WORKING WITH WILD SMILAX.

Following the chancel decoration as shown in the illustration in last week's REVIEW, we find another distinct type of decoration on the chancel rail and gallery designs as seen in today's picture. Wild smilax is too often seen stretched, trimmed and rearranged into mere ropes, and festooned across a room diagonally, and crossed from opposite corners. There are enough other materials in green which can be used as festooning only. Use wild smilax in just the shape that it comes, in large flat sprays, tapering from its widest span of several feet to a graceful pointed tip. Thus allowed its liberty, and fastened securely at the heavy end, it will take its own position and remain there with little aid. Set another spray in the opposite direction and fasten the end at the same points as the first and you have a complete vine, as it were.

All of the fastenings, in the gallery designs, of which there are very few, are made on the back or under side of the gallery wood-work. The spray ends which follow the surface of the pillars are in the position which they assumed of their own accord on being suspended from the gallery. Often two or three pieces may be wired together to make one large spray, or what appears to be one vine.

The left end of the supposed vine branches, one part ending as it hangs over the chandelier, and the other climbing to the organ pipes above. A little past the center of the gallery section seen, a spray falls down to the chancel rail and trails along the top part of the pulpit and over to the steps leading into the chancel.

What few palms were used were of medium height, so that when set on the floor they could not obscure the bridal party during the ceremony.

Smilax not only makes the best appearance when used in some style similar to this, but as the Yankee cook has it, "goes farther." In this case one fifty-pound case decorated the chancel and two long galleries, which is as much as could possibly be done with the expenditure of a like sum.

THE HILL BANQUET.

The banquet given to James J. Hill December 14 by the citizens of St. Paul is without doubt the finest from the florists' standpoint of any function given in St. Paul since the first florist established himself there, and it was many years ago when the pioneers, A. H. Bunde, E. T. Lemke and a party by the name of Beal began in the business. The Great Northern Railway and its different divisions were mapped out on the tables of the banquet hall, in the form of railroad tracks of white carnations and ties of Lawson carnations. The railway embankment was four inches high, of green sheet moss covered with green galax leaves, the embankments showing the proper slopes. At intervals of a few feet were electric lamps showing alternately red and green lights. Opposite each cover and pinned to the slope of the embankment was the name of a Great Northern station, large gold letters on a wide colored ribbon. Each guest, as he came in, exchanged his dinner card for a coupon ticket, which contained in duplicate his track or table. Four of the Great Northern Railway conductors wearing railway full dress, armed with railway lanterns and punches, collected the coupons and indicated the direction of the track to which each guest was assigned. The tracks were shown by floral boards lettered with white carnations and Liberty roses. On the two center tracks were two complete floral trains made of carnations and roses and all lighted with electric bulbs. The engines were headed for the upon which was lettered "St. Paul—J. J. Hill."

The pillars in the large dining hall were profusely trimmed with wild smilax and studded with poinsettias, producing a brilliant effect. The large windows of the dining room were heavily draped with wild smilax and drawn up like curtains, to which were attached large bunches of roses tied with ribbon. At the end of the hall was a large steamship to represent the steamship Minnesota. Flags of all nations were hanging through the room and when the lights were turned on the sight was grand. Every detail was looked after and L. L. May & Co. with a score of men worked two days and one night getting the decoration put up. Palms were in abundance and the dining room was nothing short of a bower of foliage and bloom, which with 500 colored electric lights set it off to perfection. The sight to the guest must have been very similar to fairyland. All the florists in the city called to examine it carefully and some after seeing it hurried to get their better halves to look the situation over. They all pronounced it to be the finest display St. Paul has ever had.

In the corners of the large dining hall were immense groups of palms raised from ten to fifteen feet above the floor and interspersed with colored electric head table, at which Mr. Hill sat. Directly in front of him was a round house thirty six inches in diameter made solid of white carnations and Bridesmaids. On the roof of the round house was a large star of Lawson carnations on which was lettered "G. N.," and at his side was a 16-inch heart of white carnations pierced with an arrow of red carnations and lights. The steamboat and flags were furnished by Holm & Olson. The boat was made of Harlowarden carnations, yellow chrysanthemums, immortelles and cape flowers. The flags were made of immortelles, and, while they were neatly made, the question arises, does it pay to mix everlasting flowers with natural flowers? The correspondent is desirous of having other views on the matter. Is it encouraging to the art or can it be considered a retrogression? Eight thousand carnations were used in the construction of the tracks and ties. FELIX.

FREESIAS.

We have a lot of freesias growing in flats and what we want to know is, will they need any more watering after they get done blooming, or just let them dry off all at once? R. & S.

We would certainly say that if the freesia corms are to be kept for future forcing they should not be dried off "all at once." It is against nature and reason. Some plants seem to endure a sudden arrest of growth, but with bulbous plants it is at the time of flowering and fullest leafage that they are storing up the strength for future flowering, in many cases forming the embryo bud. Put the flats where space is not valuable, but where they will gradually ripen their foliage and water to avoid extreme dryness. W. S.

an important bulbous flower and we only observed that wrinkle last winter. Never get so old or petrified that you cannot grasp a new idea, no matter from what source. A youthful employee may step forward with a suggestion. Listen and weigh it over. In his close association with the plants that he is constantly watching, he may have observed something that escaped you.

Von Sion narcissi can be brought in in December or later, on favorable occasions, and stored beneath the benches and they will go on advancing toward flower and the most forward can be brought up to force as you need them. With the Von Sion it worked quite the reverse from the tulips.

Don't touch a double tulip for two months yet. I have seen Tournesol in flats with the flowers sitting on the soil like mushrooms and the ignorant florist blaming the dealer. How many things the poor seedsman has to bear from the ignorance of the so-called gardener! He is easier to reach than the real cause of failure.

Stevia.

Albert Mauff, of Denver, called on us about Thanksgiving. He remarked that their stevia was much earlier than ours. He was cutting at that time and would get another crop of shorter spikes in January. We never thought a second crop, if it came, would be of much quality or profitable. Considering that it need occupy the benches but two months and a very cool house is all it asks, we think it can be made profitable at $1.25 per hundred, which it will always bring during December, and a little more during the holidays. WILLIAM SCOTT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Forcing Single Tulips.

It is now time to bring in your earliest planted tulips, which will bring them into flower about the third week of January, when they will be looked for and be in satisfactory condition. The beautiful Proserpine is the earliest of all, but rather short-stemmed unless well managed. Then comes Yellow Prince, the most profitable tulip of all. Then there is Chrysolora, another good forcing yellow; Vermilion Brilliant, the finest scarlet; the useful La Reine, white but often assuming beautiful shades of pink; Rose Grisdelin and Cottage Maid, both fine pinks. All of the above will now force. It would pay you to examine a box of each variety. If they are just peeping through the soil in the flats don't attempt to force them, but if the growth is two or three inches above the soil they are sufficiently rooted to make a stem and flower.

Necessary Conditions.

The conditions to force the earliest tulips are just the reverse of those for forcing lily of the valley, which needs warmth at the roots and moderate temperature for leaf and flower. The tulips require a strong top heat, but only a mild heat at the roots. In fact, much heat would scorch the roots and that would be fatal. Most of you have a side bench beneath which are the steam or hot water pipes and this is, or should be, three or four inches from the wall. I say should be, for you still occasionally see a bench nailed up to the wall. Of all idiotic things this is the worst, including rot and murder. Now, if you will tack up a piece of cheese-cloth, or oil-cloth is even better, to the wall a foot or two above the bench and let it hang down the front of the bench below the level of the pipes you will confine the heat around the tulips; 80 degrees top heat is not too high for the earliest. The little heat that comes through the boards will not hurt.

In this strong heat they will want one or two sprayings daily, but only ordinary moisture at the roots. The shade is, of course, applied to induce length of stem. The treatment is all right until the earliest flowers show color, when the shade can be thrown back or the flats removed to another bench, but not to a very cool house or the later flowers will just stand still. As the season advances less shade and heat are required, until we reach March, when little heat and no shade are necessary. Spring has come to waken them into growth, as it does all animated nature.

Some few years ago we thought it advisable to bring into the house a number of flats of early tulips and put them under a cool bench, where they could go on making roots without being forced. It did not work. They were a failure when we put them in the hot box and we think tulips brought in and immediately given heat is still the best plan.

Home and Greenhouse Establishment of George E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

A NEW ENGLAND PLACE.

The accompanying illustration represents Geo. E. Buxton's residence and greenhouse plant at Nashua, N. H. It is an ideal place, admirably located on a fine tract of land, comprising about eight acres, upon the main thoroughfare between Nashua and Manchester.

The history of Mr. Buxton's business dates back to the fall of 1884, when he embarked in the florists' business, commencing with one house of 18x96, in the southern part of the city. Those were the days when specialists and specialties, with some rare exceptions, were in their embryo, when the average flue-heated greenhouse presented a sort of experimental ground under glass and when the average florist knew much less about things than he does today. Believing that "experience is the best teacher" Mr. Buxton experimented, the result being four additional up-to-date houses in the course of a few years. In the summer of 1896, finding an increased demand for his product and his facilities inadequate, he removed his plant to his present location. Here six modern, well appointed and splendidly equipped houses produce the stock for the local as well as the Boston market.

Mr. Buxton, though an all around grower, is pre-eminently a carnation man. His entire place is practically devoted to carnations and, as a matter of fact, only the best varieties are grown here. Enchantress, Fiancee, Mrs. M. A. Patten, White Lawson, The Queen, Cardinal, Harry Fenn and Fair Maid, make up his list of money-makers. A block of Helen Goddard has been planted and from all appearances it is not only a winner, but it is sure to replace the Lawson and to become the standard pink. In addition to all its other merits, such as productiveness, color, stem, etc., it possesses a vigorous constitution, a most admirable trait, worthy of special note.

Mr. Buxton is a member of the Boston Florists' and Gardeners' Club and of the American Carnation Society. Locally he is identified with the K. of P. and the I. O. O. F. One child, Miss Marion Patten Buxton, a beautiful girl in her teens, cheers the home of Mr. and Mrs. Buxton.

BOSTON CLUB'S FIELD DAY.

The periodical field days of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club have been so successful that the announcement of such an affair, even at this busy period, is sure to bring out a good crowd. Favorable weather was enjoyed on the occasion of the field day at Framingham, on December 16, and the attendance was the largest of any excursion yet held, over sixty going.

J. T. Butterworth's.

J. T. Butterworth's South Framingham establishment was first inspected. In the orchid houses a fine lot of Cattleya Percivalliana and C. triene were right for Christmas, also numbers of Lælia anceps and L. autumnalis. Thousands of Cypripedium insigne were open, many of them borne on 18-inch stems. A finer lot would be hard to find. Carnation houses looked well and some Bonaffon chrysanthemums were still in evidence, also a splendid lot of freesia in bloom. Lily of the valley is well done here and large quantities of bulbs in all salable sorts are handled.

S. J. Goddard's.

At S. J. Goddard's the first house inspected was filled with Helen Goddard. Blooms, buds and flowering shoots in all stages proved that this variety is not a cropper, but a continuous bloomer, not a sign of a burst calyx or of disease. The flowers are not large, averaging two and one-half to three inches across, but are of a beautiful Joost shade and sell on sight. It should rank with Queen as a money-maker. J. H. Manley carried a fine Christmas crop. Prosperity was large and of extra fine color, bringing topnotch market prices. Enchantress was the queen of the light pink varieties and of extra good color. Fair Maid Mr. Goddard grows, but does not count as profitable as Enchantress. He finds Enchantress keeps finely.

Seedling scarlet No. 10 was producing quantities of large blooms of a brick red color. The calyx seemed very strong. Harry Fenn was a mass of bloom and classed as the most profitable sort grown here. Mrs. Patten was off crop. It is doing better than last year, but is not classed as one that pays well. Cardinal is very good and will be tried again, color splendid and plant very healthy.

Fiancee has produced wonderfully up to date, but is now splitting badly. Plants are mostly cut back for cuttings, which are in good demand. Fred Burki has not done well, but is improving, stems good and flowers very fragrant. Lady Bountiful is good, much better than in 1904-5. Storekeepers complain about this variety being a poor keeper.

Queen is indeed queen of whites here, a wealth of blooms overtopping all others in size and quantity, just as thick now as in October when picking started. Mrs. W. L. Lewis is on trial, but it is too early to pass an opinion on it yet. A new propagating house was being used to good advantage. Stocks of freesia, callas, primulas and other plants for retail trade were noted. Retail business is steadily on the increase.

Wm. Nicholson's.

William Nicholson's plant was last visited and everything found in fine shape. Carnations were, of course, the chief attraction here and were carrying a wealth of bloom. A grand lot of Prosperity, which is splendidly grown here, bristled with flowers and buds. Aristocrat and Afterglow, Witterstaetter's new seedlings, carried some grand flowers. The latter seemed to be the most popular. Fiancee has produced an immense quantity of big blooms. To remedy its bursting tendency it will probably need a night temperature of 56 degrees. Victory was looking exceedingly well and is a beautiful scarlet. Robert Craig was less free. Lieut. Peary is a promising white. Crimson Glow (Dailedouze) is a very promising crimson of fine color. A Dailedouze pink seedling was not so good. Enchantress looked splendid, as did Fair Maid, of which latter a good many are grown. It holds its color well in spring and summer. Manley was very free. All it lacks is size. A few Flamingo are still grown and John E. Haines is under trial. Lady Bountiful is grown to some extent and Gov. Wolcott quite largely. The latter does well here, producing very fine flowers. The Queen carried a great crop. Eldorado is still the most profitable yellow and Harlowarden is found especially good for summer blooming. Harry Fenn is the king of crimsons, being a great producer.

In addition to carnations, fine batches of mignonette, marguerites yellow and pleasure of the operator with equal chances of success.

The knife used should have a very keen edge, as the cleaner the cut so much sooner will union take place.

The scion should be tied firmly in place with some soft material, but not so tight as to cause an abrasion of the bark.

The wood for the scions should be of the same quality as that recommended for cuttings and should be selected with the same critical care.

The care and management of the grafting box will be treated in a future article.

A pamphlet by Alex. Montgomery, Jr., published by the REVIEW, giving a resume of this method of propagating contains many hints which would be of great benefit to the beginner and inexperienced and in fact to any one practicing this method of propagating.

RIBES.

CRIMSON RAMBLERS.

Please tell us again when is the proper time to bring in Crimson Ramblers for forcing in the greenhouse so as to have them in bloom for Easter. M. S.

These plants should be brought in as soon as possible and placed in a house with a temperature of about 45 degrees and left there until the buds begin to swell, when the temperature should be gradually raised till 56 degrees is attained. With ordinary care they should come into bloom at Easter at this temperature. Careful observation as the season progresses may dictate a higher or a lower temperature to time them properly. RIBES.

GRAFTING.

Those who contemplate doing their own grafting should soon have their supply of stocks on hand, so that they can have them potted and got ready for the operation, as the stocks must of necessity be in such a condition that they will be able to give an immediate supply of sap to the newly attached scion.

The season when this operation can most successfully be performed is during January, February and March, as during this period we can control conditions, such as temperature, moisture, etc., much better than when the season is further advanced. There is also less trouble in regulating the shading, ventilation, etc.

To make a success of this method of propagating one of the first essentials is to have a suitable grafting box or frame, in which to place the newly grafted stock. This frame should be so constructed that the bottom would be at least eighteen inches above the piping and the sides boarded up back and front to conserve the heat. There should also be sufficient piping under the case to maintain a temperature of 80 degrees under any conditions. The top of the frame should be provided with glazed sash, which should be at least eighteen inches above the bottom of the bench and the whole structure made practically airtight.

About one inch of screened ashes should be placed in the bottom of the bench, upon which to set the plants. This also serves to retain the requisite amount of moisture in the frame.

The most common style of graft employed in commercial places is the whip graft, but, as expediency and speed are objects to be considered, the propagator usually employs that style at which he is most expert. The manual part of this method of propagating, while being simple, is rather difficult to describe and an object lesson of a few minutes will convey more information than columns of descriptive matter.

The fundamental principle pertaining to all styles of grafting is the necessity of having direct communication between the layers of inner bark in all the parts to be united, as without this a perfect union cannot take place. The woody parts of stock and scion never unite but are so covered over by the outer growths that the fact is not apparent unless the part is dissected.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Selection in Propagation.

In my last notes mention was made of the variation in yield of different plants of the same variety grown under similar conditions. This difference is often so marked as to be apparent to the most casual observer, but is more likely to be noted the first year a variety is grown. A newcomer is usually closely watched and selection in propagation may not have been what it might.

It is not my purpose to go into those things which the introducer has or has not done, but ought or ought not to have done or left undone. I do, however, wish to advise the purchase of stock of new varieties the first year sent out. By this is not meant that every sort offered should be tried, but if a grower has reasons for adding to his list and after due consideration a certain one is decided upon, the sooner stock can be obtained the sooner selection for propagation can begin.

It is but reasonable to expect, in the efforts to fill orders for cuttings of a variety for which the demand is heavy, that the same care in selection cannot be exercised as would be when a grower is working up a stock for his own use. On the other hand, at the price new introductions are usually sold, the buyer is entitled at least to healthy, well-rooted stock true to name. With this for a foundation some varieties are known to have been brought to a degree of excellence and productiveness never thought possible by the originator.

Of course a variety must possess decided merit, but close observation of the behavior of each plant, and careful selection of cuttings, have much to do with improvement.

When harvesting the Christmas crop it will be well to take note of those plants which produce particularly good blooms and when the rush is over examine thoroughly as to health and habit.

The practice of putting rooted cuttings into rich soil and growing in a high temperature with the idea of producing sufficient top to obtain a cutting (so-called) from each, cannot be too severely condemned. This is not selection, but destruction.

in the beds is four-fifths garden loam and one-fifth rotted cow manure. Can you tell me what to do to overcome these troubles?

J. T.

I will need more data before I can tell you why your carnations are weak in stem and not blooming much. If you will answer the following questions I can possibly help you: What varieties are you growing? When were they planted? Have they made much growth since you planted them? Do the plants look healthy and strong? What temperature do you keep the house night and day? Do you open the ventilators nearly every day?

Your soil ought to be all right if the soil was an average good garden soil and if you mixed in some bone-meal before planting, your plants should not be suffering for want of food. Too high a temperature will cause the stems to come weak and possibly you have erred along that line, unless your varieties are naturally weak stemmed. For most varieties 50 to 52 degrees at night, 58 to 60 degrees on cloudy days and 65 to 75 on sunny days will be found just about right. In fact, you can grow any variety in this temperature if the rest of your culture is right.

STABLE DRAINAGE.

I can get all the manure water from a cow stable, which drains into a barrel. How much will I dilute it for feeding carnations and callas? And also, I have saved wood-ashes from old bench lumber and willow trees. Are they worth saving to be used on carnations? Is it a good thing to use a little air-slaked lime with them or should they be used separate?

I have used on my callas one-third of the liquid out of this drainage barrel of manure water, together with two-thirds water. I have noticed on the roots that they are slightly decayed, just as though they had been over-watered. I thought they could neither be over-watered nor over-fed. They are in 6-inch pots. What do you think is the cause? W.

Unless your carnations really need feeding I would advise against giving them any of this liquid for another month. However, you know better than I just what shape your plants are in. Feeding with liquid during mid-winter is a delicate undertaking and unless you are well experienced I would advise you to let it alone. I do not mean to say that a little judicious feeding will not do some good, but unless you are able to note minutely the effect produced on the plants you are apt to overdo it and perhaps ruin your crop before you are aware of it. When you do start, about February 1, if there is a fair amount of sunshine right along, I would advise diluting it about ten to one and give a good watering with this about every ten days or two weeks. By the middle of March you can increase it to six to one and apply once each week. This is of course providing your plants are in good condition to take the food.

Yes, callas can be over-watered and over-fed. If the drainage is good they will stand lots of water, and food in proportion, but if you will see that the soil is moist and not soggy your calla blooms will be better. It does them no harm to show a little on the dry side occasionally, but of course it should not happen too frequently. I would make it about five to one for the callas and give it to them once each week and water with clear water between times. Always see that the soil is not too dry before you give an application. If necessary touch up the dry ones with clear water first. If applied when the soil is dry it is liable to burn the roots and possibly that is what happened to your plants. This same rule will hold good with your carnations.

A. F. J. BAUR.

OVER-FED.

I send some blooms of Queen Louise carnation. They are grown in solid beds, a loamy soil containing one-third cow manure well rotted and well mixed. The stock was planted the last week in July and all look healthy, with a good crop on for Christmas, but the trouble with the sample blooms I do not understand. Once a week since October 15 I have given them a top-dressing of bone meal mixed with two parts soil, stirred once a day to prevent heating. I have also treated them twice with air-slaked lime and once with grape dust. The moisture of the soil has been as even as possible. Night temperature 52 to 56 degrees. We have Wolcott in one bed and Enechantress in another.

R. J. C.

I found some thrips in the blooms you sent and no doubt these are partly the cause of your trouble. You should lose no time in getting after them. I have a number of times lately advised inquirers as to the use of the nicotine solutions and would suggest the same to you.

You are feeding your carnations more than I would deem advisable, unless you make the applications very light. A good dose of bone will last two months as a rule, and during the mid-winter months it will last longer. Feeding during Nowhite, cyclamens, Primula obconica, violets, winter blooming geraniums and other plants were noted, everything being in fine condition.

Entertainment.

Cigars were furnished members at S. J. Goddard's while at Mr. Nicholson's a fine collation was served. Speeches were next in order. After some eulogistic remarks on places visited, President Wheeler called on M. A. Patten and J.

R. Fotheringham for remarks. Thomas J. Grey made one of his usual happy speeches, and spoke of the time when he was club president and addressed empty chairs. W. Davis and Duncan Finlayson spoke briefly. J. W. Duncan spoke for the horticultural press. He said he could not make a speech, but spoke so long the members nearly lost their car. Boston was reached on the return journey at 6:30 after a most delightful and profitable outing. W. N. C.

The knife used should have a very keen edge, as the cleaner the cut so much sooner will union take place.

The scion should be tied firmly in place with some soft material, but not so tight as to cause an abrasion of the bark.

The wood for the scions should be of the same quality as that recommended for cuttings and should be selected with the same critical care.

The care and management of the grafting box will be treated in a future article.

A pamphlet by Alex. Montgomery, Jr., published by the REVIEW, giving a resume of this method of propagating contains many hints which would be of great benefit to the beginner and inexperienced and in fact to any one practicing this method of propagating.

RIBES.

CRIMSON RAMBLERS.

Please tell us again when is the proper time to bring in Crimson Ramblers for forcing in the greenhouse so as to have them in bloom for Easter. M. S.

These plants should be brought in as soon as possible and placed in a house with a temperature of about 45 degrees and left there until the buds begin to swell, when the temperature should be gradually raised till 56 degrees is attained. With ordinary care they should come into bloom at Easter at this temperature. Careful observation as the season progresses may dictate a higher or a lower temperature to time them properly.

RIBES.

GRAFTING.

Those who contemplate doing their own grafting should soon have their supply of stocks on hand, so that they can have them potted and got ready for the operation, as the stocks must of necessity be in such a condition that they will be able to give an immediate supply of sap to the newly attached scion.

The season when this operation can most successfully be performed is during January, February and March, as during this period we can control conditions, such as temperature, moisture, etc., much better than when the season is further advanced. There is also less trouble in regulating the shading, ventilation, etc.

To make a success of this method of propagating one of the first essentials is to have a suitable grafting box or frame, in which to place the newly grafted stock. This frame should be so constructed that the bottom would be at least eighteen inches above the piping and the sides boarded up back and front to conserve the heat. There should also be sufficient piping under the case to maintain a temperature of 80 degrees under any conditions. The top of the frame should be provided with glazed sash, which should be at least eighteen inches above the bottom of the bench and the whole structure made practically airtight.

About one inch of screened ashes should be placed in the bottom of the bench, upon which to set the plants. This also serves to retain the requisite amount of moisture in the frame.

The most common style of graft employed in commercial places is the whip graft, but, as expediency and speed are objects to be considered, the propagator usually employs that style at which he is most expert. The manual part of this method of propagating, while being simple, is rather difficult to describe and an object lesson of a few minutes will convey more information than columns of descriptive matter.

The fundamental principle pertaining to all styles of grafting is the necessity of having direct communication between the layers of inner bark in all the parts to be united, as without this a perfect union cannot take place. The woody parts of stock and scion never unite but are so covered over by the outer growths that the fact is not apparent unless the part is dissected.

LATE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Will you please tell me the names of the best late mums? I want them to come in about Thanksgiving. Please give name and color. G. W.

A selection of late kinds as seen in the New York market for Thanksgiving runs about as follows: White, W. H. Chadwick, Merry Christmas and Jeanne Nonin; yellow, Rieman, Yellow Chadwick and Bonnaillon; pink, W. S. Allen and Maud Dean.

To get late flowers, plants should be grown more particularly for that purpose, rooting them in June, planting in July, and growing along as cool as possible and taking the terminal bud. They are better grown in a separate house from early and midseason kinds because when the former are needing a dryer atmosphere, the very late kinds are still in growth and in need of syringing and fumigating for black fly.

THE ROOSEVELT MUM.

The illustration on page 307 shows a bloom of President Roosevelt, one of Nathan Smith & Son's recently certificated chrysanthemums. This is a seedling of Mrs. W. C. Egan, pink, crossed with Mrs. George Mileham, rosy mauve. Elmer Smith says that they consider it their best introduction since 1898, when they disseminated Merza. It is its equal in size, of the same sturdy, short-jointed growth and beautiful Japanese incurved form. Its color is unique but pleasing, being a white ground with light shell-pink center and on the tips of each petal, giving the entire bloom a light pink appearance, and is especially attractive under artificial light. Unlike Merza, it is of the easiest culture and perfectly double from all buds and under varied culture. As a cut flower, either commercial, exhibition, or as a pot plant it is recommended by the introducers. This year it was fully developed November 5 to 10 and crown buds taken August 30 to September 5 produce the best colored blooms. This was the variety that won the silver medal at Philadelphia this year.

AMERICAN MUMS IN ENGLAND.

Nowadays there are but few of our growers who know much about the American seedling chrysanthemums of nearly twenty years ago, says C. Harmon Payne in the Gardeners' Chronicle. Gradually they have ceased to be imported until very few of them are left, but in a few private collections, in the public parks and in the hands of the French growers, there are still some that remain.

These are some of the most effective and useful for decorative purposes: William Tricker, a dwarf growing, pretty, bright rosy-pink Japanese, is much appreciated and still retained in most of the parks. We have also seen this season J. H. Runchman, a bright golden yellow which reminds us of the Pitcher and Manda collection that passed into the hands of Mr. H. J. Jones, Hairy Wonder being another of the set. Delaware, the

anemone-flowered variety, is American, as is Mrs. Judge Benedict of the same section. Mutual Friend, a big white Japanese, has also been seen this season in good form. Louis Boehmer, the hairy novelty that followed Mrs. Alpheus Hardy, came to us from the States, and is still in the Battersea park collection. Good Gracious, one of the most distinct Japanese in cultivation, is another. Mrs. E. G. Hill is an old variety, an early bloomer, very tall, but a useful back row plant for mixed groups. I have also noticed Simplicity, a white Japanese. The above are probably all the Americans that now remain in cultivation here, with the exception of a few others that may have been past their best at the time of my visits to the various Metropolitan parks.

GUTTMAN ON FLOWER SHOWS.

When I returned from my trip throughout the country a few weeks ago, I felt that I should give the club the benefit of some of my experience and with our president's permission I have prepared this paper. You cannot expect to hear a paper covering every phase and every little detail thoroughly, of the great subject which I am going to read to you. The subject I refer to is flower shows throughout the country and our city. I will do the best I can and I trust that some good will come of it. I feel that there is great room for improvement in our profession, and that flower shows well patronized in this city of ours, would greatly help everyone connected with our business. Before going any further I am sure that everyone will admit that the question before us, whether a flower show would be a benefit to the florists in this section of the country, or whether it would not be worth the trouble, is of very great importance. It seems to me that it would surely be a benefit, and for that reason, and also taking it for granted that I voice the sentiments of the majority of enterprising florists in this, the largest and greatest center for our profession, I have decided to speak of this matter.

It has been my privilege and pleasure to attend, in the interest of Victory carnation, the majority of flower shows held this season. I did not get to Boston and Philadelphia because I could not be in two places at the same time. In three cities particularly, namely Chicago, Kansas City and Indianapolis, I noticed the great interest shown by the florists and citizens of those respective cities in their shows, and it certainly gave me great pleasure and impressed me deeply, as I am sure it would you. When I thought of the poor attendance and the lack of interest shown by the people of this great city of ours I felt very sad. The attendance at the shows heretofore mentioned was so great that men had to be stationed to guide the people and keep them moving in one direction so as to avoid crushing. These shows were held in the largest buildings of their kind in this country, buildings that compare very favorably with our famous Madison Square Garden. I cannot refer to any great extent to the exhibits and the varieties of plants on exhibition that I saw at these different shows; in fact, I did not notice anything special except some dandy red geraniums three to four feet tall and about three feet in circumference, which were in full bloom. They looked very beautiful to me and therefore I mention them. Also the exhibits of the city parks were very fine. However, you may rest assured that I had both eyes on cut flowers, especially roses, carnations and mums. The roses were certainly very good, better than those we had here at that time. In carnations, they were certainly up to the mark and the same with regard to mums. There were so many exhibitors, too, that it really seemed to me as if all growers were anxious to show their product. As I was particularly interested in red carnations, I am glad to say that we have quite proven to the craft throughout the country that Victory is the safest to invest in, and the number of orders received for it thus far is proof of its popularity.

But I am not here to blow my own horn. I am here to tell you how I think our fellow craftsmen throughout the country were able to achieve such great success in getting so many exhibitors, so many workers, and also in succeeding so well in interesting the public, which you will all concede is an important factor and absolutely necessary to make a show a success and to make work a pleasure. By the way, I must mention here that I cannot tell you about all the shows, for it would take too long, but as I happened to spend two days in Chicago, and that being a large city, conditions can be compared with ours here, I will tell you principally what I learned in Chicago. Although the same harmony existed in all other cities among all the craft, growers, retailers, wholesalers, nurserymen, private gardeners, etc., it seemed to me that their first thought was the ultimate success of the show. The success of the show was held above all personal feeling which may arise through competition. In Chicago, such gentlemen as Messrs. Vaughan, Hauswirth, Lange, Asmus, Samuelson, Kanst, Wienhoeber, Frey, Wittbold, Rudd, Wietor, Poehlmann, Deamud, McKellar, all the city park superintendents and a great many other men in every branch of the profession did not hesitate to give me interviews in the short time that I had while there.

At Chicago, I noticed that the leading retailers had booths, and no doubt more of them would have been represented if they could have secured space. These booths were one of the leading attractions at the show, and each retailer had a sign prominently placed near his exhibit. The signs were uniform throughout the hall. As the attendance was very large and was made up of the best people in Chicago, it surely must have been a valuable advertisement for the retailers. I noticed that there were no premiums given for retailers' booth exhibits.

Owing to the fact that my real interest in our profession was aroused only a few years ago, I cannot, as you see, go back very far into the past records and achievements of the New York florists. A good many of our members deserve praise for their liberal exhibits at the club meetings and at the different flower shows held under various auspices. I think that if the matter of being represented at our flower shows were to be put up to the retailers of this city in the proper way, they would see their advantage and would co-operate with us to enable us to have a grand show. The reason I refer to this is because retailers in New York in the past did not care to take part in our flower shows. If I understand it right a certain large department store offered a large amount of money in premiums if the New York Florists' Club would endorse their exhibition, and, also, I understand it, the club felt that in order to protect the retailers they should refuse that offer, and did so. I think that the retailers have no right to expect us to refuse another such offer, and I believe that they should come to the front and help us. Surely it is important that we have a flower show, and when we put it up to the retailers and they refuse, then our conscience need not trouble us if we accept department store offers. I feel very positive that there are enough enterprising florists who, if they could be reasonably convinced that the management would so advertise the show that it would bring out Father Knickerbocker and his whole family, they would not hesitate a moment to co-operate with us. I may be wrong in my ideas; however, I see no harm in bringing this matter up now, and I hope that all of you present feel the same as I do when I say that discussion on the subject would do a lot of good. If I am wrong, I am willing to admit it and am always willing to abide by the wishes of the majority. As I said before, my interest has only been aroused a short time, since I realized that it is to my interest to try to master my profession as I intend to stick to it. I want to ask whether an attempt has ever been made to interest some of our wealthy philanthropists in our cause to secure a Horticultural hall; also why does not the daily press help us, in flower show times especially, for they do print occasionally ridiculous stories connected with our profession, such as $20,000 and $30,000 for carnations and $750,000 for a retail wholesale flower store. In Chicago all the newspapers devoted columns to flower show news, and Mr. Rudd tells me that some of the leading editors are members of their society and also help finance the society and give premiums. They do all these things besides giving plenty of space in their columns, and it is so in other large cities. Why can't we accomplish the same? We have brilliant men in our city in every line, in the growing, the wholesale, the retail, among the seedsmen, nurserymen, private gardeners, supply men, etc.

It seems to me that we in this city and vicinity ought to be the leaders in all things pertaining to horticulture. I think that if the members will work in harmony and give all an equal chance, we could not fail to have a great flower show. All we ask is a fair field and no favors. It would soon put us in the lead, where we ought to be. There is no doubt that we have had much success in the past years in this club, but with better co-operation we could attain much greater success in the future.

ALOYSIA CITRIODORA.

This charming old plant, generally known as the scented verbena, makes a grand subject for cultivating in tubs for decorating the grounds in summer, providing room can be found to keep it safe from frost during winter. The finest plants I have ever seen are at Lockinge, and they are perfect pyramids, from fourteen to fifteen feet high, growing in tubs two feet six inches square. These must have been a grand sight during the past summer, as nearly every point flowered. The specimens are thirteen years old. I also noticed several fine standards with five-foot stems. Mr. Fyfe grows a large number of plants in tubs for standing about the grounds in summer, the charming position of Lockinge lending itself admirably to this kind of gardening.—Gardeners' Magazine.

AMERICAN MUMS IN ENGLAND.

Nowadays there are but few of our growers who know much about the American seedling chrysanthemums of nearly twenty years ago, says C. Harmon Payne in the Gardeners' Chronicle. Gradually they have ceased to be imported until very few of them are left, but in a few private collections, in the public parks and in the hands of the French growers, there are still some that remain.

These are some of the most effective and useful for decorative purposes: William Tricker, a dwarf growing, pretty, bright rosy-pink Japanese, is much appreciated and still retained in most of the parks. We have also seen this season J. H. Runchman, a bright golden yellow which reminds us of the Pitcher and Manda collection that passed into the hands of Mr. H. J. Jones, Hairy Wonder being another of the set. Delaware, the anemone flowered variety, is American, as is Mrs. Judge Benedict of the same section. Mutual Friend, a big white Japanese, has also been seen this season in good form. Louis Boehmer, the hairy novelty that followed Mrs. Alpheus Hardy, came to us from the States, and is still in the Patterson park collection. Good Gracious, one of the most distinct Japanese in cultivation, is another. Mrs. E. G. Hill is an old variety, an early bloomer, very tall, but a useful back row plant for mixed groups. I have also noticed Simplicity, a white Japanese. The above are probably all the Americans that now remain in cultivation here, with the exception of a few others that may have been past their best at the time of my visits to the various Metropolitan parks.

GUTTMAN ON FLOWER SHOWS.

When I returned from my trip throughout the country a few weeks ago, I felt that I should give the club the benefit of some of my experience and with our president's permission I have prepared this paper. You cannot expect to hear a paper covering every phase and every little detail thoroughly, of the great subject which I am going to read to you. The subject I refer to is flower shows throughout the country and our city. I will do the best I can and I trust that some good will come of it. I feel that there is great room for improvement in our profession, and that flower shows well patronized in this city of ours, would greatly help everyone connected with our business. Before going any further I am sure that everyone will admit that the question before us, whether a flower show would be a benefit to the florists in this section of the country, or whether it would not be worth the trouble, is of very great importance. It seems to me that it would surely be a benefit, and for that reason, and also taking it for granted that I voice the sentiments of the majority of enterprising florists in this, the largest and greatest center for our profession, I have decided to speak of this matter.

It has been my privilege and pleasure to attend, in the interest of Victory carnation, the majority of flower shows held this season. I did not get to Boston and Philadelphia because I could not be in two places at the same time. In three cities particularly, namely Chicago, Kansas City and Indianapolis, I noticed the great interest shown by the florists and citizens of those respective cities in their shows, and it certainly gave me great pleasure and impressed me deeply, as I am sure it would you. When I thought of the poor attendance and the lack of interest shown by the people of this great city of ours I felt very sad. The attendance at the shows heretofore mentioned was so great that men had to be stationed to guide the people and keep them moving in one direction so as to avoid crushing. These shows were held in the largest buildings of their kind in this country, buildings that compare very favorably with our famous Madison Square Garden. I cannot refer to any great extent to the exhibits and the varieties of plants on exhibition that I saw at these different shows; in fact, I did not notice anything special except some dandy red geraniums three to four feet tall and about three feet in circumference, which were in full bloom. They looked very beautiful to me and therefore I mention them. Also the exhibits of the city parks were very fine. However, you may rest assured that I had both eyes on cut flowers, especially roses, carnations and mums. The roses were certainly very good, better than those we had here at that time. In carnations, they were certainly up to the mark and the same with regard to mums. There were so many exhibitors, too, that it really seemed to me as if all growers were anxious to show their product. As I was particu-early interested in red carnations, I am glad to say that we have quite proven to the craft throughout the country that Victory is the safest to invest in, and the number of orders received for it thus far is proof of its popularity.

But I am not here to blow my own horn. I am here to tell you how I think our fellow craftsmen throughout the country were able to achieve such great success in getting so many exhibitors, so many workers, and also in succeeding so well in interesting the public, which you will all concede is an important factor and absolutely necessary to make a show a success and to make work a pleasure. By the way, I must mention here that I cannot tell you about all the shows, for it would take too long, but as I happened to spend two days in Chicago, and that being a large city, conditions can be compared with ours here. I will tell you principally what I learned in Chicago. Although the same harmony existed in all other cities among all the craft, growers, retailers, wholesalers, nurserymen, private gardeners, etc., it seemed to me that their first thought was the ultimate success of the show. The success of the show was held above all personal feeling which may arise through competition. In Chicago, such gentlemen as Messrs. Vaughan, Hanswirth, Lange, Asmus, Samuelson, Kanst, Wienhoeber, Frey, Wittbold, Rudd, Wietor, Pochmann, Deamud, McKellar, all the city park superintendents and a great many other men in every branch of the profession did not hesitate to give me interviews in the short time that I had while there.

At Chicago, I noticed that the leading retailers had booths, and no doubt more of them would have been represented if they could have secured space. These booths were one of the leading attractions at the show, and each retailer had a sign prominently placed near his exhibit. The signs were uniform throughout the hall. As the attendance was very large and was made up of the best people in Chicago, it surely must have been a valuable advertisement for the retailers. I noticed that there were no premiums given for retailers' booth exhibits.

Owing to the fact that my real interest in our profession was aroused only a few years ago, I cannot, as you see, go back very far into the past records and achievements of the New York florists. A good many of our members deserve praise for their liberal exhibits at the club meetings and at the different flower shows held under various auspices. I think that if the matter of being represented at our flower shows were to be put up to the retailers of this city in the proper way, they would see their advantage and would co-operate with us to enable us to have a grand show. The reason I refer to this is because retailers in New York in the past did not care to take part in our flower shows. If I understand it right a certain large department store offered a large amount of money in premiums if the New York Florists' Club would endorse their exhibition, and, also, I understand it, the club felt that in order to protect the retailers they should refuse that offer, and did so. I think that the retailers have no right to expect us to refuse another such offer, and I believe that they should come to the front and help us. Surely it is important that we have a flower show, and when we put it up to the retailers and they refuse, then our conscience need not trouble us if we accept department store offers. I feel very positive that there are enough enterprising florists who, if they could be reasonably convinced that the management would so advertise the show that it would bring out Father Knickerbocker and his whole family, they would not hesitate a moment to co-operate with us. I may be wrong in my ideas; however, I see no harm in bringing this matter up now, and I hope that all of you present feel the same as I do when I say that discussion on the subject would do a lot of good. If I am wrong, I am willing to admit it and am always willing to abide by the wishes of the majority. As I said before, my interest has only been aroused a short time, since I realized that it is to my interest to try to master my profession as I intend to stick to it. I want to ask whether an attempt has ever been made to interest some of our wealthy philanthropists in our cause to secure a Horticultural hall; also why does not the daily press help us, in flower show times especially, for they do print occasionally ridiculous stories connected with our profession, such as $20,000 and $30,000 for carnations and $750,000 for a retail wholesale flower store. In Chicago all the newspapers devoted columns to flower show news, and Mr. Rudd tells me that some of the leading editors are members of their society and also help finance the society and give premiums. They do all these things besides giving plenty of space in their columns, and it is so in other large cities. Why can't we accomplish the same? We have brilliant men in our city in every line, in the growing, the wholesale, the retail, among the seedsmen, nurserymen, private gardeners, supply men, etc.

