn't know it was loaded" will no longer pass as an excuse in the case of the sale of adulterated seed.

ASTERS.

If I plant asters now will they be in bloom by the middle of February? Can I procure small plants? K. C.

The new crop of aster seed has just been gathered; it is doubtful if anyone has small plants from last season's seed and without them you could not be successful. Usually the aster is only grown for a summer crop, perhaps to occupy a bench no longer needed for propagating or a house where violets have been thrown out, the seed being planted in February or March. The Market.

Business has been good the past week. No cut flowers are going to waste. Chrysanthemums are plentiful but the demand continues brisk. Roses are fairly plentiful, but the supply of carnations is not equal to the demand. Some good carnations are being sent in now.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. F. Barbe died last Tuesday. Mr. Barbe has the sympathy of the trade in his bereavement.

The C. A. Shaeffer Floral Co. has ordered a new twenty-horsepower automobile. This firm will start in business with every modern convenience for handling the trade.

Geo. M. Kellogg was unable to act on the florists' entertainment committee on account of illness.

The Florists' Bowling Club will hold a tournament next week to contest for the Geo. M. Kellogg cup and other prizes. The contest will conclude with a banquet at the Midland hotel next Saturday evening.

Wm. H. Woerner and family, of Omaha, have been visiting here the past week. Mr. Woerner had a display of wire designs at the show.

Wm. Kimball, formerly with W. H. Humfeld, has taken a situation with Samuel Murray.

The florists of Kansas City should get together and work to make the next flower show a record breaker. KAY-SEE.

TORONTO.

Trade during the last couple of weeks has been good, especially as the demand for mums has been above the average. Perhaps this is accounted for by a number of the small growers not growing as many as previously. Roses and carnations are coming in more plentifully as the supply of mums is decreasing. The demand for stock in general this fall has been unusually good and practically all good stock has found ready sale.

DENVER.

The Market.

There is not much change from last writing, if any. Prices have held well, though there has been a slight falling off in some lines, notably in lack of demand for second grade stock, which, on account of the recent scarcity, commanded a good price. The trade in town was good, and fine outside. People are getting a lot of things done in the social world. The last week was marked by a number of interesting events. One of the most important was the reception given by Mrs. McDonald, the governor's wife, the Symphony concert and other smaller events, all of which used flowers. Among the events which stand out prominently on the social horizon is the Charity Ball, which takes place at the Brown Palace hotel November 23. The decorations, always elaborate, will be, as heretofore, by the Park Floral Co.

Beauties are plentiful and the supply equal to the demand. The quality is fine. Brides and Maids are a little more plentiful and some very fine stock can be had. Indications are that there will be a good cut for Thanksgiving. Liberty and Richmond are in good form and enough to go around.

Carnations are not so scarce as at last writing, with the exception of red. The quality is of the best. Chrysanthemums are now in quantity and almost any kind can be had. They sell at from $1 per dozen to $4. Violets are scarce. At no time have there been enough to go around, but we anticipate a larger supply for Thanksgiving. They retail for $1 and $1.50 per hundred, with the chances of a raise in price for selects.

Blooming plants have had a good sale, especially chrysanthemums. Some of the stock is not first-class and the department stores are selling them, which is sufficient to say. Begonia Lorraine is fine and can be seen in all the shops.

Various Notes.

The Daniels & Fisher Store Co. had a chrysanthemum exhibition November 15 and 16, which was very good, some fine blooms being exhibited, as well as plants. They also had a table and mantel decoration which was very creditable indeed. It was under the supervision of A. H. Bush.

J. A. Valentine, N. A. Benson, Emil Glauber and Al Mauff attended the Kansas City flower show, which they say was good.

F. T. Rushmore, of the city park greenhouses, has some of the finest chrysanthemums seen for some time, some of which he had on exhibition at the Kansas City flower show.

The god of love appears to be busy in some of our establishments and you cannot tell where his shafts will strike, sometimes in the most unexpected places, as was evidenced by the departure of Boliver Ellis Gillis, who slipped out of town very quietly, ostensibly to visit the Kansas City flower show, but in reality to join the ranks of the benedicts. They say the fortunate lady is a very wealthy widow from New Orleans. His many friends are ready with the congratulations on their return.

R. S. Mahan, of the Alpha Floral Co., is now seen at his store after his illness.

DISEASED LILIES.

I have a lot of Harrisii and longiflorum in 5-inch pots. They were started August 15 in a good sandy loam with a small quantity of bone meal added. The leaves on some of them are curling up and turning yellow. It seems to be spreading rapidly. I am keeping them in a temperature from 52 to 55 degrees at night and 60 to 65 degrees in the daytime. What can I do for them to prevent the disease from spreading? Enclosed find some of the leaves. C. W.

These lilies are infested with the Bermuda disease and as yet I have learned of no remedy for it after it has once got a hold. I would advise segregating the diseased plants and giving them a higher temperature, not with the idea of effecting a cure, but by this means you may rush off a few flowers before the disease has had time to entirely destroy the plant. This may also help to check the trouble from spreading to the healthy stock.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE SAN FRANCISCO SHOW.

The fall exhibition jointly held by the Californian State Floral Society and the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society November 9 to 11 was a success from every point of view. Ideal California weather and plenty of interest taken, both by the exhibitors and the general public, tended to make this the most complete success ever held in San Francisco. The attendance was good and exhibits of all classes were well up to the mark. Thanks to our warm weather, the showing of outdoor chrysanthemums has never been excelled and the collections shown by Hector McLean and Thos. McIntyre, of Menlo Park, leave nothing either to be imagined or desired.

The largest assortment of plants was exhibited by the Cox Seed Co., whose exhibit consisted of not only greenhouse and stove plants, but a large collection of ornamental shrubbery. H. Plath, of Ocean View, had the finest specimen ferns in the exhibition, as well as several very large palms. The collection of ferns, palms and orchids by Sievers & Co. was very complete, as was also their exhibit of carnations. A large vase of Hannah Hobart was a feature. In addition, Sievers & Co. exhibited several bunches of A. Spreckles, Mrs. M. A. Patton and John Carbone. A new seedling, No. 506, is worthy of special mention. It is of a very dark shade of crimson and resembles Roosevelt. Sievers & Co. received the competitive prize, a silver cup, for the most popular exhibit. Schwerin Bros. received first premium for their rose exhibit. They also showed a seedling carnation, No. 21. It is a good shade of pink and a sport from Enchantress.

Thos. Thompson, of Santa Cruz, showed several vases of seedling carnations, some of which are of considerable merit. H. L. Goertzhain, of the Redwood Nurseries, received first prize for his chrysanthemum exhibit. Col. Appleton, Bonaaffon and Convention Hall were especially noticeable. A large assortment of the best commercial carnations was also shown by Mr. Goertzhain. The Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, received special mention for their display of Col. Appleton mums.

Hector McLean, gardener to J. L. Flood, Menlo Park, received first prize for outdoor-grown roses. He also made a good showing in violets and carnations. Henry Maier, gardener to W. S. Tevis, made one of the finest showings of Rex begonias, cyclamen and coleus ever seen here. J. W. Bagge also made a big exhibit of coleus, for which he received first prize.

W. H. Crocker's exhibit of dahlias was wonderful when it is considered that we are now in the winter season.

Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst, made a large display of Japanese plants, palms and ferns, also roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. The Garden City Pottery Co. showed its wares. The Illinois-Pacific Glass Co., the Carolina Glass Co., Columbia, S. C., and Pedro Llubere made attractive displays.

Frank Pelicano received first prize for violets, also for his exhibit in the floral design competition, the design being a canoe of roses, valley and carnations. The Belmont Floral Co. received second prize for a design representing a wine cask of Estelle carnations, ferns and clusters of grapes. Geo. Hansen, of Berkeley, made an interesting exhibit of drawings for landscape gardening.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Over six months since we have had a drop of rain. This state of affairs affects business in general to a great extent and incidentally of course the florists' trade as well. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful and the prices remain about the same as they have for the past month. Roses, owing to the very favorable weather, are more plentiful than is usual at this season of the year. Carnations are more abundant, also, and somewhat cheaper. Outdoor mums can be had at any price and they are of good quality throughout. Indoor mums are scarce and from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen is asked by the growers for their best stock. Violets are hardly equal to the demand. The stores are paying from 75 cents to $1 per dozen bunches. There is still some outdoor stock offered, but it shows the results of picking long after the season has ended.

Various Notes.

A visit to the greenhouses of McLellan & Co., at Burlingame, shows everything in splendid shape for the approaching season. The houses of Beauty, Bride and Maid are coming in during the present warm spell at a rapid rate.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Ludemann have returned from their European trip.

G. Rossi, the wholesale florist, has just finished erecting three flats on McAllister and Pierce streets.

C. Garibaldi, of Colma, has a big supply of Princess violets at present, of very good quality.

A. Mann, Jr., has received a big consignment of Christmas novelties.

H. C. Dolby, of Glenwood Springs, Colo., passed through here on his way to Los Angeles.

The Society Hortensia of Alameda county attended the exhibition in a body on Saturday evening.

There are some aspirants for the posi-

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The flower show of the Southern California Horticultural Association was a great success. Much credit is due President F. Edward Gray, Secretary Braunt and the members of the executive committee for the way they conducted the show. Fred H. Howard, chairman of the show committee, also is reaping a fair reward in the way of congratulations.

The cup for the largest and best collection of chrysanthemums went to William W. Marugg, of North Pomona. Mr. Marugg has been in California but one year and this is his first year as a professional grower. The greatest number of awards for chrysanthemums went to William Anderson, the veteran grower of Los Angeles county. The Germain cup went to Alexander Ambercrombie, gardener to M. J. Connell. The Lord cup went to Miss Winifred Waite for the best bridal canopy. The Redondo Floral Co.'s cup went to Miss Lord for the best bridal bouquet, while the pin offered by the association was awarded to John Gordon for superior skill in bouquet making. MRS. MCCREA, landscape architect for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, announces that the company will do considerable work in the way of improvements of station grounds next season. All the new stations being built are surrounded by well planted grounds.

H. E. VAN DEMAN says that the proper distance apart to plant pecan trees in rich soil is not less than fifty feet, and seventy-five or even 100 feet is better. Their tops will interfere at fifty feet apart in about twenty years, if the trees are given proper treatment. On poor land the distance apart should be less, for they will not grow so fast, nor live as long as those on rich land. A pecan tree should be at its prime at fifty years from planting.

PLANTING AND PRUNING TREES.

[A synopsis of a paper read by R. Timmier, before the Omaha Florists' Club, November 2, 1905.]

I don't believe that I can tell you many new things in this line, so I will just bring to discussion some well known facts from my observations, and other people's. First I will discuss the time of planting. About this question there exists a regular tug of war. Some favor fall and others spring planting. Both parties are generally in the right. There is generally the belief that after the leaves drop and the ground freezes a few inches, that all the life in trees and shrubs comes to a standstill. But it is scientifically proved that this is not so. Trees, even in zero weather, when they are covered with ice, keep on growing. This growth is not visible, as the part which is mostly growing is underground, the roots. Then any planting ought to be done in fall.

People who preach spring planting are right to some extent. A tree perspires all winter and if you live in places where the winter airs are very dry you are liable to lose your trees, but if you have a chance to give them a thorough wetting I think this can be overcome. From a scientific standpoint, where trees are taken up in spring and planted right away they ought to keep right on growing and the circulation of the sap is checked for only a very short time, that is, if the weather is favorable, but should there be a hot drought many of these trees would be lost. An early fall planted tree will always withstand a spring drought better than a spring planted one, as in most instances it is well rooted by that time.

Now fall and spring planting from a commercial point. Usually there is more time in the fall and the ground is in better working condition. In spring it often happens that everything gets into leaf right away and anyone who has to do any large planting cannot get around to do it; consequently planting should be done in the fall, as early as possible. Don't wait until the last leaves fall but start as soon as the leaves discolor, even if you have to strip some of them off. By planting early in the fall you gain time and the trees make better growth the first year. I for myself would do all my planting in the fall.

I have observed that many people in planting use little manure, many of them saying they are going to use liquid manure in the summer. It is all right if that is done. But in the summer there is other work to do and this is neglected. The cheapest way, and that is what we want, is to use a good deal of manure while planting. Dig the holes large enough and put manure in the bottom, mixed with soil, and put more soil on top so that the roots of the tree do not come in contact with the manure, but it ought to be in easy reach when they form new fibrous roots. After covering the roots with good soil put manure on top, so that with every watering and rain fertilizer is washed down to the roots. In our short-lived age we want to see quick results and I don't see any other way in getting them. After you fill the hole up, give a good mulching. Mulching has more than one good result. Done in the fall it keeps the frost longer out of the ground and gives the roots of the newly planted tree a longer growing season. And in summer it keeps the moisture in the ground. In spring mulching keeps the ground longer from being thawed up so the tree don't get an early start, to be injured by the late spring frosts.

Trimming or not trimming trees while planting is a greatly argued question. Even experts are of different opinions; some favor the trimming and others like to see the trimming done one year after planting. It is hard to tell who is right, but I think that in taking up a tree, large or small, we ought to try to balance the loss of roots by trimming the top. How much to trim cannot be laid down by a rule; everybody has to use judgment. The better and the more roots a tree has, the less trimming it needs. If roots are few, trim heavily.

I have seen people in the southwest go to the forests and dig up elm trees, which are considered hard to handle. They would cut the top off entirely and just plant the roots and stem. A row of these trees looked, after planting, like a row of posts. I never believed that any of them would live but I hardly saw any losses there. Certainly every tree will not stand for hard trimming and I would not advise to do any severe cutting back like that, but just cut enough back to balance the top with the loss of roots.

Club Meeting.

Our Florists' Club meeting, on November 15, was well attended. Fine cyclamens were shown by George Rackham, of Detroit, by Christ Winterich, of Defiance, who came down with the stock, and by E. A. Kuhnke. A bunch of mums by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., drew much favorable comment. The grower said they were only seconds, but most growers present would have been proud to let them go under his own name as firsts. E. G. Hill Co. also sent a large lot of mums that showed what skilled hands can do, but their flowers arrived mostly in poor condition, yet those that kept best brought fancy prices at the end of the meeting. Krueger Bros., of this city, showed fine American Beauties, which shows that they can be grown in Toledo as well as anywhere else. Mr. Winterich also brought up a few mahonia branches and as everybody thought they would be the right thing for decorating and making up, the members present soon put "the smile that won't come off" on him by the orders they gave him. He also showed a new impatiens of salmon color that took well with the boys. It is called Impatiens Holstei.

After the business part of the meeting was out of the way, E. A. Kuhnke was called upon to explain how he grew the cyclamen shown by him, which he did in a short, snappy talk, after which answering questions by the members. Mr. Winterich took the floor and, being an expert in cyclamen culture, kept the attention of the audience for a good while. Mr. Winterich produces his own seed and sells about 40,000 plants during the season. The plants shown by him, although not in bloom, showed that he certainly knows how to handle them. The cyclamen sent by George Rackham, of Detroit, were more in bloom than any and well up to the standard of excellence set by him for a number of years. We were only sorry that he did not come himself.

Fred Ritter, our pottery man, came down with a box of cigars and the boys dutifully emptied the box. Our president, George Bayer, has had new honors heaped upon him, being elected to the city council from the fourth ward on the independent ticket. Wonder what trouble he will get into next.

Thos. Magee, of the Scottwood Greenhouses, was not present at the last meeting. It would have cost him a box of ten-centers to square matters with the boys. He had a large wedding decoration on hand the day before the meeting and certainly did a fine job. After his men had finished, he went to the house to inspect and there the bride caught sight of him and she was so well pleased and the house looked so gorgeous that smack, GERANIUMS.

Referring to an item on the geranium under the heading of "Timely Reminders" in your issue of November 9, I wish to ask for further information as to their "needing practically no water for several months." Can they be held for such a length of time as that in the sand after rooting without injury to the future plant? R. H. C.

Geraniums, if rooted in flats, or to be more correct, boxes of sand, need very little water after being rooted. Between now and February one watering per month should suffice. All that is needed is to prevent them from shriveling up. As to their being hurt by such treatment, we would say that for many years we have grown all our bedding stock this way and have not lost five per cent of the cuttings put in. Of course the plants will stand more water, but we do not think it desirable to encourage growth before February. When taken out of the flats at that date they will be hard, stocky plants with a mass of fine, fibrous roots which will soon develop fine plants in a moderately warm and moist house and make splendid 4-inch pot stock before bedding-out time comes around.

ERIE, PA.—E. C. Hill has a seedling geranium which has made a hit with everyone who has seen it. It is cerise in color and has a fine habit.

MACON, GA.—The Idle Hour Nurseries, under the ownership of D. C. Horgan, are having a genuine boom. The store on Cotton avenue is one of the most constantly busy places in Macon. It is said to be the best equipped and handsomest store of the kind in Georgia. At the big fair just closed the concern received six first awards.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business was only medium during the past week. Several large decorations helped to move some stock, but the general run of trade was scarcely up to standard. In a week Thanksgiving will be upon us and from present prospects the call for flowers will be large this year. Many orders have already been booked. There will be a slight increase over the present quoted prices. Of course the chrysanthemum will be still with us, and a good crop of roses will be on. Carnations, too, will be in pretty heavy supply. Other varieties of flowers we expect to be equal to the demand.

Mums are at their height now and fine large ones are to be seen in all of the wholesale houses. Still the medium ones sell best. The supply of small mums, especially in white, is very large, and it is with difficulty that they are moved. Carnations are coming in larger supply, and pink and white roses are almost a glut. Red roses are scarce and sell on sight. Beauties, as is usual, are in demand and sell out clean daily.

Of miscellaneous stock, there is quite an assortment, and a good demand. Violets perhaps head the list, with the demand far greater than the supply. Green goods remain fairly plentiful.

Various Notes.

Quite a party of Cincinnati florists attended the flower show in Indianapolis last week and were well pleased with what they saw and also with the hospitality of the Indiana florists. Among those who went were E. G. Gillett, Mrs. Gillett and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Kyrk, R. Witterstaetter, Sam Kunz, C. E. Critchell, and Mr. Keller, of Lexington, Ky.

Many of the retail florists have started to handle crockery of various descriptions as a side line and they report it to be a paying departure. It is certainly very attractive and adds to the general appearance of the window display, also of the store.

L. H. Kyrk has put in a line of crockery to sell wholesale and reports a good demand for it. C. J. OHMER.

CHASSELL, MICH.—The Lutey Co. is doing a first-class business throughout the copper country, with establishments at Chassell, Red Jacket and Calumet. The local plant consists of three houses for carnations and two for roses, with one house for chrysanthemums followed by bulbous stock. At Calumet there are ten houses with a total of about 20,000 square feet of glass.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it, it will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Unrooted cuttings at same rates with 25 extra on each 100. Cash before delivery.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The past week has been one of the kind that keeps everyone in a good humor; everybody busy and no time to think of our troubles, although the retail men say they are not making any money. The wholesale men say there is no scarcity of stock and from the quantities of chrysanthemums, Beauties and roses seen one is ready to believe them. However, carnations still continue to hold well in price, and violets have been somewhat scarce this week. But all in all, the reports from wholesalers and retailers are that business is all right.

Various Notes.

Wm. Loew and Jos. Jones, who have done business for some time as Loew & Jones, have dissolved partnership and Mr. Jones has opened a store of his own on corner of Fifth avenue and Liberty street.

Mr. Sam McClements' buggy was turned over the other day, throwing him to the ground. He was painfully but not seriously injured. This is his third accident of various kinds in a short time.

The Florists' Club is arranging for a smoker, Tuesday, December 5. Quite an elaborate entertainment is being planned. Cards will be sent to all members whose dues are paid. Those in arrears will have an opportunity to pay up or they will have to do their smoking outside.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decorations for the banquet given by the Scottish Rite Masons last Friday. This was probably one of the largest affairs that will take place this season. They used 5,000 yards of laurel wreathing, 100 large cases of wild smilax, fourteen vanloads of palms and other plants. Duquesne Gardens, where the banquet was held, was a garden of beauty and reflects much credit on Mrs. Williams and her staff of workmen.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has issued a handsomely printed supply catalogue.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—J. Heintz & Sons gave each visitor a flower on November 9 and it took 2,500 to go around. They had advertised a special sale of ferns at their store on West State street.

ESCANABA, MICH.—Peterson & Son made extensive alterations in their establishment the past summer and have a thoroughly up-to-date place of 10,000 feet in glass. Two new houses 20x100 have just been finished. They heat with hot water from two boilers in a detached building. A general stock is grown.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Show.

Our flower show has certainly been the most successful ever held in this city. We are not yet ready to say exactly how much we have added to our treasury, but we will be far ahead of our expenses and we will have the best encouragement to keep on and work for even a better one in the near future.

It has been almost decided that a permanent organization will be formed which will be known as the Floral Association of New Orleans, a sort of auxiliary association to the New Orleans Horticultural Society. A membership of at least 1,000 ladies will be easily secured, each one paying a yearly fee of $1 in exchange for four admission tickets. This sum of $1,000 will go a good way toward paying the expenses of the exhibitions which would be given at least every sixteen months.

Various Notes.

The weather is still quite warm. Chrysanthemums are in full bloom in all the gardens. The market is fair, roses being planted in abundance.

Abele Bros. bring the best roses to the French market.

M. Cook & Son's late chrysanthemums are fine enough to last until Christmas.

J. Fonta had a lot of Dr. Enguehard and Wm. Duckham raised outside and without covering. They were fine flowers, only a little late to be of use at the first of November.

U. J. Virgin has purchased for $25,000 the G. Titard residence on Canal street. His intention is to make it still more attractive by the erection of a range of up-to-date greenhouses, which will be second to none in our city.

E. Valdejo is selling his Gloire de Lorraine very fast and at a good price. They are nice, but our changeable climate and damp atmosphere do not seem to agree with their perfect development.

M. M. L.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—J. Heintz & Sons had a very successful fall flower show and special plant sale November 10 and 11.

The Market.

Business remains about the same as it has the past three or four weeks. Mums find a ready sale, but only the medium-priced varieties, such as can be retailed at from $2 to $3 per dozen, are in demand. Roses and carnations are becoming more plentiful. Violets are bringing a good price.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the club, held November 15, was very well attended. Secretary J. F. Sullivan being absent, the report of the committee on cement benches was held over until the next meeting. The question box, as usual, brought forth many interesting discussions.

Had the stork been a little quicker we might have smoked cigars to the health of Albert Pochelon (Bemb), Jr., but as it was they will be expected December 6.

Various Notes.

Robert Flowerday has been in Toronto, acting as judge at the show.

J. F. Sullivan merely stopped in to say "Hello!" making a flying trip from the east to Chicago.

C. H. Pease, of the Detroit Cut Flower Co., reports a marked increase in business since the opening day.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf and J. J. Karrin, Philadelphia; M. E. Thorn, Harrietta, Mich. H. S.

NATURAL GAS.

I am thinking of using natural gas instead of soft coal for heating my greenhouse. Will it affect plants in the greenhouse? Will it be as economical as coal at $7 per ton, the gas costing 35 cents per thousand feet? H. A.

Natural gas if allowed to escape in greenhouses will kill plants the same as will manufactured gas. For heating purposes 30,000 cubic feet of gas are considered the equivalent of one ton of good coal; 30,000 cubic feet at 35 cents per thousand is equivalent to coal at $10.50 per ton. First cost considered the coal is cheapest. If the gas saves the expense of a night fireman it may prove a profitable investment even at the rate mentioned. L. C. C.

SLIPPING POINTS

There is a limit to the strain up to which a set screw in a gear will hold on a round shafting—we know just what that limit is. Before it's reached we use a square shafting in place of the round. This square shaft passing through a corresponding opening in the gear, absolutely prevents any possible slipping. It is the ACCURATE COMPUTING, the simple and inexpensive way in which these various POSSIBILITIES are met—even before they exist—the gives one confidence in a concern. It is this constant figuring on the emergency call that makes our ventilating devices sure—makes you sure they are sure. After all, confidence is the backbone of the whole thing, so when you build in the Spring see to it that the B.-H.-P. Co.'s apparatus goes in. If you do intend building in the Spring, why not get ready NOW, so you'll be ready THEN (ahead of the other fellow) ?

Established 42 years. U. G. SCOLLAY, MGR.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

ANGELUS CHRISTMAS BELLS

NO BETTER BELL CAN BE MADE AT ANY PRICE, AND THE PRICE IS REASONABLE

Angelus and Alpha Bells are made in 2½, 5, 6, 7, 9, 12 and 15-inch sizes. For the convenience of those who want to see these Bells we will mail a 2½-inch Angelus Bell for 30 cents, and a 2½-inch Alpha Bell for 20 cents. Price lists on application.

We do not believe there is a town, however small, where a good business cannot be done with these bells.

In reply to many inquiries, we wish to state that we do not manufacture paper bells, and do not intend to do so. We find they are utterly unsatisfactory; they accumulate dust and dirt to an incredible degree and lose their shape so that they soon lose all semblance to the shape of a bell. They satisfy neither buyer nor seller. They may be all right for 5 and 10-cent stores, where they are found in profusion, but not for florists. They are all played out with florists in the east, and will soon be played out in the west

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Covering the Bulbs.

For the past two seasons at this date we were frozen up tight. November 25, 1905, is a lovely, bright mild day and the little European sparrow, which may take centuries to learn the wisdom and comfort of migration south, is fluttering about as lively as in April. We can do with such beautiful weather for weeks to come, but should be prepared for a severe drop in temperature and wintry blasts. Now is the time your beds of tulips and narcissi that are in flats, covered with three or four inches of earth or tanbark, should receive a 6-inch covering of stable litter. We always thought it best to let the earth covering of these bulbs be frozen an inch or two, because it prevents the tulips running up long and spindling. Don't overdo it. About five or six inches are enough. No harm if frost does go through the litter and an inch into the soil covering. Sometimes we get a foot of snow, the best of all winter protections, but we cannot depend on that.

Last spring when Mr. Beerhorst, the bulb grower of Sassenheim, Holland, was here, we had a long talk on the best way of keeping tulips and narcissi before forcing and he expressed himself as horrified to read that occasionally the pickax is brought into requisition in getting out the frozen flats. Perhaps it was the writer who had occasion to mention such brutal treatment. This does not often occur. Mr. Beerhorst also had with him written instructions how to build or prepare what I would call a bulb cellar, which I promised to slightly elaborate and have published. After careful perusal I was convinced that his plan was not suited to our climate.

But he told me one thing which was new. He pronounced a tulip as absolutely hardy, as hardy as an oak, but said the Von Sion narcissus is not. He had known them to perish in Holland with 15 degrees of frost. This may be new to some, as it was to me. We always treated the Von Sion as being as hardy as a tulip. Roman hyacinths should have very little frost and never be handled when frozen. Paper Whites and none of the Polyanthus narcissi should ever be touched by frost.

Cyclamen.

I notice that cyclamen sown in October are well up in the seed pans and need potting off. Far better than small pots for these tiny corms is to put them in flats. Transplanted into flats they can grow in them without being disturbed for another two months. We have tried both small pots and flats and much prefer the latter, to produce a vigorous plant and good bulb. Leaf-mold is always advocated for cyclamen, especially in the younger stages. You don't always have leaf-mold. Now here is where the compost from last year's hotbed comes in. There can be no ammonia left in it and its mechanical condition and composition are about the same as leaf-mold. It can be used in any compost. In transplanting these little cyclamens don't leave the little bulb on the surface. Put it just below the surface. They will soon work their way to the top.

While speaking of cyclamen, the season of their beauty is just commencing and what plant have we more beautiful in flower and foliage, and so durable in the living room? The cyclamen will endure quite a low temperature but if you want to do them just right we have found 55 degrees at night to be the thing.

Small Ferns.

The demand for small fern dishes seems as great as ever and the quantity of small ferns used for this purpose must be enormous. Don't make the mistake, so often seen, of keeping the little ferns on a bench with a lot of steam or hot water pipes underneath, and perhaps only the merest covering of sand or ashes on the boards. Little heat as you may think will penetrate an inch board, it is enough to shrivel up the little ferns. Put on two or three inches of ashes, or something that will keep their roots cool.

The Lilies.

Japan lilies intended for Easter, which have been doing as well in a cold frame as anywhere, should now be brought into a warmer temperature. It is not toward spring than in early winter, but what protection you use should be applied now. Some use a light covering of straw. If this is heavy enough to protect the plants it is also heavy enough to weigh on the plants and rot them. There is nothing equal to evergreen boughs, and where the hemlock spruce grows its branches are the best of all. It is a great pity to have fine pansies now and let them freeze out before spring for the sake of a little labor and thought. WILLIAM SCOTT.

NEW SHASTA DAISIES.

The photograph of a plant of Alaska, herewith produced, was taken last July in our nursery. The plant was a tiny specimen received from Luther Burbank sixteen months previously. It has received no special treatment. At the time the photograph was taken it carried over 250 blossoms, none under four and one-half inches across and many an inch larger. The plant was six feet across each way and about four feet high.

Of these new daisies Alaska is the first to bloom and also produces a second crop. It is also the most rapid grower. California produces cream-colored flowers and has very long stems. Westralia is the last to bloom and has the smallest flower, but is my choice as a florists' flower. The blossoms have two rows of petals and last cut much longer than either of the others. I have succeeded in getting flowers six inches across, and a friend of mine, who has very rich borders, grows them six and a half inches and over.

They are easily propagated from cuttings in the spring. I cannot advise raising from seed. They revert too necessary to begin forcing yet. New Year's will do for that. If they have 45 degrees at night for the month of December it will be warm enough. Get them well rooted before you give them a high temperature.

Shasta Daisy Alaska.

(The plant is sixteen months old and has 250 flowers.)

Protecting Pansies.

Thousands of pansies are lost or crippled every winter through pure neglect in protection. It is true this occurs more much to the old types. A good one is the exception and they occupy a great deal of space. We have, however, a seedling that bloomed all last November. We are trying it again this season and if it proves as satisfactory as it did last year we may send it out.

Any florist who can use long-stemmed white flowers in July and August will find these daisies a paying investment.

EDW. ALEX. WALLACE.

SHOW NOTES.

Echoes from Kansas City.

Frank Rushmore, gardener at the city greenhouses in the park at Denver, sent a box of chrysanthemums to his townsmen who were at the Kansas City show, for exhibition only. They arrived late, but they staged them, and some of the blooms were so creditable as to attract more than passing notice from growers.

John N. May, one of the judges at the Kansas City show, said to a reporter: "I have attended most of the important flower shows in this country for many years and believe the Nephrolepis Personi elegantissima which won first prize Monday night cannot be duplicated anywhere in this country. They are the finest specimens I ever saw. In other cities the florists seem to have striven only to multiply the stock, while here attention has been given to produce the finest grade possible. If I were asked to pick out the finest exhibit in the entire show I should not hesitate to select these ferns." They were exhibited by W. L. Rock.

J. A. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, writes: "It seems to me that no adequate mention has been made of the exhibit of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine made by Samuel Murray at the Kansas City show, although the group was pictured in last week's REVIEW. He had twenty-five plants in 6-inch pots that were simply magnificent, better than anything I have ever seen, and better than I thought these plants could be done. We Denver men rather took it for granted that these were the pick from a large number grown, and that Mr. Murray could probably not anywhere near duplicate the exhibit. But on going to his greenhouses we found that he had several hundred there, equally as good, and when I tell you that I sold Mr. Murray this stock out of 2-inch pots in May last, and that he only had a total of 500, you will better appreciate how much to the grower's credit there is in the exhibit he put up. His house of Lorraine was certainly a wonderful sight."

The total paid admissions at Kansas City this year were 31,537, cash receipts at the gate $7,884.25. The receipts at the last show, in 1902, were $9,427.50, or $1,534.25 more than for the show just held. The premiums at that time amounted to $5,626, while this year $4,400 will cover the prize list expense.

BEST EXHIBITION VARIETIES.

As has been my custom for the past five or six years, I append a list of thirty varieties that on their record this year are entitled to rank as the top notchers for exhibition growers. This list is made up after a good deal of thought, study and comparison as to the way different varieties have been set up at different exhibitions. The varieties are set down in the order of their merit.

White.

White: Beatrice May, Mrs. D. V. West, Merza, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, W. Wells and Timothy Eaton.

It will be observed that Eaton, which a year or two ago ranked first, is now last on the list. Size used to carry it through, but other varieties now have the size and finish also. D. V. West, for instance, can be grown half as large again and still have an exquisite finish. Beatrice May also is a very finely finished flower, having great size and very dwarf habit. Merza still holds out and, barring its failing of wilting down, is still hard to beat. Mrs. F. F. Thompson is an unknown quantity to many people just now but will be better known next year, as will also W. Wells. The latter was very scarce this year but it is a big, loose, shaggy variety and cannot fail to forge ahead.

Yellow.

Yellow: Appleton, Mrs. W. Duckham, Cheltoni, Mme. G. Rivol, Chrysanthemiste Montigny and F. S. Vallis.

Appleton still holds the sway when well done, combining as it does, size, color, foliage and stem.

Mrs. W. Duckham has made a fine showing and fulfilled every prediction I made for it. The competition for six flowers of this variety for the Wells medals at Philadelphia was a fine sight. Cheltoni for any exhibition before November 1 is very fine. After that date it is past its best. A vase of twenty-five flowers of the variety at New York was declared by some experts to be the finest thing in the hall. Mme. G. Rivol is a sport of Paola Radaelli and combines size and vigor with a splendid color. Chrysanthemiste Montigny is one of the very largest in size, yet retains a lovely finish. Those who used to grow the old Philadelphia can picture this, as it is a duplicate in every way, only twice as large. F. S. Vallis is well known and hardly needs touching on. I have dropped Thirkell because it makes such wretched foliage all summer and Yellow Eaton is not needed any more. Mrs. W. Knox, as a short-vase variety, is a very promising newcomer, as is also Mrs. Geo. Beech, in the yellows.

Pink.

Pink: Morton F. Plant, W. Duckham, Valerie Greenham, Viola, T. Richardson, Lady Hopetoun for early, Leila Filkins later.

Those who were privileged to see Morton F. Plant agree that it is the king pin in pinks and next year will cut Duckham out as "the" pink. Immense in size, with Appleton stem and foliage, it will silence the carping critic who is always yelling for foliage up to the flower. Duckham has been set up more than any other pink this year and, generally speaking, in fine shape, but so many complain of it that Plant will be very welcome. Valerie Greenham has proved very satisfactory and some splendid flowers have been shown at Madison, New York and other places. Viola is also very large and a very good color. Another year will see this largely grown. T. Richardson won a certificate for itself and in light pinks is an immense and very beautiful variety. The color is the same shade as Enchantress carnation. Lady Hopetoun was shown in wonderful shape at several places, though it can hardly be kept in good shape after November 1, which is the reason I couple it with Leila Filkins, which gives almost the same shade some two weeks later. I only saw one vase of Morel this year, and that, alongside of Filkins, was a sorry sight.

Crimson.

Crimson: Merstham Crimson, Mrs. H. Partridge, S. T. Wright, W. R. Church, Intensity and H. J. Jones.

The first named is the most beautiful thing in its color I have seen and three flowers in the Wells exhibit that had been shipped from England were set up in perfect condition and kept so during a four days' exhibition in Philadelphia. With me the very early bud had too much neck but later buds developed lovely flowers. Mrs. Partridge is very good, and, best of all, does not burn in the sun, as almost all of our fine reds do. It has good, free growth and fine foliage and stem. S. T. Wright last year did not show up very well but this year, struck later and grown in a 6-inch pot, has shown its merits, several growers setting it up in perfect condition. Church is well known. Its only faults are a poor habit and hard to get started and so many flowers, in place of reflexing, turn in and show a steely bronze reverse. Intensity shows very fine color and the old H. J. Jones still sets up in fine shape.

Other Colors.

The any other color class contains some splendid things that hardly fit in with the standard colors but must not by any means be left out. Mrs. G. Heaume is a salmon buff and has been spoken of several times in these notes. Mrs. John E. Dunne is one of the most distinct things of the year. Fine in stem and foliage, the color is perhaps, best described as old rose. A very showy variety. E. J. Brooks, a rosy purple, is far superior to Carrington, which has been for years a leader in that class. Brooks will be largely grown when better known. The flower sent by Wells from England to Philadelphia was truly a monster.

Mary Ann Pockett was a pleasant surprise to me. The growth all summer was small, comparatively, as the plant is such a dwarf grower, but when the flower did come it was a beauty. The color is Indian red with a golden reverse.

Mrs. A. J. Miller, a last year's novelty, showed up splendidly. It was the main vase in the winning thirty-six for the Pierson cup at Philadelphia and was shown very fine at several other eastern exhibitions.

J. H. Doyle was set up excellently and its only fault, as I saw it, was a tendency to wilt. This may or may not be constitutional, at is with Merza, but another year will prove it.

This list gives the cream of the varieties and a man growing these kinds will not get far astray. Whites which have languished somewhat since Eaton came out are now greatly enriched, and there are several very promising new things not given in this list, including May Seddon, G. H. Kerslake and Dolly Glide. The largest individual flower I have seen this year is Mrs. D. V. West, with Morton F. Plant and Beatrice May close seconds. With the present rate of progress five years will show us something that we do not dream of now. Perhaps the best corroboration of this is found in the fact that outside of Appleton and Merza, all the prize winners at the eastern shows are varieties one or two years old, and this is not due alone, as some suppose, to the mad rush for new things, because plenty of the older varieties have been exhibited against them, and been found wanting. The quality of flowers set up by the average exhibitor is very much higher and competition generally has been much keener and the interest in the queen of autumn greater than ever before.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS AT CORNELL.

As usual, there was a fine crop of chrysanthemums at Cornell University this year. The season was rather warm chrysanthemum weather, but most of the growers have produced a fine lot of blooms, although somewhat earlier than was desired. Nevertheless, there has been great enthusiasm in regard to the fine chrysanthemum shows which were held in New York, Boston, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, and many other large cities.

At the forcing house of Cornell University there was a fine display, for the house was nicely filled with about sixty varieties. This made a grand showing, for all classes, forms and colors of chrysanthemums were to be seen.

Among some of the most important varieties were: White, Mrs. D. V. West, Timothy Eaton, Adula, Nellie Pockett, W. J. Bryan, Ben Wells, Adrian and Alice Byron; yellow, Roosevelt, Col. Appleton, F. S. Vallis, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Major Bonnaffon, Gold Mine and Mrs. Wm. Duckman; pink, Vivian-Morel, Dr. Enguehard, Wm. Duckham, F. A. Cobbold and Autumn Glory; crimson, Henry Barnes, Merstham Red, Black Hawk and John Shrimpton.

Timothy Eaton, the "old stand-by," is a Japanese variety that is neither incurved or reflexed, but the petals stand quite erect. The first or second crown bud is usually taken, which produces a good full sixteen-inch, pure white flower on a stem four or five feet long. The flower still remains one of the finest commercial whites.

Ben Wells, another white, is also a Japanese which has long petals loosely arranged. Likely for this reason it may be considered a better flower for exhibition than for commercial use. Its size is usually twelve to fourteen inches, on a vigorous stem four feet high. The foliage is quite long, broad, flat and deeply cut.

Mrs. D. V. West, one of the newer whites, is making a fine showing. It is one that can be considered as neither

SHOW NOTES.

Echoes from Kansas City.

Frank Rushmore, gardener at the city greenhouses in the park at Denver, sent a box of chrysanthemums to his townsmen who were at the Kansas City show, for exhibition only. They arrived late, but they staged them, and some of the blooms were so creditable as to attract more than passing notice from growers.

John N. May, one of the judges at the Kansas City show, said to a reporter: "I have attended most of the important flower shows in this country for many years and believe the Nephrolepis Pier-soni elegantissima which won first prize Monday night cannot be duplicated anywhere in this country. They are the finest specimens I ever saw. In other cities the florists seem to have striven only to multiply the stock, while here attention has been given to produce the finest grade possible. If I were asked to pick out the finest exhibit in the entire show I should not hesitate to select these ferns." They were exhibited by W. L. Rock.

J. A. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver, writes: "It seems to me that no adequate mention has been made of the exhibit of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine made by Samuel Murray at the Kansas City show, although the group was pictured in last week's REVIEW. He had twenty-five plants in 6-inch pots that were simply magnificent, better than anything I have ever seen, and better than I thought these plants could be done. We Denver men rather took it for granted that these were the pick from a large number grown, and that Mr. Murray could probably not anywhere near duplicate the exhibit. But on going to his greenhouses we found that he had several hundred there, equally as good, and when I tell you that I sold Mr. Murray this stock out of 2-inch pots in May last, and that he only had a total of 500, you will better appreciate how much to the grower's credit there is in the exhibit he put up. His house of Lorraine was certainly a wonderful sight."

The total paid admissions at Kansas City this year were 31,537, cash receipts at the gate $7,884.25. The receipts at the last show, in 1902, were $9,427.50, or $1,534.25 more than for the show just held. The premiums at that time amounted to $5,626, while this year $4,400 will cover the prize list expense.

BEST EXHIBITION VARIETIES.

As has been my custom for the past five or six years, I append a list of thirty varieties that on their record this year are entitled to rank as the top notchers for exhibition growers. This list is made up after a good deal of thought, study and comparison as to the way different varieties have been set up at different exhibitions. The varieties are set down in the order of their merit.

White.

White: Bentrice May, Mrs. D. V. West, Merza, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, W. Wells and Timothy Eaton.

It will be observed that Eaton, which a year or two ago ranked first, is now last on the list. Size used to carry it through, but other varieties now have the size and finish also. D. V. West, for instance, can be grown half as large again and still have an exquisite finish. Bentrice May also is a very finely finished flower, having great size and very dwarf habit. Merza still holds out and, barring its fading or wilting down, is still hard to beat. Mrs. F. F. Thompson is an unknown quantity to many people just now but will be better known next year, as will also W. Wells. The latter was very scarce this year but it is a big, loose, shaggy variety and cannot fail to be noticed.

Yellow.

Yellow: Appleton, Mrs. W. Duckham, Chelton, Mme. G. Rivol, Chrysanthemiste Montigny and F. S. Vallis.

Appleton still holds the sway when well done, combining as it does, size, color, foliage and stem.

Mrs. W. Duckham has made a fine showing and fulfilled every prediction I made for it. The competition for six flowers of this variety for the Wells medals at Philadelphia was a fine sight. Chelton for any exhibition before November 1 is very fine. After that date it is past its best. A vase of twenty-five flowers of the variety at New York was declared by some experts to be the finest thing in the hall. Mme. G. Rivol is a sport of Paola Raduelli and combines size and vigor with a splendid color. Chrysanthemiste Montigny is one of the very largest in size, yet retains a lovely finish. Those who used to grow the old Philadelphia can picture this, as it is a duplicate in every way, only twice as large. F. S. Vallis is well known and hardly needs touching on. I have dropped Thirkell because it makes such wretched foliage all summer and Yellow Eaton is not needed any more. Mrs. W. Knux, as a short vase variety, is a very promising newcomer, as is also Mrs. Geo. Beech, in the yellows.

Pink.

Pink: Morton F. Plant, W. Duckham, Valerie Greenham, Viola, T. Richardson, Lady Hopetoun for early, Leila Filkins later.

Those who were privileged to see Morton F. Plant agree that it is the king pin in pinks and next year will cut Duckham out as "the" pink. Immense in size, with Appleton stem and foliage, it will silence the carping critic who is always yelling for foliage up to the flower. Duckham has been set up more than any other pink this year and, generally speaking, in fine shape, but so many complain of it that Plant will be very welcome. Valerie Greenham has proved very satisfactory and some splendid flowers have been shown at Madison, New York and other places. Viola is also very large and a very good color. Another year will see this largely grown. T. Richardson won a certificate for itself and in light pinks is an immense and very beautiful variety. The color is the same shade as Enchantress carnation. Lady Hopetoun was shown in wonderful shape at several places, though it can hardly be kept in good shape after November 1, which is the reason I couple it with Leila Filkins, which gives almost the same shade some two weeks later. I only saw one vase of Morel this year, and that, alongside of Filkins, was a sorry sight.

Crimson.

Crimson: Merstham Crimson, Mrs. H. Partridge, S. T. Wright, W. R. Church, Intensity and H. J. Jones.

The first named is the most beautiful thing in its color I have seen and three flowers in the Wells exhibit that had been shipped from England were set up in perfect condition and kept so during a four days' exhibition in Philadelphia. Its only faults are a poor habit and hard to get started and so many flowers, in place of reflexing, turn in and show a steely bronze reverse. Intensity shows very fine color and the old H. J. CHRYSANTHEMUMS AT CORNELL.

As usual, there was a fine crop of chrysanthemums at Cornell University this year. The season was rather warm chrysanthemum weather, but most of the growers have produced a fine lot of blooms, although somewhat earlier than was desired. Nevertheless, there has been great enthusiasm in regard to the fine chrysanthemum shows which were held in New York, Boston, Chicago, Kansas City, St. Louis, and many other large cities.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. Wm. Knox.

At the forcing house of Cornell University there was a fine display, for the house was nicely filled with about sixty varieties. This made a grand showing, for all classes, forms and colors of chrysanthemums were to be seen.

Among some of the most important varieties were: White, Mrs. D. V. West, Timothy Eaton, Adula, Nellie Pockett, W. J. Bryan, Ben Wells, Adrian and Alice Byron; yellow, Roosevelt, Col. Appleton, F. S. Vallis, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Major Bonington, Gold Mine and Mrs. Wm. Duckman; pink, Vivian Morel, Dr. Enguehard, Wm. Duckham, F. A. Cobbold and Autumn Glory; crimson, Henry Barnes, Merstham Red, Black Hawk and John Shrimpton.

Timothy Eaton, the "old stand-by," is a Japanese variety that is neither incurved or reflexed, but the petals stand quite erect. The first or second crown bud is usually taken, which produces a good full sixteen inch, pure white flower on a stem four or five feet long. The flower still remains one of the finest commercial whites.

Ben Wells, another white, is also a Japanese which has long petals loosely arranged. Likely for this reason it may be considered a better flower for exhibition than for commercial use. Its size is usually twelve to fourteen inches, on a vigorous stem four feet high. The foliage is quite long, broad, flat and deeply cut.

Mrs. D. V. West, one of the newer whites, is making a fine showing. It is one that can be considered as neither purely reflexed nor incurved, but it also has its petals standing quite erect with a slight incurving. The flower is of medium size and is usually produced on a strong stem five or six feet high. It is not quite full enough to make a first-class commercial flower for shipping. The foliage of Mrs. D. V. West is medium size, crumpled and has a tendency to curl.

Nellie Pockett, a white with a creamy centre, is a standard exhibition flower. It is usually about sixteen inches and the petals are rather curly, which makes it quite attractive. It comes into bloom about the time of Ben Wells, which is about mid-season.

Adrian, a beautiful and very attractive white, is a great flower for commercial as well as exhibition use. It is a full incurved and will measure about sixteen inches. The stem is a strong and vigorous one and produces fine large foliage.

Among the yellows, we find Col. Appleton, Japanese incurved, will remain for some time as one of the great commercial yellows. Its size is sixteen to eighteen inches and on a stem about five feet high. The foliage is short, broad and somewhat crumpled. It is a mid-season flower, coming in a little sooner than Bonnaillon.

F. S. Vallis, Japanese reflexed, is elegant and showy for exhibition purposes, but not so well adapted for shipping. The petals are curly and their pale yellow gives the flower a very attractive appearance. One of our flowers measured twenty-five inches and it was deep and full. It was produced from a crown bud and on a vigorous stem about five feet long. The foliage was flat, long, broad and deeply cut. As a rule it is a rather early flower.

Mrs. E. Thirkell is another fine exhibition flower of a deeper shade of yellow and is more flat than Vallis. It may be considered as being somewhat both reflexed and incurved. The size of this flower is about eighteen inches and has a stem of five feet. This season has been somewhat warm for the last two varieties to do their best.

Mrs. Wm. Duckham is one of the most graceful of reflexed deep yellow chrysanthemums of the Japanese type. On a stem five feet long an average flower of sixteen or eighteen inches, with large, long and crumpled foliage, is produced. It is a moderately early bloomer but it keeps well.

Among the pink varieties, we have one that has caused a great deal of comment this season. This is Wm. Duckham, Japanese incurved. This variety has peculiar characteristics. The petals are quite large and they build up an enormous, symmetrical flower. Either crown or terminal bud may be taken and obtain good results, but I think that the first terminal is likely the best. This is a flat flower of about eighteen inches on a vigorous stem of five feet. The foliage is short, broad and crumpled. While it is among the early varieties, yet it is a fine keeper. Observations have led me to believe that this is an irregular flower in size and quality.

Dr. Enguehard has about the same shade as Wm. Duckham. It is closely incurved and attains an average size of about fifteen inches. This flower is produced best from a second crown and is on a stem five feet long. The foliage is long and narrow and doubled together. A fine flower for commercial use.

Vivian-Morel is one of our old, standard pinks. It is the most beautiful of all the deep pink chrysanthemums. It is a rather flat, full flower of sixteen inches and somewhat reflexed.

Autumn Glory is attracting a great deal of attention, due to its rich pink color, which is like that of the Enchantress carnation. It has the shape of Morel and the flower is about the same size. The stem, five feet, produces a large and moderately broad foliage which is rather crumpled. It is a mid-season variety.

Henry Barnes is a good crimson. It is full reflexed, about eighteen inches in size. Its rich velvet color makes it very attractive. The foliage is quite large but deeply cut.

John Shrimpton, another deep crimson flower of medium size, is considered a good commercial flower for the color. It comes into season fairly early and keeps well. The foliage is fairly large and crumpled.

Next year the Department of Horticulture expects to have a larger collection and more of the new sorts on trial.

I think that it is quite important that a description of the foliage should accompany the description of the flower of a chrysanthemum. This could be done by giving the comparative size of the leaf, whether flat or crumpled, and also telling the number of lobes the leaf has. The cutting and the lobing of the leaves of the many varieties are quite different. Such a description would aid a grower in understanding a new variety and also help in distinguishing them from the descriptions. This of course has to do mostly with the chrysanthemum breeder, but should be looked into.

PROPAGATING.

Some of the big carnation growers who have a large trade in rooted cuttings are already putting in big batches of cuttings to supply the ever-increasing demand for early propagated stock. A few years ago, when carnations were housed in September, a cutting that was taken out of the sand in time to root through before planting out time was considered as good as any. But with the early planting practiced these days a plant must be well established before planting out time in order to make a good plant by the middle of July.

While it is a little early to propagate most varieties, yet in many cases it is well to begin as soon as you can. There are varieties that grow slowly and need a long growing period and if you root them early you can have a strong plant that has been pinched back once or possibly twice by planting out time, and you will be sure to have strong plants to house early. Then again you may have some new varieties that are showing up in good shape and if you want all you can get of them for next season, you should begin saving the cuttings early. There will be many cuttings at the base of the flower stems which you must take along with the stem when cutting the bloom. You can save many fine cuttings this way. There is one disadvantage in these very early cuttings and that is this: They will have to be shifted into larger pots before planting out time, else they will become pot-bound and stunted. In such cases as I have mentioned above, of course it pays well to shift them, but if you merely propagate for your own stock and have plenty of stock of the varieties you want to grow, there is no need to begin so early.

Your planting out time will, of course, depend on your climate and locality, but if you will figure up a little, how long it will take to root a cutting and get it thoroughly established in whatever size of pot you grow them in, you can put in the cuttings so as to have good strong plants in good condition. We grow most of our young carnations in 2½-inch pots and we find that by allowing them about two months in the pots and six weeks in the propagating bench, we get them just about right. We usually plant out about the first of May and so we find the proper time for us to propagate our own stock is about the middle of January, except in such cases as I mention above.

In working up a stock of some fine variety don't be over-anxious to get as many cuttings as possible, but rather try to get as many good plants as possible. A thousand weak runts are not near so good as a hundred fine, strong plants when housing time comes. And when you consider that most of the good varieties are propagated pretty heavily before they reach the trade, you can see that careful propagating is all the more necessary to keep up the vitality of the variety. A great deal can be done along this line through the selection of the cuttings.

Opinion seems to be pretty generally settled as to the proper cutting to take, the young shoots around the base of the flower stems, or the young shoots that grow after the flower shoot has been topped back. Both of these will make high grade stock. Avoid the side shoots from up around the middle of the flower stem or the young flower shoots that have begun to lengthen out. Neither of these will make an ideal plant and you will be wasting time and bench space on them, besides running down the vitality of your stock. If you have a fine variety that you want to increase all you can, you can get more cuttings by topping back all the blooming shoots from now on. I would advise this only providing the plants are in first-class condition. If the plants show the least sign of weakening I would advise you to let them bloom and grow naturally and take what cuttings you can from the base of the flower stems. You will gain by it in building up the strength of the variety again to its normal condition.

When taking off cuttings try to select a uniform size as much as you can and be sure they are well matured. An extremely large cutting is not desirable and the same, of course, is true of a small and weak one. By having a uniform, strong lot of cuttings you will get a uniform lot of plants and nothing is more pleasing to the eye than a fine lot of thrifty plants, one like another, like the peas in a pod. Don't take them off the plants too young and soft, as they will wilt too much, but leave them until the base is solid and the older leaves are solid. You can see when they lose that soft young look better than I can tell you.

When trimming them cut back the leaves that stand outward, taking off one-fourth to one-third of the leaf, but never cut back the tip of young leaves that have not spread apart. Cut the lower end clean with a sharp knife. On your propagating bench have about three inches of sand after packing down. Insert the cuttings about three-quarters of an inch and about the same distance between the cuttings in the rows, while the rows should be about one and a half to two inches apart, according to the size of the cuttings. Some growers crowd their cuttings as close together as they can to save bench room, but it is a great mistake. A cutting needs room and air just the same as a plant, especially after it begins to form roots, and to crowd them as some growers do causes them to draw up and become spindly. Keep the sand clean, so there will be no decaying matter around to start fungous diseases.

Next week I will have more to say about propagating houses and care of cuttings.

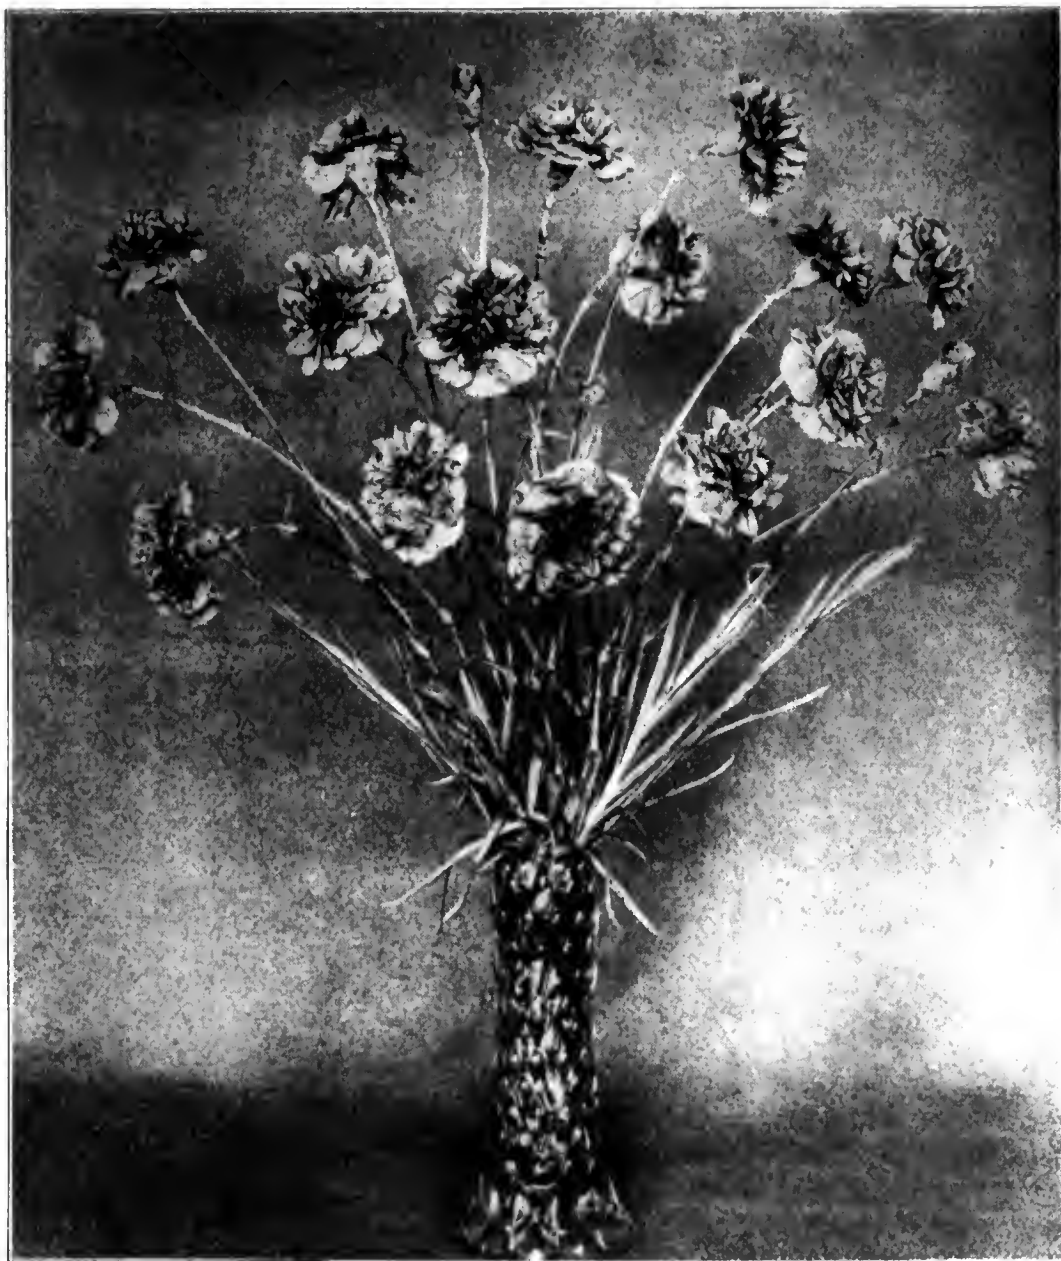

A. F. J. BAUR.

RUST.

I send you some leaves of the Crusader carnation. Can you tell me what is the matter with them and what to do to stop it? None of the other varieties is affected with it. I tried spraying with whale oil soap a week ago, but it is still spreading over the plants. The soil they are growing in is made up with well-rotted blue grass sod and about one-fifth cow manure, and one inch manure under the soil and about the same amount on top. The plants are very thrifty and just commencing to bloom.