It seems to me that we in this city and vicinity ought to be the leaders in all things pertaining to horticulture. I think that if the members will work in harmony and give all an equal chance, we could not fail to have a great flower show. All we ask is a fair field and no favors. It would soon put us in the lead, where we ought to be. There is no doubt that we have had much success in the past years in this club, but with better co-operation we could attain much greater success in the future.

ALOYSIA CITRIODORA.

This charming old plant, generally known as the scented verbena, makes a grand subject for cultivating in tubs for decorating the grounds in summer, providing room can be found to keep it safe from frost during winter. The finest plants I have ever seen are at Lockinge, and they are perfect pyramids, from fourteen to fifteen feet high, growing in tubs two feet six inches square. These must have been a grand sight during the past summer, as nearly every point flowered. The specimens are thirteen years old. I also noticed several fine standards with five foot stems. Mr. Lyfe grows a large number of plants in tubs for standing about the grounds in summer, the charming position of Lockinge lending itself admirably to this kind of gardening. Gardeners' Magazine.

BEFORE AND AFTER.

In certain lines of business the strongest testimonial is supposed to be the before and after illustration. During the summer John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, have taken a very strong dose of inconvenience, interruption, investment and rehabilitation. The comparative result is shown in the accompanying illustrations and it promises a large and satisfying permanent improvement in their business. One picture shows the Breitmeyer corner as it appeared on April 24, 1905, just before the workmen began tearing down the old store to give place to the handsome eight-story steel building shown in the other illustration, the photograph of which was made on the afternoon of December 12 and shows the crowd which had assembled in anticipation of the formal public opening of the store. The quarters in which the firm had spent the summer are shown in the lower left-hand corner of the picture.

Philip Breitmeyer has devoted the larger part of the past year to planning the new store. It is in every respect one of the finest in America. The furnishings are in the most excellent taste and absence of the employer, is much safer, and much more economical, than low-paid, irresponsible help.

Good help being so hard to obtain, many employers are trying to solve the problem by engaging a low class of labor, ignorant, without a trade of any kind, without intelligence and without interest. Although this may possibly be unavoidable, it is very detrimental to the business interests of the employer. Cheap labor is dear labor. Constant watching is required to keep them working, and the results are unsatisfactory. There is also to be considered the fact that they displace good labor. One good man with a knowledge of his business is worth four who are ignorant, and know no business, and do not care to learn one. The problem for the employer to solve is whether it will not be more profitable for him to engage good men who are satisfactory in their work but demand fair play, or to engage men who care nothing about the work but want Saturday night and the dollar.

The ideal employer is human, considers the natural feelings and instincts of his help, and does not seek to do them any injustice. He does not try to impose on them because he feels they may, to a certain extent, be subject to his will, but remembers that they are made of flesh and blood like himself, and if they possess the qualities of gentlemen, are gentlemen. Possession of capital does not entail gentility or superiority. There are, in fact, many employees who are in every way superior to their employers. The employer has this in his own hands. If he wishes to be superior, as every employer striving for respect and position should be, he should be superior in his manners and conduct. He can, by treating his employees squarely, meeting their just demands, and attending strictly to business himself, gain their approbation and confidence.

Before giving orders to the employees, the employer would do well to thoroughly consider what his plans are to be, and when once he has given his orders should not retract unless something very serious should prevent his carrying them out. An employer who is fair in the treatment of his men does much toward commanding their respect, and if this is coupled with good moral conduct toward them, and in their presence, harmony is facilitated.

Swearing and nagging simply irritate the men and they will not tolerate such if there is any chance of doing better. When giving an order, give it in a quiet, distinct voice. If misunderstood, it is useless to fly into a rage and lose control of oneself, which also means the inevitable loss of control over the men. One who cannot master himself is surely not fit to master others.

The employer should be a leader among his men, and should understand his business thoroughly. A thorough knowledge of the business in hand is essential to success.

It is necessary for the employer's interests that all the work should be faithfully executed, but he would do well to consider carefully before discharging a man for any seeming negligence. Investigate fully and give him a hearing. It is a bad plan to recommend an employee to another employer if he has not proved worthy but give him a high character if he deserves it. Never try to hold the workman down, for he also has ambitions.

every convenience is afforded for the proper handling of a very large business. It goes without saying that the investment is a heavy one, but the public interest in the enterprise is something beyond the anticipations of its originators and a profitable increase in business is already assured.

THE IDEAL EMPLOYER.

[An essay by Arthur F. Capers, Auburn, R. I., submitted in the S. A. F. convention contest for the Beatty prizes.]

The ideal employer is one who conscientiously endeavors to do unto his men as he would like them to do unto him. The employer demands honesty, diligence, faithfulness in the fulfilling of the mutual contract, and promptness, all of which are essential in an employee and just as essential in an employer.

In order to make a good beginning it is wisest for the employer to engage men who are well recommended and with some intelligence. He can then be sure that he has the best material with which to run his establishment. Good help which can be trusted in the temporary Awaiting the Breitmeyer Opening, December 12.

Some employers feel that they should have some means of knowing how their men work in their absence and often try to come upon them unawares. This is surely a bad practice, for if the men feel that they are distrusted, they will take advantage of his absence, while if they know they are trusted they will work for their own self-respect. An employer who knows his business is not long finding out who are the drones and who are the busy bees.

When the whistle blows at closing time, the employees should be allowed to leave, providing everything is in ship-shape condition. The employer should go over the place after quitting time to make sure that all is as it should be. "The eye of the master will do more work than both his hands."

It sometimes happens that men in the service of a company are injured while at their work. If an employer is injured, he still has his business, which keeps him supplied with worldly necessities, but when a workman is injured his income ceases unless some means are invented of helping him. It is the employers' duty to assist those of their employees who are injured in their service.

The question of pay is an all-absorbing one. It is a fact that men in the florists' business are underpaid. Many years are consumed acquiring some knowledge of plant culture, and after the expiration of those years the average florist is rewarded with less pay than can be obtained scraping a hoe over the streets of any town or city. It is a mistake on the employer's part to wait until his men ask for an increase in wages, provided they merit an increase. A good man will seldom ask but will show his dissatisfaction by accepting a better position elsewhere. Some encouragement should be held out to the men by the wideawake employer. "A good paymaster never wants workmen."

Looking at the matter in retrospect, it will be seen that close attention to the laws of humanity and an intelligent selection of labor play an important part. Morals, leadership and general superintendence on the part of the employer will benefit the community in general and himself. If the employer considers his dealings with labor, his business will gain from the tone of wholesomeness thus imparted. It is for the interest of the employer to engage a man who is diligent, prompt and faithful, and it is for the employee's interest to work for the one who pays him the highest wages. Providing the one treats the other as he would himself like to be treated, the danger of disagreement is much lessened, and harmony between employer and employee will be perpetual.

JOHN SCOTT.

John Scott, president-elect of the New York Florists' Club, is a Scotchman, born in 1868 at Newland, Midlothian, and with the strong character and robust health of his countrymen looks good for a century. He began his horticultural life when young and worked in Edinburgh, Ayrshire, Taymouth Castle and Rosemont House, from which place he came to Canada some fifteen years ago.

His first engagement in America was at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., from which city he moved to the estate of the Hon. Levi P. Morton, where James Boyd was head gardener. His next move was to the Dinsmore estate at Staatsburg, N. Y., where Thomas Emerson was head gardener. Leaving here he accepted the position of superintendent of the Seholes establishment on Keap street, Brooklyn, where he soon was given an interest and built up rapidly a reputation as a plantsman, shipping his Boston ferns especially to every part of the country. Dame Fortune was kind and his success was constant. As a reward for the faithful loyalty to Madame Nature she led him to cast his eagle eye one day on a sport from one of his Bostons that intuition and common sense at once declared "a find," and so it has proved to be, for Scottii has made John immortal. Now he has a big plant of 60,000 square feet, counting the 25,000 going up in 1906 at Flatbush, a fine family and home and as good a future as any young man could desire.

Mr. Scott is a member of the F. & A. M. and Clan McDonald, and as modest and unassuming and popular a man as ever occupied the president's chair. He will do the office and himself credit, and John Birnie's bagpipes will be the official music of 1906. Mr. Scott is a member of the S. A. F. and the Flatbush Bowling Club, and has added a charming wife and two fine children to his world's possessions since he came to the city of churches. Birnie says he's a "braw laddie," and Nugent promises an abundance of "good old Scotch" at the inauguration ceremonies on the evening of January 8.

THE PRIVATE GARDENER.

"How can the private gardener elevate his calling?" As this question was brought up a short time ago at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, and not answered, some of us have been asked to give our views on the subject. With your kind permission I will freely give my opinion.

It appears to me that the question is not an idle one, but one of importance. It is praiseworthy in any man to have sufficient ambition to try to better his condition in life, and to aim for the best and most practical knowledge in his trade. In every branch of industry the skilled workman, the man who thoroughly understands his craft, who can produce the best and finest work, can command the highest pay. Employers are quick to see and know the worth of such men, and are not unwilling to give them their dues. In every walk of life, a man should bring to his calling industry, knowledge, intelligence, conscientious work and high, noble character.

My first question on this subject is: "Who is the private gardener and what position does he hold among his fellow gardeners?" The private gardener is the man who is hired by an estate-owner to take charge of his place in a manner satisfactory to his employer in every detail. He is expected to be able to answer any question about gardening, to fill every order given him, to work out any plan or suggestion that may

THE PRIVATE GARDENER.

"How can the private gardener elevate his calling?" As this question was brought up a short time ago at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore, and not answered, some of us have been asked to give our views on the subject. With your kind permission I will freely give my opinion.

It appears to me that the question is not an idle one, but one of importance. It is praiseworthy in any man to have sufficient ambition to try to better his condition in life, and to aim for the best and most practical knowledge in his trade. In every branch of industry the skilled workman, the man who thoroughly understands his craft, who can produce the best and finest work, can command the highest pay. Employers are quick to see and know the worth of such men, and are not unwilling to give them their dues. In every walk of life, a man should bring to his calling industry, knowledge, intelligence, conscientious work and high, noble character.

My first question on this subject is: "Who is the private gardener and what position does he hold among his fellow gardeners?" The private gardener is the man who is hired by an estate owner to take charge of his place in a manner satisfactory to his employer in every detail. He is expected to be able to answer any question about gardening, to fill every order given him, to work out any plan or suggestion that may be given for beautifying the place; in short, he is expected to do everything asked for.

The position of a first-class private gardener is first among those who till the soil. Why? Because he is supposed to have studied all branches of gardening and to have experience in them, since he is called upon by his employer to do work in all the various branches. He must necessarily know horticulture, agriculture, viticulture, floriculture, forestry, landscape gardening, vegetable gardening, etc. He must also know some botany, in order to be able to give the proper names and class of all the plants, flowers, trees, shrubs, etc., that come under his care and keeping.

It is the private gardener who has the best opportunity to show his scientific knowledge and art in the culture of the finest flowers, vegetables, etc.; who can show fine landscape work, and who can make the place in his charge a perfect model of beauty.

A man who is thorough in all this needs not be elevated; he is by right above all others. Every one will recognize him at his proper worth as soon as he gives proof of his knowledge, art, good taste and conscientious work; and no proprietor will hesitate to raise his salary in order to keep on his place, a man of whom he can justly be proud.

I must now speak of a class of men who call themselves gardeners, but who

and he puts us all in the same category. These men do us great injury, and we ought to impress the employers with the fact that all depends upon having the right man in charge of their estates. Let us each ask ourself: "To which class do I belong?" The answer will settle the question about improving the state of gardeners. No man has cause for complaint as to his station, who thoroughly knows and understands his business or trade, and who does his duty therein.

Now a word to those who hire gardeners. I would advise any man who wants a gardener to take a man who has studied gardening in its various branches, who has experience, who can give proofs of good work done, and who has a liking for this branch of industry. If he does this he will have good results, his place will be improved, beautified, and will afford him pleasure as well as satisfaction.

SEAFORTHIA INFLORESCENCE.

The Illawarra palm, Ptychosperma Cunninghamiana, is one of the well known inhabitants of the palm house, though possibly more readily recognized when spoken of as Seaforthia elegans. It is a native of Queensland and New South Wales, where it attains a height of about sixty feet when fully grown, like branches, are often produced by plants in cultivation, the flowers being small and insignificant, but followed by an abundant crop of seeds that remind one somewhat of a small olive.

What variety of cucumbers is best for growing in the greenhouse for an early spring crop? Our market seems to demand a long green cucumber. Last season I grew Improved White Spine, but they did not sell as well as longer varieties. J. W. R.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

Lettuce.

Apart from keeping up a succession of young plants and keeping the benches filled as vacancies occur, there will be very little variation from the general routine of work in the lettuce house, only it is better to keep the soil on the dry side through the dull, short days and to keep the beds frequently stirred. This stirring will obviate to a great extent the necessity of applying water so often, especially where solid beds are employed, and keep the plants in a healthy condition.

Strict attention should also be paid to the removal of any decayed or damped leaves, which, when left hanging around, are a fruitful source of fungous diseases.

A sowing of seed should be made now to procure plants for setting in hotbeds later on. The time when these are generally started varies a good deal with latitude and also depends largely on possess little knowledge of gardening. They have tried various trades, but failed; they have never studied anything about plants, have no experience in gardening, but think if they can cut a lawn, or if they have helped a few weeks in greenhouses, they know all, and they give themselves out as gardeners. They work for small wages, humbug their employers, have no success in raising anything, perhaps spoil a lot of things and thus the place is not improved, but goes to ruin. Naturally the employer is disgusted with such men, the stem slender and smooth, but ringed with the scars of former leaves.

The stem of this palm extends in a sort of corky basin, through which a great number of stout roots like ropes connect the plant with the earth, and it would seem that this singular arrangement is simply another wise provision of nature in the form of a sort of universal joint, to allow the trunk of the tree to swing with the force of the wind without disturbing the roots.

weather conditions, though generally speaking the middle of February is about the best time to start hotbeds. It is better, however, to delay a week, or even two, if the weather is very severe, as with the thermometer around the zero point, it would be a severe tax on the hotbed and the heat would be apt to be spent before the weather was warm enough for the plants to do without the assistance of artificial heat.

In pricking the plants over into flats after they have attained sufficient size for handling, it is well to bear in mind that they may have to stand a week or two longer than at first intended and allow them plenty of room, so that they will not become crowded and drawn should it be necessary to hold them over for a while.

Cauliflower.

The present is also a good time to sow seeds of this for hotbed purposes and the same remarks regarding space is applicable to them. A rather higher temperature than that of the lettuce house will be necessary to insure a good start for the seed of these, as they are apt to come slowly in a low temperature, especially if the seed is a little antiquated, which it is sometimes apt to be either wholly or in part. In any case a temperature of from 50 to 55 degrees will give it all the better chance. The Dwarf Erfurt variety is a good one for frame work, as it is more compact in growth than Snowball, thus needing less head room.

Cucumbers.

A good deal of watching and coaxing is necessary with these during the dull-est period of the season. Strong fire heat combined with the difficulty often experienced in admitting sufficient fresh air is apt to cause thinness of foliage, so that every opportunity must be watched and all possible air judiciously admitted on every favorable occasion.

The pollination of the flowers also needs close watching, where this operation has to be done by hand, and every opportunity taken advantage of during the brightest part of the day, when enough air is on the house to make the pollen sufficiently dry. Insect pests are also apt to be troublesome when strong fire heat is employed and good judgment must be used in the regulation of atmospheric moisture, a certain amount of which is necessary to keep the insects down. But on the other hand a moisture-laden atmosphere is productive of thin foliage and soft growth, hence the necessity of judicious regulation.

CUCUMBER GROWERS.

Although it is only a few years since Benjamin Vickery, late foreman for W. W. Rawson, at Arlington, built the first cucumber house in East Mansfield, Mass., there has been a great development since that time. Mr. Vickery's is the largest plant, but in addition there are six other growers close by, all of whom have large up-to-date houses. The other growers are Fred Dustin, Joseph Dustin, W. A. Staples, A. Burt, John Conrad and J. Geddes, with prospects of one or two additions to the ranks in the near future. The bulk of the produce is shipped to New York. A good selection of White Spine is grown.

FURNACE AND FLUE.

[Because of so many calls for copies, which can no longer be supplied, the following query and answer are reprinted from our issue of December 31, 1903.]

I want to heat a greenhouse 18x50 feet, even span, running east and west, no glass in ends or sides. The side walls are four feet high and the roof is at an angle of about 35 degrees. A night temperature of 50 degrees is necessary when it is 10 degrees below zero outdoors. I want to use a flue and would like full directions for building both furnace and flue.

I also want to heat an adjoining greenhouse 10x20 feet, glass in one end, roof at an angle of 35 degrees, even span, side walls four feet high. Here a night temperature of 60 degrees is needed. I want to use hot water to heat this small house. How can I arrange pipes in the furnace in the larger house to heat the small one? Also how many and what size pipes will it take to heat the house?

E. W. H.

While the flue is not to be recommended where other plans of heating can be afforded, the house in question can be heated by a flue and furnace constructed as shown in the sketches,

Fig. I and II. Locate the furnace at the west end of the house. Dig a pit about four feet wide and two feet deep extending at least five feet inside the greenhouse and any convenient distance on the outside. Construct a drain of tile on boards to carry off any surface water which might get into the pit. In Fig. I a plan of the furnace and flue is given. The furnace extends about nine inches outside the greenhouse wall; has walls thirteen inches thick, nine inches common arch brick lined with fire brick. For this building the furnace should be three feet long by one foot eight inches wide in the clear on the inside, which gives the furnace five square feet of grate surface. An ash pit eighteen inches deep, counting from the top of the grate bars, should be provided. The fire-box should also be at least twelve inches in height from grate surface to position of the 1½-inch pipes shown in Fig. II, which should be connected at the front of the furnace with return bends and at the rear with cast-iron manifolds. One pipe of each of the five pair should be carried into a manifold to receive the return water and one from each pair carried a little farther back into a manifold to receive the flow pipe which is to heat the 10x20 house. The flow had best be 2-inch pipe. At the end of the manifold "T" on the returns marked "exp." in Fig. II a ¾-inch reducer should be placed in the end of the manifold and into this screw a street "L" which should carry a ¾-inch pipe leading to the peak of the greenhouse and into the bottom of an expansion tank which should hold ten or fifteen gallons. A second-hand steel water tank is ideal for this purpose. The 2-inch riser or flow pipe can be carried from the heater directly under the benches in the 10x20 house and thereby a manifold be broken up into four 1½-inch pipes running around the house and again uniting in a manifold at the opposite side of the house. The cooled water would be returned by a 1½-inch pipe to the manifold at the rear of the furnace marked (ret) in Fig. II. The heating surface in the furnace will be made up of ten 1½-inch pipes running from end to end of the furnace as shown in Fig. II.

The flue should run entirely around

be given for beautifying the place; in short, he is expected to do everything asked for.

The position of a first-class private gardener is first among those who till the soil. Why? Because he is supposed to have studied all branches of gardening and to have experience in them, since he is called upon by his employer to do work in all the various branches. He must necessarily know horticulture, agriculture, viticulture, floriculture, forestry, landscape gardening, vegetable gardening, etc. He must also know some botany, in order to be able to give the proper names and class of all the plants, flowers, trees, shrubs, etc., that come under his care and keeping.

It is the private gardener who has the best opportunity to show his scientific knowledge and art in the culture of the finest flowers, vegetables, etc.; who can show fine landscape work, and who can make the place in his charge a perfect model of beauty.

A man who is thorough in all this needs not be elevated; he is by right above all others. Every one will recognize him at his proper worth as soon as he gives proof of his knowledge, art, good taste and conscientious work; and no proprietor will hesitate to raise his salary in order to keep on his place, a man of whom he can justly be proud.

I must now speak of a class of men who call themselves gardeners, but who

and he puts us all in the same category. These men do us great injury, and we ought to impress the employers with the fact that all depends upon having the right man in charge of their estates. Let us each ask ourself: "To which class do I belong?" The answer will settle the question about improving the state of gardeners. No man has cause for complaint as to his station, who thoroughly knows and understands his business or trade, and who does his duty therein.

Now a word to those who hire gardeners. I would advise any man who wants a gardener to take a man who has studied gardening in its various branches, who has experience, who can give proofs of good work done, and who has a liking for this branch of industry. If he does this he will have good results, his place will be improved, beautified, and will afford him pleasure as well as satisfaction.

The flue should run entirely around the house and discharge into a chimney built on top of or by the side of the furnace. The throat of the flue should be four inches wide and about ten inches deep at the end near the furnace and will be most convenient if taken off at the side of the furnace, as shown in Fig. 1. For the first thirty feet the flue should be made of brick four inches and lined with fire brick set on edge, thus making a 6-inch side wall, which should be capped with a layer of fire brick and jacketed with common brick. From thirty feet on, the flue may be made of ordinary 8-inch terra cotta pipe, using elbows at the corners and packing the joints thoroughly with the best cement. The earth or supports for the flue should make a uniform grade around the house and have a rise of at least two feet in the distance, which will be about 110 feet. A "T" joint of terra cotta pipe can be placed on top of the furnace at the proper height to receive the end of the flue, and by extending the perpendicular portion of the terra cotta pipe the chimney can be made.

RAFFIA.

A neat booklet published by the R. H. Comey Co. contains some very interesting matter, of which the following is part:

A man never knows the possible extent of the sale of any goods until he has made a trial of them, and this is especially true of a novelty like raffia. Unless a dealer has carried raffia in stock, he is unable to know how many women and children there are who are enthusiastic users of the enticing fibre.

Raffia, which is the outer skin of a long-leaved palm found on the Island of Madagascar, is strong and pliable, and can be woven, crocheted, plaited, braided or twisted into almost every conceivable object. Artistic, useful, beautiful, this fascinating work has received the stamp of fashionable approval. Many novel, beautiful and useful articles can be made.

Indian basketry is in high favor at the present time. In the past the art of making baskets has been confined to the Indians, and the very name "Indian" baskets has been connected with mystery, cunning art and high prices. But now, since the introduction of raffia, basket making has become very popular, and anyone can, with a little practice, do work which closely imitates the best Indian art. Amateur basket makers may be counted by hundreds of thousands. Books have been published recently on weaving baskets, and all the "ladies' magazines" have articles or departments on the subject. There are also raffia basket-weaving classes in nearly holstery work, being used extensively in the manufacture of hangings, embroidery of designs on pillow tops and burlap. It is also coming into use in furniture industries, being interwoven with rattan in the manufacture of light tables, chairs and all styles of fancy and picturesque light house furnishings.

The farmers realize that an article of good appearance is already half sold. The progressive farmer has, therefore, done away with the common jute twine with which he used to bunch his asparagus, celery and other like products, and has adopted instead raffia grass, which does not cut into the bunch.

A skein of raffia is an every-day necessity wherever floriculture or horticulture are carried on. Raffia is the favorite tying material with the plantmen, for several reasons. Not the least of these is its comparative inexpensiveness, but the greatest of all is the fact that it neither stretches nor shrinks under the influence of heat or moisture. Once properly adjusted a tie of raffia does not loosen, releasing that which it was intended to hold; neither does it shrink and cut the plant, perhaps to ruin it. It is soft and pliable, and does not break or ravel when folded or knotted. These qualities bring raffia into general use for many purposes in nurseries and greenhouses, where heat and moisture are always found.

Probably the greatest value of raffia, and its principal use in horticulture, is in grafting. For this work it is recommended by leading men as the best material, and has come to be almost universally employed. Robert Craig told the Society of American Florists, in convention at Omaha, in 1896, that "raffia is preferable, as string is apt to shrink and cut into and injure the graft." In describing the process of rose grafting in a recent article in the Florists' Review, Alex. Montgomery, Jr., of Waban, said: "Having stock and scion joined, grasp a piece of raffia which has previously been cut to the proper length; insert one end between the forefinger and second finger. Wind carefully and firmly, beginning always at the top, and not winding too closely together, as close winding gives a chance for moisture to collect beneath the raffia and causes rotting of the scion." Of the scion, mind you; the raffia does not rot, shrink or slip. "The neatest way to make the tie is to pass the free end through beneath the last twist of the raffia and draw tight."

A great many florists sell raffia to their customers, and in seed stores it is a regular item of stock. The manufacturers of florists' requisites (baskets, pot covers, hampers and the thousand and one articles the florist employs to furnish attractive settings for his plants and flowers) use raffia in an infinitude of ways.

FERNS FOR MARKET.

In speaking of the London market a writer in the Horticultural Advertiser says:

"We get very little that is new in ferns. Pteris cretica major remains one of the most popular, but the variegated P. Alexander is appreciated. Of crested varieties, Wimsetti still remains the favorite; in fact, it is almost the only crested sort now seen. Tremula remains a favorite, but I think the system of growing several plants together does not add to its beauty. Years ago, when they were well grown from single plants they were labiata carried six and in one or two cases seven flowers each. The plants are grown in pans and baskets in a span-roofed house, being kept well to the light. Fern fibre is used for compost. Other varieties of cattleyas are equally well grown.

W. N. CRAIG.

I LIKE the REVIEW very much and probably shall take it as long as I am in the business, for I should miss its weekly visits were I to try to get along without it.—SAMUEL WHEELER, Berlin, Mass.

all the schools of applied design, and many women in towns also teach the use of raffia.

If you would talk with a dealer in school supplies, you would be surprised to find out the immense quantity of raffia grass which is sold to public schools. The total is enormous, running up in the tons. Raffia is used in the manual training classes, and nothing the children use gives them better results or greater pleasure.

Raffia, on account of its wonderful strength, is especially adapted for up-better. Polypodium aureum is now well done, but is too plentiful to command high prices. Asplenium nidus does not find so much favor as it did a year or two ago, yet even now there are a good many sold. Asplenium biforme still remains the most popular of the bulbiferum section. Laxum pumilum which sold well some years ago is now rarely seen, and fœniculaceum is another which is not often seen now. Of nephrolepis, exaltata still remains the most useful, but it is only the plants which are propagated from the off-sets, or divisions, that make the best material. Recently we have been having a good many of the new crested variety Westoni. This makes a well furnished plant, but the color is rather somber and the spores being produced so freely, gives it a dusty appearance as soon as the spores begin to fill. The beautiful American variety Piersoni, has not yet quite taken the attention of florists, yet it is one of the handsomest ferns we have, and as I have a plant which has been in the house some months and still looks well, this proves that it will stand well. Adiantums vary but little, if anything, they are not so much wanted as formerly. Some good lomarias are coming in but these are not much wanted. I think that most of those that are sold are for country orders. The Japanese fern balls have not been making such good prices as formerly; the large importations have made them too common. There is not such a good sale for small ferns as formerly and supplies are overplentiful."

SHASTA DAISIES.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken August 25, at the establishment of T. F. Larison, LeRoy, Kan., and shows flowers of the Shasta daisy produced during a hot, dry season. Writing October 17 Mr. Larison says: "They have been blooming all season, and at the present are full of bud and bloom. I know of no white flower that is so good a summer bloomer as this, or that will stand the neglect. I do not know if my treatment is common among the florists, but it works well here. I divide the roots up in the spring and cultivate until June, at which time I give a good mulching of well-rotted manure. The work is then done for that season; it only remains to cut flowers the season through. Clumps that were not divided only gave one good crop of blooms."

BOSTON.

The Market.

The usual shortening up in supplies previous to Christmas was evident at the first of this week. Prices are averaging very good, an improvement over a year ago. It looks as though a good deal of pickled stock would be thrown on the market at the end of the week. It would pay growers to bring in a little more stock at prevailing prices rather than hold back everything to the closing day of the week, but the temptation of higher prices is irresistible.

Roses have stiffened in price quite materially, best Beauties going up to $50. Other varieties are also higher. The least advance is noted in Brides, the colored varieties, as usual, having most call. Carnations are becoming quite aggressive, and it is expected will sell higher than ever before at Christmas. Fancies are bringing $6 to $8, such sorts as Fiancee, Helen Goddard, Fenn, Enchantress and good scarlets bringing these prices. Prosperity, which is, however, only coming from a few growers, makes $12. Whites are overabundant and drag. Something of a glut of these is likely and probably $3 per hundred is as much as many will bring. Violets are selling at $1 to $1.50, but will be higher at the end of the week. Some very good poinsettias are arriving. These bring $5 to $6 per dozen bracts. Cypripedium insigne is abundant, but cattleyas are not overplentiful, C. Percivalliana and a few C. trianae being seen.

Bulbous stock holds about the same and never scores much of an advance at the holidays. Lily of the valley sells well. Callas and Easter lilies are bringing an average of $2 per dozen. Sweet peas continue quite plentiful. There is a good call for asparagus, adiantum and smilax. In addition there is considerable business being done in laurel, boxwood, holly, mistletoe and other greenery. The demand for these seems to be better than ever.

There is a good variety of pot plants on the market. Those most in evidence are Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, berried plants in variety, primulas, cyclamens and azaleas. An unusually good demand is noted for these. It is hoped the seasonable winter weather now prevailing may last over the holidays and under such auspices business will break all previous records.

Club Meeting.

As was to have been expected, the attendance on December 19 when the Gardeners' and Florists' Club held ladies' night, was the largest in the club's history and this in spite of the fact that the near approach of Christmas made it impossible for some to attend. The exhibition table had a very attractive lot of exhibits as usual, and the membership roll was swelled by further additions. The stereopticon lecture on Japan by John K. M. L. Farquhar was deeply interesting, especially the views of the siege of Port Arthur in the late Russo-Japanese war.

The club quartet led by Frank B. Cannell furnished some delightful selections. There also was an excellent ladies' banjo club. A reception committee of young men, of which Herbert E. Tyler, of the Montrose Greenhouses, was chairman, helped to make everyone feel at home and at the close served the refreshments.

During the evening the secretary gave a report on the attendances during the year as compared with 1904, in itself a prosperous year. Last year the average attendance at meetings was thirty-five and total of new members elected forty-six. During the present year the average attendance, including the December meeting, has been eighty-six and the number of new members 145; total membership is now 253. At the January 16 meeting the newly elected officers will be installed. As this will just precede the coming meeting of the American Carnation Society there will be much work in connection with that society to do. Prospects for 1906 are excellent and a membership of 400 ere the close of the year is predicted.

Winsor carnation was certificated at this meeting.

Various Notes.

Carbone is showing some well berried skimmias, also hollies, aucubas and ardisias. In cut flowers he has some very fine scarlet amaryllises. He has a very large assortment of Italian pottery in vases, window boxes and jardinieres.

Welch Bros.' emporium is one of the busiest places in Boston at present. They are having a big call for holly, mistletoe, boxwood and other greenery and will handle more flowers than ever before in their history.

Anderson & Williams are bringing in large quantities of splendid bouvardia.

Frank White, of Holbrook, was first in the market with some capitally-grown pans of freesia.

S. J. Goddard will build a new iron-frame house for carnations, 33x135, next spring. He reports orders as coming in very fast for Helen Goddard. He commenced filling early orders a few days ago and will ship right along now as fast as cuttings are ready.

E. Sutermeister is recovering from a sickness which has confined him to the house for some days.

W. E. Cahill, the respected president of the Seed Trade Bowling League, is able to be around again after a siege of sickness in a hospital.

John McFarland, as usual, has a grand lot of poinsettias for Christmas, also a fine lot of valley.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, is probably the most noted of the commercial plantsmen near Boston. His stock of cyclamens, poinsettias, white and pink Lorraine begonias, primulas, ericas, azaleas and other seasonable plants is the finest he ever had and few will be left at Christmas.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are being rushed to the limit at present to fill orders for holly, boxwood, laurel, smilax and other green stock and are obliged to work all night.

H. A. Stevens Co. are again having great success with mushrooms at their Dedham establishment.

Remick & Smith, of South Framingham, have a magnificent house of Queen carnations and extra fine Princess of Wales violets. Their flowers are now being sold at the Park street market.

Bowling League.

The Schlegel & Fottler Co. still retain first place. The Music hall market team, from late performances, looks as though it might be able to retain its grasp on the leather medal end. The scores are as follows:

ESCANABA, MICH.—C. Peterson & Sons will have a cut of late chrysanthemums for the holidays.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cut flower market is quiet preceding the Christmas rush. Flowers are arriving in moderate quantity, with quite enough demand to dispose of them as rapidly as they reach the city. Prices have advanced slightly, carnations and Beauties being in the lead. Great quantities of poinsettias are being marketed already. Holly is also much used in decorations.

Flowering Plants.

It is estimated by good judges that fully as many flowering plants will be offered for the Christmas holidays as were seen at Easter five or six years ago. The retail stores are using them lavishly, to the exclusion, perhaps, of the medium sizes of palms and ferns. These flowering plants are used both singly and in hampers. In the latter they are combined with small foliage plants.

Poinsettia stands first among the Christmas blooming plants. Great quantities of these showy scarlet bracts have been forced this season, John Ziegenthaler, of Frankford, being perhaps the largest grower of this plant. The Alburgers and the Westcotts, of Laurel Hill; Robert Craig & Son, of West Philadelphia, and several other growers also have large quantities of this plant, yet one week before Christmas the supply was nearly all engaged.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine stands next in point of popularity, though the number of growers who forced it successfully is rather limited. The large size pans of this plant have been in good demand. A novelty revived has been the ball-shaped hanging baskets formed of small plants of this begonia inserted in moss. The new white begonia, Turnford Hall, is hardly likely to become popular, as though free blooming it is hardly cheerful enough in color for Christmas.

Cyclamens are very fine this season, probably a little better than ever before.

Azaleas in pink, white and rose are plentiful and very pretty, though they cannot be compared with the stock seen later. Otaheite oranges full of fruit, though not strictly flowering plants, may be classed under that head. They are exceedingly popular, but the supply is limited. Jerusalem cherries can also be had in small quantities, very nicely berried. Holly, in large tubs, full of berries, and Aucuba Japonica, most satisfactory of plants, are seen in the larger collections. There are quite a few primroses about and some geraniums and other flowering plants in small quantities.

Foliage Plants.

Dracaena terminalis, both single and made up plants, beautifully colored, are very popular, the demand being in excess of the supply. Crotons, of several varieties, also both single and made up plants, are well done and meeting with fair demand. The ferns of the Boston type are very fine and plentiful, the supply being rather in excess of the demand, which is probably just as well, as these plants have usually been scarce in January and February. N. Piersoni is practically all sold, but the straight-leaved varieties can be had in all sizes. The decorative sizes of kentias have sold exceptionally well, but the medium sizes are not in such active demand at present.

Various Notes.

M. Rice & Co. had a large shipment of Uncle Theodore heads and mats, which arrived on Sunday on the Barcelona, over a week late on account of the unusually severe storms at sea. By Monday evening, however, they had all of their out-of-town orders shipped by express. Their Christmas business has been unusually heavy.

L. A. Tonner, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, spent several days in town, selecting goods for the opening of their new florists' supply department.

The receiver's sale advertised for last Monday by W. S. Maull at the Peacock dahlia farm, Atco, N. J., has been indefinitely postponed.

Jos. Beavis & Son, Limekiln pike, near Cheltenham avenue, have their Liberties in full crop for Christmas.

Paul J. Klingporn is no longer with Dumont & Co.

Geo. E. Carpenter, of 60 1/2 street and Girard avenue, is sending fine bouvardia to W. J. Baker.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have three steamers in this week with large consignments of Christmas goods. They are having a tremendously busy time getting out their orders.

Robt. Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, have been successful in getting very fine crops of gardenias early this season.

W. A. Leonard, Lansdowne, Pa., has his new house under roof just in time before the snow.

Myers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, will probably have more Beauties than any other grower this Christmas.

Mrs. Geo. H. Pieser, of Chicago, believes that Pandanus Veitchii is the only house plant.

Mrs. S. I. Smith, of Secane, Pa., is getting good results from her new violet house. Luxonne, Princess of Wales, and La France are her single varieties.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have had some very handsome dinner and tea decorations at the Bellevue-Stratford lately. One tea in the red room was decorated entirely with American Beauties. They have a dinner of 400 covers on Friday of this week.

Dr. Surface lectured on the San Jose scale before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society last Tuesday evening.

Frank S. Jackson estimates the cut of poinsettias from Thornhedge Greenhouses to be between 6,000 and 7,000. The quality is very fine. S. S. Pennock is distributing the flowers.

John McIntyre has been visiting among the Beauty growers lately. He reports the crop as fair with quality high. Mr. McIntyre believes Philadelphia Beauties to be a little better than those produced elsewhere.

E. Bernheimer is handling mistletoe. Best wishes for a Merrie Christmas. PHIL.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Trade was fair last week, but at the beginning of the present week there was little doing. Receipts were light and buyers calling for little material. It was the lull before the storm.

Every house in town reports an exceptional number of advance Christmas orders booked. The heavy shipping day will be Friday, but Saturday will see much shipping and many telegraphic orders are expected for Sunday shipment. The city retailers are also placing liberal orders and the wholesalers feel that they are assured a fine Christmas. Certainly all good stock will go at quoted prices.

The past few days have brought a change of sentiment as to supply. A week ago everyone looked for adequate quantities. Today the sentiment is that supplies will be short all along the line. Even Beauties are thought likely not to meet the demand, and the Beauty will be one of the most abundant items. First-class Brides and Maids will be shorter than anticipated and the demand for red roses had several days ago caused most wholesalers to decline further orders. There is some variation in opinion on carnations. Most houses say they will be shorter than appeared likely a week ago, but one or two houses report better supplies than were anticipated. It is felt that little stock is in storage and that fresh stock is assured.

There will be plenty of poinsettias and such items as Paper Whites and valley. The Hudson river district is looked to for violets, little local stock except singles being on the market. Grand Rapids is not a factor. Orders for decorations stimulate the green goods market. Supplies are abundant.

An Even Break.

The other day A. Lange met one of his retail customers buying in a wholesale store. It is reported to have so aroused his ire that he told the customer she had no business to be there, told the wholesaler he must not sell outside the trade, and announced his determination of putting a stop once for all to wholesalers selling to others than legitimate florists; he says they shall not sell either to friends or strangers. It is an exceedingly large contract. Commission men to whom Mr. Lange has announced his intentions have told him that they will gladly refrain from selling at retail when Mr. Lange ceases to obtain his violets direct from the Hudson river growers, his ferns from the Massachusetts shippers and his other supplies from first hands wherever possible. Some interesting "doings" are anticipated.

Club Meeting.

There was a very good attendance at the Florists' Club December 14. W. N. Rudd called to order and the first business was installing his successor, P. J. Hauswirth and his staff, L. H. Winterson being the new secretary. Mr. Hauswirth appointed E. F. Winterson as bowling committee and J. C. Vaughan, Harry Klunder and A. I. Simmons as entertainment committee. Other appointments were deferred. It was voted to have a carnation show some time in January. Several spoke of going to Boston to the national carnation show. The trustees were instructed to look for a new meeting place, where refreshments will be in order. Several members were elected.

W. N. Rudd reported as to flower show results. The gate receipts were exactly $12,320.35. Other revenue brings the total receipts to over $13,000. The expenses are not yet totaled but will not exceed $9,000.

Various Notes.

Among the week's visitors were Paul and Henry Dailedouze, Flatbush, N. Y. Each year at least one of the Dailedouze brothers visits the leading carnation growers as far west as Chicago, and they are always welcome guests.

P. J. Hauswirth ran down to Detroit for the Breitmeyer opening. He arrived too late for the trade inspection but just in time to lend a hand at the formal opening to the public. Mr. Hauswirth says that the store is second to none in the United States.

Tom Allen, on Winona street, is pretty thoroughly disgusted with Beauty growing. He has been exceptionally successful with this flower, but the past season the pest which has made so much trouble for several growers in his section has practically ruined his crop. He will cut his plants down next week and make a fresh start for a spring crop. Mr. Allen is one of those who usually stick by old friends, but he says he will drop the Beauty.