M. H. L.

Your Crusader carnations are troubled with the common rust. On some varieties this disease does not seem to do much harm, but last season it became quite a serious matter with our Crusader, so this season we have done all we could to keep it off of them and have succeeded fairly well so far. I would advise you to pick off the affected leaves, if there are not too many of them. It is seldom wise to strip a plant of all its leaves. Burn these leaves, as the spores are liable to be blown about and find lodgment somewhere where the plants might be in condition to suffer. After picking off the leaves, dust the plants with air-slaked lime with about half its bulk of sulphur mixed with it. Leave this on the plants several days before syringing it off. After syringing, when the plants have dried off, repeat the dusting. Keep the plants growing steadily and you will find that they will grow out of it in time. When syringing, do it early enough in the day, so that the plants will dry off well before night. Grape dust is also excellent to dust on the plants. Whale oil soap is no good for this disease.

A. F. J. BAUR.

BACTERIA AND APHIS.

I enclose some leaves taken from our carnations. Will you kindly explain in your next issue what causes the spots on the leaves, and the cure for them?

J. T.

Your carnations have a pretty bad dose of bacteria. Since I do not know what varieties you picked these leaves from, I cannot say whether it is altogether your fault or not. There are some varieties, like Flora Hill, which show these spots to some extent every winter and it depends on the culture whether or not they will become serious enough to really injure the plant. Our experience has been that when they are kept in check fairly well, the plant does not seem to suffer much and toward spring it grows entirely out of it. However, if it is allowed to get too bad it will seriously weaken the plant and in a few years the variety will break down or run out, as it is often called.

liberally, will be troubled less than when they are pushed too much during the winter months. Give them plenty of air, run a little heat every night and paint one of the steam pipes with lime and sulphur in equal portions, mixed with enough water to make a thick paint. Sometimes these spots are caused by aphis, so get some tobacco extract and spray them regularly to keep the aphis down.

WITHDRAWN.

The following has been received from W. N. Rudd, dated November 25:

The following special premiums are announced for the exhibition at Boston in January:

A. H. Hews & Co., Cambridge, Mass., offer a silver cup valued at $25 for four varieties of carnations, twenty-five blooms to a vase, either seedlings or named sorts, no restrictions as to color.

Thomas F. Galvin, Boston, offers a silver cup valued at $25 for eight varieties of carnations, twenty-five blooms to a vase.

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, offer a silver cup valued at $25 for three varieties of carnations, fifty blooms to a vase.

It is not quite full enough to make a first-class commercial flower for shipping. The foliage of Mrs. D. V. West is medium size, crumpled and has a tendency to curl.

Nellie Pockett, a white with a creamy centre, is a standard exhibition flower. It is usually about sixteen inches and the petals are rather curly, which makes it quite attractive. It comes into bloom about the time of Ben Wells, which is about mid-season.

E. S. Vallis, Japanese reflexed, is elegant and showy for exhibition purposes, but not so well adapted for shipping. The petals are curly and their pale yellow gives the flower a very attractive appearance. One of our flowers measured twenty-five inches and it was deep and full. It was produced from a crown bud and on a vigorous stem about five feet long. The foliage was flat, long, broad and deeply cut. As a rule it is a rather early flower.

Mrs. E. Thirkell is another fine exhibition flower of a deeper shade of yellow and is more flat than Vallis. It may be considered as being somewhat both reflexed and incurved. The size of this flower is about eighteen inches and has a stem of five feet. This season has been somewhat warm for the last two varieties to do their best.

Mrs. Wm. Duckham is one of the most graceful of reflexed deep yellow chrysanthemums of the Japanese type. On a stem five feet long an average flower of sixteen or eighteen inches, with large, long and crumpled foliage, is produced. It is a moderately early bloomer but it keeps well.

Among the pink varieties, we have one that has caused a great deal of comment this season. This is Wm. Duckham, Japanese incurved. This variety has peculiar characteristics. The petals are quite large and they build up an enormous, symmetrical flower. Observations have led me to believe that this is an irregular flower in size and quality.

Dr. Enguehard has about the same shade as Wm. Duckham. It is closely incurved and attains an average size of about fifteen inches. This flower is produced best from a second crown and is on a stem five feet long. The foliage is long and narrow and doubled together. A fine flower for commercial use.

Vivian Morel is one of our old, standard pinks. It is the most beautiful of all the deep pink chrysanthemums. It is a rather flat, full flower of sixteen inches and somewhat reflexed.

Autumn Glory is attracting a great deal of attention, due to its rich pink color, which is like that of the Eucharist carnation. It has the shape of Morel and the flower is about the same size. The stem, five feet, produces a large and moderately broad foliage which is rather crumpled. It is a mid-season variety.

Harry Barnes is a good crimson. It is full reflexed, about eighteen inches in size. Its rich velvet color makes it very attractive. The foliage is quite large but deeply cut.

John Shrimpton, another deep crimson flower of medium size, is considered a good commercial flower for the color. It comes into season fairly early and keeps well. The foliage is fairly large and crumpled.

Next year the Department of Horticulture expects to have a larger collection and more of the new sorts on trial.

I think that it is quite important that a description of the foliage should accompany the description of the flower of a chrysanthemum. This could be done by giving the comparative size of the leaf, whether flat or crumpled, and also telling the number of lobes the leaf has. The cutting and the lobing of the leaves of the many varieties are quite different. Such a description would aid a grower in understanding a new variety and also help in distinguishing them from the descriptions. This of course has to do mostly with the chrysanthemum breeder, but should be looked into.

PROPAGATING.

Some of the big carnation growers who have a large trade in rooted cuttings are already putting in big batches of cuttings to supply the ever-increasing demand for early propagated stock. A few years ago, when carnations were housed in September, a cutting that was taken out of the sand in time to root through before planting out time was considered as good as any. But with the early planting practiced these days a plant must be well established before planting out time in order to make a good plant by the middle of July.

While it is a little early to propagate most varieties, yet in many cases it is well to begin as soon as you can. There are varieties that grow slowly and need a long growing period and if you root them early you can have a strong plant that has been pinched back once or possibly twice by planting out time, and you will be sure to have strong plants to house early. Then again you may have some new varieties that are showing up in good shape and if you want all you can get of them for next season, you should begin saving the cuttings early. There will be many cuttings at the base of the flower stems which you must take along with the stem when cutting the bloom. You can save many fine cuttings this way. There is one disadvantage in these very early cuttings and that is this: They will have to be shifted into larger pots before planting out time, else they will become pot-bound and stunted. In such cases as I have mentioned above, of course it pays well to shift them, but if you merely propagate for your own stock and have plenty of stock of the varieties you want to grow, there is no need to begin so early.

Your planting out time will, of course, depend on your climate and locality, but if you will figure up a little, how long it will take to root a cutting and get it thoroughly established in whatever size of pot you grow them in, you can put in the cuttings so as to have good strong plants in good condition. We grow most of our young carnations in 2½ inch pots and we find that by allowing them about two months in the pots and six weeks in the propagating bench, we get them just about right. We usually plant out about the first of May and so we find the proper time for us to propagate our own stock is about the middle of January, except in such cases as I mention above.

In working up a stock of some fine variety don't be over-anxious to get as many cuttings as possible, but rather try to get as many good plants as possible. A thousand weak runts are not near so good as a hundred fine, strong plants when housing time comes. And when you consider that most of the good varieties are propagated pretty heavily before they reach the trade, you can see that careful propagating is all the more necessary to keep up the vitality of the variety. A great deal can be done along this line through the selection of the cuttings.

Opinion seems to be pretty generally settled as to the proper cutting to take, the young shoots around the base of the flower stems, or the young shoots that grow after the flower shoot has been topped back. Both of these will make high grade stock. Avoid the side shoots from up around the middle of the flower stem or the young flower shoots that have begun to lengthen out. Neither of these will make an ideal plant and you will be wasting time and bench space on them, besides running down the vitality of your stock. If you have a fine variety that you want to increase all you can, you can get more cuttings by topping back all the blooming shoots from now on. I would advise this only providing the plants are in first-class condition. If the plants show the least sign of weakening I would advise you to let them bloom and grow naturally and take what cuttings you can from the base of the flower stems. You will gain by it in building up the strength of the variety again to its normal condition.

When taking off cuttings try to select a uniform size as much as you can and be sure they are well matured. An extremely large cutting is not desirable and the same, of course, is true of a small and weak one. By having a uniform, strong lot of cuttings you will get a uniform lot of plants and nothing is more pleasing to the eye than a fine lot of thrifty plants, one like another, like the peas in a pod. Don't take them off the plants too young and soft, as they will wilt too much, but leave them until the base is solid and the older leaves are solid. You can see when they lose that soft young look better than I can tell you.

When trimming them cut back the leaves that stand outward, taking off one fourth to one-third of the leaf, but never cut back the tip of young leaves that have not spread apart. Cut the lower end clean with a sharp knife. On your propagating bench have about three inches of sand after packing down. Insert the cuttings about three-quarters of an inch and about the same distance between the cuttings in the rows, while the rows should be about one and a half to two inches apart, according to the size of the cuttings. Some growers crowd their cuttings as close together as they can to save bench room, but it is a great mistake. A cutting needs room and air just the same as a plant, especially after it begins to form roots, and to crowd them as some growers do causes them to draw up and become spindly. Keep the sand clean, so there will be no decaying matter around to start fungous diseases.

Next week I will have more to say about propagating houses and care of cuttings.

RUST.

I send you some leaves of the Crusader carnation. Can you tell me what is the matter with them and what to do to stop it? None of the other varieties is affected with it. I tried spraying with whale oil soap a week ago, but it is still spreading over the plants. The soil they are growing in is made up with well rotted blue grass soil and about one fifth cow manure, and one inch manure under the soil and about the same amount on top. The plants are very thrifty and just commencing to bloom.

M. H. L.

Your Crusader carnations are troubled with the common rust. On some varieties this disease does not seem to do much harm, but last season it became quite a serious matter with our Crusader, so this season we have done all we could to keep it off of them and have succeeded fairly well so far. I would advise you to pick off the affected leaves, if there are not too many of them. It is seldom wise to strip a plant of all its leaves. Burn these leaves, as the spores are liable to be blown about and find lodgment somewhere where the plants might be in condition to suffer. After picking off the leaves, dust the plants with air-slaked lime with about half its bulk of sulphur mixed with it. Leave this on the plants several days before syringing it off. After syringing, when the plants have dried off, repeat the dusting. Keep the plants growing steadily and you will find that they will grow out of it in time. When syringing, do it early enough in the day, so that the plants will dry off well before night. Grape dust is also excellent to dust on the plants. Whale oil soap is no good for this disease.

A. F. J. BARR.

BACTERIA AND APHIS.

I enclose some leaves taken from our carnations. Will you kindly explain to your next issue what causes the spots on the leaves, and the cure for them?

J. E.

Your carnations have a pretty bad dose of bacteria. Since I do not know what varieties you picked these leaves from, I cannot say whether it is altogether your fault or not. There are some varieties, like Flora Hill, which show these spots to some extent every winter and it depends on the culture whether or not they will become serious enough to really injure the plant. Our experience has been that when they are kept in check fairly well, the plant does not seem to suffer much and toward spring it grows entirely out of it. However, if it is allowed to get too bad it will seriously weaken the plant and in a few years the variety will break down or run out, as it is often called.

You will find that varieties which are subject to this disease, if they are kept a little on the dry side and not fed too liberally, will be troubled less than when they are pushed too much during the winter months. Give them plenty of air, run a little heat every night and paint one of the stem pipes with lime and sulphur in equal portions, mixed with enough water to make a thick paint. Sometimes these spots are caused by aphids, so get some tobacco extract and spray them regularly to keep the spots down.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

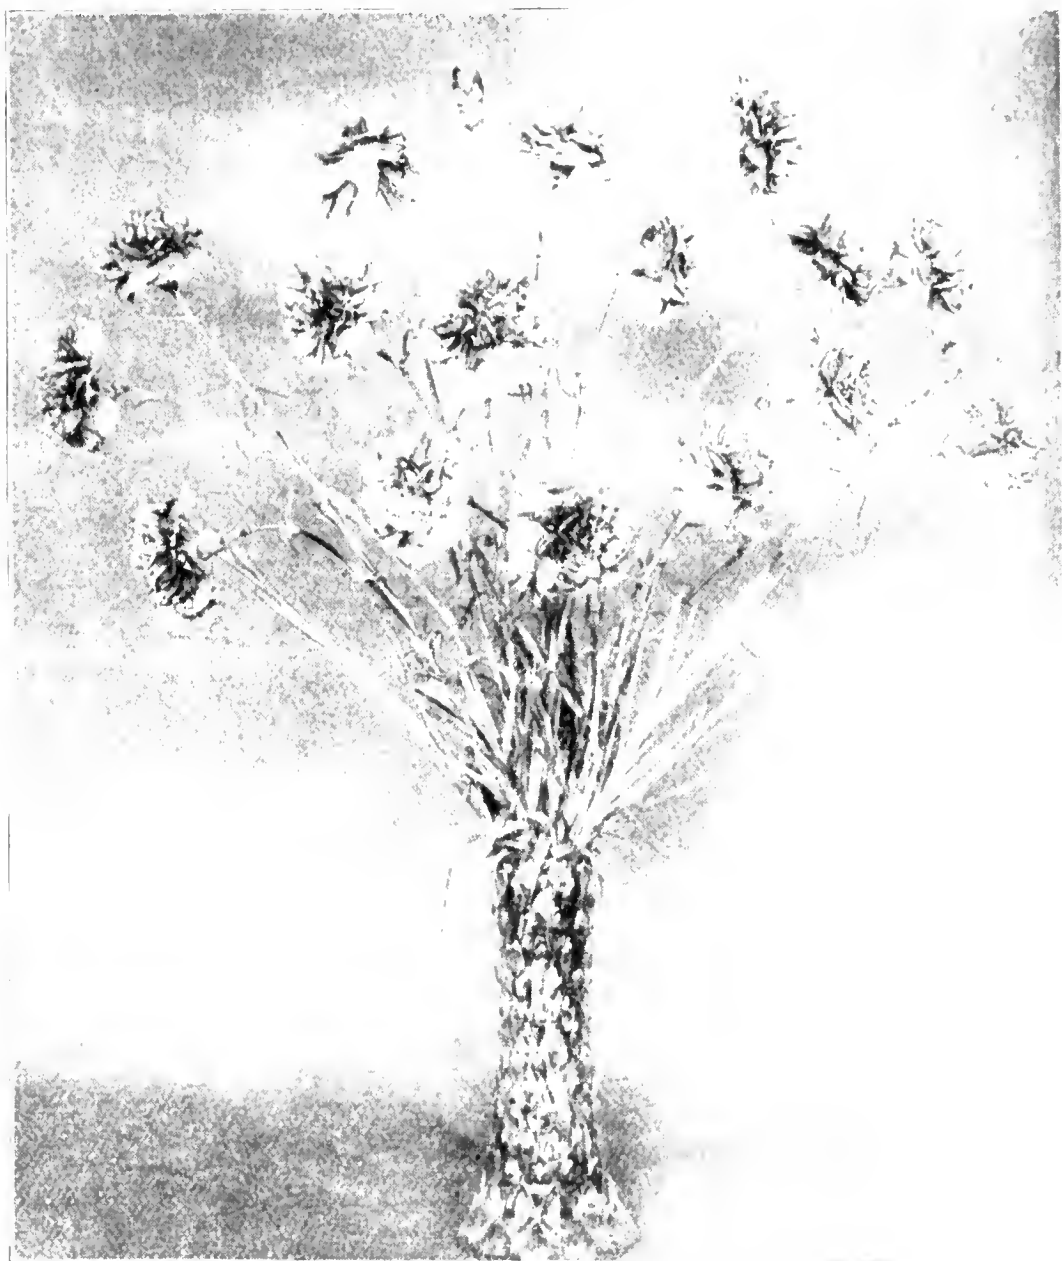

The following special premiums are announced for the exhibition at Boston in January:

A. H. Hoos & Co., Cambridge, Mass., offer a silver cup valued at $25 for four varieties of carnations, twenty-five blooms to a vase, either seedlings or named sorts, no restrictions as to color.

Thomas F. Calvin, Boston, offers a silver cup valued at $25 for eight varieties of carnations, twenty-five blooms to a vase.

W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, offer a silver cup valued at $25 for three varieties of carnations, fifty blooms to a vase.

R. & J. Parquhar & Co., Boston, offer

a silver cup valued at $25 for the best twelve blooms, one variety, open to private gardeners only.

Schlegel & Fottler Co., Boston, offer $15 for the best vase of dark pink carnations, 100 blooms to the vase.

Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass., offers $10 for the best fifty blooms of a dark pink carnation.

Patten & Co., Tewksbury, Mass., offer $10 for the best 100 blooms of a variegated carnation of Mrs. M. A. Patten type.

The premium list will be ready the first week in January with all premiums, instructions and entry blanks, everything necessary to intending exhibitors for the show at Boston, January 24 and 25, 1906. Write to the secretary for a copy.

THE VERSATILE FLORIST.

The average florist, unless he is the possessor of a bulging bank account, and so can say to another, a carpenter or a plumber, for instance, "Do this," and he does it, must be capable of doing many things himself.

He must be able to build a greenhouse, to lay brick, to do plumbing and steam-fitting, to butt in and set glass, to grow good plants and sell them, to arrange a tasteful decoration, on three minutes' notice, to make out bills, and collect them, and to give sensible advice on divers subjects, to all sorts of people.

We have always been ready, willing and able, to mark a card neatly, but recently one of our patrons gave me an order for some chrysanthemums, to be sent to his wife on her birthday, and when I asked him if we should send his card, or any complimentary communication with the flowers, he said, jokingly, that we might send a little poetry with them.

I knew his wife, and her name, and partly as a joke on my part, I hatched and sent the following couplet on his card:

Fair Margaret, to you, my pet,
Come many happy birthdays yet.

Meeting the lady a few days after, I asked if I had gotten her husband into trouble; but she said I had not, and that she appreciated my poetry very much. Think of it, she not only appreciated it but called it poetry. W. T. BELL.

paper, especially next the buds, gives the flowers a much fresher appearance than if soiled paper or newspaper be the material used.

The wrappings should always be abundant and sufficient to withstand severe frost.

The addresses and routing instruction should be plain and legible, as the expressmen have usually sufficient troubles of their own and are not usually experts at hieroglyphics.

By attending to these matters, which we should do if we wish for the prosperity of our customers, which is identical with our own, we will please the majority of them and have a clear conscience, which is a great reward in itself. RIBES.

TOO DRY.

I am sending you, under separate cover, two diseased rose plants, one a young plant, the other an old one. They seemed to grow nicely for awhile; then the new leaves turned yellow and wilted; then the stem did likewise. I think the trouble is in the roots, but cannot locate the cause. The soil is a good, heavy loam. The plants have had plenty of ventilation and kept a little on the dry side; never have been too wet to cause the ground to sour. Would a spray of whale oil soap or other similar solutions be injurious to roses and mums affected with aphids? I have been using tobacco stems, but it is not effective enough. I do not care to use nicotine extracts unless compelled to, as I have plenty of tobacco stems and whale oil soap. R. E. C.

These specimens reached me in very poor shape; in fact, one of the specimens must have been dead a very long time and was therefore entirely useless for diagnosis. The other specimen possessed no leaves and very little wood, which also makes an examination rather unsatisfactory.

From what evidence I had there was every appearance that the plants had suffered from want of water, never having had enough even to sustain the foliage. They are also slightly affected with eel-worms, but not to the extent of killing the plants.

The fumes from tobacco stems, if properly applied, are bound to be effective so far as aphids is concerned, as no aphids can exist in a house which is periodically and systematically subjected to these fumes.

Whale oil soap, if not used to excess, will have no injurious effect on roses, but roses are grown yearly by the million, and good roses too, and which never even get a smell of it.

Keep the night temperature as near 56 degrees as possible and with a small crack of ventilation on to keep the air sweet whenever the weather will permit, and allow the temperature to run up to 75 degrees during the day, when the sun is shining.

See that the soil is thoroughly moistened throughout and not wet on the surface only, and do not attempt to feed in any manner until the plants have regained their health. RIBES.

IN THE OIL REGIONS.

Will you allow me space in your paper to give some of our readers a chance to study and explain after carefully reading the following statement of facts?

We have a house 18x125, three-quarter

CUTTING THE BLOOMS.

Care should be taken when cutting the blooms to leave the most suitable eyes to provide stems for the future crop. During the winter, and especially during holiday season, when every inch of a stem means a higher price, there is a strong temptation to cut low in order to get this longer stem. This, of course, considerably enhances the value of that particular crop, but at what a price! The next crop must of necessity be longer in coming to maturity and the chances are that it will be of an inferior grade.

The operation of cutting should never be done in a hurried manner, nor should any carelessness be tolerated, as this is a certain way to decrease the cut in quantity and also to lower the quality.

The practice of cutting by lamplight during the early hours of the morning leads to the same result. Under such conditions it is almost impossible for even the most careful and experienced to select the proper eye at which to cut.

If there were any real necessity for this practice it might, even with all its attendant evils, be tolerated, but it is surely against the best interests of the trade to pack and ship this hurried cut immediately it is taken in order to get it into market the same morning, without giving it any more preparation than a dip in water for a few minutes.

Storing the Blooms.

As soon as possible after the cut is taken, and before the wound has had time to dry, the stems should be deeply immersed in water at a temperature not to exceed the temperature of the house from which they were cut, nor yet so low as to approach 41 degrees. They should then be placed in a room and partly excluded from the light. This room should be at a temperature of from 48 to 52 degrees.

The most satisfactory shipments are those made from stock which has been treated in this manner for at least ten hours. If they are not shipped in twenty-four hours they should be re-sorted and have the water changed. After being in the cooler for thirty-six hours the conscientious grower will refuse to ship them to his customers.

Every year we hear the same complaints from retailers and commission men, who, during the holiday season, receive large consignments of pickled stock from the growers. The damage done to the trade by such transactions is incalculable, besides destroying the confidence and friendship which ought to exist among the craft.

Packing.

The greatest care should be exercised in packing, so that the necks may not get broken or the petals bruised.

span and eleven feet to the ridge, planted to Bride and Maid. The benches are six feet wide, divided in the middle by a corridor running through the house from the office. The two benches in the east end of the house are twenty-eight inches high, also the south bench in the west end, but the north bench in the west end is forty-eight inches high. The two benches in the east end, the north one planted with Maids and the south one with Brides, and the south bench in west end are all affected alike, apparently from salt water, but the north bench on the west end, planted with Bridesmaid, is in good condition. It is the one forty-eight inches high. Now, all these benches have had the same treatment throughout. All the east and front part of the house is exposed to a country three miles away with 150 oil wells on it and the paint on the house has all turned black with oil gas. Now, the case is new with the writer but it suggests to me that the oil gas has formed a part in the early fall, before the regular firing started, in the destruction of the roses. Were the salt water all at fault it would have served all four benches alike. Could it be possible that the gas would accumulate and affect those lower benches and escape the one that is higher and has a better circulation? B. B.

MR. GASSER, OF CLEVELAND.

In flower growing, so much is to be learned by seeing how the other fellow does it that the most progressive people are great travelers, none of them more indefatigable than J. M. Gasser, than who few of our trade are more widely known. Let the word but go out that at a certain place a special crop is done particularly well and, it matters little where it is, it will not be long before Mr. Gasser will drop in to "have a look" and repay his host out of the store of his long experience.

Mr. Gasser has been a resident of Cleveland during nearly his entire life. He is a native of Switzerland, but when he was only a child his parents emigrated to the United States, locating in the Forest City in 1854. While his boyhood days were passed amid surroundings and under circumstances which narrowly limited his opportunities for securing an education, he has not neglected the cultivation of his mind, but improved it by reading, traveling and experimenting, and, being possessed of more than ordinary faculties, he has acquired a rich fund of information on general subjects far in advance of many men who in youth had the advantage of good schools and colleges. Mr. Gasser began at the bottom, and year after year has mounted the ladder until he now stands close to the topmost rung; and this success has been brought about only through his business ability, industry and integrity. Today he is regarded as one of Cleveland's most successful business men.

In 1861, when he was 19 years of age, he enlisted and served loyally in the war of the rebellion, as a member of Company B, Seventh Ohio Volunteer Infantry, serving in the ranks until 1864, when he received honorable discharge. He participated in many of the principal battles of the war and was wounded in the left arm and side, March 23, 1862, at Winchester, being incapacitated for service for some time.

In 1872, he made his first business venture on his own responsibility, opening a stationery and candy store, which he carried on for six years, gradually drifting into the line of enterprise to which he has now devoted his entire attention for more than a quarter of a century. The start was one of the modest order. Flowers sent in weekly as a gift from Mrs. Gasser's mother's garden to beautify the window and soda fountain were a great attraction. Customers admired and wanted them. Mr. Gasser, being of a generous disposition, gave a few blossoms with each purchase. Soon the demand became so great that a small sum was charged for the flowers. This proved very satisfactory and the business continued to grow. To one familiar with its present large proportions the early vicissitudes are very amusing, but at the time the troubles were real enough. As related by one closely identified with the work, "The flowers were tied up in 25-cent and 50-cent bouquets, with a home-made paper holder thrown in. The best part of the bouquet was ground pine and broom splints, the flowers being short-stemmed, primroses, fuchsias, geraniums and other short stuff. A plate of boutonnières was always on the counter at 5 cents each.

"The first funeral design, a wreath, was constructed of twigs cut from shrubs formed on a hoop from a tub, the flowers and green tied on. For this a charge of $1 was made when the design was called for. The lady was so well pleased that she gave $1.50, saying that $1 was not enough for it. When short of flowers at a time when he had what he would call a large order, a wreath, anchor or cross and star, the whole amounting to perhaps $5, Mrs. Gasser would come to the rescue. Knowing the art of making wax flowers she would hurriedly make up the larger flowers, such as callas, camellias and tuberoses. Customers were so pleased with them that they would frequently come back after two and three weeks to tell how well they kept. Then Mr. Gasser would explain. The abutilon also had to fill in double space by being turned inside out, turning back the petals and pinching out the column of stamens and substituting a little double primrose drawn through with wire. People wondered what flower it was. And so they manoeuvred in all sorts of ways to fill the orders."

By careful methods and perseverance, the business was developed and the range of operations extended until the enterprise became one of the most extensive of its kind in the state.

A few years ago, it being necessary to rebuild the plant and provide room for further growth, the greenhouses were removed to Rocky River, about nine miles from the city, where there is approximately 250,000 feet of glass, combining all the latest improvements, for in Mr. Gasser's travels he has taken shrewd inventory of the value of every new wrinkle in greenhouse building and has been quick to adopt, at little thought of expense, any which appealed to him as in the line of practical improvement. The city store is at 232-234 Euclid avenue, where both a wholesale and retail business is conducted.

THE EDELWEISS.

The sentimental association of the shamrock makes it a valuable specialty for florists to handle, and next to it in interest for the public comes, probably, the edelweiss. There has long been a too general impression that the edelweiss cannot be grown successfully in this country, but it is nevertheless to be found in quite a number of rockeries, one of the accompanying illustrations showing the plant in the rock garden at Lincoln park, Chicago, where it attracted a constant stream of visitors when in flower last spring. The other picture shows a single plant in a pot.

Alois Frey, head gardener at the park, is like the edelweiss, a native of Switzerland, and it was from the Alps that he obtained the seeds from which these plants came. The seeds are, however, obtainable from many seedsmen. It is necessary to sow the seeds early, say in February, in shallow pans or small pots of light soil. Keep cool and moist and prick off as soon as large enough, finally planting out in the rock garden, where they flower well the second year but are then apt to die out. They will endure full exposure to the sun.

The plant is thickly covered by a whitish wool, the conspicuous part being the woolly leaves which form a star-like cluster around the true flower, which is small, yellow and unattractive. The plant is considered an emblem of purity. Botanically it is Gnaphalium Leontopodium, although modern writers have found a small variation in the style which causes them to put it in another genus and call it Leontopodium alpinum.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The history of this Department's growth during the past eight years may be epitomized in the statement that the appropriations for its use have increased from $2,500,000 in 1897 to considerably over $6,000,000 in 1905, and that this increase in appropriations has been accompanied by a much greater increase in the amount of work done. Not only has the work of the Department been vastly augmented, but its scope has been correspondingly broadened and its practical value heightened.

Another interesting evidence of the growth of the Department during the past eight years is afforded by the records of the appointment clerk's office. These show that the total number of persons on the rolls of the Department of Agriculture July 1, 1905, was 5,446. Of this number those rated as scientists and scientific assistants numbered 2,326. On July 1, 1897, the total number of persons on the rolls of the Department was 2,443, of which number those rated as scientists and scientific assistants numbered 925. These figures show an increase in the total force during these eight years of 3,003 persons, while the increase in the number of those rated as scientists and scientific assistants was 1,401.

Plant investigations have been a feature of the Department's work since its establishment, although the organization of the Bureau of Plant Industry was not effected till July 1, 1901. It consists now of eleven offices, each of which is charged with the handling of a group of important plant problems. The work is carried on by 508 employees, about sixty per cent of whom are engaged in scientific work.

In the organic law which created this Department it was made the duty of the head of the Department to diffuse just as much as to acquire information of value to agriculture.

Under the circumstances it is not surprising to find that whereas in 1897 the total number of publications was 424, in 1905 the total number was 1,072, and whereas in 1897 the number of printed pages of original matter was 11,715, in 1905 the number of printed pages of original matter was 20,000.—Secretary Wilson in his annual report.

COLUMBUS, O.—In these days when the whole United States is the field in which the cut flower shipper operates, the Livingston Seed Co. points with pride to the success which attended a recent shipment of cut chrysanthemums to Seattle, Washington, a distance of 2,500 miles. Each bloom was wrapped in tissue and each stem where cut was wadded in damp moss wrapped in waxed paper.

TIMELY REMINDERS.Summer Flowering Bulbs.

The majority of florists doing a retail business handle some gloxinias with profit. See to it that the pots containing bulbs of these are not thrown under some bench to mold. Probably you have a shelf in some shed where a minimum temperature of 50 to 55 degrees is maintained. Such a place will suit gloxinias nicely. If you need the pots, turn them out into boxes without breaking the balls. If you grow achimenes treat them similarly. Tuberous-rooted begonias should now be resting. They require cooler quarters than gloxinias. If quite dry they will not mind a temperature of 40 degrees. When thoroughly ripened off you can pick out the tubers and pack them in sawdust or any other dry material.

Poinsettias.

One of the best selling plants in pots or pans at Christmas is the brilliant poinsettia. The bracts on these are now becoming quite sizable. Presuming that the pots are well filled with roots they will need occasional doses of liquid manure to give size to the bracts. Add a little soot to the liquid to keep the leaves a beautiful dark green color. Use extreme care in watering; too little or too much will be quickly followed by a yellowing of the foliage. Poinsettias need a temperature of 60 degrees at night to grow them well at this season. Do not be tempted to move them into cooler quarters as the bracts are developing or results will be disastrous. See that those growing in benches are staked securely. If properly treated these should give bracts eighteen to twenty-four inches across. Do not allow the shoots to become bent or half their value is gone.

Chinese Primroses.

There is always a considerable sale for these pretty little plants during the early winter months. If well grown nothing makes a nicer Christmas gift for those with moderate means. It will pay the up-to-date retailer to buy a good strain of these and to buy one or two decided colors, such as scarlet, pink, white and blue rather than to invest in a cheap, thrashy mixture which will contain many unsalable colors. Plants of the better strains will always sell on sight. The plants should now be on shelves or benches in a light, airy structure and lightly shaded from the mid-day sun. Water with care. Use the watering pot instead of the hose. A little weak liquid manure once in four or five days will tone them up. If any of the plants are shaky from too high potting, support with one or two little forked sticks.

Berried Plants.

Celestial peppers have attained a certain favor during the past few years. We do not know why, for we have never admired them; still what the public demands we must needs grow. A cool house will suit these very well, as also Solanum capsicastrum, which should now have most of its fruit colored. We prefer seedling plants of the latter to those raised from cuttings. They do not ripen so soon, but make more shapely plants.

Ardisia crenulata is always in demand. As it takes several years to produce salable stock it is not seen so much as the other berried stock. If you have a crop of berries ripe on any old and unshapely plants, sow them right away in heat. You will get no returns for a year or two but they will pay you well in the end.

Genistas, Acacias, etc.

If these are not wanted in bloom until Easter, give them a further clipping back. Keep them as cool as possible; clear of freezing is all that is needed. Be sure they are not allowed to become dry at the root. Acacias are usually in best demand at Easter and it will, therefore, be necessary to hold them as cold as possible during the winter. A sunken pit or north house where very little fire heat is used is all right. Ericas need similar treatment and must above all things never get dry at the root.

Mignonette.

Presuming that seed was sown late in August, the plants should now be producing good spikes. Avoid too high a temperature or the results will be ruinous. This crop does best where a night reading of 40 to 45 degrees is kept. If the benches are becoming well filled with roots give a mulching of well rotted and pulverized cow manure. Avoid chemicals at this season. There are diverse opinions as to the best supports for mignonette. Some use wires and cross strings as for carnations; others pieces of birch brush stuck in here and there, and some nothing at all. We prefer the birch ourselves and find it answers very well.

Antirrhinums.

Most of the benches are now clear of chrysanthemums and there is a chance for some other crops to come along. One of the most useful is the persistent flowering snapdragon. If cuttings were rooted in late summer and are now in 3-inch or 4-inch pots they will soon give a crop of bloom if planted out. No need to empty the benches and replace with new compost. Throw out the remaining chrysanthemum stock plants. Give a coating of rotted manure, turn it over and plant in your stock at least a foot apart each way. There are now some very excellent strains of antirrhinums. A mixture is hardly to be desired, but yellow, white and pink shades will always sell, while there is a limited call for red. Better to raise your stock from cuttings once you have a good strain. Seedlings are liable to come mixed, even though bought as one decided shade. A temperature of 50 degrees at night suits them, and disbud the shoots to secure better spikes.

Establishment of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn.

Stevia.

This very useful flower is of especial value when the chrysanthemum season is over. For mixed bouquets and in funeral sprays or designs it is of great service. A succession of it can readily be had until the beginning of February by keeping the plants in a house just clear of frost. Do not allow them to drop below 32 degrees or the foliage will be ruined. Bring a few flats or pots into a slightly warmer house as you need them, always remembering that later in the season it will be more valuable.

Cypripedium Insigne.

If there is one orchid valuable more than any other to the average florist it is the good old Cypripedium insigne. It grows well in summer, even in a shady spot outdoors. It is very modest in its requirements indoors and invariably gives at this season a liberal crop of flowers, which, if not needed now, are just as good two or three months hence if left on the plant. It grows well, either in rough sod mixed with charcoal or in native fern fibre. It needs pulling apart when done flowering if it is becoming too matted. It increases surprisingly and any florist who possesses a bench of it has something that he can always get a purchaser for. The plants do not need a warm house; 45 degrees at night is enough. Keep them moderately dry at the root while in bloom. These cultural notes may not meet the approval of orchid experts, but they answer very well, we find, for a hard working retail florist.

A MINNESOTA PLANT.

About eighteen months ago the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn., added a greenhouse department and erected one of the most modern plants in the northwest. Their houses at present contain over 30,000 feet of glass, equipped with tile benches, each house easily accessible from the work-rooms and all electric lighted, with lights hanging fifteen feet apart from the ridges. The principal crops grown are roses, carnations and smilax, with a liberal line of miscellaneous plants. A general local trade is done, while funeral designs for outside towns are a specialty. The surplus is all disposed of in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The nursery department of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co. is one of the largest in the state, built up from a very small beginning by Thos. E. Cashman, president of the company, until now the firm has a paid up capital of $150,000, employing a large force on the grounds, growing hardy trees and shrubs for northern trade, and 150 salesmen on the road selling this stock to northern tree planters. Some idea of the business done can be gained from the fact that they are at present engaged in getting out for fall delivery orders to the amount of $137,000 and already have on file for delivery in the spring of 1906, orders amounting to $40,000.

The buildings of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., including offices, storage building, root cellar, packing sheds, greenhouses and barns, are all within the corporate limits of the city of Owatonna, as is also 125 acres of their nursery land. The remainder of the land, comprising 158 acres, is within three and one-half miles of the nursery and accessible by good gravel roads.

Owatonna is a city of about 7,000 inhabitants, situated seventy miles from St. Paul. It has first-class shipping facilities, having three railroads with good train service. Mr. Cashman is a young man with marked business ability and a thorough knowledge of the nursery business. He has the honor of having been twice elected mayor of Owatonna. The other officers are M. R. Cashman, vice-president; W. H. Hart, secretary; J. R. Laughlin, treasurer, and J. A. Cieszinski, cashier.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The managers of the great circuses that tour the country, and there are no shrewder advertisers, say that it no longer pays to cover the countryside with the gaudy lithographs that were the wonder and admiration of our youth; they say that nowadays the one really effective way of reaching the great masses of the people is through the newspapers.

Florists, especially the retailers, are proverbially slow to take advantage of the opportunities of advertising; they do not employ the newspapers nearly so freely as do those in other lines of merchandising. For the purpose of showing what various ones are doing in the way of local advertising a number of newspaper advertisements are reproduced on the opposite page of this issue of the REVIEW. These are not offered as examples of good advertising, although they are considered the best of a large number received. Too many of them are too much like the average business card to be really first-class advertising, still there are a number of them which are good enough to be worth holding in mind for the suggestion they contain for use in one's own advertisement.

Most of these advertisements occupy much smaller space than a dealer in any other line would think he needed to do an equal volume of business. Of course in large cities newspaper space is expensive, but it doesn't cost much in country dailies and still less in the weeklies; still space is all too valuable to devote to the stereotyped business card. Of course the publisher likes the card; all is grist that comes to his mill, and a small grist is better than none. But he will like the order all the better if it calls for enough space to contain a little "talk" on seasonable topics, or a priced special offer now and then. And he will be willing, even anxious, to have you change the matter in your space at least every few issues, for he realizes that this is the way to get best results, the results which will make you a continuous advertiser and a user of larger space.

The successful advertising of a flower store is not so different from advertising any other kind of a store, except that you have so many more and so much more interesting things to write about.

Establishment of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn.

Stevia.

This very useful flower is of especial value when the chrysanthemum season is over. For mixed bouquets and in funeral sprays or designs it is of great service. A succession of it can readily be had until the beginning of February by keeping the plants in a house just clear of frost. Do not allow them to drop below 32 degrees or the foliage will be ruined. Bring a few flats or pots into a slightly warmer house as you need them, always remembering that later in the season it will be more valuable.

Cypripedium Insigne.

If there is one orchid valuable more than any other to the average florist it is the good old Cypripedium insigne. It grows well in summer, even in a shady spot outdoors. It is very modest in its requirements indoors and invariably gives at this season a liberal crop of flowers, which, if not needed now, are just as good two or three months hence if left on the plant. It grows well, either in rough sod mixed with charcoal or in native fern fibre. It needs pulling apart when done flowering if it is becoming too matted. It increases surprisingly and any florist who possesses a bench of it has something that he can always get a purchaser for. The plants do not need a warm house; 45 degrees at night is enough. Keep them moderately dry at the root while in bloom. These cultural notes may not meet the approval of orchid experts, but they answer very well, we find, for a hard working retail florist.

A MINNESOTA PLANT.

About eighteen months ago the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn., added a greenhouse department and erected one of the most modern plants in the northwest. Their houses at present contain over 30,000 feet of glass, equipped with tile benches, each house easily accessible from the work rooms and all electric lighted, with lights hanging fifteen feet apart from the ridges. The principal crops grown are roses, carnations and smilax, with a liberal line of miscellaneous plants. A general local trade is done, while funeral designs for outside towns are a specialty. The surplus is all disposed of in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

The nursery department of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co. is one of the largest in the state, built up from a very small beginning by Thos. E. Cashman, president of the company, until now the firm has a paid up capital of $150,000, employing a large force on the grounds, growing hardy trees and shrubs for northern trade, and 150 salesmen on the road selling this stock to northern tree planters. Some idea of the business done can be gained from the fact that they are at present engaged in getting out for fall delivery orders to the amount of $137,000 and already have on file for delivery in the spring of 1906, orders amounting to $40,000.

The buildings of the Clinton Falls Nursery Co., including offices, storage building, root cellar, packing sheds, greenhouses and barns, are all within the corporate limits of the city of Owatonna, as is also 125 acres of their nursery land. The remainder of the land, comprising 158 acres, is within three and one-half miles of the nursery and accessible by good gravel roads.

Owatonna is a city of about 7,000 inhabitants, situated seventy miles from St. Paul. It has first-class shipping facilities, having three railroads with good train service. Mr. Cashman is a young man with marked business ability and a thorough knowledge of the nursery business. He has the honor of having been twice elected mayor of Owatonna. The other officers are M. R. Cashman, vice president; W. H. Hart, secretary; J. R. Laughlin, treasurer, and J. A. Gieszinski, cashier.

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

The managers of the great circuses that tour the country, and there are no shrewder advertisers, say that it no longer pays to cover the countryside with the gaudy lithographs that were the wonder and admiration of our youth; they say that nowadays the one really effective way of reaching the great masses of the people is through the newspapers.

Florists, especially the retailers, are proverbially slow to take advantage of the opportunities of advertising; they do not employ the newspapers nearly so freely as do those in other lines of merchandising. For the purpose of showing what various ones are doing in the way of local advertising a number of newspaper advertisements are reproduced on the opposite page of this issue of the REVIEW. These are not offered as examples of good advertising, although they are considered the best of a large number received. Too many of them are too much like the average business card to be really first-class advertising, still there are a number of them which are good enough to be worth holding in mind for the suggestion they contain for use in one's own advertisement.

Most of these advertisements occupy much smaller space than a dealer in any other line would think he needed to do an equal volume of business. Of course in large cities newspaper space is expensive, but it doesn't cost much in country dailies and still less in the weeklies; still space is all too valuable to devote to the stereotyped business card. Of course the publisher likes the card; all is grist that comes to his mill, and a small grist is better than none. But he will like the order all the better if it calls for enough space to contain a little "talk" on seasonable topics, or a priced special offer now and then. And he will be willing, even anxious, to have you change the matter in your space at least every few issues, for he realizes that this is the way to get best results, the results which will make you a continuous advertiser and a user of larger space.

The successful advertising of a flower store is not so different from advertising any other kind of a store, except that you have so many more and so much more interesting things to write about.

Showing a Few of the Uses for the New Adjustable Baskets.

AN ADJUSTABLE BASKET.

In these strenuous days the demand is ever for novelty and anything possessing the merit of newness is sure to be taken up; for its retention by the trade it must depend on its other qualities. The latest novelty in the supply line is the adjustable basket shown in the accompanying illustrations. It is said by those who have used it to be one of the most useful baskets ever brought out. It can be pressed into any shape desired, will cover fibre or glass vases filled with cut flowers, or cover pots up to an 8-inch size, also cover fern pans or rose bowls, being especially useful for table decorations. They can be used also for the bride or bridesmaid to carry at weddings; they can be adapted to go with any color or size of flower, from the long-stemmed American Beauty or chrysanthemum, to the lily of the valley or violets; in fact, the uses are too numerous to mention. In a moment you can press them into any shape desired. They are made in a variety of colors, to match the different colors of flowers or to form a contrast. As shown by the illustration, when ribbon or chiffon is used in connection with these adjustable baskets, the effect is most pleasing. M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, who are the introducers, report that this is one of the catchiest novelties they have ever got hold of; everybody buys at sight.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Weather conditions during the past week have reminded one more of June than November, shade temperatures of 65 and 70 degrees being recorded. We do not remember any previous November when we had such clear skies and so little rain and cloudy weather. While we are now getting it cooler, the weather favors a big Thanksgiving crop of flowers. Chrysanthemums are now nearing the end and will not cut much of a figure in the market after this week. Bonnafon, Merry Christmas, Yanoma, Maud Dean and Mrs. Jerome Jones are mostly seen, also some of the old Minnie Wanamaker. Nothing has yet been raised in chrysanthemums to surpass Mrs. Jerome Jones. It is a special favorite here and certainly in stem, foliage and flower is well high perfect. It is also a splendid keeper in water, to say nothing of its excellent shipping qualities. In addition to the yellow and white forms, some of a delicate pink color are seen which are very beautiful. Red varieties, such as Cullingfordii, sold well for the football game on November 25.

Roses are still too numerous. Especially is this true of Brides and Maids and little advance on these for Thanksgiving is likely. Beauties of the better grades show a hardening tendency, also Liberty and Richmond. The last named promises to be a prime favorite another season and will displace Liberty to a large extent. Wellesley, Killarney and Chateaufort are all selling very well. A few Bon Silene and Safrano are seen in the market.

Carnations are selling very well except whites, which continue rather too plentiful. Fancies are making $3 to $5, some even higher. Good ordinary blooms bring $1.50 to $2. Violets sold heavily for the Harvard-Yale game and went as high as $1.50. Present prices are 75 cents to $1.25. Quality is remarkably good. Quite a little bulbous stock, stevia and bouvardia is coming in. Cattleyas are becoming scarce, but Cypripedium insigne comes from several growers, making $8 to $12 per hundred. Lily of the valley still sells well and there is an improving demand for asparagus and other green stock.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting on November 21, already referred to, thirteen new members were elected, bringing the membership to 240. Prof. B. M. Watson's lecture on "Botany for Young Gardeners" was most interesting. While admitting that excellent gardeners without any knowledge of botany were numerous, he claimed that a study of it would be of great help to them. "How can one become a good gardener or florist who does not know the rudimentary principles of his trade? It is true that none of us are botanists and true that many of us have never studied botany from books, but it is also true from any point of view that no one can grow plants intelligently for even a short series of years without learning in the best way possible, that is from the plants themselves, a lot of botany." In the discussion which followed E. O. Orpet spoke vigorously against the idea that botany was necessary or of any advantage to the practical grower. He commented in caustic terms on the constant changing of the scientific names of plants by botanists and instanced the New York Botanical Gardens at Bronx park as a delightful example of the work of the botanist gardener. Messrs. Westwood, Elliott, Finlayson and others continued the discussion, some favoring and others opposing the lecturer's views.

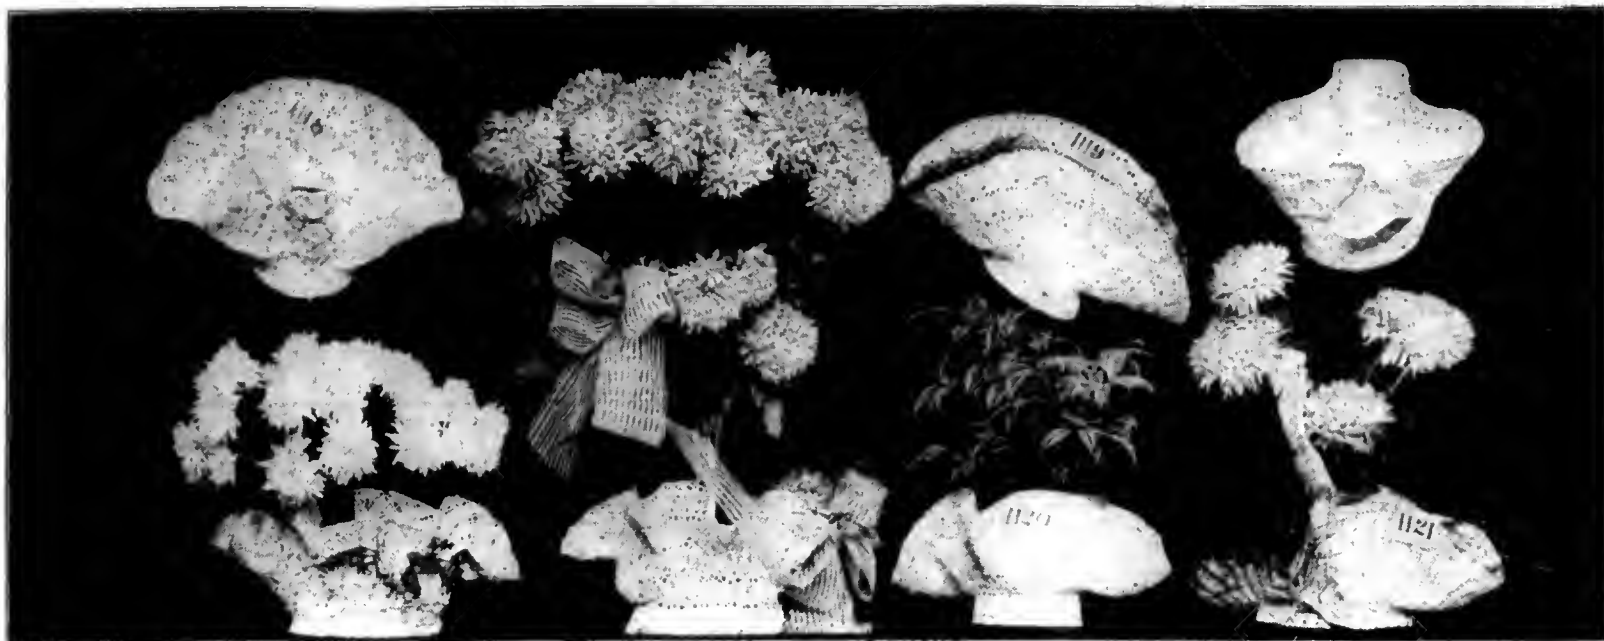

M. A. Patten, who had been chosen by the nominating committee for president for 1905, did not care for the office and finally James Wheeler was re-elected by a handsome vote. He made a neat speech and predicted great prosperity for the club in the coming year. T. H. Westwood, who was chosen vice-president, filled the same post in 1904. The question box was largely availed of, numerous queries being asked and answered.

Exhibits were quite numerous and included fine Wellesley roses from Waban Conservatories, excellent Bridesmaid roses from Montrose Greenhouses, Mikado and Pink Patten carnations from Patten & Co., Lawson varieties from H. A. Stevens Co., seedling carnations and Enchantress sport from Backer & Co., mignonette from Wm. Nicholson, Pancreatium elegans from James Wheeler, seedling carnation No. 408, a fine commercial scarlet, from Peter Fisher and the compact and handsome Nephrolepis Whitmani from H. H. Barrows & Son.

With Whitman Growers.

A. A. Reed is one of the few commercial growers of orchids in the neighborhood of Boston. While not a large grower, he is an enthusiast and a very successful cultivator. Dendrobium formosum giganteum and D. phalaenopsis Schröderiana were flowering well at the time of our visit. A fine lot of Zygopetalum Mackayi were carrying excellent spikes. Cattleya Trianae was represented by a fine lot of plants, some of which were almost in bloom. A variety of other cattleyas are also grown, also Dendrobium Wardianum and D. nobile, Cypripedium insigne, Lycaste Skinneri and Vanda caerulea. A general assortment of other florists' stock, such as carnations, violets, chrysanthemums, etc., are also grown here.

At H. H. Barrows & Son's establishment we found the growing demands of the firm illustrated by two new houses, each 125 feet long. Nothing but nephrolepis ferns are handled here, but these are grown in thousands. Four varieties are to be seen only, N. Scottii, Bostoniensis, Barrowsii and the new Whitmani. We were chiefly interested in the last named, which has created such a favorable impression whenever shown. From one original plant in January last there is now quite a large span-roofed house filled with various sizes of plants, some quite large. We looked these over very carefully for any signs of reversion and failed to find such. Mr. Barrows' son says they have never found a single frond not true to the type. We consider it superior in many ways to N. Bar- rowsii. Its compact habit will commend it to many and we predict a big sale for it when it is placed on the market, in April, 1906.

N. Barrowsii, which occasionally reverts, is still a prime favorite and orders are being constantly sent all over the country. N. Scotti is well liked, but takes longer to grow into a presentable plant than the other sorts. N. Bostoniensis is still in considerable request. The new N. Whitmani seems to be more easily propagated than even the common Boston fern, judging by the great number of runners the plants were producing in the benches.

Various Notes.

Some splendid Lorraine begonias are seen at the stores at present. T. Roland, W. W. Edgar and Farquhar & Co. are the principal growers of these.

Joseph Free is the new manager at the Park street flower market. Joe is a good boy. He has had a fine training under John Walsh and we feel sure will prove the right man in the right place.

At the club meeting on December 19, when ladies will be present, an attendance of over 200 is expected.

The late Denys Zirngiebel was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for over forty-three years.

W. N. CRAIG.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business continues fair, but there is nothing exciting about it. The demand is well distributed among the various lines and all of the stores are getting their share. Chrysanthemums are not quite so plentiful and the price is advancing slightly. Medium and large blooms sell well; white goes especially well. Small mums in bunches for work are in demand now and the supply is not so heavy.

Carnations are in fair supply, with prices averaging good. Roses are in heavy supply and sell only fairly well. Some very fine stock is being received but does not bring what it is worth. Short-stemmed buds are almost a glut and go at job-lot prices. Violets continue scarce and the price has advanced. Valley and lilies of all kinds are in demand. Other miscellaneous stock is selling well. Greens are going nicely.

As Thanksgiving approached advance orders were numerous and prices advanced slightly, but Thanksgiving is not a time of very high prices and the wiser ones did not ask too much.

Various Notes.

T. W. Hardesty had an order for 10,000 violets and had a pretty hard time getting them together.

Both Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Benson have been on the sick list, but are on the road to a quick recovery.

It is rumored that the two sons of Julius Schumer will be married shortly.

C. J. OHMER.

UTICA, N. Y.

The Utica Florists' Club held its autumn exhibition November 23 at Hotel Martin. A splendid lot of stock was shown and there was a large attendance.

H. Weber & Son, Oakland, Md., sent My Maryland and Jessica. S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass., sent Helen Goddard. Guttman & Weber, New York, sent Victory. Cottage Gardens, Queens, sent Lieut. Peary and Robert Craig. J. E. Haines, Bethlehem, Pa., sent John E. Haines and Imperial. F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., sent white and variegated sports of Enchantress. R. Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., sent Abundance. Every one of the exhibits was good and it made a splendid carnation show, better than seen at some of the big fall shows.

Local exhibits were staged as follows:

Frank McGowan, Utica—Vases of M. A. Patten, Enchantress and The Queen.

L. F. Goddard & Bro., Clark Mills—Vases of Lawson, Enchantress and Lady Bountiful.

Yorkville Greenhouses, George H. Benedict—Vase of Timothy Eaton, Bonaffon and Mrs. Coombes.

Theodore Schesch, Ilion—Vase of mixed chrysanthemums.

Frank J. Baker—Two handsome vases of Bridesmaids and Golden Gates.

Yorkville Greenhouse—Vase of Kaisers.

Brant Bros., Utica—Two vases of extra fine Brides and Bridesmaids.

After giving the major part of the evening to discussion and criticisms of the blooms the club sat down to a banquet.

HERE is my renewal; I have not had the REVIEW for some time, but I cannot do without it any longer.—F. E. VETTER, Cambridge, Mass.

TOO LONG PIPES.

I have two houses in which hot water is used and in which I do not get enough heat. I have a large boiler and the houses are not large, a 4-inch flow supplies two 2-inch mains, one to the east and west house and one to the north and south house. In each house the highest point is at the far end and there is a gradual fall all through the coils, all but one of which are made up with return bends. These coils do not heat up as they should. The enclosed sketch may show you a little plainer how the piping is arranged. What is the trouble?

S. M. T.

Without going very deeply into your plan of piping, I am surprised that you are able to get any of the pipes hot which are arranged with return bends. In one the water must travel nearly 300 feet, while in another it must go 500 feet. If instead of the return bends you use manifold tees the water will only be required to travel the length of the flow and the length of the return to the boiler, or in this case about one-third of the distance it must now travel. Runs of pipe over 100 feet in length are to be avoided in hot water heating. If you were to use steam your present plan would undoubtedly answer, but with hot water replace the return bends by manifolds as soon as practicable. The circulation will probably be quick and the pipes made effective.

L. C. C.

DON'T PAINT 'EM.

Can anyone tell me what to paint my heating pipes with so that there will be no danger to delicate plants? Will lamp black and oil do?

G. A. H.

HERE is another dollar for the REVIEW, it being one thing we cannot do without; we are always glad to receive it and never fail to find much of interest and value in it.—A. C. ULLRICH & SON, Ironton, O.

PLEASE stop my advertisement in the REVIEW, it was a winner; plants all sold.—C. C. WARBURTON, Battle Creek, Mich.

VICTORY

The best scarlet carnation—requires only ordinary culture

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market during the past week was as dull as the weather was beautiful. At this season of the year the two do not harmonize. The praying for frost goes on incessantly, with better prospects for an answer as December approaches.

Mums are lessening rapidly. Thanksgiving and then good-bye. They have made a great record this year. Prices always reasonable, popularity growing, quality superb. There are too many roses, especially Maids and Brides, often unsalable because of their numbers. Quality is the best. Richmond and Liberty are always in demand and increasing in price as the stems lengthen. Violets are steady and no prospect of great advancement during the coming season, $1.50 looking like top. Valley, gardenias and orchids are firm and the best always in demand.

With the Retailers.

Business must be quite good "in the heart of New York City." I noticed Mr. Bowe, with his own Victoria, coachman and footman riding in Central park the other day and it was hard to distinguish him from the millionaires. Mr. Bowe had two notable weddings last week, one the Benedict wedding at the Dakota, with appropriate colors in roses for the white, pink and red rooms; the other the daughter of "Farmer Scott," the sage of Elmhurst.

All the retailers seem to be busy and contented, now that dinners are "the thing" and the opera season is in full swing. Thanksgiving, too, is here with its added benediction and every table will have holly and red roses.

At the Battenburg dinner, Leikens "did himself proud" with an American Beauty decoration, over 700 specials being used in the display.

In Brooklyn.

The widening of Livingston street in Brooklyn will make the moving of Wm. H. Kuebler necessary. Notice of this and a week of jury duty illustrate the old adage that "troubles never come singly." Kuebler has built up a nice business in his old location. He has been handling much of the fine mum stock of the Richmond Hill growers. He hopes to be well located before Christmas.

Bonnet & Blake, on Boerum place, were fortunate in escaping the widening process, though their business has been widening encouragingly and the class of rose stock they handle is as good as the best. They have grown rapidly during the last year and are a permanent addition to the wholesale cut flower industries of Brooklyn.

Crawbuck & Wiles are reaching out for trade beyond their own city with great success. They booked over $1,000 in orders last week in New York City for Thanksgiving and Christmas. Ten tons of Princess pine are already in stock. Anticipating the street's requirements, Hicks & Crawbuck moved in time to their new premises on Court street, where they have one of the largest and most up-to-date wholesale establishments in the east. Half a dozen large rooms are occupied by their florists' supply departments and cut flower trade, with smaller rooms for wheat, crepe paper and luncheon conveniences. In the latter the touch of a bell brings in a sumptuous repast at any time, from a restaurant above them. The office is large and light and with all modern conveniences, electricity included. Everything but ribbons is handled.

Abundance.

A visit to Great Neck last week and to Rudolph Fischer's found Abundance in its glory. Five houses of about 12,000 square feet are almost entirely devoted to this carnation. In fact, for years Mr. Fischer has grown no other variety, and he does not need to. This white seedling is a cross of Scott and McGowen and combines the qualities of its parentage. Its productive quality has delayed its introduction. It has been grown here since 1895 and seems to improve every year. It has never shown disease and its price has always been maintained. It is very sweet, a great keeper, blooms often retaining their beauty for a week, often thirty flowering shoots to a plant, constantly throwing up new shoots. Cutting begins early and the plants are never thrown out before August and then only for his white seedling aster, a variety as large as a chrysanthemum. Mr. Fischer also has a fine freesia, pure white, called Purity, which is very popular. He has lived at Great Neck for twelve years. His foreman, Clarence Connolly, has been with him since 1893.

Various Notes.

A. J. Guttman is back from his travels with Victory and greatly delighted with its reception and the personal courtesies he received. In his big ice box this week the Maud Dean, Chadwick and Timothy Eaton chrysanthemums were a special feature. Mr. Reidel, of his force of lieutenants, is making a great bowling record this fall, two of his recent scores being 243 and 265.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to George Burnett, of Burnett Bros., seedsmen, in the loss of his wife.

The "improvements" to be made by the railroads downtown on Cortlandt street are not to the liking of the big seed houses on that busy thoroughfare. The station will be so near Broadway, that, while it removes the Thorburn headquarters completely, it will unload its human freight beyond the doors of the Peter Henderson Co.'s big store and divert much of the street traffic from its long accustomed way. So carefully made plans, that seem, when laid, good for a century, have to sometimes in this swift city be changed completely in a day. Meantime a million every five years is added to the population.

The big World's Fair in 1909, the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of the Hudson river, is now almost assured, the committee meeting last Friday being practically unanimous in favor of the project.

Mrs. Clarke, of Portland, mother of the Clarke brothers, the florists, arrived from Dresden by the Pennsylvania on Friday and spent a few days with friends in Brooklyn before leaving for home, via Oakland, where Mr. Clarke and her son have one of the best greenhouse plants in California. Miss Clarke remains in Germany to complete her musical education.

In a reference to the Cut Flower Exchange in the issue of November 16, in speaking of Mr. Jackson, the word janitor was omitted. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

At the close of last week there was a gradual stiffening in prices, due to the near approach of Thanksgiving. Monday opened with considerable long-distance shipping but not much else doing. Thanksgiving prices were in force and local retailers bought only for immediate needs. Tuesday found every house with all the shipping it could handle, but supplies of stock were large and everything points to a record-breaking Thanksgiving business.

The Beauty cuts are heavy but most of the stock comes in the extra long class. It has been possible to fill all orders for the long-stemmed stock but a great many orders call for medium grades, which it has been impossible to supply. Brides and Maids are equal to all requirements. Some splendid Richmond and Liberty are seen and these, with Beauties, are the popular roses. Uncle John is also in unusually good form and large supply. The carnation growers have evidently been holding back stock, for receipts Monday and Tuesday were heavy and some of the consignments showed evidences of pickling. In general, however, the stock graded very good. Prices are strongly held but orders have been filled. Chrysanthemums, especially of the medium size are in large supply, Bonnaffon being especially numerous. The demand has been excellent and stock cleaning up in first-class shape. It is reported that the season is well over with a good many of the large growers.

Large Cuts

ALTHOUGH everything was cut close for Thanksgiving, there is no scarcity of stock in this house. Our supplies are large. Beauties are fine, also Brides and Maids. Plenty of Chrysanthemums; best late sorts. Finest Enchantress in town and all grades of Carnations in quantity.

Are you using New York Violets? Let us supply them.

Long heavy strings of Asparagus and Smilax; all other greens in quantity.

Violets have not been abundant, nor have they been in such heavy demand as at some previous Thanksgivings. Valley is abundant and has sold well. Harrisii are still scarce but callas are more plentiful.

The call for green goods has been something phenomenal. Large quantities of common ferns have gone out this week and also galax and leucothoe, while almost every order calls for the finer material, such as asparagus and smilax. Plumosus bunches and Sprenger were short of the demand. Adiantum is plentiful.

The death of Marshall Field, Jr., on Monday night, did not affect the market so much as it might, due to the request in the funeral notice that flowers be omitted. Still some were sent and the family order, handled by Samuelson, was a large one.

The weather on Tuesday, the big shipping day for Thanksgiving, was balmy as spring, altogether too warm for stock to carry in the best shape.

Various Notes.

On November 28 Stollery Bros. opened a new store at 1983 Evanston avenue, near the end of the elevated road. The location is an excellent one, about eight blocks from their old store. The room is 20x80 feet and the prospects are for doing a nice business there. Stollery Bros. are first in with azaleas, having Simon Mardner in good bloom.

Bentley-Coatsworth Co. recently shipped a box of Beauties to San Francisco. They were delivered six days from shipment. Word has been received that they arrived in fine shape.

C. W. McKellar had a nice consignment of Laelia Arnoldiana this week. This is a variety new to this market and brought $4 per dozen.

Leonard Kill spent Sunday sizing up the crop prospects at Peter Reinberg's. One of the section foremen assured him that he would cut 2,000 long Beauties for Christmas. As this man has three of the forty houses in Beauties, Mr. Kill concluded that it is time to begin booking orders.

J. B. Deamud is still receiving Beauties from F. R. & P. M. Pierson, Searboro, N. Y. They arrive in remarkably good shape considering their long journey.

Wieter Bros. will increase their planting of the Richmond rose next season, finding it about equally popular with Liberty and easier to handle.

Following the Kansas City flower show, N. A. Benson, Emil Glauber and J. A. Valentine, of Denver, came on to Joliet for a day and then to Bassett & Washburn's for Saturday afternoon. Sunday evening they started for home. Many noticed a peculiar exhilaration in the atmosphere at that time but were at a loss to account for the phenomenon, for the western gentleman had neglected to send out the usual advance notices.

Growers at Rogers Park are deeply interested in the negotiations now pending between the Rogers Park Water Co. and the city. The Water Co., a concern chartered before Rogers Park was annexed to Chicago, is charging the growers 20 cents per thousand gallons. The city charges only half that and pressure has been brought to bear to get the city's mains extended to compete with the private company. The latter has now offered to sell out to the city.

There is a report of another wholesale establishment soon to enter the market, handling cut flowers and supplies.

John Zeeh says that Zeeh & Mann have facilities for a good deal more business and that he proposes to push hard until he needs more facilities.

Mrs. W. Duckham chrysanthemum is as disappointing to local growers as was W. Duckham. They don't live up to their eastern reputation.

The Greeks are again in trouble; the fruit and flower stands have been gradually creeping onto the sidewalks all over the down-town district, but the council has by resolution ordered them removed December 1.

The Chicago Decorative Material Co., 189-191 Wabash avenue, is working quite a force in making up green wreathing.

Walter Retzer is now supplying decorations and doing landscape work at Seattle.

A visitor was H. Bornhoeft, Tipton, Ind., en route to Germany.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market has taken a turn for the better. There is more business, both in and out of town. The feature is the shortening up of carnations. Prices on the ordinary grades have advanced sharply. Fancies and selects are also higher. The unsatisfied demand for carnations has turned to tea roses, the lower grades of Brides and Maids especially being taken as substitutes. Violets continue in active demand, quality bringing good value. Small orchids, cypripediums and oncidiums are more plentiful. Beauties, which have been plentiful, were more eagerly bought as Thanksgiving drew near. Prices are advancing. Both Liberty and Richmond are improving. Some very choice stock is offered. Chrysanthemums are less plentiful; general quality excellent; demand brisk; prices firmer. Holly has made its appearance in several centers. It is generally well berried. Greens are selling better.

A Christening.

Last Friday evening, November 24, six chosen spirits gathered in the city of Brotherly Love to christen John A. Shellem's new rose. Readers of the REVIEW will remember that this new American seedling is a white and pink tea, very vigorous, believed to have a great future as an outdoor rose. Robert Craig made a great speech, christening the new rose William R. Smith in honor of our dear old friend who loves "the bonnie Scotch heather."

Quality Tells.

"It is better to have 100 trees live out of 100 planted than to have only eighty-five out of 100 live." That sentence expresses clearly the idea William Warner Harper, aided by John H. Humphries, has steadily followed up at the Andorra Nurseries. That idea is evidenced in many ways. The planting is further apart than usually seen, to insure the safety of the next tree's roots in lifting. The lifting is not done until the order is received. Then it is pushed as rapidly as safety will permit. They have gradually discarded the poorer, less desirable trees and evergreens, growing in their places the better varieties that thrive readily under intelligent care, giving something worth having.

avenues near Horticultural hall in Fairmount park, is a specialty at the Andorra Nurseries. They have them in all sizes, transplanted frequently. The stock of specimens of bush box is enormous, larger probably than anywhere in Holland. They are in perfect condition, from three to four feet high, well proportioned, with plenty of room to grow. Opposite the box Mr. Humphries pointed out as pretty a field of evergreens as one could wish to see. They were transplanted last August, the common-sense time for transplanting evergreens. There was not a soldier missing from the ranks, retinosporas, junipers, pines in long rows to the south. Down the hillside, on the northern and northeastern slopes were great fields of Rhododendron maximum and kalmias.

Godfrey Aschmann left an order for Michigan to show the representative of the REVIEW his Christmas stock. The features of that stock were that only the most popular varieties of decorative and house plants are grown and only in the medium and salable sizes. You rarely see any very large plants at Godfrey Aschmann's; you rarely see any very small ones during the busy season. The stock is all fit for the immediate use of the average buyer.

The imported stock for Christmas includes Azalea Deutsche Perle, white; Simon Mardner, rose red, and Vervaneana, pink, sometimes red; Araucaria excelsa, glauca and compacta, all in nice condition, and good Ficus elastica.

In home-grown stock Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, elegantissima and Scottii in many sizes; kentias, Cocos Weddelliana, ferns, 3-inch chiefly, different varieties of pteris, peppers, etc., are ready in quantity. Mr. Aschmann handles an immense amount of stock in the course of a year. He keeps his benches always full and no sooner cleans out one crop than he has another ready to take its place.

Price of Flowers.

A good many criticisms reach Phil on the quotations in the weekly list. One critic says they are too high, another that they are too low. In view of these criticisms, some of them coming from intelligent men of long experience, I should like to state a few facts:

Prices in the cut flower market fluctuate continually, often from hour to hour. Ordinarily a general standard of prices is maintained but quality, quantity and condition render this an extremely difficult matter. The lists published are the result of careful comparison made in various centers and taken with the market report will give a fair idea of values.

Various Notes.

M. Rice has given evidence of rare creative power in his adjustable novelty baskets. The show room at 1220 Race street contains a handsome collection of these baskets in all colors.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons decorated for the Five O'clock Club's dinner last Saturday evening at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel. The room decorations were in red and white. These colors were followed on the table, low bowls of Liberty and Bride roses forming the floral adornments. Boutonnieres were of white carnations. Some handsome palms graced the room. There were eighty-five guests. The work was designed and executed by Edward Habermehl.

It is reported on good authority that George Burton has decided that for him there will be only one rose next season. That will be American Beauty.

Edward Reid's business shows a marked increase over last season at this period, which is all the more gratifying, as the general florists' business has not been ahead of last year; with many growers and retailers it has been less, owing to the late frosts.

Wm. F. Dreer is going to California. Thaddens N. Yates & Co. have increased their planting of Easter lilies for mid-winter cutting. They report a decrease in deceased bulbs, now not over ten per cent. A new variety on trial is believed to be free from disease.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving choice cypripediums and oncidiums.

David Anderson, of Garrettsford, has secured building material sufficient to nearly double his place next season.

Eugene Bernheimer to Phil: "I am receiving some fine Liberty with long heavy stems. I wish I were at liberty to tell you from whom they come." So do we.

Wm. J. Moore has a quiet confidence in John Stanley's timing of crops for the holidays that is inspiring.

Wm. E. McKissick has added natural cut eucaly leaves to his stock.

The Leo Niessen Co. has adopted light brown kahki jackets, very neat and clean in appearance, to keep their own and their employees' clothes from being injured by water, a sensible move that should be followed.

Charles Fox has a second story greenhouse at Broad and Thompson streets. It is a "peach," light and airy. When the boarders are all out it will be filled with poinsettias for Christmas.

The wagons of the Keller Pottery Co. may be met on nearly every road of three counties.

Dr. Roberts will deliver a lecture on "The Effect of Plants in the Sick Room," before the Florists' Club and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society next Tuesday evening.

There are quite a lot of nicely grown pot plants of Ivory chrysanthemums in the market.

Fred J. Mitchell has secured a fine

Wm. J. Young, Jr., has completed a new greenhouse for "boarders" with a cleverly constructed second story over it. This upper house is reached by a ladder. It has a center walk and two side benches, well suited for small plants requiring full light.

Wm. P. Craig has a good device for making his customers feel that their orders are packed with care. Each case of Japanese bulbs contains a certificate printed in English and in Japanese stating that this case of so many bulbs was packed expressly for Wm. P. Craig.

Christian Eisele expects to devote himself exclusively to the wholesale trade in his new location at Eleventh and Roy streets. Clematis and hardy ivies have sold well this fall. Asparagus plumosus in "fours" were full of vigor. The Easter stock will be very large. It is in promising condition. PHIL.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business is still improving, showing a decided increase over last week. There is still an abundance of chrysanthemums and a good supply of roses. The market continues to be short on carnations. The carnations grown in this section do not begin to supply the demand. It is the best selling flower in this market and large quantities are shipped in daily from Chicago. Violets are selling well and bringing a good price. The approach of Thanksgiving had a good effect and advanced prices on cut flowers. Most of the florists will be very busy next week with decorations.

Various Notes.

The Chas. A. Schaeffer Floral Co. held its opening November 27. This concern will be the largest west of Chicago and will do both wholesale and retail business.

The Market.

The market, which has been dull, has shown a little improvement since my last writing. All last week sales were very irregular and no steady demand could be relied upon. The wholesalers say that never have they been compelled to sell roses so cheaply at this season of the year. The lowest price recorded was $5 per thousand, among them being Bride, Maid, Perle, Meteor and Beauty of fair quality. This forced the price down on fancy stock of Richmond, Chatenay and Liberty, which hardly reached $5 per hundred. Beauty has moved slowly.

Carnations, too, came in stronger than the demand, with $3 per hundred for fancy stock, though plenty of fine stock in Enchantress, Nelson Fisher, Lawson, Cardinal and Lady Bountiful went for $2 and even $1.50 per hundred.

Chrysanthemums have slacked up somewhat at this writing and it may be that the growers are saving them for Thanksgiving when better prices can be obtained for them. Violets are becoming more plentiful but are selling well and no glut is looked for on these until after Thanksgiving. A few Harrisii and calla lilies are in the market, with plenty of valley and Paper Whites. Romans are not in yet but are looked for any day.

The market is well supplied with greens.

The retail trade could also be much better. The up-town florists have weddings and receptions, while the principal work among the down-town stores is funeral work. We hope for a better report for the next issue.

Various Notes.

The Missouri Botanic Garden is continuing its chrysanthemum show free to the public another week, the attendance continuing very large daily.

Phil Shoup, of J. A. Budlong, Chicago, was calling on his customers the past week, Alex Siegle and Fred Foster showing him the town.

The executive committee of the flower show which is composed of Fred C. Weber, F. H. Meinhardt, Theo. Miller, E. W. Guy and O. G. Koenig, held a meeting on Thursday night to settle up the affairs of the show. The result will be made known at the next club meeting, December 14.

Henry Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., was over the past week buying supplies. He built four new houses this summer and two more will be put up next season. He is sending in some very fine cut stock.

Visitors were B. Eschner and Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia.

Dr. Emil Preetorius, editor of the Westliche Post, a leading German paper, died last week. Mr. Preetorius was a great lover of flowers, and it was noted that never a funeral took place in St. Louis where there were as many and as costly floral tributes as at this one.

F. W. Taylor, who was chief of agriculture and horticulture at the World's Fair, has returned to make St. Louis his home.

Robert Aull, park commissioner, returned the past week from an eastern trip, where he collected statistics and specifications for the new zoo which is to be placed in Forest park. The portion used by the World's Fair is rapidly shaping itself and by next summer the park will once again be in the hands of the commissioner.

The florists again met defeat at the hands of the Fern Glens November 20. They won the first game and lost the last two. Ellison was again high man, 584; Kuehn, 512; Beneke, 478; Meinhardt, 473, and Beyer, 467. The games were as follows:

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

We have had lots of sunshine the past week, and it has been doubly welcome to the growers in this vicinity, and resulted in an increased cut for Thanksgiving. It was early apparent that the only probable shortage would be on carnations. Roses brought from $4 to $8 per hundred, carnations $3 to $6 and chrysanthemums $6 to $20.

Business on the whole has been very quiet for the past week, only a few small decorations being reported and but little funeral work, which seemed to be scattered.

Various Notes.

H. R. Carlton, of Willoughby, grower of the Governor Herrick violet, was a caller last week. He says that the violet is doing better in every way than last season, when he thought he had it perfected. He makes a daily shipment to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. and had a heavy cut for Thanksgiving.

Carl Hagenburger, of Mentor, called on the trade last week and reports everything as being lovely at the home place, and a good business at the Painesville and Madison stores.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. has moved to its new store, at 111 Huron street and find it much more convenient and pleasanter than the old quarters. The store is equipped with electric light and steam heat, is easy to keep clean, and the large windows afford plenty of light to work with. Business with them has been fairly good, but they say they could do more if it came their way.

Mr. Werner, of Werner Bros., Painesville, O., was a caller on Saturday. He belongs to the B. P. O. E. and was looking up stock to be used by the order on December 2 in the memorial services. Mr. Werner has filled this order for many years. Business with them has been very good and he reports having sold out on many varieties of dahlia roots, of which they make a specialty.

FORCING SWEET PEAS.

I should be glad to have some information as to the time of sowing and methods of culture for sweet peas under glass.
J. N. S.

Sweet peas for winter blooming should be sown early in September, either in small pots or in the bench, where they are to remain. They ought to have at least five inches of good fibrous loam, composted during the summer. This compost should consist of five parts loam to one of decomposed manure and should be thoroughly incorporated.

By sowing the seeds in 3-inch pots they can be grown for some weeks and then transplanted into the flowering bench. This may save throwing out a crop to make room earlier in the season. Night temperature should not exceed 55 degrees; day temperature can run as high as 75 degrees during bright weather.

After the plants have attained a good size, and while they are making buds, a weekly application of weak manure water will greatly benefit them.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

We heard from some quarters that business was rather quiet. We still think with the majority that the aggregate for the month will be found quite satisfactory. Good, sensibly formed, moderate-priced mums are in good demand and will all go. This is always the case and we notice several benches occupied with Thirkell and Nellie Pockett and Ben Wells that the owners would like very much to trade for Bonnaffon, white and yellow, and Jerome Jones, even if they were only one-half the size. Surely you small growers, you have had a lesson taught you this year and should profit by it.

Visitors.

We have calls this week from several florists who were a long way from home, among them Mr. McBurney, Atlanta, Ga. Mr. McBurney is a clean cut, shrewd, up-to-date business man who would make a success in any line. Mr. McBurney just ran over from New York, a distance of 450 miles, to interview Alex J. Scott, whom he eventually engaged to take charge of his extensive southern place. We hope that unqualified success will crown the efforts and industry of Aleck J., for we feel sure they will meet with every encouragement and appreciation from the proprietors.

Al. Mauff blew in on the way from Denver. There is just enough of the wild west left about Al to make him distinct and out of the common, yet he is very much up-to-date in the business. He reported a great time at the Kansas City show and a very pleasant visit at Milwaukee.

Chas. Roney, of the Lake View Rose Gardens, was here, calling on his customers and friends. He reports all crops except carnations in fine order. One of the items was 15,000 lilies for Thanksgiving.

M. Bloy, manager of the Ohio Floral Co., Cleveland, O., made a flying visit to his old home. He reports this brand new establishment as thriving and everything promising for an increase of glass.

Still farther than any to travel east was Mr. Hopkins, of Seattle, Wash., a bright young man, who seemed to be making this trip of 7,000 miles purely to see what older establishments were doing. What an example to some I know, who are too lazy to go ten miles to see things well done.

Connie Forbach.

We jumped on a Genessee car last week and rode out to see Connie Forbach, of the firm of Collins & Forbach, who are running the old Rapin houses at Pine Ridge. Mr. Collins is a busy man at another business, so Mr. Forbach is the whole thing at the greenhouses. The houses are very old and awkwardly built, but poor as they are, their architecture is superb compared with their heating. When severe winter sets in they are little better than cold-storage and Connie cracks many a joke over his difficulties. Yet it is remarkable what he does with these houses up to Christmas. He has as fine a bench of Begonia Lorraine as can possibly be seen anywhere. About 800 in 6-inch pots are wonderful, many of them now perfection and others pinched for Christmas. He also has a fine lot of cyclamens in various degrees of earliness.

But Connie himself is the principal exhibit, modest, taking no credit for what he does to perfection, but giving credit to those who do things well that his poor houses cannot. He is a student and shows the result of it in anything he attempts to grow. W. S.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

C. H. REED, SR., has disposed of his stock in the Amzi Godden Seed Co., Birmingham, Ala.

ADVANCE shipments of peas and beans are being received at the south and reports are that in a general way the samples are very satisfactory.

SEVERAL shipments from foreign parts are due to reach the ports of entry within the week. It is hoped that the goods will be permitted a speeding clearance.

C. D. BROWN & SON have bought the Ferdinand Yost seed business at Sedalia, Mo. Porter Brown has for several years traveled for the Plant Seed Co., St. Louis.

THE early wholesale lists show widely varying prices, on such items as Yellow Globe onion, for instance, which is wanted on all sides and not to be had in quantity in spite of many low quotations.

THE mushroom craze is still in full swing. The Chicago flat dweller thinks that a mushroom plant in the basement is a sufficient cause to cancel a lease if the family who occupy the second floor wish to move.

THE preliminary price lists of the wholesalers are thought to show only the local ideas of values. The later editions will likely come nearer to the true values of stocks that are generally thought to be scarce.

THE Department of Agriculture has sent out an announcement, which is appearing in many country newspapers, to the effect that the free seeds are now ready for those who apply through their congressman or senator. It is stated that "the country has been divided into six sections with special regard to climate and soils and the seeds are sent only to those localities in which their propagation is believed to be possible."

It is reasonably safe to say that the Department of Agriculture will have a number of early opportunities to test German alfalfa seed without going to the trouble of buying it in the "open market." It is also a fairly safe prediction that certain German gentlemen do not look forward with great pleasure to their next trip to this country, while there is a possibility that the first inquiry as to alfalfa for import will now be as to its purity rather than its price.

AN English investigator wishes to know: "Has anyone ever suggested the use of color in seeds? In flowers we are told that the colors serve as guides to insects; but I do not feel sure that we have got to the bottom of that matter. In the Scarlet Runner the best seeds are beautifully colored, but they are quite concealed till they fall ripe to the ground. There are many seeds beautifully marked, but almost requiring a microscope to see their beauty. I want to know in what way these colors are necessary to the life of the plant."

NEW SWEET PEAS

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;
$1.75 per doz. (Retail, 25 cents).

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEARS' NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

GREEN AND HOLLY.

Those best in position to estimate this year's supplies of green say that the crop will be from fifty to sixty per cent of what it was in former years. Green in small lots has been sold at $8 per 100 pounds at Chicago this week. It is said to be exceedingly difficult to get the Indian pickers to go into the Wisconsin woods this fall. Each season it is necessary to go farther afield.

Southern holly will be abundant, but so much cannot be said of its berries. However, many buyers are able to use it combined with the red Christmas berries which have been sold so largely the last few years. Some excellent Delaware holly is offered. Advance quotations at Chicago are about $5 per case. It is said by one of the large shippers that it is necessary to go twenty-five miles into the woods for good holly. Good holly can be had, but it costs more money than in previous years.

WATKINS & SIMPSON, London, report that many American seed catalogues for 1906 will list their set of sweet pea novelties. Watkins & Simpson have established a reputation in England and, indeed, throughout the world, as sweet pea specialists, although it is only one of their lines, and have built up a very large business, possibly largely because of the success of their recent introductions. Gladys Unwin was sent out by them last year. Evelyn Byatt, described as a self Gorgeous, is the leader of this year's set. It has created a sensation wherever seen because of its unique and pleasing color.

NOTES FROM HOLLAND.

The bulk of the bulb stocks may now be said to be in the ground and within a few days the winter covering will be put on. Owing to the unusual clean selling out of nearly all sorts of tulips, stocks have been reduced in many instances and, as the acreage of hyacinths planted out is also considerably less than last year, the planting operations have come to an end earlier than usual. So far the autumn has marked itself as a very wet one, but as the grounds are in a condition to absorb much moisture, owing to the very dry summer, it is not likely that much harm is done. Trade in all sorts of tulips and crocus has continued to be brisk and prices have gone up very considerably. Spiraea and dielytra have not sold as well as was anticipated, but gladioli such as Brenchleyensis are exceedingly scarce and command at present very high prices for large bulbs. Lilliums are a short crop and are in good demand notwithstanding that the quality is not up to the usual mark.—H. T. J.

THE GOVERNMENT AND SEEDS.

In the annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture, made public November 27, under the sub-heading "Better Seeds for the Farmer," it is said:

Methods and apparatus for testing seeds for mechanical purity and germination have been studied and perfected by the Department. By means of publications giving descriptions and drawings of weed seeds and the seed of our economic plants, farmers have been warned of the adulterants frequently found in field seeds and have been advised as to the general quality of those in the trade. They have been invited, in all cases of doubt, to submit samples to the Department for testing before buying.

Through samples of imported seed received from the custom-houses, information has been obtained as to the quality and kinds of seed being imported both for legitimate use and for purposes of adulteration.

The proper conditions for the storage of seeds under unfavorable climatic conditions have been determined. The handling of Kentucky blue grass has been studied and the proper treatment to economically produce seed of high vitality has been pointed out.

Under the sub-heading "Improvements in Seed Distribution," Mr. Wilson writes:

One of the most important tasks which the Department has to perform is the securing and distribution of the large quantity of seeds made necessary by the Congressional seed distribution. In the earlier work of the Department it was the practice to secure this seed, put it up, and send it out entirely with a departmental force. As the demand for seed increased and the work grew, it was found difficult to handle the complicated questions involved in this way. For a time the handling of the seed for the Congressional distribution was placed in the hands of contractors, but this was found unsatisfactory.

The Bureau of Plant Industry was charged with all matters pertaining to the seed work, and for the past four years has been giving special attention to improvements in the methods of securing, handling and distributing. The

A special effort has been made in the matter of encouraging bulb culture. While the actual number of miscellaneous vegetable seeds distributed has increased, the cost of the work has been diminished and the saving effected thereby has been devoted to the purchase, distribution and encouragement of the use of improved seeds of various kinds. A special feature has been made of encouraging school garden work through the seed distribution. Formerly it was the practice to send the same kind of seeds to the cities as was sent to the country districts. THRIPS ON LETTUCE.

I am up against a little brown mite, so small that one can hardly see it. They can jump about an inch. Water does not hurt them and they seem to fatten on tobacco smoke. But they get away with the small lettuce plants very rapidly. They suck the juices and the leaf fades away. Can you help me out?
J.-J. T.

I think this little jumping customer must be a species of thrip, of which there are several that prove quite troublesome on different species and varieties of greenhouse plants. In one of the species the mature insect, which is only about one-twentieth of an inch long when he attains his full growth, is of a dull brown color, while the young are dull yellow. This is probably the one that has taken up his abode on your lettuce plants.

All thrips are much alike in their tenacity of life and are one of the hardest insect pests to be rid of. They will survive fumigating with hydrocyanic gas strong enough to kill most any other insect, and I have found them alive after the gas had been applied strong enough to injure the plants. Fine tobacco powder dusted over the plants seems to make their habitation uncomfortable and will chase them quicker than anything I know.

As a rule, however, they are not very troublesome in a lettuce house temperature. I have noticed that they are most trouble on small lettuce plants when these have been started and kept for some time in a higher temperature than that usually maintained in a lettuce house. A change of temperature, though it may check the growth of the plants for the time being, will usually serve the purpose of getting rid of thrips. I have often set the seed pans in a cold frame, just protecting them from frost, for a week or so and found that it will upset the family arrangements of Mr. Thrip. The plants will soon regain lost ground when brought back into a lettuce house temperature.

Though it may not apply to your case, it is quite a common custom to start lettuce seeds in a warm house and keep them there until the plants are ready for the first pricking out; and some even keep them there after this, but it is a mistake. The attack of thrips is but one of the several disadvantages to which the plants are subjected under such treatment. It is much better to start the plants in a normal temperature, even although they take a little longer to reach the planting stage. The plants will be healthier and better in every way, and there is no necessity for trying to rush them, if the grower only looks a little ahead, as they take up but little room in the earlier stages, and a few days' difference can easily be overcome by sowing a little earlier and allowing the plants time to come along more naturally.

In starting the plants in a house other than a regular lettuce house, even though the temperature is not so much higher, they often become infested with thrips from other plants with which they come in contact. They may not be present on the other plants to any hurtful extent, the nature of the plant probably not being so suitable to their development, but when they get on the nice, tender lettuce plants they set to increasing as fast as nature will let them, while they find the pastures good for the young to feed on. It is a law of nature that holds good even with insect life that the more congenial the quarters the faster will be the increase.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Florists in different parts of the State may have an opportunity of experimenting with hydrocyanic acid gas if they so desire, by communicating with the Rhode Island College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Kingston. The experimenting will be carried on in only a few places, so those who wish to take part in the demonstration will do well to write to the college without delay.

Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas has been found very effective in the destruction of a number of greenhouse insects.

The value of this method is not very well known, and, as the deadly nature of the gas deters many from trying it, the Rhode Island College will arrange with a few florists and forcing-house men in different parts of the state who have suitable houses in which to conduct co-operative experiments in the use of the gas. Any florist or greenhouse owner wishing to try the experiment should write for an outline of the plan to the extension department, Rhode Island College, Kingston, R. I.

HORNELLVILLE, N. Y.—There were 2,000 visitors at Wettlin's opening November 10 and 11.

RUSHVILLE, ILL.—George F. Moore just completed another greenhouse 20x60, and will erect a cottage adjoining his plant.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—At the funeral of Mr. Pitkin, of the American Locomotive Co., which took place November 20, one of the notable designs was a floral locomotive, executed by T. J. Totten, of Saratoga Springs.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It is reported that the Bureau of Plant Industry has imported from the Philippines a lily resembling the common Easter lily. It bears only one flower to the plant, but develops in a remarkably short time. This lily has been crossed with the Harrisii, resulting in a hybrid, bearing as many flowers as the old Bermuda lily, which will develop in four to five months.

"While we do not know exactly where we stand financially as the result of the flower show, it is safe to say that the assessment on the guarantee fund will not be more than fifteen or twenty per cent," says F. H. Holton, of the Milwaukee Florists' Club. "The deficit will not be more than $200, and we are more than satisfied. We had not expected it to be so successful and at one time we thought we would be lucky if the deficit did not exceed the guarantee fund of $1,200. We regard the show as a success in every way, and the experience gained through it will be valuable in making arrangements for a bigger and better one next year."

BALTIMORE.

Market Improved.

Since last report there has been a decided increase in business all along the line and prices are firmer on all good stock. Chrysanthemums are gradually decreasing but there is no scarcity as yet. Roses are still too plentiful, no doubt because of the mild weather. Carnations continue scarce and prices have stiffened on all grades and the chances are that they will continue short in supply for some weeks to come.

Club News.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on November 13 was well attended and proved a very interesting one. The topic for the evening's discussion was "How to Elevate the Private Gardener." Papers were read by Messrs. Uffler and Seybold and those who spoke on the subject were Messrs. Wagner, Uffler and Hennigan. A vase of chrysanthemums exhibited by the president, P. B. Welsh, which he considered good commercial varieties, included Paoli Radaelli, Percy Plumridge, Dr. Enguehard and Marie Liger. The question was asked: "Are the opportunities to learn gardening in the United States as good as they are in Europe?" Mr. Seybold said he did not think they were.

Various Notes.

The Wiedey greenhouses at Govans-town narrowly escaped being destroyed by fire one day last week.

P. B. Welsh, of Glen Morris, is cutting some fine Queen carnations. He claims it to be much more free and better in stem than Flora Hill.

A party of six took a day off last Thursday to go gunning, Messrs. Bauer, Perry, Moss, Burger, Lehr and Akehurst. They had fair sport. A. F.

John Walker of the firm of Walker & McLean has a petition in court against George and Sarah McLean praying for the dissolution of the partnership and asking that a receiver be appointed. Judge Robinson named William Cornelius receiver and fixed his bond at $5,000. Plaintiff contends that the defendant has put money into the partnership which was borrowed on the firm's indorsement and which is yet unpaid. He also charges that the defendant is about to withdraw from said partnership and wishes protection on the paper.

BARNEVELD, N. Y.

H. H. Nicholson and A. O. Grassl, who have entered into partnership in the greenhouse business, on November 21, purchased from C. A. Nicholson his range of greenhouses in this village. The Wa-no-ka Greenhouses have grown from a small beginning. The first house was erected in the summer of 1901. Two additional houses were added in 1903 and three more, together with an eighty horse-power boiler were erected in 1904, so that the plant to-day comprises 50,000 square feet of glass, boiler houses, packing and shipping house, cement coolers, etc., and a first-class hydraulic system which supplies the houses with water at a head of 200 feet. The plant is devoted exclusively to carnations.

Mr. Grassl came into the business as its manager in June, 1903, and now in purchase with H. H. Nicholson, who is a son of the former proprietor, becomes equal owner of this property. Under Mr. Grassl's management the output has steadily improved in quality and quantity. The business has been successful from the start, and they have never been able to fill all orders received, although the average cut of carnations is over 12,000 flowers a week.

NEW LONDON, CONN.

The second annual exhibition of the New London County Horticultural Society, held November 16 and 17, was a pronounced artistic success but did not do well in point of gate receipts. The exhibits were nearly all from the private estates of the vicinity and to Thomas W. Head, of the M. F. Plant estate, and John Maloney, of the C. S. Guthrie estate, special credit is due. They were the principal premium winners and the quality of their exhibits very high as well as the number of their entries large. Other exhibitors were F. L. Osgood, Gedulig estate, W. E. Pendleton, E. E. Smith and Mrs. J. C. Learned. The judges were C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and E. W. Clark.

A number of trade exhibits were offered not for competition. These included groups from Lager & Hurrell and Julius Roehrs and chrysanthemums from

A. N. Pierson and C. H. Totty. The Plant estate and others also put up many fine exhibits not provided for in the schedule.

PACIFIC COAST.

HOLLYWOOD, CAL.—A Mr. Rappe here is very successful in growing pineapples under glass.

COLEGROVE, CAL.—C. E. Brydges is securing very fine results with roses. He is a good business man and making steady progress.

SPOKANE, WASH.—There is trouble afoot for E. C. Balzer, the city florist, because he had a park team, which was going by his residence, haul a small heater for him, and because he did some work on the mayor's lawn. A commission has been appointed to investigate these grave charges.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The first annual exhibition of the Seattle Florists' Association was held November 15 to 18, and was a most unqualified success. One gratifying feature of the show is that it brought the florists of the city together closer than they ever were before. If nothing else had been accomplished the show was well worth while, in the opinion of those interested. The show was not only an artistic success, but it paid for itself.

The judges were John A. Balmer, of Clealum; James Forbes, of Portland, and L. L. Russell, of Victoria, B. C.

The main competition was for the trophies offered, the silver cup, the gold medal and the cut glass vase, the H. Harrington Co. making a clean sweep of all three, but the competition was very keen, and only the long experience of Lee Walz, the store manager for the Harrington Co., made it possible for them to win. The Seattle Floral Co. exhibited a rose pink sport from Enchantress. The Harrington Co. won first with a scarlet about the shade of Flamingo but with a strong, wiry stem and a perfectly round and even flower, said to be a sport from President McKinley.

Visiting florists were: A. J. Woodward and son, Victoria, B. C.; Messrs. Hinz, Maneke, Roberts, Smith and Harper, of Tacoma; Conrad and Klam, Olympia, Wash; A. Le-Grose, Everett; Robert Cane, Eagle Harbor; E. N. Kersey, Bellingham.

On Saturday night the members of the association presented C. Malmo with a gold-headed cane in appreciation of his work in connection with the flower show. A. B.

A summary of the awards is as follows:

There were eight classes for chrysanthemum plants, and the Washington Floral Co. was first in each.

In miscellaneous plants, Jacob Umlauf was first for twelve begonias, six adiantums, six Rex begonias and best specimen plant. The Washington Floral Co. was first on pair of palms, Piersoni elegantissima and collection of blooming plants. C. Malmo was first for Sprengeri, basket of ferns, other basket, twelve palms, Piersoni fern, twelve evergreens and collection of evergreens in 100 square feet. The Queen City Floral Co. was first for Boston fern. H. Harrington Co. was first for Scottii fern, the Woodland Park Floral Co. for design in carpet bedding.

For cut blooms of chrysanthemums the Washington Floral Co. was first on twelve pink, twelve yellow, twelve any other color, six of six varieties and twelve varieties, one of each. The Harrington Co. was first for twelve white, twelve Timothy Eaton and best vase of not more than 100. A. A. Hinz was first for seedling.

Lena W. McCoy was first on funeral bouquet, bridal bouquet, shower bouquet and basket of roses. Washington Floral Co. was first for basket of chrysanthemums and H. Harrington Co. for boutonniere. Other competitors were, F. Felix, Pacific Seed and Floral Co. and Woodland Park Floral Co.

On roses, H. Harrington Co. was first for twelve Beauty, twelve any other and on vase for effect. The Pacific Seed and Floral Co. was first for twelve Gate. Woodland Park Floral Co. was first for Bride and Maid. L. W. McCoy was first for Perle and red, also on new rose. Washington Floral Co. was first for Kaiserin.

On carnations, H. Harrington Co. was first for twenty-five scarlet, white, Lawson, new variety and vase of 100 for effect. Seattle Floral Co. was first on twenty-five Enchantress, light pink and any other color. Washington Floral Co. was first on dark pink, the Woodland Park Floral Co. first on crimson and variegated.

On floral design L. W. McCoy was first, the Harrington Co. second. On table decoration, Woodland Park Floral Co. was first, L. W. McCoy second and Pacific Seed and Floral Co. third.

A CALIFORNIAN DECORATION.

I was shown a decoration in a residence in San Francisco last week that demonstrated what possibilities there are in native Californian growths both in vines, colored leaves and branches. It was made to represent an autumn scene and was one of the cleverest pieces of work I have seen for a long time. It has been the custom here for many years to use little of anything else except huckleberry, fango grass, smilax and plants in room and table decorations, and this was an agreeable surprise being that nothing of the kind had a place in it.

Where it was the rule to twine smilax, grape branches were used. Twisted around chandeliers and hung in festoons over doors and windows, they became very effective, both for coloring, which was of the brightest shades of brown and red, and for its graceful and airy appearance. Wild blackberry vines were used in considerable quantities. They somewhat resembled the grape branches, except that the leaves are much smaller and the colors even brighter. They were pinned on portieres and curtains and for rich shadings could hardly be equalled. Large branches of madrones were stood upright in jardinières filled with earth to represent growing shrubs and these, with their multitudes of scarlet berries and large green leaves, made an agreeable change from the ever-present kentia or latania. Branches of pepper were used to twine around the stairways and quantities of red berries mixed with them helped to make the scene typically Californian. The musicians were screened behind a hedge of bamboo, the variety known as Bambusa falcata. The branches were cut about ten feet high and stuck into jars, about two dozen being used to make a twenty-foot screen.

Over a mantel Magnolia grandiflora branches mixed with short stems of silver maple and white birch tips were used. The dark green of the former, together with the varied tints of the other foliage, made a pretty combination and carried out the idea of autumn.

Several large bouquets were distributed around the rooms, in which the varieties just mentioned were used and these, together with streamers of the wild blackberry trailing from them and lying carelessly on the tables, were both novel and artistic. No flowers whatever were used in the decoration and for something original, true to the season and strictly Californian I considered it superior to anything I had seen.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

After 193 days without a drop of natural moisture, the welcome showers are here at last and everybody feels like shouting. Business during the past week has been good, in the shape of funeral orders, but outside of these, there is nothing to mention. Mums are a little scarce, especially the yellow varieties, and the price consequently has advanced. Roses and carnations are holding their own, both in quality and quantity. Violets are more plentiful. Roman hyacinths have made their appearance in larger lots and cost the stores about 30 cents per dozen. Other stock is about in the usual supply. A few sweet peas are seen, but these, together with almost everything in the line of outdoor stock are close to their finish.

Various Notes.

SPOKANE, WASH.

Trade conditions have greatly improved in the past ten days, supply of all stock being equal to the demand, out of town orders clearing up all the small sized chrysanthemums.

A few of the craft paid a hurried visit to W. S. Van Doren, at Post Falls, Idaho, one day last week and found everything at this establishment in first class condition. The visitors were given a hospitable reception and the greenhouses and boiler room turned over to their inspection. Most of the stock produced is disposed of in this city and the surplus sent to the smaller surrounding towns.

There is a rumor of organizing a Florists' Club, with fraternity the chief object in view, but as yet only a whisper of this has reached us.

KENNEDY.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

H. B. SHAFER, of Alexandria, Ind., has bought the Hughel nursery at Anderson. It is the oldest nursery in the county, having been in continuous operation for forty-five years.

THE little resort town of Ocean Springs, Miss., is becoming a center for the pecan industry, no less than half a dozen nurseries making this stock a specialty now being in operation there.

THE park commissioners at Jacksonville, Ill., wish to reforest Nicholas park and, being short of funds, announce that a tree will be planted, named for and labeled for each person who sends the secretary a half-dollar.

A WESTERN landscape architect named Weed, whose customers are probably not able to disassociate him from what he wants to plant, is advertising that neighborhoods may, by means of his services, easily free themselves from mosquitoes.

CHICAGO capital is taking hold of the pecan industry in Georgia, Chas. E. Yerkes having purchased a three-quarters interest in the Geo. M. Bacon Pecan Co., at DeWitt. Another company of which Mr. Yerkes is secretary and treasurer has also acquired 500 acres of land in the same vicinity which will be planted to pecans.

CHESTNUT CULTURE.

The activity of pecan growers in the south in recent years has not been without a parallel in the north, where considerable interest in the chestnut industry is being manifested. As was the case with the southern nut growers, one of the most significant features of this revival is the tendency toward the selection and propagation of new and improved varieties, especially of European or Japanese origin, the fruit of such varieties being much larger than that of the native American tree, and the Asiatic varieties especially being less affected by fungous diseases.

No native nut has such a wide range of adaptability as has the chestnut. Practically the entire territory east of the Mississippi river is suitable for its culture, besides sections along the Pacific coast. By far the bulk of the crop is still obtained from wild trees, but large groves are now being planted, both in the east and in California.

Like the pecan, the chestnut has a tap root of such length as to render its transplanting somewhat difficult, and on this account many growers still prefer to plant the nut where the tree is to stand. When planted in nursery rows they should be allowed to attain a size of from $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch to $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch in diameter three or four feet from the ground, before grafting. For small stock the whip graft is preferable, while cleft grafting should be used on large stock. Fifty per cent of the grafts is considered a fair result.

Grafted chestnut trees are early bearers, the Japanese varieties often showing fruit the first year, though to secure a vigorous growth, the fruit should be picked off for two or three years. Well drained, gravelly soil is considered the best for the chestnut. On rocky hillsides with an eastern or northern exposure, it thrives well.

The chestnut is by no means immune to the attacks of insects, which damage both the leaves and wood, besides the weevil which works in the fruit, and which is the worst pest the grower has to contend with. Leaf blight, one of the fungous diseases, may be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux mixture.—The Nut Grower.

APPLE SOILS.

In his annual report, made public November 27, Secretary Wilson, in the course of 132 printed pages, devoted to recounting the past year's accomplishments of the Department of Agriculture, claims that the nursery and apple industries have been served in two notable instances: "The soil survey of the Lyons area in Wayne county, New York, was followed by an orchard survey made under the direction of the horticultural department of Cornell University. Thus, a map showing the adaptation of apples to the various soils has been supplemented by a comprehensive bulletin which discusses the question of the varieties to be raised for commercial marketing, the methods of culture and the fertilizer to be employed, questions of storage and shipment, and even the facilities offered by the different domestic and foreign markets. In the same way the great pippin belt of Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina has been studied. It was found that the profitable production of pippins was confined to a single soil type—the Porters black loam—occurring in the coves and small valleys of the eastern ranges of the Allegheny mountains. It was also found that not only were the most successful orchards located upon this soil type, but also that a distinct climatic belt also existed within which the pippin production was especially favored. On account of differences in latitude this belt descends from higher elevations in the south to lower elevations northward. In Virginia it occurs between altitudes of 1,200 and 3,000 feet."

HARD-WOODED CUTTINGS.

H. E. Van Deman says that the first essential is that the wood should be perfectly ripened and sound in every particular, and the sooner after that time it is removed from the trees the better, for there is danger of severely cold weather injuring the vitality of the wood and buds. Only the new growth of the current year should be taken and that which is thrifty. The best wood is usually at the top of the tree, and the same is true of the shrubs. As soon as taken from the trees and tied in bundles, each bundle should be carefully labeled.

The cuttings must never be allowed to dry out. It is safe to pack them in damp moss, sawdust or leaf mold. They may thus be placed away in boxes and put in a cellar, dampening the whole mass as it is packed down. However, most propagators bury them in the ground, because the temperature of the ground rarely changes, and if the soil is reasonably moist and kept covered with straw or any other litter, it will remain so until spring.

In making the cutting the wood should be cut into 10-inch lengths and close to a bud at either end. The latter is important because of the fact that the roots strike out more easily near the buds than elsewhere, and there should be no dead wood above the top bud or buds, which make growth above ground. In case that wood is left above the upper bud it is sure to die back very close to it.

The Market.

Although business has been pretty good it is hardly what is expected at this season of the year. If it were not for the large amount of funeral work, things would be rather dull. Large wedding decorations are few and far between, and having had very fine fall weather, people spend their time outdoors, instead of giving parties, etc.

Although Thanksgiving in Detroit does not draw very heavily on the market, prices took a decided jump for a few days, to keep in line with the east and west. Chrysanthemums are still in the ring, but good white and pink varieties are quite scarce. Roses are selling fairly well, select stock bringing from $6 to $8 per hundred, with a slight advance for Thanksgiving. Carnations, though not exactly scarce, are by no means a glut. Lawson colors are quite plentiful, but Enehantrass and good white are at a premium. Violets are a very scarce article at present and short white flowers for funeral work are becoming very scarce.

Various Notes.

R. O. Kohler has opened a fine new store on the east side.

Robert Flowerday was very much impressed with the Toronto show. On account of the stormy weather the show was not a success from a financial standpoint, but it seems each and every florist did all in his power to make a fine display and succeeded.

PIPING A ROSE HOUSE.

We are working on plans for a rose house which we expect to build early the coming year and wish a plan for heating it. The rose house will be 21x200, five feet to the plates, eleven feet to the ridge. It will be connected on the south side to our other houses and will have a row of 20-inch glass in the north side. It will have three benches, each five feet wide. We have a 3-inch main steam line, which comes up the west end of the other houses. It feeds three 200-foot houses. Would we have to lay another line or would the 3-inch line be large enough to supply the rose house? Please give us a plan to heat this house to 58 degrees when the temperature outside is 20 degrees below zero. T. W. C.

It is quite unusual to be able to provide heat for three houses 200 feet long with one 3-inch flow. Each of the houses should, under ordinary conditions, be provided with a 2½-inch flow. Each house demands about 1,000 feet of radiation. The four houses, therefore, need about 4,000 feet, which will require at least a 4½-inch main to safely carry them. If the present plan is satisfactory for the three houses upon it, an independent 2½-inch riser can be carried from the boiler direct to the new house. A good plan for piping the new house would be to carry a 2½-inch riser to the most distant end of the house and there divide it into three 2-inch pipes, each to supply a manifold built of tees and nipples to carry three 1½-inch returns under each of two of the benches and four 1½-inch returns under the bench on the most exposed side of the house. L. C. C.

ELBERON, N. J.

The regular meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held on November 20, President W. D. Robertson in the chair. There was a large attendance. Nine new members were elected and eight more nominated, and one life member. An essay was read by W. H. Waite on "Gardens and the Gardening Profession," which was well received. There was a large exhibit of cut flowers, notably a fine vase of Enchantress carnations from W. D. Robertson, which scored ninety points; a fine vase of Nelson Fisher carnations and some splendid blooms of Golden Chadwick chrysanthemums from A. Bane, scoring ninety points.

PECATONICA, ILL.—John Winchester has discontinued growing cut flowers, finding it better to draw his supplies from wholesale markets.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it, it will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Unrooted cuttings at same rates with 25 extra on each 100. Cash before delivery.

IN GREENLAND.

My present house, built this summer, is 20x50, with walls four feet, eleven feet to the ridge. I have installed a hot water boiler with a capacity of 856 feet radiation. From the boiler I have run three 2-inch pipes to a 4-inch main running along the ridge, giving it six inches fall in the fifty feet; taking off a 2½-inch lead to a header under each side bench, with four 2-inch pipes in each, giving them a fall of nine inches back, and a 2-inch return from each coil to the boiler. This gives me fifty feet of 4-inch pipe, 400 feet of 2-inch, and about twenty-two feet of 2½-inch. Will this give me a night temperature of from 48 to 56 degrees if it should drop to 56 degrees below zero, as it did once last winter? I might say that the walls are banked with earth on the outside up to the plate, leaving no wall exposed, and only one end, which is double glazed with a 1½-inch air space between. When I extend the house the other fifty feet, as I intend doing, will the same boiler do the work with the extra amount of piping similar to what I have already installed? If necessary, I can add another length of 2-inch pipe to each coil. J. S.

The boiler you have provided, if not over-rated in its capacity, should do the work you have planned for it. The piping as planned is not quite safe in a severe climate. Your house calls for about 360 square feet of radiation, while the piping you have installed is about fifty square feet short of this amount. The easiest way to provide this will be to add a 2-inch return under each of the side benches. Two additional 2-inch returns will add the necessary radiation. L. C. C.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum
Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts;
planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

WACO, TEX.

The tenth annual exhibition has been a success in every particular, and the Floral Society feels very proud of the result. Captain Shaw, chairman of the finance committee, says that every bill against the flower show will be paid, including an indebtedness of three years' standing, deficit owing to premium-winners, and a loan made by the Business Men's Club, and besides will have a nice little fund to the credit of the society, when all of this is paid.

There were fewer out-of-town exhibitors than in some previous years, doubtless due to the larger shows held on the same dates, but the local people were more in evidence than usual. Chas. Meyer, the local florist, was a heavy exhibitor, and took down most of the premiums on cut flowers in the open classes. Jas. Wolfe and Mr. Meyer divided the awards on floral arrangements, which were a pleasing feature of the show.

UNPROTECTED HOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse 16x50, side walls four and one-half feet, gable nine and one-half feet. Both ends are glass and there is eighteen inches of glass in the south wall. Please tell me how many 1 1/4-inch pipes will be required to maintain 55 degrees when it is 30 degrees below zero outside? The house has no protection. Hot water will be used.

L. M. B.

To adequately supply the house you are building with radiating surface for hot water, fourteen runs of 1 1/4-inch pipe the length of the house should be employed. A 2-inch flow pipe carried under the ridge will be sufficient to supply the fourteen 1 1/4-inch pipes arranged as returns beneath the benches, if the expansion tank is well elevated.

L. C. C.

HEAT FOR SMALL HOUSE.

We have a small greenhouse 10x60 feet, which we wish to fit for growing dahlias and gladioli. Kindly inform us at what temperature the house should be kept, and what arrangement of pipe will give the necessary heat in Massachusetts climate.

A. S. C.

To adequately heat the greenhouse in question with steam it will require a 2-inch flow pipe, or riser, arranged fifteen to eighteen inches below the ridge of the house, divided at the end of the house most remote from the boiler to supply five 1 1/4-inch pipes arranged under each of the benches. It will be desirable to place valves on at least two of the lines of pipe under each side bed, so that during mild weather these pipes may be put out of commission.

The Market.

A good demand for flowers of all kinds, along all lines, and the fact that society is getting busier as the season advances, keeps things on the jump and leaves little chance for complaint.

Chrysanthemums have been scarce and brought much better prices the past week, but roses are plentiful and do not bring the money they should, at least the lower grades, although specials demand a good price. Beauties seem to be plentiful in some places, as I saw several lots of specials which were bought for $15 per hundred, and they were fine.

The wholesalers look pleasant and say business is up to the highest mark for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

J. Elieker, of Homestead, Pa., is erecting two new houses. His business keeps increasing so rapidly that he has to keep building each year to supply the demand for bedding stock.

Mr. Innes, of Innes & McRae, Cheswick, Pa., who has been ill for some time, has gone to North Carolina for the winter to try to regain his health.

Thanksgiving coming so late, did not find the quantities of chrysanthemums we have had for several years.

The fact that there was not much money made in bulb stock last season may account for the fact that there is very little of it seen so far this year.

The Florists' and Gardeners' Club has issued a very elaborate invitation to the smoker for December 5 and the fact that those in arrears do not get admission cards has brought some back dues into the treasury. Very elaborate arrangements are being made for entertainment, as well as for a substantial lunch. None of the boys should be found missing that night.

Harvey Sheaf, manager of Mrs. E. A. Williams' store, is a visitor in New York and Philadelphia. Hoo-Hoo.

We have been much pleased with the REVIEW in the past year and found it very helpful in many ways.—ENOE & BARNEY, Pierre, S. D.

The First Coat of Paint

Starting right in painting means staying right, means staying on of paint. The best of linseed oil and yellow ochre as a priming basis—each piece not simply dipped, BUT SATURATED in the dipping tank. The ends of each piece then get the prime just like the rest. All pieces are then stood up to drip off—not “brushed out”—but only the excess that the wood WILL NOT ABSORB, slowly runs off. The method, besides being so thorough, is a time saver. Every case of time saving means money saving; every time we save money, we can save you money. Same way all through the factory; latest machinery, skilled workmen, best of materials—only the best greenhouses as a result—not the expensive greenhouse, but the best greenhouse. The best houses grow the best plants and the best growers have the best houses. Be one of the “best growers”. For growers, catalog L-G.

Established 42 years. U. G. SCOLLAY, MGR.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Christmas Crops.

There will not be much propagating or seed sowing from now until New Year's. Your attention and energy will be devoted to having your Christmas stock in good shape. Running briefly over the principal crops we might mention a few hints for their care.

Lilies that are well out can be removed from the high temperature and put in a cool house and it will improve their keeping qualities when cut, but don't move them until the buds are expanded.

Azaleas.

Some of our Deutsche Perle and Simon Mardner azaleas are already in full flower, while others in the same house are backward. It seems for this Christmas flowering we should request, or insist, that the plants should have well ripened wood and well set with buds. Like the camellia, which I had occasion to comment on recently, the time to prepare for early forcing is in the spring, when they are making their new growth. If the growth is matured early and the buds set, then they are ready to flower early. Although the camellia and azalea are allied, there is a wide difference in their submission to forcing. The camellia will stand none of it, while the azalea will open its buds in a strong heat. Don't fail when selling an azalea to tell your customers to keep them well watered. There is frequent complaint that the azalea wilts and it is most often attributed to a chill in delivering. It is simply want of water. A cupful of water is administered every twenty-four hours, and this scarcely touches the original ball of earth and roots that we imported and with the dry atmosphere of a living-room soon produces a collapse of petals and buds.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettias are now fast extending their showy bracts, often mistaken for petals. It is just now that the greatest care must be given to keep their handsome foliage fresh and green, for without foliage to contrast with the scarlet flower the poinsettia is a sorry sight. A low temperature and exhaustion of soil are the two causes of the leaves turning yellow. Starvation at the root is the most prevalent cause, because a bench of poinsettias planted out where there is abundance of room for the roots to spread and feed will flourish like the green bay tree in 10 degrees lower temperature than in pots. They should not, if in pots, be in a lower temperature than 65 degrees. Planted out they will do very well in 5 or 10 degrees lower.

Begonias.

There is no advantage in putting the begonias in less heat. They should be well developed in flower and they will last all the longer. There is a great difference of opinion on the keeping qualities of this beautiful plant, Gloire de Lorraine. With some it quickly drops all its leaves. With others there is no complaint. It will last longer than a bunch of roses and, therefore, there is no kick coming.

Cyclamen.

A very different plant is the cyclamen. They should not be subjected to a high temperature or they will easily wilt and should have a good lot of flowers out to make them attractive. About 55 degrees at night will do this and keep them stout and strong.

There are many other Christmas plants of less importance. The above are the leading plants and you should be well supplied with a desirable stock. It won't do to be minus any favorite plant with the excuse that you did not grow any this year. Your customers want no such excuses and don't understand them.

The Ferns.

There is one plant that keeps up its unrivaled popularity, viz., the Boston fern and its varieties, and if you have missed growing a good lot they are readily procured. They are indispensable and fill the bill as a present better than any plant you can mention. "I way, but the old Boston suits the million.

Tulips and Hyacinths.

Don't try to force tulips or Dutch hyacinths into bloom for Christmas. We used to get the Duc Van Thol varieties in by that date ten years ago, but then we did not have the flowers we have today. Who would look at a dozen dried up Duc Van Thol when Lawson or Enchantress carnations are in sight? And the good tulips, such as Yellow Prince or Vermilion Brilliant, cannot be forced in without a great effort and it is not worth while. Romans and Paper White narcissi should be in abundance. I hope you started your Paper Whites in plenty of time so that in a cool temperature they will be well out. It is much superior in quality when grown cool. Romans want a little more heat than the narcissi, but are all the better if finished off cool.

Lily of the Valley.

Speaking of Roman hyacinths tempts me to remark that in our opinion they are not nearly as economical a flower to grow as is the lily of the valley. The bulb of the hyacinth costs double the price of the valley pips. It is much more labor to force and surely it is no more desirable for any purpose than the delicate and beautiful so-called lily. When once you have the apparatus rightly fixed there is nothing more simple or less risky than forcing the valley pips.