One of the best looking crops of carnations in the neighborhood is that of Carl Muno, at Rogers Park. It is Mr. Muno's first year in the business.

One of the week's visitors was E. G.

GREENHOUSES: MORTON GROVE, ILL. 900,000 FEET OF GLASS.

Hill, of Richmond, who as usual at this season, has several things to say to the growers.

George Reinberg has a crop of very fine poinsettias. He expects to cut 10,000 Beauties this week.

Hubert Hansen is sending a nice crop of carnations to the Kennicott Bros. Co. Crusader is especially good.

The exhibitors at the World's Fair flower show have received the diplomas representing their medal awards, just thirteen months after the show.

C. M. Dickinson, of Hunt's, has been on the sick list again this week.

The failure of the Chicago National and associated banks has occupied much attention this week. Harry Rowe was a depositor but was not inconvenienced, as another bank took over his balance promptly. Bassett & Washburn have been getting coal over the Southern Indiana, financed by the Chicago National, and have wondered what was doing, for it was almost impossible to get shipments. They think coal supplies will be easier now.

D. F. Hawkes, at Wheaton, is having very good success with Marie Louise violets. It is his only crop under about 6,000 feet of glass and the flowers compare very favorably with the best Hudson river product, having fragrance in addition. Mr. Hawkes ships to the A. L. Randall Co.

Saturday will be the shortest day in the year, as well as one of the very busiest.

Wm. K. Wood was married December 18 to Miss Catherine Macdonald, also formerly of Boston.

L. A. Tonner, of the A. L. Randall Co., returned Monday from New York and Philadelphia, after having bought a large stock of florists' supplies.

Stollery Bros. have some very well flowered azaleas for Christmas.

Vaughan & Sperry say that a week before Christmas they had as many orders booked as the total of their Christmas business a year ago.

N. C. Moore & Co. are still marketing some nice chrysanthemums.

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society yesterday afternoon to wind up flower show affairs.

Weiland & Risch say that the Christmas call for Killarney is surprising even themselves, and they are as enthusiastic on this rose as one could well be.

Wieter Bros. had a red seedling carnation which is a great Christmas flower. Red Bradt is still a favorite with them.

John Degnan has withdrawn from his connection with the E. F. Winterson Co., and, although no announcement has been made, it is understood that the Chicago Rose Co., of which he is secretary, will shortly open a wholesale cut flower and supply store.

C. A. Samuelson has a large decoration at Bournique's for a Christmas night affair. The necessity of putting this up at the time Christmas deliveries are being made will call for some active hustling.

The Baby Rambler roses for Christmas are many of them not as satisfactory as they would be if not so fully in bloom.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There is not much time to spare at present to tell what happened the past week. On the whole business was good during the week. There were a great many weddings and funerals, the latter creating a considerable part of the week's business. Choice stock was not over-plentiful and wholesalers cleaned up pretty well every day during the week. The weather has been delightful, just to the liking of the growers, clear and cold.

Roses have not been scarce, thanks to the clear weather. Fancy long Beauties are in big demand, but they are limited. Shorts are very plentiful. Carna-

"A Happy New Year"

We wish you a prosperous New Year. But, we do more than wish it for you. We can help you make it so if you will give us your shipping business.

This is an age of specialists. We do nothing but grow flowers for the shipping trade and we sell no flowers except to that trade. Every inch of our space and every person in our employ is utilized for that one purpose. We know the seasons and we know what it requires for each season, and the kind of service florists desire at those times, and in this Holiday season we have made every preparation to meet those requirements and fill those desires.

tions, like roses, demand a good price for fancy and special stock. In fact, every grade of carnations is selling well and generally cleaned up early each day in all varieties. Violets have been very plentiful, especially Californias, which were sold cheaply. These will go up to $2 per hundred by the end of the week. They will be in good supply for Christmas. Bulbous stock will be plentiful, but lilies are and will be scarce. Holly and ground-pine are having a big call.

Monday the supply was below the average. No doubt the growers were holding off for later in the week.

Club Meeting.

The last regular meeting of the year was held December 14, in the new meeting hall, nineteen members being present. The flower show committee made a lengthy report, showing that the expense of the show was $3,526.40 and the receipts $3,792.40. The latter includes the subscriptions from guarantors, who received back forty per cent of their subscription. The guarantors' fund was $865, making an actual loss of $419. The committee was discharged with a vote of thanks.

The committee on constitution and by-laws reported that the incorporation papers were ready to sign. W. H. Kruse was elected to membership. The trustees presented a list of discussions for the year, two for each month. Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., was present and made a few remarks when called upon. Mr. Peterson had on exhibition a vase of his crimson seedling carnation, very fine, much lighter than the famous Harlowarden. President Ammann also had a vase of extra fine scarlet seedlings.

The following is the list of discussions for the new year: Beginning with the January meeting, the first discussion will be lead by Carl Beyer, on "Forcing Easter Plants." The second, for the same meeting, is on "Managing a Flower Show," by Otto Koenig. February meeting: "The Newer Varieties of Carnations," by John Steidle; "How to Advertise and the Best Means of Bringing a Flower Show before the Public," by J. J. Beneke. March meeting: "The New Varieties of Roses," by J. F. Ammann; "Machine Appliances for Greenhouses, Ventilating and Heating," by J. W. Dunford. April meeting: "Growing Violets," by F. W. Various Notes.

E. C. Burrows, of Pilcher & Burrows, spent the past week down south, visiting the wild smilax merchants. Mr. Burrows has returned and reports that E. A. Beaven and Caldwell The Woodsman were busy as bees filling Christmas orders.

John Held, formerly with the Michel Plant and Bulb Co., has bought out John Brohan, in South St. Louis.

Among the charming window decorations in the west end for the holidays are those of Fred C. Weber, Theo. Miller, Wm. Kalisch & Sons, Mrs. M. M. Ayers and George Waldbart. The show houses are a grand sight. The report is that plants are selling better than last year.

The bowlers met the strong Kern team December 14 and were defeated three in a row. Capt. Beyer was in great form and was high man, rolling 557; Ellison, 547; Meinhardt, 517; Kuehn, 453; Beneke, 431. This week no games will be rolled, owing to the busy season.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—The assets of Chas. E. Foss, consisting of plants, etc., were sold for $140. The liabilities are above $8,000, much of which was money recently borrowed. Foss has suffered a lapse of memory as to what became of the money.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

At the beginning of the week business is only fair. There is neither demand nor supply. What stock comes in, especially roses, has the earmarks of pickling very plainly visible. It seems too bad; but there does not seem to be any remedy. Every year the growers send in a lot of pickled stock, for which they receive about half what they would had they sent it when fresh. Of course some stock has to be held back to meet the holiday rush but there is a limit. How fine it will be when that limit is recognized.

We shall have a fair supply of stock for Christmas. Roses will be most plentiful and there ought to be some fine stock. Beauties will be scarce and so will other red varieties. Brides and Maids will head the market. Carnations will be scarce. We will only be able to care for our regular customers, and even their orders will have to be cut.

There will be a fair supply of poinsettias and these will sell first rate at the usual holiday prices. Violets will be in fair supply and the demand will be first-class. Other stock will be in usual supply.

Various Notes.

R. D. Ruttle, of Covington, Ky., has just finished building a workroom at the rear of his store. This improvement gives him much more space in his store to display goods.

Our new city officials have not yet settled on a man as park superintendent. Several names are under consideration. It is to be hoped that they will use good judgment and pick a man who has the necessary ability to handle our rapidly expanding park system and to get the most out of the new opportunities.

J. W. Remagen, of Lima, O., was a visitor after an absence of about ten years. He called at many of our greenhouse establishments and expressed great pleasure in the rapid strides our city is taking toward the front.

Chas. Jones was taken sick last week, though not seriously. He was confined to his home for several days, but is about again.

Visitors: Chas. Knopf, Richmond, Ind., and Theo Bock and Wm. Lodder, Hamilton. C. J. OHMER.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Business the past week has been rather quiet. Everybody is getting ready for Christmas. The retail stores are making some fine displays in their show windows, consisting of Christmas bells and blooming plants, ferns and poinsettias. Roses and carnations will be short, owing to off crop.

On a trip out to the southern part of the city I visited Henry Fuchs, on Texas street, near St. Michelas cemetery. Mr. Fuchs was born in Vienna, and came to America in 1889 and found his first employment at Nanz & Neuner's place, where he worked until he embarked in business for himself at the place mentioned. Here through hard work and attention to his business he erected five large greenhouses, containing 18,000 square feet of glass. Two houses are planted to roses, one house to carnations, such varieties as Joost, Crane, Enchantress and Moonlight; the other two houses being used for bedding plants for cemetery work. Mr. Fuchs is an active member of the Kentucky Society of Florists and always ready to do his share. He is 32 years of age and married. He is not only a good grower of cut flowers but also an expert piano player.

Frank Gottwall's place, just across from Henry Fuchs' has a plat of ground 32x165, where he erected two houses, one 16x72, the other 14x72, which are planted with carnations in fine condition. Mr. Gottwall is a native of Austria and came to America in 1891 and was employed for many years in Cave Hill cemetery.

Wm. Mann, who has been abroad for over seven months, has returned home. He took in the principal cities, such as Berlin, London, Rome and lots of others. H. LICHTFELD.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—The Gardeners' and Florists' Association has presented Emil Buettner with a silver loving cup as a testimonial of appreciation of his services as judge of the recent flower show.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Business has been good all week. Stock is coming in nicely, not in abundance, but just a sufficient amount to keep us quiet; very often a demand is made for something we can't supply, but the smooth salesman or saleslady can invariably get the customers to take something which is in stock.

Various Notes.

We are glad to know that our growers are fast getting on to the way of growing good violets and the size of some of the violets is really surprising. Carl Haugen figures on bringing in not less than 15,000 this week and some of them are as large as small pansies.

E. F. Lemke is spending some of his time hunting and from all reports he never comes home empty-handed. L. Venzke looks after the business in good shape, which relieves Mr. Lemke of considerable care which the florist is bound to have.

C. F. Haupt has some fine mums which he held nicely until Christmas.

Otto Hiersekorn is steadily working with his funeral designs and he no doubt has a large number of them, just a sufficient number to permit a trip to Europe every few years.

Now that the social season is in full blast, August Vogt finds himself kept busy and trade improving nicely.

The Ranaley Floral Co. is still handling lots of stock and trade apparently is good.

Chas. Vogt makes a specialty of holly wreaths and he certainly is an artist in making them. It might pay a few of our boys to get a sample from Charlie.

Samuel B. Beal has returned from his coast trip for L. L. May & Co. and is now helping in their retail department.

Christmas trees and holly are being handled by all kinds of stores.

TELEPHONE ORDERS

are becoming a most important feature in all lines of trade.

¶ A quarter of a million telephones in New York City and vicinity opens up an extended field to the florist who seeks telephone trade.

¶ It is a high-class trade, too, for telephones are largely used by those whose time is too valuable to be wasted in time-wasting trips among the florists' shops.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market for cut flowers was steady last week. There were no storms. The good ship had fine weather and placid waters. The waves were not even choppy. Monday's and Saturday's prices were the same. The cause, limited supplies and enough diners and debutantes to absorb everything that came except the violets. These, even at their best, could not get above the dollar mark, even for the 100 bunch specials, while immense quantities with a temperature most mild for the middle of December found an outlet on the streets and at times, when slightly passe, sold as low as 25 cents per hundred. The oldest veteran in the cut flower market never saw such a condition of things in the violet department at this season of the year. I venture to predict $1.50 as top for Christmas. Fortunately pickled violets are an impossibility. They "smell to heaven," or the other place, and all the cheap perfume those adepts of the streets soak into them is of little use after twenty-four hours.

Pity the roses wouldn't put up some such natural protest at being held over. I hear the pickling process is in full blast. Nothing the wholesalers can say or do will prevent some of the growers from killing the goose that lays the golden egg. Every Christmas and Easter, after careful resurrection and chloroformed memory of its past, the same old bird is killed again. They say there will be enough pickled stuff this Christmas to sour the wholesalers and retailers for four months, and then comes the Easter killing again. The impossibility to stop these fellows pickling is a proof of immortality. You can't kill the practice.

Fortunately you can't get enough orchids ahead to pickle them, so widespread is becoming the demand and so many of the big cities are forced to do as society in New York dictates. And carnations pickled enjoy their last sleep and cannot be sold at all. It is hard to say how high the grand reds will go next Saturday; to 25 cents sure, for they were worth 10 cents all last week. And Richmonds and Liberties; well, you can guess how high they will soar, for red is king for Christmas.

Mums are now a novelty. Just a few stragglers come along in the wake of the dead army and they can get their own price if they are good and healthy. There'll be a few for the holidays, if anybody wants them.

Some grand rose stock came in last week and the debutante flood carried them off as fast as they arrived. Prices for Al stock were entirely satisfactory to grower and wholesaler. The only complaint was insufficiency. Beauties touched 60 cents quite often and some even flirted with 75 cents, but these were few and far between. One dollar is predicted as top for Christmas, 25 cents for Maids and Brides and the novelties, such as Richmond and Killarney, are expected to demonstrate the power of suitability for the great festival of Christendom and beat their records.

The carnation will surely maintain its enviable place this year. Never was finer stock seen in the wholesale New York market. Among the whites we have never had anything to equal Alma Ward.

The days begin to lengthen Thursday and this is the usual time for business to settle down for the winter season. The only fear now expressed in the wholesale section is lack of supply. The demand this year promises to be the greatest ever known. We look for the merriest and most satisfactory Christmas business ever experienced in New York.

Various Notes.

Van Praag is nicely settled in his new store on Broadway. His artist has a unique window decoration daily. The scheme of $2 assorted boxes semi-weekly has proved a big success. Some days 100 of these are disposed of. This is a plan any florist in the big cities may very profitably consider. Some of the florists put up $1 boxes, but the margin after delivery makes these inadvisable.

S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, made his yearly missionary calls on Saturday.

C. W. Ward is expected back from the Pacific coast for Christmas. He has been at Detroit the past week.

Hicks & Crawbuck, in Brooklyn, had a narrow escape from a disastrous fire last Thursday morning at 2 o'clock. None of the members of the firm was notified until 6 a. m., at which time the danger had passed and all the damage possible had been done. The fire started in the basement, immediately beneath the big ice-box, which was destroyed. The damage by smoke in the supply department was heavy, but the whole loss, amounting to several thousand dollars, was fortunately covered by insurance. Business has gone on as usual. No serious delay occurred in the shipping department and Christmas trade will not be interfered with.

Wm. H. Kuebler moves after Christmas to his new store at 28 Willoughby street, Brooklyn. He will be at the old stand on Boerum place for the holidays.

Some of the retailers tell me nine-tenths of all their orders come by telephone. A quarter of a million phones are now used in New York City alone.

W. F. Gude, of Washington, was in the city last week. He has a good many complimentary things to say of Queen Beatrice rose.

The leucoethæ and holly wreaths which Arthur Merritt is manufacturing at Hammond's old stand on West Thirtieth street are unique and, like all of Arthur's work, artistic. It is rumored one of the other wholesale cut flower firms will move into the premises after Christmas.

Paper Christmas bells are being hawked about by the fakirs in apparently unlimited quantities. Add to these the supply of the department stores and you can imagine the enormous number sold by the supply houses. The unbreakable bells of Wertheimer & Co. have also had a tremendous sale.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., has invented a wicker basket which seems to be very popular and with ribbons and orchids makes a very pretty home window decoration. Many novelties in lanterns, sedan chairs, strong boxes and vases appear in the windows. More and more the value of unique and original window effects are demonstrated.

Elegantissima ferns are much in demand. Scottii is in every window. Croweanum in pots makes an elegant background. Cibotiums are numerous and as graceful as ever.

Clarke's Sons, on Upper Broadway, had a big debutante business this week. These coming-outs this year were a windfall for the retailers. McConnell's thirty debutante bouquets one day this week were all different. By the by, McConnell enjoys the distinction of holding for years the entire staff of lieutenants, bookkeepers, stenographers, rank and file, everybody, whereas in nearly every retail store new faces appear and the artists of today are sometimes gone tomorrow.

Limprecht has a big decorative responsibility as usual in the work for the big cathedral. His staff of workers includes his whole family, in addition to his regular staff, during the busy season.

Starke & Kleine have been too busy to complete their intended conservatory. Great weeks these for the plantmen with their conveniences for the retailers. Makes many a trip to the big greenhouses unnecessary.

Geo. Cotsonas & Co. are so crowded, outside and in, with smilax, Christmas trees and evergreens that there is hardly room left for the big force to work. Lieutenant Hart has his hands full with the books and the selling and general oversight of the rapidly growing business.

Frank Millang and Bonnot Bros., of the Cut Flower Exchange, have a big Christmas shipping trade outside of their local output, which goes on steadily from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. every day.

The Kervan Co. is doing a big trade, but Mr. Kervan, Sr., found time on Monday to enjoy the annual banquet of his Grand Army comrades.

Julius Lang has a fine display of Christmas plants as usual in his windows.

S. Rodh, at 40 W. Twenty-eighth street, is right in the center of the wholesale district and does a nice ribbon trade in consequence.

Donohoe, of West Twenty-ninth street, says he has a number of orders from out-of-town florists for local delivery Christmas morning. This kind of business is increasing every year as the wealthy of other cities move to New York.

The Bowery makes the usual brilliant show, especially at Le Moults and at Foley's. Mr. Foley is the publisher of a book of floral designs photographed from his own work. Le Moults is the veteran, father-in-law of Joseph Fenrich.

The Market.

Business the past week has been very good. The weather has been very mild and the streets have been crowded with Christmas buyers. While it has not at this writing struck the florists very hard, still we find some have taken a large number of orders. Stock has been quite scarce and the growers are now making every effort to keep as much of a supply as possible for the Christmas trade and on that account the retailers find it difficult to buy much stock.

HOUSE FOR A SIDE HILL.

What style of greenhouse would be preferable to build at the base of a side hill facing south, running east and west? I have now on the same ground two even-span houses ten feet wide, sash about seven feet long, no water groove in them, that will need to be torn down in the spring. Can the sash bars be used to advantage and what style of houses would you suggest?

AYER.

The hill at the back, or north side, of your house will be detrimental because it will obstruct the light. You may think, as sunlight comes from the south, it will not be of consequence, but light, so important in the winter months, comes as much from the north as the south. I do not think there is any plan that you could adopt by using this bank at the north that would be any advantage. Therefore, it would be better to cut down this bank, throwing the earth or gravel to the south until you had a level surface and keep away as far as possible from the face of the cut. After many fads and fancies in building, nearly all builders as well as practical florists have come to the conclusion that for general utility, as well as expense of building and management, there is no house as good as the simple equal span. As to width, circumstances will determine that, but there is no doubt that a wide house is the most economical in construction. Interior space and heating in a house twenty-eight feet wide, if equal span, are near the ideal.

The Market.

All kinds of cut flowers have been scarce the past week, causing prices to hold firm, and everything cleaned up nicely. The exceptionally fine weather has helped the Christmas cut to develop, and the prospects are much brighter than seemed to be possible last week. Prices have risen to high water mark.

Business at the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. has been good the past week, and they report their supply sales as far ahead of last year.

The retail stores report the demand for cut flowers as being slow the past week, but they are selling large quantities of decorative greens, wreaths and bells. This is to be expected, as flowers are the last thing to be remembered and ordered.

Various Notes.

Mr. Coutemmarsh, who ran the stand in the New England lobby, has sold his lease and case, and retired from the business for the present.

The Collins & Harrison Co. has sold out to Bramley & Mann, who will continue the business at 164 Euclid avenue. These people are hustlers, and will surely make a success of their venture.

Smith & Fettes have a beautiful show window of poinsettias in pans, each containing four and five plants with fine flowers, and the pans decorated in red.

James Eadie had a fine display of bells, wreaths and red flowers.

The Gasser Co. has the windows decorated with all kinds of Christmas flowers and red wreaths and bells. Bells, last year and so far this season, are having a wonderful sale in this city.

C. M. Wagner reports several large funeral orders last week.

Tilton & Son, A. C. Kendel and Wm. Brinker, seedsmen, are very busy handling green goods and holiday decorations, and all of the fruit commission men are handling large quantities of very good holly. Ground pine seems to be the only really scarce thing this season, and the few dealers who placed orders early are now reaping the benefits at $10 per case.

A visit to James Eadie's place in East Cleveland found Mr. Tapper, the manager, worrying about several houses of roses that were not coming up to his expectations. These plants are in solid beds, which are built on the hard clay which is found in this section of the country, and it is impossible to get any drainage; consequently all plants stand still during the dark winter months, but in the spring and summer they cut some very fine blooms.

Several houses of Meteor are making a fine growth and a house of Beauties will produce a good cut for the holidays, and a second house will come in just a little later. These roses are all planted on benches, and are far ahead of those in the solid beds. Their many houses of carnations are looking good, and they are cutting heavily for Christmas. In all they have twenty-five houses, all of modern construction, built within the past eighteen months, and heated by three large boilers. All of the cut is handled at retail from their Erie street store.

F. L. Evans, secretary of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., has nearly recovered from his illness and expects to be back about the first of the year.

Department of Plant Registration.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., submits for registration the following carnations: Winsor; seedling; color light silvery pink, intermediate between Lawson and Enchantress. Helen M. Gould; sport of Enchantress; color bright pink, covered with minute pencilings of deeper shade. White Enchantress; sport of Enchantress; color pearl white on opening, becoming pure white as flower matures.

NEW DIRECTOR AT KEW.

The many Kew men in America, particularly among the private gardeners, will be interested in the announcement of the resignation of Sir William Turner Thiselton-Dyer of the post of director of the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew. He has held that appointment since 1885, and for ten years before he was assistant director. His successor is Lieutenant-Colonel David Prain.

MONTGOMERY'S book on Grafted Roses sent by the REVIEW for 25 cents.

BRAZIL, IND.—Several years ago A. Dinkel found that he had more boiler capacity than his glass area called for and he made contracts for heating several near-by stores. Now his plant heats buildings for two blocks around and he is putting in another large boiler.

SPIRAEA GLADSTONE.

How must I treat Spiraea Gladstone to get the plants in bloom for Easter? I have them in 8-inch pots under the bench. J. B. W.

In the files of the REVIEW for December and January you will find references to the spiraea. Briefly, once more, when you unpack the roots, if very dry dip them in a pail of water, then place in boxes with a little earth between the roots and an inch or two over the crowns. Put the boxes anywhere convenient to bring in. Like all deciduous shrubs and roots and bulbs that we force, the nearer we approach their natural season of flowering the less time or heat is required. We used to start the old Spiraea Japonica as early as New Year's and it was a long time in starting. Nowadays we find the end of January time enough. Gladstone takes no longer to force into flower than Japonica. Start in a temperature of 50 degrees at night.

There is nothing more to be said except keep tobacco fumes away from them or the young tender foliage will shrivel up and for the last three weeks before selling place each pot in a saucer in which keep a small quantity of liquid manure. The pots are so dreadfully crowded with hungry roots you can scarcely give them water enough in the ordinary way, but if given water to absorb constantly the difference in their appearance will be most marked. I notice you have your plants already potted in 8-inch pots. That is an unusual size, not to grow them well, but to sell them in. Keep them under the bench until they begin to make leaves. Then get them up on a light bench. As you have started so early you may need little forcing, but the progress of the plant will easily guide you in that.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.;
First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

ROELKER & SONS had 400 bags of sugar beet seed on the last boat from Hamburg.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co., Chicago, have installed a Brown bag filling machine to assist in putting up their packages of seed.

It may be mentioned that the available supply of good strains of the Globe varieties of onions are still far below the demand.

THE California growers are returning home in the best of spirits. All of them report a good trade. They feel that there may still be a little picking left for the competitors who are traveling on a later schedule, but they all seem to be well booked up on the important varieties.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, have secured a new location at 33 Barclay street. The removal is made necessary by the Pennsylvania railroad improvements, but will result in giving the seed firm much better facilities. They will occupy the entire building. Next door are Suzuki & Iida and August Roelker & Sons.

CHICAGO.—The market gardeners are ordering their seeds unusually early this year. The rule has been heretofore that few orders have been placed before January. The business booked during the current month by the houses that make a specialty of the gardeners' trade indicate that 1906 will be a great year in this department of the seed business.

VISITED CHICAGO: S. F. Willard, of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wethersfield,
Conn.; W. J. Fosgate, of Santa Clara, Cal., returning home from his annual eastern trip; W. H. Grenell, returning from the northwest; A. A. Berry, of A.
A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Ia.; Mr.
Brown, of the Brown Bag Filling Machine Co.; T. F. Landram, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Cal., returning from the east.

SOME of the field seed growers are making a strong bid for market garden trade. They argue that the city seedsman is unreliable because he eats pie with a fork and shaves before he attends a banquet. They forget, however, to explain that in addition to these failings the city seedsman thinks that kohl-rabi should be cooked before it is eaten and that field corn is not the best substitute for cauliflower seed.

AUTUMN seeding throughout Europe is practically finished. Generally speaking, adverse weather conditions throughout northwestern and over large areas of central Europe have retarded sowing operations, and reports of reduced acreage and expressions of fear that the crops may not stand the winter well are common. In the southern and eastern parts of the continent, on the contrary, sowings were generally effected under good conditions, and germination has been satisfactory.

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;
$1.75 per doz. (Retail, 25 cents).

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEARS' NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

SEED DISTRIBUTION.

The Crop Reporter for December, published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, says:

The distribution of packages of vegetable seed which have been allotted to correspondents of this bureau will begin within a few weeks in the following states: Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, California, Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia and Oregon. Envelopes of seed and blank franks will be sent in bulk to state statistical agents and county correspondents, who will address and distribute them to their aids and assistants. Distribution to states farther north will be made later. Individual requests of correspondents will be filled as far as possible from the limited allotment to this bureau.

STORING ONION SETS.

I wish you would print a brief description of the way onion sets are stored in large quantities by the growers at Chicago. We wish a successful New Year to the REVIEW, which we very much appreciate for its seed reports.

N. D. B.

The storing of onion sets depends a good deal upon the quantity in question. At the large centers a specially constructed warehouse is indispensable. The old-fashioned way of spreading the sets thinly on boards has been done away with and the crate that is made with the ends one inch higher than the sides has taken its place. These crates are four feet long by three feet wide and will hold two bushels of properly cured sets. These crates can be piled up one upon the other to any height desired, and the inch of air space given by the end being higher than the sides is sufficient. In the warehouse the ends may be piled touching each other and the rows so made can be the full length of the warehouse. A two-foot space, or better yet, a three-foot space, should be left between the rows and aisles of six feet left lengthwise and crosswise in the middle of the warehouse to facilitate handling. A frost-proof house is necessary, not because frost will spoil the sets, but because a set that contains frost cannot be handled and shipped out satisfactorily. Where sets are to be taken out and shipped during cold weather, a heating plant even in what is termed a frost-proof house is necessary. If the contents of the house can remain untouched until warm spring weather no heat will be necessary. Ventilation is the most important thing and only experience will teach it.

In a pamphlet on the organization of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for 1905-6 it is stated that "the object of the work of the Seed Laboratory is to improve the quality of agricultural seeds. Samples submitted by farmers and others are tested for mechanical purity and germination. Public announcements are made of prevalent adulterations and general conditions of poor quality existing in the seed trade. The proper conditions for storage under varying climatic conditions are being worked out."

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at the Glen Cove Greenhouses December 6. The attendance was large, with President Harrison occupying the chair. The membership roll continues to enlarge, three being elected at this meeting. Jas. Scott and W. Ross, of the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, were present. They exhibited a vase each of two sports of Eucharis carnation, also a pan of elegantissima fern. The carnation sports attracted much attention and were highly commended on. One was pure white and the other variegated, which has been named Miss Helen Gould. This firm has donated $10 as a prize to be competed for at the next fall exhibition for an exhibit of Glenview chrysanthemums.

With this meeting the society closes its year. It has been its first, and to its members it should ever be a memorable one, as the society has proved itself to be an organ for much good among its members, binding all in mutual good will, so that it launches forth upon another year's existence with greater energy and brighter prospects.

The election of office bearers took place. All the old ones were re-elected: T. Harrison, president; James Holloway, vice-president; Alex Mackenzie, secretary; Ernest Brown, treasurer; John F. Johnston, corresponding secretary.

WASHINGTON, PA.—Joseph H. Seaman & Co. report a very fine outlook for Christmas trade.

AURORA, ILL.—J. M. Smely handles gold fish as a side line and had noticed that they disappeared with remarkable regularity, but without affecting the day's receipts. He therefore set a watch and found that the greenhouse cat was an expert fisherman.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

Dull, cloudy, mild weather is the prevailing variety. This may save wrapping and expense of deliveries, yet is not so good for business as the snows that we associate with Santa Claus' whiskers or getting home the Yule log.

Buffalo is well supplied with attractive plants for Christmas trade. W. J. Palmer is strong on azaleas, lilies, berried plants. S. A. Anderson, at his Linwood Greenhouses, has a very fine lot of poinsettias, Lorraine, cyclamen, oranges and other desirable kinds. His begonias in all sizes are up to the Petersonian quality. W. Belsey has a fine lot of poinsettias, but complains of their altitude, and he being slightly below the average in stature it compels him to use a stepladder when measuring the width of the bracts.

C. F. Christenson is long on lilies and they will be all wanted. Chris seems to have the faculty of getting his carnations to bloom when they are at the highest price. He is now picking 600 a day of fine Enchantress, Lawson and the Queen from two houses 20x125.

Almost everybody has something useful and those without greenhouses will be well supplied with the products of the numerous suburban growers.

The holly that we have seen is of indifferent quality and ground-pine is scarce. It seems the green business, which a few years ago took up much of our time, labor and worry, is slowly but surely slipping away from the florists and nothing to regret for all there was in it. It took up too much valuable time. Selling Enchantress at $2 per dozen or Bridesmaid at $3, especially if they are your own product, is a very much more edifying and elevating business.

We have heard slight croaking that this is to be a dull Christmas. Up to date all signs are quite to the contrary. Nearly all classes are feeling good and generous, and the beautiful and commendable practice of remembering friends was never more general and widespread than at the present moment. How fortunate that our beautiful calling brings us so closely in touch with these generous impulses. There are many instances where a barrel of flour, a roast of beef or a 15-pound "Gobble Jock" will be more appreciated than a pretty plant, and we hope that all in need will be remembered, yet the great majority of Christmas gifts are from people of refined taste to people who relish the beautiful and are in need of it more than the necessities. The sage of East Aurora, the bright Elbert Hubbard, says the only present for a young man to send to his fiancée is a beautiful book or flowers. Of course, Frau Albertus would commend the book because he is the maker and seller of almost matchless books, yet it would not be difficult to prove that the book, however adorned, would not create the gladness of a box of flowers or pretty growing plant. Books are the solace, comfort and enjoyment of old age, so barring that babyish thing which goes under the genric name of candy, we must fall back with satisfaction to the plant or sweet bunch of flowers. From announcements in the papers many festivities are coming off among the well-to-do, and we look for a merry time and good time for the florists, and to those who are patient enough to read these rambling notes I wish heartily every enjoyment and prosperity of the season.

The Market.

The market was quieter the past week. The supply of stock seems to be none too plentiful and prices are steadily advancing as Christmas approaches. The unusually mild weather that we have had for the last week has had a depressing influence on trade and a drop in the temperature would undoubtedly have a beneficial effect on the Christmas business. The wholesalers are receiving many out-of-town orders, and this branch of the business is lively.

Various Notes.

A visit to the Alpha Floral Co. found that establishment a regular bee hive of industry, preparing for the rush of Christmas trade. They have rented a large double store adjoining their main store on Walnut street to handle the extra business, and a large force of girls is employed here making up Christmas material. This firm has a handsome display and if appearances are any indication the Alpha Floral Co. will do its share of the business.

There are no idlers at the Shaeffer Floral Co. store this week. Mr. Bastian, the popular manager of the wholesale department, is having his hands full, filling orders and overseeing a large force of lively young women at work making up holly and Christmas green. The retail store is also doing a lively trade and Mr. Shaeffer is looking forward to a big holiday business. The retail store is now in charge of C. A. Klunder, formerly with Klunder in Chicago.

The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. has one of the most handsomely decorated stores. Mr. Rock is an artist in this line and his store this week is certainly a tribute to his ability as a decorator.

Samuel Murray's store is, as usual, up-to-date and his Christmas display is second to none. Mr. Murray has a reputation for keeping only the highest grade in everything and his store will be one of the popular places for holiday buying.

We found Lawrence Schwager very busy preparing for Christmas. He had a good business last week and expects to do his share this week.

Mrs. James Hayes and daughter, Mrs.

Benton L. Holloway, of Topeka, were visitors here the latter part of the week. Mrs. Hayes reports business as being very satisfactory the past season and has bright prospects for the future.

Mrs. J. E. Lord was another Topeka visitor. Mrs. Lord had a very successful opening of her new store. She is doing a nice business.

Hiram Hulse, one of the oldest florists in Topeka, will retire from the business in the spring and will go on to his farm in Jewell county, Kansas, where he will engage in fruit raising. The retirement of Mr. Hulse will be a cause for regret to his many friends.

E. H. Smith, of Fort Scott, was also a visitor last week. KAY-SEE.

Club Meeting.

Election of officers for the coming year was the order of business at the meeting of the Seattle Florists' Association, December 5. Joseph Chalmers was re-elected president, as also was J. W. Thompson, our genial superintendent of parks, to the office of vice-president. Julius Anthon was elected treasurer and A. Balmer was re-elected secretary.

Now that the flower show has been successfully disposed of, the executive committee is down to business and will have the list of essays and papers put in order to be read at the coming bi-monthly meetings. The pleasing feature of this is that the subjects assigned to the different members are accepted without any fuss and everyone does his utmost to make it pleasant and instructive. The club membership is now over forty and the finances are in a flourishing condition.

State of Trade.

Thanksgiving trade was up to the usual good standard. The best mums brought $6 per dozen, ranging down to $2 for ordinary. Carnations were scarce and roses very scarce, Richmond bringing $5 per dozen. The growers here are gradually beginning to find out the ways and means of having good roses all winter. The present season has been very favorable. So far the rainfall is far below the average and we are getting a glimpse of the sun occasionally. The fogs, though, have been thick and heavy, mornings and evenings, with white frosts.

The Christmas outlook points to a scarcity in all lines and there is "hurrying to and fro" among the retailers to get stock engaged ahead of time. Holly will retail at 75 cents and $1 per pound; of course not Delaware holly, but the holly that is grown mostly in Victoria, B. C., the glossy, clean stuff, berried to perfection and fresh cut a few days before Christmas. No lycopodium is used here, wreathing being made from the native cedar, which lasts well and answers the purpose.

Various Notes.

The Pacific Seed and Floral Co. is again in business at 1332 Second avenue. After New Year's they will move one block lower down, having sold their lease of their present store for the comfortable sum of $1,200.

Our Frisco friends will not be surprised to know that the Japanese have made a start in Seattle. They have rented a place at Green Lake, and are preparing to go into the business extensively.

Bishop Burdett, of the Burdett Co., is in the hospital with typhoid fever.

The Bon Marche department store has opened a flower and plant department under the management of Walter Retzer.

E. Gill, the veteran nurseryman and rose grower of West Berkeley, Cal., visited the trade recently. He was returning home after a tour of the world, coming here via Australia and New Zealand.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Christmas is almost with us, and business has received a huge boost during the past few days. Stock of all kinds, with the exception of fancy roses, is in good supply and is being moved with great rapidity at good prices. The rates have not been advanced to any extent as yet and probabilities are that there will not be anything extraordinary in that line. Some poinsettias have been received from the south and many more are expected in the next few days. Valley and hyacinths are offered in fair quantities. Violets, although the weather is not of the best, are being brought into town in sufficient numbers to fill requirements. Narcissi and daffodils are scarce. Other kinds of stock will about be up to the standard of former years. Greens of all kinds and smilax are being used lavishly around town in decorations and it is safe to predict business will be up to expectations next week.

Various Notes.

E. H. Rust, of South Pasadena, and F. H. Howard, of Los Angeles, are in town. J. G. Lewis, for many years with Gill's Floral Depot, Oakland, was united in marriage with Miss Mary Piexotto, of Haywards, on December 16.

The city of Oakland has passed an ordinance taxing florists $5 per quarter.

E. J. Wickson, of Berkeley, has departed to southern California in the interest of the horticultural department of the State University.

E. Hoffman, of San Jose, is in town. Mr. Hoffman will shortly begin planting the new plaza for the town of Palo Alto.

Sievers & Boland are in line with a fine stock of poinsettias for the holiday trade.

Several local dealers have imported large specimen kentias from the Storrs & Harrison Co., of Painesville, O. The stock arrived in excellent condition.

R. D. Thomas has gone on a six weeks' eastern trip. He will visit Chicago and New York.

PROPAGATING ROSES.

The season for making rose cuttings is here and, although the weather continues dry, there is no trouble to be apprehended if the stems are kept heeled in the ground. The stock plants are about as dormant at the present time as it is possible for them to be and, although it will be impossible to plant cuttings in the open until we have sufficient natural moisture, it is a good plan to have them made, tied in bundles of 100 each and partially covered in sand under a lattice frame. By so doing there is a great saving of time in planting. Some growers do not make cuttings until the ground has been sufficiently moistened to properly plant, and in many cases by this time the stock plants have commenced to make a new growth of wood and their work is in vain.

Cuttings that are made at this time can be kept in sand easily for two months, if they are not too much crowded, and will callous very evenly if the wood is sufficiently ripe. This also is a great point in their favor, as it is much easier to start a growth from a well heeled cutting than from one that has just been removed from a stock plant.

Regarding the growing of the various varieties of roses on their own roots, I might say that in the largest rose nurseries, only the stronger growing sorts are now handled in this manner. Some hybrid teas, climbers and teas grow so easily that it is much less trouble to get a plant this way than any other, but for the weaker-growing roses, and they furnish by far the largest percentage of the popular kinds, there is no comparison in the differences between the two methods.

It is a very difficult proposition, even under the most favorable circumstances, to successfully root over a small portion of the cuttings planted out and with the poorer growing kinds a second or third size plant is usually produced at the end of the first year. The same varieties budded will make a stem two or three feet high in the same length of time, with only the extra trouble of the budding in the summer time.

Roses like heavy soil. I think it is safe to say this rule applies to all varieties. The drainage should be good and the ground kept well worked. This is an important factor in the growing of well ripened stock that will be in good condition for transplanting the first season. There is nothing as desirable for the planter as to handle stock that is grown entirely without irrigation, especially if it is for forcing under glass. A rose never gets sufficiently hardened to be in good shape for transplanting in the fall if it has been kept growing during the late summer by the use of artificial moisture. Keep the ground well worked and let the foliage dry off gradually, as it will do late in the summer, and when the plants are taken up and removed into the greenhouse and water applied to them, they immediately commence to make a clean, heavy growth and an abundance of foliage and flowers is sure to result, whereas if the plants have been irrigated during the previous summer the application of moisture does not affect them as quickly and they often insist on a resting season when they should be setting flowers for Christmas.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

H. J. WEBER, St. Louis, is visiting eastern nursery centers.

W. T. McMURRAY has bought the L. A. Southern nursery and greenhouse plant near Washington Bottom, W. Va.

Mrs. C. J. PARKS, widow of the former nurseryman at Lansing, Mich., is dead, aged 71 years.

CON. PLANT, Le Grande, Ore., has sold his nursery property to be platted for city lots. He contemplates going into business in Cuba.

THE New York Fruit Growers' Association meets at Lockport January 3 and 4. Half a dozen nurserymen are on the program and half a hundred will be present.

A big wind storm did considerable damage in southern California December 9, but M. A. Chase, of the Chase Nursery Co., Riverside, thinks crops of citrus fruits were not injured more than five per cent.

THE Oregon Nursery Co., Salem, Ore., has announced its intention of removing from the city. It has the second largest pay roll in town and the Commercial Club is trying to find a way of keeping the firm from removing.

PARK SUPERINTENDENTS.

The executive committee of the American Association of Park Superintendents held a meeting at the Quincy house, Boston, on Dec. 14. The selection of the next meeting place of the association resulted in the choice of Washington, D. C., although Toronto and Harrisburg, Pa., were in favor with some, the date being June 12 to 14, 1906. Those attending were W. J. Zartman, Brooklyn; Theodore Wirth, president of the association, Hartford, Conn.; C. E. Keith, Bridgeport, Conn.; J. O. Fitts, Providence, R. I.; Byron Worthen, Manchester, N. H.; J. A. Pettigrew, J. B. Shea, Jackson Dawson, W. J. Stewart and J. W. Duncan, Boston.

DEATH OF D. H. PATTY.

David H. Patty, who died December 11, was one of the most prominent business men at Geneva, N. Y. Mr. Patty's death was entirely unexpected. Sunday he was about as usual and attended church service both in the morning and evening. He expired about 8 o'clock Monday morning. Physicians stated that his death was due to angina pectoris. Coroner H. D. Weyburn granted a certificate of death due to that cause.

The deceased was born in Auburn, N. Y., February 6, 1851. He removed to Geneva in 1869 to become a bookkeeper with the nursery firm of Graves, Selover & Willard. Ten years later he commenced business for himself, doing both a wholesale and retail business. Mr. Patty was a prominent member of the First Presbyterian Church, having been a trustee of the church for the past fifteen years, and an elder for ten years. He held both offices at the time of his death. He was also secretary of the Sunday school for nearly twenty years. He was also a member of the Kanadasaga Club, and was an exempt fireman, having served with the Charles J. Folger Hook and Ladder Company. In 1883 he married Miss Helen A. Scoon, a daughter of the late William Scoon of this city. Besides his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Miss Laura H. Patty, of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Frank Bassett of Bridgeport, Conn.

RAILROAD FORESTRY.

A writer in a recent number of Arboriculture, takes exception to a paper read by L. E. Johnson, president of the Norfolk & Western, before the American Forest Congress, on the grounds that the arguments advanced by Mr. Johnson against the planting of catalpa trees by railways are based on erroneous information. The writer refutes the assumption that the life of a catalpa crosstie is but fifteen years, by pointing to the evidence presented at the St. Louis World's Fair, where many ties were shown which had remained perfectly sound after thirty-two years in the roadway of the Southern Railway, Louisville & Nashville, Illinois Central and other roads. He goes on to state that Mr. Johnson's assumption that 850 crossties per acre may be obtained in twenty years is an underestimate, and advances the following data in regard to catalpa cultivation:

"The proper distance to plant is 7x7 feet, or 888 trees per acre, three-fourths to be removed in eight years for use as fence posts, mine timbers or for similar purposes. For these a conservative valuation is 5 cents each net. This leaves 222 trees for permanent forest. At fifteen years these trees will make five ties and several posts each, 1,110 ties being secured per acre. Cutting a catalpa tree does not kill it; another is quickly produced from the stump, which has the entire root system of the original tree to push it forward rapidly. By preparing a seven years' course of renewals, planting an equal area each year for seven years, the Norfolk & Western system of 2,571 miles, which now has in its tracks presumably 7,000,000 ties, will require 1,000,000 ties annually, or an average of approximately 901 acres, which would be 6,307 acres, or about 10 square miles. After the seventh year there will be no other renewals required for twenty-five years."

The estimated cost of the investment is $194,698, allowing for cost of land and trees, planting and superintendence and interest for eight years at the rate of 5 per cent. The resultant income is figured at $210,023.10, a sum somewhat larger than the entire cost of the investment, while the forest, all paid for, remains as a permanent timber producing property.

PITTSBURG.

Christmas Preparations.

The flower shops of our city are things of beauty and a trip among them will repay anyone, not only to see the beautiful plants but to study the various arrangements used for making them attractive. The ingenuity of the florist is put to its greatest test at this season, to devise new and beautiful arrangements. Some beautiful garlands of boxwood and red immortelles and boxwood in various kinds of wreaths are a feature this year. One store has hundreds of balls and baskets of red immortelles and boxwood tied with red ribbon, which sell at reasonable prices and sell like hot cakes. Pans of Romans, Prosperpine tulips, ferns and mixed plants are seen, while one man has several thousand tulips potted up, a single tulip in a 2-inch pot, which will sell for 25 cents.

Trade has been above the average the past week, even for the season, and all kinds of stock cleaned up with the wholesalers at good prices and an excellent Christmas trade is predicted.

Among the green goods people things have not looked so rosy the past week, but there are great expectations for this week. One trouble is that the commission men are handling so much of this stock this year, many of them getting consignments and, not having much idea of the value, sell at ridiculously low prices and sell to anyone. The men who have made a business of handling it for years are feeling the effect, but as this seems such a prosperous year they still hope to see enough small buyers to clean them up.

On last Saturday a team of horses belonging to Mrs. E. A. Williams ran down Penn avenue, scattering things generally, until they brought up against a street car.

Some of the retailers have been asserting, the last few days, that if the prices on roses, carnations, etc., are not kept down within reason they will confine themselves to plants for Christmas, but the writer thinks that would be almost impossible, as there are many people who can afford and will have flowers, even at high prices, and it will only be when they can direct the tastes and wants of these people that they can follow up such a plan and hold the place they now have in the business. Hoo-Hoo.

ABUNDANCE

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known firm:
 Western Springs, Ill., Nov. 15, 1905.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

Dear Sir:—We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good size and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand. Very truly yours,

LENOX, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held in the town hall December 16. A larger number of the members than usual turned out as a compliment to the newly elected officers. Seated beside President Carlquist were Vice-President Heeremans and Treasurer McConnachie. Arthur T. Boddington, of New York, and Jas. T. Scott, of Tarrytown, were present, Mr. Boddington being a member of the society. He made a proposition that the society adopt a scale of points for the guidance of judges at our shows, not only for judging chrysanthemums, roses and carnations, but for fruits, vegetables, flowering plants and groups. This drew forth a great deal of discussion. Many were of opinion that it would be a slight upon the judges called upon to pass on such exhibits. Some feared that it would partake too much of the stereoscopic and leave no room for individuality. After a very full discussion, however, Mr. Boddington's proposition was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Scott responded to the invitation of the president and gave a short talk. In his remarks he dwelt upon the excellence of our exhibits, particularly upon the unique construction of our plant groups. He said that in his travels he had not witnessed at any exhibition this fall such individuality and taste displayed as was always to be seen here. According to him Lenox is doing missionary work in this respect, and it would be an education for the craft at large, if they could witness these displays. The average plant group at most exhibitions partakes of the haycock form and is built with plumb and rule. He said he regretted very much that the country at large does not know more fully the grand work that is being accomplished for horticulture in this section.

F. R. Pierson Co. had on exhibition three vases of new carnations, Helen Gould, White Enchantress and Winsor. Winsor is a beautiful pink, the same shade as Fiancee. It very much resembles Lawson in size, form and stem. Mr. Scott said that in freedom of growth and productiveness it excels that grand old variety, and so far they never have been troubled with a burst calyx. White Enchantress is a sport, as the name implies. The color is pure. Helen Gould is also a sport of Enchantress. The color is dark pink, with slight variegation of still darker pink and, contrary to expectations, it will make a very striking combination. We understand Miss Gould saw the flower at Tarrytown and was very much in love with it; hence the name. Each sort received a first-class certificate.

The new president named the members for the various committees. His selection in each case was happy and a successful year is predicted. The president also appointed a committee to draw up resolutions of condolence to be sent to the families of John Sloane and Mrs. Biddle, both life members of the society. They both took a very active interest in all the society's doings and subscribed very liberally to the funds. Their death is a serious loss to the society. G. F.

DENVER.

The Market.

The market the past week was good, the weather being springlike. After Thanksgiving the market was a bit unsteady for a few days, but last week it was in a very healthy condition and has naturally strengthened since and the demand is steadily holding to a good point and growers are not holding much stock back, so it will be in good shape for Christmas trade.

The exodus of chrysanthemums has helped the sale of roses and carnations, neither of which are over-plentiful, especially in regard to carnations, and prices hold firm. Colored stock is more scarce than white and the demand for red far exceeds the supply. The retail prices for Christmas trade are quoted at $1, $1.50 to $2 per dozen and there is likely to be a scarcity at that.

Beauties at this writing appear to be a little more plentiful. The longer-stemmed ones are coming in larger quantities, but short ones a little scarce. Other rose stock is fairly plentiful and of good quality, with a good cut in sight for Christmas. There is also a good lot of Paper White narcissi seen, as well as stevia. Violets are still scarce, with a probability of not much of an increase except in price for Christmas.

Still, everything points to a good Christmas trade and there are still great quantities of cut flowers disposed of at the Christmas season and for good prices, too, but the beautiful flowering plants now to be seen at all the shops will take many a sale from the cut flowers and there are many to be seen now, the poinsettia leading on account of its effective color; Gloire de Lorraine, azaleas, etc., following. A few novelties are seen, such as Otaheite oranges nicely fruited in 7-inch pots, also Ficus pandurata, the new rubber.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Bowling League, which meets every Monday evening, will not roll December 25 or January 1 on account of the holidays. One peculiar feature of the games is that the team with the greatest number of games now has the smallest number of total pins, while the team with the greatest number of pins is last in the race.

The Park Floral Co. last week filled one retail order for carnations which perhaps was the largest ever shipped out of Denver, sending 250 dozen to Montana and, coming in just as it did, before Christmas, when every carnation is needed, made it something of a feat, as they were all select blooms. ROSES OLD AND NEW.

Yes, we have advanced in rose culture, gained magnificent new varieties, but it is a matter for rejoicing also, I think, that these are quite powerless to oust all the old ones. While some, nay, many, of the ancient roses are now unknown, it is a truth, too, that many of the modern introductions will be lost, just as deservedly, a few years hence. Surely the great lesson to be learned and practiced, is the buying of the best roses, new or old; choosing them for their merits, uninfluenced by the crazes of a season, weighing the advantages of each flower in the balance of justice, and discarding any variety that proves less good than was promised.

Public taste is not an infallible guide. A novel color will often sell a loosely petaled, ill-shaped, quickly fading rose; size is sometimes admired to the too-ready-forgiveness of bad color; delicacy of tint and shape are often combined with weak, drooping habit of growth, and flabby stems.

Of course, perfection is not to be found, so we must make all reasonable concessions to any new rose; only let us avoid neglecting older varieties that have really superior merits but have gone out of fashion and been forgotten in the world's eagerness for the novel. Some raisers are too lavish in their introductions, but a visit to the grounds where the roses are growing, or even a careful study of the catalogue descriptions, noting especially the omissions, should give a sufficient guide to purchasers.

What a discussion there has been over the worth of Mildred Grant! That the flowers are exquisite, with their high centres, admirable shape, and faintly flushed white tint, nobody can deny. Alas, that the stems are so unsatisfactory, from the flower arrangers' point of view! More than one rose grower, I believe, offers it as "considered to be the finest rose ever raised," while others leave out the three first words of the sentence. Personally, I regard it as one of the roses that will go down to posterity, in spite of its demerits, just as we have ignored the faults of Niphetos and even Marechal Niel. A lovely satisfactory new hybrid tea, of an ivory-white, flushed with salmon, large blooming, firm petaled, perfectly formed, is Alice Grahame. I strongly advise rose connoisseurs to obtain this, and note its value. Surely this is a variety that ought never to sink into oblivion!

Among the indispensable older pale roses Madame Hoste should have a high place. What a joy it is to see it responding to vigorous feeding and general good culture—the branches growing stouter, the leaves larger and darker, even before the great yellowish-white flowers come to prove how delicate they can look, although they are full and firm. The robust growth is a subject for deep gratitude.

La France will never be given up, I imagine; it remains a distinctive rose, in spite of the prodigious output of roses since it first delighted the horticultural world. Gloire de Dijon has been improved upon, I admit, but let us hope it will never be forgotten, since there is a rich color in its usually irregularly shaped center that others do not offer.

Are any of our new ramblers really better than the old climber, Cloth of Gold? This is indeed a relic from the past that the future should perpetuate. There is certainly something unique about the almost too vigorous Crimson Rambler, but many of the others are, I think, over-rated. Aglaia, by the by, is such a joy upon a north wall that no garden or house with such a space vacant should be without it. Plant it on a hot wall and no pleasure will be gained from it, for the flowers will fade out ere they are open, and none of the pure clear yellow will remain.

Fortune's Yellow is still catalogued as "extra fine." Our great-grandfathers knew it as Beauty of Glazenwood. The striped York and Lancaster roses should be in all rosaries; so, too, I think, should be the Maiden's Blush. Yes, the faults of these are too obvious, but to grow them is not to ignore modern achievements, nor to contradict our objects of searching for the very best, because they have unique merits, that "better" roses have not repeated.

When is the perfect, brilliant scarlet, full, firm tea rose coming to us, I wonder? It must have strong stems, large, dark red-tinted foliage, and not hang its head too humbly! Where again is the huge hybrid perpetual of the exact shade of Marechal Niel? I should also like a brilliant pink, fully-double rambler that would bloom all the summer and autumn. There are triumphs yet left for attainment by our clever rose raisers.—Gardeners' Magazine.

The Market.

Stock is short and trade quiet. We have been having some real winter weather and on December 15 we had a heavy snow and plenty of dark weather all that week. The effect of it is apparent in the roses, a large number of which are coming in with very weak stems.

The carnations are all of very good quality, but there are nowhere near enough to meet the demand at the Exchange, in fact, there are no flowers that are an over-supply at the first of this week.

Various Notes.

Wm. B. Sands is sending in some fine poinsettias and Harrisii.

James Smith, of Lansdowne, lost a daughter by typhoid fever the past week.

Charles Sieck, of C. E. Smith & Co., took a flying trip to Philadelphia last week in search for blooming plants for Christmas.

Philip B. Welsh is still shipping some very pretty light pink chrysanthemums to the Exchange.

Hopes for bowling alleys at the new Exchange building are not very bright.

Most of the retailers outside the central part of the city are making very striking displays with the red paper bells, some using nothing but these with Boston ferns to good effect. The bell business seems to be over-done this year. Every department store and small toy store advertises bells measuring ten inches across the bottom for 10 cents.

R. Vincent, Jr., has been requested to speak on his trip abroad at the next meeting of the Gardeners' Club. A large attendance is expected.

Wm. Terry, of Owings Mills, has put in a new Ideal sectional boiler. A. F.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo.—R. L. Isherwood will go on the road for the Studebaker wagon works, but will continue his greenhouse business here.

AURORA, ILL.—Davis Bros., whose plant here was only recently completed, are reported as planning to double it in the spring.

LUDVIG MOSBAEK, Onarga, Ill.

30,000 Asparagus pl. nana, very strong pot-bound 2½-inch, $2.50; 3-inch, $5.00 per 100. Sprengerii, pot-bound, 2½-inch, $2.00; 3-inch, $4.00 per 100.

Ferns, Boston, from bench, for 5 and 6-inch, one week only, to make room, $15.00 per 100.

FLORISTS'
REVIEW

BEGIN!

MADISON, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held December 13, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, J. Heeremans; vice-president, R. M. Schultz; secretary, E. Reagan; treasurer, Wm. Charlton; executive committee, C. H. Totty, R. McMullen, R. Vinee, A. Herrington, H. L. Hand, Wm. Muhlmichel, Alex. Brown, A. McKendry, Wm. Duckham, A. H. Secker, J. R. Halliday, J. R. Mitchell. The officers made neat speeches of acceptance. A letter from Wm. Duckham, who is now in Europe, was read to the society. He gave us his impressions of the Glasgow flower show and its chrysanthemums especially. We are expecting an interesting paper on his travels when he returns.

Our tenth annual smoker will be held in our club rooms on January 10. The committee in charge is A. Herrington, C. H. Totty and E. Reagan. Like our flower show, we take great pride in our social affairs, and the aim of the committee will be to have this one, if possible, better than ever before. E. R.

NEW ORLEANS.

The flower show committee had a meeting a few days ago to wind up the affairs of the late exhibition and we will hear the full report at our next meeting. It seems to be an assured fact that all the expenses have been paid, leaving a surplus for the cash prizes, which is certainly as good as can be expected. The New Orleans Floral Association, the object of which is to give a flower show every year, started by electing its officers. We have not learned yet how much connection they will have with the N. O. H. S. and will speak further about this new organization.

Visitor in town: J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, O., offering his specialties in the line of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and Turnford Hall. M. M. L.

COCHRANVILLE, PA.—W. H. Osmond is building a new house 25x68 feet.

N. ZWEIFEL, No. Milwaukee, Wis., writes:—"I have 4 houses, each 28x200 feet, with a total of 27,000 sq. ft. of glass. I can get all the pipes warm in thirty minutes with one of your No. 13 Boilers, and it is easy firing."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers and do not worry about their breaking down."

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Record Holiday Results.

A memorandum made which can be referred to is better than trusting your memory, so write down now just how your crops were balanced. Note that you perhaps could have sold more well flowered azaleas, but you had plenty of Begonia Lorraine, etc. These are prominent features that may be distinctly remembered, yet there will be others valuable to refer to and not so clearly remembered. It is too soon yet to come to any conclusion, for we have another week of merry-making. Remembrances and decorations and lots of little leftovers will yet be cleanly used up.

Christmas is but a few hours past, but I want to be the first in the field to say that never in my recollection was there a more happy one. From the waif on the street who was invited to a sumptuous dinner, to the well-to-do it seemed a time of rest, pleasure and contentment and I believe saw an increase of thirty to fifty per cent with many a florists' business.

Stock Left Over.

It is slightly previous to mention what can be done with stock unsold or cut down, yet it is the most seasonable hint I can think of. A greenhouse may have a dilapidated look this morning and appear as if a cyclone had passed through, yet a very few hours' work will have things stood up in much diminished blocks and empty, clean benches ready to receive crops that have been waiting for a shift or spread out. If you cut a lot of Harrisii lilies dump them out on your old soil pile. Don't think for a moment that you can do anything with them. Save half a dozen sweet stevia that are cut down and place in a light, cool house for future stock.

Poinsettias that were cut a foot or eighteen inches from the ground can be laid beneath a warm, dry bench and allowed to become perfectly dry at the root. Azaleas are never left over, but will sell at any time, and so will Gloire de Lorraine. A brother florist sent me a splendid plant of the white Lorraine, Turnford Hall, and in spite of its being under the expert care of a florist's wife it has in the course of two weeks dropped all its expanded flowers. It is still thick with its unopened buds and quite ornamental if you had not seen it when at its zenith of beauty.

Begonia Incarnata.

I have had occasion to mention several times this fall the Begonia incarnata robusta. Mr. Harris, of Philadelphia, gives us the name robusta, which appeals to us as correct because it is so appropriate. We grew, after an interval of several years, a good many pans of this fine begonia this year, three or four plants in a 12-inch pan, with a pink mat and ribbon. They were very attractive and sold better than Lorraine. If the rust is avoided they are easy to grow.

There is now an improvement on robusta which I have mentioned under the name of B. incarnata Sanderi and I believe this name will do, because we notice in one of Mr. Pettigrew's instructive talks of his recent visit to Europe he mentioned that on seeing the wonderful collection of begonias in the Dublin Botanic Gardens how much he would like his friend Mr. Sander to have been with him. So evidently Mr. Sander, of the neighborhood of the Hub, besides being an eminent gardener of that center of refinement and cultured civilization and horticulture of the United States, is also a begonia specialist. The friend who gave me the plant last spring received it from Mr. Sander. All florists should grow it, but where they are to get the stock I don't know. If not a Christmas plant, it is a wonder a month later and on for many weeks.

Timing a Rose Crop.

Some mention for future reference regarding your cut flower crops will be of more consequence to many than the sales of their plants. One little test this fall may be interesting to some. Within a year we inquired of two first-class rose growers when you could cut a bud from a strong lateral growth and have the succeeding bud right for Christmas. One said the first week in October. The other thought from October 15 to 30. Remember, this was for our climate, not the bright suns of Denver, Omaha or St. Paul. It was for St. Clouds and referred to Brides and Maids. So, having cut a fairly good bud on October 25, we at once fastened to the stem a tag marked "Cut October 25." That bud was exactly right on Christmas eve. Remember weather makes all the difference. Our October was glorious. November was mild and cloudy and December was as dark and gloomy as the outlook of the republican party in the Empire state.

Carnations.

Carnations will come in for condemnation more or less severe. Don't be hasty. It takes more than one year to learn the desires and peculiarities of a variety. Fiancee seems to be disappointing in many places. After it gets over its wonderful tendency to flower it may turn out all its early habit promised. A case in point is the fine scarlet well named Flamingo. Last year, with summer growth under glass, it scarcely gave a flower until January. Then there was a crop of fine flowers with stems three feet long, and after that very little. This year, grown in the field and lifted in early August, it began to flower in November and the past month has given an abundance of grand flowers. I know a few good carnation growers who are satisfied that in Flamingo they have all they want for a fine scarlet.

Not only as to the merits of a new variety, but with standard varieties like the immortal Lawson or Enchantress, take notice when you lifted them, at what date you last pinched them. Much depends on all that and makes the difference in getting a crop when they are worth three times what they would be two weeks earlier or later. I have said, make a memorandum because as we mature we think our memory is infallible. It is not, and as our brain gets hardened and filled up the lighter is the impression made on it and the more difficult to recall a past event. Memory has nothing of the spiritual or mysterious about it. It is as material as the muscle in your arm or the organs of digestion. The lad of ten years has a brain that is soft and plastic and largely unoccupied and an event that arrests his attention will make an indelible mark on his brain that will scarcely ever be effaced. At forty your brain, particularly if you have been a thinker, is thickly scored over and only shallow lines can be impressed on it; hence events that happened in our youth are much clearer than incidents which have only six months of history. This is not horticulture but physiology, which only a few florists indulge in.

If you have grown any plants this winter that have not paid for bench room or that have been lacking popularity, then don't hesitate to throw them away. A good gardener loves his plants and perhaps some particular species or variety is his favorite, but in these speedy days he must not let sentiment interfere with business. Next to the ability to grow well is the pluck to throw away or discard the unprofitable.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ATTENTION, ADVERTISERS!

The following very interesting letter from a subscriber touches on an evil in the plant trade, very much regretted and which the REVIEW would give much to see corrected:

"We wish to call your attention to the fact that a great many advertisers offer stock and when you send check you find it is returned stating that the stock is all sold. This is all well and good, but when you see the same adv in the next issue of the paper it makes you feel you cannot depend on what you see advertised. For instance, we are in the market for several thousand Beaute Poitevine geraniums; one man advertised them by the thousand and we sent our check, which was returned, stating he was sold out. We wrote to another man who advertised them, but we did not send check for the very reason that he might be sold out, which proved correct. The next issue of the paper contained both these advertisements that they were still able to supply this stock. We of course presume it was either a neglect of withdrawing the advertisement or having it changed, or possibly they have time contracts and let their advertisements stay in after the stock is sold for fear they will not get their money's worth of advertising if they withdraw.

"We think your paper should make a special effort to have every advertiser withdraw or change his advertisement as soon as the stock is sold. Last spring a friend of mine in the trade told me that he sent five checks out for variegated vincas and every one was returned, yet every one of these advertisers still had vincas to sell for two or three weeks, according to the continued advertisements.

"We would be pleased to have your views on this subject and let us know whether you think it possible to improve this condition of affairs."

The REVIEW constantly and insistently urges upon its advertisers the necessity of keeping their advertisements up to date. We urge it for the advertiser's sake and for our own. It hurts a firm or an individual to offer what cannot be supplied, and to a lesser degree it hurts the publication which is the vehicle of that offer. But this much should be said in extenuation: Very many advertisements are ordered to run until forbid; one or two insertions sells the stock and a letter is dispatched canceling the advertisement, but is received too late to prevent another insertion. The only remedy is for each advertiser to watch his own interests closely and cut out the advertisement promptly when stock runs low. Don't neglect it; REVIEW advertisements work while you sleep.

ages are much less common than they have been, but the development of new outlets through new retail stores, and in communities where cut flowers were previously little used, has served to keep the markets fairly well balanced.

Greenhouse building in the past year eclipsed the record of 1903, which was the banner year up to that time. It is difficult to offer any estimate of the amount of new glass put up in 1905. Much rebuilding was done, but it is safe to say that greenhouse areas extended at least fifteen per cent during the year. Early indications are that 1906 will see an even greater increase in glass area.

Holiday Business.

Florists are everywhere interested in holidays, as they are the harvest seasons in the retail way. Easter, 1905, made an advance over previous Easters. It was, perhaps, not a great advance in money return, but all cut stock sold at good prices. It is noteworthy that the sales for bulbous stock, especially cut, are not so great as they have been in the past years and that a large proportion of the Easter buyers are turning to growing plants. All good cut flowers cleaned out at Easter, but there is no longer occasion for accumulating cut flower stock at the expense of quality for this holiday; salable plants are now too abundant. The lily continues to be the popular Easter flower, but its predominance is not so marked as in the days before the Easter lily was offered all the year around.

There is now a great variety in the line of Easter flowering plants and to name them would be superfluous. All well-grown flowering plants will sell at Easter, providing they are offered to the right class of trade. You can't sell ten-dollar plants in fifty-cent stores and ten-dollar stores can't afford to handle fifty-cent plants.

Memorial day is becoming of more and more importance. Throughout the north, from New England to Colorado, Memorial day calls for annually increasing quantities of cut flowers and a considerable number of flowering plants. It is not a day for high prices and those who attempt to raise prices will defeat the best interests of the trade.

A GOOD OLD YEAR.

As 1905 has but two more business days to run, it is fitting at this time that we should glance backward for a short review of the trade accomplishments of the year. There can be no doubt that 1905 has been the banner year in the history of our business, not alone in one department, but in all. That this would be the case was early apparent, and, indeed, business has been steadily gathering volume and was better toward the close of the year than in its first half.

It has been a period of unexampled prosperity in all business activities in the United States, but in no department has prosperity been broader than in agriculture. The farmers have money and a notable feature of 1905 has been the fact that business has been better, relatively, in the smaller communities than in the great cities. But every florist has had a market for all he could produce, providing he produces the proper quality. A period of prosperity is not a time for turning out cheap stock. If any man has failed to find a profitable sale for his stuff it has been because his stock was poorly chosen or poorly grown. There have, of course, been individual and local exceptions, but the man who finds fault with 1905 should look inward rather than outward.

Door-yard Gardening.

If there is one feature most striking about the business of 1905 it is the increase in interest in flower gardening. This has been so marked as to attract the attention of observers in all lines of activity, as well as those who have been directly benefited. From millionaire to day laborer, everyone has felt the value and pleasure of door-yard or window gardening and the demand for material for this class of work has been unprecedented. In the west there has been a greater increase in landscape gardening than in the east, but throughout the country door-yard planting has been the popular hobby and the interest so keen that a number of amateur gardening publications have made conspicuous successes by catering to this interest and the great daily papers have found the flower gardening department one of the most interesting special features.

The sale of bedding stock last spring was not especially heavy, possibly because a great many growers were late with a considerable part of their crops, and good quantities were left over which might have been sold if offered earlier in the season.

Cut Flower Trade.

The cut flower business has eclipsed all previous records. In wholesale centers trade was slow in the spring, but during the summer, and this is especially true of the west, business was better than it ever had been before during that season. And in the fall the accustomed glut of stock did not come until just before Thanksgiving, when there was a brief period of oversupplies and low prices. Considering the year as a whole, very satisfactory prices have been realized and the production has been larger than it ever was before. Chrysanthemums realized this fall slightly lower values than in previous years and violets this autumn repeated the experience of last season in oversupplies and low returns to the growers. Carnations have brought especially good prices.

A feature which can escape no careful observer is the fact that more and more each year the large consumers of cut flowers are providing local supplies. They are building greenhouses of their own, and selling their own product, or they are encouraging the development of local wholesale cut flower growing establishments. A number of such places are proving conspicuous successes and others are planned. At the same time building progresses apace in the large wholesale centers and one would look for great overproduction. It is a fact that short-

A Bench of Poinsettias.

Thanksgiving in 1905 did not bring the results which had been expected. Thanksgiving is another day which will use considerable quantities of stock, but will not stand for much increase in price. This year it chanced that the day was nearly everywhere cold or stormy, which interfered with trade, especially the demand for violets for street wear.

Christmas is so recent an event that little need be said of it. Universal prosperity was reflected in the flower business. The demand for cut flowers was never greater and everything of suitable quality was sold at prices never better. Larger numbers of flowering plants were offered than ever before and sold out clean, so far as wholesale hands were concerned. Occasionally a retailer overbought, but in general it was the most satisfactory Christmas on record.

Nineteen hundred and five has seen a wider use of florists' requisites than was ever made before. Better taste has prevailed in leading stores and possibly less drapery has been used in proportion to the number of orders sent out. But, on the other hand, stores in smaller communities, where comparatively few supplies have been used, have this season seen the profit in the artistic results to be obtained by the use of the many aids supplied by the dealers in baskets, pans, ribbons and the thousand other requisites of an up-to-date store.

Flower Shows.

The flower show season of 1905 made a new record. Public interest was greater than in any previous year and in a half dozen of the leading cities, flower shows made new records for magnitude, for public interest and for attendance. The awakening interest in all gardening matters caused the public press to give these shows greater attention than ever before, greatly to our benefit. The gardening interest was recognized in a number of exhibitions, particularly at Chicago, and in several cities the retail florists recognized the value of the flower show in its effect on their business and participated as never before.

The New Year.

The year 1906 is ushered in under most favorable auspices. There is no cloud on the horizon. Production is still behind consumption in our business. The general prosperity of the country has suffered no curtailment and the prospects are excellent for increased business in all branches of our trade. At the same time, he is a wise man who does not commit himself beyond the bounds of prudence. While there is no sign of trouble, yet it is better to make haste slowly in the matter of expanding one's business where it must be done on credit. If there is any particular in which florists in general are lax it is in the matter of credits. Credits are extended without due investigation and in unreasonable amounts in proportion to the creditor's resources. Our trade has increased so rapidly that many firms are doing a business greater than is warranted by their capital. It would be wise to look closely at the matter of credits and in this period of easy sales endeavor to inaugurate better things in the matter of business methods.

OLNEY, ILL.—J. P. Wilson has added about 2,000 feet of glass to his plant, which now consists of 9,000 feet and is devoted to carnations and lettuce.

A Pan of Poinsettias.

PAN OF POINSETTIAS.

We had the pan of poinsettias photographed because we did not remember of a similar illustration. Had the old man been around at the performance, he would have chosen a dwarfer lot of plants, but after all the sample illustrated will find plenty of admirers. In spite of choosing all the plants for this pan in August, of apparently equal strength and health, there is a great variation in their height, and with many buyers this is no detriment. The tallest bract is just fifteen inches above the soil and the spread of bracts and foliage the same. When this pan assumed its frills, paper to hide the pan and a judicious use of ribbon, it readily retailed at $10, and, although a good price, it is worth it, for there is lots of labor and some knowledge needed to bring it to perfection. Doctors, lawyers and ministers of the gospel do not pretend to charge for what they actually give you. You pay for accrued interest on the time and money they spent at college and hospital and theological seminaries. So why should we not charge for our early instructions in washing pots and throwing out ashes, the essential rudiments of a gardener's education?

The view of the large group of poinsettias was taken December 15. They start with plants not more than twelve inches high, with bracts eighteen inches across, and recede in the picture to plants with stems five feet high. This is partly accounted for by the date at which they were propagated, but there is some other cause for which we cannot account. Some seasons they will grow much taller than others. The man who can keep his plants below two feet, with large heads, will always dispose of stock at an excellent price. The tall ones come in for church decorations or for cutting.

W. S.

ROSES OVER-FED.

We have three houses of Brides and Maids benched in July, one and two-year plants that have been giving fair cuts but are weak in stem and the buds do not have very good substance. December 10 to 15 we mulched with two inches of well rotted cow manure. Did we do the right thing to increase our cut of high grade stock? The houses were then out of crop. The plants had been fed with liquid manure in October, and bone meal and wood ashes in November. We would like some advice as to treating these houses. The soil is a little light for roses, just right for carnations. There has been a good deal of blind wood and too many short stems. The plants are healthy and free from insects. The temperature is 56 to 58 degrees. One house is grafted stock. They cut more blooms, but I can see no difference in quality. W. B.

The trouble with these roses is simply a case of dyspepsia—over-feeding when root action is sluggish. When it is really necessary to apply mulch at this season (which is very rare) it should be put on very thin. Two inches is altogether too much, as this excludes the sun's rays, which are the life of the plant, entirely from the soil, causing a stoppage of root activity.

The most sensible thing to do is to remove at least two-thirds of the mulch and keep the surface of the soil loose and open and refrain from feeding for a few weeks, until the plants have regained their health. The general treatment has been right, but you are far too generous in feeding. RIBES.

The view of the large group of poinsettias was taken December 15. They start with plants not more than twelve inches high, with bracts eighteen inches across, and recede in the picture to plants with stems five feet high. This is partly accounted for by the date at which they were propagated, but there is some other cause for which we cannot account. Some seasons they will grow much taller than others. The man who can keep his plants below two feet, with large heads, will always dispose of stock at an excellent price. The tall ones come in for church decorations or for cutting.

ROSES OVER-FED.

We have three houses of Brides and Maids, benched in July, one and two-year plants that have been giving fair cuts but are weak in stem and the buds do not have very good substance. December 10 to 15 we mulched with two inches of well rotted cow manure. Did we do the right thing to increase our cut of high grade stock? The houses were then out of crop. The plants had been fed with liquid manure in October, and bone meal and wood ashes in November. We would like some advice as to treating these houses. The soil is a little light for roses, just right for carnations. There has been a good deal of blind wood and too many short stems. The plants are healthy and free from insects. The temperature is 56 to 58 degrees. One house is grafted stock. They cut more blooms, but I can see no difference in quality. W. B.

The trouble with these roses is simply rose-rot, dyspepsia, over-feeding with liquid manure is sluggish. When it is really necessary to apply mulch, it is a question of what is best, one or two inches of very fine, five inches is better than four inches of coarser, excludes the cold air, when you see the life of the plant entirely gone, you are causing a large amount of root rot.

The most sensible thing to do is to remove at least two-thirds of the mulch, to keep the surface of the soil loose and open and refrain from feeding for a few weeks, until the plants have regained their health. The general treatment has been right, but you are far too generous in feeding. R. M. S.

OBITUARY.

Death of Henry Eckford.

Henry Eckford, the man who is widely credited with greatest responsibility for the improvement of the sweet pea and who has sent out many of our very best kinds, died at his English home December 5 at the age of 82 years. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made July 13, 1905, when W. Atlee Burpee visited Mr. Eckford for the last time. The original is among Mr. Burpee's choice possessions.

The announcement of Mr. Eckford's death scarcely came as a surprise, for since September he had been confined to his bed. During the 80 years of his life he witnessed many changes in the horticultural world and was himself instrumental in no small measure in bringing about some very important ones, especially in sweet peas which he raised from the humblest to the highest rank amongst garden annuals.

A native of Mid-Lothian, Scotland, he was apprenticed as a gardener at an early age, and later on in life filled several important positions as a gardener before commencing business on his own account at Wem as a seed grower and merchant. As a hybridizer of verbenas and other flowers he was well-known before devoting his attention and skill to culinary peas and sweet peas. It was among the latter that his greatest achievements were attained, his many triumphs culminating in the variety known as Henry Eckford, introduced this year, a distinct advance in color upon anything previously known in sweet peas. He was not long ago awarded the Victoria medal for his great services to horticulture.

He was of a genial and kindly disposition and his conversation was always interesting on account of his many reminiscences of bygone days.

blooming, pure white. Makes up fine in casket sprays. Not an extra good shipper, but for the retail grower this is hard to beat.

The Bride.—A dwarf growing white with a good bloom, but outclassed in general by the above varieties.

The Queen.—This variety is making a place for itself as an early white for commercial blooms. Outclassed on the exhibition table, but a great money-maker as it is seen on many places.

Boston Market.—Very free flowering but too small in size in these days of fancy carnations.

Gov. Wolcott.—A fine white during warm weather but splits too much in winter.

Flora Hill, White Cloud, Her Majesty, Lorna and Queen Louise we have dropped because they are outclassed by the above varieties.

Enchantress.—Never before has a variety done so universally well right from the start as has Enchantress. At once became a favorite with everybody, grower and retailer alike. Produces the highest grade of blooms under ordinary culture and is as free as most of the smaller varieties. Every grower needs this.

Fiancee.—This variety was unable to show itself in its true form this season except on a few places. I think, however, that when it gets on to its feet again it will fulfil all the claims that were made for it.

Mrs. Lawson.—The standard dark pink of the day.

Indianapolis.—Has not met with the success we looked for with most growers. Is still our best paying dark pink variety, not excepting Lawson. Very free, early and continuous, and makes long stems early in the season. Wants to be kept topped back close when making the plant.

Mrs. E. A. Nelson.—With some this

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Notes on Varieties.

Before you get into the propagating too far you will do well to figure up what varieties you are going to grow next season and how many of each. The season is well enough along now for you to see what varieties are going to pay you best and what colors you want to increase or decrease your plantings of next season. If you have new varieties on trial you can tell pretty well by this time whether you will want to make all the cuttings you can for next season or whether you will want only enough to give a fair trial next season. A plan we have been following for some years with good success is to draw a sketch of each house and mark what is to be planted on each bed and the number of plants each bed requires. When making cuttings you can always refer to this list and know just what you will require of each variety. Changes can of course be made as needed.

This list does not embrace all the varieties that are on the market, but in it are good varieties in all the leading colors. In most cases they are the best in their colors.

Vesper.—As an all-season white we place this at the head of the list. It is early, free and continuous. The blooms are large, pure white and never burst. Long and strong stem. This variety was not pushed as its merits deserved but it will be grown more and more as it becomes better known.

Lady Bountiful.—If this variety would come into its best form a little earlier in the season we would give it first place. Undoubtedly the best shipper on account of its great substance.

The Belle.—Many growers consider this the finest white commercially, as it is large and free and has good stems. Comes in form very early and was the finest white at our late show in the general classes. A tendency to split a small percentage of its calyxes during mid-winter is its only fault.

White Lawson.—Same as its parent save in color. Comes slightly mottled when first opened but fades out pure white when fully developed.

Indiana Market.—A variety of our own grown in place of Flora Hill on account of its productiveness and ability to withstand hot weather.

Moonlight.—A tall growing, early

(From a photograph made last July.)

is a very fine commercial variety. Not free enough during the early winter with us, and hard to root.

Mrs. F. Joost.—Still grown by some, but too small.

Ethel Crocker.—We grow this variety for blooming in hot weather, when it is ahead of anything in its color. Not a good winter bloomer.

Nelson Fisher.—A very bright shade of carmine pink which shows up fine at night. Grows much the same as Lawson.

G. H. Crane.—Still grown largely as a commercial scarlet. Hard to beat for earliness and freedom. Medium size bloom.

Crusader.—Much the same as Crane. A larger bloom but not so early nor so free in blooming.

Flamingo.—A very strong growing scarlet of good size and form. Not free enough to be profitable.

Flambeau.—One of our own varieties and our favorite scarlet. Stands hot weather without getting sleepy. At its biggest crop during mid-winter.

Cardinal.—Resembles Estelle but far superior in every way. Large, early and free, and always comes full in the center. Bids fair to become a leading commercial scarlet.

John E. Haines.—The introducers of this variety sent us a batch of young plants last spring for trial. They made only fair plants in our heavy soil and an unusually dry summer, but they delighted us with some grand blooms as early as the middle of September. Every shoot makes a bloom and the stem is fine.

Harlowarden.—We consider this the best crimson. Very strong growth and and free bloomer.

Harry Fenn.—Not so large as the above, but very free in blooming and a shade brighter in color. Shows a little more scarlet cast.

Daheim.—A fine large bloom and a fine shade of crimson in cold weather, but not good in warm weather.

Mrs. Patten.—As a variegated this is perhaps the best there is. Extremely free and early and of good size.

Prosperity.—As grown by some this is a grand variety, but requires special culture to bring success. Not very free.

BEST FOUR KINDS.

Will you kindly tell me what are the best four kinds of carnations, white, red, pink and light pink? I want quality and shall grow Enchantress for light pink. What should be the other three? I have to grow them all in one house. S. J. H.

Your inquiry comes right in line with what I had outlined for my notes for this issue, and so I will ask you to read them carefully and you will be able to get the information you are looking for. I will say, however, that you should grow more than one variety in each color, because every variety has its own special time when it is at its best and by the same token it has its time when it is at its poorest. You can cover the season much better by growing two or three varieties in each color. A. F. J. BAUR.

LIGHT PINK LAWSON.

The enclosed carnation bloom is a sport from Lawson and we would like to have your opinion of it. We would like to know if there is any other Lawson sport of that color and if it would be worth while to propagate it? M. J. L.