Do not attempt to force any newly imported pips for Christmas, but you can have a batch for New Year's. This promised my wife a nice fern," or "I want to send mother a pretty fern" is constantly heard. The varieties are now so numerous it will soon be a question which is the favorite with the public, but it has seemed to us this fall that the original Boston variety, or the first variation of the species, exaltata, is not yet superseded. The drooping habit of Bostoniensis, even in plants of moderate size, is what pleases. This is saying nothing against the extraordinary beauty of elegantissima or the more compact and thicker specimen of Scottii and Barrowsii, for all are fine in their

I know because we have done it and cut seventy-five per cent good spikes and leaves. To get these results it is possible that I was blessed with a very strong lot of pips, for those were the days when comparatively few were imported compared with the present. The executive committee of the S. A. F. met here in February, 1899, and it was the previous New Year's I had been so successful and in relating this to the much beloved Peter Henderson, President John May and others, they gave me such a withering look of incredulity that I would have been glad to slide under the table.

We have more than once tried to explain how to form a box for the forcing of this little flower and won't go into it now, but the conditions are these: For early forcing, say New Year's until March 1, 85 degrees for the sand; 55 or 60 degrees for top heat. Water the roots every day, but when the buds are formed, and more particularly when turning white, never wet the spikes or bells. Too high a top heat as spring advances makes the foliage as well as the spikes weak and wilted. The first ten days the roots are in the sand a board covering a foot above the pips gives them a good start. Then for the next week a covering of cheese-cloth is best and when showing color they can be given the full light but never exposed to bright sun or a draught.

Depend on cold storage roots for Christmas. If you did not start any in pots for Christmas you can lift the full-blown spikes from the sand and place them thickly in pots or pans and it is just as satisfactory as growing them. They will not feel the change.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSES

A YOUNG GROWER'S TROUBLES.

I send under separate cover sample of my roses. Sample No. 1 were planted the latter part of August, in the soil as per sample, without any manure, being unable to secure any. They made a good growth and were apparently doing nicely but now are a mass of blind wood of a weak, reaching nature, the buds on some coming small and dry up, leaving the shoot blind. Others come green and crippled, the latter on good stems. I have fed them once with manure water. They have had lots of air on fine days, but have kept the houses closed on dark, cold days. Once or twice the temperature has been low at night, down to 50 degrees. Had I better feed them with bone instead of cow manure, alternately with lime? What is the cause of the buds coming green and deformed? Sample No. 2 is old stock. They are making a fair growth but the flowers are brown and the leaves dropping off. They have had the same treatment as No. 1 except that they may have been kept a little more on the dry side. What had I best feed with for that soil? I hope I have made my queries plain enough, as I am a beginner and having my troubles, as I presume we all do. H. B. S.

The samples mentioned have not as yet been received, but as the letter contains some very concise statements I may be able to do something by way of advice.

August is rather late in the season to plant and expect the plants to produce good blooms in November, as the best part of the growing season is then over and any growth that newly planted stock will make must of necessity be of an inferior quality. This would partly account for the blind wood.

Seeing that the plants cannot have used the nutriment contained in the soil, there could be no necessity for feeding, as this would cause the plants to gorge themselves and the consequences would be just as stated; the buds would get yellow and drop off. This would also account in part for the malformed and poor colored flowers.

This erratic temperature also is against the production of good stems and blooms. Keep the night temperature at 56 degrees and keep a crack of air on whenever the weather will permit. During sunny weather allow the temperature during the day to run up as high as 75 degrees with ventilation on. The ventilation should be administered by raising the ventilators in the morning as the day warms, a little bit at a time, never so much as to alter the temperature of the house to any appreciable extent and keep raising gradually until the sun reaches the highest point. Reduce the ventilation during the afternoon with the same care, never lowering the ventilators so much at a time as to raise the house temperature.

During the process of syringing the ventilators should be lowered so as to raise the house temperature 10 degrees, thus preventing the house from being chilled.

Keep the branches and flower stems neatly tied in an upright position, allowing plenty of room for free circulation among the foliage.

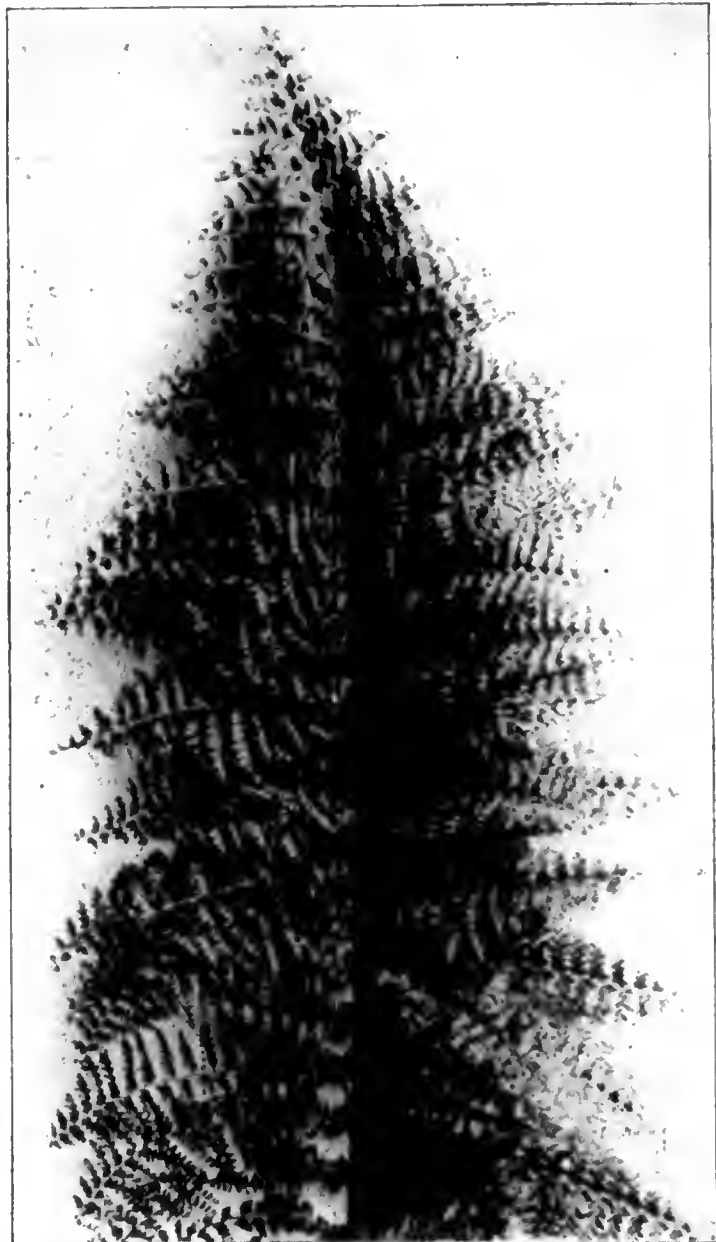

It might be advisable to give the benches a sprinkling of bone meal occasionally and stir it lightly, in alternating this with a sprinkling of air-slaked lime every three or four weeks.

During dark weather it is a good practice to open the ventilators a little bit, even at the expense of a little coal, as this causes a better circulation of air and keeps the atmosphere sweet.

RIBES.

GRAFTED ROSES.

The Manetti stocks will soon be arriving from Europe, and rose grafting will be beginning. Every one charged with grafting roses for forcing will do well, at the time of beginning the season's operations, to re-read The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing in America, by Alex. Montgomery, Jr., published in the REVIEW at this time last year. As one well-known grower said, it is "the most important modern contribution to the literature of the rose." For sake of convenience it was reprinted in neat pamphlet form and a copy will be mailed to any one who sends 25 cents with his request.

Frond of Nephrolepis Whitmani.

Group of Nephrolepis Whitmani Exhibited at the Recent Boston Show.

RED SPIDER.

I have some trouble with my roses, the leaves turn the color of the sample inclosed and drop off and one here and there is dead. Can you tell me the trouble and also the remedy?

W. F. D.

The preliminary trouble with these roses is that they are suffering from a bad dose of red spider. The leaves were withered and dry when they reached me, which precluded a more searching investigation, but stock so badly infested with these pests will, by reason of lack of vitality, be very susceptible to any trouble that comes along.

Keep the syringe going every bright day and use sufficient force, which should be directed to the under side of the leaves, to break up the webs and dislodge the spiders.

Keep a night temperature of 56 degrees and a small crack of air on whenever the weather will permit. In the daytime during bright weather the temperature can run as high as 75 degrees with ventilation on.

Be careful and do not overfeed, as the plants are very weak and feeding will only aggravate the trouble until the plants regain their health.

RIBES.

SWEET PEAS.

The REVIEW is in receipt of a box of sweet peas from A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., of very fine quality. The named varieties are Zvolanek's Christmas, pink, and Miss Helen Gould, white tinged pink. Sorts under number are No. 52, a fine dark blue; No. 64, light pink; No. 73, pink tinged purple. A bunch containing a dozen mixed varieties is also included. All are on stems more than a foot long and are a credit to Mr. Zvolanek's reputation as a grower of Christmas sweet peas. The numbered sorts are to be named and sent out to the trade.

NEPHROLEPIS WHITMANI.

This fine new nephrolepis has attracted much favorable notice wherever shown this season. At the fall show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in September it received a first-class certificate of merit. It is a sport from N. Barrowsii, introduced by H. H. Barrows & Son, of Whitman, Mass., last spring and which jumped into instantaneous favor. It is the dwarfest and most compact growing of any of the nephrolepis family. The fronds are broad, with very fine pinnæ, giving them a beautiful lace-like appearance.

An individual plant gives one the impression that there are several in a pot so compact growing are they. Messrs. Barrows state that in their large stock of N. Whitmani they have never seen a single frond revert. It is certainly a most beautiful fern and one which when introduced, in the spring of 1906, will be in big demand. Already many advance orders have been received.

W. N. CRAIG.

WEAK-STEMMED MUMS.

My chrysanthemums grow too tall and slender. The flowers are fair, but the stems do not support them. Some are five to six feet tall. I start them in February. I pot the sprouts and keep them in the greenhouse until the weather permits me to set them in the open ground. I plant them fifteen inches apart in rows three feet apart, cultivate well until about the first of September and have had them three feet tall before they showed a bud. The soil I use contains about one-fourth cow manure, two years old and worked over two or three times before I use it. I always give plenty of sun. I have taken off all the buds but the top one, and I have left two or three; I don't see that it makes any difference. This is in Missouri.

A. W.

I see no reason why plants grown as indicated should not produce good flowers if given a sufficient supply of water and fertilizer. A copious watering once a week, with liquid manure after the buds are set and swelling, is a great help, as is also a good mulch of partly decayed cow manure in August or September. I assume that the plants are flowered in the open ground, where they are grown. Such conditions are different to what we encounter in the east, but it should be easier to get a good stem on plants grown outside than under glass, as we grow them.

Next year take your buds the last week in August, if you can get them, and you will do away with two or three feet of stem and be much more liable to get strong stems. Buds taken late in September do not give best results by any means and those are evidently what you have been taking, if your plants get up three feet more after September 1.

EVELYN BYATT SWEET PEA.

(SEE SUPPLEMENT.)

When the new sweet pea, Evelyn Byatt, first came before the National Sweet Pea Society of England, in one of its great London exhibitions, the variety was the center of attraction in the show because of its new, striking and pleasing color. It has since been exhibited many times in England and has each time added to its list of friends. It is exceedingly difficult to paint a word picture giving an adequate idea of the unique color of this variety, hence the color-plate which accompanies this issue. The color is most nearly approached by the color in the standard of the well-known variety, Gorgeous, and most writers describe Evelyn Byatt as a self-Gorgeous, for where in that variety the wings are lighter than the standard, in Evelyn Byatt they are a little deeper in color than the standard, with a distinct tint of orange. Burning of the standard is one of the faults American growers find with Gorgeous. Evelyn Byatt will be tried under the widely varying climatic conditions in America this season, and if it holds its color, as it does in England, it seems likely to be a permanent addition to the list of leading sorts.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.The Propagating Bed.

As I promised last week, I will have a few words to say about propagating houses and benches and also some hints on caring for cuttings while in the sand. Most large growers have propagating houses which are designed and built for that purpose and as they can be handled according to the needs of the cuttings, and no other crop has to be taken into consideration, good success is the rule. Such a house need not differ very materially from the regular growing house as regards the structure itself. The ordinary even-span house is as good as any and you can build it as wide and as long as you like, providing you arrange for ample means of ventilation without causing a draught to strike the cuttings. Some use a lean-to built against a three-quarter-span house, but we do not approve of such a house because it is entirely shaded in midwinter and it is impossible to give the cuttings any sunlight whatever.

So the most up-to-date propagating house is an even-span house running either east and west or north and south. The main difference comes in the building of the benches and arrangement of the heating pipes. The benches should be built very solid, as the sand is heavy and when you pack it thoroughly, as should be done, it takes a well-built bench to stand it. Put in the legs and cross supports as usual, about four feet apart, and then instead of the board bottom use 2x4 pieces lengthwise and space them apart far enough so that a brick will reach from the center of one to the center of the next one. Then lay in the bricks flat and close together and you have a propagating bench that can not be beat.

You can use your own ideas as re-

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.*Timely Cultural Hints.

Thanksgiving, the first holiday of the season that can be said to call for extra quantities of flowers, is past and with it passes the reign of autumn's queen. I have always advised in these notes, while the chrysanthemum held sway, to direct the energies of the carnation more toward plant building than production of bloom; then with the coming of the shortest days, just when we would desire more hours of daylight, the plants are in condition to withstand strong forcing.

I do not wish to convey the idea that it is advisable to handle stock solely with an eye to producing a bumper crop for Christmas, or that strong forcing is a specially invigorating course of treatment, but to lay stress on the importance of preparing the plants for the strain that must necessarily result from continued hard firing, for with this must come strong forcing—the two are synonymous.

Considering the amount of bright weather we have had this fall, plants should have made vigorous growth and the soil be filled with a network of roots. The amount of plant food removed will depend on the manner in which the stock has been handled; that is, whether for bloom or with a view to later production.

The soil in a bench from which considerable bloom has been cut must be lacking to some extent, while a batch of plants that have merely made good growth will not have depleted the soil as much, and in either case it is questionable whether the amount of plant food removed is as large as generally supposed.

I venture the statement that many of the troubles we are called upon to diagnose can be traced to, or have been greatly aggravated by, over feeding, especially during the first months after housing and becoming established.

A plant when lifted has stored within an amount of energy that is surprising. Potted into clear cinders, as taken from the ash pit, moistened with pure water alone and given such care as would ordinarily be received by any pot plant, growth and production of bloom continue for some time.

Some scientists claim that animals when born are possessed of, or have latent within them, the required number of germs that are to produce their allotted number of offspring, the number of germs varying in different individuals. No agency can increase this number, but failure to observe certain laws or conditions results in diminution.

Whether this theory is applicable to plants or not, we have not space or desire to discuss, but we do know there is often a wide difference in the blooming qualities of plants of the same variety grown side by side under conditions as near the same as is possible to produce. To return to the matter of food supply, it is but reasonable to state that at this time of year, when all plant life is at its lowest ebb, sound judgment, accurate knowledge of previous behavior of plants and particularly the composition of the soil must be known to handle the gards the best material for the legs and cross supports, also the 2x4 pieces, but the above is a good plan of design for the whole. Nail boards on each side from the edge of the bench down to within a foot of the ground to hold the heat somewhat. Let the edge boards front and back rise five inches above the bricks. The heating pipes should be mostly under the benches. Have just enough pipes overhead to temper the air that comes in at the ventilators when they are raised and to cause a uniform temperature all through the house. A good arrangement is to have one or two feed pipes run overhead and at the far end split up into several return pipes to run under the benches. But this is not always practicable and you must arrange your heating pipes according to the lay of the land on which you build. But have most of the pipes under the benches, so that under the benches it will be 10 degrees warmer than overhead.

Now while a specially built propagating house is a very desirable thing to have, yet don't think for a minute that you cannot root cuttings without one. If your houses are even-span, running east and west, you can take the north bench and build it as described above and you will be fixed to root close to 100 per cent of all the cuttings you put in. Even the bricks are not absolutely necessary; in fact, we have propagated for years on an ordinary board bench on the north side of an even-span house and we seldom fail to strike nearly every cutting.

To sift it down to hard facts it sums up about like this: A properly built bench will make it easier to strike a large percentage of the cuttings, but a good propagator can strike the same percentage on any well-built, clean bench if he has proper control of the shading and heating. The boards should not be so tight as to prevent drainage of all surplus water, else the sand will become soggy and the cuttings will rot instead of rooting.

When getting your sand try to get a clean sharp sand, either from bank or river. River sand usually runs a little finer than we prefer, while bank sand is apt to have more or less loam mixed with it. Avoid either of these, but look for a gray sand that feels sharp and gritty when rubbing it in the hand. Be especially careful that there is no vegetable matter in it to decay and cause fungus after the cuttings are put in. This really is more important than the fineness of the grain, as you can gauge your watering according to the sand. We have used all kinds of sand, coarse, fine, loamy and gray river and pit sand and we find that cuttings will root in most any kind of sand if handled accordingly. But it is easiest to root them in a sharp, clean, gray sand.

WITTERSTAETTER'S PET.

The accompanying illustration is from a recent photograph taken at the establishment of R. Witterstaetter at Cincinnati and shows half of his house of Carnation Aristocrat. The house was planted on May 24 from 3-inch pots and topped back for the last time on September 15, all flowering shoots being removed. The first flowers appeared on October 25 and Mr. Witterstaetter was cutting quite freely by November 15. The blossoms are large and can be had on stems twenty-four inches long without sacrificing the plants. The camera does not show this as it was placed some thirty-six inches above the buds at the center bench. The bench to the right will give some idea of the height of the plants, where it will be noted that the top string support is twenty inches from the surface of the soil, and by December 1 it required another support of twenty-six inches above the soil, which will be ample for the season, but the grower expects quite a few buds to pass this by eight to ten inches before the end of the season.

Although these plants have done well, Mr. Witterstaetter likes the field grown plants of this variety better commercially, as it makes stockier plants with stems almost as long and as many buds in sight as the indoor grown, and blooms can be cut just as early. The plants were lifted July 28. In color it is in the Lawson class, slightly deeper but brighter.

Every visitor to Cincinnati takes an hour or two to run out to Witterstaetter's to see Aristocrat and the many other seedlings there.

Democratic "Dick" Witterstaetter may be pardonably proud for his Aristocrat. The peer of the pinks and a veritable aristocrat in its tribe, this new aspirant for honor and glory, prizes and medals needs only to be seen in its own habitat to elicit unstinted praise. The four benches planted with it, practically a whole house, present a sight well worthy of a day's journey to see.

Nor are his other seedlings, whose name is legion, the less interesting. Chief among them is Afterglow, a beautiful deep pink, borne on a long, stiff stem and second to none, not excepting even the Aristocrat in productiveness. It has already won a host of admirers. J. A. Valentine, salmon pink, a color most desirable, lacks in but one thing and that is stem. Were it not for this drawback it would be in a class by itself.

A number of reds in their second year's trial look promising, and several whites; one of the Lawson type of growth, has every appearance of being a moneymaker of a high order. X.

BURST CALYXES.

Will you kindly inform me what treatment to give my Queen Louise carnations. Bursting calyxes is the trouble. The plants are very healthy and the buds are borne on very long stems, but when they open a good many split. I have tried keeping the house warmer at night, about 58 degrees, but do not see any improvement. I formerly kept it at 55 degrees. Is this variety subject to this fault and do you think it will overcome it later in the season?

F. K. J.

Yes, Queen Louise is subject to the habit of bursting some of the calyxes. We grew it a number of seasons and have never been able to overcome this tendency. Ordinarily one would expect a higher temperature to stop it, but to raise the temperature as high as you have it will make the plants so soft and the stems so weak as to ruin the whole crop before the middle of the winter. I would advise you to drop the temperature to 52 to 54 degrees and keep it as regular as possible, with a rise of 10 degrees on cloudy days and 15 degrees on bright days. In watering avoid either extreme dryness or moisture and do not feed them until toward spring. This is about all you can do for them, and under this treatment the percentage of split calyxes ought to be small.

Of course you know your own condition best, but I think that if you would try some of the newer whites you HELP NEEDED.

How much help will be needed to do the work on a place consisting of a rose house 25x200, another 20x100, a carnation house 25x100, another 25x135, an asparagus house 25x35 and a propagating house 13x21, a lean-to 5½x92 devoted to mignonette, and another 10½x50 for mums, stevia, etc.? A manager is to have charge of the place. How much assistance will he need to grow first class stock for a city retail store?

A. T.

The subject of the amount of help required to successfully care for certain areas of glass is one of the most de-

Extra help would be necessary to collect soil and manure and keep the coal bins supplied, etc. This also raises the question of taking care of the fires at night and as I am left in the dark regarding the heating system and the kind of fuel in use, it makes the answer still more difficult.

If the system is hot water and hard coal is used the amount of labor required is not so much but that it could be apportioned and carried out by the help mentioned, except during very inclement weather. If the system is steam closer attention will be required, which may call for additional help.

Extra help should also be given during the planting season, as emptying and refilling the benches would encroach too much on the time of the help to allow them to perform their ordinary duties in a satisfactory manner.

A good deal depends on the manager himself, whether he is strenuous in his efforts to have everything right, as the force of example goes a good way in the matter of getting the best services from his assistants.

NAME OF HARDY LILY.

I have some hardy lilies that make a good growth of leaves in the fall. In the spring they send up flower stalks and bloom in the summer. This fall I found on the flower stalk near the ground a lot of small bulbs. These I gathered and put in a pot. I have some growing from them. Will you tell me how to care for them until ready to plant in the garden? Can you tell what variety of lily it is?

I. A. W.

We think the variety grown by this correspondent must be Lilium candidum, commonly known as St. Joseph's lily, the Madonna lily and Annunciation lily. So far as we are aware no other hardy lily produces its leaves in the fall. It flowers in Massachusetts about the end of June and succeeds best in moderately heavy soil.

This and a number of other lilies produce small bulbets at the base of the flower stalk or between the scales of the bulb. These can be taken off, which in would let Queen Louise go, as we have done. The Belle is much larger and if anything, freer and does not burst any more than Queen Louise. Lady Bountiful never bursts and in quality can hardly be beaten after December 1. Vesper is the best white in the whole business. Large blooms on fine stems; never bursts and the bed looks like a wheat-field, with plenty of young shoots coming. The cuttings of all these will be reasonable in price this spring and you would do well to try some of each.

ABUNDANCE.

With all due respect to the eminent or popular persons whose names have been bestowed upon more or less short-lived novelties, and with full recognition that the disseminators were actuated by a desire to honor one whom they held in regard and not at all by a wish to profit by the prestige of popularity of the somebody whose name was chosen, how much better are such names as Rudolph Fischer chooses, Purity for his white freesia, Abundance for his carnation. Who would doubt that a freesia called Purity is unmixed with color? Who would ask for evidence that Abundance is a free blooming carnation? What's in a name? A whole lot!

Mr. Fischer sends a photograph of Abundance to show why he chose the name. It was taken September 27 and shows a house of plants benched August 31, so that if he had thought of a name which indicated early blooming he would have been all right. Incidentally it may be remarked that he had not found it necessary to support the plants at the time the picture was taken.

batable connected with the business and one which I would rather shun. Any definite answer is nearly an impossibility, as the conditions of soil, climate and accessibility of materials have so much to do in governing the amount of help necessary.

This place, covering roughly 15,000 square feet, should under ordinary conditions be run by a manager who would himself take the leading part of the work, and one good practical assistant, with a young man to help.

the case of L. candidum should be early in August, and planted a few inches apart in a bed of loam and leaf-mold, giving a good coating of sand to the bulb-lets. Do not use any manure in the soil. Keep the ground free of weeds and give a light winter coating of leaves or meadow hay and in two or three years they will attain flowering size. The flowering size bulbs of this lily are, however, to be purchased at such low rates that it hardly pays to raise them from bulb-lets, although in the case of L. Henryi and some of the choicer sorts it ought to be done. W. N. C.

A NEW GERANIUM.

E. C. Hill, of Erie, Pa., says that the house of geraniums shown in the accompanying illustration was not in especially good shape when photographed July 3, 1905, though it makes an exceedingly fine showing. The variety is Ora D. Hill, a semi-double cerise seedling which originated with Mr. Hill. He has grown it several years and finds it a more serviceable variety than any other on the place, and a number of those in the trade who have visited him agree with his opinion of its usefulness. It is a very easy grower and free bloomer, the large trusses of bloom being carried well above the foliage on stems a foot long. It is very easy to propagate and is enduring both as a bedder and as a house plant. Mr. Hill proposes to let the trade in on his good thing for next season and is busy propagating.

THREE JOLLY GOOD FELLOWS.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph by Fred Klinge, who debits and credits for Peter Reinberg, at the Chicago office, where he rounded up this "three of a kind." Everyone who visits Chicago, and many others, knows the two at the right. The one you would know by his looks to be good natured is Leonard Kill, brother-in-law of Mr. Reinberg, his next-door-neighbor and manager of the selling end of his business. His popularity is so universal that the dignity which might be expected to result from such responsibilities as so large a business entails is somewhat lost sight of and there are those who doubt if he is addressed by his last name by anyone who has ever met him before. He is Leonard to everybody in the trade. In the center is Mr. Kill's assistant, counselor and best friend, Archibald C. Spencer, none the less good natured for being thinner and never addressed by anything but an abbreviation of his given name by anyone but the Greeks who want to buy Beauties on a stiff market. They are a splendid team. The picture is completed by the presence of Charles McCloon, who is known to most of the florists in Chicago and to many outside, partly because of the warm friendship which exists between Mr. Kill, Mr. Spencer and himself, and partly because of his service in several seasons as press agent for the flower show. At present he is advertising and press representative of the Auditorium theater.

Will you please inform me if there is an artificial way of fertilizing cucumber blossoms in mid-winter? I am not prepared to keep bees to visit the flowers. Are there any varieties which, grown together in a greenhouse, would fertilize of themselves? W. L. L.

I answered a query recently regarding the fertilizing of cucumber blossoms, which you will probably have seen. It ought to fit your case.

The English frame varieties of cucumbers do not require to be fertilized to produce cucumbers for table use. They attain full size without fertilizing but of course produce no seed unless fertilized; hence the necessity for fertilizing when growing for seed purposes. There are several varieties in this class but the most widely grown and most popular variety is Telegraph. This class of cucumber is much longer than the White Spine type and I consider better in quality but for some unaccountable reason they have never become popular on this side of the Atlantic for market purposes, though extensively and almost exclusively grown in private gardens.

of manure, and when the heads begin to form, liquid manure will be found to be very beneficial, say about once a week. See, above all other things, that they are grown on without a check. They can be planted as close as one foot apart, but if there is room fourteen inches would be better. See to it that they are not overwatered when newly planted out in the benches. A good way is only to water around the plants until they have made sufficient roots through the soil. Then they must never suffer for the want of water. They thrive in a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, with a raise to 70 degrees with sunshine.

If a succession has to be kept up seed should be sown every three weeks, or make sowings so as to have some plants coming on to fill the vacancies where the crop has been cut. From four to five months are required to mature the crop.

Should the caterpillar pest prove troublesome an occasional dusting of slug shot would be found beneficial. Dusting should be done as soon as the caterpillar makes its appearance. It is a pest that makes very rapid headway and if not watched will work havoc with the plants. The best variety for under glass is Early Snowball.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

National Exhibition Postponed.

TO MEMBERS OF THE S. A. F. & O. H.—At the suggestion of Mr. E. G. Hill, upon whose motion the project of a National Flower Show next March was undertaken, I have after consultation with members of the executive committee and President-elect Kasting decided that it is not expedient to attempt to hold a National Flower Show in March, 1906.

It is Mr. Hill's contention, and to this our executive committee agree, that the time is too short between now and March to prepare suitable exhibits, no schedule of premiums having as yet been issued.

It is expected that the committee appointed to secure the $10,000 guarantee fund will continue its work and that this basis for carrying out such a show in 1907 will be secured.

NEW PHLOXES.

For the last few years I have been giving a good deal of attention to hardy phloxes. In my estimation they stand next to the peony; they crown the season, from June to November, and with a little effort, by planting in masses, one can have a succession of blooms through this long period. One of the accompanying illustrations shows a vase of blooms picked from seedling varieties on November 1, after several quite heavy frosts.

The wild phlox had flowers the size of a dime. Their cultivation improved them to be the size of a silver quarter, then to the size of a half-dollar, and now among the newer sorts we have quite a number with flowers a silver dollar will not cover.

The creation of new varieties of phlox is easy work, once you find the key to success. You know what you are getting much sooner than when you are raising new peonies. Some phloxes reproduce themselves from seeds with remarkable fidelity and some do not come at all true from seed. From hundreds of seedlings of the Cross of Honor there was not one that favored the parent. Now, one of the grandest of phloxes is Crepuscule. As related in notes in these columns at the close of the season of 1904, I had early discovered that by planting it in the center of a group, it impressed itself on all its neighbors. Planting seed of this origin that year, I was amazed at the result. I picked out twenty of the best sorts, many with flowers as large as a dollar, and have continued to work with them this year.

I am going on with the work, using the finest varieties to be had; these are grouped together and the seed saved with greatest care. This year I raised 10,000 seedlings, many of them well bred. The two illustrations show the comparative sizes of the old and new sorts, but both are considerably reduced in size in the photograph. Next year I hope to have 50,000 new ones and out of this great number will surely have many of rare excellence. I am now at work on a manual on the phlox, to be a companion to my work on the peony, and hope to do something to awaken public interest in these marvelous flowers, so easily cultivated and improved.

ABOUT ERICAS.

The beautiful summer-flowering varieties seem to be going out of cultivation, yet the winter and spring-flowering sorts are as great favorites as ever. A few years ago it seemed that these would fall in the background, but last winter they were again in demand; and I find that growers are doing well with them again this season, and they are among the few classes of plants that have risen in prices.

Last season I heard from several who bought in the autumn, that they failed to flower them well. This I am not surprised at. Even with good treatment, they may fail, especially in districts where fogs prevail, but much depends upon treatment. There may not be many who do not understand their requirements, but there are evidently some who need a lesson. I will refer to one case I particularly noted last autumn. A large quantity of ericas which were bought in September, I found crowded together in a brick pit with the lights on them, and shut up close on a mild morning early in October. To those who understand the matter, it is not necessary to give the result; but I may say that E. hyemalis failed entirely, and even the gracilis autumnalis were little better. It is a delicate matter to criticise what is being done in a nursery when you are privileged to go around, but when my attention was called to the failure later on I could not help attributing the failure to the treatment they had received after they were bought, rather than the condition they were in at the time of purchase.

It is dangerous to leave ericas out in the open much after the middle of September, but it is just the time that they require all the light and air possible, and the night dews are also beneficial. Plenty of room is one essential. The best position for them is in light wooden frames, with the lights at hand, so that they can be put on at short notice in case of heavy rains or frost coming on suddenly. Provided the frost is kept off, the cooler they are kept the better. It is only when the flower buds are well advanced that it is safe to give them warmth to hurry them on. Another mistake which I have seen made is giving them manure water. It is beneficial during July, or on to the middle of August; but after that time it must be withheld if they are to set their bloom properly. A little weak soot water may be used, and when the first flowers begin to open, a little manure may help in finishing them off. It will be found that those which have a starved or stunted appearance usually flower the best, though I have seen those which have been grown on vigorously early in the season, and then ripened off, flower remarkably well.

Of all the ericas, hyemalis takes first place, and we usually get this in market about the first week in October, and I have seen it earlier. Some of our best growers keep up a succession until the end of March. Gracilis is already in, and we should have a good supply up to Christmas. Caffra is also coming in, and I have seen a few well flowered plants of gracilis alba; this comes almost pure white under glass early, but Nivalis is a much better variety.

Of all the ericas, Wilmoreana is the most difficult to finish. After the buds are well advanced, they may fail to open. The most important point with this variety is to keep the plants as cool as possible, with plenty of light and air. They are more liable to fail when we have spells of very mild weather with frost at intervals. Candidissima is another which requires rather careful attention to flower it well. Grandinosa, which comes in early, rarely fails to flower well. Persoluta alba is also fairly free, yet with all ericas there is some uncertainty, and those who grow them best during the early stages often fail to finish them off well; overcrowding and a close atmosphere are the most general causes of failure. This can be proved by elevating a few plants above the others, and where they would be far from the glass, it will pay to stand them on inverted pots, or even to hang them up to the roof in the wire suspenders.—Horticultural Advertiser.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

Various Comment.

In making the rounds this week the writer struck Miller Bros.' place on Dorr street and there cannot be a better built or a better kept place in the country. The range consists of eight short-roof Dietsch houses 250 feet long, no partitions, heated by hot water, which is kept in circulation by steam pumps. There are a number of the larger places in this district heated in the same manner and it seems to be a very economical system. Miller Bros. raise lettuce mostly, but had one house of mums as an experiment. They have had indifferent success but will try again next year. Miller Bros., by the way, does not mean two or three, but six, and all in working trim. No surplus flesh about any of them; the eighty odd acres of market garden keeps them in good training.

Mrs. John Wright put up two short-span Dietsch houses about 300 feet long this season, for lettuce and vegetables.

The Scottwood Greenhouse had a 100-foot bench of poinsettias in fine shape for Thanksgiving, the bracts measuring fifteen to twenty inches across. Their Lorraine begonias are fine.

At Heintz's place in West Toledo everything looks good except one house of Meteor roses. Mums were wound up here for Thanksgiving. One bench of 1,200 poinsettias will be fine by Christmas.

Miss H. Patten, owner of the Flick florist store, reports business as being fine.

The place of E. Darke, who moved from East Broadway to West Toledo, has reverted to the original owners and the improvements made by Mr. Darke went with the place. S. N. Peek bought the loose material, such as glass, pipes and lumber, and intends to use it in building houses next spring.

Mrs. E. Suder was kept busier than ever during Thanksgiving week. From one decoration she had to hurry to another. The largest decorations were for the Knights of Columbus, the Progress Club, and then the decoration of one of the finest theaters in this country, the Valentine, for the Elks' memorial services. The stage was handsomely decorated with palms and a profusion of southern smilax and cut mums were used in the draping of the background, also large bunches of cut flowers at the different stations on the stage. Business was much better this year than ever before.

The chrysanthemum show at the Walbridge park conservatories is at an end and the superintendent feels tickled by the success he made of it.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Everybody seems contented among the wholesalers. Prices steady; demand insistent from the retail section, that real pulse of the market, and there was no surplus, unless it might be found in the violet department. There was a large residue of "left overs" from Thanksgiving, which the street merchants were hawking on Saturday at 25 cents to 35 cents a bunch.

Meanwhile roses and carnations have awakened to their real values and, mums having gone into winter quarters, assert their independence and demand what they are really worth. Everything worth while was sold early Saturday evening. Some Beauties of the highest grade touched 50 cents each. Some Maids and Brides were $10 per hundred. Looks like old times again. This week opens clear and cold, fine winter weather, and society is busy with receptions and dinners innumerable.

Orchids seem to be the flower for the palpitating bosoms of the "select." They have never been used so largely. A retailer without an abundant supply on hand is quickly relegated to the ranks of the "has beens." I noticed in McManus' wholesale windows last week phalanopsis, odontoglossum, vandas, oneidiums, lalias, dendrobiums, cyps and cattleyas and I may have missed some varieties. It's the old story; supply creates demand and the call comes to New York from every city in the land.

Lilies are abundant. Ford Bros. received one day last week 215 dozen. Seldom a day when 150 dozen do not arrive. Plenty of hyacinths and narcissi are here and valley is abundant.

Carnations are glorious in quality and bring good prices.

Various Notes.

The ball of the wholesale florists' employees takes place January 13 at the Amsterdam opera house. An elaborate poster adorns the walls of all the wholesale houses. Some fifty names appear as officers, patrons, managers, etc. It will be a big affair and boxes are reserved for the trade in abundance. The principal officers are Nicholas C. Schreiner, president; Charles Matthews, vice-president; John Foley, treasurer; Elmer Greatfield, financial secretary; John Egenbrod, recording secretary; Arthur Wiese, sergeant-at-arms; George Hildebrand, chairman of trustees; W. Scheen, chairman of the reception committee.

Out at Great Neck, in addition to Mr. Fischer and his Abundance, several other growers for the New York market have excellent greenhouse plants. John Matthews has three big houses newly built devoted to rose growing. Mr. Adams, who is a member of the Cut Flower Exchange, has five houses well filled with a general line and is doing a good local trade as well as visiting New York weekly with a general assortment. He has been in Great Neck for twenty-two years.

It's a little early, but everybody is already talking Christmas. Two weeks from Monday and the great day of the year arrives. After all there is no time to be lost. In a few days the air down town will be charged with the sweet perfume of the evergreens from the Adirondacks and the Catskills. You can't kill the Christmas tree business as long as the stork is busy.

In the death of his mother George Hildebrand has the sympathy of his many friends.

The Flower Market is no more. This isn't the Cut Flower Market in the Coogan building, you know, nor the old one at Thirty-fourth street, nor is it the Plant Market down town, nor does it mean that great center from Twenty-sixth to Thirtieth streets. This is the one I wrote about a year ago, up on West Forty-fourth street, heralded by a fiery charger and a man with a trumpet, you remember. It was an "organization of leading growers," where the clerks were clothed in blue blouses, just like "Lunnen, don't cher know," and lots of boxes were piled up with out-of-town addresses on them. It was "to do away with the profits of the jobbers and wholesale dealers," and it really must have done away with somebody's profits, for the Fleischman Floral Co. announces that it has bought the place for $750,000! It is to be consolidated with their new Fifth avenue store and this magnificent piece of financing was accomplished without even jarring the littlest flower shop in New York.

Joe Manda, of South Orange, has the orchid fever and has bought the Japanese Nursery Co.'s plant at West Orange to take charge next spring. He is competent to make this a success and his friends all wish him a paying venture.

I met Paul Pierson, of Scarborough, on the subway Monday night and he told me some of his Beauties brought 60 cents that day. I told him it would never do to quote that as a market price and he admitted that he had seen some mighty fine stock go as low as 25 cents, so there you are.

Van Praag's new store at 1207 Broadway looks very neat and he is delighted with the encouragement of his first week's venture. Ed Ladiges, formerly with the Fleischman Co., is first lieutenant here. Mr. Roetke, lately with the same company, is back in line at the Fifth avenue store of the Thos. Young Co. Mr. Hanft is no longer with this company.

Mr. Karbmuller, for a long time with Stumpp, at Fifth avenue and Fifty-seventh street, is now with Fleischman at his Forty-third street store.

Charles Millang is preparing for a big cut flower trade at Christmas by turning his conservatory into a branch of his wholesale department.

Messrs. Donaldson and Purdy, of the Dutchess County Violet Co., are visiting their Rhinebeck violet growers this week. The company is more than satisfied with the business to date. The store is above the Sigmund Geller Co. and silk violet curtains are in keeping with their specialty.

Starke & Kleine are building a conservatory back of their store in time for a big Christmas plant trade which they not only anticipate but have already established.

Julius Lang, who proved himself a prophet at the election by predicting the victory of Jerome, is now wagering his reputation on the triumph of McClellan for the mayoralty.

Cotsonas & Co. had a big shipment of southern wild smilax this week and a big force here and in all the green goods establishments are busy with Christmas wreathing.

A fire between Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth streets on Sixth avenue, close to the wholesale section, on Monday evening, varied the monotony of the week's busiest night, when the growers' checks aggregating a little less than a million dollars go out in shoals to the toilers in the greenhouses. Fortunately the blaze was confined to the eating house where it originated and the signing of the checks went steadily on.

The Grand opera house last week had quite a serious fire and the Florists' Club's cozy rooms were in great danger of annihilation for a time.

The Bowling Club is still "hanging fire" and while Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Chicago and even Flatbush are full of enthusiasm over the healthful and popular sport this big metropolitan aggregation of representative florists find it impossible to get together.

The Florists' Club's annual election takes place next Monday night, December 11. Every member should be on hand.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Thanksgiving, that day when all good American citizens should give thanks, has come and gone, but I doubt if some of the trade gave thanks in the weather we experienced the past week, pouring rain until Wednesday night, when it turned in cold. Business was very good, possibly as good in some respects as last year, but nearly all the stores report the small sales which figure so largely on such days were lost, as people were not out, unless compelled to be, and then did not stop to look for flowers. Violets suffered especially, as none were bought to be worn.

Chrysanthemums, which had been scarce for a week before, were very plentiful. Some of the growers who could not be persuaded to send stock in when it was badly needed, had an abundance for Thanksgiving, when it did not bring as good a price as the week previous. It is only another evidence that the grower knows more about the market than the wholesaler, who tries occasionally to advise him when to send in his stock, and not hoard it up for a holiday. Beauties were very plentiful and cheap as well as roses which were in abundance. In fact, there was plenty of everything.

Various Notes.

Alex Nelson, who has been ill and in the hospital most of the fall, is again able to be about. He is looking very well, but is still unable to take up heavy work.

David Geddis will open a new store next Saturday, in Homestead. He says that there is more money earned and paid to the people of Homestead than in any other town of five times the population and thinks it the best opening in sight. He will have an up-to-date store, with all the appointments of a city store, and hopes to reach a class of trade that has been coming into the city heretofore.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. says it handled the finest stock of violets Thanksgiving that has ever come into this city, and yet owing to the bad weather were compelled to sell them at an unusually low price for a holiday.

The store of Walker & McLean, of Youngstown, O., is in the hands of a receiver, until the firm can come to an agreement for dissolution. Mr. Walker was in the city last Wednesday, looking for a good man to take charge of the design work and decorating.

Billy Loew, the green goods man, is using a cane, the result of an acrobatic feat of grand and lofty tumbling; nothing serious, however.

We take pleasure in announcing that Ed McCollum, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, has made good as a football player. His club was defeated only once this season.

President Phil Langhans and his active committee have arranged "large doings" for the club smoker Tuesday night.

H. P. Joslin has purchased a four-acre plot of ground in Ben Avon, on which he expects to raise summer blooming stock.

Wm. O'Brien, known among the boys as "Chicago," who has a flower trade among the bankers' and brokers' offices, is just getting around with a stick after a stiff argument with a trolley car.

L. L. Lockhart, who was formerly with Walker & McLean, Youngstown, is opening a retail store in that city.

Hoo-Hoo.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Everyone is wearing a satisfied smile, as Thanksgiving business was very good. Cupid seems to have gotten in his work the past month, as everyone was more than rushed with wedding orders for Thanksgiving eve.

Roses and chrysanthemums sold very well and at a good price. Carnations were completely sold out. They are still very scarce on the market, bringing $3 to $4 per hundred at present. Violets did not sell very well, as compared with other years, cold windy weather probably being the reason, although the high price scared a good many prospective buyers away, the market price ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred. A good many have found their way to the furnace and rubbish pile since.

Holiday Prices.

It is a pity the growers and wholesalers do not wake up and, instead of charging such high prices for their stock at every special occasion, if they were kept within reason it would be much better for everyone concerned. It is not only the loss of the flowers that are thrown away after a holiday, but a detriment to business, as a good many people get into the habit of buying other things as they are afraid to even ask the price of flowers.

Speaking of high prices, a very fine lady came into one of our well known flower stores Thanksgiving day and after pricing the different flowers she placed an order for several dozen mums. Then looking at the lady behind the counter she pointed to her neck and said, "What is that around your neck?" She replied, "Why, a necklace; what did you think it was?" "Well," the customer said, "everything is so awful high here I thought probably it was one of your garters."

A TEXAS DESIGN.

Will B. Munson, Denison, Tex., writes as follows under date of December 1:

"Taking advantage of your published invitation to send photographs of any thing interesting, I am sending to you today a photograph of a large crescent wreath, four feet in diameter, mounted on an easel used for supporting large and heavy pictures. It may be nothing new in the way of designs, but the interesting part, and especially to the northern florists, is the fact that the design was made on Thanksgiving day and all the flowers used in it were grown outdoors. The roses and chrysanthemums were strictly outdoor-grown flowers, and the carnations came from the benches, but the doors or ventilators had not at any time been closed. How many in the north on Thanksgiving day can boast of having such beautiful flowers from outdoors? The same day this design was made, for the funeral of our late city attorney, several others were also made. However, they were the last for the season for that night we had a killing frost and had to close our houses and build the first fires."

LANDISVILLE, PA.—J. M. Trout has retired from business.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Extremely dark, stormy weather curtailed the carnation cut to such an extent that supply was way below the demand at Thanksgiving, boosting prices almost beyond the reach of the ordinary buyer. Thanksgiving trade was fine, all that could be desired. The carnation shortage helped use up more roses and mums than would otherwise have been the case. A good many Boston ferns were sold, which reminds me that the town is just teeming with Bostons and the way they sell is very gratifying. As a whole it was the best Thanksgiving trade ever experienced here and prices higher than heretofore. It is an increase of over fifteen per cent over last year.

Miss Hartnett has opened a flower store in the Wonderly building, and reports a very good trade for her first Thanksgiving. G. F. C.

Business has been very good with everybody here. We have been cutting some very fine roses out of doors until Thanksgiving. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. says it handled the finest stock of violets Thanksgiving that has ever come into this city, and yet owing to the bad weather were compelled to sell them at an unusually low price for a holiday.

The store of Walker & McLean, of Youngstown, O., is in the hands of a receiver, until the firm can come to an agreement for dissolution. Mr. Walker

The Market.

Everyone is wearing a satisfied smile, as Thanksgiving business was very good. Cupid seems to have gotten in his work the past month, as everyone was more than rushed with wedding orders for Thanksgiving eve.

Roses and chrysanthemums sold very well and at a good price. Carnations were completely sold out. They are still very scarce on the market, bringing $3 to $4 per hundred at present. Violets did not sell very well, as compared with other years, cold windy weather probably being the reason, although the high price scared a good many prospective buyers away, the market price ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred. A good many have found their way to the furnace and rubbish pile since.

Holiday Prices.

It is a pity the growers and wholesalers do not wake up and, instead of charging such high prices for their stock at every special occasion, if they were kept within reason it would be much better for everyone concerned. It is not only the loss of the flowers that are thrown away after a holiday, but a detriment to business, as a good many people get into the habit of buying other things as they are afraid to even ask the price of flowers.

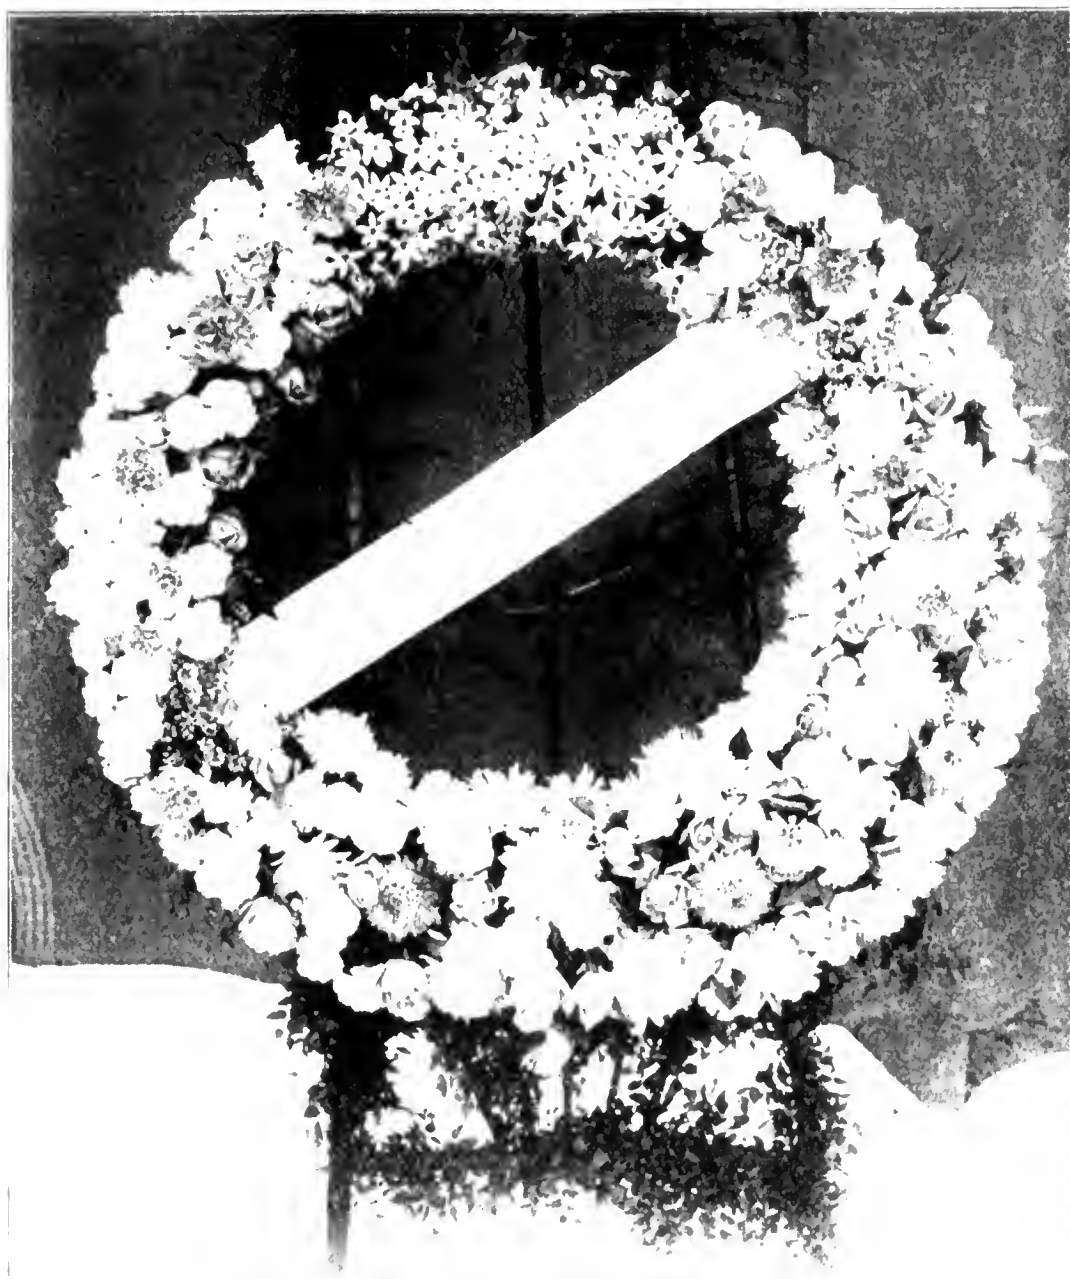

Speaking of high prices, a very fine lady came into one of our well known flower stores Thanksgiving day and after pricing the different flowers she placed an order for several dozen mums. Then looking at the lady behind the counter she pointed to her neck and said, "What is that around your neck?" She replied, "Why, a necklace; what did you think it was?" "Well," the customer said, "everything is so awful high here I thought probably it was one of your garters."

A TEXAS DESIGN.

Will B. Munson, Denison, Tex., writes as follows under date of December 1:

"Taking advantage of your published invitation to send photographs of any thing interesting, I am sending to you today a photograph of a large crescent wreath, four feet in diameter, mounted on an easel used for supporting large and heavy pictures. It may be nothing new in the way of designs, but the interesting part, and especially to the northern florists, is the fact that the design was made on Thanksgiving day and all the flowers used in it were grown outdoors. The roses and chrysanthemums were strictly outdoor grown flowers, and the carnations came from the benches, but the doors or ventilators had not at any time been closed. How many in the north on Thanksgiving day can boast of having such beautiful flowers from outdoors? The same day this design was made, for the funeral of our late city attorney, several others were also made. However, they were the last for the season for that night we had a killing frost and had to close our houses and build the first fires."

LANDISVILLE, PA.—J. M. Trout has retired from business.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Extremely dark, stormy weather curtailed the carnation cut to such an extent that supply was way below the demand at Thanksgiving, boosting prices almost beyond the reach of the ordinary buyer. Thanksgiving trade was fine, all that could be desired. The carnation shortage helped use up more roses and mums than would otherwise have been the case. A good many Boston ferns were sold, which reminds me that the town is just teeming with Bostons and the way they sell is very gratifying. As a whole it was the best Thanksgiving trade ever experienced here and prices higher than heretofore. It is an increase of over fifteen per cent over last year.

Miss Hartnett has opened a flower store in the Wonderly building, and reports a very good trade for her first Thanksgiving.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

Business has been very good with everybody here. We have been cutting some very fine roses out of doors until Thanksgiving. There were some very fine mums grown here and they sold at fair prices, too. Carnations are doing well and sell good. There will be a number of greenhouses built here in Dallas in the near future.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Weather conditions were very erratic last week. On November 29 a fierce storm accompanied by high temperatures prevailed and this had a somewhat depressing effect on business. Thanksgiving day itself was clear and biting cold, a forty-knot breeze and minimum temperature of 8 degrees above zero being recorded. In spite of rather unfavorable conditions the market cleaned out remarkably well, no good stock being unsold. Chrysanthemums made their closing courtesy in quantities. Prices varied from $8 to $16 per hundred, a few going higher. Quite a number of the blooms were, as one florist remarked, old enough to vote.

Roses made no particular advance and were rather hard to sell, short stock especially so. Beauties, Liberty, Richmond, Killarney and Wellesley sold well, Brides and Maids poorly. Carnations, with the exception of white, which were over-abundant, sold well. Good ordinary stock made $2.50 to $3, specials $4 and such varieties as Enchantress, Fenn, Fiancee and Helen Goddard $5 to $6. Violets made all the way from 75 cents to $1.50, a large proportion bringing $1. Bulbous stock, valley and other flowers were practically unchanged. There was a very good sale for pot plants, such as Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, cyclamen, Chinese primroses and berried plants.

Since Thanksgiving the supplies coming in have been rather light and prices have kept up well, especially in the case of carnations. Such chrysanthemums as are now coming in are small. Mrs. Jerome Jones, Bonnaffon and Merry Christmas are among the best sellers. Violets clean up very well, but roses are still a little slow.

Horticultural Society.

A well attended children's garden conference was held at Horticultural hall on December 2. Several excellent addresses were made. In the school garden contest first prize went to Cobbet school, Lynn; second prize to Mill Garden, Groton; third to Lincoln school, Brookline, while Fairhaven school and Sewall school, Brookline, were commended. There were numerous entries in the home garden competition. Small greenhouses heated by surplus steam from the school boilers were advocated by one of the speakers.

The following awards have been made by the garden committee: First prize for house of chrysanthemums grown on benches, to M. F. Plant, T. W. Head, gardener. Peony gardens, first, Dr. C. S. Minot; second, Dr. R. T. Jackson. Bronze medal to Robert Roulston for herbaceous garden. Vegetable garden, first, E. L. Lewis; second, Edward Parker. Estate of Mrs. John L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher, gardener, was favorably reported upon for the second year and M.

F. Plant estate, T. W. Head, gardener, for the first year for the Hunnewell triennial premiums. The greenhouses of Geo. F. Fabyan, James Stuart gardener, were especially commended.

The plant and flower committee for 1906 consists of A. H. Fewkes, chairman; James Wheeler, Wm. Nicholson, Robert Cameron and W. N. Craig. There are but slight changes in the committees.

Various Notes.

The heavy storm of wind and rain which prevailed in this section on November 29 wrecked two of the large greenhouses, each 40x300, recently erected by the Halifax Garden Co., at Halifax, Mass. Fears were felt for the safety of the other houses, but they withstood the gale. Two men were seriously in-

The finest double violets coming into the Boston market at present are from Malcolm Orr, of Saugus. These are of superb quality. Mr. Orr is well known as a producer of high grade sweet peas under glass.

Reports of merit were awarded at the last meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club to Wm. Nicholson, for mignonette; Patten & Co., for Carnation Pink Pattern; H. H. Barrows & Son, for Nephrolepis Whitmani and Peter Fisher for seeding scarlet carnation No. 408.

James Farquhar sailed for Porto Rico on December 2, where he will spend the winter on his firm's new nursery.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. held an auction of palms and bulbous stock on December 1.

Welch Bros. are receiving some grand Queen of Edgely and Beauty roses. Their receipts of other roses are now heavy and the quality excellent. They are making active preparations for Christmas trade in holly, mistletoe and other greenery.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day at Wm. Nicholson's, Framingham, on December 16. Everything points to a banner attendance on ladies' night, December 19. A double quartet will furnish music and other good things are being arranged for.

Prof. C. S. Sargent and his son sailed last week for an extended tour in Chili, Argentine Republic and other South American points, their object being an arboricultural study. The sea voyage will occupy fifty days and several months will be spent in travel.

Newtonville Greenhouses are again sending in very fine Bon Silene and Safrano roses to the Park street market. Their salesman, Fred Crowley, says they are worth more than Brides and Maids and they cannot begin to fill their orders for them.

Frank White, of Holbrook, is marketing quantities of high grade mignonette.

The souvenir catalogue, soon to be issued by the Park street market, promises to be a winner. It will abound in attractive features, one being a history of the flower business in Boston. It will be profusely illustrated. A copy will be presented to every visitor to the carnation convention.

Mrs. W. H. Ward, of Montvale, is bringing in some extra fine fancy carnations to the Park street market.

Helen Goddard carnation is in great demand at the stores. Its color is just what buyers want and it has proven its keeping qualities beyond every question.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are receiving some big consignments of holly, mistletoe, laurel and other Christmas greenery and anticipate the best business in their history.

Thomas Pegler, salesman for Oscar L. Dorr, is handling thousands of very fine Campbell violets daily at the Park street market. Mr. Dorr has 23,000 plants of this violet.

A. Roper, of Tewksbury, the originator of Fair Maid and other popular carnations, has some fine seedlings coming on. One is much superior to Fair Maid. Another is a very fine scarlet. These will be seen at the coming carnation convention. His variety, Chester Roper, the most prolific of all variegated carnations, is this season surpassing even last year's records in flower production.

Robert Montgomery, of South Natick, has a fine lot of poinsettias for Christmas. He finds Richmond rose all right.

QUALITY

CRISP, wintry weather has caused production to slacken but has improved quality all along the line. Demand is good and we are filling all orders and with splendid stock. Beauties are fine; so are Tea Roses. Carnations leave little to be desired; finest Enchantress in town. We are shipping many New York Violets. Are you using them? Let us supply you.

"Green Goods" are always to be had of us. Christmas is only three weeks away. Better send for prices at which we will positively supply accepted orders.

The Great Central Market.