The carnation bloom you sent was too badly wilted when it arrived here for me to tell the exact shade of the bloom. It failed to revive when placed in water. I could see, however, that the color was much lighter than Lawson. Yes, there are other light-colored sports of Lawson, several shades I understand but I cannot say how near they resemble yours. As to the advisability of propagating it, I would say that depends entirely on how good you consider it. Is the color a pleasing one? Would you care to grow it in quantity for your trade? Lawson is grown extensively all over the land on account of its many good qualities. The color is just a little darker than was considered ideal when it was introduced, but its other good qualities soon overcame this slight objection. Now if your sport has that ideal shade of pink (of which Mrs. Joost is a fair sample) then it is but natural to suppose that it will gradually crowd the original Mrs. Lawson for public favor. Whether some one else has the same thing or not need not be taken into consideration for the present. When either of you has enough stock to disseminate the new variety then will be the time to put your heads together and put it out under one name, etc. If the other party has a good stock now and can put it out before you have any quantity it will save you from buying any at least. So if you have a good thing, hold on to it. A. F. J. BAUR.

THE PRESS BUREAU.

That bureau for the dissemination of trade information through the daily papers seems largely superfluous; all that is needed is a Munchhausen to talk to the Associated Press correspondent. Given a sufficiently large story, he will do the rest.

This is the tale wired to Chicago:

Cincinnati, December 22.—A carnation company of Joliet, Ill., supposed to be the one headed by H. N. Higginbotham, of Chicago, to-day paid the highest price ever recorded—$35,000—for a new carnation, the Aristocrat. This is $5,000 more than Thomas W. Lawson paid for the carnation named in honor of his wife. The sale was made by Richard Witterstaetter, a florist of this city, who releases all rights to the flower and agrees to deliver to the Joliet concern 30,000 plants before next June. The blossom measures three and one-half inches in diameter and is of a cerise color, resembling closely the American Beauty rose.

THE PRESS BUREAU.

That Bureau for the dissemination of trade information through the newspapers seems largely superfluous; that is needed is a Minneapolis to talk to the Associated Press correspondent from a sufficiently large story, he will be the best.

This is the tale varied to Chicago. On December 22, a carnation, named John E. Haines, supposed to be the best, was introduced by H. N. Higdon to the Chicago Press. It paid the highest price ever received, $10,000 for a few carnations. The West has a $8,000 one from the W. F. H. and for the carnation named John E. Haines. The seed was made by Richard W. Haines, the first of this kind of carnations. It is the flower and agrees to delay the John E. Haines 10,000 plants before the time. The blossom measures 1 1/2 inches and 1/2 inches in diameter and is a very nice one, resembling closely the American Beauty. Evidently Boston is not too fast in of correspondent, more credulous than Chicago, for this is the way the story reached the Boston Herald:

Cincinnati, O., December 23.—Aristocrat, the most aristocratic of all carnations, was sold yesterday by Richard Witterstaetter to the Chicago Carnation Association, of Joliet. The price is said to have been $40,000. It is declared by experts to be the most magnificent specimen of carnation ever grown.

The Chicago Tribune called Mr. Higginbotham on the telephone and published the following:

The "highest priced carnation," which was reported to have been sold by a Cincinnati florist on Friday, is now said to still be in the hands of the florist awaiting a purchaser. Harlow N. Higginbotham, who was named as the

or prettier effect than is produced by these two richest colors, deep, dark red and pure brilliant yellow. In size the plants grade nicely. They make a combination unsurpassed."

SMILAX IN GUERNSEY.

Supplementing the note reprinted in the REVIEW for December 14, page 227, on the success and profit of growing smilax in the Island of Guernsey, the Horticultural Advertiser gives a few details of how the Guernsey growers cultivate smilax. There are really two or 12's in July, and stood outdoors till the summer crop has been removed at the end of August. If it is to be a permanent plantation, to last from five to seven years, then about the same date they are planted in beds in the greenhouse or in patent troughs. The rows run lengthways and not transversely in the houses, the width of the rows apart being determined by the hot water pipes. Generally they are planted in double rows, the plants being nine inches apart, and the rows three and one-half to four feet. Within two or three inches of the crowns of the plants, foot-wires are run the length of the rows, four of these being considered the correct number for a double row. Six feet above these, secured to the tie-beams, there run another set of similar wires, and from the lower set to the upper set, sufficient threads are run to accommodate the number of trails sent up by the plants.

I might have said a word as to soil, but I will say it now. A good porous and friable soil is necessary, though this needs pressing firmly; but the principal thing is an adequate drainage, so that the soil may be kept sweet and wholesome. Deficiencies in this respect mean failure, the foliage turning pale and speedily falling from the stem, rendering the trail unsalable.

The main points in its cultivation may be summarized as follows:

The temperature must be fairly equable, ranging from 60 to 70 degrees before Michaelmas, this being mostly sun heat, and from 55 to 60 degrees throughout the winter.

purchaser of the high priced flower, denied yesterday that he had bought it, saying the price asked for it—$35,000—is exorbitant, but he admitted that efforts had been made by his Joliet agents to purchase the flower, and they may secure it yet, although they will not pay $35,000 for it.

As a matter of fact the Chicago Carnation Co. did buy Aristocrat. The price is not stated but is understood to have approximated $10,000, the price the same firm states it paid for Fiancee.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., register Helen M. Gould, a variegated sport from Enchantress, equal in size and having a dark variegation, deep pink with darker markings. While on close observation this variety is a variegated variety, the general effect is one beautiful tone of dark pink. White Enchantress, previously registered. Winsor, light silvery pink, intermediate in color between Lawson and Enchantress; grand habit, splendid stem, calyx that never bursts and a color that will make it in great demand. It is a trifle larger than Lawson, with just as stiff a stem but less brittle, and is a magnificent grower.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

GOOD CANNAS.

The accompanying illustrations show two beds of cannas from photographs made last season for the Conard & Jones Co. In one bed is Niagara, one of the richest of the gilt-edged kinds. The petals are broader than in Gloriosa and the flowers finer in every way. The Conard & Jones Co. considers it one of the best of the dwarf kinds.

The second bed contains Duke of Marlborough in the center and Buttercup about the outside edge. Robert Pyle, secretary of the company, says: "We know of no more brilliant contrast methods adopted, one being to grow it as a permanent crop, the other utilizing it as a winter crop, between the summer crops of tomatoes or melons. In the latter case, young plants are raised from seed every year, and are thrown to the rubbish heap when done with. A span greenhouse with high side lights is the best adapted, a lean-to, or a span with low sides being too wasteful, the object being to produce trails six feet in length.

The seeds are sown in early autumn, and for nearly a year are grown on just as English nurserymen would grow any young plants, and it is not till planting time that any particular interest attaches to them. By midsummer they have made nice bushy plants, well established in 60's. If the crop is to be an annual one, these plants are put into 8's

The daily admission of fresh air to harden the foliage, so that it will stand after cutting and not quickly wilt.

A daily syringing except on unfavorable days in midwinter.

Shading against very brilliant sunshine in late summer and spring.

Constant attention to prevent trails interlacing, giving one trail to one thread.

Rigorously pinching back all puny growths to throw the strength into the stronger trails.

To pinch all trails directly the limit of the top wires is reached, so as to encourage supplemental foliage to develop at every eye.

When a fully grown trail is stopped, it takes about a fortnight to harden. Then when fit, the trail with the thread attached is cut down just below the foot-wires, tied together in bunches of six and packed in flower boxes. Other threads are immediately put to fill the vacancies created, these, if the plants are doing well, needing to be renewed three or four times during the season.

Smilax ranges in price from one to two shillings per bunch; sometimes, if well furnished, reaching two shilling sixpence, but a fair average is one shilling sixpence per bunch. The season lasts from October till May, and where permanent crops are grown, they go on till June, when they are forced to take a rest. By October, all is ready again for another round. Such, roughly and briefly, is the method of cultivation here of this probably the most charming of all the decorative cut foliage plants.

A COLORADO PLANT.

The accompanying illustrations show two views of the new establishment of the Pike's Peak Floral Co., Wm. Henry Evans, manager. They have during the past few months added some 25,000 square feet of glass to their place, giving them a total of about 50,000 feet of glass. This is one of the largest areas of glass in Colorado and is devoted to the wholesale business exclusively. The crops of which they will make a specialty are carnations, roses, violets, mums and decorative plants for the holiday seasons.

Mr. Evans says that so far as his knowledge goes his concern is the first in Colorado to do an exclusive wholesale trade shipping to the mountain towns and into Utah. He considers the prospects excellent, as one of the greatest troubles the retail dealers in these places have run up against has been that near-by firms from whom they could buy flowers also did retail business and, naturally, when business was good at home the outsiders were the ones to suffer. This difficulty Mr. Evans proposes to make of advantage to himself by catering to the retailer only, giving him the selection of the best stock on hand.

The new range of houses is of modern construction and very similar to the style of Peter Reinberg's houses at Chicago; seven foot gutters; no partition where the same kind of plants are grown. The plan was worked out after a thorough study of the different methods and ideas used around Chicago by Mr. Evans, who spent a week or more visiting the Chicago establishments. The roof material and ventilating apparatus were supplied by the J. C. Moninger Co.

ularity for "work." Here is a distinctly novel and commendable use for small plants of boxwood. Among the best selling specialties at C. A. Samuelson's, Chicago, for Christmas were box, say twelve to eighteen inches high, planted in round jars of Bayersdorfer's Pompeian ware, with a red ribbon tied in the lower branches of the plant so as to in a measure fill in the space of stem. These made especially attractive specimens. The cost was small and they might have been sold at a profit at $1 each had it not been for the cost of delivery at holiday time. Mr. Samuelson said he had only twenty-five of these, but wished he had 200.

THE IDEAL EMPLOYEE.

[This is a letter recently printed and circulated among the employees of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago.]

In answer to your question, "What do you consider essential elements of success for young men standing upon the threshold of a business career?" I would say first, a young man should carefully consider what his natural bent or inclination is, be it business or profession; in other words, take stock of himself and ascertain if possible what he is best adapted for, and endeavor to get in that vocation with as few changes as possible. Having entered upon it, then let him pursue the work in hand with diligence and a determination to know it thoroughly, which can be done only by close and enthusiastic application of the powers at his command; let him strive to master its details, and put into it an energy directed by strong common sense, so as to make his services of value wherever he is; and then let him be alert and ready to seize opportunities whenever they present themselves.

The trouble with most young men is that they do not learn anything thoroughly, and are apt to do the work committed to them in a careless manner; forgetting that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well, they become mere drones and rely upon chance to bring them success. The business world is full of just such young men, content in simply putting in their time somehow and drawing their salaries; making no effort whatever to increase their efficiency, and thereby enhance their own as well as their employer's interest. There are others who want to do what they are not fitted for, and waste their lives in what may be called misfit occupations; far better be a good carpenter or mechanic of any kind than a poor business or professional man.

Next to the selection of occupation is that of companions. Particularly is this important in the case of young men beginning their career in strange cities away from home influence, for it too often happens that young men of excellent abilities are ruined by evil associates. A young man therefore cannot too early guard against forming friendship with those whose tendency is to lead him on the downward path. To every young man I would say, seek at the start to cultivate the acquaintance of those only whose contact and influence will kindle high purposes, as I regard the building up of a sterling character one of the fundamental principles of true success. The young man possessing a conscience that cannot brook the slightest suspicion of wrongdoing, and which insists on steadfast and undeviating truthfulness, sturdy honesty, and strict devotion to duty under all circumstances, has a fortune to begin with. The ability to restrain appetite, passions, tongue, and temper, to be their master and not their slave, in a word, absolute self-control, is also of first importance; one who cannot govern himself is unfitted to govern others.

of correspondent, more credulous than Chicago, for this is the way the story reached the Boston Herald:

Chicago, Ill., December 23. Aristocrat, the most aristocratic of all carnations, was sold yesterday by Richard Wettstein to the Chicago Carnation Association of Joliet. The price is said to have been $10,000. It is declared by experts to be the most magnificent specimen of carnation ever grown.

The Chicago Tribune called Mr. Higginbotham on the telephone and published the following:

The highest priced carnation, which was reported to have been sold by a Cincinnati florist on Friday, is now said to still be in the hands of the florist awaiting a purchaser. Harry N. Higginbotham, who was named as the

or prettier effect than is produced by these two richest colors, deep, dark red and pure brilliant yellow. In size the plants grade nicely. They make a combination unsurpassed."

SMILAX IN GUERNSEY.

Supplementing the note reprinted in the Review for December 11, page 227, on the success and profit of growing smilax in the Island of Guernsey, the Horticultural Advertiser gives a few details of how the Guernsey growers cultivate smilax. There are really two or 12's in July, and stood outdoors till the summer crop has been removed at the end of August. If it is to be a permanent plantation, to last from five to seven years, then about the same date they are planted in beds in the greenhouse or in patent troughs. The rows run lengthways and not transversely in the houses, the width of the rows apart being determined by the hot water pipes. Generally they are planted in double rows, the plants being nine inches apart, and the rows three and one-half to four feet. Within two or three inches of the crowns of the plants, foot wires are run the length of the rows, four of these being considered the correct number for a double row. Six feet above these, secured to the tie-beams, there run another set of similar wires, and from the lower set to the upper set, sufficient threads are run to accommodate the number of trails sent up by the plants.

I might have said a word as to soil, but I will say it now. A good porous and friable soil is necessary, though this needs pressing firmly; but the principal thing is an adequate drainage, so that the soil may be kept sweet and wholesome. Deficiencies in this respect mean failure, the foliage turning pale and speedily falling from the stem, rendering the trail unsalable.

The main points in its cultivation may be summarized as follows:

The temperature must be fairly equal, ranging from 60 to 70 degrees before Michaelmas, this being mostly sun heat, and from 55 to 60 degrees throughout the winter.

purchaser of the high priced flower, denied yesterday that he had bought it, saying the price asked for it—$25,000—is exorbitant, but he admitted that efforts had been made by his Joliet agents to purchase the flower, and they may secure it yet, although they will not pay $25,000 for it.

As a matter of fact the Chicago Carnation Co. did buy Aristocrat. The price is not stated but is understood to have approximated $10,000, the price the same firm states it paid for Fiancee.

CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., register Helen M. Gould, a variegated sport from Enchantress, equal in size and having a dark variegation, deep pink with darker markings. While on close observation this variety is a variegated variety, the general effect is one beautiful tone of dark pink. White Enchantress, previously registered. Winsor, light silvery pink, intermediate in color between Lawson and Enchantress; grand habit, splendid stem, calyx that never bursts and a color that will make it in great demand. It is a trifle larger than Lawson, with just as stiff a stem but less brittle, and is a magnificent grower.

GOOD CANNAS.

The accompanying illustrations show two beds of cannas from photographs made last season for the Conrad & Jones Co. In one bed is Niagara, one of the richest of the gilt-edged kinds. The petals are broader than in Gloriosa and the flowers finer in every way. The Conrad & Jones Co. considers it one of the best of the dwarf kinds.

The second bed contains Duke of Marlborough in the center and Buttercup about the outside edge. Robert Pyle, Secretary of the company, says: "We know of no more brilliant contrast methods adopted, one being to grow it as a permanent crop, the other utilizing it as a winter crop, between the summer crops of tomatoes or melons. In the latter case, young plants are raised from seed every year, and are thrown to the rubbish heap when done with. A span greenhouse with high side lights is the best adapted, a lean-to, or a span with low sides being too wasteful, the object being to produce trails six feet in length.

The seeds are sown in early autumn, and for nearly a year are grown on just as English nurserymen would grow any young plants, and it is not till planting time that any particular interest attaches to them. By midsummer they have made nice bushy plants, well established in 60's. If the crop is to be an annual one, these plants are put into 8's es, tied together in bunches of six packed in flower boxes. Other ends are immediately put to fill the spaces created, these, if the plants are growing well, needing to be renewed three or four times during the season. Smilax ranges in price from one to two shillings per bunch; sometimes, if well finished, reaching two shilling sixpence, but a fair average is one shilling per bunch. The season lasts from October till May, and where permanent crops are grown, they go on till June, when they are forced to take a rest. By October, all is ready again for another round. Such, roughly and briefly, is the method of cultivation here of this probably the most charming of all the decorative cut foliage plants.

A COLORADO PLANT.

The accompanying illustrations show a view of the new establishment of the Pike's Peak Floral Co., Wm. Henry Evans, manager. They have during the last few months added some 25,000 square feet of glass to their place, giving them a total of about 50,000 feet of glass. This is one of the largest areas of glass in Colorado and is devoted to the wholesale business exclusively. The crops of which they will make a specialty are carnations, roses, violets, pansies and decorative plants for the holiday seasons.

Mr. Evans says that so far as his knowledge goes his concern is the first in Colorado to do an exclusive wholesale and shipping to the mountain towns and into Utah. He considers the prospects excellent, as one of the greatest troubles the retail dealers in these places have run up against has been that near-by firms from whom they could buy flowers also did retail business and, naturally, when business was good at home the outsiders were the ones to suffer. This difficulty Mr. Evans proposes to make of advantage to himself by catering to the retailer only, giving him the selection of the best stock on hand.

The new range of houses is of modern construction and very similar to the style of Peter Reinberg's houses at Chicago; seven foot gutters; no partition where the same kind of plants are grown. The plan was worked out after a thorough study of the different methods and ideas used around Chicago by Mr. Evans, who spent a week or more visiting the Chicago establishments. The roof material and ventilating apparatus were supplied by the J. C. Moninger Co.

ularity for "work." Here is a distinctly novel and commendable use for small plants of boxwood. Among the best selling specialties at C. A. Samuelson's, Chicago, for Christmas were box, say twelve to eighteen inches high, planted in round jars of Bayersdorfer's Pompeian ware, with a red ribbon tied in the lower branches of the plant so as to in a measure fill in the space of stem. These made especially attractive specimens. The cost was small and they might have been sold at a profit at $1 each had it not been for the cost of delivery at holiday time. Mr. Samuelson said he had only twenty five of these, but wished he had 200.

THE IDEAL EMPLOYEE.

[This is a letter recently printed and circulated among the employees of Marshall Field & Co., Chicago.]

In answer to your question, "What do you consider essential elements of success for young men standing upon the threshold of a business career?" I would say first, a young man should carefully consider what his natural bent or inclination is, be it business or profession; in other words, take stock of himself and ascertain if possible what he is best adapted for, and endeavor to get in that vocation with as few changes as possible. Having entered upon it, then let him pursue the work in hand with diligence and a determination to know it thoroughly, which can be done only by close and enthusiastic application of the powers at his command; let him strive to master its details, and put into it an energy directed by strong common sense, so as to make his services of value wherever he is; and then let him be alert and ready to seize opportunities whenever they present themselves.

The trouble with most young men is that they do not learn anything thoroughly, and are apt to do the work committed to them in a careless manner; for getting that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well, they become mere drones and rely upon chance to bring them success. The business world is full of just such young men, content in simply putting in their time somehow and drawing their salaries; making no effort whatever to increase their efficiency, and thereby enhance their own as well as their employer's interest. There are others who want to do what they are not fitted for, and waste their lives in what may be called mistfit occupations; far better be a good carpenter or mechanic of any kind than a poor business or professional man.

Next to the selection of occupation is that of companions. Particularly is this important in the case of young men beginning their career in strange cities away from home influence, for it too often happens that young men of excellent abilities are ruined by evil associates. A young man therefore cannot too early guard against forming friendship with those whose tendency is to lead him on the downward path. To every young man I would say, seek at the start to cultivate the acquaintance of those only whose contact and influence will kindle high purposes, as I regard the building up of a sterling character one of the fundamental principles of true success. The young man possessing a conscience that cannot brook the slightest suspicion of wrongdoing, and which insists on steadfast and undeviating truthfulness, sturdy honesty, and strict devotion to duty under all circumstances, has a fortune to begin with. The ability to restrain appetite, passions, tongue, and temper, to be their master and not their slave, in a word, absolute self control, is also of first importance; one who cannot govern himself is unfitted to govern others.

Establishment of the Pike's Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colorado.

Economy is one of the most essential elements of success, yet most wretchedly disregarded. The old adage, "Wilful waste makes woeful want," never was more fully exemplified than in these days when much of the want that now prevails would not exist had care been taken in time of prosperity to lay up something for a "rainy day." The average young man of today when he begins to earn is soon inclined to habits of extravagance and wastefulness; gets somehow imbued with the idea that, irrespective of what he earns, he must indulge in habits corresponding to those of some other young man; or imagines he cannot be manly without such indulgences. The 5, 10 or 15 cents a day that is squandered, while a mere trifle apparently, if saved, would in a few years amount to thousands of dollars, and go far towards establishing the foundation of a future career. Too few realize that in order to acquire the dollars, one must take care of the nickels. Careful saving and careful spending invariably promote success.

It has been well said that it is not what a man earns, but what he saves, that makes him rich. John Jacob Astor said that the saving of the first thousand dollars cost him the hardest struggle. As a rule, people do not know how to save. I deem it of the highest importance, therefore, to impress upon every young man the duty of beginning to save from the moment he commences to earn, be it ever so little; a habit so formed in early life will prove of incalculable benefit to manage a large income or run successfully a large business. It matters not what a man's income is, reckless extravagance and waste will sooner or later bring him to ruin.

A young man should aim to be manly and self-reliant, make good use of all his spare moments, read only wholesome books, and study to advance his own interests as well as those of his employer in every possible way.

As a rule, the young man of high principles and fair ability, who saves his money and keeps his habits good, becomes valuable in any concern; but as volumes have been written upon this subject it is not possible in a letter to cover it all. By following out these suggestions, however, aiming constantly to prepare himself for a higher place instead of waiting for something to turn up, every young man will succeed to a more or less degree. I would not have him believe, however, that success consists solely in the acquisition of wealth—far from it—as that idea is much too prevalent already. The haste to become rich at the expense of character prevails to an alarming extent and cannot be too severely denounced. What is needed today more than anything else is to instil into the minds of our young the desire above all else to build up a character that will win the respect of all with whom they may come in contact, and which is vastly more important than a great fortune. I quote on this matter the following from the will of a senator, who died recently:

him in after years, not only in the amount acquired, but in the exercise of economy in small affairs, which will inform and train his mind for larger duties that may devolve upon him. It goes without saying that a man who is not competent to manage well a small income, or run successfully a small business, cannot be expected to properly

"I hope my sons will defer to and confide in my executors and trustees, and above all, that they may realize early in life that the only one thing more difficult to build up than an independent fortune, and more easily lost, is character, and that the only safeguards of character are the Ten Commandments and Christ's Sermon on the Mount."

CHRYSANTHEMUM ROSIERE.

Chrysanthemum Rosiere is a seedling of Opah crossed Mrs. Coombes. It was exhibited before the C. S. A. committees by Nathan Smith & Son as No. 12-11-03. Elmer D. Smith is very enthusiastic over Rosiere. He says that "while it has been our good fortune to offer some very choice commercial varieties to the trade, we believe that Rosiere is the most valuable since we introduced Monrovia, the leader among early yellows." The blooms are large, seven and one-half to eight inches in diameter, and are very similar to Viviani-Morel in form, but deeper and more double. In color, it is a deep rose pink, never fading, a characteristic fault of most early pinks. It has the heavy foliage and dwarf habit of Mrs. Coombes. If the early bud is taken (crown bud August 20 to 25 is best) it will not exceed two and one-half feet in height, and many plants were but two feet the past season, with foliage to the ground. It is a good shipper, being of excellent substance and not sensitive to rough handling. The blooms are ready to cut October 10, a time when a good pink is scarce.

STORIES I HAVE HEARD.

I HEARD a story once of a florist who had a customer who frequently bought flowers, some of which were to be delivered to his wife and some to another woman—not his wife. One day he ordered two dozen carnations sent to his wife and two dozen cattleyas sent to the other woman. Through the error of a clerk the orchids were sent to the customer's wife. The next day the man called on the florist and made a hot talk punctuated with five-fanged abuse.

In the midst of this effort the florist perceived with relief that a lady was entering and called the man's attention to this fact, whereupon he subsided for the moment. The lady looked around and seeing the man said suddenly, "Why, George, you're not here to buy more orchids, are you! I know it was dear of you to send me such lovely flowers, but I would appreciate something less expensive just as much. I came in for some violets and you may get them for me if you wish."

The man rose to the occasion and with the air of the devoted husband bought the violets and went out with his wife. The florist felt a great relief and later became quite satisfied with himself after he had got hold of the clerk that made the blunder and repeated to him as an original composition the gilt-edged abuse he had received from the customer. He thought the incident closed and even had a daydream to the effect that the sending of the orchids to the wife might be the means of bringing the man to see the error of his ways, as such incidents always do in the magazine storiettes. But, alas, no. The customer quit, the clerk quit. The wife also quit, because the flowers her husband now sent came from another store. And soon the florist learned that the clerk was now employed in the store to which the customer changed. The clerk who made the blunder that caused all the trouble and loss to the florist, was still serving the customer, though of course the latter was unaware of the fact.

I HEARD a story once of a florist who was showing some visiting friends through the Liberal Arts building of a great exposition in his city. He was much taken with a pair of handsome jardinières in one exhibit. "They would be just the thing for a display of gladiolus flowers in my windows. They have a 'for sale' tag on. Wait a minute, please, till I inquire the price." The wait lasted less than a minute. He rejoined his friends and walked on without saying a word. "Well, how much were they?" asked one. "Oh, only $750 apiece," was the dejected response.

I HEARD a story once of a grower who called on a retailer and much to his surprise found him penned in a corner behind the ice-box by an athletic young man in fashionable attire. At first he thought it must be a hold-up—in fact it was, but not for filthy lucre. When the young man became aware of the grower's presence he permitted the retailer to emerge and took his departure.

"What the deuce was he trying to do to you?" said the grower. "Oh, he wanted me to tell him who was sending flowers to his girl. He had seen my tag on the boxes. But he didn't get it. It's my business to sell all the flowers I can—and keep my mouth shut. But, say, he pushed me pretty hard and I'm glad you came in when you did."

I HEARD a story once of a florist who had been appointed chairman of a committee to look for new quarters for the Florists' Club of his city. In making his report he attempted a few oratorical effects, stating in substance that the committee had failed to find a better location than the present one and concluded with these words: "Therefore, Mr. President, I move that we continue to meet here permanently for the present." This gem was greeted by tremendous applause, which was prolonged and intensified when he bowed his acknowledgments and sat down with an expression of face indicative of great satisfaction with his oratorical powers.

* * *

I HEARD a story once of a florist who participated in a discussion at a meeting of his Florists' Club. Certain society ladies were to be selected as patronesses of an exhibition. He pointed out the danger of making up a list without full knowledge of the many cliques of which society is composed. "For, gentlemen," said he, "the ladies of these different cliques detest each other most cordially." This struck the members as a clever bit of satire and there was considerable laughter and applause, which changed into a roar when the speaker turned red and sat down in high dudgeon.

A LEADING PITTSBURGER.

Fred Burki was born in 1853, in Canton Bern, Switzerland, one of a family of seven children, of an aggressive, prosperous farmer. Fred was left an orphan at 11 years of age, an aunt taking him to live with her. At the age of 14 he had his little garden and decided to learn the florists' trade. He received a good education and when 16 years old apprenticed himself with the most prominent gardener in the city of Bern, Fred Bratchy, whose youngest son is now a landscape architect there.

After serving three years with Mr. Bratchy, the energetic lad came to Pittsburgh, in February, 1872, securing employment in John R. & A. M. Murdoch's greenhouses. After working with this firm, at several private places, and a short time in New Jersey, he started in business with Fred Wahn, at Moore's place in Allegheny, in October, 1874. They had four small houses for bedding stock for spring sale. The following year he bought his partner's interest and carried on the business.

Mr. Burki was married in 1877 to Miss Pfeifer, who was a great lover of flowers and came to be highly esteemed by the craft and flower buying public. In 1878 they moved to a small place in Bellevue, then a suburb of about 500 inhabitants, growing bedding plants and such cut flowers as carnations, bouvardia, heliotrope, pansies, etc.; also vegetable plants, especially celery. Mr. Burki was the first man about Pittsburgh to bleach celery with boards instead of banking up.

In 1884 he bought eight acres of wild land at Bellevue, most of it steep hillside, on which he built three greenhouses, dwelling, barn, etc. The greenhouses kept increasing, looking as if they were tacked to the sides of the steep rocks. In 1890 he disposed of his stand in the Allegheny market and built more greenhouses and started to grow roses and carnations for the trade, taking them to the city stores in baskets by train, later by wagon, when his nicely kept wagon and spanking team of grays were to be seen in front of the flower stores every morning for several years.

At the Pittsburgh chrysanthemum shows in 1891 and 1892 he carried off most of the first prizes with his roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. He secured stock of Ivory, Bonnaffon and Maud Dean when they were disseminated and for some years grew Hector and Mrs. Fisher carnations to perfection. He was the first grower about Pittsburgh to use 24-inch glass and to use natural gas for fuel.

In 1893 Mr. Burki lost his faithful wife and helpmeet, who died of rheumatism after several years of suffering. They had no children. He was almost discouraged, but he took a trip to his native land, and on his return started in and made rapid progress with his business, and married his present wife in 1895. He continued building greenhouses on the hillside until he had thirty-six, the floor of one house being level with the ridge of the one below it. The purchase of eight acres of adjoining land secured frontage on the most prominent thoroughfare, and he built a handsome brick residence and a dwelling for his single employees.

In 1898 Mr. Burki organized the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., with W. A. Clarke and T. P. Langhans as associates, consigning all his cut to that wholesale house ever since. In 1901 he bought Crystal Farm, 210 acres near Bakerstown station, P. & W. R. R., eighteen miles from Allegheny. He incorporated the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co., associating with him some of his employees, and built large greenhouses, some of them 50x450 feet. He started to move his glass from Bellevue, where he was troubled with smoke from the factories which were growing into the neighborhood, all to the Crystal Farm, where the company now has 160,000 square feet in twelve houses, fourteen dwellings for employees, several gas wells furnishing fuel, and two oil wells. Mr. and Mrs. Burki with their family of four children live now at Crystal Farm. His holdings in this company are about $140,000 and his place in Bellevue, which he still owns, though the greenhouses are removed, has become very valuable, as a residence locality. Besides these he has other investments.

Mr. Burki is a man whose judgment is sought on all matters pertaining to the business; however, he is of a modest disposition to a fault. He is a charter member of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club, a member of the American Carnation Society and a life member of the S. A. F. He attends most of their meetings.

THE BIRCH-BARK STORE.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs taken at The Rosary, New York, J. H. Troy, manager. During the past season the store has been completely refitted, inside and out, and every part both inside and out, except that occupied by glass, has been covered with light birch-bark. The effect is not only out of the ordinary, but it is very pleasing. There are few stores in New York City which have attracted more favorable comment than the Rosary since it was decked up in its new attire.

GROWING CROPS UNDER GLASS.

[A paper by B. T. Galloway, Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, reprinted from the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, where it was one of several papers under the general head, "Opportunities in Agriculture."]

With the rapid growth of population and the shifting of industrial centers there have been constant changes in agricultural practices. A study of the most closely allied with the factory. No country can continue to be prosperous where agriculture is the sole dependence, nor can any country hope to be independent and enjoy the best fruits of its industry where manufacturing constitutes the chief source of wealth. The farm and the factory must go side by side in order to bring about the greatest progressive, intellectual and industrial development.

Within the last decade there has been an enormous increase in our manufacturing interests, so that it is not surprising to find that the output from the factory now constitutes sixty-five per cent of our annual production of wealth. A study of the figures presented to us in the annual reports of the Department of Agriculture and other branches of the Government dealing with statistical matters shows that coincident with the development of factories in a community there has been a corresponding increase in the value of farms and farm lands, as well as of the products of the farm. The great era of manufacturing upon which this country is now entering is bound to have a beneficial effect upon agriculture, for aside from the great possibilities of agricultural development alone, without reference to other industries, it is clear that as factories continue to increase in number and enlarge their output, agriculture must necessarily grow to meet these conditions.

Problems for American Farmer.

Nearly all the best arable land of the country has now been taken up, and those who are most vitally concerned with soil production realize that henceforward the main problem for the man who intends to make cultivation of the soil his occupation will be not so much a question of great acreage as of greater production from a given acre. If America hopes to continue her phenomenal development, she must be able to produce not only the enormous quantities of food this country is little more than twelve bushels per acre; for corn, the average production is twenty-five and one-half bushels per acre; for oats and barley, the average production is twenty-eight and twenty-six bushels per acre, respectively. During the past thirty years there has been a constant variation of these averages for different parts of the country. In the great grain-producing areas of the west the average has been decreasing. In certain sections of the east, on the other hand, the average has been growing higher. The important work carried on by this department, as well as by the state experiment stations, is doing much to bring about larger yields from a given acreage. A study of agricultural statistics, especially for the past twenty years, will show that where states and state authorities have been active in agricultural propaganda work, and where the experiment stations and colleges have paid marked attention to the farms and farmers' interests, there has been a material benefit, manifested by new methods of crop production, new industries and diversification, and marked improvement in the value of the crop for a given area.

Recognizing, therefore, the necessity for greater diversifications and greater production per acre, the question arises, in what manner can this result best be brought about? With the increasing growth of our cities and the accumulation of great numbers of people in comparatively small areas, with the extension of railroads, telephone and telegraph systems, rural free-delivery, and trolley lines, there will be an increasing demand for many agricultural products which must of necessity be grown by intensive methods; that is, such products will be of a more or less perishable nature, and for this reason they will have to be grown comparatively close to where they are to be consumed.

This necessarily gives rise to another proposition, namely, that to grow crops close to the point of consumption requires their production on land in the immediate vicinity of cities and towns, the value of which is greatly above that of the average farm lands. The more valuable the land the greater the need for economizing every foot of it and the greater the need for thorough knowledge of all the factors governing plant growth.

The population of twenty of our largest eastern cities and their contributory territory will aggregate 15,000,000 people. Both population and wealth are constantly increasing, and in consequence there is a growing demand for something more than the mere necessities of life. Fruit, flowers, and vegetables are needed to meet the requirements of life, and these, to be furnished at their best, must be grown for the most part close at hand and produced in such a way that the largest return can be secured from a given area of land with a minimum risk. To accomplish this result it must be practicable to control to a large extent climate, soil, moisture, temperature, and, in a measure, light. The only way this can be done successfully and practically is through the medium of glass houses.

A few years ago structures of this kind were looked upon more or less generally as a means for supplying the tables of a comparatively few wealthy private individuals or to serve for the growing of ornamental plants which had no strictly economic value. At the present time this view of the subject is rap-world's history shows that while agriculture has been, and will continue to be, the primary basis of wealth, it has reached its highest development where required for her own increasing industrial population, but a large share of the food for other nations as well.

The average production of wheat in jelly changing and the time has come when the construction of glass houses and the production of plants under glass are regarded much in the same light as the development of manufacturing interests in a large factory; in other words, a modern greenhouse establishment is so handled at the present time that in many respects it is a factory, utilizing nature's forces in a way to reverse the seasons for the purpose of converting into wealth the products of the soil.

What are the possibilities in this field, and what are the steps in beginning a work which, of necessity, must be of the most intensive kind?

The Man First.

There is a great deal being said and written at this time about farming as a vocation. Many inducements are being held out to city people and others, and many erroneous statements are being made as to the opportunities in this field. Unquestionably, there is need for pointing out the advantages of rural life, but, like all good things, the tendency sometimes is to carry the argument too far, and this results in inducing many people to go into the country or to undertake farm life who are wholly unfitted for the work. The city man is often misled by statements written by those who are not thoroughly conversant with the facts, and, again, by those who have interests at stake and who would directly benefit by inducing the prospective farmer to invest in land. It would seem well, therefore, to caution the reader on this one point and to lay before him plainly the facts in reference to some of the more important requirements in the matter of undertaking the lines of work to which we shall refer farther on.

In such intensive work as must necessarily be carried on in connection with the growing of plants under glass, it is essential that the man who is proposing to undertake it should be in the prime of life. It is not work for men beyond middle age, nor is it work for men with weak constitutions. While the work is not necessarily heavy, it is of such a nature as to require strict attention, and while it is for the most part in the open air and therefore not as likely to bring on certain diseases as the case of other more confining occupations, it frequently happens that exposure is required, and such exposure can only be borne by men of comparatively strong constitutions.

In addition to the foregoing, those who are contemplating work of this nature must or should have a thorough business training. More failures result from lack of good business capacity in this field than from all other reasons combined. It frequently happens that a man may be successful in growing crops and in getting them into good condition for marketing, but through lack of knowledge or lack of ability to appreciate the main facts with reference to the commercial handling of his products he fails.

As a further necessity in this work, it should be pointed out that some experience is required—the more experience, of course, the better. It is not always practicable for a man contemplating entering a field of this nature to have had experience in intensive lines of horticultural work. If he cannot get it by direct practice, he should spare no effort to find out all he can as to what others are doing; visit those who are engaged in the business; secure the various works that have been published on the subject; consult the experiment station reports; and familiarize himself in every way with what the world is doing in this field. If he will do this, and if he is a man of keen perception and observation, he will soon be able in a measure to manage his own affairs.

So much, therefore, for the man. The fields that are open may be considered under several heads: General plant growing; special fields, as vegetable growing and flower growing; and then the ultra-special fields, as specialization with certain crops, such as roses, carnations, or violets.

General Plant Growing.

The field of general plant growing probably offers more opportunities than any of the others; that is, opportunities for a greater number of people. In the vicinity of every town or city having a population of from 3,000 to 10,000 there may be found in most cases good openings for the ambitious and progressive young man who desires to supply a home market with general crops which may be grown partly under glass and partly in a very intensive way out of doors. The demand in towns and cities of this size, of course, is not for any great quantity of any one thing; hence, the necessity for producing a variety, as ornamental plants for use in home yards, plants for cut flowers, vegetables, etc.—a general miscellaneous stock.

In work of this nature it is essential that the location selected be within easy reach of the business limits of the city, for the grower will have to depend largely for his trade on those who may visit his establishment. Such being the case, land must be secured, if practicable, within easy access of those who may wish to visit the place as prospective buyers.

For an ordinary establishment of this nature half an acre of ground is sufficient for a small start. An acre would be better. Due attention must be given to the location with respect to soil, water facilities, and opportunities for securing fuel and other essential things required in general work. In most cases half an acre of ground under such circumstances can be bought for $500. To equip properly a small greenhouse would require another $500. For miscellaneous equipment, including tools, outbuildings, and stock, $200 would be necessary for a start. Thus, there would be invested in the neighborhood of $1,200. If the man himself wished to live at the place, as he should do, it would probably require from $800 to $1,000 for a home. In producing a variety of crops, as indicated above, the gross income from such a place should be at least $1,200 per annum. Practically all the work on such a place could be done by the owner, with some little assistance from time to time in spring and fall.

The crops handled should be a general assortment of bedding plants, a small collection of ornamentals—such as palms, ferns, etc., which could be sold as pot plants—and carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, etc., for cut flowers during the

his glass from Bellevue, where he was troubled with smoke from the factories which were growing into the neighborhood, all to the Crystal Farm, where the company now has 160,000 square feet in twelve houses, fourteen dwellings for employees, several gas wells furnishing fuel, and two oil wells. Mr. and Mrs. Burki with their family of four children live now at Crystal Farm. His holdings in this company are about $140,000 and his place in Bellevue, which he still owns, though the greenhouses are removed, has become very valuable, as a residence locality. Besides these he has other investments.

Mr. Burki is a man whose judgment is sought on all matters pertaining to the business; however, he is of a modest disposition to a fault. He is a charter member of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club, a member of the American Carnation Society and a life member of the S. A. F. He attends most of their meetings.

THE BIRCH-BARK STORE.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs taken at The Rosary, New York, J. H. Troy, manager. During the past season the store has been completely refitted, inside and out, and every part both inside and out, except that occupied by glass, has been covered with light birch-bark. The effect is not only out of the ordinary, but it is very pleasing. There are few stores in New York City which have attracted more favorable comment than the Rosary since it was decked up in its new attire.

GROWING CROPS UNDER GLASS.

[A paper by B. T. Galloway, Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, reprinted from the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, where it was one of several papers under the general head, "Opportunities in Agriculture."]

With the rapid growth of population and the shifting of industrial centers there have been constant changes in agricultural practices. A study of the most closely allied with the factory. No country can continue to be prosperous where agriculture is the sole dependence, nor can any country hope to be independent and enjoy the best fruits of its industry where manufacturing constitutes the chief source of wealth. The farm and the factory must go side by side in order to bring about the greatest progressive, intellectual and industrial development.

Within the last decade there has been an enormous increase in our manufacturing interests, so that it is not surprising to find that the output from the factory now constitutes sixty-five per cent of our annual production of wealth. A study of the figures presented to us in the annual reports of the Department of Agriculture and other branches of the Government dealing with statistical matters shows that coincident with the development of factories in a community there has been a corresponding increase in the value of farms and farm lands, as well as of the products of the farm. The great era of manufacturing upon which this country is now entering is bound to have a beneficial effect upon agriculture, for aside from the great possibilities of agricultural development alone, without reference to other industries, it is clear that as factories continue to increase in number and enlarge their output, agriculture must necessarily grow to meet these conditions.

Problems for American Farmer.

Nearly all the best arable land of the country has now been taken up, and those who are most vitally concerned with soil production realize that henceforward the main problem for the man who intends to make cultivation of the soil his occupation will be not so much a question of great acreage as of greater production from a given acre. If America hopes to continue her phenomenal development, she must be able to produce not only the enormous quantities of food this country is little more than twelve bushels per acre; for corn, the average production is twenty-five and one-half bushels per acre; for oats and barley, the average production is twenty-eight and twenty-six bushels per acre, respectively. During the past thirty years there has been a constant variation of these averages for different parts of the country. In the great grain-producing areas of the west the average has been decreasing. In certain sections of the east, on the other hand, the average has been growing higher. The important work carried on by this department, as well as by the state experiment stations, is doing much to bring about larger yields from a given acreage. A study of agricultural statistics, especially for the past twenty years, will show that where states and state authorities have been active in agricultural propaganda work, and where the experiment stations and colleges have paid marked attention to the farms and farmers' interests, there has been a material benefit, manifested by new methods of crop production, new industries and diversification, and marked improvement in the value of the crop for a given area.

Recognizing, therefore, the necessity for greater diversifications and greater production per acre, the question arises, in what manner can this result best be brought about? With the increasing growth of our cities and the accumulation of great numbers of people in comparatively small areas, with the extension of railroads, telephone and telegraph systems, rural free-delivery, and trolley lines, there will be an increasing demand for many agricultural products which must of necessity be grown by intensive methods; that is, such products will be of a more or less perishable nature, and for this reason they will have to be grown comparatively close to where they are to be consumed.

This necessarily gives rise to another proposition, namely, that to grow crops close to the point of consumption requires their production on land in the immediate vicinity of cities and towns, the value of which is greatly above that of the average farm lands. The more valuable the land the greater the need for economizing every foot of it and the greater the need for thorough knowledge of all the factors governing plant growth.

The population of twenty of our largest eastern cities and their contributory territory will aggregate 15,000,000 people. Both population and wealth are constantly increasing, and in consequence there is a growing demand for something more than the mere necessities of life. Fruit, flowers, and vegetables are needed to meet the requirements of life, and these, to be furnished at their best, must be grown for the most part close at hand and produced in such a way that the largest return can be secured from a given area of land with a minimum risk. To accomplish this result it must be practicable to control to a large extent climate, soil, moisture, temperature, and, in a measure, light. The only way this can be done successfully and practically is through the medium of glass houses.

A few years ago structures of this kind were looked upon more or less generally as a means for supplying the tables of a comparatively few wealthy private individuals or to serve for the growing of ornamental plants which had no strictly economic value. At the present time this view of the subject is rap-world's history shows that while agriculture has been, and will continue to be, the primary basis of wealth, it has reached its highest development where required for her own increasing industrial population, but a large share of the food for other nations as well.

The average production of wheat in changing and the time has come for the construction of glass houses for the production of plants under glass is regarded much in the same light as the development of manufacturing industry in a large factory; in other words, a modern greenhouse establishment is so handled at the present time in many respects it is a factory, using nature's forces in a way to bring the seasons for the purpose of bringing into wealth the products of soil.

What are the possibilities in this field, what are the steps in beginning a business which, of necessity, must be of the intensive kind?

The Man First.

There is a great deal being said and written at this time about farming as a profession. Many inducements are being held out to city people and others, and many erroneous statements are being made as to the opportunities in this field. Questionably, there is need for pointing out the advantages of rural life, but, for all good things, the tendency sometimes is to carry the argument too far, and this results in inducing many people to go into the country or to undertake farm life who are wholly unfitted for the work. The city man is often misled by statements written by those who are not thoroughly conversant with the facts, and, again, by those who have interests at stake and who would directly benefit by inducing the prospective farmer to invest in land. It would seem well, therefore, to caution the reader on this one point and to lay before him plainly the facts in reference to some of the more important requirements in the matter of undertaking the lines of work to which we shall refer farther on.

In such intensive work as must necessarily be carried on in connection with the growing of plants under glass, it is essential that the man who is proposing to undertake it should be in the prime of life. It is not work for men beyond middle age, nor is it work for men with weak constitutions. While the work is not necessarily heavy, it is of such a nature as to require strict attention, and while it is for the most part in the open air and therefore not as likely to bring certain diseases as the case of other more confining occupations, it frequently happens that exposure is required, and that exposure can only be borne by men of comparatively strong constitutions. In addition to the foregoing, those who are contemplating work of this nature must or should have a thorough business training. More failures result from lack of good business capacity in this field than from all other reasons combined. It frequently happens that a man may be successful in growing crops and in getting them into good condition for marketing, but through lack of judgment or lack of ability to appreciate the main facts with reference to commercial handling of his products, fails.

As a further necessity in this work, should be pointed out that some experience is required, the more experience, of course, the better. It is not always practicable for a man contemplating entering a field of this nature to have had experience in intensive lines of horticultural work. If he cannot get by direct practice, he should spare no effort to find out all he can as to what others are doing; visit those who are engaged in the business; secure the various works that have been published on the subject; consult the experiment station reports; and familiarize himself in every way with what the world is doing in this field. If he will do this, and if he is a man of keen perception and observation, he will soon be able in a measure to manage his own affairs.

So much, therefore, for the man. The fields that are open may be considered under several heads: General plant growing; special fields, as vegetable growing and flower growing; and then the ultra-special fields, as specialization with certain crops, such as roses, carnations, or violets.

General Plant Growing.

In most cases half an acre of ground under such circumstances can be bought for $500. To equip properly a small greenhouse, to require another $500. For miscellaneous equipment, including tools, cutting knives and shears, $100 could be necessary for a start. The grower would be expected to be brought out of $1,500. If the grower has not as yet decided to give up the idea, as he should not, he can be put in a position to invest $800 to $1,000 for a home, depending on variety of crops, as well as on the gross acreage of the place. The place should be at least $1,000 per acre. Practically all the work can be done by the grower, with some little assistance from a helper in spring and fall.

The crops handled should be a general assortment of bedding plants, a small collection of ornamentals, such as palms, ferns, etc., which could be sold as pot plants, and carnations, roses, chrysanthemums, etc., for cut flowers, a good stock winter. A considerable portion of this work can be done out of doors, the plan being to have the outdoor crops grown in such a way as to harmonize with the plans for inside work. Of course, a definite system must be followed, and this system will in a measure depend on local conditions. A few hotbeds and cold frames will add materially to the possibilities of such an establishment and will allow the owner to increase his stock considerably, especially of spring bedding plants, which may be started earlier in the greenhouses and then moved to the frames outside as the season advances.

PIPING TOMATO HOUSE.

I am building a greenhouse, 25x68, north wall four feet, south wall three feet, ridge ten feet. The sides will have raised benches, the center solid beds. I wish to grow tomatoes. How much piping will be required in zero weather, and how would you locate the pipes? I have on hand 160 feet of 2-inch, 230 feet of 1½-inch, ninety-eight feet of 2½-inch and 460 feet of 1¼-inch pipe.

W. H. O.

The house you have designed to be used for tomatoes or roses should be provided with about 580 square feet of radiation. If this house were being erected under my supervision, to be used for tomatoes, I should have the center benches raised about six inches off the ground and heating pipes arranged under the benches, which should be provided to carry eight inches of soil. If you do not care to use this plan, then place a liberal amount of radiation under each side bench; say, four 1½-inch pipes supplied by one 2-inch pipe under the south bench and under the north bench seven 1¼-inch pipes supplied by one 2-inch pipe. Use the remaining pipe, together with 160 feet of 2-inch pipe in addition, beneath a slatted walk arranged between the solid beds, or, if this is not desirable, arrange the pipes on the planks used to retain the soil of the solid beds in place.

If the first suggestion of raising the middle beds six inches is not desirable, place the pipes under a tight or slatted walk between the solid beds and lay a 2-inch agricultural tile every three feet across the beds, with the open ends of the tiles entering the space occupied by the heating pipes beneath the walks and terminating in the center of the beds in an upright tile which shall act as a chimney to draw the heated air through the tile. The pipe you have, if all used, will supply about 480 feet of radiation, which is about 100 feet less than should be used. The additional 100 feet can be provided by using 160 feet of 2-inch pipe, as suggested.

TWO INCHES SINGLE.

Retail florists are gradually awakening to the fact that even a little advertising is a great help to business. On the opposite page are shown a number of advertisements recently published in local papers by retail florists. Each advertisement occupied two inches single column. This amount of space is not costly in any newspaper and when well handled it is sufficient to have a very appreciable effect on business. These advertisements are not reproduced as examples of what retailers' advertisements should be, but rather to show what retailers are doing. Some of the advertisements are very good, but none of them which does not quote a price is, in the judgment of experienced advertising men, as good as it would be if a price were quoted. Advertising men everywhere agree that to get the most prompt and fullest return from an advertisement it should not only describe a seasonable article but should state the price.

This is the time for making good resolutions for 1906. Each one of those who do retail selling should do a certain amount of advertising continuously through the year. It is keeping everlastingly at it that brings success. A two-inch advertisement every day in the year is better than a two-page advertisement for one insertion. Make a contract with your best local paper for a small space in each issue and then see to it that the advertisement is kept fresh. Do not let it run for weeks without a change. Quote a price.

A NEW IOWA PLANT.

The firm of Hall Bros. started in business in Osage, Ia., about eighteen years ago and continued until the fall of 1901, when the senior member turned the business over to Walter S. Hall, the junior partner, who has run it ever since, at the old place until this summer, when the old houses were all torn down and moved into the center of the city and rebuilt as shown in the accompanying illustration. The plant is heated by a sixty horsepower steam boiler, with a Morehead trap to take care of the condensation. Carnations and roses are the principal crops.

Mr. Hall makes as much of his annual fall opening as does the wisest advertiser in any other line. He gives a chrysanthemum show about the middle of November to which he succeeds in attracting a large part of the population of his city—and he always has an exhibition worth their time.

GOLDEN KING HOLLY.

The varieties of the common holly are many, and include some of our most beautiful evergreen shrubs. Very many are worthy of inclusion in all good gardens on account of their highly ornamental foliage, whether green or variegated. Throughout the dull season of the year those hollies which fruit freely are objects of much beauty, either as single specimens on the grass, or in company with the other shrubbery occupants, and no variety is more conspicuous than the subject of this note. The foliage of Golden King during the spring and summer months is extremely beautiful, being large and very broadly margined with a golden variegation, while the bright red berries are produced with such profusion that a most pleasing contrast in color is provided. This holly was only placed before the public a few years ago, and there are probably very few, if any, large specimens to be seen yet, but it is a free grower, of shapely habit and will undoubtedly find a place in the gardens of those who are desirous of beautifying them with the best evergreen shrubs.—Gardeners' Magazine.

CESPEDESIA DISCOLOR.

Cespedesias are seldom encountered in America, although it is a South American genus, probably for the reason that the plants have little value commercially except to such firms as make a business of supplying plants for large private collections. The genus is one of few species. The name is derived from that of Juan Cespedes, a priest of Santa Fe de Bogota and the date of introduction to Europe is given as late as 1878. Cespedesia discolor was recently shown before the Royal Horticultural Society in England and was awarded a first-class certificate. It is a strikingly ornamental stove plant, bearing showy yellow flowers in large panicles. The chief decorative feature of C. discolor, however, lies in the ornamental coloration of its young growth, which is rapidly developed from terminal buds, the five or six long drooping lanceolate leaves composing it being of a pale cinnamon buff, or biscuit color, faintly suffused with rose and veined with pale yellow, forming a striking contrast to the dark green of the mature leaves.

The pipe you have, if all used,

The firm of Hall Bros. started in business in Osage, Ia., about eighteen years ago and continued until the fall of 1901, when the senior member turned the business over to Walter S. Hall, the junior partner, who has run it ever since, at the old place until this summer, when the old houses were all torn down and moved into the center of the city and rebuilt as shown in the accompanying illustration. The plant is heated by a sixty horse power steam boiler, with a Morehead trap to take care of the condensation. Carnations and roses are the principal crops.

Mr. Hall makes as much of his annual bill opening as does the wisest advertiser in any other line. He gives chrysanthemum show about the middle of November to which he succeeds in attracting a large part of the population of his city, and he always has an exhibition worth their time.

GOLDEN KING HOLLY.

The varieties of the common holly are many, and include some of our most beautiful evergreen shrubs. Very many are worthy of inclusion in all good gardens on account of their highly ornamental foliage, whether green or variegated. Throughout the dull season of the year those hollies which fruit freely are objects of much beauty, either as single specimens on the grass, or in company with the other shrubbery occupants, and no variety is more conspicuous than the subject of this note. The foliage of Golden King during the spring and summer months is extremely beautiful, being large and very broadly margined with a golden variegation, while the bright red berries are produced with such profusion that a most pleasing contrast in color is provided. This holly was only placed before the public a few years ago, and there are probably very few, if any, large specimens to be seen yet, but it is a free grower, of shapely habit and will undoubtedly find a place in the gardens of those who are desirous of beautifying them with the best evergreen shrubs. Gardeners' Magazine.

CESPEDESIA DISCOLOR.

Cespedesias are seldom encountered in America, although it is a South American genus, probably for the reason that the plants have little value commercially except to such firms as make business of supplying plants for large private collections. The genus is one of few species. The name is derived from that of Juan Cespedes, a priest of Santa Fe de Bogota and the date of introduction to Europe is given as late as 1878. Cespedesia discolor was recently shown before the Royal Horticultural Society in England and was awarded a first-class certificate. It is a strikingly ornamental stove plant bearing showy yellow flowers in large panicles. The chief decorative feature of C. discolor, however, lies in the ornamental coloration of its young growth, which is rapidly developed from terminal buds, the five or six long drooping lanceolate leaves composing it being of a pale cinnamon buff, or bisquit color, faintly suffused with rose and veined with pale yellow, forming a striking contrast to the dark green of the mature leaves.

CHICAGO.*The Great Central Market.

If you are an out-of-town buyer of cut flowers, don't complain at anything you may think a wholesaler "handed" you last week: Remember that this market was "up against it" as never before.

Don't complain if you get poor stock; don't protest at the prices: Remember that the stock sent you, almost regardless of what it was, could have been sold to clamoring city buyers at prices well above advertised rates. Chicago wholesalers actually lost money by filling orders.

Don't complain if your order was cut in the effort to make short supplies go around; don't complain if your order was late and you got nothing at all. Place your order early next time.

In the wholesale way it was a wonderful Christmas, but far from satisfactory, save when one looks at nothing but the money total. Ten days of cold, almost sunless weather served to make supplies very much shorter than had been anticipated. At the same time orders assumed hitherto unrecorded proportions and the market was thrown into a state bordering on demoralization; not the demoralization of Thanksgiving, when the market was overburdened with stock, but the demoralization consequent upon utter inability to take anything like the usual care of valued customers. Supplies were less than last year in most houses and the money total of sales larger, which speaks for better average prices, especially good prices for the lower grades of stock. Just what the shortage was it is hard to say, for many buyers, mindful of recent holiday experiences, put off ordering in hopes of lower values. When they at length sent in an order it was only to be notified that it could not be filled, after which the same order showed up in house after house. Probably four out of five telegraphic orders turned down Saturday afternoon had been previously rejected elsewhere. Nevertheless it was a shortage more acutely felt than ever before. The only word which can be said in extenuation of shortcomings is that all shippers were more or less in the same boat.

Naturally there are numerous protests at prices. It was seldom that a regular customer was charged above advance quotations and most houses started out to fill the orders of their everyday customers before they took any of the extra money offered by those who faced a necessity. But there is an old story of the sinister fate of good intentions and, finding it imperative to cut orders, it is not strange that a little stock was sold while the shipping was on to those who bid above the already high lists. But growers should not base their anticipations of returns on the tales of big prices paid in a few cases. Harry Rowe paid George Reinberg $18 a dozen for four dozen Beauties Saturday afternoon, and there were other sales at this rate, but that is not a measure of market values, only an indication of the urgency of the buyers' requirements. It is the same with other tales of unprecedented prices.

A number of local retailers were more grievously disappointed than were the out-of-town buyers. In most recent holidays the market has been weak after the shipping was over. He was not an exceptional retailer who thought that history would repeat itself. As a result quite a few spent Saturday taking orders and came down town at night to get the stock to fill them, only to find the market bare and no one willing to book orders against Sunday's receipts. In Sunday morning's hustle for stock not plentiful enough to go around prices reached their highest. Many retailers found themselves in the predicament of having orders they could not get stock to fill.

As to stock, quality was somewhat impaired by the principal factor in reducing supply. Roses were of poor color and many carnations showed the effect of being brought out by fire heat. A heavy shortage of carnations had been anticipated but, strange to tell, in most houses roses were shorter than carnations. Beauties looked a little while ago to be the most abundant item but proved about the shortest; one big grower reports filling only about twenty-five per cent of his orders. Evidences of pickling were seen Thursday and Friday, but none subsequently. Violets moved as slowly as anything, but shortages in other items helped them to maintain fair values, $1.50 to $2 for good New York stock, and clean up. Such things as poinsettias, lilies, valley, Romans, mignonette, stevia, etc., frequently lost sight of at a holiday, brought good averages. Quite a few mums were seen but not in demand; their season passes with Thanksgiving.

In a retail way the holiday is variously reported. Business was certainly very heavy, but the cost of cut flowers hurt the stores in neighborhoods where price is an object; and inability to get the grade of goods required was an obstacle in the hightoned stores. Stocks of plants were larger than usual and many did more business with these than with cut stuff. Holly and wreaths sold about as well as ever, in spite of the great quantities handled by curbstone dealers. The best stores made their wreaths of boxwood instead of holly. On Sunday the weather turned cold, down to within 7 degrees of zero, increasing the work and cost of delivery.

Christmas Notes.

John Poehlmann says he doesn't expect to hear the last of this Christmas even by the next one, certainly not before Easter. O. W. Frese says they refused $25 a dozen for Beauties.

W. E. Lynch, at Hunt's, reports selling violets to the amount of $190 to one local buyer Saturday morning.

A. L. Randall Co. received 80,000 violets Saturday and even larger shipments Sunday.

Wietor Bros. were fortunate and exceptional in having better supplies than a year ago. Christmas made a fine new record for them.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, is in a position to say "I told you so." He had steadily predicted a shortage.

C. W. McKellar handled 1,500 cattleyas last week, at from $6 to $12 per dozen.

Wm. Arnold, foreman for George Reinberg, lost a wager on his Christmas cut. He backed his ability to cut 10,000 Beauties, counting all lengths, but it was actually a little over 9,200. A couple of bright days would have made him a winner.

This Week.

Of course this week opened with light receipts—that is always the way after a holiday, especially one with a shortage. Business is always good between Christmas and New Year's, with society active in all parts of the territory supplied by the Chicago market. Prices will naturally hold firm but a few days of sun have done much to bring along the buds and it is only a question of a short time until cuts will again be large.

Chicago Rose Co.

The Chicago Rose Co. has made a lease for three years on the ground floor store and basement at 56-58 Wabash avenue, to get possession February 1. A part of the space is to be occupied by Joseph Ziska, who has manufactured wire work for wholesalers for twenty-five years, and who will continue. The rear of the store will be used for the cut flower department and the front for supplies. The basement will be used for storage of stock. John P. Degnan, secretary and manager of the company, is now visiting New York and Philadelphia to buy the supplies. Staples only will be carried at first, novelties being added as the business develops. The capital stock of the Chicago Rose Co. is to be increased to take care of the enlarged business. The greenhouses at Libertyville are devoted to tea roses exclusively and consignors are looked to for other stock.

Miss Sipe to Lecture.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago has arranged with Miss Susan B. Sipe, of Washington, to deliver her lecture on "School Gardens and Horticultural Training of Public School Children" at Fullerton hall, in the Art Institute at 8 p. m., January 3. Miss Sipe is the lady who made so many friends in the trade with her address on this subject before the S. A. F. convention at Washington last August. No one who heard her there will fail if he can be present next Wednesday evening. She is deserving of a hearty reception and will no doubt have it.

Silkalene.

At the Flower Growers' Market, where they come in contact with many producers of smilax, asparagus, etc., Vaughan & Sperry do a steady trade in green thread for stringing these climbers; no one would think of using white string or even black thread for this market. There are several makes of green thread for this purpose but Vaughan & Sperry say that the highest priced is the best seller; that after using Meyer's Silkalene no one is content with the substitutes.

Various Notes.

At Chicago, 1905 was a cold year for the first ten months. At times the deficiency as compared with normal was as high as 250 degrees, but since October this has been steadily cut down by mean temperatures above the normal. On December 19 the deficiency was overcome, but it only lasted for a few days and now it is again colder than normal. Christmas day was 13 degrees colder than the average.

Mrs. Flint Kennicott has been ill four months, with rheumatism, and was worse the past week.

On Wednesday the daughter of E. G. Uihlein, president of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, was married to a wealthy gentleman from Milwaukee. The guests from the Cream City came on a special train and were quartered at the Auditorium, where the ceremony was performed, followed by a dinner in the banquet room. Mr. Uihlein engaged several floors of the hotel, which called for the largest floral decoration put up in this city in several years. P. J. Hauswirth had the order.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The Christmas business in Philadelphia bears evidence to the general prosperity of the country. The volume of business exceeded that of any previous year at this great festival. Prices were good and the stock left over was very small. The quality of the stock in general was excellent, the general condition when received indicating that holding back is not so much practiced as in the past. There is good reason to believe that this evil, among progressive growers at least, has been checked. Briefly summed up, it was a very satisfactory Christmas. This result is in no small measure due to the body of energetic wholesalers who centralized the stock and broadened the field to an extent not dreamed of in this city ten years ago. Immense quantities of flowers went south, west and even to New York City. The local demand was brisk. At no time was the market in danger of breaking. Prices were fairly regular.

Beauties, Liberty, Bride and Maid and red carnations were in heaviest demand. Many more of each could have been used. Long-stemmed Beauties were scarcer than the medium and short stems, keeping the total receipts from this rose lower than had the fancy stock been as plentiful as last year. Liberty of the medium grades was most popular. It is a question whether the average of quality is improving. There were many Maids of poor color, really choice stock commanding even more than the listed prices. Red carnations brought about $1 per hundred more than other colors of equal grade.

Mignonette, Roman hyacinths, Paper White narcissi and smilax were poor sellers, valley—of course an extra heavy crop, had been forced into bloom—and white roses sharing somewhat in the sluggishness. Poinsettias were freely used and the supply pretty well exhausted.

Violets were an important factor. The Marie Louise from Rhinebeck averaged more than Lady Campbell. Sweet peas were in better supply than ever before and brought good money. Orchids were in moderately good supply. Cattleyas sold especially well. The first white lilac has made its appearance. It did not create a stir.

Carnations were not by any means in heavy crop. They were generally fresh and of good quality. The prices realized were excellent. While Enchantress brought as high a price as any of the fancies, the prices on it varied widely. The variety was not as eagerly sought as the brighter colors. Medium grades were most popular. Fancy white sold well, but ordinary stock of snowy color required pushing.

Bouvardia was never so plentiful at Christmas. The quality was generally above the average; despite its perishable nature it was in demand at good prices. Easter lilies were in short supply on Friday, but by Saturday night they were plentiful. Quite a lot of callas were in evidence. Bunches of asparagus did not advance in price, but the purchasing power of a half dollar decreases in another way.

The plants in bloom and with bright-colored foliage disappeared from the stores with wonderful rapidity. Their charms, enhanced by hampers, ribbons, baskets, pot covers and what not, they were simply irresistible. The demand far exceeded any previous Christmas.

Holiday and New Year prospects are bright. The market is so bare of stock that it will take a few days to catch up. Meanwhile many entertainments will do something toward keeping up business activity.

plants and cut fronds of H. H. Battles' celebrated Adiantum Farleyense.

William Tricker, of Narberth, has some very fine hybrid begonias that are creating interest among plantmen. William K. Harris has seen them. Robert Craig has seen them. Julius Roehrs and the junior member of the long well known firm of Wadley & Smythe came here expressly to see them. All were pleased. Mr. Tricker was the first maker of round balls of Lorraine begonias in this city.

Gilbert Baker says his father has solved the problem of sending out a baker's dozen of less than thirteen. W. J. Baker received the first Trumpet Major narcissi at Christmas.

Charles E. Meehan, who was ill, happily recovered in good time for the rush. This year's holiday business of M. Rice & Co. broke all previous records, the great demand for their immortelle wreaths and bells cleaned up their entire stock.

Samuel S. Pennock opened his new annex on December 21. It was of great service for the next three days. Mr. Pennock left for Westerly, R. I., at 7 a. m., Monday to spend Christmas with his family.

Charles S. Swayne, of The Slope, Kennett, sent choice sweet peas to Dumont & Co.

A. M. Campbell finds that getting shipments signed for and on the track may not mean getting them off at Christmas. You have to see them in the car and the train off, and when necessary he does it.

Christmas Market.

Taking everything into consideration, the plant and flower trade of the holidays must once more take rank as the best ever. There were no sensational prices realized, but clearance sales from growers, wholesalers and retailers were very satisfactory and the volume of business was considerably larger than in 1904. The weather on December 23 was dark, damp and dismal but it did not seem to affect trade to any considerable extent. Clear and seasonable conditions prevailed on December 24 and on Christmas day itself.

Plant trade assumes increased proportions each year and the demand this year was remarkable, some of the leading retailers being cleared out of azaleas and Lorraine begonias early on Saturday. The three most popular flowering plants were azaleas, Lorraine begonias and poinsettias. The first named were not as well flowered as they might have been, but were in great demand, the pretty little Firefly being one of the leaders. Other flowering plants, included cyclamens, ericas, lilacs, freesias, primulas, bulbous stock and marguerites. Berried stock sold well. Hollies in tubs, aucubas, skimmias, ardisias and solanums all were seen in considerable numbers. There was a moderate call for palms, ferns and other foliage plants. Nephrolepis Barrowsii in 8-inch pans was a favorite, while large pans of poinsettias with a Dracena terminalis in the center took well. Fern dishes had a fine sale.

In cut flowers, there was no great surplus of anything and the markets cleaned out very satisfactorily. American Beauties sold at from $10 per hundred for short stems up to $9 per dozen, a few extra special making $12. A good many sold at $50, which was the price for best Liberty and Richmond, although a few of these made $8 per dozen. Brides sold well at a little lower prices. Killarney, Wellesley, Chatenay, Mrs. Oliver Ames and Morgan all cleared out well at prices ranging from $6 to $30 per hundred. Carnations sold extremely well. In white, there was some surplus and late sales were as low as $3, but many made $4 and some $5. Lawson and Fair Maid averaged $6, Enchantress and Helen Goddard $8, Fenn, Manley and other scarlets and crimsons, $10. Cardinal and Prosperity made top prices at $12.50.

Violets did not bring as high prices as had been hoped for. The best grades made $1.50, but many went at $1. Sweet peas sold at $1 to $1.50 per hundred. Callas were in good demand at $3 a dozen. Easter lilies averaged $10 per hundred. Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths were unchanged at $2.50 per hundred. These cleared a little better than usual. A few tulips and Trumpet Major narcissi were seen. Marguerites white and yellow were favorites at $1.50 per hundred. Some very good mignonette made $12 per hundred, other grades varying from $4 to $8. Chrysanthemums were not numerous. A few fine Jeanne Nonin made $6 per dozen, smaller sizes from $2 to $4. Poinsettias sold all the way from $2 to $8 per dozen. Those at the higher price carried bracts twenty to twenty-two inches across. Cypridium insigne was abundant at $8 to $10 per hundred. Few cattleyas were seen. A few Vanda cærulea and Phalaenopsis amabilis were the only other orchids seen.

Stevia was over-abundant at 20 cents to 25 cents per bunch. Double pink bouvardia sold well at 50 cents per bunch. Euphorbia Jacquiniaeflora, wall-flowers, myosotis, antirrhinums and lilac were seen in small quantities. Asparagus Sprengerl and plumosus sold well, but smilax was druggy. Trade in laurel wreaths, holly, mistletoe and other Christmas greens broke all records.

Christmas Notes.

Thomas Roland, the Nahant wizard, sold bunches of Euphorbia Jacquiniaeflora, which took well. He describes his plant trade as very satisfactory, prices about the same as in 1904. His specialties were ericas, white and pink Lorraine begonias, azaleas, marguerites, cyclamens, poinsettias, ardisias, crotons and ferns.

Doyle had some very fine white lilacs, pyrus, hollies in tubs, Marguerite Queen Alexandra, Erica melanthera and aucubas. He had far the best plant trade in his history.

Carbone had some splendid Otaheite oranges, Azalea Firefly, poinsettias grown by Wm. Walk and cyclamen.

Poinsettias were much in evidence at Galvin's, also azaleas, for which he had a heavy demand, Lorraine, valley in pots, and hollies.

Houghton & Clark has some fine specimen plants of Azalea Indica alba, ericas, ardisias and freesias, in addition to other sorts. They also had a nice assortment of orchids.

azaleas and cyclamens at Park street. Their new scarlet seedling carnation made $10 per hundred easily. They had a fine lot of Nonin and Murdock chrysanthemums.

John McFarland and William Walke had the best poinsettias at the Music hall market.

Carnation Helen Goddard was snapped up eagerly at $8 per hundred. It is classed as a great keeper in the stores.

Welch Bros. had a record breaking holiday trade. In American Beauties they handled a big lot, those from Briarcliff Greenhouses and Carl Jurgens being grand. They also had big consignments of poinsettias and all other seasonable flowers. They were practically cleaned out of all evergreens.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. had hardly any holly and very little laurel wreathing left at noon on December 23. They were never sold out so clean before and did far the biggest business in their history.

Thomas Pegler sold 30,000 Campbell violets at the Park street market on December 23. Quality was unusually good.

The mild weather on December 23 was a boon to the plantmen, who were able to send much of their stock out without being papered over at all. Weather was similar to that experienced on December 23, 1904.

Gen. MacArthur rose, from Robert Montgomery, was very good and sold quickly.

Wm. H. Elliott's Liberty were extra fine. The old Safrano and Bon Silene from Newtonville Greenhouses were soon sold.

A. Leuthy & Co. report a splendid trade in palms, ferns, azaleas and their other specialties.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on December 19, the following exhibits were staged, the awards being made by Peter Fisher, Allen Peirce and M. A. Patten: Pink Enchantress sport from Backer & Co., honorable mention; Winsor carnation from F. R. Pierson Co., report of merit; this beautiful pink variety gains in our appreciation the more we see of it. From the same exhibitors also came pink and white Enchantress sports, which received honorable mention. Wootton rose was well shown by James Wheeler. W. N. Craig showed Laelia autumnalis, L. Goldeana and L. anceps and the following named varieties of L. anceps: alba, holochila, Schröderiana, Stella, Americana, Ballantineana, polychroma, Williamsi, etc.

The committee of the Park street flower market has secured a large amount of advertising for the souvenir catalogue to be presented to visitors to the rose and carnation conventions.

The annual lecture course of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society is announced.

The banquet to the American Carnation Society will be held at the Copley Square hotel, Boston, on January 25. The banquet to the C. S. A. was held at the same hotel in November, 1904.

Peter Fisher's daughter underwent an operation for appendicitis last week. At last report she was convalescing nicely and we hope for her speedy recovery.

We sincerely wish a glad and prosperous New Year to REVIEW readers. The New England news during 1906 will be made as interesting and helpful as possible.

Christmas Trade.

This is written Christmas day. It is almost too early to give a full report of the Christmas trade, but from what we hear business was never better, though a few days prior to Christmas it was dull enough, with plenty of stock at that time. Trade in holly, mistletoe and greens generally was excellent. Plants of all kinds had the call over cut stock, as prices on the latter ran high. The weather was fine for delivery, cool but not too cold.

At the wholesale houses steep prices prevailed on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, with stock none too plentiful, especially red roses, which were at a premium. Quite a few Brides and Maids were in but other varieties very scarce, prices running from $18 to $20 per hundred for fancy stock.

Carnations were more plentiful than roses, with $8 the top price for fancy grades. Fancy reds were very scarce. Orders were in ahead for all that came in. California violets sold cheaper than last year, $2 per hundred being the top price. Plenty of these were in and cleaned up well. Bulbous stock was all good and plentiful, with no advance in price. Poinsettias sold well at 25 cents per head. Smilax, asparagus and adiantum had a big call.

The trouble seems with the St. Louis market that a great many of the consignors use nearly all their stock for home trade on days like Christmas and other holidays and the wholesaler is unable to tell what is coming in and orders taken ahead from the retailers are often not filled. From early reports we take it altogether every branch of the trade had a large and satisfactory Christmas trade.

Various Notes.

C. Young & Sons Co. furnished the decorations for the big Imperial ball last Friday, using 400 fancy Beauties.

E. C. Burrows, of Pilcher & Burrows, spent Christmas with the home folks at Peoria, Ill.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The holiday business in this city was a record breaker. To say that it was good would be putting it altogether too mildly. Never before in the history of the trade here has there been such a demand for flowers and at such good prices. The dealers all stocked up heavily in anticipation of a big Christmas trade, but the volume of trade greatly exceeded all expectations. Christmas night found the market literally cleaned up of everything salable in the flower line. The supply of American Beauties was not nearly equal to the demand, and all the other good roses were disposed of before night. Carnations as usual took the lead, fancy stock bringing as high as $2.50 a dozen at retail. Many of the stores were open until long after midnight Saturday, filling orders, and few of them got any rest Sunday. We are unable at this writing to give a complete report of the business but it is greatly in excess of last year's business.

The Shaeffer Floral Co.'s wholesale department sold out everything before closing time Saturday night and all the later shipments of stock were disposed of Christmas day. This firm did a heavy out-of-town business, shipping out many large orders. The retail department reports a splendid business, all the stock being sold out clean.

The Alpha Floral Co. also did a big business, their cash receipts being over $500 greater than last year.

W. H. Humfeld, of the Humfeld Floral Co., says that they did the greatest business that they have ever had since he has been in business, over fifteen years.

Miss J. E. Murray's business was much greater than last year, all of her stock being sold out by noon Sunday.

Arthur Newell did a much larger business than last year but was unable to state how much the increase was.

Lawrence Schwager did a splendid business.

Max Ellers, of the People's Floral Co., disposed of all his stock.

The demand this year has been for high grade stuff, all the good stock being disposed of first, and people were willing to pay good prices for good goods.

The visitors last week were E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; J. P. Cohen, Lexington, Mo., and R. L. Isherwood, Chillicothe, Mo.

The Market.

Christmas business with all the florists was very good. The fine weather helped things wonderfully, although it was the least bit cold. All plants and cut flowers had to be wrapped warmly to stand delivery without being frozen. Roses sold at good prices. Some fine Killarneys were sold by May & Co. for $5 per dozen and no trouble was experienced in getting that price; in fact, the writer was informed that it was not a matter of price, but a question of getting a sufficient number to fill orders. Brides and Maids sold at $3 and $4, Gates and Chatenay $4, Richmond and Liberty $5 per dozen. Carnations brought from $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Beauties made $10 to $18 per dozen, retail. Other stock in proportion. The cut flower trade was good and from all reports all enjoyed the best business we have had in years.

Lycopodium sold fast and, although a heavy shortage was predicted, the writer has not found one florist who has not been able to fill orders. Holly seems to have been a puzzle. Out of a dozen crates six were practically worthless. The early shipments were considered good, but later shipments turned out to be very poor, and some lots were refused.

It is evident that the paper bell cut the sales of the immortelle bell to a minimum, as there is not one store but what has a large number of them left.

Fancy baskets sold well, ranging from $5 to $15, and but few are left. The Christmas tree men have also had a good trade.

This year all florists made effort toward good window decorations. Gus Colberg, of the Swanson Floral Co., made a fine display with poinsettias and a large arch of holly. E. F. Lemke had an attractive display of Christmas bells and other novelties. L. L. May & Co. exhibited a handsome bunch of Killarney. Aug. Swanson also had a fine display in his Arcade store.

Chas. Vogt reports business good, being compelled to engage two extra clerks for the rush.

J. Hoffman, in charge of L. L. May & Co.'s retail department, reports the best business his firm has yet had.

The growers all feel good, especially Haugen & Swanson, who had numbers of violets which sold readily at $2.50 per hundred. They seem to have struck it right on violets this year and some growers contemplate planting them in large numbers for another season.

C. Bussjaeger has been cutting some good stock, for which he finds ready demand.

Christmas Notes.

In writing of the Christmas business, I am reminded of the little boy who said there was only one thing better than a piece of mince pie—and that was another piece. So, the majority of our retail florists, in reviewing the phenomenal trade of the Christmas season, have about concluded that nothing but another Christmas could equal it. My good friend Shaw, of New York, has gone after the picklers. He starts with gall and wormwood, but I presume we will eventually give them fire and brimstone, and they deserve it all. I am glad to say that this year there was more evidence of a tendency to "provide things honest in the sight of all men." Several dealers I note of, are very anxious that the florists' business be given more publicity. They had better watch out or they will get "publicity" good and plenty as holidays roll around.

While the foregoing is a digression, it is also a prelude to the statement that the Washington retailers made an excellent showing in the quality of stock, and were most liberally rewarded by the buyers. In reply to the stock question, "What sold best?" nearly every one replies, "Everything," a proof that there was a big demand for all salable stock, both in plants and cut flowers. Plants, of course, had the call, as they always do at the great holiday seasons. Christmas is the season for bright colors, the more of them the better from the buyer's viewpoint. Therefore everything that was a good red went fast. The varying shades of pink were good seconds, with white as a reliable rear guard. The limited quantities of lilies, hyacinths and other white stocks sold very well, considering the general preference for the bright colors. The Begonia Gloire de Lorraine offered this year should surely be a glory to any state or nation. There are different opinions as to the satisfaction which these plants give a purchaser, but there is unanimity as to their marvelous beauty when at their best. The poinsettias were much sought after. While I do not consider it a graceful plant, by a little judicious combining, the growers may put it in the front rank of Christmas plants, for it has the color and plenty of it. The aucuba, Dracaena terminalis and other plants have good standing at Christmas but, after all, it is the azalea that leads the van. The geranium for summer, the azalea for winter, seems to be the motto of the plain people. There was good demand for heather. It is a pity that more of it, in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, could not be had.

The passion for red was illustrated by one dealer who had about a hundred araucarias decorated with red ribbon and bells, and sold all of them. He agrees that the decorations sold them. In the milder colors, the cypripediums found favor in combination basket and hampers, and they do add the charm of novelty.

The ribbons, bells, etc., add an atmosphere of warmth, a setting for the picture, so to speak, and that is well; but mere decoration does not make a good plant out of a poor one, and it is a pleasure to note that more and more do the dealers realize the fact.

In roses, American Beauties went to a prohibitive price, $18 to $25 per dozen, but there was no scrambling to get them at such figures. Red and pink roses went freely at from $2 to $5. The reds, and Enchantress and Lawson carnations, sold very well at from $1 to $2 per dozen. Violets, home grown, were in great demand, with a scarcity at $1 per bunch of fifty. These are retail prices.

Various Notes.

Wallace W. Kimmel, who last Easter opened a retail store at Thomas Circle, has in that short time built up a good trade. For the Christmas trade he carried a good stock of pot plants and made a hit with decorated table trees, of which he sold a large number.

George C. Shaffer opened another store, temporarily, on Fourteenth street to accommodate his large stock of azaleas and other flowering plants. Mr. Shaffer is a hustler for trade and gets a good share of it.

Maybury & Hoover is another Fourteenth street firm that is forging to the front.

Christmas Business.

Although without exact information, we are safe in saying that Christmas was a most prosperous time for all florists and it was long drawn out. We had two Christmas eves, Saturday and Sunday. Friday we had a breeze of sixty miles an hour. Saturday was mild, but dark and gloomy. Sunday was clear, with intervals of sunshine, which was so much a stranger. It made us as glad as money from home. All pretty plants sold and here is a good place to say that plants were the favorite object sought with those who wished to remember a friend, and that is seventy-five per cent of all the business. Poinsettias were rather too much in evidence, and so were Lorraine begonias. The limit has been reached with them. Azaleas, particularly colored varieties, were in great demand and so were good cyclamens. Our city has not reached the mark where the combination hampers of plants find ready sale. We shall get there in time, as purses grow larger and knowledge grows less, but baskets of moderate size, filled with some leading plants, such as begonias, poinsettias, cyclamen or Buttercup primulas sold well.