Receipts are considerably reduced this week. The cold weather has probably had its effect and it is said by the growers that rose crops are going off, but there are still abundant supplies of Beauties and tea roses for the demand; in fact short Brides and Maids are still a drag. Carnations have also shortened up but are equal to the requirements, except that red is scarce. White varieties are especially abundant and hard to clean up.

Chrysanthemums are approaching the end of their season and in some houses receipts are very light but there are still quantities of good blooms coming in and not moving very briskly. Tuesday the market was very quiet. The call for green goods is good, with plenty of asparagus strings but a shortage of plumosus bunches. Smilax is also in moderate receipt. All other greens are plentiful.

Thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving did not equal the expectations of the trade and possibly the retailers were more greatly disappointed than the wholesalers. The bad weather of the day itself was a large factor in cutting down their business.

Thanksgiving came after a two weeks' glut. We usually have a period of too abundant supplies early in November but this time it came at the end of the month. Long Beauties were cleaned up only at a concession. First-class tea roses moved freely, but it was impossible to sell all the short and weak-stemmed stock. White carnations did not clean up, but the fancy stock, especially in colors, brought quoted prices. Chrysanthemums shared the general weakness. The one item that was short of the demand was the red rose, both Richmond and Liberty being in strong request.

Taken on the whole the week's business was about the same as last year, where a good increase had been expected. November as a whole shows a nice gain and there was stock enough for a good increase at Thanksgiving had the demand been as active as was expected. But average prices were not so good as last year.

Violets.

The principal complaint among commission men is as to the result of violets for Thanksgiving. For two weeks before the holiday the New York producers were excusing light shipments on the score of a strong New York City demand and light crops. Conditions must have reversed very suddenly, for the receipts on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday run into the hundreds of thousands. So disastrous a slump in prices has never before been known in the local violet market. Where prices started at $1.50 to $2 per hundred for good Hudson river stock, they closed at $2 per thousand, and not even all the receipts could be sold at that price. One wholesaler reports selling 22,000 to one customer at $3.50 per thousand and many cheaper sales are on record. Many retailers who bought largely, turned the flowers back to the commission men to be sold for their account. This was when the weather turned unfavorable. It shows that the retailers' experience was as unsatisfactory as that of the wholesalers. Some violets received were very stale.

Various Notes.

Two years ago, in his quest for knowledge as to how things go in the various branches of the trade, E. C. Amling bought a retail flower store near his home in Oak Park. He advertised extensively, carried good stock and plenty of it at all times and more than doubled the business. He says it was a valuable post-graduate course (he had primary training as a grower), but he is now satisfied to devote all his energies to his wholesale business and has sold the retail store to A. H. Schneider, who was its former owner.

N. J. Wictor says he is well satisfied with Thanksgiving. A big crop of Beauties enabled him to increase his sales.

died at Riverside on December 2 at the ripe old age of 87 years. She had been very feeble ever since her fall of last spring. The funeral was held on Tuesday.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had the ill luck to lose one Thanksgiving shipment of chrysanthemums because of frost. Tuesday saw the temperature up to 68 degrees and Wednesday found it 18 degrees. One of George Bayer's incoming cases from Toledo was caught with insufficient wrappings and 300 fine Bonaffons were black when unpacked.

Frank Schramm, of Park Ridge, is just beginning to cut satisfactorily. He did a great amount of rebuilding last season and was late in getting his place planted, but everything is now in fine shape and promising well for spring.

L. A. Tonner has quit business at the Flower Growers' Market and assumed charge of the supply department of the A. L. Randall Co., leaving on Monday for New York to buy stock.

John Degnan is again holding down his desk at Winterson's. He denies the blood-poisoning story. Clifford Pruner is now on the sick list.

The Florists' Club will hold its first meeting under its new president on the evening of December 14. A good crowd is expected.

Peter Reinberg thinks Uncle John is one of the best roses on the place. He is cutting heavily. Liberty is also giving very fine results at present.

Peter Reinberg left Monday evening for Newton, Ill., as Leonard Kill says, hunting for quail.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting large numbers of late chrysanthemums and quality is excellent.

One of the week's visitors was Miss Ida L. Chittenden, of Lansing, Mich. Miss Chittenden is known as one of the most successful violet growers in the west. She has grown Marie Louise with uniformly good results for ten years.

Weiland & Risch are now cutting Kil-larney in quantity and of very good quality. They report orders coming from long distances for this rose, showing that it will be in demand in other markets when it can be supplied. It certainly is a very popular novelty. And Wellesley is also in good shape and selling well.

The Market.

Thanksgiving trade among the retailers and wholesalers was about the same as in former years, though some say that their business was very much better, and others say not as much. Prices were very much lower than in former years and this made the life of the wholesaler full of care and trouble. They all had plenty of stock in all grades. All of the high grade stock sold readily at quoted prices, but the poorer stock sold at low prices. That was especially the case with roses, of which there were more than the trade could handle, and are so yet, as good stock sold Saturday as low as $2 per hundred.

Carnations sold well at good prices. This week the prices were chopped off a little. Extra quality stock continues to come in. Chrysanthemums were quite plentiful for Thanksgiving. Since then they have decreased greatly and will soon be a thing of the past. Violets were held at $1 per hundred early Thursday, but sold slow, until the price went down to 75 cents. Bulbous stock is coming in better. The market has plenty of lily of the valley, Paper Whites, Romans and callas. All houses are well stocked with all kinds of greens.

Various Notes.

Mrs. A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., spent a day in the city the past week.

J. J. Karins, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Thomas Longworth, a landscape gardener in the employ of Julius Pitzmann, dropped dead while at work for the Park View Real Estate Co. the past week. Mr. Longworth was well known among the trade. He was 48 years of age and leaves a wife and daughter.

A runaway which might have seriously injured Miss Schnell and Miss Tillie Meinhardt, two of our lady florists, was prevented by Charlie Schoenle, who sprang at the horse's head when he was at full speed. It happened in front of C. A. Kuehn's and the crowd congratulated Mr. Schoenle for his bravery.

Charles Richards, well known to the trade, having been employed at one of the wholesale houses, was seriously hurt last week in a new building at Sixth and Washington avenue.

Wm. Lingenbrink, formerly in business here, has returned and will open an automobile shop in the west end.

Fred Meinhardt, who was superintendent of the flower show, reports that the executive board held a meeting the past week and that the guarantors will be returned forty per cent.

The Florists' Club meeting will take place next Thursday afternoon in the new meeting hall. President Ammann expects a large attendance. All guarantors are requested to be present to hear the report of the executive board of the flower show. This is also an excellent opportunity for the local growers to see the retailers for their holiday wants.

Fred C. Weber reports very good business for Thanksgiving. His store and show house were well filled with fine palms and ferns, the rear show house with blooming plants, which sold well.

George Waldbart had a great display of choice cut stock for Thanksgiving. The place was tastefully decorated with blooming plants and did a rushing business.

Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood, was married last week to Miss Freda Bruno. Mr. Gross is a member of the club and a large consignor of carnations and violets to this market. Congratulations are in order.

Mr. Steineke, of Old Orchard, Mo., died on Sunday. He was the father of R. Steineke, the well known grower of that place, who has many friends in the trade who sympathize with him.

Our wholesalers, Kuehn, Ellis, Angermueller and Berning, all report a big trade, both local and shipping for Thanksgiving. Stock was of the best but prices not as high as in former years, owing to stock being very plentiful.

The florist bowlers again met defeat on Thanksgiving night, at the hands of the Enterprise team, losing two out of three games, by the following scores: R. Meinhardt was high, with 562, his high game being 233; Beyer second, 483; Beneke third, 477; Kuehn next, 473 and Ellison last, with 428. The boys claim too much turkey for the poor form displayed. J. PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market has experienced one of those sudden changes made possible by the centralization of the supply. The advance in prices of choice flowers just previous to Thanksgiving was remarkable. This advance has been sustained. Values of Beauties, Liberties and several other roses are double those of ten days ago. Carnations, particularly Enchantress, are also worth twice as much as on November 25. The changes in other items on the list are less marked but the whole tone of the market is much better, and the returns will average nearer to listed quotations than at any time during the fall. Thanksgiving business was very satisfactory. Chrysanthemums were used in large numbers and have practically disappeared. It will be possible to secure some of these flowers throughout December, and in the early days of January, but their number is so limited that no wholesaler cares to guarantee delivery in quantity. Gardenias have shortened in supply and advanced in price. Valley and cattleyas in greater and lesser degrees are plentiful. Violets continue in active demand, with supply of the better grades short. Carnations are one of the best items on the list; the supply is about equal to that of two weeks ago, but the demand is so great that they seem very scarce. Romans and Paper Whites are plentiful and of good quality. Bouvardia is unusually plentiful and seems popular.

The first German in Baltimore, on Monday, called for a fair amount of choice roses, violets, orchids and lilies of the valley. Flowers were not permitted at the opening of the Fifty-ninth Congress in Washington on the same day and this market felt the effect.

Another New Rose.

Victor Roekens, of Glenside, has a new rose that appears to be meritorious. It is saffron-colored, about half way between the yellow of Perle and the deeper hue of Sunrise. Mr. Roekens says it came to him with a lot of Perles and he does not know whether it is a sport or a cross. It has a straight stem, differing from Perle in its freedom from furze and from a crook near the neck of the flower. The buds are large and well formed and the plant is said to be vigorous. Mr. Roekens has been told that another grower has practically the same thing.

From Buda-Pesth.

A local seedsman has received a letter from a correspondent in the capital of Austria-Hungary asking whether the bags used for holding American seeds are dipped in some preparation distasteful to mice and rats. He states that he has noticed that these animals have attacked bags containing European seed while passing by those in which the American product was packed. He therefore presumes they must be in some way medicated, and asks the prescription. The local seedsman was quite unable to furnish this, doubting that there is any such preventive used. Possibly some of the readers of the REVIEW can throw light on the subject.

Rome.

An American, who has spent some time in Italy, draws a picture of the florists' business in the Italian capital which may be of interest to some of the REVIEW readers. The flower shops in Rome are rather uninviting from an American standpoint. They are poorly furnished, with but little attempt at display. The floral center is on the steps of the principal church, where quite a large and attractive display is made. There are no Habermehls or Grahams in Rome; their places are taken by simple countrymen who bring their own products and some outside flowers to sell in the open air. The bunches are all loosely made up, with the addition, unfortunately, of stiff-looking bouquet green, which the buyers of taste usually demand pulled out. When flowers are scarce, carnations from the Riviera sell as high as 50 cents a dozen for the best, but ordinarily flowers are very cheap in Rome. When spring comes the salesmen repair to the fields, where they labor until the close of the season in the fall. Italians rarely use flowers except in churches; Americans and English buy them for beautifying their rooms.

Various Notes.

W. S. Maull has been appointed receiver for L. K. Peacock, Inc., of Ateo, N. J. L. K. Peacock is no longer connected with this company. Geo. McLean, of Youngstown, O., is spending a few days in this city. Mr. McLean has accepted the position of manager of a leading florist store in his city.

"We will have the goods when the orders come." That is the way Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., puts it when speaking of Christmas stock. They have large shipments on several steamers due this week.

"The President summons Reid to the White House." This heading in a local daily led to the belief that Theo. Roosevelt wanted to consult Edward Reid regarding American Beauties or carnations. It proved, however, to be a far less important person (floriculturally) who went to Washington to talk, I think, about football.

Theo. Edwards, of Bridgeton, N. J., is sending some valley to Wm. J. Baker that places him within the sacred portals of Class A., Section 1, so long occupied almost solely by A. J. Pennock.

Hilleborn, of Newtown, is sending quantities of stevia to E. Bernheimer.

William Berger had a good crop of poinsettias, a rarity for Thanksgiving.

M. Rice & Co. report the sale of their new adjustable novelty baskets to exceed their greatest expectations.

William J. Muth, manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., is distributing an exceptionally nice lot of that peerless carnation, Enchantress.

The lecture of Dr. Roberts being postponed, the Florists' Club members devoted themselves to electing a particularly strong lot of new actives and associates at the December meeting on Tuesday.

Bowling is active this week. Six teams of five men each, comprising both active and associate members, are rolling a series of games for the championship. The schedule ends December 20. Each team rolls three matches with every other team.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia, to Phil, in care of any of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be 46.—Can you give us any information as to care and time of forcing Erica herbacea?

Erica herbacea (or carnea) white and pink, can be had from any Holland nursery firm. If imported in the fall the plants should be potted and kept in a cool house, 40 to 45 degrees. After February 1 it can, if wanted, be moved into 55 to 60 degrees, which will bring it into bloom in two or three weeks. It is at its best for Easter kept at the original temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, which will bring it about right, and the color will be better. H. D. Darlington says he has found importing it in the spring and either planting out with azaleas or kept in pots, potted in leaf-mold or peat, to be a better plan. They set bud better and can be forced earlier, but even then he has not been able to get it for Christmas. PHIL.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society November 28 only about twenty members were present. Two honorary members and one active member were elected and ten proposals made for membership. This large number of nominations shows an increasing interest very encouraging to the society. No doubt the recent very successful flower show was a helpful factor in prompting quite a few of those whose names were proposed.

The principal business was the nomination of officers for the ensuing year.

WASHINGTON.

When Congress convened on Monday the rule against flowers in the two houses was enforced and the florists who had orders were required to deliver them to the homes of members. There were scores of such orders, but there will probably be less each year as knowledge of the rule spreads and it means at each session a loss of several thousands of dollars to the trade.

The Thanksgiving business was behind the last previous years. In all probability the weather was the greatest factor. Flowers of all kinds were very plentiful, especially mums, which were a drug on the market. Violets were scarce but equal to the demand.

ELMIRA, N. Y.

Trade took quite a jump during Thanksgiving week, the craft having their hands full trying to keep up with orders. Mums were in great demand and were cleaned up early on Wednesday. They realized good prices. Roses were equal to the demand, which was good, especially for Beauties and Richmonds. Beauties brought from $4 to $6 per dozen wholesale, Richmonds, $4 to $12 per hundred, and other roses $4 to $8.

Carnations were in great demand but scarce and brought from $2 to $4.50 per hundred. The crops were strangely slow in coming and were a good two weeks late for the occasion. There are some excellent crops in view, most of which will be in fine condition for the holidays. Violets were fine and in fair demand at $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Asparagus and smilax were plentiful and in good demand at ordinary prices.

Altogether trade compares favorably with last year and the florists seem to be in the mind to be thankful.

Officers for the ensuing year were nominated as follows: G. H. Hale, president; W. W. Kennedy, vice-president; H. S. Kettel, secretary; N. Buterbach, treasurer; G. B. Kuhn, financial secretary.

A lively discussion followed on Burbank and his novelties, and the society came to the conclusion that the different societies should club together and send delegates to California to find out the truth about Mr. Burbank's novelties.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

WATKINS & SIMPSON, London, have sent the American trade a surplus list of peas of their own growing.

M. B. FAXON, formerly of Boston and later employed at Newport, is now with the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.

SLUIS & GROOT, Enkhuizen, Holland, are sending the American trade a large sheet showing in colors their new Cinreria grandiflora maxima nana.

OF the twenty-two ex-presidents of American Seed Trade Association, eighteen are living. Those who have passed away are R. A. Robbins, C. H. B. Breck, G. S. Haskell and T. W. Wood.

THE Union Trust Co., Indianapolis, receiver for J. A. Everitt, has sold to George H. Swain the branch store known as the Vale Seed Co. Mr. Swain will continue the business under the original name.

THE GRASS SEED MARKET.

Henry Nungesser & Co. have issued their annual blue list, containing the following on crops and prices:

The crop of orchard grass was far below an average one, and qualities very disappointing, seed being light and chaffy. Thus, in recleaning the seed, there was considerable loss, which makes the prices of the better qualities rather high.

The crop of Kentucky blue grass was very small. However, considerable seed was carried over from last season, and prices are still not high.

Reports from the clover-producing districts all over the world state there is a short crop. Of course, there is a great deal of speculation in this seed, and for this reason the prices will be governed somewhat by speculation. As it looks to us, we do not expect to see any material surprises in the market, and think about 13 to 13½ cents per pound will rule for first-class seeds.

A very short crop of crimson clover was harvested. Stocks are much reduced and prices are very firm and high.

The reports from the alfalfa districts are very irregular. America, Italy and Austria have very little seed. However, France, in some sections, has a good crop, but on account of unfavorable weather during harvesting qualities are not up to the standard, especially as to color. We may also state that Germany does not produce any alfalfa seed whatever. We will state that at least ninety-five per cent of all the alfalfa harvested contains more or less dodder, and in offering alfalfa it is the custom the world over, when not especially stated, that alfalfa is not cleaned of dodder. We are buying some under the guarantee "free of dodder," and some lots we buy in the natural state, which we clean ourselves. However, it must be distinctly understood (as is the custom with the most prominent control stations in Europe) that a guarantee under "dodder free" does not mean "absolutely free of dodder." An occasional grain of dodder will always be found in alfalfa, as so far it has been impossible to have it absolutely free from dodder. A good business has already been done in alfalfa, and although the market is at present somewhat easy for medium and low qualities, the fine qualities are held very firm and are getting very scarce.

FREE SEEDS.

A Washington dispatch on December 3 stated that "thirty of the leading seed dealers of the country have sent President Roosevelt a petition protesting against the free distribution of seeds by members of congress, and urging him to include in his message a paragraph disapproving the present practice and recommending that only the intent of the original act authorizing seed distribution be the future policy. The intent, the petition says, was that the seeds should be obtained from remote corners

NEW SWEET PEAS

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEARS' NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

of the earth unknown to the people of this country, for the purpose of increasing the wealth of the nation. The petitioners allege that the present practice is a 'grievous restraint of trade' and that the United States should abolish the practice as unfair, as class legislation antagonistic to a branch of commerce, and unbecoming a great government."

The President did not mention the seed distribution in his message.

PANDANUS SEED.

In the matter of a protest by F. B. Vandegrift & Co. against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs at New York, the following statement is issued:

"The subject of the board's decision was pandanus seed, classified under the provision in paragraph 254, tariff act of 1897, for seeds of all kinds not specially provided for, and claimed by the importers to be free of duty under paragraph 622 as palm nuts. Protest overruled, the board finding that the pandanus is not strictly or scientifically a palm, and there being no evidence showing pandanus seed to be commercially known as palm nuts."

ADULTERATED ALFALFA.

In view of the very great howl which has gone up at the action of the Department of Agriculture in publishing the names of seedsmen who sold it adulterated alfalfa, a seedsman calls attention to the address of Prof. J. W. T. Duvel, of the department, before the American Seed Trade Association at Alexandria Bay last June. Prof. Duvel called attention to the fact that 100,000 pounds of trefoil at less than 5 cents a pound was imported in March and April of this year for use as adulterant; he quoted the law which made the recent publication mandatory and said:

"The department takes this opportunity to call attention again to its offer to test and report upon samples sent for that purpose. What you want to know particularly, as I understand it, is whether or not your samples are adulterated. Our experts can tell it at a mere glance, almost, whether a sample is adulterated and in five minutes can tell approximately the amount of the adulterant and the general value of the sample. So that we can test the seed and send you a telegram which you will receive the same day we get the sample. The conditions of the trade demand that the thing be done with the utmost dispatch, for as soon as you receive the seed you want to send it out on orders."

GOOD CACTUS DAHLIAS.

In view of the increased interest in the cactus dahlia, the following notes, made by a committee of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, will be of interest. The members each selected a list of the best varieties from the large number under examination and these varieties appeared on each list:

Amos Perry—The rich, scarlet flowers are borne on rigid stems well above the foliage. Height four and one-half feet.

Cannell's Gem—In this variety the comparative thinness of the leafage is a good point, for it allows the bright, scarlet flowers to be seen to advantage; it is very floriferous in habit. Height three and one-half feet.

F. A. Wellesley—An excellent type of the exhibition cactus dahlia. The florets are narrow, pointed, crimson-scarlet, with cerise shading. Height three and one-half feet.

King of Siam—A showy variety, the purple-crimson, well-formed flowers appearing to considerable advantage above the foliage. Height three and one-half feet.

Mary—A flower of moderate proportions of the Arachne type, i. e., scarlet and white. The foliage is exceptionally sparse, with the result that an excellent effect is secured. The blossoms are produced on short, stiff stems, and are furnished with buds on each side, which make it valuable as a cut flower. Height three and three-fourths feet.

Mrs. J. S. Brunton—A rich yellow self. A good type of the exhibition dahlia, and probably the deepest yellow-colored dahlia in the trial. Height three and one-half feet.

Mrs. John Barker—One of the largest-flowered varieties in the collection. Color rosy-salmon. Height three and one-half feet.

Peace—A self, cream-colored flower, moderate in size, well-formed, erect and produced with great freedom on rigid stems. Height three feet.

Spotless Queen—A pure white flower of medium size, very freely produced. An excellent kind either as a garden plant or for producing cut flowers. Height two and one-half feet.

Standard Bearer—A showy variety of rich scarlet, the moderate-sized flowers being produced with much freedom. The habit is bushy and compact. Height three feet.

ORANGE, N. J.

The annual election of officers of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held December 1, resulted as follows: President, D. Kindsgrab; vice-president, Arthur T. Capaarn, both re-elected unanimously; secretary, Joseph B. Davis; treasurer, William Read; committee of arbitration, Peter Duff, William Phillips, Jos. A. Manda, Geo. Von Qualen, John Hayes. A written vote of thanks was awarded to the retiring treasurer, Malcolm MacRorie, for nearly ten years' service and also to the retiring secretary, William Bennett.

The result of the competitive exhibitions for the society's silver cups for the last eleven months was announced. Orchids special, first, Arthur Bodewell, gardener for William Barr, of Llewellyn Park; second, Edward Thomas, gardener for Henry Graves, of Orange. General floral display, first, Peter Duff, gardener for John Crosby Brown; second D. Kindsgrab, gardener for William Runkle. For fruits and vegetables, John Gervin, gardener for Douglas Robinson.

Three new members were elected, Col. H. A. Potter, George Simpson and Frank Drew. Three nominations were made, John Le Count, Herbert Williams and Henry Meyerholtz, all of Maplewood.

Jos. A. Manda has secured the houses of the Llewellyn Nursery Co. (Japanese), to take possession after Easter.

THE NEW MISS KATE

ORIGINATED BY JOHN MONSON, OF MINNEAPOLIS

THIS HAS BEEN

The Leading Pink Force

IN THE MINNEAPOLIS AND ST. PAUL
MARKETS FOR THE PAST TWO YEARS

WE SHALL disseminate this Grand New Pink Rose on March 1, 1906, and will be very pleased to disseminate of its habits and method of growth to all in the trade.

The rose is a light pink, holding its color and petals well after being cut. The rose is absolutely free from mildew, and has in its five years' growth never been affected by black spot. It is a bloomer all the season, producing strong bottom shoots.

Last season---1904 and 1905---the plants averaged over 47 blooms each, bringing over $1.00 per plant to its originator, who sold the blooms at wholesale to the leading retail florists of the northwest. Mr. J. H. Olson, St. Paul, who stated: "We cannot sell a Bridesmaid when we have Miss Kate Moulton."

We respectfully refer inquiries to any of the leading growers or retailers of Minneapolis. Write for prices and full information to us, or Mr. John Monson, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Market.

The volume of business done Thanksgiving came up to previous years, although it appears that prices ruled somewhat high on some lines, especially carnations. More could have been sold had quotations been a little more attractive for the buyers early in the week. It seems to be a mistake to boost prices on cut flowers for this holiday. Some stock was held back, especially carnations, causing an over-supply on the last days and there was a sharp drop in prices. This stock could have been worked off at a much better average price had it been shipped in regularly prior to Thanksgiving. The demand for chrysanthemums was brisk and first class blooms brought a good figure but there were many small and inferior flowers on the market. Violets sold well; quality has been good. Several large decorations for Thanksgiving cleaned up considerable green stock.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held the regular meeting Tuesday, December 5, and final matters pertaining to the recent flower show were taken up.

Some holly has made its appearance in this market but indications are that there will not be an over-supply this year. Reports are that southern holly is of inferior quality. Bouquet green is coming in very slowly. This article will be scarce for the holidays. INCOG.

NEW ORLEANS.

After the rush of November 1 and the excitement of our flower show, everything is again very quiet, people seeming to pay no attention to flowers and plants. Even Thanksgiving did not revive the trade very much. Roses and chrysanthemums are plentiful in every garden around the city. Foliage plants sell very well at the markets. A few auction sales made by the Metairie Nurseries, H. Papworth, manager; P. M. Chopin and James Newsham, seem to have brought good results, although good plants sometimes did not bring full value. It may be a good way to get rid of some surplus stock, but it does not show the exact state of the market. The weather is extra warm for the season. Our spring stock, geraniums, heliotropes, fuchsias, etc., is pushing ahead and will be in good condition even as soon as Christmas.

M. M. L.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business conditions certainly warranted a day of gratitude this year more than ever before, so much so that it was difficult to take time for a holiday and especially so in the florists' line, as the volume of business done for Thanksgiving eclipsed all former years. That there was more of a demand for flowers on that day than ever before is the report of all the dealers. The demand exceeded the supply, especially in chrysanthemums and carnations, and the Thanksgiving rush demonstrated the fact that carnations are unusually scarce in this market, though the average quality of the blooms has never been better at this season. It takes some season of extra demand to determine the exact situation as to crop and the growers are quick to take advantage of any shortage, and, therefore, the prices advanced. It is said that one of the largest shops turned away city trade at higher prices in order not to disappoint mail order customers who were depending upon them.

American Beauties were in great demand, especially the long stems, and brought good prices. Some selects brought $8 per dozen and by noon on Thanksgiving there were none left in town and there is now a good demand for them, and they are not plentiful. The chrysanthemum season is about over and it is almost impossible to get any selects. Emil Glauber, of the Montclair Greenhouses, perhaps had the best cut in the city, cutting over 4,000 last week.

Violets are still scarce and not very good and the retailers have had to do some scurrying to get them at $1 per hundred. Single violets are popular. Brides and Maids are in good shape and bring fairly good prices. Liberty and Richmond are also very good. Some selects coming in brought 10 cents and are much sought after.

Various Notes.

Several events took place in the social world the past two weeks which called for the services of the decorators. The largest reception was that of the coming out of Miss Shudy. The decorations were very fine and tasty, in the usual style of Philip Scott, of the Scott Floral Co.

But the leading social event of the past week was the charity ball at the Brown Palace hotel. No expense was spared to make it a success in every way.

PACIFIC COAST.

FILLING FERN DISHES.

The making of fern dishes for the holiday trade should not be neglected at this time, as I have found that these for the past few seasons have been among our best selling articles. It is not necessary to have them growing in the pans over a couple of weeks before the assortment is ready for sale, unless lycopodium is used with the ferns, in which case it should be given several weeks longer to get it well started. This also requires some extra heat, and in California, unless the weather is very severe, it is unnecessary to place fern dishes of any kind in a temperature higher than that given to cold houses.

There is considerable disadvantage in using delicate plants in fern dishes for ordinary trade. They live such a short time after the purchaser buys them, and the store man has so much trouble to keep them looking marketable in his brief time of handling, that it is more satisfactory all around to use such plants as are known to be fairly hardy. Pans from seven to nine inches in diameter are the best size to fill. Anything larger or smaller than these can be used for special occasions, but as a usual thing they do not sell quickly. A 7-inch pan will easily hold half a dozen plants from 3-inch pots. An 8-inch pan will accommodate ten plants and a 9-inch pot will hold from a dozen to eighteen plants.

For the center plant use a kentia, areca or a small corypha from a 3-inch pot. These are all fairly hardy with us and make a good showing. There are many ferns that can be used around the center plant. Adiantum I do not consider a good plant for this purpose. It can be grown to much better advantage when alone. Pteris adiantoides, P. cretica, P. albo-lineata, P. tremula and P. Wimsetti are all excellent in this line and in fact most of them make a much better showing in proportion when they are small, than when they have grown larger.

It is not a good plan to use coleus, primulas, dracaenas, begonias or anything of a soft nature in combination with our hardy ferns, although it is often done, for the reason that the leaves and flowers soon drop off, the plants begin to look shabby and then interest wanes in the rest of the outfit.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, Piersoni or some of the newer varieties make very effective center plants and are largely used for that purpose. Asparagus plumosus nanus can be used to advantage. Small plants of Cyrtomium falcatum and Asplenium bulbiferum I have found to be among our most satisfactory ferns and seem to be fairly long-lived when taken away from the greenhouse.

There is a good profit to be made in this end of the business, and it is surprising what an amount of odds and ends of stock of such varieties we often have on hand. If a little taste is used

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Thanksgiving is over and there is some diversity of opinion among the dealers as to whether the trade was equal to expectations. The demand was principally for yellow mums and red carnations, although roses were cleaned up. There was plenty of all kinds of stock, with the possible exception of fancy Beauties and Maids. The weather has been very favorable during the past week. Violets were in plentiful supply and carnations were offered in sufficient quantities to fill all requirements. Red berries were everywhere, and with some florists represented a goodly portion of the day's sales.

Strange to say, the growers as a usual thing did not raise the prices to the retailers on this occasion, and as a result good profits were the rule, without the store men having to "einch" their customers.

Various Notes.

and the demand for general nursery stock for the coming season beating all previous records.

The infinitesimal size of the bunches of violets delivered to the stores during Thanksgiving week was freely commented on by the retailers. It might be a good plan to sell them by count instead of by the bunch, as at present, when green leaves form a large proportion of the package.

VICTORY

The best scarlet carnation—is a fancy in the fullest sense of the word

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We are now having a more regular and steady market, and everything is cleaning up from day to day. Many more carnations could have been handled at the Exchange during Thanksgiving week. Roses are not as plentiful as a week ago, and prices have advanced on the better grades. Violets are in good demand and cleaning up every day. Paper Whites have put in their appearance, as well as some fine mignonette, callas and stevia.

Business at Thanksgiving was a little ahead of last year and the large number of weddings caused a big demand for white roses and white chrysanthemums.

Various Notes.

Slight damages were done by fire to the greenhouses of ex-Postmaster General J. A. Gary at his country residence, Catonsville, at which M. Hennegan is head gardener.

A. A. Niessen, of the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, was in town the past week.

Stevenson Bros. exhibited a fine vase of the two new roses, Killarney and Richmond, at the last club meeting.

A. F.

CALUMET, MICH.—The Chicago mail order houses have so cut into the business of the merchants of the upper peninsula that even Lutey's Greenhouses advertise: "You can do better with us than by sending to Chicago or elsewhere for cut flowers and designs."

TRIED AND PROVEN--Rochester's New Carnation

"May Bennett"

REMARKABLE KEEPING QUALITIES

Color perfectly distinct, shading from medium to light pink. Long stems, strong and vigorous grower. As a producer equals William Scott. Growers wanting a good all-round Carnation for color, yield and growth, should not overlook "May Bennett."

Price, $10 per 100; $75 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

GENTLEMEN—We do not hesitate to recommend the new carnation "May Bennett," as we have had nearly the entire cut the past year. It has been a general favorite with our trade on account of its fragrance, keeping qualities and pleasing color. As a general utility carnation it has no equal. (Signed) J. B. KELLER SONS, Florists, Rochester, N. Y.

READY FOR DELIVERY JANUARY 1.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it. It will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Unrooted cuttings at same rates with 25 extra on each 100. Cash before delivery.

HENRY A. DREER, 714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia

MOBILE, ALA.

In spite of the summer weather we have been having, with plenty of good outdoor roses and other flowers at this late date, business has been brisk and healthy.

A trip through the Chatogue Greenhouses last week was more than a pleasure. The foreman, Mr. Locharley, certainly shows what stuff he is made of in the looks of his roses and mums. Several houses in Beauties, Kaiserin, Richmond, MacArthur, Maids, Gates and Perles, all of them in the pink of condition, and promising a fine holiday cut. The mums were like the proverbial policemen's feet, all very fine and large, the Eatons nearly too much so, although he had two and three stems to the plant.

An unalloyed pleasure was a visit last week by that genial and enterprising president and manager of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., of New Orleans, Harry Papworth. Mr. Papworth has been busy this summer erecting his large plant, but is now ready for the reaping, and we wish him a fine harvest.

November 29 saw the nuptial knot tied between Louis Ravier, member of the firm of C. Ravier & Sons, and Miss Edna Baumhauer, of this city. Good looks, winning ways, any amount of energy, with nothing but friends in and outside the florist craft of Mobile, are the qualities that won the prize. With all of Mobile wishing that young couple happiness, there can be nothing but happiness and prosperity in store for this French-German alliance. GULF CITY.

COIL BOILER.

I have two greenhouses running east and west. The south house is 10x70, four and one-half feet to the plates and eight feet to the ridge. The south wall contains twelve inches of glass. The second house is 23x70. In the northeast corner of this house a packing room 9x36 is taken out. The house is ten feet to the ridge. The west end of the two houses is protected by the boiler shed. The east gables are glass. I want to heat with a coil boiler of 2-inch pipe. How many feet of pipe will it take to maintain a temperature of 65 degrees when it is 12 to 15 degrees below zero outside? I should like to use 1½-inch pipe for the returns. What size of fire-box will be needed and how much below the returns should the boiler be set?

S. H. B.

A coil boiler to do the work required in your plant should have a capacity for about 1,000 feet of radiation. To provide heat for this the boiler should contain 200 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe if this is the size to be used. The loops should not be too long and should consist of two pipes connected by a return bend. Each pipe entering a manifold tee, or header, at the outside of the boiler as suggested in the cut shown in FLORISTS' REVIEW of December 31, 1903, pp. 269. The large house, 23x70, should have seventeen returns of 1½-inch pipe besides an adequate flow, or riser, which should be three inches in diameter. The smaller house, 10x70, can be heated with eight 1½-inch returns and a 2-inch riser.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The past week has been a very busy one for the florists of this city. There have been a large number of decorations and nearly all the dealers report an unusually heavy trade in cut flowers for this time of year. Thanksgiving day brought lots of business and cleaned up most of the stock. All kinds of cut flowers are scarce and bringing much higher prices than usual. It is the same old story about carnations; supply short and demand heavy. Any kind of a carnation sells for 4 cents wholesale, while Enchantress, which is the favorite carnation here, easily brings 6 cents, with not nearly enough to supply the demand. The Kansas-Missouri football game Thanksgiving day made a big demand for mums and practically all the good ones were sold out.

Various Notes.

W. J. Barnes put up the decorations for the Neale-Smith wedding last week. This is probably the largest decoration put up here this season and Mr. Barnes is to be congratulated on the able manner in which he handled it. The reception hall was decorated in American Beauties and Piersoni ferns, with a mantel decoration of red mums and ferns. The parlor, dining room and library were elaborately decorated with palms, ferns and mums. A particularly effective and artistic piece of work was the large staircase, which was decorated with Asparagus plumosus and white bells. Mr. Barnes used over seven loads of palms and ferns, besides the cut flowers. Probably one of the most attractive things about it to W. J. was the check he received, which we understand was large enough to pay several months' coal bills.

W. L. Rock's show window is always one of the sights on Walnut street and is particularly attractive this week.

Miss Jennie Murray reports an unusually heavy Thanksgiving business.

Theodore Kalma is sending in some fine valley.

James Hayes, of Topeka, Kan., was a recent visitor.

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers and do not worry about their breaking down."

NOT ONLY HOW LONG A BOILER LASTS BUT WHAT IT DOES WHILE IT LASTS—THAT'S BOILER PROOF! ALL BOILER ARGUMENTS GET RIGHT BACK TO THE COAL BIN—THE "EASY ON COAL" BECOMES THE KERNEL OF THE WHOLE PROPOSITION.

It is on the ground of coal economy that the HITTINGS has stood its 46 years of test. A test of long fire travel, extended fire surfaces, grate area and the proven advantages of the corrugated fire box. A boiler with an even thickness of castings, the quickest possible water circulation. Known for its coal economy and ease of operation. Send for catalog H.

A 46 YEARS' TEST

NOT ONLY HOW LONG A BOILER LASTS BUT WHAT IT DOES WHILE IT LASTS—THAT'S BOILER PROOF! ALL BOILER ARGUMENTS GET RIGHT BACK TO THE COAL BIN—THE "EASY ON COAL" BECOMES THE KERNEL OF THE WHOLE PROPOSITION.

It is on the ground of coal economy that the HITCHINGS has stood its 46 years of test. A test of long fire travel, extended fire surfaces, grate area and the proven advantages of the corrugated fire box. A boiler with an even thickness of castings, the quickest possible water circulation. Known for its coal economy and ease of operation. Send for catalog H.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

Christmas Greetings

AND HERE'S

A QUESTION FOR YOU

If YOU want a greenhouse for profit it does not mean you want the cheapest, but the least expensive in the end.

If YOU want a greenhouse built to meet certain conditions and requirements you must go to people who know how to meet these conditions and requirements.

If YOU want a greenhouse that will "stand up" to specifications, it must be laid out along lines that are known to be successful, and must be built of materials that have been stamped with the approval of severe tests and long usage.

Each greenhouse designed and erected by The B.-H.-P. Co. is individual in itself.

Give us your general scheme of what you desire and our experts stand ready to work up plans for you without cost.

These plans and specifications are based on 50 years of greenhouse building.

We have proven that only the best houses grow the best plants.

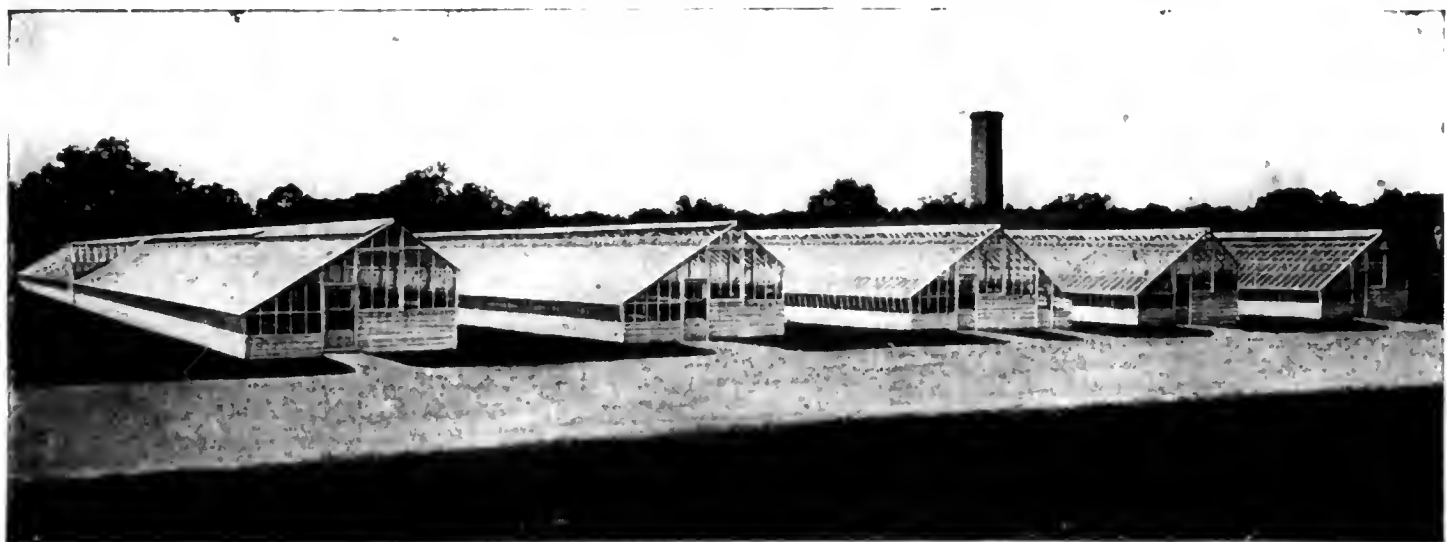

Proof of this proof shown in the collection of cuts L-G we are glad to send you

"A Merry Christmas" at 6 o'clock in the morning.

1887-1905

and it looks as though he was a pretty tough old bird and would easily crow for 18 more years. But he isn't the only hustler that is up on the perch at 6 o'clock in the morning.

There are others By-the-bye, do you know there are no better Roses, Carnations, Violets, Sweet Peas and, in fact, any flower you may mention coming to the New York market, than you can find right here at 106 W. 28th St. I tell you the stock for Christmas will be grand and I will have plenty of it. No worry here about short supply nor pickled stock. Come and see for yourself and come early, you hear me, Early, and then it won't be too late. It is the early roosters that catch the worms, you know. You know me.
"Every morning at 6 o'clock." And here's a Merry Christmas to you.

FLORIST.....

CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

Plants Instead of Greens.

Every florist who sells at retail has a call at Christmas for plant arrangements of one kind or another and of varying degrees of elaborateness. The holly wreath was once the best selling item of the florist's Christmas stock; it is still popular with the people, but in most places holly has lost much of its value to the florist; it is now the chief Christmas specialty of the Greek on the curb, of the Italian who runs the peanut stand, and holly is handled in large quantities by the produce commission men, who supply it to every village grocer and butcher. Consequently many florists are finding holly less and less profitable, while those who are still able to get a fairly satisfactory price for it are, with few exceptions, selling smaller quantities each year because of outside competition. They are devoting their energies to plant arrangements, leaving the holly wreaths and the paper Christmas bells to other if less kindly hands.

The Kind That Sell.

Plant arrangements call for some sort of basket, hamper, pot cover or ribbon for each and the supply houses have not been slow to provide a wide assortment of these accessories. In the wealthier communities the leading retailers have, with their aid, and with the aid of the plantsmen's best products, builded some fearsome things; also others rich, rare and delicate, fit examples of the best work of the craft. The REVIEW has printed many pictures of the plant and cut flower arrangements, sent out by the bon-ton stores, but to show these New York "creations" to the average florist is frequently to fail to interest him; he does not have the stock for their construction, and if he had these large or expensive arrangements in his store he could not find anybody to buy them.

Even in Pittsburg, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago the largest stores find themselves in the main dependent upon the patronage of people who will not spend more than a moderate amount on a single purchase and their stocks are arranged accordingly. The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made last Christmas at one of the best stores in an inland city, a store which has the patronage of the wealthiest class. They show, not the display pieces, the things one admires but does not buy, but the things which were actually being sold.

Primulas Popularly Priced.

The most popular arrangement was the basket or hamper of primulas. These sold at from $3 to $5, according to size and the amount of material required, and it was no uncommon thing to sell several to a customer, to be delivered on Christmas morning to separate addresses. Probably the best liked was the long, narrow, zinc-lined raffia hamper containing eight to twelve primulas, with no ribbon or any other accessory. Another form was the low round basket with its zinc pan, containing primulas and asparagus, adiantum or occasionally low poinsettias. A very good seller was the small brass receptacle, some solely for hanging, others with legs, like the one illustrated. These contained only a single plant and could be retailed at a price which would lead to many sales and still leave a good profit. Every store should offer something of this kind; it takes only a moment to fill them as needed.

Poinsettias.

Of course the poinsettia is to Christmas what the lily is to Easter, but it is a somewhat more expensive plant than can be sold freely in the smaller stores. The bright red bracts of a good poinsettia to be sold in the pot should be as wide as the plant is high. They are not usually of these proportions, but the lower they are the better they lend themselves to making up in pans of various sizes. They need no embellishment other than a pot cover. Dark green is best, sometimes tied with holly red ribbon.

By far the larger number of poinsettias are used in planting baskets or hampers in combination with other material. Those which have lost a part of their foliage can be employed in this way with good effect, the other plants serving to cover their nakedness. A few Roman hyacinths serve to brighten by contrast the red of the bracts and a pandanus is a favorite center plant. With poinsettias, Farleyense and Romans almost any kind of a basket or zinc-lined hamper may be filled, allowing for a wide range of style and price. If ribbon is used it would better be heavy, not too wide and green to match the foliage of the poinsettia, especially if tied on the upper part of the arrangement.

Otaheite Oranges.

Otaheite oranges sell well at Christmas. They are frequently planted in hampers with other material, but last year thousands of well fruited plants were sold in good stores when shown Primroses in a Zinc-Lined Raffia Basket.

The

REVIEW has printed many pictures of the plant and cut flower arrangements, sent out by the bon-ton stores, but to show these New York "creations" to the average florist is frequently to fail to interest him; he does not have the stock for their construction, and if he had these large or expensive arrangements in his store he could not find anybody to buy them.

Even in Pittsburg, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago the largest stores find themselves in the main dependent upon the patronage of people who will not spend more than a moderate amount on a single purchase and their stocks are arranged accordingly. The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made last Christmas at one of the best stores in an inland city, a store which has the patronage of the wealthiest class. They show, not the display pieces, the things one admires but does not buy, but the things which were actually being sold.

Primulas Popularly Priced.

The most popular arrangement was the basket or hamper of primulas. These sold at from $3 to $5, according to size and the amount of material required, and it was no uncommon thing to sell several to a customer, to be delivered on Christmas morning to separate addresses. Probably the best liked was the long, narrow, zinc-lined raffia hamper containing eight to twelve primulas, with no ribbon or any other accessory. Another form was the low round basket with its zinc pan, containing primulas and asparagus, adiantum or occasionally low poinsettias. A very good seller was the small brass receptacle, some solely for hanging, others with legs, like the one illustrated. These contained only a single plant and could be retailed at a price which would lead to many sales and still leave a good profit. Every store should offer something of this kind; it takes only a moment to fill them as needed.

Poinsettias.

Of course the poinsettia is to Christmas what the lily is to Easter, but it is a somewhat more expensive plant than can be sold freely in the smaller stores. The bright red bracts of a good poinsettia to be sold in the pot should be as wide as the plant is high. They are not usually of these proportions, but the lower they are the better they lend themselves to making up in pans of various sizes. They need no embellishment other than a pot cover. Dark green is best, sometimes tied with holly red ribbon.

By far the larger number of poinsettias are used in planting baskets or hampers in combination with other material. Those which have lost a part of their foliage can be employed in this way with good effect, the other plants serving to cover their nakedness. A few Roman hyacinths serve to brighten by contrast the red of the bracts and a pandanus is a favorite center plant. With poinsettias, Farleyense and Romans almost any kind of a basket or zinc-lined hamper may be filled, allowing for a wide range of style and price. If ribbon is used it would better be heavy, not too wide and green to match the foliage of the poinsettia, especially if tied on the upper part of the arrangement.

Otaheite Oranges.

Otaheite oranges sell well at Christmas. They are frequently planted in hampers with other material, but last year thousands of well fruited plants were sold in good stores when shown without other accessory than a jardiniere. The brass pot cover goes splendidly with these, but it should be large enough to take in the pot, not merely to part conceal it, as in the illustration. A few years ago the tendency was to overdo the "embellishment" of plants. In some of the most pretentious stores, especially in New York, the plants would be so smothered in fold after fold of crepe paper, with yard after yard of ribbon, that the natural beauty of the plant was lost, or at least obscured, but the tendency has been the other way for the past year or so. If there are any plants which will stand for heavy, high wrappings it is surely the Otaheite orange and the Ghent azalea, on account of the usually bare base.

Berried Plants.

Berried plants are popular at Christmas. Best of all is the English holly (the majority of which come by way of Belgium) and which is seen in particularly fine shape this year, although it frequently loses both berries and leaves. These are being imported in annually increasing numbers, but they are for only the better class of stores, retailing at from $10 to $25 each. At the other end of the line are Christmas peppers and Jerusalem cherries. Between, and most useful to the average man with a first-class trade, are Ardisia crenulata and Aucuba Japonica. The former is preferred by many because of its habit; the aucuba usually has a bare base, like the specimen illustrated. These are frequently sent out with ribbon tied in the plants.

Other Plants.

Palms and ferns, while hardly deserving place as Christmas plants, are nevertheless good sellers at Christmas for gift purposes, and this includes rubbers, pandanus, etc., and applies with particular force to the new forms of the nephrolepis, like elegantissima. The araucaria is always a good seller at Christmas, nearly always with the pot covered with Porto Rican matting or crepe paper and with a red ribbon tied above the lower whorl of leaves.

The azalea is profitable at Christmas, as at Easter, but the red varieties can not be had in good flower by that date and the call at the holiday season is first for bright colors.

The cyclamen has its greatest run at Christmas. It is not a plant which is easily used in making up baskets, etc. A well grown plant should be a globe of rich, dark foliage coming down over the top of the pot, the flowers carried well above the green. The best embellishment for a cyclamen is a close-fitting pot cover of not too bright red.

Omission has thus far been made of what many would place first on the list of Christmas plants, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. In nearly all first-class stores this is one of the very best sellers and it might easily be in all, but it is one of the hardest plants to deliver in good shape, especially at this busy season, when more or less rough handling is inevitable and it is the cause of frequent complaint, for not all Lorraines hold their flowers in living rooms so well as in the instances we hear about. In one store the complaints have been so numerous that the clerks have instructions to tell the customers that, while sometimes the plants last first rate, usually their life is not much greater than the life of cut flowers. Many others refrain from pushing Lorraine for the same reason and it is well to always disclaim in advance all responsibility for its lasting qualities; with one customer it may endure for weeks and with another the flowers may fall in a day or two.

BOX SALES.

In many cities leading retailers have found that sales of special boxes of cut flowers on certain days of each week are an excellent means of advertising and increasing business. John G. Heintz & Son, Terre Haute, Ind., have just sent out a neatly printed card which reads: "Commencing this week we are putting into effect a novel plan we believe will prove very popular, viz: To prepare every Saturday and Sunday, for prompt delivery, boxes of fresh cut flowers, ranging in price from 50 cents to $3. In each case they will contain generous value for the price, and will afford patrons an inexpensive means of providing flowers for the table or as gifts to friends, without any trouble of personal selection. It is only necessary that you telephone us and advise the price you wish to pay. Our reputation for handling only the best insures you entire satisfaction."

A GOOD SIDE LINE.

A number of leading retail florists are finding decorative pottery a very profitable side line. A stock of odd and attractive pieces of art pottery occupies little room, makes an attractive feature of a store, is useful in the display of goods and a source of much assistance in any outside work. A florist who uses in a decoration a vase of attractive material, shape, color or workmanship, frequently finds that his patron wishes to have the vase remain after his guests have admired it. He likes to have it on hand when they come again and is not inclined to question the florist's price. Counter sales also afford a very good margin of profit.

A number of retailers have bought stocks of such goods and the demand has been so apparent that the manufacturers and jobbers of them are now looking for the trade. Among the leading dealers in such lines are Burley & Tyrrell and Pitkin & Brooks, Chicago, and handsome lines are manufactured by the Rookwood Pottery Co., Cincinnati, and the Zanesville Pottery Co., Zanesville, O.

DISEASED GERANIUMS.

I send some geranium leaves, asking to know what is the matter with them and what to do for them. Notice the under side of the leaves and tell me if you can what the trouble is and how to treat it. I lost several hundred plants last winter and it is beginning earlier this winter.

W. N. T.

The geranium leaves have blotches of yellow and some almost black, which, of course, greatly impairs the health of the plant. We have never been troubled with anything like it. It is doubtless a fungus and caused by too close and damp an atmosphere. We do not believe the geranium is subject to any disease if proper conditions are observed, which during winter are as follows: A night temperature of 45 degrees, room for circulation of air among the plants, ventilation on all possible occasions and, as the plants are almost resting, keep them on the dry side. In other words, let the soil in the pots be decidedly dry before you give them water.

For immediate relief I would recommend mixing common sulphur with linseed oil until it is the consistency of thick paste and with an old paint brush smear on for a few inches about every ten feet on your heating pipes. If steam pipes, use less of the sulphur; if hot water you can use more without harm.

one cause or other you will find unsuccessful, and here is where the dahlia will be found useful.

Propagating.

This is a time of the year that not one foot of your propagating bench should be vacant. If you are negligent about this now you will be over-crowded later. Mr. Baur's very practical remarks on the propagating house in last week's REVIEW should be read by all. Simple as is propagating most things to old hands, it is often mystifying to beginners. From the middle of November, or even the first of November, till the end of May, there should be constant demand on your propagating benches, whether they be ideally formed or simply three or four inches of sand or sifted ashes spread on a side bench beneath which are a few heating pipes. Although wood is the poorest conductor of heat, and the small amount that will pass through a 1-inch board is scarcely perceptible, yet we have found in practice a decided advantage over the bench that has no pipes beneath.

Carnations and Roses.

First there are the carnation cuttings which can be started as early as the middle of October and all rooted before New Year's. This is an advantage, for it is generally believed that cuttings taken from the plants before they have been subjected to fire heat or any forcing, then giving them a cool house for

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Forcing Dahlias.

If you are thinking of forcing any dahlias it will be time to make preparations. In a night temperature of 56 to 60 degrees, and starting them the middle of January, I found they were not flowering freely until the end of April, so to have them at Easter they should be in the ground by January 1. I think the other conditions we provided were about right: Six inches of soil on the floor of a light house. They may do very well on a raised bench, but the height they grow and coolness of the bed for their roots makes the low beds preferable. The single and pompons are the best for forcing. As with almost all our crops, don't look for a variety. Find out from a reliable source half a dozen of the best forcing varieties and grow lots of them. They like plenty of water at the roots and a daily syringing with good force for their foliage, to keep away red spider.

Now, don't think these dahlias are greatly profitable, although we found our customers bought them freely. There are frequently beds or benches that from two months, comes nearer to their natural habit than propagating later and giving them no rest.

As soon as your carnations are propagated it is time to begin with the tea roses. Millions of these are still propagated and grown on their own roots in spite of the newer and perhaps better method of grafting. The two months following New Year's is a most favorable time for the rose cuttings, the firing that is necessary giving you a cool atmosphere, with no trouble to keep the sand at 65 degrees.

Chrysanthemums.

By the time the roses are out of the sand you will want to begin propagating the fascinating mums. You will remember the pleasure of seeing the first blossoms open, and perhaps the "busters" you grew, and you will possibly remember the many calls you had for good commercial flowers of the useful kind, and could not fill the orders, and you stamped and raged a little to see benches filled with kinds the public did not want. I have been in a position of late to observe so vividly what has sold and what our customers wanted that it has made a marked impression, and I believe many a florist has been taught a practical as well as costly lesson.

In warning the average florist, whether he grows them for his own counter or to ship to his commission house, I by no means wish to disparage the introduction or trial of the monster curiosities or fantastic shapes which have come in the evolution of the chrysanthemum, and one who can afford to grow a few of each of the best of the introductions of the past three years must be a poor florist and no lover of flowers if he does not get his money's worth in pure admiration of the wonderful flowers. To see Mrs. D. V. West expand to its full beauty is almost as exciting as asking the nurse if it's a boy or girl and perhaps, after several annual occurrences, more so. We could not hold the annual public exhibitions without the novelties and wonders and that would be a serious loss, not only commercially but to horticulture at large. So these remarks are strictly with a view to bread and butter.

The chrysanthemum has sold as well this season as any year within the past ten years, perhaps at a slightly lower average price, but that condition can be easily met and when you begin to propagate in March put in hundreds of Robert Halliday, Bonnaffon yellow and white, Josephine, Kalb, Polly Rose, Ivory, Alice Byron, Adelia, Convention Hall, Maud Dean, White Maud Dean and Miss Helen Frick. I forgot Dr. Enguehard, just a little ahead of Maud Dean, for it will produce at least three or four good flowers to a plant.

There is such a constant demand for bunches or sprays of chrysanthemums for funerals that a large proportion of your flowers can with profit be white.

I have wandered somewhat from the propagating bench, but it is all in the business, and besides the important plants mentioned that occupy your cutting bed there is, if you grow bedding plants, no end of soft-wooded plants that will have to be rapidly increased. So don't waste any time or space now or you will regret it later.

Preparing for the Rush.

Christmas, with all its joys and hard work for the florist, is right at hand. It falls on Monday, which brings the florists' really busy day on a Sunday. That may be awkward, but we usually survive those little things, like the observant man who said he had noticed that if he was alive on May 1 of any year he always lived through the balance of the year.

I have on several occasions mentioned the many things a florist should do to put his place in perfect preparedness. The store man should have all material at hand and in a convenient place. There is a prodigious lot of boxes used nowadays, and these should not only be made up but could be lined with silk and tissue paper, for it will save much time when you are rushed with customers and orders. All plants in the store should be trimmed with ribbon and pots covered with tissue paper, not only that they will be ready to deliver, but, more important, that they will be attractive, which undoubtedly helps to sell them. The florist whose salesroom is attached or adjacent to his houses cannot fix up all his plants, but he can a sufficient number to show the public.

Wash the Pots.

The green and white tissue which now envelopes the pot of every plant sold, covers a lot of sins and among them often a green, greasy pot. This should never be. There is nothing more offensive or unsightly than a dirty pot, especially if it is surmounted by a pretty flowering plant. The greenhouse man knows pretty closely the plants that will go at Christmas and it is little labor to well wash their pots. It won't be labor in vain if some are unsold.

Keep a Good Window.

There may be some beginners in the stores who do not fully realize the great value of a handsome display in the window. You seek for a location in a much frequented street and pay a big rent for it. Then follow this up with an attractive window. We have a store in our town where the window is never two days alike. It must be costly, but it pays even better than advertising in the daily papers, as results have shown. Another young man who has got along well and built up a splendid business had little to start with and naturally could only carry a moderate stock of flowers. Yet all those flowers went into the show window and the ice box was empty. They were before the eyes of the public, who were sure he had them. If out of sight, the pedestrians on the street could only suppose he had what they wanted. By this time this young man has an attractive window, as well as a cellar full of flowers. This is such a day of display that we must put on a good front. In the words of my friend, the successful M. D., "Wash all you got and hang out all your wash."

Holiday Deliveries.

holiday sales are presents, the delivery department of our business has become a large, important and costly part of it and here is where system can with great benefit be carried out. Department stores have a force of men who do nothing else and know every street in the city, but with us, our holiday deliveries are increased ten fold over ordinary times. All deliveries for one day should be by themselves and the man who loads the wagons or automobile, whom we call the "router," if capable, is a valuable man and will save the driver vexation and great loss of time in finding that he has a poinsettia on the extreme west of the city and a plant of Harris' Buttercup primrose on the east end.

If you are a conscientious man you cannot help worrying at delayed deliveries and mistakes, but keep as cool as possible and do all that is possible previously to make things go smoothly and without mistakes. In ordinary times there is time and opportunity behind a florists' counter for a few pleasant remarks, or a little chat, according to your customer's disposition or affability, but on Christmas eve civil, courteous but brief replies are in order. Leave the gossip to the old man in front of the counter. To the clerks nothing but business, and unless your customer has a vacuum behind the eyes he or she will understand the hurry and bustle.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, has been out of print for nearly a year. The success which attended the first edition of this standard treatise on greenhouse management was so exceptional that a very large edition was quickly sold out and many orders have had to be refused. It will be good news to the large number who have been unable to secure the book, and to Mr. Scott's wide circle of personal friends, to know that he is well along in the work of revising the first edition and that a second edition, considerably enlarged and brought down to date, will be issued in 1906.