We noticed that fine clumps of John Scott's fern in pans sold well. Their neat, compact habit attracted everybody. Christmas is more and more a time of growing plants, sad as this may appear to the exclusive flower man, but don't despair. The rose, carnation and violet will be always wanted and a plant cannot fill the bill. The box of flowers is most suitable where the old, present and everlasting tender feeling inspires the remembrance.

Of all the flowers in most demand and the most difficult to procure, was the carnation, and they brought without a grumble a good round price. Many thousands more could have been sold. Valley was in good demand, but violets went slightly slow. Perhaps Hubbie has been seared off with former prices. This year they were within the reach of the elegantly dressed $8-a-week clerk.

Christmas day by no means ends the business and we are looking forward to a lively January and if the somber clouds will let Old Sol beam upon us occasionally we will have plenty of fine flowers to gladden our eyes and pay our debts.

The Christmas Market.

Business with all the retailers has no doubt been very good. Stock has commanded good prices, fancy Beauties selling for $18 to $24 a dozen, retail, and were handled by some dealers in large numbers. Brides and Maids sold for $3 and $4 per dozen; Gates, $3 to $4 dozen; Moultons, $5 per dozen; carnations from $1 to $2.50 per dozen; poinsettias, $6 to $10 per dozen; Richmond and Liberty, $4 to $5 per dozen. The trade in general seems to be well satisfied with the Christmas business. Holly and green are about sold out.

Christmas novelties also sold very well, but large numbers of bells are still to be seen in the different flower stores. The paper bell handled by the five and ten-cent stores seem to have cut into the trade in bad shape.

Fancy basket and other Christmas novelties sold to good advantage. Owing to the shortage of flowers, the Greeks did not cut much figure in the Christmas trade. The tree man is gone for another year, but evidently has enjoyed a good trade.

The growers all seem to be well satisfied, although some of them still have a large number of poinsettias on hand. This year the poinsettia was grown in much larger numbers than heretofore, and the demand, while heavy, was not equal to the supply by any means.

Donaldson's Glass Block, the floral department being under the able management of James Souden, handled large quantities of stock.

John Monson cut large lots of roses and carnations, which all sold at a good price. His new pink rose, the Miss Kate Moulton took the lead, as he has at least six houses devoted to it.

Other growers are thoroughly satisfied, although plants did not sell as well as they might and the wise florist hereafter will not bend all his efforts to plants. Plants sell well at Easter, but when you try to force the sale of them for Christmas you are attempting to do something which our trade is not educated to, and they do not take favorably to them.

HOLIDAY GREETINGS.

The American Blower Co., Detroit, selling agents for the Morehead steam trap, send out a neatly printed card, as follows:

"We wish you continued participation in the marvelous prosperity of these times. We thank you for the extent to which you have contributed to our own success and for your forbearance where our shortcomings have inconvenienced you.

"Despite the shameful disclosures in high places during the past year, the business of our country is based on honor, and we are thankful that so many genuine and lasting friendships are possible

THE READERS' CORNER.

Shasta Daisies.

On page 272 of the issue of the REVIEW for December 14 is a query about Shasta daisies. The correspondent can get these into flower by June 1 by keeping them going and by liberal treatment; 55 degrees at night, with plenty of air will suit them for the winter. Their dying off in August and September is probably caused by exhaustion. A few of ours did the same. As soon as I noticed them turning yellow I removed all the old flowers and seeds and gave them a good cultivating and nearly all came around. This plant is a hungry one and requires liberal treatment and young stock can easily flower and seed itself away. E. A. W.

TROUBLE WITH STEAM.

I have been installing a new heating system in our houses, but it does not work right. The coils are made of 1 1/4-inch pipe, about fifty feet in each, and are fed by a 3/4-inch pipe and drained by a 3/4-inch pipe which leads to a trap at the middle of one side of one house. The coils do not clear of water as they should. The pipes in the coils are parallel. We tried spreading the ends apart, but it did no good. Are the 3/4-inch supply pipes too small? We have three coils on one 3/4-inch pipe. We take the steam underground from the boiler, about sixty feet distant. R. H. P.

I am not certain that I comprehend your difficulty. From your description I infer that the supply pipe is 3/4-inch and is taken off the boiler and then carried below the water level in the boiler underground to a point beneath the house and then to the coils. The coils indicated carry about forty-five square feet of radiation, which could easily be cared for by a short 3/4-inch pipe, but I doubt if you will ever be able to make a long 3/4-inch pipe supply them properly. A 1 1/4-inch supply pipe arranged to enter each coil at the top and a 3/4-inch pipe leading from the outlet of each to a common return to the trap will, I believe, overcome the difficulty. The problem is complicated by the loop in the flow and the trap. If the boiler can be lowered so as to carry the flow pipe direct from the top of the boiler to the coils and the return back to the boiler, no difficulty will be encountered, provided proper air valves are supplied. L. C. C.

NEW YORK.

The Christmas Market.

All things considered, it was a fairly satisfactory result that presented itself to the wholesale cut flower section on Christmas morning. Everything good had about been absorbed. Little stock arrived on the early trains and the day's demands were yet to be depended on. I doubt if Monday night found any ice-boxes doing duty. The day itself was ideal; clear, sunny and with not enough frost in the air to make wrapping a necessity.

Saturday and Sunday prices realized were quite up to expectations. The best Beauties brought $1.25, the best Maids and Brides 25 cents each; the best violets $1.25 per hundred, and carnations all the way from $4 up to $25 per hundred for the great novelties of this year's introduction. Sad to say, on Sunday night the evidences of pickling of carnations were seen and thousands of Enchantress, Lawson and other varieties went to sleep long before any of the weary and disgusted wholesalers thought of rest. The same story must be told of violets. Thousands upon thousands came in utterly without perfume or "smelling" so badly that the criticisms are unfit for publication. But what's the use? It has been fully proven that one may protest till doomsday and still this idiocy will be perpetuated. Nothing can move the perpetrators of this outrage but removal of the guilty to the sphere where all deceivers ultimately land. Year after year we emphasize the iniquity and dishonesty of this practice, but it is like butting one's head against a stone wall or the marble floor of a Turkish bath. Lots of roses, too, came in dull, sick, pale, unable to hold up their heads, and when the growers get returns from these they will get, if they get anything, more than they deserve. But there was much grand stock, the finest that ever reached a holiday market, and this stock was at a premium and brought even more than was expected.

Lilies were not much in demand and the supply was not abundant. Valley was sufficient for all requirements. Orchids fulfilled the prophecy as to their standing, with shipments and local demand enormous. None were left and prices held firm throughout, no abnormal advance being asked by the experts who handle them. McManus shipped to many cities and the big locals were taking them in 300 and 400 lots at midnight Sunday.

Bulbous stock was not much called for and prices were normal. Everybody had pansies in shoals and mignonette and hyacinths were abundant.

The stock and crowd at the Cut Flower Exchange at 6 a. m. Monday were both light and prices were considerably below Sunday's.

With the Retailers.

The retailers, as usual, have no fault to find with the Christmas trade. Greater demand than usual for cut flowers was evident. Baskets and boxes of mixed plants were everywhere popular. Novelty plants were numerous and very salable. Palms, ferns, azaleas, orange trees, orchid plants, begonia baskets, everything was in demand. Every retail store on Sunday evening looked as if it had been struck by a cyclone. I question if a respectable plant of any kind remained unsold. Many declare it to have been the best Christmas ever known. Some say "a little better than last year" and one or two say, "hardly equal to three years ago." The majority always rules. It was "the best ever."

Baskets of plants, made to sell at $50 and over, sold slowly. The popular size is now $10 to $25. "The tendency this year among the best people is to buy flowers instead of plants," one of the veterans of Fifth avenue tells me; and he knows, for he has been in touch with the public for over thirty years.

Holly trees fulfilled their mission in decorating the fronts of the retail stores, but they did not sell as expected. Evergreens, roping and good holly wreaths were very popular and none were left. Some elaborate ones, with ribbons, sold as high as $10.

When a millionaire comes in with a list of twenty or thirty names and addresses and says: "Send them something good; you know what will please, and send me the bill." Well, it's a taste of the millennium, isn't it? And they do it here, lots of them. I've seen the lists and a hundred-dollar basket to each is only a flea bite for the man whose income is a few thousand dollars a day, 365 days a year. In fact, he wouldn't like it if you sent his friends anything less; and there you are. Is it any wonder a good, square florist who knows his business gathers his share of shekels in little old New York, the greatest flower city in the world?

I did intend to describe the window decorations in detail. These wonderful artistic displays have done much to attract and influence the public. But there are so many in this city that it would take pages to do them justice. The stock shown was superb, but the accessories were an indispensable adjunct, without which the displays would have lacked half their charm. Among the many fine things noted were ardisias in fancy pails, with ribbons to match; orange trees with yellow pots and yellow ribbons; boats filled with ferns and fancy-leaved begonias; reindeer with sleighs filled with valley and orchids; pianos and trunks and sedan chairs; miniature Japanese gardens, exquisite and interesting; bells with chime and shower effects; heather in green baskets with red ribbon; plants of cypripedium with light green ribbon; yule logs with red ribbons; wooden slippers in white and gold; cider bowls and the old well with its oaken bucket; tripods and kettle; storks, with back receptacles for flowers. These are only a few; every store had something novel.

Various Notes.

A new retail firm has opened a store at 990 Eighth avenue, a fine location near Central park. McKnight & Chase are the proprietors, Mr. McKnight having had experience in growing and retailing in Tarrytown.

Thos. Langton of Flatbush avenue, Brooklyn, manages to get over to the early morning market, notwithstanding a long siege of rheumatism. When I saw him Monday he was rejoicing in improved facilities furnished by Scollay and a heating system in his new store, next door to his old one, that, as usual with Scollay's work, is proving very satisfactory.

Monday, January 8, the next meeting of the New York Florists' Club takes place. President Scott has five new members to propose and says he will propose fifty before the year closes. He is forming plans to continue and enhance the interest of the members. Last year one of the officials added thirteen new members. It must have been an unlucky number. He didn't get any office this year, but he cut a path in increased membership for others to follow and the new president intends to quadruple his record. The discussion of flower shows will be the item considered and the inauguration ceremonies will be elaborate.

Dinner festivities begin early in the new year. On January 10 Madison will have a smoker, with celery from Herrington on the side. Then comes Tarrytown, and in February New York, and so on around the charmed circle.

Mr. Jackson, of the Cut Flower Exchange, conducted a turkey raffle in behalf of some of the Coogan building's faithful employees last week. Two turkeys, weighing from twenty to thirty pounds, went to Jos. S. Klinka, of Dutch Kills, and Alex Donaldson of Elmstone, L. I.

One firm in the Cut Flower Exchange closed at midnight Saturday and opened again at 12:01 Monday morning. Even Christmas necessities were unable to break the charm of the old-fashioned Sunday, and "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work" isn't a bad rule to follow. If they had added "and only eight hours a day" the most of us would subscribe.

The wholesale plantsmen in the city had a great Christmas. Chas. Millang had about every kind of flowering plant in his conservatories and a big shipping trade at good, fair prices, while his cut flower trade beat all his records.

Starke & Kleine shipped 373 cases of plants out of the city during the two weeks before Christmas.

Christmas from his Great Neck grower. He did a big all-night business.

Mr. Humphrey, of Thorley's, and his son, had a narrow escape last week and the train that killed the horse and demolished the buggy came within a hair of removing both gentlemen from active decorative work on this planet. Even the bruises could not keep the artist from his Christmas duties, however.

Another narrow escape for the Siebrechts, Mr. See, Mr. Smythe and Mr. Troy last week. The 6:30 train they always take was missed by a few minutes and was badly wrecked on its way to New Rochelle, several being killed or seriously injured. All remember Mr. Wadley's serious injury of a couple of years ago on this road, for which he was paid $35,000. Will Siebrecht thinks it safer to live in the city during the winter and has moved in.

Guttman & Weber's Victory sold steadily at $25 per hundred, and there was a lot of it.

A. L. Young & Co. say they will have to hang up a larger stocking next Christmas. Their carnation shippers sent some grand stock this year. Mr. Henshaw makes an efficient lieutenant and boomer here.

Ford Bros.' big ice-box was just right for the immense holiday shipments. Michael Ford went home early Saturday with a severe cold.

The telephone never seemed such a necessity to florists as now. Some of the stores book enough orders in this way every day to make all the rest of their business velvet.

The Rosary's roof looked as though John G. Esler were needed one day last week. An explosion in the new Altman building, on Thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, shattered many a pane of glass and large stones dropped close to the employees in the conservatory.

Totty sent Fenrich some 1,500 or more grand Richmond in grades that brought 25 cents to $1, and there were a lot of the dollar ones. Queen of Edgely, Mr. Nash tells me, brought $1.25 for the best. Ward's novelties, Alma Ward, Robert Craig and seedlings were magnificent and John Young received many congratulations on the wonderful display.

Walter Sheridan's Beauties, as usual, maintained his reputation and there were enough of them to go around.

The violet train, due at 1 a. m. Monday, did not arrive until 8:45, and there were hot words used by some of the wholesalers with advance orders.

The Beauty king was in no happy frame of mind, on account of a lost shipment of 800 special Beauties, already sold, and was breathing vengeance against the N. Y. C. when I saw him.

The Market.

The Christmas trade was up to all expectations and was equally enjoyed by the wholesalers, retailers and growers, especially the latter, who were fortunate enough to have a large cut these days. Roses of all kinds were scarce and prices held firm. Carnations proved more plentiful than had been expected and very few orders were cut. Violets, both double and single, were in good demand and all orders were filled. The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. reports business as being much better than that of last year and they even entirely sold out.

Each of the retail stores had all it could do and all had extra help. The weather man helped us all by having fair weather on Saturday and a bright Sunday.

Monday was an ideal Christmas day, the ground covered with snow and large flakes slowly falling and the thermometer standing about 20 degrees. All the retail stores were still busy sending out orders and some of them had to work until evening to get them all filled.

MONTGOMERY'S book on Grafted Roses sent by the REVIEW for 25 cents.

THE REVIEW will send Herrington's Chrysanthemum Book on receipt of 50 cents.

ENCLOSED is my check for $2 for two years' subscription in advance; am well pleased with the REVIEW.—ASHER M. COE, North Olmsted, O.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

This is the night before Christmas and all in the trade in this vicinity are willing to admit it is the best in their experience in many ways. The green goods, such as laurel and pine wreathing and such stock, was virtually cleaned up as early as Friday. The sale of plants was beyond all expectations. Everything in blooming stock was cleaned up and there was an immense sale for palms, ferns, etc., leaving almost a clear field for cut flowers for Saturday and the trade in this was like everything else. Roses, carnations and violets were the leaders and everything in this line cleaned up. Mignonette does not seem to go so well and it looked as if it had rained stevia, there were such quantities of it. There were quite a good many chrysanthemums to be seen among the wholesalers, but they did not seem to move and it looks as if they were not wanted after Thanksgiving, as poinsettias and lilies will take their place at Christmas where large flowers are wanted.

Most of the retailers worked from Thursday morning until noon Sunday without rest, but closed at noon and went to bed to get back at eight o'clock in the evening to finish up the work.

Roses in the Pittsburgh district were somewhat off crop for Christmas, the warm weather the past month having brought them in too fast. Carnations were never better and the crop came in just right and for once the growers did not send in old stock, as the price before Christmas was better than they could hope to realize even at Christmas for the stale stock.

One of the surprises was the amount of shopping done when the weather conditions were considered. It poured all day Friday and drizzled most of Saturday. Sunday was a good day, but one day late for the shoppers.

The blooming plants were the finest ever handled in this city and it is safe to say there were twice as many sold as ever before, and still they did not take the place of cut flowers, as the sale of flowers was the best on record.

C. H. Heiner, agent for the Adams Express Co., which handles most of the flowers coming into this city, if he did not reach the people as soon as they needed the stock, deserves the thanks of the trade for his efforts to deliver it the minute it reached him. He also had men whose business it was to get all outgoing flowers off on the first train possible. Some inconvenience was caused by discontinuing carrying express on many of the trains and making up carloads for many points and running them out special. This in many instances held stock several hours after the regular trains usually used. One of the express companies had its trouble with several shipments of lilies which it brought in. Some were refused entirely and some accepted in such condition that they should have been refused. Very bad handling had ruined more than two-thirds of the stock.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

DAVIS wax beans and Wardwell's are already selling at $8 per bushel at wholesale.

REPORTS from Louisville show a marked stiffening of the onion set market.

SOME of the seedsmen report that they are still working on the onion and bean pages of their catalogues.

VISITED CHICAGO: Mel L. Webster, Independence, Ia.; J. R. Watts, Jr., Louisville, Ky.; Chas. P. Braslan, San Jose, Cal.; R. H. Shumway, Rockford, Ill.

It is reported that a Chicago market gardener received a full delivery on onion seed from his California grower and is selling the surplus to his neighbors.

It seems to be the opinion of the majority of the seed trade members that it will be worth the additional cost, as well as the additional time required, to make California the meeting place of next year's convention.

ALTHOUGH the general outlook is good, 1906 is likely to be another year when specialties will be the seedsman's main source of profit. The standard stocks, from all reliable information, will be kept low by the keen competition all along the line.

ONE of the 1906 novelties of F. Roemer, Quedlinburg, Germany, is a giant pansy named Mauve Queen. Each of the three lower petals is marked with a large blotch of distinct carmine color, with a hue of delicate lilac. This gives the flower a most distinct appearance. Mauve Queen is the first strain in pansies possessing such remarkable blotches of red.

SECRETARY KENDEL, of the American Seed Trade Association, in a circular letter to members asks for a vote on the advisability of taking the next convention to California. He desires a reply from each to reach him by January 5, the date at which the executive committee meets. His letter gives concise information as to cost and other data which will assist the members in voting intelligently on the California proposition.

ONE WAY.

A few weeks ago the REVIEW called attention to an advertisement, then appearing in publications circulating among newspaper publishers, in which the St. Louis Seed Co. stated that it wanted to hear from every publication in the United States which is in a position to sell seeds for its advertisers. Publishers who answered the advertisement, and some who didn't, are now receiving the following letter from the St. Louis Seed Co.:

"Relative to your valued favor calling attention to your publication as a business 'getter' beg to advise that we are open to conviction; however, you will readily realize there are so many claims made for each paper that reaches us it

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEARS' NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

is difficult to choose the 'good from the bad.'

The advertisement, of which proof is enclosed, is ninety agate lines, and offers free packets of seeds of "the world's largest tomatoes" to all who write for them.

HOLLAND BULB NOTES.

All is quiet now since the rush of planting operations is over and practically all the fields are in their winter dress. The very wet weather interfered very seriously with all outside work and as this was followed up by a week of keen frost, it made growers feel far from comfortable, as many are still feeling the results of the early winter in 1903. However, as the trade this season has been a most profitable and satisfactory one for the growers, no matter how disastrous it has been to some of the exporters that sell the goods early at low prices without any goods of their own to fall back upon, there is no reason to grumble. This season has been a most interesting one in a financial way for that particular class of people, and it has given them a lesson that they are not likely to forget soon. It is an easy matter to sell goods at low prices, but when it comes to supplying them and the grower is not found willing to submit to the prices offered for the goods, the matter takes quite a different aspect and it would certainly be to the interest of the trade and all concerned if this reckless speculation, upon the surplus stock of the grower, could be stopped, says a Hollander writing in the Horticultural Trade Journal.

GERMAN SEED CROPS.

Our hopes for a normal dry autumn in the Erfurt district were unfortunately not fulfilled, the weather being unusually rainy and misty. Fortunately the fine summer had already assured the success of most of the crops. I can only confirm my last report as to the results of the majority of the vegetable seed crops, and the growers' catalogues, now mostly in the hands of the trade, can speak for themselves. Dwarf beans, which were uncertain a few weeks back, have turned out a good crop, in fact, the best for some years past, and runners have also mostly done well, so that prices are somewhat on the down grade. Carrots and beets are in a few cases lighter than expected, and a few lettuces, owing to ravages of worms, came in under estimate, but no serious shortage has occurred. Onions and leeks have fully maintained the high prices asked for them at the opening of the season, and have in fact gone up in some instances.

The worst effects of the damp autumn were seen in the results of the aster crop, especially the later Comet types and the Victoria, the moisture having got into the flower heads and rotted the incipient seed before it had a chance to ripen. High prices therefore rule for these choice strains and only a moderate percentage of germination must be looked for. Nasturtiums are very late this season, and an uneven crop. Quotations rule higher than last year and buyers should be prepared for slow deliveries. A few other articles are short, such as dahlia seed and certain colors of stock-flowered larkspur, but flower seeds have on the whole done well this year.

Business has started well, orders coming in rapidly, and many large consignments of seeds have already been despatched to Great Britain, the Colonies and America.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

LILIUM GIGANTEUM.

Will you kindly give me some information about the treatment for Lilium longiflorum giganteum? This is my first attempt to grow them and I want them for Easter. W. W.

The usual method employed in the culture of these lilies under glass is to pot them immediately on receipt, putting them into pots just large enough to hold the bulb. They should then be placed in a house with a temperature not to exceed 50 degrees. Water thoroughly and cover the pots with litter until root action has begun. Keep a careful watch on the progress made and as soon as the stems are one inch above the soil remove the litter and increase the temperature to 60 degrees.

When the pot is well filled with roots they should be repotted into the flowering pots, placing them deep enough to cover at least one inch of the stem. As they increase in size a little liquid feeding is beneficial. The worst enemy they have to contend with is greenfly, which should be kept in check by a weekly fumigation of tobacco. R.

DETROIT.*Christmas Trade.

Christmas of 1905 will always be spoken of with a smile by the Detroit florists, as business was unusually brisk. With the exception of rain on Thursday, the weather was as if made to order. The thermometer remained around the freezing point, turning somewhat colder Christmas eve. Palm trade was very good. Bostons, palms, poinsettias, azaleas and cyclamen sold like hot cakes. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine sold fairly well.

Cut flowers were just about cleaned up at very good prices. Violets were easily disposed of.

Ground pine can now be bought for a song, as the unusually high price scared out prospective buyers. Holly was very good and sold in large quantities.

Breitmeyer's army of assistants was kept busy from Saturday morning until Monday noon with hardly time for a nap.

Taepke was very much handicapped during the rush, Walter having an ulcerated tooth and one of his ablest assistants being called home on account of a death in the family.

At Schroeter's everything went lovely. P. F. Reuss, a former employee, but now engaged in the cut fern business in Johannesburg, Mich., helped out for the holidays.

Sullivan was more than rushed. The window was very prettily decorated with an arch of ground pine, studded with red lights.

Wm. Brown says they can call it a merry Christmas, but he had rather do the same amount of work in three months instead of three days.

This being Mr. Feters' first Christmas in Detroit, he cannot compare with former years, but, judging from the smile on his face, he seems very well pleased.

Robert Flowerday's rush started so early his familiar face was missed last club meeting night, December 20.

As only a few of the boys found time to attend the meeting December 20, the session was called off. Thos. Browne showed a fine vase of his white sport of Enchantress, a pure white, and has all the other fine qualities of Enchantress. Every plant has come true. Quite an interesting discussion about hot water under pressure was engaged in.

DATE OF EASTER.

Easter of 1906 falls on April 15, eight days earlier than in 1905.

TEN TIMES.

The REVIEW is away above the average of florists' papers and I would not be without it for ten times its cost.

GEO. FAUTH.

Woodlawn, Md.

ONE insertion of our advertisement in the REVIEW sold all the cinerarias we had ready.—ROY H. PALMER, Randolph, N. Y.

I LIKE the REVIEW very much and probably shall take it as long as I am in the business, for I should miss its weekly visits were I to try to get along without it.—SAMUEL WHEELER, Berlin, Mass.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society met December 24. Paul Abele, chairman of the committee having in charge the interstate organization among the southern florists, suggested a proposition which was ordered to be printed and mailed to the southern florists. If successful we will have made a great step in the advancement of horticultural matters in the whole Union. E. Baker, chairman of the committee on flower show, made his report. The expenses with prize money amounted to $976.36. Cash receipts will be a good deal over, the surplus being donated to the Sunshiners. The ladies' association deserves a good share in the success of the exhibit.

Next month the State Horticultural Society will meet in New Orleans. The N. O. H. Society voted a suitable appropriation to entertain the members of the organization.

Henri Cook was elected a new member.

Various Notes.

A donation of a number of plants has been made to the city to embellish Lafayette square in return for the use of the park, which was tendered free of charge for the last flower show.

Wm. Newall, assisted by Mr. Martin, is making inspection of all the nurseries regarding the insect pest question.

The New Orleans Ladies' Floral Association is progressing and our society is expecting at any time to receive a proposition outlining the ways and means for working together.

At the Metairie Ridge Nursery everything looks new, fresh and lively. Credit is due to H. Papworth, the president, for having accomplished in such a little time the erection of six large greenhouses which are already full of stock. Adding new houses to an already established business is easy enough, with time and capital, but to start a large concern from almost nothing is a task which can only be accomplished by a man of much experience and by much hard work. When I called he was busy regulating his steam coils, working under the Webster system with a 100 horse-power boiler. Three houses are planted with roses, the successful culture of which in New Orleans is now an assured fact. Several florists in the city have attempted to force roses but one of the worst drawbacks is the lack of proper soil. The Metairie Ridge Nursery, being situated outside of the city limits, has an endless quantity of the best ground adapted to the proper cultivation of roses. Carnations are very promising and will certainly be a success, at least at some season of the year. One house is almost full of Pandanus Veitchii, from 2-inch pots to large specimen plants. They had just received a large order for made-up pans and were using a small pandanus in the middle with a very good effect. All the houses are joined at the ends by a large potting shed, with a wagonway in the middle, and Mr. Papworth thinks it will not be any too spacious when in the near future they will start their catalogue and shipping business.

Vegetable Forcing.

HOTBEDS.

With the smaller grower, who finds himself cramped for room as the spring season advances, hotbeds play a very important part in filling the breach between the greenhouse and cold frame. They are especially useful in the starting and bringing forward of vegetable plants intended for subsequent planting outdoors or for maturing such crops as lettuce, cauliflower, radishes, etc.

About the middle of February is, generally speaking, the best time to make up the beds, but previous to this the material should be got together, turned over two or three times and thoroughly mixed to insure a uniform heat. Stable litter will constitute the principal part, if not all, of the material, but where it is possible to procure them a very good addition to this is leaves gathered the previous fall. They may constitute about one-third of the material and will be found to be very advantageous, both in preventing too violent heat at first and in helping to retain heat in the material longer than the litter alone would hold it.

If the manure is well saturated with wash from the stable it is not often necessary, when using this alone, to dampen the material with water, but when leaves are used, these often being quite dry, dampening is generally essential to insure proper heating, but judgment must be used in the application of the water so as not to overdo it. The material, when ready to make up the bed, should be just damp enough so that it will pack well together, but not so moist that it will appear wet and heavy in handling.

Hotbeds are sometimes made entirely overground, but here a good deal of heat is apt to be lost by the sides of the pile being exposed to the weather, especially during severe cold, so that the better plan is to dig a pit as a receptacle for the material. In deciding the size of the pit, it is best to ascertain the size of the frame to be placed over it and allow the pit to be a foot wider than the frame all the way around. This will insure a more uniform heat in the frame than if it were the exact size, as being in contact with the cold soil, around the sides of the frame, it is always colder than the body of the material. A fancy frame need not be used, the home-made article being just as efficient as long as it is substantially built, with crossbars sufficiently strong to support the sash.

The heating material should be put in in layers, spread evenly, and each layer firmly packed by tramping with the feet. This insures a uniformity of heat and the firmer it is packed the longer the heat will be retained. The depth of material to be used will depend a good deal on the class of plants to be grown and the length of time it is desired that the heat be retained. As a general rule a depth of four feet is about right. For this depth a pit three feet deep will be needed and the material built one foot over ground, this allows for settling, which is sure to take place as the material becomes decomposed. Allowing that it should settle one foot this will leave the frame level with the surface of the ground.

The sash used would better be placed over the frame as soon as the bed is made up to prevent its being soaked should rain occur, but they had better be tilted up so as to allow the steam and superfluous heat to escape, and gradually lowered as the heat recedes. A thermometer placed in the frame will indicate the falling of the temperature and when 65 degrees is reached with the frame closed, plants or seeds can safely be trusted in it, the temperature being regulated by airing according to requirements.

W. S. CROYDON.

TOMATO PLANTS.

M. Garrahan, writing of growing vegetable plants, says, in the Rural New Yorker: We have something less than 10,000 square feet of glass, with a few hundred 3x6 sash. We grew and transplanted into flats last spring 373,000 tomatoes, 290,000 celery, 125,000 cabbage, besides a lot of pepper, eggplant, etc., that I have no account of. We used three men and four boys practically four months, at a total cost for labor of $465; manure, $40; coal, $30; interest on plant at $2,000, six per cent, $120; sinking fund at six per cent, $120; cost of 10,000 flats, and making, $400; total, $1,175. Our plants are grown in flats the size of tomato cases, 13x17 inches inside measure; planted 1½-inch each way; there will be 108 plants to the box. A 3x6 sash will cover about nine of these boxes or flats. Our first sowing of seed is made about February 15; twenty to twenty-five days later we begin to transplant. Seed is sown in flats of the same size with a temperature 75 to 80 degrees. We count on 1,500 good seedlings from one flat of this size. A man who can fill his own boxes and transplant 5,000 seedlings per day without any help is a first-class hand. As a rule, our plants are never sold for less than $3 per 1,000.

PACIFIC COAST.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Charles Keeler, Mount Pleasant, was among those injured in a trolley collision on Westminster bridge, December 12. He was cut about the head and face.

SPOKANE, WASH.—S. Younkin, of Washington, Ia., has moved with his family to Spokane and has bought a third interest in the business of Hoyt Bros., and it will be incorporated under the name of Hoyt Bros. Co., with a paid-up capital of $30,000. The firm has secured a lease on the property at 817 Riverside avenue, occupied by A. Anderson as a cigar and candy store, and has paid him about $5,000 for the fixtures and stock. The candy business will be continued and flowers will be added in place of the cigars.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has turned cold again and this has made itself evident by the decreased supplies of all kinds of stock. Carnations have been plentiful enough for the past few months, but are now showing evidence of being closely cut.

Roses of the fancy qualities are at a premium and unless the stock is weak-stemmed or off color there is not enough at present to fill requirements. Bulbous stock, including daffodils, hyacinths and valley, is in fair supply and eagerly bought. Violets are, on account of the frosty weather, shorter of stem than formerly. Business has been good for several weeks. Funeral work is keeping many of our retailers busy and much white stock has been used up on this account.

Various Notes.

W. W. Saunders, the Fresno bulb grower, is in town.

The Domoto Co., of Elmhurst, is clearing a section of ground on which six new greenhouses will be erected in the spring.

There is considerable disappointment over the fact that the local florists will not receive any outdoor poinsettias from Los Angeles this season.

Miss M. Solomon had the elaborate D'Oily decoration in San Jose last week.

Some of the finest holly ever seen in San Francisco was imported from British Columbia by the Cox Co. for the Christmas trade.

Sievers & Boland have a good stock of poinsettias in pots, and a heavy cut of Hannah Hobart carnation is also noticeable in their houses.

A. Mann, Jr., reports a heavy trade in Christmas supplies. Red bells were handled in especially large quantities this season.

One of the finest displays of floral work ever seen in San Francisco was the offerings at the funeral of Sergeant Spillane on Saturday of last week. All the principal dealers were represented in it.

G.

THE DECORATORS.

There was a time, and it was but a few years ago, when all the decorating in private houses, public halls and other large places was performed by the retail florists, but this branch of the business has been slipping away from them gradually until it has become a separate trade by itself and those devoted to it do little else than attend to their specialty. Our lady friends seem to have made the greatest strides in California and some of them have built up reputations for artistic work that in return brings them in all the decorating they can do.

It used to be the fashion, when a decoration of any kind was wanted, for the lady ordering to telephone to her florist to send a dozen or two of palms in pots and a good, strong boy along with them to distribute them in convenient places around the house. But these things have changed. The ordinary retail dealer is now rarely called in to supply either flowers or plants, and the only familiarity he has with the function itself is to read of it in the newspaper.

From keeping a flower store in which a specialty was made of decorating to doing decorating almost exclusively was a gradual change and our expert decorators no longer care for counter trade, but have emerged into something much more profitable and certainly more pleasant. As I stated before, the ladies have taken the initiative in this branch of the trade, and several of them located in San Francisco and in nearby towns find all the work they can handle at very remunerative prices. Large palms in tubs and boxes were gradually superseded by bunches of huckleberry, of grasses in big fancy jars, and the supplying of this branch of the business has now become quite a factor in it. Menu cards and favors of all descriptions are also included in this work and artistic creations are in great demand.

When a reputation is established the rest is easy, and I am inclined to think the professional decorator has an advantage over the poor florist, in that the work is easier, more interesting and more remunerative. Some of our enterprising ladies have gone a step farther and coupled catering with decorating, and this assists greatly in the chances for a good bill against the wealthy patron.

Women seem to be better fitted for this work than men. The old idea of a dozen or two palms in pots and a few bunches of flowers scattered around in conspicuous places has entirely given away to delicate draperies of greens, fancy color designs and peculiar effects to suit particular occasions. Much patience is required to please the best-paying people, and the ladies seem to suit better than men when it becomes necessary to change a handful of asparagus twined around a chandelier a dozen times to get the proper draping, or change half a dozen times the shade of pink ribbon used in a table decoration so that it may not clash with the gown worn by the hostess.

In color schemes much taste must be used, and as our retail florists in general do not appreciate the fine points to be observed, the ladies at the present time certainly are far in the lead in the line of decorating.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

F. T. HASELTINE, Crookston, Minn., is closing out his nursery business.

It is a gratifying sign of the times that the demand for nursery stock is steadily turning from price to quality.

THE Society for Horticultural Science is in session at New Orleans this week. Many nurserymen and plant breeders are in attendance.

W. F. HEIKES sent out a call for the annual meeting of the Alabama State Horticultural Society, of which he is president, at Thosby, Ala., January 30 and 31.

J. L. BREESE, Fayetteville, N. C., is meeting with considerable success in breeding new varieties of persimmon, stock of two varieties having already been put on the market.

A. F. MILLER, of Sellwood, Ore., reports a recent shipment to Austria of 750 pounds of seeds of native conifers. He says the demand for seeds exceeds the amount he is able to supply, especially for the Oregon fir.

THE Western Association of Nurserymen was in session at Kansas City December 20 and 21, discussing trade conditions in its field. It was voted to hold the regular summer meeting at Kansas City June 7 and go in a body by special car to the Dallas, Tex., meeting of the American Association of Nurserymen.

CANADIAN APPLES.

The Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain recently held an exhibition wholly made up of colonial fruit, the feature of which was a magnificent display of apples from British Columbia, which is thus described by the Horticultural Advertiser: "Connoisseurs are agreed that for real flavor nothing can beat a good British apple, but as regards appearances there can be no disputing the fact that we take a back seat. The color of the apples shown was absolutely gorgeous; a painter could not have colored anything more rich and brilliant than many of the fruits, and this does not apply to a few selected dishes, as a considerable part of the exhibit consisted of boxes with the lids removed to show the fruit inside, which was all of similar quality to the samples set up in plates. We may add that, owing to the wreck of the vessel carrying this consignment, the fruit had been under water several days, without, however, having apparently suffered from the accident. We give the names of a few of the most prominent varieties: Ben Davis, Wagoner, Northern Spy, Jonathan, Esopus Spitzenberg (gorgeous), Akin Red, Canada Baldwin, Salome, and King of Tomkins County (magnificent). All these were remarkable for high color, the most conspicuous of the green varieties being Fall Pippin and Grimes' Golden, the last of fine quality.

"The apples from Nova Scotia, though excellent samples, were not equal in size and color to the British Columbian produce, the most noteworthy being some boxes of Blenheim Orange, almost unrecognizable from their brilliant coloring. Both the above colonies have made a distinct step in advance by packing all fruit in boxes instead of barrels. These are much more convenient to handle, and, what is of great importance, there is no waste space in car or ship, as they fit closely together. The sides are made in two pieces with a space between of about an inch to insure ventilation. All packers use the same size box, of which 500 form a car-load, which can be sent anywhere by rail without transshipping."

BOSTON LECTURES.

The program of the annual course of lectures of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, is announced. The lectures will be given on Saturday mornings, beginning at eleven o'clock, and are free to all. After each lecture opportunity will be offered for a full discussion of the subject. The list is as follows:

January 13.—"The Possibilities from Insect Parasites," with stereopticon illustrations, by Dr. L. O. Howard, Washington.

January 20.—"Garden Accessories," with stereopticon illustrations, by Loring Underwood, Boston.

January 27.—"The Best New England Fruits," general discussion, opened by E. W. Wood, West Newton.

February 3.—"Abandoned Farms and their Capabilities," by Prof. W. M. Munson, Orono, Me.

February 10.—"Vegetable Growing," general discussion opened by Hon. Warren W. Rawson, Arlington.

February 17.—"Hardy Flowers," general discussion opened by E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster.

February 24.—"Vegetable Breeding," by Harry F. Hall, Durham, N. H.

March 3.—"Tender Flowers," general discussion opened by Wm. N. Craig, North Easton.

March 10.—"Small Fruits," general discussion opened by Wilfrid Wheeler, Concord.

Lecture on Economic Mycology, lecturer and date to be announced.

W. P. RICH, Sec'y.

The Market.

Today is Christmas, and a glorious day it is, and it is my wish that everyone will have a very merry time. The growers and wholesalers are through with their rush and are sitting around figuring up their profits. They have no kick this year. Stock was scarce. There was scarcely a variety of flower which could be said to be equal to the demand. Beauties were especially scarce and carnations were snapped up at any price; nor were roses many points behind. Poinsettias came nearer filling the demand. Violets sold at sight. Bulbous stock sold fine. Stevia was in large supply and helped out wonderfully. Some held-over mums also helped to fill in the gap. Greens of all kinds sold finely. Prices on all grades of stock ruled just as they always do at this season, carnations perhaps a little higher than usual.

The retailers are still digging away at orders and it is impossible to say how they stand, but reports of general satisfaction are coming in now and then. Several of them report that never before have they been able to fill out orders to better advantage. That the volume of business was fully as large as last year cannot be doubted. When finally figured up I feel sure that it will show a first-class increase.

When finally figured I believe that this Christmas will stand as a record breaker, at least until next year rolls around. The weather, which was mild, scarcely below the freezing point, helped out in the rapid delivery of stock. Altogether we should be thankful for the way in which our business came out this year and I believe we all are.

Aristocrat.

After many years of patience, study and hard work the past week has brought to a climax the efforts of our friend Richard Witterstaetter. Aristocrat, the crowning glory of his efforts in behalf of the carnation, has been sold at what is undoubtedly the highest price ever paid for a carnation. The Chicago Carnation Co., represented by James Hartshorne, is the purchaser. The deal was closed last week Thursday and in the evening Mr. Witterstaetter invited a few of the boys to join him in a champagne supper at the Gibson house. The daily papers have been giving considerable space to this transaction, several of them printing pictures of Aristocrat. The price paid for the carnation was, I believe, in the neighborhood of $10,000, but neither Mr. Hartshorne nor Mr. Witterstaetter would give out the exact figure. This deal surely marks an epoch in the floral industry of this city and I wish most heartily for the success of both parties who made it possible. Master Harold Hartshorne accompanied his father and took his first lesson in frenzied finance in the flower business.

Various Notes.

There was a big scarcity of laurel festooning this year and the price went very high. Holly, which at first looked as if it would be poor and scarce, turned out to be fine and in very heavy supply. Christmas eve it sold at $1 per crate for fine goods.

Visitors were E. G. Hill, Richmond, and Harry Bunyard, New York.

ABUNDANCE

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known firm: Western Springs, Ill., Nov. 15, 1905.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.
Dear Sir:—We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good size and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand. Very truly yours,

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE. Per J. S. Wilson.
Price per rooted cuttings, $1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000, 500 at 1000 rate; 50 at 100 rate. Unrooted cuttings same price, with 25 extra with each 100.

FOR SUMMER CROPS.