THE CANNA LILIES.

Flowering Under Glass.

We are so accustomed to see the canna used as a summer plant for bedding and massing, that we seem to forget that it is equally or even more useful as a winter-blooming plant. Owing to its semi-tropical habit, the majority of people imagine that it would naturally require a high temperature to perfect its flowers; such however, is not the case. Practical experience has proved that while a rather high temperature is best to start the canna roots, a moderate temperature is all that is necessary after the plant or clump is well established.

The best results with plants desired for winter blooming are secured in the following manner: Dig the field clumps during September, before frost, and pot them into pots or boxes in good, rich soil. Do not cut off any tops, but cut the old and unsightly bloom stalks off entirely. The clean, fresh bloom stalks in bud or first bloom should not be disturbed further than to detach the open flowers. Some of the flower foliage can also be cut off close to the stalk.

Now, assuming the work has been properly performed, you have a fine, well proportioned growing clump to begin with. After it is potted or boxed, it should receive a good soaking and be syringed several times daily for four or five days and slightly shaded, after which the clump can be placed in a sunny greenhouse. By this time it will be in full bloom and will keep on growing and blooming during the whole winter and spring.

I have practiced the above method for twelve years and have had clumps bloom from October to April under such conditions. They have bloomed for us in houses where the night temperature was no higher than the average carnation house. They will do equally as well with a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, only that they require more watering and syringing, and if the soil in which they are potted is too rich the growth is likely to be soft and spongy. For this reason it is best to bloom them in a cooler house, where the night temperature is from 50 to 55 degrees. Under such conditions the flowers are more firm and durable and the leaf growth not so rank.

The canna flower is improved to the same extent, if grown under glass as the rose, carnation or chrysanthemum, and with far less trouble or expense, and the wealth of bloom and richness of coloring of the different varieties and types are so beautiful as to beggar description.

Public Education.

We fuss and worry over a lot of chrysanthemums for months in order to get a few weeks of bloom. This is all well for the commercial grower, where the flowers pay for the time and expense, but from an educational standpoint, I fail to see where the people, or anyone, receives any benefit from the annual autumn show of chrysanthemums in our park conservatories. I merely ask the question: Is it necessary to give the public an exhibition of flowers they can see at every street corner and department store in our large cities? We might as well reason that bread alone is good and enough for all people to eat, because it is considered the staff of life. We all know people all like to have a variety of food.

If our public parks and conservatories are for the benefit of the people, why can they not have more variety? I know from personal experience that the majority of our people have no conception what our best bred American cannas look like.

We frequently have visitors from Philadelphia, New York and other leading cities, who see our cannas in the field during the blooming season, express their surprise and wonder at the great variety of colors, forms, and types of flowers and foliage. Their usual exclamation is, "Why, we never see such colors in the parks." However, the park managers are alive to the fact that cannas are the most effective plants to

So don't waste any time or space now or you will regret it later.

Preparing for the Rush.

Christmas, with all its joys and hard work for the florist, is right at hand. It falls on Monday, which brings the florists' really busy day on a Sunday. That may be awkward, but we usually survive those little things, like the observant man who said he had noticed that if he was alive on May 1 of any year he always lived through the balance of the year.

I have on several occasions mentioned the many things a florist should do to put his place in perfect preparedness. The store man should have all material at hand and in a convenient place. There is a prodigious lot of boxes used nowadays, and these should not only be made up but could be lined with silk and tissue paper, for it will save much time when you are rushed with customers and orders. All plants in the store should be trimmed with ribbon and pots covered with tissue paper, not only that they will be ready to deliver, but, more important, that they will be attractive, which undoubtedly helps to sell them. The florist whose salesroom is attached or adjacent to his houses cannot fix up all his plants, but he can a sufficient number to show the public.

Wash the Pots.

The green and white tissue which now envelopes the pot of every plant sold, covers a lot of sins and among them often a green, greasy pot. This should never be. There is nothing more offensive or unsightly than a dirty pot, especially if it is surmounted by a pretty flowering plant. The greenhouse man knows pretty closely the plants that will go at Christmas and it is little labor to well wash their pots. It won't be labor in vain if some are unsold.

Keep a Good Window.

There may be some beginners in the stores who do not fully realize the great value of a handsome display in the window. You seek for a location in a much frequented street and pay a big rent for it. Then follow this up with an attractive window. We have a store in our town where the window is never two days alike. It must be costly, but it pays even better than advertising in the daily papers, as results have shown. Another young man who has got along well and built up a splendid business had little to start with and naturally could only carry a moderate stock of flowers. Yet all those flowers went into the show window and the ice box was empty. They were before the eyes of the public, who were sure he had them. If out of sight, the pedestrians on the street could only suppose he had what they wanted. By this time this young man has an attractive window, as well as a cellar full of flowers. This is such a day of display that we must put on a good front. In the words of my friend, the successful M. D., "Wash all you got and hang out all your wash."

Holiday Deliveries.

holiday sales are presents, the delivery department of our business has become a large, important and costly part of it and here is where system can with great benefit be carried out. Department stores have a force of men who do nothing else and know every street in the city, but with us, our holiday deliveries are increased ten fold over ordinary times. All deliveries for one day should be by themselves and the man who loads the wagons or automobile, whom we call the "router," if capable, is a valuable man and will save the driver vexation and great loss of time in finding that he has a poinsettia on the extreme west of the city and a plant of Harris' Buttercup primrose on the east end.

If you are a conscientious man you cannot help worrying at delayed deliveries and mistakes, but keep as cool as possible and do all that is possible previously to make things go smoothly and without mistakes. In ordinary times there is time and opportunity behind a florists' counter for a few pleasant remarks, or a little chat, according to your customer's disposition or affability, but on Christmas eve civil, courteous but brief replies are in order. Leave the gossip to the old man in front of the counter. To the clerks nothing but business, and unless your customer has a vacuum behind the eyes he or she will understand the hurry and bustle.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE FLORISTS' MANUAL.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, has been out of print for nearly a year. The success which attended the first edition of this standard treatise on greenhouse management was so exceptional that a very large edition was quickly sold out and many orders have had to be refused. It will be good news to the large number who have been unable to secure the book, and to Mr. Scott's wide circle of personal friends, to know that he is well along in the work of revising the first edition and that a second edition, considerably enlarged and brought down to date, will be issued in 1906.

THE CANNA LILIES.

Flowering Under Glass.

We are so accustomed to see the canna used as a summer plant for bedding and massing, that we seem to forget that it is equally or even more useful as a winter-blooming plant. Owing to its semi-tropical habit, the majority of people imagine that it would naturally require a high temperature to perfect its flowers; such however, is not the case. Practical experience has proved that while a rather high temperature is best to start the canna roots, a moderate temperature is all that is necessary after the plant or clump is well established.

The best results with plants desired for winter blooming are secured in the following manner: Dig the field clumps during September, before frost, and pot them into pots or boxes in good, rich soil. Do not cut off any tops, but cut the old and unsightly bloom stalks off entirely. The clean, fresh bloom stalks in bud or first bloom should not be disturbed further than to detach the open flowers. Some of the flower foliage can also be cut off close to the stalk.

Now, assuming the work has been properly performed, you have a fine, well proportioned growing clump to begin with. After it is potted or boxed, it should receive a good soaking and be syringed several times daily for four or five days and slightly shaded, after which the clump can be placed in a sunny greenhouse. By this time it will be in full bloom and will keep on growing and blooming during the whole winter and spring.

I have practiced the above method for twelve years and have had clumps bloom from October to April under such conditions. They have bloomed for us in houses where the night temperature was no higher than the average carnation house. They will do equally as well with a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, only that they require more wintering and syringing, and if the soil in which they are potted is too rich the growth is likely to be soft and spongy. For this reason it is best to bloom them in a cooler house, where the night temperature is from 50 to 55 degrees. Under such conditions the flowers are more firm and durable and the leaf growth not so rank.

The canna flower is improved to the same extent, if grown under glass as the rose, carnation or chrysanthemum, and with far less trouble or expense, and the wealth of bloom and richness of coloring of the different varieties and types are so beautiful as to beggar description.

Public Education.

We fuss and worry over a lot of chry

santhemums for months in order to get a few weeks of bloom. This is all well for the commercial grower, where the flowers pay for the time and expense, but from an educational standpoint, I fail to see where the people, or anyone, receives any benefit from the annual autumn show of chrysanthemums in our park conservatories. I merely ask the question: Is it necessary to give the public an exhibition of flowers they can see at every street corner and department store in our large cities? We might as well reason that bread alone is good and enough for all people to eat, because it is considered the staff of life. We all know people all like to have a variety of food.

If our public parks and conservatories are for the benefit of the people, why can they not have more variety? I know from personal experience that the majority of our people have no conception what our best bred American cannas look like.

We frequently have visitors from Philadelphia, New York and other leading cities, who see our cannas in the field during the blooming season, express their surprise and wonder at the great variety of colors, forms, and types of flowers and foliage. Their usual exclamation is, "Why, we never see such colors in the parks." However, the park managers are alive to the fact that cannas are the most effective plants to use for summer bedding. The managers of the Chicago parks seem to be far more progressive in this respect than our eastern men.

On the whole the present and future for the canna is very encouraging. The family has made tremendous strides in the past few years, and is still improving and endearing itself in the hearts of the people. ANTOINE WINTZER.

A REMINISCENCE.

John Poehlmann was in a reminiscent mood the other day and spoke interestingly of the early days of the cut flower industry in Chicago. It was fifteen years ago that August and John joined hands with Adolph Poehlmann, who was already in the greenhouse business at Morton Grove. It was a typical place for those days, small, low, detached houses but at that time contained something like 25,000 square feet of glass, which was pretty fair for that time. Then as now John Poehlmann had charge of the selling end of the business. For the first three or four years he came to Chicago

Clark street store was there and it was in the basement at this address that Poehlmann Bros. first had a city store. At this time the stock was shipped in by train in the evening and Mr. Poehlmann took it to the store and sorted it for next day's business, then making daily rounds with a wagon. A little later a down town address was secured and the wagon dispensed with. By that time there were enough wholesale establishments so that the trade had become well accustomed to coming to the vicinity of Wabash and Randolph for its supplies and the Poehlmann establishment had grown until it was no longer possible to carry the product about the city. As years have passed the greenhouses have grown and with them the importance of the city salesroom.

WITH THE GROWERS.

Wictor Bros., Chicago.

Wictor Bros. have had exceptionally good results in the growing department this season. Their big range of glass at tions is grown here, it being the preference to grow a few sorts in quantity. The results this season have been above the average and the cuts have been obtainable when wanted.

Chrysanthemums are grown in quantity, but are all cut except a few Merry Christmas, which will hold on until close to the first of the year. A large business is now being done in chrysanthemum stock plants and preparations are being made for propagating extensively. The firm has a very large trade in rose plants and carnation and chrysanthemum cuttings.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Painting the Pipes.

I noticed a recent paragraph in the REVIEW where it is advised that radiating pipes in greenhouses be not painted. I say paint 'em. For why? Because it pays. When we first put in our present steam pipes, probably ten years ago, they were not painted. After about four years those that were not exposed to sun and air rusted badly, some having to be renewed. I came to the conclusion that it would pay to paint the pipes, and those that were sound are as good as ever, and I am convinced that if painted every second year they will last indefinitely. The painting does not interfere with the radiation. Apparently any pipes that are exposed for appearance sake can be painted with white paint, those under the benches red. Here is our formula: Take dry mineral red, which can be bought for about 2½ cents to 3 cents a pound. Fifty pounds will do a lot of work. Mix it with raw linseed oil and add a little turpentine to it. Have it about as thick as ordinary paint. Apply with an old brush in the summer time when emptying the benches. Brush and scrape off all rust first. There is nothing injurious to plants in this paint. Black asphaltum or anything of that nature should never be applied, but we paint all iron work and our boilers with it. Experience is what talks and we should all help each other when we can by exchanging experiences. F. J. FILLMORE.

This painting the pipes is a subject that I have watched closely for years, with the result that all pipes we handle are painted as fast as we can get at them, or before we put them in. Just recently we cleaned and painted a line of 1-inch pipe in a propagating house, which was put in just one year ago, and it was more than half corroded because we neglected to paint it, and the constant syringing caused it to rust badly. I believe such rusty pipes do not give off as much heat as clean painted ones, to say nothing about durability and appearance. We use lamp black and linseed oil, or Dixon's graphite thinned is good. We never had any damage to stock, even when painted while hot.

Another point that would be well to mention is the enormous loss to florists caused by poorly cared for boiler settings, cracked walls and loose castings and linings, thus allowing cold air to creep through to chill the boiler, reduce draft and lower the general efficiency often twenty-five to fifty per cent. Few realize the importance of this. A boiler setting when in use should be candled regularly; that is, gone over with a burning candle slowly, and wherever a crack three times a week, usually with a horse and wagon but sometimes, when cuts were light, bringing the product in a basket on his arm. He visited on each trip a dozen or fifteen of the leading flower stores, including those on the west side and on the south side as far as the Art Floral Co. place at Thirty-ninth street. It was a long day's journey and Mr. Poehlmann frequently tied the horse at some convenient place and made a few calls by street car, carrying his stock in a basket. This for the purpose of saving the horse. He always arranged to have some stock for the last customer, but frequently had to retrace his steps to sell out.

Not many of the old stores are in existence now, but Wittbold's North appears, the air suction will draw the flame in, showing necessity of patching. The best material is asbestos, either wet or dry, as it allows for some expansion and contraction and is easily applied. Fronts should be thoroughly examined, also the smoke connection. No air should have access to the boiler except through the draft holes regulated by the operator.

Rogers Park is always kept up in first-class shape, but it looks rather better this year than usual. This is especially true of the Beauty houses, which number nearly a score. It would be hard to improve on the length and stiffness of stem and the foliage speaks for perfect health. Liberty and Richmond are a feature of the establishment. At the city store N. J. Wictor says that there is little difference in the selling qualities of these roses, but at the greenhouses Henry Wictor thinks Richmond likely to have a better blooming record at the end of the season. The ground shoots are now beginning to appear in quantity and speak for some splendid flowers. The tea roses are also in good shape.

CHRISTMAS CENTERPIECES.

It is difficult to escape the scarlet, white and green for the winter holiday season, nor does one care to do so. These colors seem to suggest Christmas most happily, and in our canoe design we are using poinsettias, Paper White narcissi, and green. The arrangement is simple enough for an every day table, and also capable of elaboration. Fill the canoe with sphagnum and stem the flowers basket style or set in low dishes of water, held in place by sphagnum packed in snugly. If desired, the flowers can be used longer stemmed, or the canoe can be suspended from a chandelier over the center of the table, to within six inches of the cloth, and the flowers allowed to droop much more decidedly than is shown in the picture.

Paper Whites are especially pretty with medium-size poinsettias, and by the way, larger poinsettias than these should not be used in a low decoration, as they look too blunt when cut short. Cut the narcissi different lengths, from two or three inches to almost natural length stem. Let them "top" the group, as lighter colors usually should do. Cut the edge of the canoe with a few overhanging clusters of both kinds of flowers and an occasional spray of green. Do not mix the flowers or the coloring without plan. Mass each separately and blend easily in their lines, one into the other. After filling generously but not with a view to working off stock, draw a No. 12 scarlet ribbon through from one end to the other and attach two or three Christmas bells to either end as shown in the smaller illustration.

The larger study is a more delicate one, but equally suitable for a daylight dinner table. Arrange a broad band or sash of violets laid loosely but closely across the table diagonally between two corners. Enough to make the color effect solid is necessary in this scheme, and the broader the better. Select roses similar to the color of La Detroit or Chatenay and fill the loving cup as illustrated.

The second feature of this decoration is the garland of roses of the same variety as those in the cup—drawn through the handles of the loving cup, and spending itself at either end upon the violet sash. The roses are most easily placed one at a time and fastened in place with the finest wire at hand.

This design might be worked out with numerous other color combinations, but the more contrast between the color of the sash and the flowers in the cup, the more certainly will the arrangement become a distinct and attractive scheme.

IMPORTED INSECTS.

Enclosed are a few leaves of azaleas which I received from a certain firm in Holland October 26. Upon unpacking the plants they were almost without leaves and full of small, green, round bugs, scale and a small white fly. I dipped the plants in nicotine. It cleaned out everything but the white fly. These got on some of our fuchsias and pelargoniums. Could you advise me what to use to get rid of it. — A. W.

The azaleas in question must have been very much infested with insects, judging by the leaves that were enclosed with this query, and the dipping in nicotine solution was a good method of treatment, though I should think that a second dipping will be needed before the flower buds begin to swell, in order to make a clean job of such plants.

The white fly is hard to kill, but strong fumigating with nicotine may get the best of it, and if this should fail, the hydrocyanic acid fumigation is a last resort, and will certainly kill the insects. But in using this latter treatment it should always be remembered that hydrocyanic acid is one of the most deadly poisons and that a man seldom lives over a minute after taking a full breath of this gas, so one cannot be too careful in its use. W. H. TAPLIN.

much handling when several days old, besides losing its color quickly after opening. In fact, this is true of most of the more delicate shades of pink.

A few years ago, when Christmas blooming plants were few and cut blooms almost as scarce, everything went, just so it was a flower, but the public has learned a good deal about flowers and one of these things is that when it pays double and treble the usual price it is entitled to good goods. You will do far better to cut the blooms half open at the last moment, if they are demanded, than to save them up too long. There will be just as much in it for you and your customers will get much more satisfaction from them. So look over the blooms every day and dispose of any that show signs of weakening.

In raising the temperature be moderate by all means. At this time of the year, when the growth is less vigorous than at any other time, any hard forcing will show its effects in the near future, by a weakened growth, weak stems, split calyxes, off color, etc. Raise the temperature slowly and reduce it slowly afterwards, and do not raise it more than 6 degrees at the highest point. One degree each night is fast enough and will do but little damage, but to raise it 6 degrees in one night and hold it there a week would be sure to cause much damage. The price of a few extra blooms is soon lost in a loss of quality later on, and in order to produce really high grade blooms a plant must be in first class condition. A weakened plant cannot produce quality.

And, finally, keep in close touch with your customers or your commission man. Send in the blooms when they want them, as they can tell better than you can when they will go best. Every holiday we hear of some growers who held back a lot of blooms and dumped them onto the market at the last moment and got very low returns, while earlier they could have got a good price. So give others credit for knowing their end of the business as well as you know your end. To know the market is their specialty, just as your specialty is the growing of the blooms.

CARNATIONS FOR CHRISTMAS.

The Holiday Crop.

By the time these notes reach you you will have sized up your Christmas crop and know about how many blooms you will be able to turn out for the holiday sales. Almost every grower has to know about a week ahead what his cut is going to be, though of course he cannot be absolutely certain on account of the uncertainty of the weather. We have often found ourselves loaded to the brim with orders two weeks ahead, regardless of what the weather would be. The retailer cannot afford to place his orders with the grower subject to the weather, because his retail customers don't consider the weather when they place their order for a certain quantity of a certain flower. So it often puts the grower into a pretty tight hole and he has to resort to every trick known to him in coaxing out the blooms and holding them in good condition for that time.

Although Christmas comes at a time when flowers are at just about low ebb, the demand is suddenly jumped to at least double the normal, which makes it all the more trying to the grower. Every grower of cut flowers knows that to meet the demand for blooms at Christmas is the hardest problem he has to solve. If his glass area is large enough so that, with a good crop, he is able to supply the demand at Christmas he need not worry the rest of the season, providing his crop continues fair. That is what causes all this building every summer. I think that I am safe in saying that but for the heavy demands on the growers at Christmas, many a thousand feet of glass put up in the last few years would have been left unbuilt. However, this does not alter the fact your customer wants the blooms and you will have to do the best you can.

It has been our experience that usually during the week preceding December 23 trade is rather light and that enables us to save many blooms that would have been called for if trade were normal. In fact, most of our customers instruct us to hold back the entire cut except what they have to call for. Of course there are many blooms that are not fit, in the way of substance, to hold back many days and these must be disposed of while they are in good condition. Therein lies the secret of successfully holding back Christmas blooms.

Growers who will store away every bloom they cut during the week preceding Christmas, regardless of the texture, will always hear complaints about pickled stock. If you put away all the blooms you cut and at the end sort out those that are in first-class condition and throw the balance away you will be little better off than you would be had you sold them all at nominal figures. Especially is this true if you raise the temperature much, as that will have a tendency to soften the blooms. So when you begin saving up the blooms sort out those that are firm of texture and likely to keep and dispose of the others while they are in good condition.

You will find a great difference in the blooms of the same variety and you will find a still greater difference in the different varieties. For instance, you can keep Lawson as long as any of them, but you can not save Nelson very many days in good condition and the same is true of Crane. Enchantress does not stand

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Care of Cuttings.

Having the propagating bench filled with well-firmed sand, use an old table knife and make a deep cut across the bench, into which the cuttings are inserted. After sticking a batch (whatever you have made) water the sand thoroughly, so it will settle around the cuttings. After that, water as needed, keeping the sand in a fair state of moisture. It should never become dry; neither should it be watered enough to become soggy.

In the spraying and shading is where your judgment is taxed the most. When the weather is cold and the sun not very strong, there should be no trouble. A spraying each morning and the curtain dropped in front of them when the sun strikes them, and raised again at sunset or just a little before, will keep them fresh and you ought to root 100 per cent of them. But later on, when the sun gets stronger and the house gets warm in spite of you, then is when your fine work is called for.

Spraying should be done only when it is necessary to keep the cuttings fresh. On many cloudy or rainy days we do not spray them at all. Too much spraying, and especially keeping them wet over night, will have the same bad effect on the cuttings as it has on the growing plants. It will start rust and spot diseases and fungus.

In many cases it is sufficient to drop the curtain and keep the strong light off of them, and whenever this is enough to prevent wilting, it is preferable. This curtain should be tacked to the sashbars just above the front edge of the bench, so that it will drop just below the edge-board. This will keep off the sun, while at the same time it allows the cuttings to get the full daylight, which will keep them plump and healthy. When not needed to keep the sun off, this curtain should be raised to allow a free circulation of fresh air.

This curtain may sometimes have to be dropped to keep off draughts when there is a high wind blowing and the ventilators must be kept open. A draught blowing over the cuttings will hurt them as much or more than to let the sun shine on them. So be careful on such days. Keep the temperature in the house overhead about 50 degrees and about 60 degrees under the benches, and if you will keep the cuttings fresh for four to six weeks you will be able to take out a good percentage of the cuttings you put in the sand.

MELODY.

The accompanying illustration shows a house of Carnation Melody at the establishment of the W. C. Hill Floral Co., Streator, Ill., where the variety originated. This is a Daybreak-colored sport of Lawson and has been seen at many of the exhibitions and is well liked. The house was planted from the field July 17 and salable blooms were cut August 13. The two benches shown in the picture had to December 1 produced 4,141 blooms and in addition over 9,500 cuttings. All the Lawson varieties, pink, red, white and variegated, are grown at the Hill place and are all money makers. They make a point of propagating before they begin feeding and have maintained the vigor of their stock.

CUT WORM.

The enclosed carnation buds are some we have cut from plants of Queen Louise and McKinley. We have been unable to see the pest. It appears it eats the center or the flower out of the calyx. Please give instructions how to prevent them from destroying our crop. They work very little on other varieties, but appear to eat a part of the young shoots.

C. S. G.

The pest that is attacking your carnations is no doubt one of the common varieties of cut worm. They climb up to the buds at night and feed until daybreak, when they return to the soil and bury themselves about half an inch deep in the loose soil, and remain there until the next night. If you will take a lantern about midnight you can catch some of them while they are feeding. You can find them, too, by looking for the buds that were attacked the previous night; you will usually find them buried near the plant they fed on last. Hand picking is the surest and quickest remedy. They are of a dull gray color and you will have to look close to see them on the soil.

The crimson variety of which you send buds is not McKinley, but closely resembles Harry Fenn. McKinley is a deep pink about the same color as Lawson.

SMILAX IN GUERNSEY.

For some reason or other local conditions in the Isle of Guernsey, either of soil or climate, suit smilax admirably, and, though I have traveled, I have never seen it growing so well elsewhere under cultivation. The only fear is that too many are growing it, and it will be overdone. At one place I visited I was able to verify the fact that smilax to the value of $2,050 was cut and exported from one house measuring 35x220 feet. That was the sum realized, and, of course, the grower was exceedingly gratified. If I remember aright, the smilax was removed, and replaced by runner beans, so that the $2,050 does not represent the total receipts from that house for a year. One of the most interesting horticultural sights in Guernsey is a well kept house of smilax in full growth.—Horticultural Advertiser.

WITH BOSTON GARDENERS.

Along the North Shore.

Having a few hours to spare the past week we determined to pass them in this increasingly popular part of Massachusetts' seaboard. We found many striking changes since our previous visit eighteen months ago. Many fine new residences are being erected and ranges of glass are found on practically all of them, the owners coming from Chicago, Pittsburg, New York and other cities, in addition to the many from Boston. There is now a flourishing horticultural society here, and there is no question but that this delightful locality is destined to become in the near future the leading society resort in the east, not even excepting Lenox or Newport.

IMPORTED INSECTS.

Enclosed are a few leaves of azaleas which I received from a certain firm in Holland October 26. Upon unpacking the plants they were almost without leaves and full of small, green, round bugs, scale and a small white fly. I dipped the plants in nicotine. It cleaned out everything but the white fly. These got on some of our fuchsias and pelargoniums. Could you advise me what to use to get rid of it. A. W.

The azaleas in question must have been very much infested with insects, judging by the leaves that were enclosed with this query, and the dipping in nicotine solution was a good method of treatment, though I should think that a second dipping will be needed before the flower buds begin to swell, in order to make a clean job of such plants.

The white fly is hard to kill, but strong fumigating with nicotine may get the best of it, and if this should fail, the hydrocyanic acid fumigation is a last resort, and will certainly kill the insects. But in using this latter treatment it should always be remembered that hydrocyanic acid is one of the most deadly poisons and that a man seldom lives over a minute after taking a full breath of this gas, so one cannot be too careful in its use. W. H. TAPLIN.

much handling when several days old, besides losing its color quickly after opening. In fact, this is true of most of the more delicate shades of pink.

A few years ago, when Christmas blooming plants were few and cut blooms almost as scarce, everything went, just so it was a flower, but the public has learned a good deal about flowers and one of these things is that when it pays double and treble the usual price it is entitled to good goods. You will do far better to cut the blooms half open at the last moment, if they are demanded, than to save them up too long. There will be just as much in it for you and your customers will get much more satisfaction from them. So look over the blooms every day and dispose of any that show signs of weakening.

In raising the temperature be moderate by all means. At this time of the year, when the growth is less vigorous than at any other time, any hard forcing will show its effects in the near future, by a weakened growth, weak stems, split calyxes, off color, etc. Raise the temperature slowly and reduce it slowly afterwards, and do not raise it more than 6 degrees at the highest point. One degree each night is fast enough and will do but little damage, but to raise it 6 degrees in one night and hold it there a week would be sure to cause much damage. The price of a few extra blooms is soon lost in a loss of quality later on, and in order to produce really high grade blooms a plant must be in first class condition. A weakened plant cannot produce quality.

And, finally, keep in close touch with your customers or your commission man. Send in the blooms when they want them, as they can tell better than you can when they will go best. Every holiday we hear of some growers who held back a lot of blooms and dumped them onto the market at the last moment and got very low returns, while earlier they could have got a good price. So give others credit for knowing their end of the business as well as you know your end. To know the market is their specialty, just as your specialty is the growing of the blooms.

CARNATIONS FOR CHRISTMAS.

The Holiday Crop.

By the time these notes reach you you will have sized up your Christmas crop and know about how many blooms you will be able to turn out for the holiday sales. Almost every grower has to know about a week ahead what his cut is going to be, though of course he cannot be absolutely certain on account of the uncertainty of the weather. We have often found ourselves loaded to the brim with orders two weeks ahead, regardless of what the weather would be. The retailer cannot afford to place his orders with the grower subject to the weather, because his retail customers don't consider the weather when they place their order for a certain quantity of a certain flower. So it often puts the grower into a pretty tight hole and he has to resort to every trick known to him in coaxing out the blooms and holding them in good condition for that time.

Although Christmas comes at a time when flowers are at just about low ebb, the demand is suddenly jumped to at least double the normal, which makes it all the more trying to the grower. Every grower of cut flowers knows that to meet the demand for blooms at Christmas is the hardest problem he has to solve. If his glass area is large enough so that, with a good crop, he is able to supply the demand at Christmas he need not worry the rest of the season, providing his crop continues fair. That is what causes all this building every summer. I think that I am safe in saying that but for the heavy demands on the growers at Christmas, many a thousand feet of glass put up in the last few years would have been left unbuilt. However, this does not alter the fact your customer wants the blooms and you will have to do the best you can.

It has been our experience that usually during the week preceding December 23 trade is rather light and that enables us to save many blooms that would have been called for if trade were normal. In fact, most of our customers instruct us to hold back the entire cut except what they have to call for. Of course there are many blooms that are not fit, in the way of substance, to hold back many days and these must be disposed of while they are in good condition. Therein lies the secret of successfully holding back Christmas blooms.

Growers who will store away every bloom they cut during the week preceding Christmas, regardless of the texture, will always hear complaints about pickled stock. If you put away all the blooms you cut and at the end sort out those that are in first-class condition and throw the balance away you will be little better off than you would be had you sold them all at nominal figures. Especially is this true if you raise the temperature much, as that will have a tendency to soften the blooms. So when you begin saving up the blooms sort out those that are firm of texture and likely to keep and dispose of the others while they are in good condition.

You will find a great difference in the blooms of the same variety and you will find a still greater difference in the different varieties. For instance, you can keep Lawson as long as any of them, but you can not save Nelson very many days in good condition and the same is true of Crane. Enchantress does not stand

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Care of Cuttings.

Having the propagating bench filled with well-firmed sand, use an old table knife and make a deep cut across the bench, into which the cuttings are inserted. After sticking a batch (whatever you have made) water the sand thoroughly, so it will settle around the cuttings. After that, water as needed, keeping the sand in a fair state of moisture. It should never become dry; neither should it be watered enough to become soggy.

In the spraying and shading is where your judgment is taxed the most. When the weather is cold and the sun not very strong, there should be no trouble. A spraying each morning and the curtain dropped in front of them when the sun strikes them, and raised again at sunset or just a little before, will keep them fresh and you ought to root 100 per cent of them. But later on, when the sun gets stronger and the house gets warm in spite of you, then is when your fine work is called for.

Spraying should be done only when it is necessary to keep the cuttings fresh. On many cloudy or rainy days we do not spray them at all. Too much spraying, and especially keeping them wet over night, will have the same bad effect on the cuttings as it has on the growing plants. It will start rust and spot diseases and fungus.

In many cases it is sufficient to drop the curtain and keep the strong light off of them, and whenever this is enough to prevent wilting, it is preferable. This curtain should be tacked to the sashbars just above the front edge of the bench, so that it will drop just below the edge-board. This will keep off the sun, while at the same time it allows the cuttings to get the full daylight, which will keep them plump and healthy. When not needed to keep the sun off, this curtain should be raised to allow a free circulation of fresh air.

This curtain may sometimes have to be dropped to keep off draughts when there is a high wind blowing and the ventilators must be kept open. A draught blowing over the cuttings will hurt them as much or more than to let the sun shine on them. So be careful on such days. Keep the temperature in the house overhead about 50 degrees and about 60 degrees under the benches, and if you will keep the cuttings fresh for four to six weeks you will be able to take out a good percentage of the cuttings you put in the sand.

There is now a flourishing horticultural society here, and there is no question but that this delightful locality is destined to become in the near future the leading society resort in the east, not even excepting Lenox or Newport.

We called first at Mrs. R. C. Hooper's, West Manchester, where William Swan is head gardener. Everything indoors was in excellent order. A new addition had just been completed to one of the ranges to give more room for orchid culture. A fine batch of calanthes were in bloom. A batch of some fifty phalænopsis were bristling with spikes. Schilleriana and amabilis are chiefly grown. Cattleya trianae and Percivalliana were just coming into flower. The house of cattleyas looked extremely well. Liberty, Bride, Maid and Killarney roses are grown. Enchantress took the lead in carnations. White Lawson, Lady Bountiful and Fiancee are also grown. The latter is growing freely, but has as yet produced few flowers. Some nice standard geraniums of the English round flowered type were noted, also batches in good shape of a general line of winter flowering pot plants. Melons are grown here the year round. One crop was just finishing and another lot setting.

At W. B. Thomas', West Manchester, where Mr. Connolly presides, we found a nice house of roses. Carnations also looked well, especially Lawson, White Lawson and Enchantress. A nice deep colored sport of the latter was noted. Violets, antirrhinums, cricas, lilies, gardenias, mignonette, orchids and a variety of other plants were seen in additional structures.

American Beauty roses at W. S. Spaulding's, Prides Crossing, F. Cole, gardener, were carrying plenty of 4-foot to 5-foot stems. Golden Gate, Bride, Maid and Liberty also looked well. Carnations, especially Enchantress, were good. In the orchid house a good batch of Zygopetalum Mackayi was just passing out of bloom. A bench of 200 cyclamen promised a nice show early in the new year. A new house was filled with single violets. A large house with artificial rockwork and winding paths is devoted to palms. We understand additional glass for fruit culture is soon to be erected.

Alexander Shaw, at Judge W. H. Moore's fine new place in Prides Crossing, had big gangs of men at work outside moving large trees, sodding, grading, etc. An immense amount of blasting is being done, a large proportion of the land being solid ledge. Indoors we noted nice houses of carnations and roses and a good general assortment of winter blooming stock. The pretty white begonia, Moonlight, as seen here, should prove a desirable florists' plant. We preferred it to Gloire de Lorraine. This will be a fine place when completed.

At Dr. Henry Sear's place at Beverley Cove, where Mr. Mitchell has charge, divisions are devoted to palms, roses, carnations, nectarines and grapes and a nice general lot of stuff was seen. Additional glass is to be built here.

One of the newest and finest places, still somewhat in the embryo state, is that of Henry C. Frick in Prides Crossing. George E. Wyness is in charge. He is a pupil of David Fraser, the new secretary of the C. S. A. An immense sum of money is being spent here on buildings, avenues and other necessary work. Plans have been prepared for a splendid block of greenhouses.

Our last call during a hurried four hours' visit was on George E. Ward in Prides Crossing. Mr. Ward has run a commercial plant for a good many years. In addition to a general line of carnations, violets and pot plants he grows a large breadth of strawberries, many frames of lettuce and about 20,000 tomatoes in the fields, also other fruits and vegetables. He does a large business among the summer residents.

W. N. C.

AT RHINEBECK.

Extent of the Industry.

The little city of Rhinebeck, in the northern end of Dutchess county, New York, on the Hudson, opposite Kingston and eighty-two miles from New York City, is known throughout the length and breadth of floriculture as the center of the violet industry, which has here reached such proportions that it is almost the sole dependence of the town. Indeed, it is often said that the whole of Rhinebeck lives by the violet and, while this is not strictly true, it is a fact that violet growing is the occupation of a large part of the population and that nowhere else has the violet attained the importance it holds in this community.

The soil and climate of Rhinebeck seem particularly suited to violet growing, and the success which attended the work of the pioneer growers led all sorts and conditions of men to build greenhouses, until there are now eighty-five establishments in the vicinity, almost entirely devoted to the violet. A great many of the growers are young men; indeed, it is said with many evidences of truth that it is only an exceptional man who can continue to be successful year after year, and so whimsical is the fragrant flower that often the green and totally inexperienced grower will be blessed with a splendid crop, while the best efforts of the veteran grower next door will be crowned only by failure.

The Money Reward.

Omitting one or two larger places, the average establishment consists of a couple of houses and shelters perhaps 9,000 plants. The plants yield from thirty to fifty salable flowers in a successful season. It is estimated that the total output of the Rhinebeck community for the season of 1905-6 will approximate fifty million blooms, and for the district, including Poughkeepsie, about eighty-five million. Of course the bulk of these go to New York, but they are also shipped to commission houses and retail florists as far west as St. Louis, large quantities to Chicago and to intermediate cities, also to Canada. In the season two large express wagons are required to take the boxes to Rhinecliffe, a couple of miles away, where they are put on the New York Central.

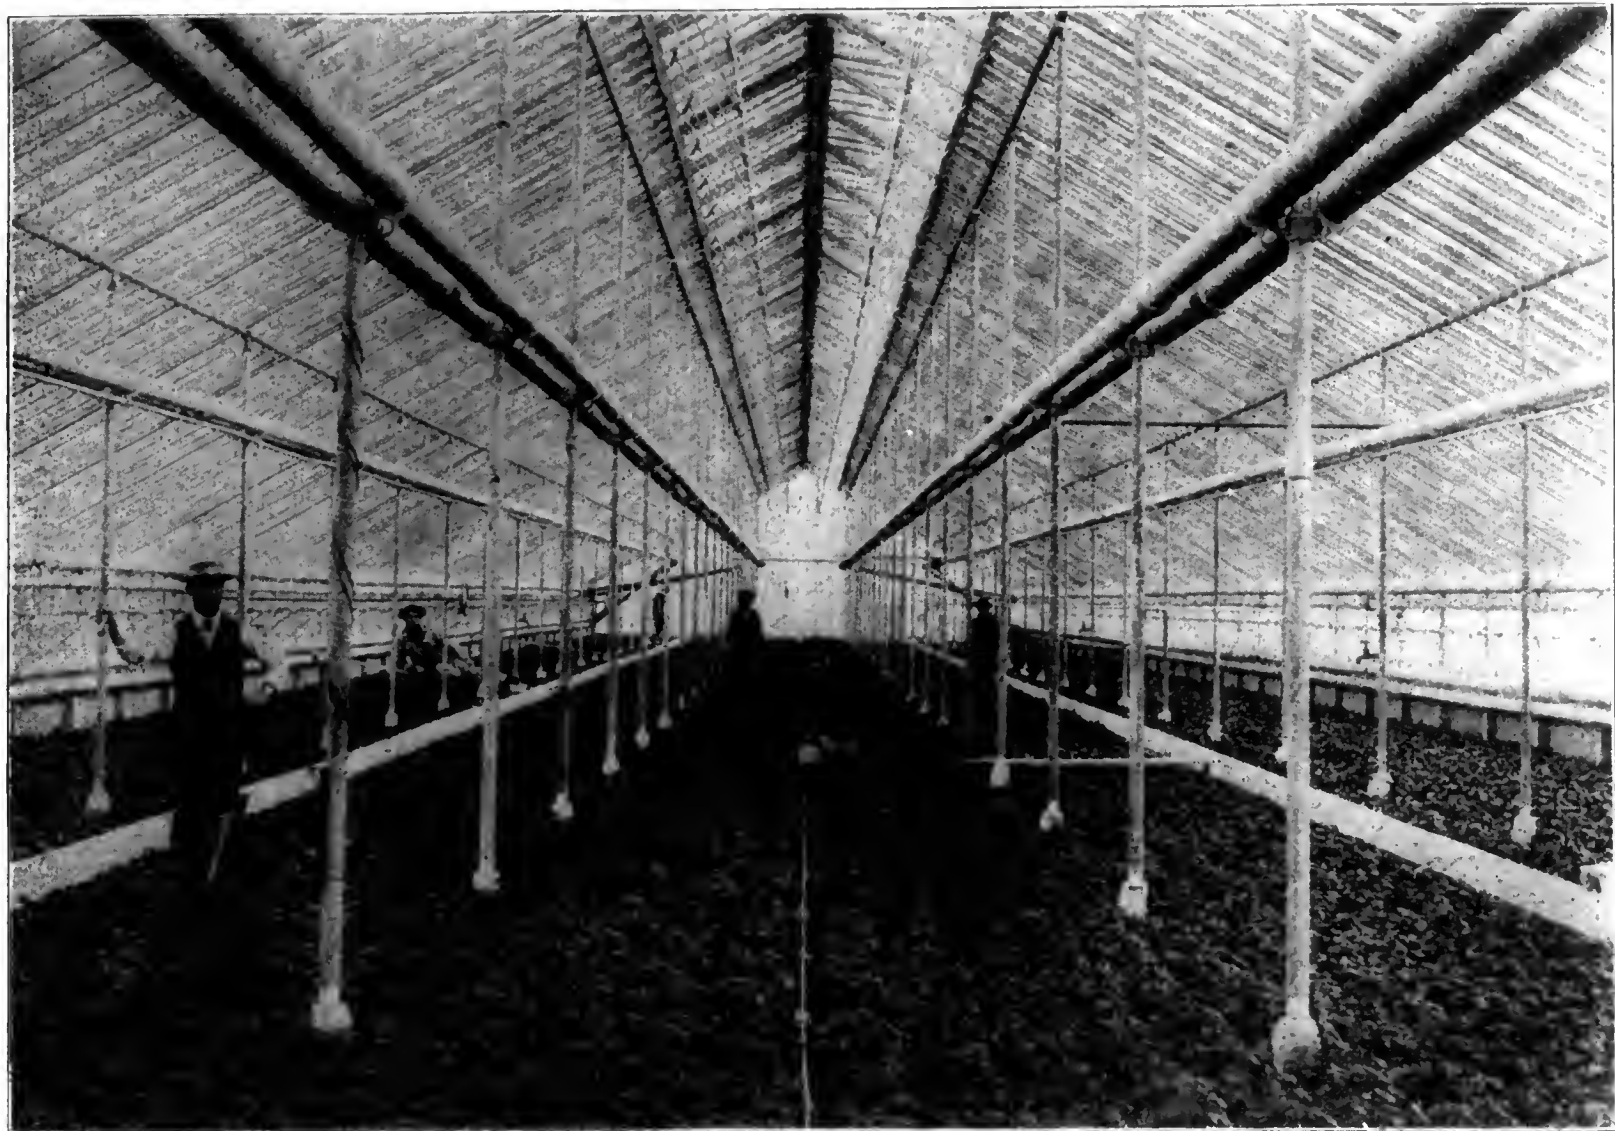

In interviewing a number of growers, it was the general opinion that it costs about 23 cents per square foot of bed to grow violets. Marie Louise is grown almost exclusively. It is the unanimous verdict that the returns have fallen away because of overproduction until they are no more than half what they were three or four years ago, when violet growing had its greatest boom. The growers say that the average returns for the entire season's output will not exceed 40 cents per hundred. This, with plants in the best of condition, free from insects and disease, producing fifty blooms each, would net the successful grower about 12 cents per plant.

The Future.

The general opinion among the older growers is that it is a question if this year's receipts will not show that the violet business has seen its day as a paying investment. Early as the season now is, and with a general short crop, the markets are overstocked, prices at best are not what they have been and there are many gluts, with consequent waste of flowers, which tends to make the margin of profit smaller than it was last year. Already many growers are turning their attention to stock of some other flower for next year, and others even are wondering how they can keep on at all. There will be many places to rent next season, for a large part of those engaged in the business put up their houses on borrowed money and foreclosure is staring quite a number in the face. This may account to some of the commission dealers for the very great unrest which is apparent in the violet center.

George Saltford was the first grower to make a success of the violet in the section now so largely devoted to its culture. He began to grow violets in 1884, and his son is still in the business at Rhinebeck. One by one the plants have increased until the total is more than four score. As an example of the more successful ones the establishment of J. Vonder Linden will serve.

Mr. Vonder Linden started in the business in 1901 with two houses, each 12x150. In 1903 he built another house, 24x150, with side walls five and one-half feet high and glass in the south side, so constructed that it will make a very good carnation house. In this house the beds are eight feet wide, and he has a trolley arrangement running the full length of the house, so that it is not necessary for the picker to get off the picking board until he completes his task. In the spring of this year Mr. Vonder Linden built the house shown in the accompanying interior view. It is 35x200, and the largest house in the violet region. It holds 14,000 violet plants.

Construction and Heating.

As may be seen in the picture, the iron posts carry eight flow pipes, all being at the same height upon adjustable supports. These flow pipes are ten feet from the ground and are fed by one 5-inch main from which four 4-inch flows are taken and these in turn each supply two 4-inch flows the full length of the house. On each side wall there are four 4-inch returns, which gives a return for every flow. One line of pipe on each wall is placed close to the plate, to prevent ice from forming on the glass. The total radiation consists of 4,000 feet of 4-inch pipe, which will be enough for carnations or roses, for which the house can be used by simply putting in benches; the piping will not have to be changed.

The house is heated by a No. 5 Kroeschell hot water boiler which, with the above arrangement of pipes, gives an absolutely even temperature in all parts of the house. The boiler is forty-two inches wide, ten feet long and thirty-six inches high above the ash pit. The foundation is fourteen inches high, so that the total height of the boiler is only fifty inches. It has a capacity for maintaining a temperature of 70 degrees in greenhouses of 12,000 square feet of exposure when it is zero outside.

There are continuous ventilators on both sides of the ridge of this large violet house. On each side there is practically one ventilator 3x200 feet. Each ventilator weighs over half a ton, but it is raised from one end without difficulty by a Wolf apparatus, made by A. Q. Wolf & Bro., Dayton, O. The glass ventilators in the sides of the house are in sections of fifty feet and are operated with the Lord & Burnham worm gear machine. In the growing season, when top and side ventilators are opened full, the air circulation is so perfect as to keep the temperature about even with the shade temperature outdoors.

The square building at the left in the smaller picture is Mr. Vonder Linden's boiler and work room on the lower floor, the second story arranged for office and sleeping rooms. In each house there is a thermostat connecting with a bell in the night fireman's room, to give warning should a house become dangerously cold or warm. In addition there are registering thermometers in the houses to tell just what has happened each night.

A propagating house 20x75 feet is now being built along the north side of the large house, the plates to be six feet from the ground. This house is to be used for young violet stock, it being Mr. Vonder Linden's intention to grow 200,000 for next summer. The varieties are Marie Louise, Farquhar and Swanley White.

The Proprietor.

All of Mr. Vonder Linden's houses were built without the help of carpenter or steamfitter. He is only 32 years of age, but had twelve years' experience in mechanics before starting at violet growing. He began work at the machinists' trade when he was only 15 years old and is a skilled tool maker. At present he is growing 30,000 violet plants and is one of the largest as well as one of the most progressive and liberal minded growers of the district.

Cultural Methods.

Asked to outline his cultural methods Mr. Vonder Linden said: "In the fall, about October 1, we plow our sod and when possible stack it, using well rotted manure. By spring, when we take out all the old soil in the beds, the compost is well in shape, ready to put in the houses for new planting.

"I commence early in March to make cuttings, which are only taken from the spring growth of runners, choosing those

In interviewing a number of growers, it was the general opinion that it costs about 23 cents per square foot of bed to grow violets. Marie Louise is grown almost exclusively. It is the unanimous verdict that the returns have fallen away because of overproduction until they are no more than half what they were three or four years ago, when violet growing had its greatest boom. The growers say that the average returns for the entire season's output will not exceed 40 cents per hundred. This, with plants in the best of condition, free from insects and disease, producing fifty blooms each, would net the successful grower about 12 cents per plant.

The Future.

The general opinion among the older growers is that it is a question if this year's receipts will not show that the violet business has seen its day as a paying investment. Early as the season now is, and with a general short crop, the markets are overstocked, prices at best are not what they have been and there are many gluts, with consequent waste of flowers, which tends to make the margin of profit smaller than it was last year. Already many growers are turning their attention to stock of some other flower for next year, and others even are wondering how they can keep on at all. There will be many places to rent next season, for a large part of those engaged in the business put up their houses on borrowed money and foreclosure is staring quite a number in the face. This may account to some of the commission dealers for the very great unrest which is apparent in the violet center.

George Saltford was the first grower to make a success of the violet in the section now so largely devoted to its culture. He began to grow violets in 1884, and his son is still in the business at Rhinebeck. One by one the plants have increased until the total is more than four score. As an example of the more successful ones the establishment of J. Vonder Linden will serve.

Mr. Vonder Linden started in the business in 1901 with two houses, each 12x150. In 1903 he built another house, 24x150, with side walls five and one-half feet high and glass in the south side, so constructed that it will make a very good carnation house. In this house the beds are eight feet wide, and he has a trolley arrangement running the full length of the house, so that it is not necessary for the picker to get off the picking board until he completes his task. In the spring of this year Mr. Vonder Linden built the house shown in the accompanying interior view. It is 35x200, and the largest house in the violet region. It holds 11,000 violet plants.

Construction and Heating.

As may be seen in the picture, the iron posts carry eight flow pipes, all being at the same height upon adjustable supports. These flow pipes are ten feet from the ground and are fed by one 5-inch main from which four 4-inch flows are taken and these in turn each supply two 1-inch flows the full length of the house. On each side wall there are four 4-inch returns, which gives a return for every flow. One line of pipe on each wall is placed close to the plate, to prevent ice from forming on the glass. The total radiation consists of 4,000 feet of 4-inch pipe, which will be enough for carnations or roses, for which the house can be used by simply putting in benches; the piping will not have to be changed.

The house is heated by a No. 5 Kroeschell hot water boiler which, with the above arrangement of pipes, gives an absolutely even temperature in all parts of the house. The boiler is forty-two inches wide, ten feet long and thirty-six inches high above the ash out. The foundation is fourteen inches high, so that the total height of the boiler is only fifty inches. It has a capacity for maintaining a temperature of 70 degrees in greenhouses of 12,000 square feet of exposure when it is zero outside.

There are continuous ventilators on both sides of the ridge of this large violet house. On each side there is practically one ventilator 35x200 feet. This ventilator weighs over half a ton, but it is raised from one end without difficulty by a Wolf apparatus, made by A. Q. Wolf & Bro., Dayton, O. The glass ventilators in the sides of the house are in sections of fifty feet and are operated with the Lord & Barnham worm gear machine. In the growing season, when top and side ventilators are opened full, the air circulation is so perfect as to keep the temperature about even with the shade temperature outdoors.

The square building at the left in the smaller picture is Mr. Vonder Linden's boiler and work room on the lower floor, the second story arranged for offices and sleeping rooms. In each house there is a thermostat connecting with a bell in the night fireman's room, to give warning should a house become dangerously cold or warm. In addition there are registering thermometers in the houses to tell just what has happened each night.

A propagating house 20x75 feet is now being built along the north side of the large house, the plates to be six feet from the ground. This house is to be used for young violet stock, it being Mr. Vonder Linden's intention to grow 200,000 for next summer. The varieties are Marie Louise, Empress and Swanley White.

The Proprietor.

All of Mr. Vonder Linden's houses were built without the help of carpenter or steamfitter. He is only 32 years of age, but has twelve years' experience in mechanics before starting in violet growing. He began work at the machinists' trade when he was only 15 years and now is a skilled tool maker. At present he is growing 30,000 violet plants in one of the largest and best equipped violet houses in the most progressive section of the violet growers of the district.

Cultural Methods.

As a rule, the violet growers of the district, Mr. Vonder Linden included, do not start violet stock until the first of October. By this time the plants have reached the stage of growth which makes it possible to start them in the open air. By spring the plants are ready to be set in the open air, and the growing season is well advanced.

The growing season for violets in the district commences early in March. The cuttings, which are only taken from the spring growth of runners, are made these that are shapely and likely to make good crowns. These cuttings are started in sand and remain there until lifted to be planted in the greenhouse beds, where they are to flower. After the plants are benched the greatest caution must be used in watering, for if at any time in the starting of these young plants they get on the dry side it will give them a check that they will not recover from in the whole season. As the plants grow, all runners and side crowns are cut from the main plant.

"There are many diseases and insects that must be fought constantly during the growing season, for if one of these pests ever gets the upper hand of a grower, the flowers will certainly not be of good quality. Cleanliness and constant attention, with plenty of hard work, are necessary to bring forth a start in afresh. I wonder if he always picks all the spot affected leaves and burns in the boiler at once? And perhaps his frames are in a damp, close place, which favor spot. Build the new ones high and airy, and on well drained ground.

SHIPPING VIOLETS.

There is a constantly widening outlet for the violets of the Hudson river district. Only a few years ago all the Rhinebeck and Poughkeepsie output was sold in New York City. Now these flowers are shipped daily to commission houses as far west as St. Louis. Of course they lose their fragrance, but the original quality of the stock is so much better than the quality of the double violets usually produced in the west that the New York product has practically put season's crop of violets of the quality to command a ready sale.

"Great care is taken by the majority of growers in bunching, leafing and packing, still there is much complaint at the poor condition in which shipments reach their destination. Deterioration in transit is of course inevitable, but the growers are unanimous in saying that greater care should be taken by the employees of the transportation companies."

SPOT ON VIOLETS.

We have had quite a lot of trouble with the spot on our violets for the last year. I have tried every way to grow them, but with little success. Don't you think it would be a good idea to remove the frames to a different location, say 200 or 300 yards from where I have them?

G. F.

If I were this subscriber, I would not even take the trouble to remove the frames, but utilize them for other plants, and build some new ones for violets, at the most distant point available, and western violet growers out of business. Grand Rapids, once the center of the western violet industry, is growing the fragrant flower in only small quantities this year.

Florists in the smaller towns have not yet fully awakened to the use they can make of the Hudson river stock. Only small shipping business has been done in violets, but a great many are finding out that they can procure the flowers in good shape from the commission man who supplies their roses and carnations and are using more of them right along. As other retailers find out how well they travel, the shipping of violets from Buffalo, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis and other wholesale centers will increase and the outlet for the Rhinebeck growers will be still further widened.

SCIENTIFIC CEMENT.

Since cement has become so common an article in one feature or another of greenhouse construction, the following from the Railway Age, if somewhat technical, will be of interest:

While from any casual view concrete appears as one of the simplest materials of construction, and its ultimate sources comprise, in addition to water, but four distinct factors—lime and clay (for the cement), sand and stone—nevertheless their combination and successful practical application present uncertainties. In the proper mixing of cement, with gravel or with sand and broken stone, for the manufacture of concrete, the persistence of unscientific methods, after a series of investigations unparalleled for magnitude during any equal period in the history of engineering, must remain something of a mystery.

In order to reach a true conception of the object to be attained in the making of concrete, it is necessary first to agree upon its factors, and these are: (a) The greatest reasonable strength; (b) the least cost of materials for a given volume; (c) an accurate basis upon which to combine the elements for securing (a) and (b). To these we should add the desirability of embodying in (c) a correct measure of the volume, and here is found the first difficulty, because, hitherto, specifications have dealt only with proportions or percentages and not with fixed dimensions: "Cement, 1; sand, 3½; broken stone, 6," whether in pails, wheelbarrows or barrels—a phrase giving absolutely no suggestion of what volume is to be expected. In a general way we know that, by and large, a barrel of cement will be used to a cubic yard of concrete in place, but this is true in many instances and utterly false in others.

Theoretically, the voids in the broken stone should be filled exactly by the sand, and the voids in the sand should be filled exactly by the cement, in order that a compact and economic whole shall result; at the same time, the addition of the sand and cement should not add appreciably to the original volume of the stone. But practically, a perfect coating of cement must surround each separate particle of sand and stone and, to secure this, more than the quantity of cement predicted by the voids must be used. In effect cement usually is wasted inexcusably with the idea that the richer the mixture the stronger the concrete, whereas it needs but a moment's thought to prove that, with all voids filled, all surfaces perfectly coated and brought into contact by thorough ramming, no increased strength will follow any addition of cement, be it little or great. In the quantity of water used, also, engineers exhibit a range of practice which is anything but creditable. From a mere dash which is absorbed so quickly that the mixture must be rushed into place in order that any effective "setting" shall result, it may become a drenching which reduces the concrete to a fluid and, even if no other injury follows, leaves it honeycombed with microscopic voids. Fortunately, Portland cement cannot be drowned so easily as its "natural" brother or we should be in a bad way indeed.

Illustrating One of the Best and Most Frequent Uses of Wild Smilax.

WORKING WITH WILD SMILAX.

Where to get ideas for new designs for wall, woodwork and stairway decorations is an easier question to solve than which ones of the many which present themselves in a country ramble to choose and adopt. Outdoor vines, when left to themselves, assume many interesting and suggestive positions. One seen in early autumn, a hop vine climbing across a window, was cut and used as a drape across the corner of a wide doorway. The lighter portion below was caught up on its right with a bunch of scarlet cannas.

The same design might easily be worked out by tying a cluster of four or five strings of smilax together at the heavy ends, after the fashion of the upper part of the hop vine, and training the light ends like the lower part. Scarlet carnations might be substituted for the cannas. Another slender spray of the vine ran toward the left, and the idea might be adapted in this particular too, the added portion of the drape extending to the farthest corner of the doorway.

The illustration shows a series of four out of the five in a church chancel decorated in wild smilax. The second from the left, where the cross is seen, is the middle arch. A background of white cheesecloth covers the dark plaster work of the wall, and serves as a good material to bring out the details of the green sprays.

Observe first that each arch is a unit of itself, and that while they are much alike in pattern, there is a difference in the weight of the material used; grading from the heavier arch at the right to the next and finally to the most delicate in the center arch.

Large pins were used for fastening the smilax on the cheesecloth. Two pins placed, one at each end of the smilax spray are sufficient to hold it in place.

Observe second, that there is a finish to the design on the right arch, to take away any appearance of bluntness, as the eye passes to the right.

Observe third, that the space in the arches is not all covered. A fraction of the background appears like an irregular opening to a stretch of foliage in the woods.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE lettuce forcers in the vicinity of Chicago have had a very bad early season, but anticipate a merry Christmas, for good Grand Rapids lettuce is now bringing 3 to 4 cents a plant.

THE forcing of tomatoes for the Chicago market is an industry which is yet in its infancy. A number of growers are having fair success with the crop but are complaining of the present market. The season has been exceptionally favorable in lower California and the refrigerated product is coming to market in very fine shape, recent prices being $1.40 per four basket crate. This does not leave much chance for the greenhouse product.

ENGLISH CUCUMBERS.

The English varieties of cucumbers are not generally grown on this side of the Atlantic; not, in my opinion, so much as their merits deserve, but I am glad to see from numerous inquiries that there is some demand for them. The lack of demand seems to be where the trouble lies. The public seems to prefer the shorter varieties of the White Spine type, possibly because they see very little, if any, of the others and when they do see them are uncertain regarding their quality.

From a grower's point of view I do not think there is a great deal of difference, for I do not believe there is any more money to be made out of the one than out of the other; consequently the

ENGLISH CUCUMBERS.

The English varieties of cucumbers are not generally grown on this side of the Atlantic; not, in my opinion, so much as their merits deserve, but I am glad to see from numerous inquiries that there is some demand for them. The lack of demand seems to be where the trouble lies. The public seems to prefer the shorter varieties of the White Spine type, possibly because they see very little, if any, of the others and when they do see them are uncertain regarding their quality.

From a grower's point of view I do not think there is a great deal of difference, for I do not believe there is any more money to be made out of the one than out of the other; consequently the grower has no incentive to push the longer variety, since the shorter variety is always surer of a market.

The chief advantage in the growing of the English type is that they will swell to full size without being pollinated, when the pollinating of the White Spine type is essential to the growth of the cucumber and often entails a good deal of trouble unless provision is made to have bees to do the work.

The chief advantage for table use in the English type is the absence of seeds, which, although the fruits swell to full size, do not develop in the fruit unless the flower has been pollinated. Polination, therefore, is only necessary when seed is desired. Regarding flavor and tenderness there is very little difference, providing both varieties are taken at the proper stage.

The varieties of this type are quite numerous, among them being Sion House, Duke of Edinburgh, Blue Gown, Tender and True, etc., but for practical purposes none of them beat the Telegraph variety. The others differ from this in attaining greater length or deeper color, and may generally be classed more as show varieties, but it is doubtful if any of them excels in table qualities.

POOR SOIL.

Several weeks ago I wrote you a query as to blind wood on roses, which was answered very promptly. After carefully studying your answer and the editorial notes in the REVIEW from week to week I fail to find any fault with my culture sufficient to account for so much weak and blind growth. Foliage is fine and has dropped little. I have come to the conclusion that the trouble lies in the soil. Perhaps it was sour. I cut the sod last spring from the ditches along the county road, piled it with alternate layers of cow manure, one to four; cut it down in May, turned it twice and put it on the benches in June. It is next to impossible to get sod from the fields and I am compelled to get it from the roadside, which very likely is sour from being wet so much. After reading your answer to my query I followed your advice with an application of lime, one peck to 250 square feet of bench. How soon can I lime again? I have this fall prepared a large pile of this sod for next spring's use. How had I best treat it to have it sweet? I am a beginner, this being my third season, and a large part of what success I have had I credit to reading the REVIEW. J. P. K.

I also am forced to think that part of the trouble may arise from the quality of soil used, as I have rarely seen good results from soil gathered from ditches. The very fact that it comes from a ditch would account for its sourness and roses particularly object to any sourness of soil. But possibly the plants may have been propagated from an inferior grade of wood, which would account for so very much blind wood forming.

For soil of this quality a good sprinkling of lime every two weeks will be of great benefit, as this will help to keep it sweet and encourage the eyes to break stronger and give stiffness to the stems and tone to the foliage. An application of manure water once a week should, seeing that there is good root action, help to strengthen the growth.

If the blind wood is very dense it might be profitable to give it a judicious thinning out. This would help to divert the strength of the plants to the remaining eyes and so produce good stems, but I would advise caution in this proceeding, as at this season, when stock is prone to take a rest, it is not good policy to denude the plants of too much foliage, as this is apt to check root action and plants during the short days are eager to obey the dictates of nature on very little excuse.

The treatment of the soil already piled is so far correct but because of its nature it should, as soon as the weather will permit, be chopped up and during this process add one bushel of lime to each five loads of the compost and turn it frequently, choosing bright, sunny weather for the operation.

I am glad that the advice given in these columns has been of some benefit and pleased to think this beginner is taking full advantage of the opportunities offered and predict that this course of study and practice will bring its reward.

RIBES.

ROSES IN POTS.

I would like to ask advice on roses in pots for Easter. On account of frost holding off so late this fall, when we lifted our roses from the field they were still very green in foliage. They were lifted about November 25 and were put in a pit and kept as cool as possible without freezing. It is about time to pot them and they are still quite green. What is it best to do with them? Would it be well to let them freeze in the pit before taking them out? Will one-year-old plants of Dorothy Perkins bloom for Easter? C. J. R.

It is a pity you did not have patience to wait until the roses were fully ripe before lifting and storing, as ripeness makes the result of forcing much more satisfactory. The best proceeding would be to pot them and place them in a house with a temperature not to exceed 45 degrees for at least two weeks. As the buds begin to develop the temperature should be gradually increased until it reaches 58 degrees.

Careful observation will be required in the matter of temperature to time them properly. If they seem to be coming too early the temperature should be reduced or raised slightly if too slow.

If the one-year-old stock of Dorothy Perkins is strong and well ripened fair success can be had but two-year-old stock is preferable.

The greatest care is required to keep the plants free from red spider, as this pest is the worst enemy this class of stock has to contend with. Feeding should be withheld until the plants show buds, when a weak application of manure water can be given once a week. RIBES.

MUM SHOW AT CORNELL.

The Horticultural Club, better known as the Lazy Club, of Cornell University, held the annual chrysanthemum show at the forcing houses a couple of weeks ago. It was a grand success and in fact it was the finest show the club has ever held.

At the meeting there were several short talks given on chrysanthemums by the students and also one by Mr. Hunn, the gardener of the department. Much enthusiasm was shown by the students of the Department of Horticulture and it is hoped that the floral side of the work of this department will continue to grow in importance as the years come around.

The exhibition was greatly assisted by the interest and kindness of several florists in the vicinity and elsewhere. Among those who sent samples of their fine blooms were Prof. J. F. Cowell, of the Buffalo Botanic Gardens; William Scott and William F. Kasting, of Buffalo; John Rudy, gardener for Senator Fassett, of Elmira, and George Bayer, of Toledo.

This kind of effort is very important from the standpoint of the student, in that it brings him in with the intimate acquaintance with the characteristics and qualities of the individual varieties. The use of the score card causes him to analyze the flower and bring to his notice the weak and strong points.

It is gratifying to note that the florists at large are manifesting a spirit of interest and coöperation in the educational phases of floriculture. There is a splendid opportunity for effective continued work by the experiment station and the florist. May it be promoted in this manner more fully in the future than in the past.

SOUTHERN MUMS.

The accompanying illustration shows Jerome Jones chrysanthemum as grown by H. J. Venn, at Mobile, Ala. A comparison of the size of the bloom with the plants and the surroundings shows that the success with the crop was a notable one, considering that they were grown outdoors for the whole period and without any protection whatever. Mr. Venn writes as follows:

"I planted Jerome Jones, Mrs. H. W. Robinson and W. Duckham the first week in June, and the first of July gave them a mulch of old cow manure, and the latter part of July I gave them a good dressing of bone meal, as I thought the stems looked rather weak. I took the bud of Robinson August 15, Jones and Duckham, September 1, and as at that time I noticed the roots were on the surface, I gave them another mulching to keep the roots from burning, as they were planted in the full sun and in the sun here in August means some hot.

Green fly troubled me some on the start, but a few sprayings of tobacco water got rid of them. The heavy rains we had here in October ruined nearly all of Robinson and about twenty-five of Duckham, but I did not lose one of Jones. You will notice they are leafed right up to the flower, and the leaves are of a dark green color, making a great contrast with the pure white of the flower.

"I shall not try growing them in the open again without a shelter to put over them after the bud is taken, as our heavy rains we get here make it too risky."

MAYOR WEAVER.

Nathan Smith & Son exhibited a fine bright rose pink seedling chrysanthemum at Philadelphia on the day that Mayor Weaver drove his opponents to cover in the November election, and made a hit by naming the variety for the city's executive. It is a cross of Mme. Perrin and A. J. Balfour and an improvement both in color and size. It is perfectly double from either bud, but larger and better flowers are produced from crown buds taken August 30 to September 5. It easily attains a diameter of seven inches and height of four to four and one-half feet. The stiff Perrin stem is well clothed with heavy foliage to the flower, which is a loose Japanese incurved of a bright rose pink color with glistening lighter reverse. It equals either parent in substance. Its season is November 1 to 5. Owing to a misfortune in transit, Smith & Son were unable to present suitable blooms to the C. S. A. committee for certification. The variety was shown at Chicago November 10, and received the certificate of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, scoring 88 points.

BREITMEYER'S OPENING.

In the opening of the new store of John Breitmeyer's Sons, in their own new building, itself the most modern in Detroit, the public will find one of the most elaborate and complete flower stores in this country. The store proper, which is about 50x75 feet, with lofty ceiling, has been designed in the classic style of an early Italian period. The floor is of white Italian marble, mosaic finished, with a small Grecian key border in black and yellow marble. The entire room is wainscoted to a height of about five feet with Paonazzo marble. The walls from the top of the wainscoting to the cornice are finished with large French mirror plates, finished with a frame of Roman gold.

Ledges to support cut glass vases and antique pottery jardinières filled with flowers and plants are made of the same marble and follow the top line of the wainscoting. The ceiling, which is divided into large panels by heavily ornamented beams, is richly frescoed in deep blue, representing the Italian sky. Four columns of Verde antique marble support the beams of the ceiling and are finished with rich capitals in antique Roman gold.

In the east end of the store is the rose room, which will be cooled by a cold air device, thereby doing away with the mess usually made in handling ice. This room is constructed entirely of plate glass and mirrors, with marble tables to hold the ornamental vases of roses. Above the rose room is a small balcony provided for an orchestra.

The north end of the room is devoted to the office, wrapping table, ribbon case and a handsome rosewood case containing customers' cards.

In another corner of this beautiful store, we find an old Carrara marble fountain, brought from Florence. It is beautifully sculptured, with three basins, and being plainly visible from the street, it can be used to very good advantage for displaying a variety of flowers.

All the furnishings of the room, including large tables and benches, is of classic design, well sculptured in Carrara marble, with heavy Verde antique marble tops. This furniture was all carved in Florence, Italy, under direction of Signor Nenciollini, one of Florence's finest sculptors.

Great attention has also been given to the scheme of lighting. The main chandelier suspended from the center panel in the ceiling is of Roman gold and crystal and is copied from one of the chandeliers in an ancient Italian palace. The side lights are also of rich ornamental bronze and Roman gold, finished with rich crystal prisms.

The basement under the store is devoted to workroom, storage, ice box, potting bench, etc. To make a long story short, the whole building is certainly a grand monument to the trade.

The store was opened to the public, with due formality, on Tuesday, December 12, but engraved invitations were sent out to the trade for an inspection on Monday evening, which brought out not only all Detroit florists, but many from a distance. The Breitmeyer brand of hospitality is well known, and the guests had full opportunity to inspect this wonderful store. There could be no question as to the verdict. The many nice things they said to the proprietors were not flattery, being well merited. Among the out-of-town visitors were Messrs. Smith and Fetters and J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland; Henry Smith and Eli Cross, of Grand Rapids; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati; G. A. Heintz, of Toledo, and many others from near-by towns.

Smith & Fetters sent two novel attractions in the shape of a hat and corsage bouquet, the main part being a head of kale trimmed with orchids, valley, violets, etc.

B. Schroeter sent a vase of his rose pink sport of Enchantress.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent a fine vase of Sunrise roses.

J. A. Peterson sent a specimen plant of Gloire de Lorraine begonia and also a fine plant of the white variety, Turnford Hall.

Harry Bunyard sent a silver horseshoe.

A TANTALIZING ADDRESS.

[Delivered to Edward Neville on the occasion of his assuming the office of President of the Germantown Horticultural Society for the eighth time.]

I have been asked, Mr. President, by the executive committee, to say a few words to you on this occasion. It is seven years since three members of this committee waited on you to ask you to accept the highest office in the gift of the Germantown Horticultural Society. They poured broadside after broadside of argument upon you, without effect, until, happily, one of them urged that they wanted a president who would preside, not a mere figurehead. This argument, Mr. President, proved effective, and you have filled the office since that time with honor to the society and credit to yourself.

Seven years! This recalls a curious custom among our progressive neighbors, the Japanese. In Japan the marriage contract lasts for exactly seven years. At the expiration of that time the woman is free to marry another man. The man is also free to marry another woman, or they may remarry for another seven years.

Seven years! Have you ever asked yourself the question, Mr. President,

"Am I the best man to occupy the chair of this society?"

Have you thought of the bright blue eye and the kindly smile of the senior vice-president, how they would light with pleasure were he asked to sit in the chair which you now fill? Have you asked yourself the question, Mr. President, "Am I a better man than Charles J. Wister?"

Have you thought of the second vice-president; of how well the experience gained over the unruly coolies of India would fit him to rule over our turbulent meetings? Have you asked yourself the question, Mr. President, "Am I a better man than the Rev. Francis Heyl?"

Have you thought of the junior vice-president, with what wild joy he would discover a new Asplenium Ebenoides, were he asked to take your place? Have you asked yourself the question, Mr. President, "Am I a better man than Edwin C. Jellett?"

Have you thought of the secretary and treasurer, with what pride he would send out the society's notices with the words, "President, secretary and treasurer of the Germantown Horticultural Society," printed under his name? Have you asked yourself the question, Mr. President, "Am I a better man than George Redles?"

Have you thought of N. Dubois Miller, with his vast legal knowledge? Of C. S. Wertsner, with his world-encompassing business experience? Of Frank Miles Day, with his great knowledge of landscape architecture and gardens of old? Of S. Mendelson Meehan, with his executive experience gained in managing a department of the corporation that bears his father's name? Of John F. Sibson, who rules over the McKean estate with power as autocratic as that of the czar himself? Of Albert Woltemate, with his martial bearing? Of Peter McGowan, with his wonderful new greenhouse? Have you asked yourself the question, Mr. President, "Am I a better man than each and all of these?"

I do not know, Mr. President, whether you have asked yourself these questions, or whether you have given the matter any thought, but we have, and we feel that much as we value every one of these and many other members, there is not one of them whom we would wish to see in your place. We fully appreciate the sacrifice that you have made to attend our meetings regularly, and the ability which you have displayed in presiding over them. As a small token of our esteem we wish you to accept this bouquet of floral gems (handing him a bunch of fancy carnations) in which we have been careful to place a few blossoms of Prosperity.

President Neville was unable to find words with which to respond.

SAMUEL HENSHAW.

The last of thirteen, three score years and ten, and good for many years to come, Samuel Henshaw is a well preserved and interesting personality. At a notable dinner not a score of years ago thirteen of the leading lights of the horticulture of that day sat down. They were all men who left their impress on the trade and indeed on all time. Peter Henderson was one, founder of the business which bears his name. Another was John Henderson, his brother, of Flushing, L. I.; James Taplin, whose brother at Detroit is one of the oldest florists; James Murkland, with Wm. Elliott for many years, and Wm. Elliott himself, the head of the Dey street seed house now continued on Fulton street by his sons; Wm. Davidson, with Peter Henderson, who assisted in the completion of the Dictionary of Gardening; Wm. Bennett, of Flatbush; Thos. Tate, of Staten Island; Water Reid, the wholesale florist; Isaac Buchanan, the first of the Astoria growers; Wm. Wilson, of Astoria, and W. S. Cottam, the landscape architect, of Yonkers; these were present with Mr. Henshaw that night and all are gone save "the youngest man of his generation," whose temperate living and sunny nature have caused him to grow youthful in spirit while he is growing old in years.

Samuel Henshaw.

Samuel Henshaw was born at Manchester, England, nearly eighty years ago and learned his gardening under his father, one of the thorough plantsmen of that day. He came to America in 1868 with a ripe experience, taking charge of the Green estate on Staten Island, where he remained for twenty-one years. In 1890 he began his work as a landscape gardener, spending five years in the development of the New York

Wreath of Boxwood Sprays.

Botanical Garden. He laid out the grounds of the new Columbia University and in doing so safely moved two English yews over 100 years old, with balls of earth each weighing fifty-five tons. These now occupy the court of honor in front of Low Library. Mr. Henshaw laid out many of the fine estates near New York and some in other sections, and is now retired, living on Staten Island close to the scene of his early labors and in the enjoyment of a green old age with the conveniences of a well earned competence. He is in touch with everything horticultural, a constant attendant at the meetings and exhibitions of the American Institute, and a great traveler, only recently having visited Europe and the West Indies.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

BOXWOOD WREATHS.

Boxwood has come into favor with many of the leading retail florists and is used in large quantities by some who have reputations for turning out work of the very highest character. It is used for all sorts of purposes; its dark green rich foliage combines nicely with almost any flower, and it is used for filling in baskets and boxes of flowers as well as in making up designs. A leading Chicago retailer sends out many wreaths made entirely of boxwood, with a ribbon, and others in which flowers are used, principally at the point of attaching a ribbon.

The accompanying illustration is a wreath made by a Pittsburg retailer. He used in it three pounds of boxwood sprays at 15 cents per pound. It took thirty minutes' time, for which he charged 50 cents; two yards of ribbon at 25 cents per yard, an 18-inch wire frame costing 20 cents, and 25 cents' worth of tin foil, moss and twine. The wreath then stood him $1.90 and he sold it for $8. A decoration of flowers with the ribbon would add much to its appearance and would increase the cost accordingly.

Boxwood sprays have become a very popular decorative evergreen for Christmas and its use for work, such as wreaths for cemetery purposes, is being rapidly extended. It is very enduring and stands the atmospheric conditions and exposure outdoors longer than any other green. It is used largely with immortelles in balls, wreaths and garlands for home and ball room decorations. Combined with statice, boxwood is especially effective, and the ingenuity of any practical cut flower worker will suggest many other combinations which will make boxwood a source of profit.

The boxwood sprays come from Virginia and are usually shipped in barrels or boxes. The eastern trade was the first to handle them, at 18 cents per pound, which left only a fair margin of profit, but when leading western retailers wanted supplies the eastern wholesalers thought that any money taken out of the western communities was pure profit and they made the price 15 cents per pound on good-size orders. This has established the rate which now prevails in Pittsburg, Chicago and other western centers. It leaves the wholesaler not much for his trouble.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has been good the past week. Bright weather served to assist in advancing stock, but production has been checked this week by return to lower temperature, or is it that the growers have an intimation that Christmas is coming? At any rate receipts are lighter. Funeral work and decorating keeps local retailers on the jump and shipping trade has improved materially since the chrysanthemums have been used up.

The Beauty crops are in excellent shape. Supplies are large and stock was never finer. Stem and foliage are strong, buds large and color at its best. There has been something of a let-down in the quality of tea roses. A large part of the receipts are now grading soft, short or weak-stemmed, but there are a few magnificent flowers to be had. Chateau is in superb form. Red roses are not in large supply for the growers are doing what they can toward holding back for the Christmas demand.

The carnation market is again fairly active on reduced receipts. Quality is no cause for complaint, but white stock is not moving as rapidly as the growers would like to see just before the holidays. The flood of violets has subsided but values are not what they have been in previous years.

There continues to be a good demand for Harrisii and callas, of which the supply is not large, but Romans and especially Paper Whites are abundant and selling at low prices. Very good Paper Whites are seen. Stevia is in large supply and selling well because everyone is using it for filling. Good mignonette is scarce but there are quantities of poorer stock. A few sweet peas are seen and a little bouvardia. There is no change in the situation as to greens.

Christmas Prospects.

Christmas price lists indicate a consensus of opinion that the holiday market will not be far different from its predecessors. Not reflected in many price lists is a feeling that Beauties will be exceptionally abundant this year. Crops are now large and the big growers say there is no prospect of diminution. Red roses will, of course, be very much short of the demand. Brides and Maids will not be in full crop, but there will be enough except of the special fancy stock. This always sells quickly. The special fancy grade is not mentioned in most price lists for the reason that the city retailers will take all that is offered at prices above what the out-of-town buyers will pay. Carnation crops promise to be large and probably enough for all orders except those calling for red and special fancy Enchantress, etc. These are the staple items. The miscellaneous stock will be in large supply and in the price lists is not advanced appreciably over present values.

Wise growers will not hold back stock. The market is sure to be strong for a week before Christmas. Stale stock cannot go out on shipping orders and will only serve to break the market. Keep the stock coming and it will realize good values right through.

A Thanksgiving Story.

Four or five days before Thanksgiving there was an excellent demand for carnations, and light receipts. A certain commission man sent to one of his growers one evening for 1,000 carnations to fill an order at $3 per hundred. The grower refused to let him have them, remarking to the messenger that carnations would be "worth a whole lot more money in a couple of days." The day before Thanksgiving that grower sent in 6,000 carnations and he was exceedingly lucky that his returns averaged $1.80. Moral: Apply it to Christmas.

Various Notes.

There was a meeting of flower show committees at the office of the Benthely-Coatsworth Co. on December 12 at which accounts were audited and affairs wound up. While it has been found to be not a cheap proposition to run a show of this magnitude, the financial result is very satisfactory and leaves a nice nest-egg for next year.

Chrysanthemums are pretty well out of the market, but the A. L. Randall Co. has a grower who is coming in with a nice crop of Christmas Eve for Christmas.

Louis Dreher, at Deerfield, Ill., is sending in a nice lot of single violets, but they are not netting him anything like the returns they did last year. It is the general experience of all violet growers.

At the funeral of John V. Kopf, December 6, there was one of the largest floral displays ever seen in the city. He was a politician and died as the result of an election brawl. The west side retailers nearly all shared in the work.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting some very nice La Detroit and are almost the only ones growing this rose here.

John Sinner says the success of Christmas does not depend nearly so much on how high the price goes on extra fancy stock as it does on what market there is for short roses and such items as Paper Whites and callas. The fancy stock always sells.

E. H. Hunt's people are pleased to report that the worst of the rush on supplies is over; nearly all orders out.

M. G. Holding, who has been nineteen years with the Sprague, Smith Co. and who has sold millions of feet of greenhouse glass, has resigned his position to take the management of the Chicago office of the American Window Glass Co.

The Benthely-Coatsworth Co. is getting a cut of special fancy Brides and Bridesmaids similar to the one which came on at this season last year.

Kennicott Bros. Co. had a shipping order for 8,000 carnations last Friday. They filled it.

Baumann & Co. say that they have sold three times as many folding paper Christmas bells this year as last, but the price was considerably reduced.

George Harrer, at Morton Grove, has entirely discontinued growing cut flowers and has his place planted to lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes.

One of the week's visitors was C. A. Schaeffer, of Kansas City. Mr. Schaeffer has recently opened a wholesale cut flower and supply establishment and a new retail store which is one of the best in the west. He now has 17,000 square feet of glass for miscellaneous plants and is having plans made for a range of 500,000 square feet to be erected at Lenexa, Kan., thirteen miles from Kansas City. About 40,000 feet of this range will be put up in the early spring and added to as circumstances require. One of the advantages will be heat by natural gas.

O. W. Frese, at Poehlmann's, says that they have booked several orders for Richmond for Christmas at $6 per dozen.

Some of the stock now going out is intended for Christmas. One buyer asked for shipment December 13 and frankly stated that he expected to hold the stock for his Christmas trade!

Weiland & Risch say that increased demand for Killarney and Wellesley for Christmas is already apparent. As the stock improves these roses grow in popularity.

E. F. Winterson Co. reports increasing demand for boxwood sprays. This is rapidly becoming the popular green.

The Winandy establishment is sending some good roses and carnations to Zech & Mann. A large part of the place is now planted with lettuce.

George Reinberg has hit the market just right with his Beauty crop two years in succession, which not all growers can say.

Peter Reinberg has been having a very fine cut of Richmond roses, and just as it is passing off a big crop of Liberty comes on.

Vaughan & Sperry contemplate enlarging their supply department. They are doing quite a business in Christmas bells, immortelles, etc.

Phil Foley is getting around all right after his recent experience at the hospital and will soon be as hard at work as ever. The firm reports a very satisfactory season in 1905 and much building in sight for 1906.

E. C. Ameling received poinsettias last week and expects large supplies until after the holidays.

Percy Jones says that his growers express themselves as well pleased with the results of the chrysanthemum season; most of his stock was of the medium grade, that sells at $8 to $10 per hundred and moves quickly.

Bert Budlong feels very highly honored by an invitation to contribute an article on flower farming under glass to the forthcoming Cyclopedia of American Agriculture, but says the only literary experience his work has given him has been in signing checks.

A. Dietsch Co. has been granted a patent on a metal strip to prevent ice from forming under and breaking the glass at the gutter.

C. W. McKellar says cattleyas will be in the same class with long Beauties for Christmas, one simoleon each for the best.

Increased coal consumption in November, as compared to a year ago, has caused inquiry as to weather conditions. The mean temperature for November, 1905, was 41 degrees as compared to 43 degrees in 1904 and 39 degrees average for thirty-four years. Of greater importance was wind velocity, which averaged eighteen miles per hour, about one-fifth greater than usual. The prevailing direction was southwest.

Club meeting tonight. President-elect Hauswirth and his staff will take hold.

DATE OF EASTER.

Easter of 1906 falls on April 15, eight days earlier than in 1905.

If we could get as much return for every dollar we spend as we get for the one which pays for fifty-two visits of the REVIEW, we would have been rich long ago.—NICK GREIVELDING, Merrill, Wis.

NOTE.

"Special" Stock billed accordingly.

We shall have large supplies

For Christmas

No doubt of that. We shall have large cut of Beauty of extra good quality. Our Tea Roses are in splendid form. We have plenty Brides, Maids, Gates and Chatenay. The special Christmas call for red will make Richmond and Liberty a scarce item. Our Carnations will be in full crop and the finest stock we ever shipped; our Enchantress have been the finest in town this fall and we shall have them still better for Christmas. Fancy home-grown California Violets and the cream of the Hudson River doubles. Also large supplies of the miscellaneous items, as Poinsettias, Stevia, Romans, Paper Whites, Mignonette, Callas, Harrisii, etc. Plenty Green Goods as always.

We urge early correspondence; give us your order for what you think you will need and if you find yourself running short write or wire additional orders; if seasonable flowers are to be had in Chicago, they are to be had at Amling's.

ANGELUS CHRISTMAS BELLS

Patented

COPYRIGHTED

NO BETTER BELL CAN BE MADE AT ANY PRICE, AND THE PRICE IS REASONABLE.

Angelus and Alpha Bells are made in 2½, 5, 6, 7, 9, 12 and 15-inch sizes. For the convenience of those who want to sell these Bells we will mail a 2½-inch Angelus Bell for 30 cents, and a 2½-inch Alpha Bell for 20 cents. Price lists on application.

We do not believe there is a town, however small, where a good business cannot be done with these bells.

COPYRIGHTED

In reply to many inquiries, we wish to state that we do not manufacture paper bells, and do not intend to do so. We find they are utterly unsatisfactory; they accumulate dust and dirt to an incredible degree and lose their shape so that they soon lose all semblance to the shape of a bell. They satisfy neither buyer nor seller. They may be all right for 5 and 10-cent stores, where they are found in profusion, but not for florists. They are all played out with florists in the east, and will soon be played out in the west.

Alpha Christmas Bells

A medium priced Bell, but as good as the best as has ever been put on the market. Perfect and graceful in shape, bright and attractive in color. They are strongly and firmly made—easily handled—no chance for breakage.

SWEET PEAS.

I wish to plant some sweet peas out of 2½-inch pots. How far apart should they be planted and how may they best be supported? S. T. D.

These peas, if planted on a table or raised bench, would be about right if planted in rows one foot apart and eight inches between plants in the row. If solid beds are used the distances should be sixteen inches between rows and one foot between plants.

Of course a good deal depends on the quality of the soil whether the plants produce a luxuriant growth of straw. The best results are obtained from rather poor, sandy soil, which will stand considerable feeding after the buds begin to appear.

Good supports can be made from wire chicken netting of from 3-inch to 5-inch mesh, or the supports can be made of No. 16 galvanized wire stretched on stakes and the straw trained within the lines.

R.

THE CONTRACT SYSTEM.

In his report as Colorado state vice-president of the S. A. F., J. A. Valentine, of Denver, said:

"The disposition to rely upon contracts between growers and retailers, providing for the disposal of the entire output for the season still continues, and this has prevented throwing any considerable amount of surplus stock upon the market, so that prices have kept remarkably steady. The prices obtained are never high as compared with the highest prices obtained in some of the large eastern cities; but on the other hand, there have never been any times when stock has been sold at the extremely low figures which have prevailed at these points. This condition undoubtedly injures to the advantage of both retailer and grower, but it is doubtful whether the contract system could ever be so generally adopted as to produce the same beneficial results in cities that do a tremendous wholesale business."

THE IDEAL SALESMAN.

[The following, by John P. Risch, is the shortest essay in the prize contest recently conducted by the Review's Philadelphia correspondent; it has the meat in a nutshell.]

Below, briefly stated, I give what in my opinion constitutes the ideal salesman:

First.—He must be courteous, have a "Nice day" for everybody and always leave his customer smiling.

Second.—Nothing should be a trouble that will help to serve a customer. He must be ever ready to answer questions, lend ear to all the customer has to say and appear deeply interested, and by all means, should never show signs of becoming aggravated.

Third.—The secret of success in the ideal salesman is giving the customer what he wants, the way he wants it and when he wants it. Close doesn't count; he has to give him exactly what he wants. No matter how close he comes to it, if he doesn't do it, he is as badly off as if he didn't try.

Fourth.—He must be truthful. The ideal salesman must, in order to win and hold his trade, be truthful and never misrepresent to the customer. His confidence is what he needs, for when this is gone all is lost.

More might be said, but I am of the opinion that by adhering strictly to the above four rules, you have the ideal salesman.

BUFFALO.

Weather and Trade.

Some real winter, particularly dark days, and the exit of chrysanthemums has made the demand for roses and carnations much greater, as well as enhanced the value. It is remarkable how few carnations you can pick, even from benches that are very promising, when you have only seven or eight hours' daylight and that a leaden sky. The expanding of the petals is very slow and the thousands you expect to pick next Friday are sure to dwindle into hundreds. This is the month that all nature feels like hibernating. We do ourselves. Kings may enjoy an auto ride over the snow. Give me a favorable location about three feet from a good stove and I will be content. A member of our family has heard recently from a young man who has just settled on a ranch in southern California, only seven miles from the Mexican line. There may be little winter there, but in the summer Hades must be cold storage compared to it, but the news I got was that Jack and his fellow ranchman sat on the stoop Thanksgiving day and basked in the sun. My answer was, "Yes, but he did not enjoy it half as much as I did coming in just now out of the cold and now basking before this fire." So there is a recompense wherever you are. The young lady born and reared in Ceylon thinks it is the ideal climate and so does

A Square Deal.

Like President Roosevelt we believe in a square deal for everybody. No matter how little or how much a florist buys from us we intend to and do give every order our individual careful attention.

Yours for a square deal, the man from the neighborhood of the North Pole, and this is not only as it should be, but as it must be, for if we all crowded to some favored zone we should soon eat each other up. Yet I do grumble at the little amount of sunlight which our city and locality receive. If you can grow roses and carnations profitably here you need be in no fear of success in any other city.

Various Notes.

There have been a few business changes of late. C. D. Zimmerman has sold his store and business on West Chippewa street to Werrick Bros., of Pine Ridge. Mr. Zimmerman has greenhouses and salesroom in the midst of the residence district of the west side.

The Byrne Bros. are about to vacate their store on Main street and will locate at the junction of West Chippewa and Delaware avenue. This should be a splendid location for a florist. They will also open a store on Connecticut street.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Clear, cool, pleasant weather and holiday demand proved strong stimulants to trade in the cut flower business the past week. Stock at the commission houses is plentiful, of good quality and the demand strong for almost everything, with prices reasonable for this time of the year. Shipping trade at all the commission houses is good. With the good demand, both local and shipping, there is still enough stock left over for afternoon sales. In retail circles the trade has been very busy all of the past week, mostly with funeral orders calling for many large and costly pieces, especially those on December 8 for the funeral of Wm. H. Thompson, president of one of the largest banks and treasurer of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

Already the down-town stores are being decorated with ground pine, holly and bells for the holidays. Ground pine is reported very scarce and quotations at the commission houses are $12 per hundred pounds. The holly that has arrived is good and at the regular price.

In looking over the stock at the wholesale houses Monday morning we found some extra fine Richmond, Killarney, Chatenay, Bride and Maid, also plenty of Short Beauties, but only a limited number of long.

Chrysanthemums are over for this season. A few Jerome Jones are in. Carnations are of extra fine quality. Henry Baer's stock from Peoria, Ill., deserves special mention. Special sorts are up to $5 and nothing is sold under $2 per hundred. Among the best seen are Nelson Fisher, Enchantress Lawson, Lady Bountiful and Cardinal.

Violets were also quite plentiful last week and prices went down to 50 cents per hundred on Californias. These are of very fine quality and extra long in stem. The bulk of them are from Kirkwood. Valley, Romans and Paper Whites had a splendid call all week. Callas and Harrisii are scarce and in demand. All greens are plentiful, especially good smilax.

Various Notes.

A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, called on Saturday and reports that the company will add 15,000 feet of glass to its plant. E. W. Guy, also of Belleville, was over on Friday of last week buying supplies. He reports good business, with plenty of funeral work the past week.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., who is the western headquarters for Richmond, Killarney and Baby Rambler, reports good orders for them. Mr. Ammann's cut stock in these and Rosalind Orr English is in good demand at Kuehn's.

Fred Foster has gone into the livery business, having leased the Palace stables, Garrison and Olive streets. He will continue in the florists' business.

Pilcher & Burrows, commission brokers, report a big week in all kinds of supplies for growers and retailers.

The Reissen Floral Co., on South Broadway, had several large decorations the past week. Trade in general is reported good by them.

A. Jablonsky, out at Wellston, had a fine lot of blooming plants ready for Christmas. His Gloire de Lorraine begonias are exceptionally fine this year. Most of the stock is already marked sold.

John Connon, at Webster Groves, is using most of his stock at home. He had a busy week in wedding and funeral work. With the assistance of his brother, Charlie, he got through nicely.

Max Rotter, on North Broadway, reports trade tip top in all lines. He has a nice place and carries a choice stock of flowers.

Meinhardt & Dierkies will soon move into their new location, a few doors east of their present store. They expect to be all ready for Christmas.

Miss Badaracco had a big run of funeral work the past week. She is noted for a clever artist in this line.

Conrad Bergesterman, who recently opened a new place at the corner of Grand avenue and Arsenal street, has one of the best stores in that neighborhood. He should do well, as the location is good.

Emil Schray and his family have moved into their new residence across the way from their place, which was recently finished.

J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is continuing right fair. Though there is usually something of a let-up in the demand just before the holidays, this year seems to be an exception, and the report from all sides is very good. Numerous social functions, banquets, etc., have used up large quantities of flowers, wild smilax and other greens, and the demand for funeral work is good.

The supply of stock is just about equal to the demand in most lines. Roses are perhaps in heaviest supply, but there has been no surplus. Red roses are scarce, as is usual. Carnations are scarcely equal to the demand, but still there are few orders which cannot be filled. Mums are almost gone. Some few are still to be seen here and there, but it is hard to be sure of filling an order for any special color. Violets are coming in larger supply and they sell out almost at sight. Some very good narcissi are to be had. Lilies of all kinds sell well and are not very plentiful.

Club Meeting.

A most enthusiastic meeting of the Florists' Society was held last Saturday night and there was an unusually large number of members present. Our flower show committee reports that from a financial point of view our shows will be a success. It was decided that special efforts be made to make our February rose show a fine one this year, and all growers of roses were extended a hearty invitation to send exhibits. The growers of new varieties are especially requested to stage blooms.

Our Florists' Supply Department, Jan. 1, 1906

L. A. Tonner, who will have charge of this department and who is so well known to all the florists of the west as an experienced judge and careful buyer of florists' supplies, is now in the east visiting the manufacturers and selecting the goods for this department, which we open January 1, 1906. It will pay you to hold your order for our new and carefully selected stock.

A. L. RANDALL CO., 19-21 Randolph St., CHICAGO

R. Witterstaetter had on exhibition for the society's certificate a vase of his new carnation, Aristocrat. It was in especially fine form and the committee, B. P. Critchell and E. G. Gillett, who passed upon it, recommended that if it scored equally well at our March meeting, it be given a certificate.

After the regular routine of business was over the society went into the discussion of ways and means of booming the florists' industry in this city. Everyone present had some ideas on the subject and at our next meeting, in January, action will be taken along the most approved lines. One of the most favorably talked of plans was that of giving a big banquet on the night of our annual carnation show, which falls upon March 10 next year. Invitations will be sent out to florists of all cities within reach and a hearty welcome will be given all comers. They will have an opportunity of viewing our carnation show, also of seeing some of our greenhouse plants and learning some of the possibilities of the flower trade in this city. At our next meeting the matter will be gone over more carefully and action will be taken.

Various Notes.

Wm. Murphy is quite a different-looking fellow now, and unless you look close you may pass him by. It is all caused by shaving off his mustache.

Visitors are James Hartshorne and Mr. Jensen, of Joliet, Ill., who were taking a look at the productions of our carnation breeders; Chas. Dieterich, of Maysville, Ky., and Miss White, of Lexington, Ky., both buying Christmas supplies. C. J. OHMER.

THE REVIEW will send Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual on receipt of 25 cents.

SHARON, PA.—Fred W. Heinz, manager of the Heinz Greenhouses, added a house 12x75 for bedding plants.

MISHAWAKA, IND.—C. L. Powell has a window in a down-town candy store for the display and sale of his stock.

VICTORY

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market is fairly active this week. Prices have advanced. Beauties, choice tea roses and carnations of all kinds are higher than one week ago. Violets are plentiful, at times the supply being in excess of the demand. Other flowers, with the possible exception of bouvardia, are about the same. The number of sprays in the bunches of asparagus is decreasing, a sure sign of winter. Some choice smilax is bringing more than the listed prices.

Christmas Prospects.

There is always a decided difference of opinion, a fortnight before Christmas, as to just how heavy the crops will be at the holidays. Owing to the fine fall, with so much bright, sunny weather towards the end of November, it is not unreasonable to believe that good flowers will be scarce two weeks hence. Leo Niessen, however, who has made a careful study of conditions, confidently predicts that choice stock, especially carnations, will be plentiful. He believes that many of the leading growers have their crops so well timed that they will be at their height just when needed. All the authorities agree that the demand will be very heavy this season. It may be of interest to out-of-town buyers to know that poinsettias and Beauties will be fairly plentiful, while red carnations will not.

A Handsome Decoration.

Pennock Bros. had a decoration of more than usual interest last week. The furniture throughout the house was of mahogany, the walls being dark. American Beauty roses were used exclusively; a bank of these roses was arranged as a background for the hostess in the reception room. On the mantel was a silver loving cup filled with Beauties. On each side of the loving cup were hats filled with the same flower. Opposite were a hamper and two handsome vases of this finest of roses. The center of the dining-table was ornamented with a tall cut glass vase containing fifty long-stemmed Beauties. This vase stood on a mirror bordered with a festoon of Adiantum Farleyense. Other vases of Beauties were used throughout the house. The effect was greatly admired. The work was by Chas. W. Kahlert and Samuel Dunlap.

The P. C. Co.

Through the courtesy of Robert Crawford, Jr., Phil was enabled to see the modern plant of the Philadelphia Carnation Co., at Secane, this week. There are two houses, 30x204, with a north-side propagating house running the entire length. Another house, 25x75, is planted with sweet peas principally, the back walk being filled with a variety of plants intended for Easter flowering. The houses are very high, light and airy, open between. Each contains eight raised benches filled entirely with carnations. The stock was in healthy condition, the varieties being evidently selected with a view to securing free flowering rather than fancy sorts.

Queen Louise is the best white, being grown in quantity. Boston Market is also favored. A few Vesper are grown, but it will be dropped. Fair Maid occupies the same place among the pinks that is held by Queen Louise in the whites. Joost, Lawson, and Mrs. James Dean, the last named a very late variety, are also grown. Enchantress is also grown, but, though healthy, is not quite at its best under the cool treatment on which the others thrive. In crimson, Harry Fenn is better than Roosevelt. In scarlet, Crane is grown. The crimsons and scarlets combined hardly amount to six per cent of the total number, Mr. Crawford believing that first white and then pink are the carnation colors par excellence.

Mont Blanc, white, and Extra Early Blanche Ferry, pink, are the sweet peas grown. The latter are now producing flowers, but Mont Blanc is not yet in bloom.

A house 130 feet long, perfectly dark, contains four rows and four tiers full of mushrooms. About forty pounds are being picked daily at present. The beds appeared in very promising condition. The place is heated by steam, two return tubular boilers being used.

Harry Crawford is the grower in charge. The healthy condition of the stock and perfect cleanliness of the place speak well for his good management. Berger Bros. get much of the clip.

Various Notes.

Wm. E. McKissick is distributing a very fine lot of Lawson carnations. This variety is not doing as well as in past seasons with many growers.

James M. Thoires, of Camden, N. J., has increased his business until it covers pretty much all of southern New Jersey. He has many orders in Atlantic City, Burlington and other towns, while in Camden he facile princeps.

The Germantown Horticultural Society re-elected Edward Neville president; Charles J. Wister, Rev. Francis Heyl, and Edwin C. Jellett, vice-presidents; George Redles, secretary and treasurer, at their December meeting on last Monday.

Theo. Edwards, of Bridgeton, N. J., is again to the fore, this time with nicely grown Paper White narcissi, which are seen at Wm. J. Baker's. M. J. Brinton, of Christiana, Pa., is sending fine stevia and smilax to the same house.

There are still a few very fine chrysanthemums about. Berger Bros. had some Eatons on Saturday that were worth seeing.

A Hallow-e'en Episode.—The florist's boy was trying to reach a door-bell after a hard day's work. The bishop seeing him, and, crossing the street: "Little boy, let me ring that bell for you." He does so. Florist's boy: "Now, run like h—."

The Henry F. Mitchell Co. is doing a great business in Christmas greens. The store is beautifully decorated with holiday specialties.

M. Rice & Co. report receiving many excellent duplicate orders.

Wm. Feast, of Baltimore, was in town on Monday.

Alfred Burton is sending some fine Liberty roses to the Flower Market.

PHIL.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been exceedingly brisk the past week. Chrysanthemums being about on their last notch, roses and carnations are in very big demand. The latter are bringing a very good price at present. Some very large eastern violets are finding their way into this market. They are of good color, but have no fragrance. Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are coming in very handy for funeral work.

Ladies' Night.

Although Wednesday evening, December 6, was the club's meeting night, business was entirely suspended, the whole evening being given over to a dance and musical at Harmonie hall. A vote of thanks is due Wm. Brown, chairman of the entertainment committee, as never in the history of the club did its members and their friends spend a more enjoyable evening. Through the aid of Mrs. Wm. Dilger, a number of very clever entertainers were secured, whose singing, speaking and playing was greeted with loud applause.

It is these little social affairs that get the florists and their families better acquainted with one another, thereby doing away with much of that feeling of jealousy so often existing among business competitors.

Various Notes.

Andrew Rudolph, one of Breitmeyer's staff, was struck by a suburban car Sunday afternoon, receiving a fracture of the skull, dying within a few hours.

J. F. Sullivan is laid up with a bad cold, but at last reports was rapidly getting well.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

The final meeting of the New York Florists' Club for 1905 was held on Monday evening, December 11, President Traendly in the chair. Over 100 members were present and every seat was taken. Seldom has such interest and enthusiasm been displayed. It was a fitting close to one of the most successful years in the organization's history. Resolutions of sympathy were read on the death of William Ghormley. Five gentlemen were elected to membership and six propositions were read by the secretary. The resignation of David Gindra was accepted with regret.

The committee on awards reported as follows: Herman Maenner, of Maspeth, L. I., twelve cyclamen, certificate of merit; Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., collection of orchids, cultural certificate; F. Boulon & Son, Sea Cliff, L. I., pink sport from Mrs. Thos. Lawson, judgment suspended until committee sees it growing; Cottage Gardens, Carnation Alma Ward, white seedling No. 569, pink, and Robert Craig, already passed upon, judgment suspended; E. L. Engreen, Aqueduct, L. I., seedling carnations, judgment suspended; F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, Carnation Helen Gould and White Enchantress, judgment suspended. The exhibit was most interesting and creditable and added greatly to the interest of the evening. F. Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, was present with a sample pipe tongs.

The election of officers for 1906 proceeded and the contest for several of the offices was close, but harmony prevailed. Unanimous endorsement was given and all ended "merry as a marriage bell." For president John Scott had practically no opposition, Mr. Totty retiring in his favor. J. H. Pepper ran neck and neck with Mr. Kuehne and Mr. Weathered with Mr. Wheeler, Messrs. Pepper and Weathered winning out. For secretary John Young had his usual walk-over and Messrs. Birnie, Totty and Julius Roehrs, Jr., secured the trusteeships with something to spare. Owing to Mr. Scott's election to the presidency he resigned his office as trustee and a new election for the position will be held at the January meeting. The club was never more prosperous than at present and under the new regime a continuation of its progress is anticipated. President Traendly retires from his two years' tenure of office with an enviable record.

A committee was appointed to draw up resolutions on the death of the mother of C. S. Allen, one of the club's members. Mr. O'Mara also read a resolution on the death of John Morris, an ex-member of the club.

Mr. Stewart gave an account of his visit to the flower shows at Kansas City and Chicago and A. J. Guttman read a very interesting paper covering his attendance at the exhibitions in these cities and Indianapolis. He dwelt upon the beauty and extent of these exhibitions in comparison with our own and drew many useful lessons in behalf of further effort on the club's part from his observations while away. He especially referred to the harmony everywhere existing among the craft in every department of horticulture, whereby such great results were made possible, the co-operation of the great newspapers, the lectures and all else that combined to bring about a certain success. A further discussion of the subject was laid over for the January meeting.

The general opinion seemed to be that 1905 has gone out in a blaze of glory to which Mr. Nugent and his turkeys and wet goods added no inconsiderable part.

The new bowling club was formed to meet at the Coogan building, Twenty-sixth street and Sixth avenue, on Tuesday evenings commencing December 26. The dues are $2 monthly, payable in advance, and the following names form the nucleus of what should make a club a credit to the city: P. O'Mara, Wm. Ford, Theo. Lang, F. H. Traendly, W. Mansfield, A. J. Guttman, Lyman Craw, J. A. Pepper, Jos. Manda, Jos. Feurich, B. Hoffmeyer, Phil Kessler and J. A. Shaw.

Various Notes.

Wertheimer & Co. report a great demand for their Christmas bells. They expect to ship re-orders right up to Christmas Eve.

As usual for Christmas the Hinode Co., at Whitestone, have had a wide call for their Japanese plants and gardens. Their azaleas and wistarias are grand stock for the holidays.

Auctions are over for the season. Elliott is well pleased with the change to Fulton street.

Mr. Walker, of Cleary's, has a badly injured hand, the result of a conflict with a Brooklyn trolley on Saturday.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, was in the city on Monday.

Wm. Ford has just returned from a successful four days' gunning trip and his brother is now enjoying a similar outing, evidently laying in a stock of ozone for a strenuous Christmas.

James Hart comes daily from his country home at Madison. He is still shipping goods to customers who have been on his books since he began business, before some of us were born, and looks good for another generation.

Geo. Cotsonas & Co. have some wonderful holly and evergreen wreaths in their windows. Values run up to $50 a dozen!

We hear with regret of the death of Chas. Fremd, the nurseryman of Rye, N. Y., at the age of 72 years. He leaves two sons, who are practical nurserymen and will continue the business.

Alfred Dimmock, of Sanders & Sons, sails on Saturday for England, just in time to have his Christmas turkey in the bosom of his family.

Alex. J. Guttman reports an enormous demand for Victory cuttings, over 200,000 having been already sold.

Charles Millang has again added the big store above his wholesale place to his Christmas conveniences and is devoting the greater part of his conservatories to his cut flower trade, which he says will be this holiday above all other years in his history.

McManus has every preparation made for any possible demand for orchids of all seasonable kinds for the Christmas festivity, not only locally but from about every big city in the Union. Long distance telephone orders are no dream here now. It's a cold day when half a dozen are not received.

George Saltford handles violets grown on his own place, according to his own book.

Gunther has handled a million violets many a Christmas and says 1905 will be no exception to his rule.

Jos. H. Fenrich always has "something to crow about" in the line of superb stock of every kind. Just now he prides himself on a special brand of Richmonds from Totty.

Jos. Leikens sent twelve large wreaths to the Woodbury Kane funeral at Newport, one of valley and orchids being worth $150. Wadley & Smythe had the family order. The pall was of valley and orchids and valley was used almost exclusively. A carload of flowers was sent from New York to Newport.

The march of the debutantes last week made sweet music for many of the retailers. McConnell had thirty of them to care for and some wonderful bouquet creations were sent out.

The Rosary leans to poinsettias this week, its big center window being ablaze with color set off by the beautiful birch bark background.

Siebrecht & Son cut over 15,000 Cattleya labiata from their houses this season. They have the contract for making a fine park covering several blocks for the cathedral of St. John the Divine, over forty men being now employed on the grounds.

David Clarke's Sons are ready for Christmas. Their big store on upper Broadway looks like a vast conservatory now and they are as busy as one need be at the height of the season.

Henry Siebrecht spoke at the Berkeley Lyceum building, 19 West Forty-fourth street, Wednesday evening, December 13, at the regular monthly meeting of the Farmers' Club and horticultural section of the American Institute, on the very appropriate subject of "Christmas Flowers and Decorations." He has been in touch with his subject for over thirty years in this city.

bush last week were Clemence Wocker and Henry Dailedouze. Wocker has a peculiar twist to his ball that would wring any turkey's neck.

Prospects are brighter for the formation of a bowling club in New York, with headquarters in the Coogan building, where excellent alleys can be secured for Tuesday evenings.

Henry Baylis has the sincere sympathy of the trade in the recent loss of his father.

Mrs. C. L. Allen, wife of the veteran seedsman at Floral Park, and mother of Charles H. and W. S. Allen, died of heart failure at her home on Saturday, December 2. All who knew her loved her and her death is a heavy blow to the genial partner of her joys during more than fifty years.

At the age of 70 years John Morris, the unique and sterling character known in the political and gardening interests of this city for nearly half a century, passed away on December 4 from an attack of apoplexy. Ill health caused his retirement from the New York Florists' Club a few months ago. For years he was one of its most active members, filling the office of trustee and always taking part in its discussions and intent as to its welfare and progress. Mr. Morris was a Knight Templar. His florist's business dates back to 1873. His remains were cremated on December 6 at Fresh Pond, L. I.

Another of the old time florists, Wm. Brower, of W. H. Brower's Sons, and for many years at the Twenty-third street corner where the Flatiron building stands, joined the "silent majority" last week and was buried at Plainfield, N. J.

O. V. Zangen, the seedsman of 110 Bloomfield street, Hoboken, reports a splendid season's business extending to every section of the country. His experience in the seed trade in Germany, France, Holland and Switzerland fits him thoroughly for the development of his business here, to all the details of which he gives his personal attention. His office is a model of accuracy in detail and his stock of seeds covers over 500 popular varieties. He was busy shipping out his fall importation of rose stock when I called and has many advance orders for roses and boxwood for edging for spring delivery.

Phil Kessler is making sweet peas, lilies and asparagus his specialties. His father has fully recovered his health.

Moore, Hentz & Nash report the Queen of Edgely popular beyond the supply. Here Henry Hentz displays his knowledge of how to grow American Beauties, and Mr. Moore, with whom Bridesmaid originated, shows that the popular variety is just as vigorous and perfect as when he first gave it to the world. Ilex verticillata can be had here, and John Nash presides over the whole income and output with placidity, urbanity and ceaseless energy as usual. It's a great combination.

Slinn & Thompson are favored in their headquarters on the ground floor of the Coogan building. Here immense shipments of violets, sometimes 100,000, are disposed of daily.

A. L. Young & Co. are doing some unique advertising in calendar and other lines and are very much alive. A. M. Henshaw, who has had much experience with some of the leading wholesalers, has been added to their staff.

Lecakes & Co. have a big force at work on Christmas greens, in addition to the four partners of the firm, and John J. Foley has his hands full with cut flower and office management. Mrs. Foley has just added to John's responsibilities the glory of fatherhood.

Some of John Young's Beauties from the big 701-foot house at Bedford brought 75 cents each last week. The usual display from the carnation factories at Queens is in evidence.

Horace E. Froment enjoyed a few days visiting with his growers last week, Mr. Coyle accompanying him. The new firm has retained the friends so loyal to the late Wm. Ghormley and has added many new names. The old force remains intact in the big store. Mr. Froment is a genial and courteous gentleman, winning friends rapidly and popular with all.

Reed & Keller, with the exception of a few specialties, are completely sold out for Christmas, and with two weeks yet to run. Bells and balls all gone. Same condition prevails in nearly every florists' supply establishment in the city.

John Seligman, on Twenty-sixth street, opposite the Cut Flower Exchange, with his brother as lieutenant, has enjoyed a fine trade during the past year and looks fat and happy.

Frank Millang, Jr., son of the wholesaler in the Coogan building, and a bright boy of 14 years, broke his arm a short time ago while hurdle-jumping.

Kreshover says, "Christmas greens will be at a premium," and he is an authority.

The Parker-Bruen Co. has done a very satisfactory business in 1905 with its carnation and other supports, and proposes to increase the output for 1906.

Traendly & Schenck say: "Our business is averaging $2,000 a week more than at the same date a year ago."

J. K. Allen has not gone into the poultry business. Some roosters have a reason for crowing. Some wholesalers have a good reason for asserting their individuality and progress.

Schloss Bros. report a very good Christmas business. Their holly creations and the violet specialties are especially popular.

Miss Anna Brown, of Wm. Elliott & Sons' office force, died December 2 of spinal meningitis.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

JACKSON, MICH.—A. H. Dew has returned from a trip to Chicago, where he bought Christmas supplies.

SHENANDOAH, PA.—W. G. Payne has removed his flower store from 17 West Oak street to 7 West Lloyd street.

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—D. C. Noble is planning to add either two or three new houses next spring, each 21x150 feet.

DAYTON, OHIO.—H. H. Ritter has opened a downtown store at 23 Ludlow street, with F. W. Ritter, Jr., in charge.

HIGHLAND, ILL.—At 2 o'clock on the morning of December 7 Fred Hollard and family were awakened to find the green-houses in flames. It was a total loss, with no insurance. Mr. Hollard thinks he will not rebuild until spring.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices have held up remarkably well since our last report. The removal of chrysanthemums has relieved the market wonderfully and generally speaking flowers are selling well. Roses do not yet show much of a climbing tendency. Best Beauties bring about $35, select Brides and Maids $6 to $8, with a few specials higher. Chatenay varies from $4 to $12 and is of very good quality. Some very nice Killarney, Wellesley, Richmond, Golden Gate, Morgan and Mrs. Oliver Ames are also seen. Liberty from some growers is extra good, making up to $15 for select stock, a few extras making more money. Smaller grades of roses are still rather slow, but clean up better than a week ago.

Carnations are firm and sell even better than at Thanksgiving. Fancy blooms have been bringing $4 to $5, some going to $6. Whites have been the slowest, running down to $2 and $2.50. Violets average about 75 cents for double and $1 for single. Sweet peas are abundant. While high grades have made $1 to $1.50 per hundred, poorer stock has been hard to sell at 35 cents to 50 cents. Paper Whites, Romans, callas and Easter lilies remain about the same. Chrysanthemums still come from one or two growers, the best making $12. Flowers now run small. Lily of the valley is of unusually good quality. Some poinsettias are seen and make $4 to $5 per dozen bracts. Pansies, cornflowers and wallflowers come from several growers. No particular change in asparagus and adiantum. Supplies are abundant. Smilax promises to be in good demand and rather scarce.

Various Notes.

The establishments of J. T. Butterworth, S. J. Goddard and William Nicholson will be visited on the excursion of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on Saturday, December 16. Special electric leave Park Square, Boston, at 12:30 o'clock, returning from Framingham about 5:30. A large delegation is assured.

At the ladies' night meeting of the club on December 19, in addition to J. K. M. L. Farquhar's illustrated lecture on Japan, there will be singing by the club's double quartet and other attractions. Some interesting exhibits are promised and no member can afford to miss the meeting.

H. M. Robinson & Co.'s Province street establishment is one of the busiest places in Boston at present. The holly received by this enterprising firm is of fine quality. They are having a great sale of boxwood sprays, southern smilax and their other specialties. Their large stand on the street end of the Park street flower market is well patronized.

T. H. Manter is salesman for the Exeter (N. H.) Rose Conservatories at the Park street market and is handling large numbers of fine Chatenay for them.

Kidder Bros.' single violets are of splendid quality this season. They are bunched very artistically and are eagerly snapped up.

Newtonville Greenhouses are handling some very well grown cyclamens and poinsettias.

At Horticultural hall on December 9 Oakes Ames, Sabin Bolton, gardener, received a certificate of merit for Zygo-colax Amesian, an interesting cross between Zygopetalum brachypetalum and Colax jugosa. He also secured a silver medal for Cypripedium tonso Charlesworthi, a form of this cross with extra large flowers showing Charlesworthi blood in the upper portion of the dorsal sepal, the rest of the flower rather closely resembling C. tonsum. A. H. Fewkes showed a very prettily variegated form of the dwarf form of Stevia serrata, quite distinct from other forms we have seen. It was awarded a certificate of merit.

Doyle, on Boylston street, is showing cyclamens and azaleas of fine quality. Roses Wellesley, Liberty, Richmond and Killarney are good sellers here.

Houghton & Clark have their large window filled with ardisias this week, which, being finely berried, make a nice appearance.

Henry Cole has sold out the greenhouses he purchased in July, 1904, at East Bridgewater, Mass., to Nicol Bros. The good will of business, land and stock were included in the transaction, which was a cash one. Andrew Nicol was previously located in Brookline and Woburn, while Alex came from Newport. The greenhouses cover about 12,000 square feet. Mr. Cole has not yet decided where he will locate.

William Walke, of Salem, is handling some excellent cyclamen and Lorraine begonias at the Music hall market.

Four amateur classes for hybrid perpetual roses have been provided for the June show, to be held at Horticultural hall, from the John C. Chaffin fund.

Prizes of $50 and $25 are offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in the new schedule for the best estates of not exceeding three acres. This should especially appeal to the increasing number of amateur cultivators.

The Mycological Club held the annual banquet at the Tuileries Chambers on December 8. Agaricus from both pure culture and milltrack spawn proved the most popular dish. None of the "toadstools" so-called were on the menu card.

The American Beauties now being sent in from Waban Conservatories are very fine. Their Wellesleys are exceptionally good. They are also cutting some splendid Richmond and Killarney.

William Sim's sweet peas are as usual the finest seen in the market and bring top prices. His violets are as good as ever. In addition to Princess of Wales he is marketing some very fine Governor Herrick.

Our first snowstorm of the season came on December 10, much later than usual. It was followed by cold weather, which will materially shorten up the supply of flowers if it continues.

The new officers of the Music hall market are as follows: President, Edward Wood, Lexington; clerk, Wilfred Wheeler, Concord; treasurer, Geo. Ayer; directors, H. A. Stevens, Dedham; John McFarland, North Easton; Robert Montgomery, South Natick; Thomas Capers, Highlandville; Donald Carmichael, Wellesley; N. F. Comley, Lexington.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Refusing offers of $15,000 and upwards for his lease to his quarters in the Universalist building on Main street, John Coombs has won his fight to retain his old quarters and the planned improvements of the Travelers Insurance Company must halt at his store until he is ready to move.

Overtures of every kind were offered Mr. Coombs to induce him to vacate the place at which he had done business for many years. The insurance company had secured the land up to that site and had even purchased the property, thinking that they might easily be able to buy out the one occupant who insisted that he would remain until the expiration of his lease.

Offers of money in increasing amounts were made until the company was convinced that Coombs stood out for his rights under the lease and not for a sum of money. This conclusion once reached, the negotiations were broken off.

The insurance company will erect its new building to the walls of the Universalist church. There the work will stop for two years, when Coombs' lease expires. The insurance company's offices will occupy the building, but the flower store on the ground floor will continue to occupy the place where it has been doing business so long.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The market has been all that could be desired the past week. Stock of all kinds cleared up every day at good prices, with the exception of violets. Pittsburgh never received better violets but they do not go with the same snap that other stock does; job lots have been on the market every day. Chrysanthemums are still hanging on but are looking like a man who has been keeping late hours, a little worse for wear. Carnations are more plentiful and finer every day. Paper Whites and Romans are also more plentiful. Thos. F. Beckert is sending the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. some fine bouvardia, which is a novelty and the first grown in this section for several years.

Ground pine seems scarcer than for several years, but buyers do not care to pay fancy prices, believing that it will come in this week.

Various Notes.

John Walker, of Youngstown, O., stopped in the city Friday on his way east. He goes to New York and Philadelphia.

The Florists' Club's smoker December 5 was a success, thanks to the efforts of President Phil Langhans and his committee. Elegant entertainment was provided. Arthur Love gave one of his original talks, including several very funny stories. The acts of the magicians were up to date, but a very laughable thing was Geo. Blind's efforts to tie the thumbs of one of the magicians and then for him to find that in some way he could separate his hands and replace them without untying George's knots. But the best thing was Geo. Marshall's act. He was dressed in a costume that would make him a fortune if he had the nerve to take it on a stage. What he did to a few hats with the fruit from his egg tree, which he produced in a mystical manner, should have been seen to be appreciated. Card playing was one of the features. Pipes and stogies filled the room with smoke, but did not seem to interfere with the lunch end of the program. Kraut and "Weniers" were the basis, with sandwiches of various kinds to top it off. They had something dark with a white foam that they drew from a keg, and taken all in all it was quite the best thing of the kind the club has ever had and was much better attended than any of the regular meetings.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, is a visitor, looking up Christmas stock.
Hoo-Hoo.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Business the past week, with all dealers, has been very good and stock is first class. Roses are off crop with some growers; consequently a shortage is felt at present, but they all anticipate a good cut for the Christmas trade. Mums are about all through in this section, with the exception of a few late varieties which some growers are trying hard to hold for the Christmas trade, which is expected to be larger than ever. Immense quantities of green and holly have already been sold; the merchants, it appears, have anticipated the shortage and have tried to get their orders placed early. Numerous orders for green in lots of from 1,000 to 5,000 yards have been refused simply because the stock will not permit selling it. The majority of dealers are trying to hold what green they have for their legitimate flower trade. Holly seems to be a drug on the market. One shipper now has on track a car which can be bought at one's own price.

Various Notes.

Haugen & Swanson have been picking some fine violets, some of them being very nearly as large as a half-dollar. The Warrendale Floral Co. is also marketing some good stock. The St. Paul Floral Co. is still bringing in some good stock and the growers as a rule all feel good and look for a big trade.

Henry Krinke & Sons now occupy a store on Wabasha street, one of our main thoroughfares.

James Hoffman, with L. L. May & Co., has returned from the east, full of new ideas and with a lot of pottery heads on which he now has a lot of green grass, which sell like hot cakes.

Chas. Vogt is trimming up for the holiday trade. Stores are being cleaned up, remodeled and everything done to make them attractive.

The Christmas tree man is again with us, carload after carload, being dumped on the vacant lots through the city. They evidently anticipate a heavy business. Prices are high and large numbers of orders have already been booked.

L. L. May & Co. are busy getting things in shape for the James J. Hill banquet, which occurs at the Hotel Ryan December 14.

FELIX.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business for the past week has shown a decided improvement over that of the past month. A heavier demand for all cut flowers, and a decrease in the cut has forced the prices up, and a better feeling is noticed among the trade; in fact, trade seems to be getting back onto the basis of former years.

Roses sold at $4, $6 and $8; carnations, $3, $4 and $5; violets, double, $1 to $1.25, single, 75 cents to $1; lilies, $1.50 to $2 a dozen; sweet peas, $1.50 per hundred and the few Paper Whites found a ready sale at $4 per hundred. Mums are practically out of the market.

Everybody is busy getting things in shape for a larger business at Christmas time.

Various Notes.

Smith & Fetters had a large amount of funeral work for the late Wm. Chisholm, one of Cleveland's pioneer steel manufacturers, and on the same day they put up a large wedding decoration.

The Gasser Co. had a fine window of poinsettias, which are meeting with a larger demand each year as a holiday flower.

Collins & Harrison have a very pretty window of roses and stevia. James Eadie is showing some very nice carnations. He has been very busy on funeral work the past week.

Geo. Jewett, 1338 Broadway, was very busy last week, having all the design work that he could possibly turn out on several occasions.

A visit to Bate Bros.' carnation factory in East Cleveland found the place in fine shape and if anything they were a little ahead of their work, all the carnations being tied up and disbudded. A house of Joost planted late in October on their everlasting tile bench was looking very nice, and Mr. Bate said they had cut more blooms from that house in November than from any of the others. A bench of new varieties that they are trying looked exceptionally well, and they will plant some of the varieties quite heavily next year. The past season they tried planting Lawson and Enchantress, from thumb pots directly into the bench, and the results have been highly satisfactory. A person can see quite a difference in the growth of the plants in favor of the indoor planting; besides they have cut more and better flowers from these plants. In going through their ten houses of carnations the writer failed to find a bad spot anywhere; in fact they were the finest lot he has seen this year. The three houses of Adiantum cuneatum are in fine shape for heavy cutting. The whole output of this place is handled by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.

A. Weaver, of Massillon, stopped off at Cleveland for a short visit on his return from Painesville, where he had been to purchase a stock of plants for the holidays. He reports finding a fine assortment and was well satisfied with his trip. It will be remembered that the Massillon football team won the great game from Canton and Mr. Weaver says it was a great day in his town, the crowd using up all the mums that could be found. He says that business has been good and expects a good holiday trade.

E. J. Fancourt representing S. S. Pen-nock, of Philadelphia, called on his many friends this week. It seems like coming home to him, as he spent several years in one of the leading retail stores here.

G. H. Heintz, of Toledo, spent several days visiting the craft in this city. Mr. Heintz reports business as having been a little slow up to Thanksgiving, but with good prospects from now on.

N. Laskaras ran over from Akron to pick up some stock for the holidays. Business with him has been good all the fall.

Henry Heepe, of Heepe's Sons, Akron, was in town Monday. Business with them was never better, and it keeps them busy picking up the stock to fill their orders.

Mrs. Zimmerman, of Alliance, was a caller on Monday.

PONTIAC, ILL.—W. J. Miller has sold his greenhouses and business to Max Rasmussen, formerly at Negaunee, Mich. Mr. Miller will remove to Chadbourn, N. C., to engage in fruit growing.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Miss Lottie Lockheart, for several years with Walker & McLean, has opened a flower store at 11 North Phelps street. She will be assisted by George McLean, who will be manager of the store.

MANURES FOR ROSES.

At the recent rose congress in Paris M. Georges Truffaut spoke of the experiments which had been made with reference to the use of artificial manures in rose culture.

A special committee had been organized at a previous meeting to inquire into the question of manuring roses, and to ascertain what are the fertilizing substances most beneficial to them. M. Cochet, the well-known rosarian, made some investigations into the chemical composition of the rose Madame Ulrich Brunner. M. Hébert and M. Truffaut also analyzed plants of the same variety, supplied by M. Cochet, and arrived at almost identical results.

Roses, according to these experiments, are not very exacting as regards the nature of their food. A plot containing 40,000 roses to the hectare (about 2 1/2 acres) yielded about 6,000 kilos. (nearly 55 tons) of branches and leaves, and these contained nitrogen 46 kilos. (92 lbs.), potash 19 kilos. (38 lbs.), phosphoric acid 15 kilos. (30 lbs.), lime 51 kilos. (102 lbs.), and magnesia 31 kilos. (62 lbs.). It may be seen from this that roses require a large amount of nitrogen, which is the most important constituent in their food. A new and unexpected result to be noted is the importance of magnesia as a constituent of the food of roses. Magnesia, indeed, seems to some extent to replace potash, and experiments have further confirmed this idea.

Speaking broadly, it is found that nitrogenous manures mixed with the soil, even when slow to decompose, yield results that are only slightly favorable. Roses apparently prefer the application of liquid manure to the use of solid food, the latter being slow in undergoing nitrification. Thus the application of manure in composts containing thirty per cent of dried blood and fifty-one per cent of burnt horn has sometimes given unsatisfactory results.

According to M. Cochet's experiments the roses grown in a soil mixed with a double supply of "complete manure" did the worst, and those grown with potash only also yielded bad results. The plants grown without nitrogen did fairly well in soil, but very indifferently in sand. Therefore, according to M. Cochet's experiments, the use of fertilizers containing nitrogen and phosphoric acid were the most satisfactory, and those that contained potash only were the least so.

The work of the experimenters brings out the fact, as the result of five series of experiments in as many districts and in soils of various quality, that roses are plants especially requiring nitrates; even three times more nitrates than phosphates. Potash alone seems of but little use and may even be injurious, while magnesia seems to serve as a substitute for potash as a food for roses. "We think," continues M. Truffaut, "that this fact is established for the first time. Magnesia and manganese appear to play an important part which we must try to elucidate by continuing our experiments. Meanwhile it is as well to bring this fact to the notice of rosarians, as it is the more remarkable because potash has hitherto been generally considered as of paramount importance in the cultivation of roses."—Gardeners' Chronicle.

HERRINGTON on the Chrysanthemum, the latest book, 50c, of the REVIEW.

MUNCY, PA.—Stanley Bryfogle was badly scalded December 4 as the result of a plug blowing out of a steam pipe.

MARSHALLTOWN, IA.—On December 3 fire starting in the boiler room of J. H. Wright's establishment did sufficient damage to let the frost into his greenhouses. The loss by fire was $500, without insurance, and the stock was very badly frozen.

RICHMOND, IND.—Word has been received that Soupert & Notting, the widely known Luxembourg rose growers, have given the name Mrs. E. G. Hill to a new white rose, the center pure white, the outer petals a brilliant coral and because of its extraordinary size promising to be a companion to American Beauty.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and
Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich.

HOLLY of a nondescript quality is exceedingly plentiful in many cities, and low quotations are in order where no guaranty is required.

THE onion set situation is in a state of coma. After January 1 a revival will take place and, as the supply is much below what is ordinarily in storage at this time of the year, a profitable business in this commodity is looked for when the season arrives.

WHEN no recognition is given at Washington, D. C., to a petition duly signed by the weightiest names in the seed trade, it looks as though the seed industry is shy on votes. The most enthusiastic free-seeder of all the politicians cannot deny that the seedsmen have a full sized grievance, and the only reason their kick won't register is because it don't hit the right spot.

REPORTS are that the pea situation, although fairly well known and pretty thoroughly adjusted, is far from satisfactory. Many of the growers are short on varieties that are commonly plentiful. A short crop on such sorts as Alaska, Horsford and Abundance is so unusual that the average buyer is skeptical about it, and lays it up against his grower when he gets less than he expects. In some localities, where the rule is that a good crop may be relied upon, the shortage is the heaviest.

IT IS reported that aside from peas, beans and onions, the seed crops generally are up to requirements and a normal condition prevails. Cucumber and other vine seeds, as well as sweet corn, are in fair supply. The self blanching celeries are not so plentiful as the demand would warrant, but no serious shortage has yet developed. The market gardener's strains of such crops as endive, kohlrabi, corn salad, etc., are sufficient, but some popular strains of cabbage are short and the high prices that are likely to rule for cabbages before spring will make the seed demand greater than usual.

PRESENT reports are to the effect that beans are nearly all delivered at the growing stations and that the crop on the whole is quite disappointing. The only saving thing is that a good crop in one section makes up in part for a failure in another. Those who do not confine their growing to one locality are better off than the competitor who does. Some of the green-podded sorts have fallen down in many sections just as badly as the wax varieties. Milling and picking reduces the product below the dockage taken for shrink at the time of delivery; this decreases the profits to the grower, who at best can only ship half the quantity he has orders for. There is always a suspicion that somebody has a lot laid away for an emergency, but this does not help matters, and usually there is little in it.

NEW SWEET PEAS

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEARS' NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

THERE were 347 cases of valley pips on the Hamburg boat arriving December 8.

C. L. ALLEN, Floral Park, N. Y., lost his wife December 2, aged 72 years. She had been ill for some months.

THE Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., has a strike of compositors in its printing department, called December 9, but both its English and German catalogues were all in type and will be out earlier this year than ever before, as the pressmen are not affected.

BOUQUET green is selling at Chicago at $8 and up. Dealers have not filled advance orders beyond half, if there was an agreeable way of escape, for most early bookings were at 4 to 5 cents per pound. The supply has not exceeded sixty per cent of the average year. Higher prices may be expected on good stock, some lots being fine and others very poor.

EUGENE SCHAEFFEL, of Vilmorin-Andrieux & Co., Paris, sails for home today on La Savoie. He has spent two months visiting the leading seedsmen and reports a very optimistic feeling throughout the trade.

"STRAINS of corn that doubtless had a common origin have become so changed that some of them have a growing period of six months, reaching a height of eighteen or more feet, while others ripen in ninety days, having attained a height of only two or three feet. These changes are the result of selection, which is partly natural and partly the work of man. By selection a strain can be greatly improved in production and at the same time adapted to the soil and climatic conditions of the locality in which it is being improved. Because of differences in soil, climate and length of growing season, a corn improved in one locality does not afford the best seed for localities which are unlike it."

THE first general seed catalogue to come to hand is that of J. W. Ratekin, which arrived December 9.

J. M. CLARK, secretary of the Leonard Seed Co., is putting in his spare time talking market gardening to the farmers' granges in northern Illinois.

A SAFE and sane farmer says: "Viewed from any standpoint, the free distribution of seeds by the government is a very outrageous and ridiculous proceeding." Will the Congressional Record please copy.

PECULIAR POSTAL LAWS.

With last week's REVIEW readers found a very pretty colored picture of sweet peas, and thereby hangs a tale. Evelyn Byatt is the sweet pea of the year in England. It is being introduced by Watkins & Simpson, the well known sweet pea specialists of London. They wished to put a colored plate of the novelty in the hands of the American trade and, of course, selected circulation with the REVIEW as the best means of accomplishing that end. They were advised that the U. S. postal regulations require such a plate, if it bears anything in the nature of advertising, to be the exact size of the page of the publication to which it is attached for mailing. Through error the lithographers made the sheets the same size as others manufactured for Watkins & Simpson, and when they reached the REVIEW office they were found to carry a reference to an advertisement in the REVIEW, the name of Watkins & Simpson, and to be an even three-quarters of an inch shorter than the page of the REVIEW. The post-office officials construed even the originator's name as advertising and, because of the short size, refused to permit them to be mailed with the REVIEW as second-class matter. But by cutting an inch from the bottom of the sheets, thereby eliminating the "advertising" feature, and printing at the top the words, "Supplement to the FLORISTS' REVIEW," etc., the sheets then became mailable without the necessity for attachment to the copy.

Doubtless our English friends, and others who are not familiar with the vagaries of American postal regulations, will find it hard to understand how a sheet which is unmailable because too short becomes mailable by making it another inch shorter.

DANISH CROPS.

The harvest of Erfurt Dwarf cauliflower seed (Snowball) is this year a fairly good one and large enough to fill all contract orders. Of the Danish Giant cauliflower, which A. Hansen says has again proved to be the best one to withstand hot and dry weather, the harvest is also good, but with the increased demand, late orders will very likely not be executed in full. Of the Danish Ballhead or Hollander cabbage seed, the harvest is not very large, owing to the failure of crop of 1904.

THE VALUE OF EXPERIENCE.

What I want to point out, says a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, is the fact that so many of our best plants get condemned simply because growers who try them do not give them a fair trial before rejecting them. Many of our best plants have been in danger of being lost before they have had a proper trial. I can give no better example of this than in the case of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, and I think I may claim to have done something in the way of bringing this plant forward, and also having done something toward re-establishing its reputation in France, for when Mr. Truffaut was over here some years ago, before I could show him plants I suggested it was a good plant, and he strongly condemned it. However, later on, when he saw some well-grown stuff he was delighted with it, and bought plants. Later, it led to its being so much appreciated that Mr. Truffaut built houses on purpose for growing it. It was much the same here in England; the plant had been introduced some years before its value was known.

Another plant which I was much taken with took some time to gain favor with the public. I refer to Verbena Miss Willmott. About six or seven years ago I grew some plants in pots. Several growers noted it, and it was not long before we had it on the market. During the past season it has been one of the most popular market plants we have had.

Take the Crimson Rambler rose. I remember when I first tried to sell well-flowered plants, I could not do so, and it was only by inducing one of the leading florists to accept plants on sale or return that I first got its value recognized. Yet when once started it soon made an impression. It is not all growers who have done well with this rose, but where it has been well ripened and done well, it has been one of the most profitable plants of recent introduction. It is here where a little experience is necessary; soft, coarse wood is of no use; it must be hard and well ripened.

I believe it has often occurred that a really useful plant has been condemned through not giving it a fair trial.

FRAU KARL DRUSCHKI.

Of the making of new roses, as of books, "there is no end." Hundreds of new varieties are sent out each year by home and foreign raisers. An almost incredible number of varieties have been cultivated and named since the rose first found its way into the ornamental garden. Of a list of 1,000 named sorts, compiled in 1835, grown and highly appreciated at the time, scarcely one is in cultivation to-day. Varieties of exquisite finish and great beauty are constantly produced, but only the merest fraction of the number find a permanent place in cultivation. The overwhelming defect of most new roses is lack of sufficient vigor in plant to endure the strain of commercial propagation and the mishaps of amateur cultivation. New kinds of superlative all-round merit, however, are produced at uncertain intervals. Thus within the last fifteen years such generally successful garden varieties as Clothilde Soupert, blush white; Gruss an Teplitz, crimson scarlet; Mme. Caroline Testout, bright pink, as well as Crimson and Philadelphia Ramblers, deep crimson, have been introduced. The beautiful cream white Kaiserin Augusta Victoria should perhaps be included in the number, but it is being superseded by the lovely pure white hardy rose, Frau Karl Druschki. It is said to be a seedling of Merveille De Lyon, formerly the finest and most reliable of white hardy roses, and is much freer in bloom as well as far more perfect in bud and flower than its parent. It ap-

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The month of November was a record breaker from a business standpoint, and from present indications the same gait will be kept up through this month. Business shows no decrease; if there is any difference, it shows some improvement even over last week's business.

Some fine roses are coming in and bringing top prices. Carnations are improving in both quantity and quality, selling on sight and bringing the highest prices. Geo. M. Kellogg is sending in some high grade stock, both roses and carnations. There is a scramble for mums now that the supply is about exhausted. It has been proven here this season that the medium priced, medium sized chrysanthemum is the best seller. The majority of buyers object to paying over $3 a dozen. The dealers are preparing for a record breaking Christmas trade.

Various Notes.

D. Freudenthal has a very attractive display of Christmas goods in his show window. Mr. Freudenthal has a splendid location and is doing a good business.

Max Ellers, proprietor of the Peoples Floral Co., located at Twelfth and Main streets, is one of Kansas City's coming young florists. He has one of the best stands in the city and this, added to his own energy and business ability, makes a combination that is bound to succeed.

The Alpha Floral Co. opened its new store at 1125 Main street last Saturday. This firm is branching out rapidly, and we predict success for it in the latest venture.

Ed A. Humfeld has a fine lot of azaleas that will be in full bloom for Christmas. He reports business good.

The Shaeffer Floral Co.'s new automobile has arrived and is now doing service.

Charles Heite is absent in Colorado for the benefit of his health.

Chas. A. Shaeffer went to Chicago last week to buy Christmas supplies.

Mrs. Byrnes and C. Hinz, both of Leavenworth, Kan., were visitors last week.

The Market.

Business the past week has averaged up very good. Some dealers have had considerable funeral work, while others have been kept busy looking after the country trade, which has grown to large proportions within the past few years. The department stores are now handling about everything the average cut flower buyer can call for, although as a rule the stock is of an inferior grade and cannot command the price which the florist is getting. Even in these days when carnations are selling for from $4 to $6 per hundred wholesale, the department stores offer them at 50 cents and 75 cents a dozen, but of course the difference in quality is noticeable to the regular cut flower buyer and the florist can still sell his stock at $1 and $1.50 a dozen. The lower the price asked by the department stores the more the florist can get, as the difference in the stock appeals favorably to the better class of buyers. The Greeks are now becoming an important factor. They unload a lot of stock which the florist would sell were it not for the fact that they, as a rule, occupy prominent locations in front of some leading store and sell their stock at reduced rates. But when you come to the accustomed flower purchaser he looks for a good florist. In general trade is good among the retailers and they are all looking forward to a big Christmas trade.

Christmas trees are now occupying all vacant lots and prices are high. The trees come from Michigan and the supply is not large.

Lycopodium is held at a premium. Some has been quoted $8 per hundred pounds but the writer predicts a heavy shortage. Green pickers in this section are well aware of how the market is and some has been sold to parties in Chicago and the east after it has been contracted for here by home dealers.

Various Notes.

A visit to the Minneapolis Floral Co. found the jovial proprietor, John Monson, greatly pleased over the popularity of his new rose, Miss Kate Moulton, a beautiful pink, the center being a deep pink and the outer petals a fine shade of lighter pink. The stems are strong and very much resemble the foliage and stem of the La Detroit. To our mind it is the coming pink rose. The keeping qualities are excellent and Mr. Monson says that a local florist has given this a thorough test by keeping a jar of them cut in the bud two weeks in his ice box and then being able to sell them for $2 per dozen without troubling his conscience in the least.

The greenhouse owners all count on a big Christmas trade. Poinsettias are being grown in abundance. J. M.

NORWICH, CONN.—F. J. Langenbach has had a very good fall season, having an especially fine lot of chrysanthemums.

The American Carnation

BY C. W. WARD

Embodying the experience of one of the most successful growers and hybridizers. Covering every detail of carnation growing, a flower than which there is none of greater importance to the trade. The book is not only complete, clear, concise and comprehensible in its cultural directions, but it is fully illustrated. No grower can afford to be without it, most of all, no young grower who hopes to make the most of his opportunities.

SHASTA DAISIES.

We would like to trouble you for a little information on Shasta daisies. First, we have a lot of seedling plants that we have just transplanted into flats. Can these be grown on in the greenhouse and get into flower by June 1, 1906? If so, how shall we handle them to get the best results? Second, why do Shasta daisies die after they have flowered in the spring? We planted out 100 plants this spring and they grew finely and flowered well up to about August 1, but by September 15 there were not more than twenty of them alive. They seemed to dry up after flowering, the foliage first turning yellow, then shriveling up. Those that are still alive look fine and are still blooming.

P. & P.

We believe you can winter these seedlings quite readily in flats in a cool greenhouse or even in a cold frame if protected from very severe frost. We think flats giving the plants sufficient root room would be much better than pots.

We cannot account for so many plants dying after flowering unless a hot, dry spell set in and they were dried out. As some continued to thrive and flower it looks as if this might be the cause.

HETEROMELES ARBUTIFOLIA.

The Christmas Berry.

It is doubtful if many of the dealers who handle the above commodity in such vast quantities would recognize it under its proper name, but when it is alluded to as the Christmas berry, or California holly berry, it becomes very familiar. The botanical name is rather difficult of pronunciation and one with which the general public is totally unacquainted, but it forms, nevertheless, one of our most important assets in holiday time. It is but a few years ago, not over a dozen, when it was first introduced into the local markets by farmers who at that

ABUNDANCE.

Planted Aug. 31; photo taken Sept. 27, 1905. No supports.

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known firm:

WESTERN SPRINGS, ILL., NOV. 15, 1905.

MR. RUDOLPH FISCHER, GREAT NECK, L. I. N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good sized and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand.

Very truly yours,

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE.

Per J. S. Wilson.

The accompanying illustration will give an idea of its productiveness. The picture was taken Sept. 27, when the bench was just coming into bloom.

Price per rooted cuttings: $1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000.

500 at 1000 rates; 50 at 100 rates.

Unrooted cuttings same price, with 25 extra with each hundred.

R. FISCHER, - - Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

time used to supply Christmas tree stands with redwood wreaths in which a few sprigs of the bright red berries were inserted to give a little color. Gradually bunches were made and disposed of to people who probably could not afford the luxury of the more expensive flowers. Then the florists took hold of them and at the present time they are handled by tons every day during their season.

As a substitute for English holly, which is not very plentiful in this country, they almost fill all requirements. From the few branches brought into town a few years ago, the trade has grown so that hundreds of men are engaged in cutting, packing and selling, and the demand for good berries properly handled is greater now than ever before.

Heteromeles arbutifolia is indigenous to California, and grows in great profusion from San Diego to Mendocino counties. It is generally found on the Coast Range mountains and attains a height of from ten to twenty-five feet. Large clusters of spicy white flowers appear in July and August, which are followed by bunches of rich cardinal berries. They are not properly ripe until about the middle of November, and from that time until the end of February are at their best. They can be kept several weeks after cutting without losing their color, and as a decorative factor they have no equal. The leaves are dark green in color and of a leathery texture, much resembling those of the arbutus. In mild winters, such as we are at present enjoying, the berries are especially plentiful. Winds and frosty weather blacken the berries and render them unfit for sale. There are always localities, however, where they can be found in profusion, and there are usually enough for all purposes. The present market price is $40 per ton. The stems are packed in crates or boxes, considerable care being necessary in cutting and boxing; otherwise they are a very unprofitable article to handle.

The tree is of slow and straggly growth, although it makes a very effective shrub when planted in a garden. It is not easy to transplant and does not stand pruning well. Hundreds of acres have been picked over in our nearby counties by collectors, and each season finds the best berries farther away from the traveled roads.

The madrone berry is being used more extensively than ever this winter also. It is a much larger fruit, comes in smaller clusters, but for decorating it is becoming a general favorite. It does not pack as easily as our red berries, and is handled only in loose bunches by the evergreen men. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Christmas is almost here and business, both at present and prospective, is good. Prices have stiffened somewhat on all kinds of stock. Violets are plentiful and they alone have not felt the infection. Roses are only in fair supply and carnations can be said to be the same. Valley and Roman hyacinths are hardly equal to the demand. Mums are scarce, except the smaller, outdoor stock. Other kinds of common stuff are entirely out. Narcissi are seen in small quantities, also daffodils. Poinsettias are in good demand, with only a few offered. Azaleas in bloom are being shown in some of the stores. New batches of palms and ferns are used to good advantage by the retailers and everything looks prosperous for next week.

Various Notes.

The Lacy Co., of Fruitvale, is cutting some extra long-stemmed Brides and Maids and from present appearances will have a good crop for the holidays. Sievers & Boland and Podesta & Co. handle all their stock.

C. C. Navlet, of San Jose, is in town hunting up some lines of stock for his holiday trade.

successful show. Portland also wants to get into the line of march, and if the present agitation and enthusiasm continue to grow it should bear good fruit next fall. Having lived in some of the large cities of the east, the writer is prepared to say that nowhere is the queen of autumn more popular than here. They were at the height of perfection on Thanksgiving day and were in great demand by the devotees of football. We desire to have our best supply on that occasion and $1 each is willingly paid for the largest blooms. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

CHARLES FREMD, the veteran nurseryman of Rye, N. Y., is dead.

SURPLUSES of natural peach pits are being offered, although sales have been large.

THE western nurserymen would like to be shown just one good apple crop in Missouri.

THE demand for burlap is very heavy and not only are prices high but supplies are difficult to procure.

THOSE growers of apple seedlings who complain at the price of their product will again increase their plant.

THE Northwestern railroad is planting hardy shrubs to replace the tender stock used on station grounds along its line in Illinois.

H. A. TERRY, Crescent, Ia., well known as a peony and plum raiser, has sold out and retired at an age well beyond the allotted three score years and ten.

WORK is progressing on Prof. Bailey's Cyclopedia of American Agriculture, the first volume being nearly ready for the press.

ORNAMENTAL stock in medium and larger sizes promises to be unusually good property next spring. The supply is not increasing as fast as the demand.

THE committee of the American Association of Nurserymen is to be congratulated on its success with the several classification committees in securing a 16,000 pounds minimum car on fruit trees.

It is no exceptional experience to have stocks of cherry under the demand, but next spring is likely to see a very stiff market on good, salable trees, due to the wet season at many growing centers.

THE Harrison Nursery Co., York, Neb., has recently built a new frost-proof storage cellar. The firm is composed of sons of C. S. Harrison and the business now amounts to over $40,000 a year and is steadily increasing.

SICKNESS prevented Clarence Wedge, president of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, from attending the thirty-ninth annual meeting, held at Minneapolis December 5 to 7, but he sent an address urging that greater attention be paid to seedling apples. M. R. Cashman deplored the lack of interest in the strawberry on the part of Minnesota growers.

NOT FOREMOST.

In an article on Burbank, W. Van Fleet calls the attention of the Rural New Yorkers to the sensational stories of Burbank's accomplishments which have appeared in the magazines, the daily papers and even some trade publications and says:

"How far Mr. Burbank is responsible for such bosh is not known. If he does not enjoy this booming no public disclaimer has yet been made. We have appreciatively followed Burbank's work for many years, and have figured and described the majority of his productions. Nearly everything that he has given to the public has been grown on our trial grounds. We believe him to be an enthusiastic and energetic originator, but we do not consider him the foremost plant breeder in the world, if measured by the general success of his introductions to date. He may be the most extensive breeder in regard to the variety of plants he is working on, and in the number of seedlings grown. He has exclusively engaged in this work for the last twelve years, while other highly successful plant-breeders have kept within the bounds of business caution, and devoted their energies to the perfection of special products. Thus, without touching on the invaluable services of such originators, now dead, as Ephraim W. Bull, raiser of the Concord grape, or Peter M. Gideon, who gave the Wealthy apple to the northwest, we may mention the grand and little rewarded work of Jacob Moore, New York, producer of Brighton, Moore's Early and Diamond grapes, as well as splendid currants; T. v. Munson, Texas, who has rehabilitated the grape industry of the old world through breeding resistant stocks, and has originated scores of new varieties of the greatest value, and the venerable H. A. Terry, Iowa, for thirty-six years a patient and successful breeder of valuable peonies and native plums. It is no kindness to mention the name of the California grower, now heading towards the poorhouse, after giving the state two of the most profitable stone fruits ever grown. These men are all great in their specialties, and have given horticulture enduring and valuable novelties without receiving a fraction of the praise landed by Burbank."

RAILROAD TIES.

Referring to the recent note, published in the REVIEW, in regard to the Pennsylvania railroad having planted 477,295 yellow locust trees for tie timber, Joseph T. Richards, chief engineer of maintenance of way, under whose direction the work has been done, states that while it is not likely that the company will at any time plant a sufficient number of trees from which to secure its entire supply of cross ties, it is felt that the experiment will have a tendency to stimulate outside parties to cultivate this class of timber and in this way assist the company to secure ties at some future time.

Figuring on the basis of 3,000,000 ties for repairs and 500,000 for new work annually for the Pennsylvania, and that it will require thirty years for a yellow locust to mature, it would require the continual use of 97,500 acres, or 152 square miles, to supply the Pennsylvania railroad. As to the locust, Mr. Richards believes it is superior to oak on account of its resistance to rail cutting, and a life in excess of ten years is expected.

A FAIR DAY.

Your answer to my enquiries in the REVIEW of December 7 mentions "fair days," and I would like to ask what is a fine day? Is it a bright, clear, sunny day, or generally speaking a day without rain, or stormy weather? In this part of the country (western New York) we get only one clear day a month, on the average, from December to March; the rest cloudy days. H. B. S.

THE statement was made a few days ago by a representative fruit grower of Jacksonville, Tex., that in a certain shipment of peaches made last season, peaches finally sold in New York for $1 per crate. Of this sum 7 cents went to the commission people, 70 cents to the railroads and the remaining 23 cents went to the man who raised the peaches.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Now that the chrysanthemum season is over, you hear the same old story about carnation supply being short and the demand heavy. Any kind of carnation finds ready sale and not any are carried over at the wholesale houses. American Beauty roses are scarce. The best sell at $4 per dozen. There are plenty of Brides, Maids, Gates and Ivory of all grades. Prices are from $3 to $6 per hundred. Both single and double violets are more plentiful and quality never better for the season, both selling well. Asparagus in bunches is much in demand, but cut up strings put in bunches are not wanted when the other can be had.

The Exchange.

Under the management of John J. Perry, the business of the Florists' Exchange has been growing steadily and it has become necessary to locate more conveniently. After considerable searching a site 31x100 feet has been selected, on which a building suitable to handle the growing trade will soon be erected. The lot fronts on three sides, which will give the place plenty of light and air and is located about four city blocks from the center of the city and right in the midst of our leading retail florists. The lot is located on the southwest corner of Franklin and St. Paul streets. It is intended to devote the first floor to the daily handling of the Exchange's business, and the second floor for an exhibition hall, etc. A. F.

MONTREAL.

The annual meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, was held December 7, at which it was decided to hold the annual dinner on January 16. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Alex. Gibbs, president; A. H. Walker, first vice president; J. Pidduck, second vice-president; W. H. Horobin, secretary-treasurer; H. J. Eddy, assistant secretary. Executive committee: J. E. Eddy, W. G. Paseo, C. Craig, A. C. Wilshire, E. Hayward, J. Walsh, Jos. Bennett.

TRIED AND PROVEN--Rochester's New Carnation

"May Bennett"

REMARKABLE KEEPING QUALITIES

Color perfectly distinct, shading from medium to light pink. Long stems, strong and vigorous grower. As a producer equals William Scott. Growers wanting a good all-round Carnation for color, yield and growth, should not overlook "May Bennett."

Price, $10 per 100; $75 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

GENTLEMEN—We do not hesitate to recommend the new carnation "May Bennett," as we have had nearly the entire cut the past year. It has been a general favorite with our trade on account of its fragrance, keeping qualities and pleasing color. As a general utility carnation it has no equal. (Signed) J. B. COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

A visit among the growers was a treat to the writer a few days ago. The Pike's Peak Floral Co. houses are as neat and clean as could be and the roses certainly showed up fine. Cyclamen and poinsettias are hard to match. Just next door we found Frank Crump with a broad smile on his face, and justly so, as his mums were the envy of all. The Colorado Springs Floral Co. displayed a very handsome window for Thanksgiving, in Lorraines and violets. At J. B. Braidwood's the roses and carnation stock were grand. He has just opened a new store at 110 North Tejon street, which has proven a decided success. A recent window decoration was a memorial for the Elks. A forest of staghorn fern was a background for a floral clock with the hands pointing to 11 o'clock, the significance of which will be apparent to all members of the order. The window attracted much attention. It was the work of A. C. Rott, who is a past exalted ruler of the Bloomington, Ind., lodge.

DES MOINES, IA.

A new cut flower store has just been started in this city, called the Alpha Floral Co., and the opening which took place last Saturday attracted a great deal of attention. The store was crowded with visitors all the afternoon and evening. They have one of the finest locations in the city and their room was fixed up in elegant shape. P.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

A small army of men, consisting of ditch diggers, carpenters, masons, plumbers and general laborers, is kept busy making various improvements and additions about the Joy & Sons greenhouse establishment, on their farm of ninety-two acres located just outside of the city limits. Their immense plant, consisting of thirty-five modern houses, comprising 120,000 feet of glass, is well worthy of a visit, and may prove a revelation to some who regard horticulture in the south as very backward. Far from it, indeed!

To begin with, their five houses of American Beauty roses, two 25x100 and three 30x375, could not possibly be surpassed anywhere, by the most painstaking rose grower, either for profusion and color of bloom or the vigorous growth of the plants. This likewise holds true as regards their Brides, Bridesmaids and Richmond, the latter, in the estimation of Mr. Joy, Jr., being the only red rose worthy of the name, as well as of the greenhouse space.

Nor does disappointment await one at their carnation section. Enchantress and Lawson, both pink and white, are behaving in a manner that silences criticism, while Lady Bountiful is proving itself bountiful in deed as well as in name. The Cardinal is unquestionably a fine red and does well here, though a better all-around red is still wanted.

Chrysanthemums, both single stem and those three and four to the plant, were at their best at the time of my visit. As a matter of course the best varieties extant are grown here. Violets, principally single, were especially fine.

Messrs. Joy & Son are changing their heating apparatus, introducing the best system that engineering skill could devise and an expenditure, regardless of extent, could equip. T. C. Joy is now installed in his new residence on the place, an ideal home, built in the colonial style of architecture and equipped with all the modern devices of the twentieth century comforts. X.

RAFFIA

RAFFIA IN HORTICULTURE

A skein of raffia is an every-day necessity wherever floriculture or horticulture are carried on. Raffia is the favorite tying material with the plantmen for several reasons. Not the least of these is its comparative inexpensiveness, but greatest of all is the fact that it neither stretches nor shrinks under the influence of heat or moisture. Once properly adjusted, a tie of raffia does not loosen, releasing that which it was intended to hold; neither does it shrink and cut the plant, perhaps to ruin it. It is soft and pliable, and does not break or ravel when folded or knotted. These qualities bring raffia into general use for many purposes in nurseries and greenhouses, where heat or moisture are always found.

Raffia is also especially adapted for grafting.

WHERE TO OBTAIN RAFFIA

We import only the best selected stock. It costs more, but it is money well spent. We can, therefore, offer a choice grade, selected on account of its clear color for dyeing purposes. The strands are broad and of good length.

We carry in stock an assortment of 20 different colors, including brown, 2 shades; blue, 2 shades; green, 4 shades; red, 3 shades; old gold, orange, yellow, pink, purple, black and white.

Prices on application. Color samples free.

PHYSALIS FRANCHETTI.

It is remarkable how well this plant has done with market growers, says the Horticultural Advertiser. During the autumn it has been one of the most prominent features in the London market. There has been considerable difference in the various samples seen; where grown too strong they do not finish off so well; those of moderate strength color best; and it seems that the most suitable soil is sandy loam. One grower who has it in good condition tells me that he does not re-plant often, but runs the horse hoe or harrow through it. This takes out a good many roots but leaves sufficient, and also cleans the ground and leaves it open. It is one of those plants which, being hardy and easily cultivated, we are getting larger supplies than are needed. Yet it will always pay to do it in smaller quantities, and do it really well. At the present time the best samples make remunerative prices, while loads of rougher grown samples fail to find a market. Several growers are doing it well in pots, and it makes a showy plant; but most of those that I have seen have been in larger pots than most decorators care to use, and the consequence is that pot plants do not sell readily. The fact that when cut it lasts so well may also be against the sale of pot plants. A limited number may pay, but it will never be worth doing in pots in large quantities.

BOSTON FERNS.

For several years it has been the regular thing for Boston ferns to be overplentiful in the fall and early winter, prices being low and sales slow. It has often been stated by growers that they feared the day of the Boston was over, but the spring has always seen an active demand and stock well cleaned up. Indeed, last spring it was almost impossible to purchase Bostons, even though the stock the autumn before had been the largest on record.

The growers of Bostons should be cautioned, however, against sending out to their customers plants just potted from the bench. Such stock does not give satisfaction and it is an injury to the reputation of the man who sells it and does an injury to the trade at large.

IRONTON, O.—Weber Bros. have had a very satisfactory fall season. They had an excellent crop of chrysanthemums and the trade took them up as fast as ready. Good crops are in sight for the holidays.

RICHMOND, IND.

That the E. G. Hill Co. is well pleased with the results obtained at the various chrysanthemum exhibitions through the country goes without saying. It is one thing to win a few prizes and it is quite another thing to get the cream of the premiums. Those who saw their prize winners at the Chicago, Philadelphia, Kansas City and Indianapolis shows need not wonder how it all came about. But chrysanthemums are at present a thing of the past here, though a few late varieties are still holding up their heads in fine shape and may last until Christmas.

Richmond rose, as seen here, and for that matter, elsewhere, is fulfilling every claim made for this most meritorious red rose. It is a winner from the standpoints of both retailer and grower. The ideal, however, has by no means been reached by the Richmond. There are others on the way, John Lemon, named after Mr. Hill's favorite grandson, a magnificent specimen of a red rose, surpassing in beauty, form of bloom, foliage and stem anything that ever "came out of a seed pod." Great hopes are centered upon this rose, although it will require another season to test thoroughly its commercial value. The consensus of opinion is that John Lemon is to make its mark.

Joseph Hill, of which two benches are planted, has every appearance of being a splendid commercial variety. Its color is certainly attractive, resembling somewhat the Sunrise, though a larger bud and a finer stem. Another point, much in its favor, is its productiveness. It has been in crop all season, with every promise of continuance through the winter.

In carnations, there are two fine reds, several whites, a few pinks and some crimsons, one or two plants of each, all promising. Those to be selected for future distribution must come up to every requirement, else "the light of day shall never dawn upon them."

Mr. Hill has had enough experience with seedlings and has perhaps discarded more "promising" things than all the seedlings put out within the last two or three years combined. In his own words: "It must be an all-around winner before it leaves this place."

The usual quantities of geraniums, fuchsias, heliotropes and bedding stock of all kinds have been planted in anticipation of a heavy demand.

Chrysanthemums will be grown in larger quantities than heretofore, the demand for young plants for early spring delivery warranting the increase. Mme. Touse, the early Chadwick, and Jeanne Nonin, the largest late white, judging by the orders already booked, will certainly be much in evidence a year hence in various parts of the country.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.—Nettie Lewis Oliver has assumed charge of the business formerly conducted by her father, the late E. B. Lewis.

CHANGING TO STEAM.

I would like to change from hot water to steam for my greenhouses. Please tell me what size of boiler I need for the following amount of glass: Five houses 20x60, walls four feet, ridges nine feet, east ends protected, glass in west gables. I am also building a new house on the east side, 22x100, wall five feet high, ridge ten feet, glass in one gable and two feet in south wall. Which is the best way to pipe them? I have 1-inch and 2-inch pipes in the old houses and would like to use 1-inch in the new house. What size of pipe will I need from the boiler? Indiana climate.

A. J. L.

To meet your present requirements, i. e., to supply heat for five houses 20x60 feet and one house 22x100 feet, a twenty-five horse-power boiler will be required. A standard size for such a boiler is forty-two inches in diameter by twelve feet in length, with 370 square feet of heating surface in a horizontal tubular boiler. A 2-inch riser under the ridge in each of the houses 20x60 feet, supplying 1-inch returns under the benches, will be satisfactory. In the new house the returns will be best if made of 1¼-inch pipe. The riser or flow under the ridge of the new house should be 2½-inch, supplying twelve 1¼-inch returns and each of the houses 20x60 feet should have fifteen 1-inch returns.

WIT AND HUMOR.

It is with pleasure that the editor states that the following are not original, merely clippings:

"This flower is strictly up to date," said the florist.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the prospective customer.

"Why," he explained, "it was obtained by grafting."

A Flower Garden.

Miss Pansy Baker has accepted a position with Ordway, the florist. As Mr. Ordway also employs a boy by the name of Rose, it is evident that he wishes to carry the idea of his business as far as possible.

A Floral Tribute.

The curtain was rung up for the third time, and Margaret Blake stepped forward to the call of her admiring audience. She spoke with a graceful modesty that charmed, then gathered her floral tributes. Was it the intense excitement or the blinding array of foot-lights that dazzled and confused her?

Quietly reposing on a lower box rail at the corner of the stage she saw a magnificent bunch of violets—her favorite flowers—ostensibly placed there by a sweet-faced, dark-haired lady behind them.

With applause still ringing in her ears, Miss Blake leaned forward and took the lovely bouquet, acknowledging the gift by a pretty bow.

The sweet-faced, dark-haired lady reached after her with strange and sudden haste.

"Give me back my hat!" she cried, hysterically.

COAL FAMINE POSSIBLE.

A number of large growers have been advised by their coal dealers to carry as large a supply of fuel as possible for preparations are believed by some to be under way for a vast shutdown among the coal operators of the country. The anthracite operators of the east held a meeting in Philadelphia a few days ago. They thrashed out the subject as to whether they had better grant the demands of the United Mine Workers of America. It was the consensus of opinion that they fight the miners.

It was agreed, however, that an effort will be made to secure the co-operation of the bituminous mines and thus cause a shutdown of all coal mining in the country.

The anthracite operators decided first to call in all their agents. That is, the sales will be made from central headquarters in the future and no drumming of trade will be done until the mining question is settled.

A Pittsburg coal operator sent a representative among the eastern coal storage points two weeks ago to learn just what shape the dealers are in to withstand a long strike. He found every storage bin loaded to the top.

The railroads have taken care to lay by every ton of coal possible and many small coal dealers are said to have sold or leased their coal storage bins to the larger dealers and railroads. The Pennsylvania railroad uses 1,000 carloads of soft coal a day.

NECESSITIES for the Florist

2 Ring Model.

No. 1—Model Extension Carnation Support. Light, strong and easily applied. Every grower of Carnations should use these.

No. 2—Model "Extension Ring" Carnation and Plant Support. This is a stake with "Corkscrew Anchor." It has an extension ring which can be extended or contracted as desired and has a spring which clasped around the stake will hold the ring firmly in place at any desired height as shown in cut.

No. 4—New Model Extension Carnation Support. This new model support is in every way identical with our Model Supports with the only exception of the anchor. It is preferred by some growers on account of the lower price and corkscrew anchor.

NOTICE—Our Model Tomato and Heavy Plant Support is the same as No. 1 and No. 4. It is made of heavy galvanized wire and growers of tomatoes cannot do without it.

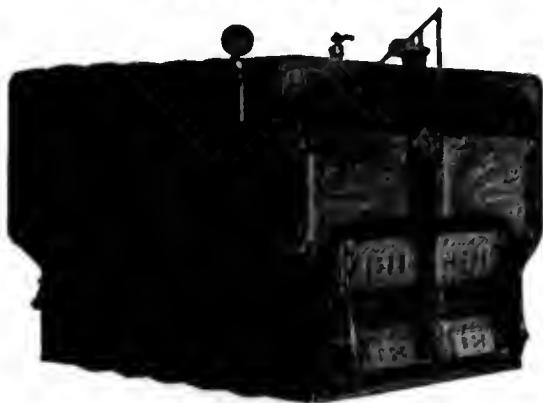

The various garden fixtures manufactured by the Parker-Bruen Mfg. Co. are so well known to the trade that comment as to the quality of the product is unnecessary. A few of our most popular articles are here illustrated and it is requested that dealers send for our catalogue and price list.

IMPROVED Greenhouse Boiler.

Boilers made of the best material; shell, fire-box sheets and heads of steel; water space all around, front, sides and back. Write for information.

Can ship any size at once.

Telegraph us if you need one in a hurry.

They are supplied with our special openings which are arranged for either cast iron or threaded pipe.

N. ZWEIFEL, No. Milwaukee, Wis., writes:—"I have 4 houses, each 28x200 feet, with a total of 27,000 sq. ft. of glass. I can get all the pipes warm in thirty minutes with one of your No. 13 Boilers, and it is easy firing."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers and do not worry about their breaking down."

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

We notice on page 1456 of a recent issue that the capacity of a Scotch marine boiler eight feet by forty-four inches is given as 750 lineal feet of 4-inch pipe. Is this not a mistake? It would seem to us that a boiler of such size should take care of more heating surface, especially so when you consider that our smallest boiler, No. 1, will positively take care of 2,000 running feet of 4-inch pipe. Please let us know what you have to say about this. If the difference is as great as your article makes out, it surely ought to be a great boom for our boiler. KROESCHELL BROS. CO.

It is gratifying to have a blunder caught up before harm is done. They are quite right; the Scotch marine boiler in question has a capacity for much more than 750 feet of 4-inch pipe. It is evident that 1,750 feet was intended, as this is very close to the true capacity of the boiler.

A BEGONIA SHOW.

"Mr. Jones, I want a nice display of begonias."

"You shall have it."

This was the brief colloquy between Superintendent of Parks George W. Burke and Foreman John Jones, of the conservatory in Schenley park, Pittsburg. The result surprises lovers of flowers, who, because the chrysanthemum show is over, have feared there would be nothing special to reward the visitor.

In compliance with the orders of Superintendent Burke, Foreman Jones and his men prepared a beautiful display of the lovely begonia. The entire wing connecting the palm and the victoria houses is given over to the flower.

The main variety of begonias on exhibit is Gloire de Lorraine. It forms the prevailing color scheme of the masses, and a sport of Gloire, the Turnford Hall, pure white, is interspersed and massed in large quantities. Groups of Begonia semperflorens and of Chinese primroses combine to present a fine scene.

THE KING CONSTRUCTION CO.,

North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Gentlemen:--

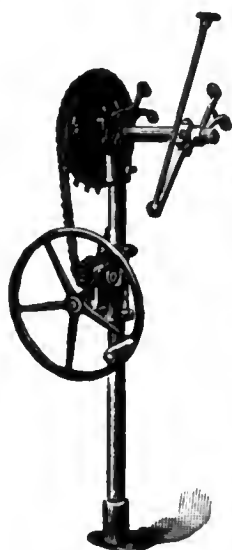

I am very much pleased with the new house, and I wish you could see the crop that I have in it. All my other houses have good crops, but this one is a record breaker, and the north bench is as good as any, as there is absolutely no shade except a narrow strip from the south gutter.

The special roof trussing works all right, and it is conceded by brother florists and gardeners who have visited me, that it is as good and substantial a house as any one could desire.

Very truly yours,

J. A. Long.

THE WOLF IMPROVED VENTILATING APPARATUS and Dump Sieve Soil Machines

All machines guaranteed to operate exactly as represented

Estimates and descriptive cuts with references furnished upon application

THE NEW WOLF 1906 PIPE MACHINES are the only machines that are equipped with all roller bearing and adjustable hangers and cut gear steel ratchet arms, automatic safety locks, which require no oiling. Being the most perfect and powerful pipe machine now on the market. Nine of these machines are successfully operating 1600 feet of ventilation in the new dining hall building recently built by The National Cash Register Co., Dayton, Ohio. The adoption of these machines by this well-known firm is a guarantee of their superiority, as they always use the best.

THE WOLF IMPROVED CABLE MACHINES are equipped with top gears horizontal sprocket wheel automatic safety locks. Are especially adapted for the new style commercial houses. Operates lines of shaft 150 to 300 feet long from the end with ease. With single machines placed in the end, we are successfully lifting 13 sections, each section 17½ feet long, equal to one continuous sash 227½ feet long by 4½ feet deep, hinged at bottom; also continuous sash measuring 200 feet long by 3½ feet deep, hinged at ridge, operated by Searls Bros., Toledo, Ohio; J. Vonder Linden, Rhinebeck, N. Y. These machines open all sash exactly alike, and the length of the house a single machine will operate depends entirely upon the weight of the sash to be lifted.

Get our references. IT WILL PAY YOU TO USE OUR MACHINES. THEY OPERATE FROM EITHER END, OR CENTER, ARE ALWAYS CONVENIENT AND QUICK ACTING, CAN BE OPERATED IN ONE FOURTH OF THE TIME.

Send dimensions of your houses and get estimates on either of the above machines.

Each furnished in three sizes and sent out under a ten-year guarantee.

WE CAN'T STAMP

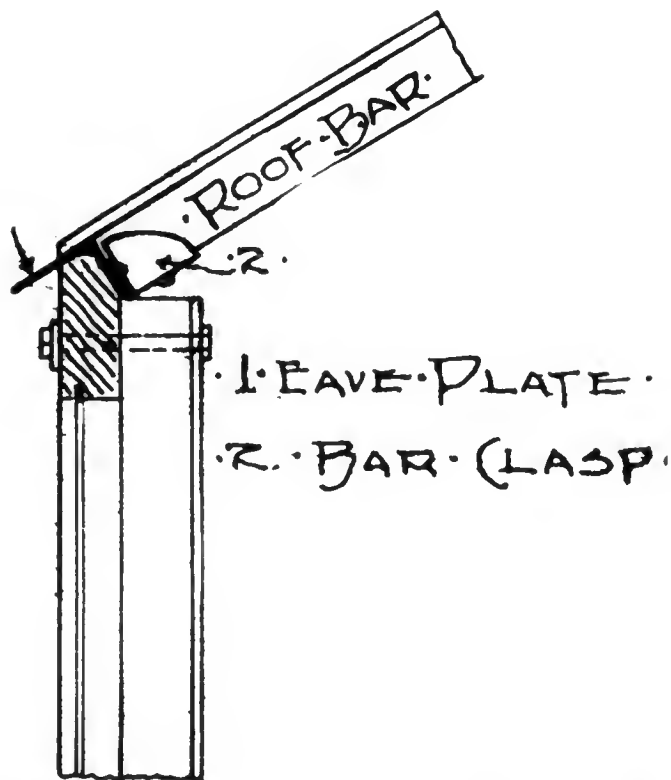

our trade-mark on our greenhouses but our reputation does it for us. You can't mistake one of our houses. It's the way they are built and what they are built of that does it.

Take that one point of the galvanized angle-iron eave plate with the sash bar clips attached: It is right at the weak point in the usual construction where we make it strong—the vital, tying together part of your house; the point where a wood joint always rots, an ungalvanized iron always rusts. Our galvanized eave plate is securely attached to the side posts; the sash bar firmly fastened to it by the sash bar clasp, in such a way as to make the joint moisture free, and adding tremendously to the rigidity of the house. Its very simplicity and compactness of construction obstructs the least possible light.

This is just one of the points about our houses—but that one point points toward the durability of your house and the increase of your plant growths.

You don't pay anything for our 50 years of experience, but it will cost you something if you don't have it.

WORKING WITH WILD SMILAX.

Following the chancel decoration as shown in the illustration in last week's REVIEW, we find another distinct type of decoration on the chancel rail and gallery designs as seen in today's picture. Wild smilax is too often seen stretched, trimmed and rearranged into mere ropes, and festooned across a room diagonally, and crossed from opposite corners. There are enough other materials in green which can be used as festooning only. Use wild smilax in just the shape that it comes, in large flat sprays, tapering from its widest span of several feet to a graceful pointed tip. Thus allowed its liberty, and fastened securely at the heavy end, it will take its own position and remain there with little aid. Set another spray in the opposite direction and fasten the end at the same points as the first and you have a complete vine, as it were.

All of the fastenings, in the gallery designs, of which there are very few, are made on the back or under side of the gallery wood-work. The spray ends which follow the surface of the pillars are in the position which they assumed of their own accord on being suspended from the gallery. Often two or three pieces may be wired together to make one large spray, or what appears to be one vine.

The left end of the supposed vine branches, one part ending as it hangs over the chandelier, and the other climbing to the organ pipes above. A little past the center of the gallery section seen, a spray falls down to the chancel rail and trails along the top part of the pulpit and over to the steps leading into the chancel.

What few palms were used were of medium height, so that when set on the floor they could not obscure the bridal party during the ceremony.

Smilax not only makes the best appearance when used in some style similar to this, but as the Yankee cook has it, "goes farther." In this case one fifty-pound case decorated the chancel and two long galleries, which is as much as could possibly be done with the expenditure of a like sum.

THE HILL BANQUET.

The banquet given to James J. Hill December 14 by the citizens of St. Paul was without doubt the finest from the florists' standpoint of any function given in St. Paul since the first florist established himself there, and it was many years ago when the pioneers, A. H. Bunde, E. F. Lemke and a party by the name of Beal began in the business. The Great Northern Railway and its different divisions were mapped out on the tables of the banquet hall, in the form of railroad tracks of white carnations and ties of Lawson carnations. The railway embankment was four inches high, of green sheet moss covered with green galax leaves, the embankments showing the proper slopes. At intervals of a few feet were electric lamps showing alternately red and green lights. Opposite each cover and pinned to the slope of the embankment was the name of a Great Northern station, large gold letters on a wide colored ribbon. Each guest, as he came in, exchanged his dinner card for a coupon ticket, which contained in duplicate his track or table. Four of the Great Northern Railway conductors wearing railway full dress, armed with railway lanterns and punches, collected the coupons and indicated the direction of the track to which each guest was assigned. The tracks were shown by floral boards lettered with white carnations and Liberty roses. On the two center tracks were two complete floral trains made of carnations and roses and all lighted with electric bulbs. The engines were headed for the upon which was lettered "St. Paul—J. J. Hill."

The pillars in the large dining hall were profusely trimmed with wild smilax and studded with poinsettias, producing a brilliant effect. The large windows of the dining room were heavily draped with wild smilax and drawn up like curtains, to which were attached large bunches of roses tied with ribbon. At the end of the hall was a large steamship to represent the steamship Minnesota. Flags of all nations were hanging through the room and when the lights were turned on the sight was grand. Every detail was looked after and L. L. May & Co. with a score of men worked two days and one night getting the decoration put up. Palms were in abundance and the dining room was nothing short of a bower of foliage and bloom, which with 500 colored electric lights set it off to perfection. The sight to the guest must have been very similar to fairyland. All the florists in the city called to examine it carefully and some after seeing it hurried to get their better-halves to look the situation over. They all pronounced it to be the finest display St. Paul has ever had.

In the corners of the large dining hall were immense groups of palms raised from ten to fifteen feet above the floor and interspersed with colored electric head table, at which Mr. Hill sat. Directly in front of him was a round house thirty-six inches in diameter made solid of white carnations and Bridesmaids. On the roof of the round house was a large star of Lawson carnations on which was lettered "G. N.," and at his side was a 16-inch heart of white carnations pierced with an arrow of red carnations and lights. The steamboat and flags were furnished by Holm & Olson. The boat was made of Harlowarden carnations, yellow chrysanthemums, immortelles and cape flowers. The flags were made of immortelles, and, while they were neatly made, the question arises, does it pay to mix everlasting flowers with natural flowers? The correspondent is desirous of