We are regular readers of William Scott's notes and have been much profited by his advice in the past and hope that he may be able to advise us now. We are situated about 100 miles from our market and wish to know whether we could profitably raise outdoor summer-blooming flowers and bulbs, as we have no local trade during the summer, and ship them that far, and if so we would be pleased to have him give us a list of plants and bulbs that would do for such a trade. J. W. M.

As you ship 100 miles, the outdoor stuff you grow should be something your market would take in considerable quantities. There are several things that you could grow that are wanted in every large city. The herbaceous peonies should be largely grown. They are always in demand. See that you start with the finest varieties. White and light pink varieties are the favorites. Don't bother with phlox. There is no finer herbaceous plant, but it does not travel well and would not sell. Then there are the dahlias. A demand for the flowers of these has been growing yearly, until now they are largely grown. The dahlias sold in our city last fall came from Philadelphia and New Jersey, over 400 miles. The gladioli are wanted everywhere and travel well, and your stock is continually increasing. It is true there are immense areas of gladioli grown in different parts of the country, but good spikes of distinct colors are never wasted. Start in with the best and most distinct varieties. There is also a sale for asters and I know several men who make a specialty of asters and make money from them. The market for fine asters is limitless, as you can ship them a thousand miles. Sweet peas are likely to sell very cheaply during the first week or two of outdoor picking, but if by cultivation and water you can keep your crop going into August you can get a good price for your flowers. And now, in addition to the above, I will add the lily. If you have a good loam, well drained or over gravel, you can have beds of lilies. Lilium candidum thrives best in a clay loam. Lilium longiflorum likes a lighter loam, and so does speciosum. All these will sell in their season. Of course, I have made no attempt to mention many pretty and useful hardy plants, because, although favorites with many, they would not be wanted in quantity. You want to grow things that you can ship largely. Even if bringing a low price, it amounts to something. W. S.

HERRINGTON on the Chrysanthemum, the latest book, 50c, of the REVIEW.

ONE thing I like about the REVIEW is that you have men who are able and willing to give their practical experience when asked, founded on actual work.—G. A. GALLOUPE, Beverly, Mass.

I ENCLOSE my annual remittance for your valuable paper; cannot get along without the REVIEW and wish you lots of good things for the coming year.—J. A. WASHBURN, Vineland, N. J.

ABUNDANCE

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known florist—Western Springs, Ill., Nov. 15, 1905.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.
Dear Sir: We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday, and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good size and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand. Very truly yours,

AUGUSTUS SEIDSTORF, Per L. S. Wilson.
Price per rooted cuttings, $1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000, 500 at 1000 rate, 50 at 100 rate. Unrooted cuttings same price, with 25 extra with each 100.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants; plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated, 165 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

FOR SUMMER CROPS.

We are regular readers of William Scott's notes and have been much profited by his advice in the past and hope that he may be able to advise us now. We are situated about 100 miles from our market and wish to know whether we could profitably raise outdoor summer-blooming flowers and bulbs, as we have no local trade during the summer, and ship them that far, and if so we would be pleased to have him give us a list of plants and bulbs that would do for such a trade. J. W. M.

As you ship 100 miles, the outdoor stuff you grow should be something your market would take in considerable quantities. There are several things that you could grow that are wanted in every large city. The herbaceous peonies should be largely grown. They are always in demand. See that you start with the finest varieties. White and light pink varieties are the favorites. Don't bother with phlox. There is no finer herbaceous plant, but it does not travel well and would not sell. Then there are the dahlias. A demand for the flowers of these has been growing yearly, until now they are largely grown. The dahlias sold in our city last fall came from Philadelphia and New Jersey, over 400 miles. The gladioli are wanted everywhere and travel well, and your stock is continually increasing. It is true there are immense areas of gladioli grown in different parts of the country, but good spikes of distinct colors are never wasted. Start in with the best and most distinct varieties. There is also a sale for asters and I know several men who make a specialty of asters and make money from them. The market for fine asters is limitless, as you can ship them a thousand miles. Sweet peas are likely to sell very cheaply during the first week or two of outdoor picking, but if by cultivation and water you can keep your crop going into August you can get a good price for your flowers. And now, in addition to the above, I will add the lily. If you have a good loam, well drained or over gravel, you can have beds of lilies. Lilium candidum thrives best in a clay loam. Lilium longiflorum likes a lighter loam, and so does speciosum. All these will sell in their season. Of course, I have made no attempt to mention many pretty and useful hardy plants, because, although favorites with many, they would not be wanted in quantity. You want to grow things that you can ship largely. Even if bringing a low price, it amounts to something. W. S.

The Holiday Business.

According to all reports this Christmas has been one of the best in the history of floriculture in this city. From all quarters comes the report of exceptional demand and good prices. A comparison with the trade done in former years bears this out. Roses were a fair crop and sold quickly at the following prices: Beauties at from $2 to $12 per dozen; Brides and Maids, $2.50 to $8 per hundred; Richmonds, $4 to $10 per hundred. There was an extra demand for carnations, the supply, owing to the dark weather of the preceding month, being rather short of that anticipated. Prices ruled from $3 to $8 per hundred, and each day's cut was cleaned up in a short time. There was a plentiful supply of very fine violets, which sold readily at $1.50 per hundred. The supply of valley was also ample. In greens and miscellaneous stock, there was a good trade, the supplies being abundant.

The various stores and growing establishments report a good trade in flowering and decorative plants at good figures.

Harry Hoffman had a very fine cut of carnations.

La France was well stocked with potted plants. Durand had more orders than ever.

The United States Cut Flower Co. reports doing treble the business it did last Christmas. Their cuts of roses, carnations and valley were exceptionally fine. Supt. Curran reports very favorably on Richmond rose, which is really fine here and will be propagated in large quantities. Crops are looking well and some magnificent cuts of carnations are in view. Propagation is now in full swing, and from the quantity in course of rooting one would think that a large increase of glass in this section would be required to give them accommodation.

Among recent visitors were S. S. Skidelsky and his pink Enchantress. He reports very satisfactory sales of this and succeeded in impressing some of the boys here to invest freely. R.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Scranton Florists' Club has been organized with the following officers: President, Jonathan Rodham; vice-president, Anton Schultheis; secretary, T. B. McClintock; treasurer, William McDonauld; board of trustees, Thomas Arner, George R. Clark, Jerry McConnell, J. H. O'Malley and E. J. Hull. The club meets the third Friday of each month, and those who are eligible to membership are professional florists, private gardeners, women conducting florists' establishments, almost all professional hands connected with the business.

The last regular meeting of the club was held at Guernsey hall on December 15. C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., was present and exhibited some fine carnations. The merits of these flowers were discussed at length. It was decided that such exhibits be held at every meeting, and that various flowers be taken up for discussion from time to time.

TORONTO.

As the Christmas rush is over we have now time for reflection on trade generally. It might be stated that the weather conditions favored the sale of flowers but not the production. Never in the history of Canada, Toronto in particular, has there been as great a sale of holiday decorations, in the shape of holly, moss wreathing, bells and decorative plants, as there was this year. The sale of cut flowers would be quite as great were it not that the supply was so limited, and many people were unable to procure the flowers they wanted. Especially have roses and carnations been very short in supply, and none of the wholesale men was able to fill more than one-half of the orders. The supply of plants has been good and the sale has been large, on account of the shortage of cut flowers. It might be remarked that the weather conditions, which were mild and cloudy, were not at all favorable to the Christmas trade in many of the heavier lines of merchandise and as a consequence the florists got the lion's share of the floating dollars that must be spent for something. D. J.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—L. J. Stopher's Christmas business was the heaviest on record, a number of the orders having been on the books for weeks.

LITCHFIELD, ILL.—At the Cottage Greenhouses two houses, each seventy feet long, were added the past season, with Garland gutters. A salesroom and office were also added. Business is reported good and steadily growing.

SCRANTON, PA.

The Scranton Florists' Club has been organized with the following officers: President, Jonathan Rodham; vice-president, Anton Schultheis; secretary, T. B. McClintock; treasurer, William McDonald; board of trustees, Thomas Arner, George R. Clark, Jerry McConnell, J. H. O'Malley and E. J. Hull. The club meets the third Friday of each month, and those who are eligible to membership are professional florists, private gardeners, women conducting florists' establishments, almost all professional hands connected with the business.

The last regular meeting of the club was held at Guernsey hall on December 15. C. W. Ward, of Queens, L. I., was present and exhibited some fine carnations. The merits of these flowers were discussed at length. It was decided that such exhibits be held at every meeting, and that various flowers be taken up for discussion from time to time.

TORONTO.

As the Christmas rush is over we have now time for reflection on trade generally. It might be stated that the weather conditions favored the sale of flowers but not the production. Never in the history of Canada, Toronto in particular, has there been as great a sale of holiday decorations, in the shape of holly, moss wreathing, bells and decorative plants, as there was this year. The sale of cut flowers would be quite as great were it not that the supply was so limited, and many people were unable to procure the flowers they wanted. Especially have roses and carnations been very short in supply, and none of the wholesale men was able to fill more than one-half of the orders. The supply of plants has been good and the sale has been large, on account of the shortage of cut flowers. It might be remarked that the weather conditions, which were mild and cloudy, were not at all favorable to the Christmas trade in many of the heavier lines of merchandise and as a consequence the florists got the lion's share of the floating dollars that must be spent for something. D. J.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—L. J. Stopher's Christmas business was the heaviest on record, a number of the orders having been on the books for weeks.

LITCHFIELD, ILL.—At the Cottage Greenhouses two houses, each seventy feet long, were added the past season, with Garland gutters. A salesroom and office were also added. Business is reported good and steadily growing.

FUNERAL WORK.

Not many retail florists will agree with the view expressed by one of the leaders in their branch of the trade. He stated, in referring to a recent very large family order for funeral flowers, that such orders, although amounting to hundreds of dollars, are not a source of profit. This is the way he figured it out. A death in a family prominent socially causes in all branches of that family a complete abandonment of all social activity for the season, and if such an occurrence takes place at the opening of the social season the florist is greatly the loser in the end.

RICHMOND, IND.—G. R. Gause says Christmas trade was the heaviest in the history of his business. Carnations took the lead. Roses sold well. Green moss and holly wreaths sold well. Better prices were obtained for carnations than last year. There has been a great amount of funeral work for several weeks, using stock up very close.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Miss Margaret Armstrong, who has been with Hoyt Bros. for the past eleven years, has severed her connection with them and has formed a partnership with Miss Rose Wright, of the Lidgerwood Greenhouse. They will do business at the same location where Miss Armstrong has been.

AMERICAN WINDOW GLASS CO.

The American Window Glass Co. has adopted new tactics in its effort to secure the trade of the big buyers of glass. Through the establishment of local warehouses, in the various big cities of the country, it is evidently the intention of the company to cut out to a great extent, the jobber and the middleman, and to do business directly with the big buyers. The evidence of this fact is to be found in the establishment in Chicago of a warehouse. M. G. Holding, having been appointed local manager, will hereafter have charge of all the business in the Chicago territory. The new storehouse of the company is located at the corner of Canal and Sixteenth streets, the building having been secured under lease for a term of years.

The decision of the American Window Glass Co. to establish local houses is largely the result of the successful operation of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. on a similar plan. The company has felt the competition of the independent glass companies throughout the country, as well as of the Pittsburgh company. The expense of administration which may be somewhat enlarged by the new plan, is expected to be more than overbalanced by the greater business which will be done, and the ease with which trade can be conducted. While it is undoubtedly the intention of the company to lessen the power of the middleman, it is not, so far as can be ascertained, the policy to cut out the jobber altogether, but in the case of the sash men, the builders and greenhouse men who take large quantities of glass, there will be direct dealings.

How the jobbers will regard the new plan cannot be said, though some of them intimate that it will cut into their business to a considerable extent. The policy of the company has not yet been fully outlined. The new local manager of the company, M. G. Holding, says that he is not in a position to give out anything which the company has in view. Mr. Holding is one of the best posted men in the glass trade in the west. He was, for more than twenty years, connected with the Sprague, Smith Co., and the company at the outset has secured a man who will be able to secure to it all the advantages which are possible under the new plan.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—Oscar Herman has bought a tract of ten acres at Ninth avenue and Thirtieth street, has erected a boiler room and barn and will at once begin to build greenhouses.

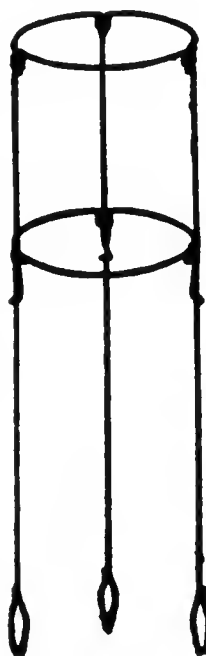

MUSCATINE, IA.—J. E. Kranz expended about $6,000 last summer in modernizing and enlarging his plant. He built two carnation houses, each 22x160, and another house, 20x75, which he uses for ferns.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Christmas trade without any exceptions surpassed that of previous years. There was an increase of trade in all lines and the quality of stock was exceptionally fine. The sale of plants, especially flowering plants, was unusually large and any one having plants in salable condition found a ready market for them at profitable figures. The demand for carnations was unusually heavy, but there was about enough good stock to go around, with the exception of red, which ran short, as the stock was much out of proportion in this color with the quantity of other colors on the market.

There was a tremendous sale of holly wreaths, but the general run of holly was not up to the quality of what has been in this market former years. It was very noticeable that loose holly was not used as extensively for decorating as in previous years. There appears to be much objection to the falling berries, and quite a lot of wild smilax was substituted. The weather was very favorable for delivery of stock and all in all it appeared to be a satisfactory Christmas for every one in the trade.

Violets were of fine quality and all good stock sold out at good figures. Stevia was practically the only flower that was a glut on the market; it was difficult to keep it moving. In roses, Liberty and Chatenay led the call, and good prices were realized on first grade stock.

INCOG.

MATTOON, ILL.

Christmas prices were about the same as last year. Carnations have taken the lead since the fancies have come to stay. Everything that was in bloom cleaned up in the plant line. Azaleas took the lead, poinsettias second, cyclamen third, ferns and primroses next. Of course, we people down here in Egypt make an effort to push plants, so you see if we sell a plant for $1 we have the dollar and if we sell a dozen carnations for $1 and furnish a box, paper and twine and throw in some fern leaves and are forced to pay $7 and $8 per hundred, the other fellow gets the $1 and you get the growl and the customer thinks you make 95 cents on every dozen. I have been forced to sell carnations for $1 per dozen that were not worth 50 cents. No wonder the plant business grows and it will continue to grow. I will endeavor to have a bigger supply of plants for another year.

J. W. SHRADER.

PAINT ON PIPES.

Will you please tell me what to do with some pipes in a greenhouse? I painted them a year ago with a black paint. It made a very bad scent in the house, which is injuring the plants. Last winter I scraped the pipes, but still the scent is not all gone. Can I get something to put on the pipes to take this scent away? J. A. J.

If it can conveniently be done, the most satisfactory method of ridding the pipes of the offensive paint would be to remove the pipes and burn off the paint. If the houses were empty this might be accomplished with the pipes in place by the use of a plumber's blast torch. If neither of these suggestions is practicable, the next best thing is to paint the pipes with asphaltum varnish. This will throw off fumes for a few days but if the house is given plenty of air little if any harm will result from its use. Theoretically pipes should not be painted, as the coating over the surface impairs their efficiency as radiators, and thus defeats in a measure the purpose for which the pipes were installed. L. C. C.

LIMIT FOR HOT WATER.

What is the maximum length of house it is safe to heat by hot water with 3-inch flows and 2-inch returns, the boiler being at the end of houses? A. C. L.

Under ordinary circumstances it is not desirable to run hot water more than 100 feet when gravity alone is to be depended upon. With a circulating pump hot water can be carried from 200 to 300 feet, but without some artificial means of hastening the flow it is not advisable to exceed 100 feet in 2-inch pipes. L. C. C.

MARQUETTE, MICH.—Delf's grocery handles cut flowers as a side line.

AURORA, ILL.—John Freeman's new houses on Lake street are nearly completed.

WINNIPEG, MAN.—Mr. Ueberheim, of the Winnipeg Floral Co., maintains a very attractive show window, one of the brightest spots in town.

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers and do not worry about their breaking down."

THE WAY IT FITS.

Anybody who has ever set up a boiler appreciates what exact fitting means — and what it means if not exact.

Take the Burnham Sectional Boiler — in the first place the castings are as near perfect as skill in casting can make them, then the chipping man with his pneumatic chipper goes over each section taking off rough places and making exact all fitting points.

All this takes time, costs money, but it all goes into the perfection of a "Burnham." So the Burnham must fit right for you, because it first must fit right for us. The Burnham is easy to erect. Easy on coal.

Holiday Varieties.

Now that the strain of Christmas is over and more definite knowledge has been obtained regarding the behavior of certain varieties, more particularly those in good demand at the holidays, attention should at once be given to the increase of such as are the most desirable or suited to your trade. The blooms of a variety may be most desirable in appearance, ready sellers, etc., but in point of productiveness the variety may be quite a little behind another not so much sought for. The question, then, is which to grow in increased quantities. If the returns per bloom from the former are enough larger than the latter to offset the difference in yield, it would seem advisable to increase the stock of the most desirable and higher priced. Looking ahead a whole year, as growers must needs do, the probabilities are that while the less productive sort will bring about the same figures, the variety less in favor now will be held in still lower estimation next season.

As before stated, the foregoing remarks are made more in reference to varieties suited to holiday trade than staple, all-year ones, still with most sorts when the quantity increases quality and price take a corresponding decline. Some growers will under no circumstances handle scarlet carnations, claiming the season of demand at good prices is too short to warrant their being grown. Others plan to throw out the greater part about February 1, using the space to hold young stock.

Trade conditions must govern all such matters, but if scarlet is to be grown, early propagation must be practiced, not only beginning operations in good season, but put into the sand in either one or two large batches not far apart.

If the stock from which cuttings are to be taken is small, it would be better to purchase a quantity of unrooted cuttings from a reliable source than to allow propagation to drag along in diminutive lots. This matter of using cuttings in the unrooted state is no experiment, but has with others, as well as the writer, proved very successful.

Though perhaps my treatment of the subject may not be new to some readers, continued use of unrooted cuttings shows additional reasons in favor of the method about which I will have something to say next time.

GEO. S. OSBORN.

MY MARYLAND.

H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., make the announcement that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., has withdrawn from the joint dissemination of the Webers' white carnation, My Maryland, which was to have begun this month. It is stated that My Maryland has failed utterly at Richmond and at another place where it is being grown this year, but that good-size lots on trial at Toronto and at Philadelphia bear out the originator's claims for it, while at the home place at Oakland the stock is in as good shape as last year, when it made a very favorable showing.

The Weber & Sons Co. says that in its opinion the variety will in at least a part of the country bear out its claims for it and will proceed with the distribution, orders for many thousands having been booked, but they take the very fair course of offering every buyer the opportunity of cancelling his order in whole or in part.

The E. G. Hill Co. was to have also distributed Lady Margaret beginning this month, but this variety was withdrawn several weeks ago.

A YOUNG GROWER.

Wm. Wichtendahl is a new grower for the Chicago market, starting at Maywood, Ill., in the fall of 1904, when he built two houses which he is devoting to carnations, growing the older sorts, such as Sport, Morning Glory, etc. Mr. Wichtendahl was with Bassett & Washburn before starting for himself, and is a first-class grower, his varieties not being done better by any other grower in the neighborhood. He is a young man, only 24 years of age, and unmarried.

His establishment gives every promise of steady expansion. He sends his cut to E. C. Amling.

THE MARKET FOR STOCK.

In an article in the issue for December 14 entitled "Carnations for Christmas" A. F. J. Baur says: "I think that I am safe in saying that but for the heavy demands on the growers at Christmas, many a thousand feet of glass put up in the past few years would have been left unbuilt." I would be glad to hear from Mr. Baur as to whether he simply means that this demand was the incentive for building or that those who did build had regretted it and that had they waited until another year, or a few months, until the Christmas rush was over and the keen edge and enthusiasm had worn off, that they would not have built?

W. H. E.

My statement was not made on the strength of any complaints from growers of cut flowers, but is the result of a close study of the weekly reports in the REVIEW from the large wholesale markets over the country. Before answering your inquiry I took down my copies of the REVIEW from November 3, 1904, to the end of the season and since looking them over I feel even safer than before in repeating that statement. I find that with very few exceptions there was always plenty of good stock to fill all orders and when the weather was half way decent there was a surplus all along the line. Cheap sales would often help matters some, but at other times even these were of no avail in moving the surplus. Of course Christmas and Easter always clean up everything at good figures and there is not enough to go around. In looking over these notes, I can find no encouragement to build for those who are dependent on these markets for disposing of their stock, unless it were the scarcity at these holiday times.

I also notice that whenever there was a scarcity it was always in the top grades, which, of course, is but natural. This shows that the wise grower will give more attention to the production of high-grade blooms than to mere quantity. I cannot say that any grower has regretted building a certain lot of houses. I do mean just what I said, however, that the shortage at Christmas, and by your permission I will add Easter, has been the incentive for the erection of many a thousand feet of glass. The fact that the same shortage

If the stock from which cuttings are to be taken is small, it would be better to purchase a quantity of unrooted cuttings from a reliable source than to allow propagation to drag along in diminutive lots. This matter of using cuttings in the unrooted state is no experiment, but has with others, as well as the writer, proved very successful.

Though perhaps my treatment of the subject may not be new to some readers, continued use of unrooted cuttings shows additional reasons in favor of the method about which I will have something to say next time.

MY MARYLAND.

H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md., make the announcement that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., has withdrawn from the joint dissemination of the Webers' white carnation, My Maryland, which was to have begun this month. It is stated that My Maryland has failed utterly at Richmond and at another place where it is being grown this year, but that good-size lots on trial at Toronto and at Philadelphia bear out the originator's claims for it, while at the home place at Oakland the stock is in as good shape as last year, when it made a very favorable showing.

The Weber & Sons Co. says that in its opinion the variety will in at least a part of the country bear out its claims for it and will proceed with the distribution, orders for many thousands having been booked, but they take the very fair course of offering every buyer the opportunity of cancelling his order in whole or in part.

The E. G. Hill Co. was to have also distributed Lady Margaret beginning this month, but this variety was withdrawn several weeks ago.

A YOUNG GROWER.

Wm. Wichtendahl is a new grower for the Chicago market, starting at Maywood, Ill., in the fall of 1904, when he built two houses which he is devoting to carnations, growing the older sorts, such as Sport, Morning Glory, etc. Mr. Wichtendahl was with Bassett & Washburn before starting for himself, and is a first-class grower, his varieties not being done better by any other grower in the neighborhood. He is a young man, only 24 years of age, and unmarried.

His establishment gives every promise of steady expansion. He sends his cut to E. C. Amling.

THE MARKET FOR STOCK.

In an article in the issue for December 14 entitled "Carnations for Christmas" A. F. J. Baur says: "I think that I am safe in saying that but for the heavy demands on the growers at Christmas, many a thousand feet of glass put up in the past few years would have been left unbuild." I would be glad to hear from Mr. Baur as to whether he simply means that this demand was the incentive for building or that those who did build had regretted it and that had they waited until another year, or a few months, until the Christmas rush was over and the keen edge and enthusiasm had worn off, that they would not have built?

W. H. E.

My statement was not made on the strength of any complaints from growers of cut flowers, but is the result of a close study of the weekly reports in the REVIEW from the large wholesale markets over the country. Before answering your inquiry I took down my copies of the REVIEW from November 3, 1904, to the end of the season and since looking them over I feel even safer than before in repeating that statement. I find that with very few exceptions there was always plenty of good stock to fill all orders and when the weather was half way decent there was a surplus all along the line. Cheap sales would often help matters some, but at other times even these were of no avail in moving the surplus. Of course Christmas and Easter always clean up everything at good figures and there is not enough to go around. In looking over these notes, I can find no encouragement to build for those who are dependent on these markets for disposing of their stock, unless it were the scarcity at these holiday times.

I also notice that whenever there was a scarcity it was always in the top grades, which, of course, is but natural. This shows that the wise grower will give more attention to the production of high grade blooms than to mere quantity. I cannot say that any grower has regretted building a certain lot of houses. I do mean just what I said, however, that the shortage at Christmas, and by your permission I will add Easter, has been the incentive for the erection of many a thousand feet of glass. The fact that the same shortage occurs each season would prevent any regret on the part of the builder, but if you were to cut out these two holidays, and the demand caused by them, I doubt very much whether there would be a foot of glass erected in the next three years by any of the large growers shipping their stock into these markets.

Now I do not want you to think for a moment that I am a pessimist. I am far from it. I can see for the live florist, be he grower or retailer, the brightest of futures. The business is growing rapidly and will continue to grow, and for every energetic firm or individual there is more business than he can handle. There are thousands of smaller growers who can sell many times more than they are able to produce most of the time, and these are in little danger of overbuilding. You will, however, find that these growers either sell their own stock at retail, or else they dispose of their stock without sending it through these large markets. There are more buyers who are forced to go to these large centers for stock, who would willingly buy nearer home if the stock were procurable, and the growers who are located in the midst of such opportunity are of course wise to build just as rapidly as possible. That there are many such we all know and the more these growers build up the worse it will be for those who ship into the large centers, unless the business increases more rapidly than the glass area. The home-grown stock will be given the preference when there is plenty, and the holiday orders sent into the large market will be just as heavy, making the holiday demand heavier and the regular demand lighter. The large market will be appealed to more and more to supply the shortage when the local supply is inadequate, and the regular orders will be placed just as near home as they can be taken care of satisfactorily. The business done in any one of the present large centers will perhaps not diminish, but you will find that as these growers scattered around the country grow up into large places and become able to supply the territory around them, the long-distance orders that will go to the large centers will be mostly special orders and not regular ones, as they now are. The business within a few hours' ride will, of course, grow and perhaps use up all the stock there is, but I think the future will see a much larger percentage of short-distance orders than at present.

Now, I may have elaborated on this subject more than you expected, but it comes right in line with your inquiry and from personal experience I feel that these are the tendencies of the times and the trade. Every man, of course, knows his own business best and ought to know whether he ought to build more houses or not. Those who grow high-grade stock usually could sell more, while those who grow the lower grades mostly, usually find difficulty in disposing of what they have. The general demand need not bother you, it is the demand for your special stock that must govern your building operations.

SCOTCH SOOT.

Will you tell us about Scotch soot for carnations? Is it very stimulating? Do you use it dry or as a liquid? Mix it with earth or not? What proportions? What is the effect, lasting or immediate? Supposing you have been using sheep manure, bone and wood ashes and no stable manure, then what? I have 1,700 carnations, Enchantress, Joe Manley, White Lawson, Boston Market and Mrs. Patten. I have grown carnations in this small way since 1891, and have had the usual amount of stem-rot and rust until last year, when I left off using rotted sod and stable manure and have used the above fertilizer with fine success. Last year I lost no plants from rot and only four this year. We use the old soil in the benches three years and be sure and plant on old ground in the open, using the same fertilizer. We bought 1,500 rooted cuttings, receiving 1,565, potted them all at one time, planted out in frames, then in the ground and took up August 20, 1,535 and bought 150 more plants and have lost four since. I think those were broken when taken in.

G. A. G.

Soot is not used very much on carnations, though it might be good in many cases. It is used a good deal on chrysanthemums, however, and its effect ought to be similar on carnations. Soot is used mostly to give the foliage a dark green color and it also deepens the color of the bloom. It is considered to be a foliage food altogether and is not supposed to have much effect on the size of the blooms. There is no danger of injuring your plants with it. The usual way is to put about a half bushel of it in a burlap bag and hang it in a barrel of water, weighting it enough to hold it under the surface. When you see the water is well colored you can water the beds with it. This is better than to use it dry. When used dry it blows over everything on account of its lightness. The effects will be about as lasting as with any other liquid food. I would apply it about once in two weeks at this time of the year.

If you are having good success by using the fertilizers you mention, then I can only say to keep up the good work. We do not use stable manure for the fun there may be in handling it, but for the results we get from it. If you grow as good stock as your neighbors, and it is quite probable that you do, then there is no reason why you should not eliminate any manure that you think has been causing you trouble other years. We have tried using soil more than one season, but could never get as good results the second season as the first. We do not consider fresh sod ground desirable to plant on in the field, but would rather have it cultivated one or two seasons.

A RAILROAD BANQUET.

At the recent banquet to James J. Hill, at St. Paul, the feature of the decoration was a floral railroad track. An embankment was built of moss and galax upon which a track was made with white carnations for rails and pink carnations for crossties. Wide tables were used. At the head table, which was joined to those running at right angles, there was in the center a floral roundhouse and approaching were two floral trains. At each guest's plate was a ribbon bearing the name of a station on the Great Northern Railroad and each guest on entering was handed a railroad ticket to the station at which he was to dine.

The decoration was considerably the finest ever put up in St. Paul. It was the work of L. L. May & Co. The photographs reproduced in this issue do not do it justice because of the lights, which were too much for the operator.

DETAILS LACKING.

Hundreds of my carnations have some kind of disease that is yellowing the tips of the foliage and young shoots in spots. On examining the roots I find what seems to be a white fungus all over the roots. On the main stalk under ground it is in rings. It is of fleshy substance. My soil is new, not having been cultivated for at least twenty years, and treatment what I have given my carnations in former years with good results, with the exception that I have not been able to keep the house as warm as it should be. Can some one help me out of the trouble? I had in 1,200 plants and pulled up over 300 of the worst ones this week. W. C. S.

I would like to have you send me one of the worst affected plants for examination. I am not sure that the white fungus at the roots and the yellow tips come from the same cause, but such a thing is possible. Also let me know what manure you mixed with the soil and how much. Was the soil well rotted when you filled the benches? Have you been watering liberally? Did the plants take hold of the soil when planted and did they make a fair growth? When did the trouble begin? All these things may have some bearing on the case. Send considerable soil with the plant.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Jerusalem Cherries.

In the REVIEW of November 23, I saw an inquiry about planting Jerusalem cherry seeds to secure plants for next year. I think I have a better plan than that. I take cuttings about the middle of January, from last year's plants. They will root in about four weeks and every cutting will make a plant. I put them in 2½-inch pots and set them out about the first week in June. I make the rows two and a half feet apart and set the plants fifteen inches apart in the rows. I can raise plants fifteen to thirty inches high the first year and full of berries. T. H. HART.

Shasta Daisies.

The writer has a few of each of Burbank's new Shasta daisies that are stooling out in fine shape in the bench and would like to know how to propagate same with best results. Have understood that the divisions are cut off as soon as they have roots but the branches do not seem to have roots. If the buds are kept down how long will it take for cuttings taken next month to attain sufficient size to produce good flowers without sapping the strength of the plant? Are they gross feeders? How many flowers per plant should be allowed to bloom first season? I. G.

Information Wanted.

I have so often found helpful suggestions in the columns of the REVIEW that I want to ask a question which no doubt can be easily answered by some of your correspondents. The answer will be of vital interest to the writer and probably to some others. This is it: "How can you sell dollar carnations in a thirty-cent town?" F. A. F.

ROSES.

Season of Low Vitality.

The dark and dreary weather which has been the feature in many sections during the past six weeks, has begun to show its effect upon all varieties of roses and care must be taken to maintain vigor and health during the next two months. Crops before the holidays were so tardy and prices so tempting that many of us were induced to resort to a little forcing to secure the harvest. Plants as a rule are in no condition at this season to bear extra strain and any forcing is apt to injure succeeding crops by inducing a weak growth and softening of the foliage.

Experts each have their favorite methods of forcing a crop, but with the best of knowledge and experience there is still an element of danger. The grower who exercises patience and makes the health of the plants his first consideration, is the one most likely to have the best satisfaction and come out ahead at the end of the season.

To counteract the damage resulting from this forcing, particular attention should be given to ventilation, both night and day, missing no opportunity to give all that the weather will permit, even at the expense of a few more tons of coal.

At this season, when the vitality of the plants is at its lowest, it must be borne in mind that they cannot use a large supply of either water or feeding, so a careful examination should be made daily and the supply regulated according to their wants.

A little care in watching, to ascertain the wants of the plants, and supplying these at the right time, should now be one of the main duties of the grower, and the success attained along these lines will meet its reward in the future crops. RIBES.

SHAVINGS.

We would be pleased to learn if pine shavings, used as bedding, are injurious in horse manure to be used in composting rose soil, especially if the manure is a year old? C. & G. P.

Pine shavings and sawdust possess such a small percentage of nutritive matter that they are seldom used as fertilizers, almost any kind of barn yard manure being preferable. They possess, however, good absorbent qualities, fitting them, when properly composted with other manures, to retain the gases suitable to plant life, especially when saturated with liquid manures and other fluids containing ammonia. The manurial value of shavings, owing to slow decomposition, is not usually available the first season and produces its best effect the third and fourth year after application, which makes it a rather unsuitable material for roses as they are now grown. But they will not injure your compost unless they constitute a considerable part of the manure. RIBES.

GREINER AND THE CACTI.

The wider of the accompanying illustrations is from a photograph showing A. G. Greiner, of St. Louis, in one of his houses of cacti. Trade visitors in St. Louis in the past year or two have invariably been attracted to Mr. Greiner's exhibits of his cacti. At the St. Louis World's Fair his exhibit was one of the most attractive, and at the World's Fair flower show he received a medal award. At the S. A. F. convention his table in the trade exhibit was one of the novel features. There are at St. Louis many admirers of the cactus, and a large trade is done in this specialty by several St. Louis florists. Mr. Greiner has one of the largest collections in the country, including many novelties. The second illustration is from a photograph, which he says is "the only Euphorbia natalensis cristata of its kind so far known in the world." He has sought widely for its mate, but thus far has been unsuccessful.

GROWING CROPS UNDER GLASS.

[The continuation of a paper by B. T. Gallo-way, Chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, reprinted in the Review of December 28, from the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture, where it was one of several papers under the general head, "Opportunities in Agriculture."]

Vegetable Growing.

and that there can be a demand for special crops in large communities only. Since the rapid extension of vegetable growing in the south and the better facilities for the shipment of such crops as lettuce, cucumbers, etc., the field for the growth of vegetables under glass has been considerably restricted. There are still good opportunities here, however, and the larger the city the more chances there are for success. The grower in this case can sell his own crops, or he can sell them through a commission merchant or wholesale dealer in the city or cities to which his locality is tributary.

In this work larger areas of land are required. From one to five acres will answer the purpose, but for a large business ten acres or even as many as twenty acres may be necessary. The nature and character of the soil play an important part, and the grower should be in a situation to control the soil so far as possible; that is, he should not be so placed as to have to purchase his soil, which is an expensive item in itself, as this takes out of his hands to a certain extent the possibility of controlling conditions. In the growth of such crops a quick, early-maturing soil is absolutely essential. By this is meant a soil readily adaptable to cultivation, that contains comparatively little clay, and that holds moisture readily and yet dries out quickly; in other words, a

The chief crops that may be grown are lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes. As incidental crops, mushrooms, beets, dandelions, cauliflowers, etc., may be used. Lettuce and cucumbers, however, constitute nine-tenths of the crops that are grown in this way, and, all things considered, are more profitable than anything else in this field.

In beginning a work of this nature it is essential to consider the fact that when a start is made it will have to be on such a scale as to enable the grower to produce crops not only of good quality, but in sufficient quantity to pay a dealer to handle them. This is especially true if the grower depends on commission merchants or wholesale dealers to market his products. The first essential is to grow good crops; the second is to produce them in such quantities that the demand when once created will not fail for lack of supply. Many beginners make the fatal mistake of starting in such a way that they cannot develop a good business for the reason that the supply of their product is not constant. The commission merchant or the wholesale dealer depends on a constant supply to build up his trade and if he cannot depend on the grower, he, of course, cannot afford to give as high prices as where the quantity to be had is constant.

Lettuce, for example, is grown under glass usually from October until March, three crops being produced in this time. The first crop should be on the market by Thanksgiving day or earlier, and there should be a steady supply through the rest of the season until the middle of March. If the grower, having produced a good product, has found a ready market for it, he will lose it if for any reason his supply stops for a week or ten days or two weeks during the actual season of demand. This will hold true for all other crops.

To start in work of this kind on the basis of five acres would require something like the following as an outlay:

|------------------------------------------------|---------|
| Five acres of land at $250 per acre.....      | $1,250 |
| One greenhouse, 20x100 feet .....              | 1,200   |
| Hotbed, sash and miscellaneous equipment ..... | 550     |

Total .....$3,000

The intelligent grower, conducting his work in a proper manner, planning well and using good business methods, should be able to secure from this amount of land and glass a gross income of from $2,000 to $3,000 annually, or a net income of from $1,500 to $2,000.

Cut Flower Growing.

Cut flower growing is the most profitable field in the growing of plants under glass. It is most profitable for the reason that there is a greater demand for cut flowers than for vegetables, and while the risks in some cases are greater the profits are correspondingly large. The work in this field may be of two kinds, the growing of mixed crops, or specialization with one crop alone.

By mixed crops is meant the growing of three or more crops of flowers, such as roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums. In this field the best openings are to be found near cities with a population of from 10,000 to 50,000. There is always a demand in cities of this size for cut flowers, and this demand is frequently increased if there are any special institutions in or near lation upward are the ones which should be considered in this connection. The reasons for this have already been briefly alluded to, but may again be referred to here. They are, chiefly, that vegetable growing must necessarily be specialized

such cities, such as colleges, universities, etc.

The grower here may either handle his own products or sell direct to dealers in the cities. It is more profitable, if capital can be secured, to handle one's own products. A store in the town or city eliminates the middleman and enables the grower to take not only the profits from the growing of his crops, but the commissions which must be paid for selling the flowers as well. These usually represent about 100 per cent. In other words, the crops which the grower sells to the retailer in the city are sold by the latter at about 100 per cent advance over the prices paid to the grower. Considering the extra expense of store rent, clerk hire, etc., a considerable portion of this profit may just as well be secured by the grower, if he has the business capacity and can manage the details connected with both the city department and the producing department.

Moreover, this field offers opportunities for those who for various reasons cannot obtain sufficient ground very near to a city. In other words, flowers such as have been mentioned grown under glass may be shipped with perfect safety from fifty to 300 miles, thus broadening the field of the prospective grower. This makes it practicable to secure land at very reasonable prices; but in addition to this must be considered the extra expense of express and freight rates both in the transportation of the crops produced and in the transportation of the material actually required for the work, such as fuel, manure, etc. Ordinarily, however, many choice locations can be found in the vicinity of a city where half an acre or an acre of ground can be secured at a price of from $250 to $500 per acre. It is not always practicable, however, to secure land as reasonably as this; more often, half an acre of such land will cost $500.

Starting with such an area of land, three houses may be constructed, each at a cost of $1,000. In these may be grown roses, carnations and violets. In this connection it is necessary to emphasize the fact that these crops cannot be successfully grown all in the same house. Each requires a special temperature and special treatment, and hence the necessity for division of labor.

With the land costing $500, three houses $3,000, general equipment $500, and a home for the grower costing at least $1,000, we have an investment of $5,000. The gross income from such a place should be at least from $3,000 to $3,500 annually and the net income from $1,800 to $2,000.

If such an establishment is rightly planned in the beginning, it may be extended until the entire half acre is covered with glass. In such an event, of course, the grower will have to depend entirely on the outside for his soil and manure, but this is not a difficult problem in the vicinity of a city. The gross income from such an establishment should be from $10,000 to $12,000 and the net income from $3,500 to $4,000.

Specialization in this field will be conducted in about the same manner as already described, except that the grower will limit himself to one crop, such as roses, carnations, or violets. There are some advantages in this and some disadvantages. The advantages arise chiefly from the fact that it seldom happens that all three crops fail in one season, while it sometimes occurs that one crop, for reasons which cannot well be controlled, either falls off materially or else fails completely. A complete failure, however, is or should be very infrequent unless through bad management or lack of knowledge on the part of the grower.

Specialization offers opportunities for growing crops of the highest quality and for competing in the market for the very best prices. The cost of such work is practically about the same as for general flower growing, already described. The opportunities, however, are more restricted, for the reason that to compete in this field one must grow the very best material. In other words, to be a specialist means the growing of the very best crops. To be a specialist, furthermore, means certain knowledge and a certain temperament which are difficult to find. The general gardener, or one who has been trained in the growing of a number of crops, very frequently fails when he attempts to specialize, because he knows too much about too many things to make a good specialist.

Some of the best specialists in violet growing are men who have known little or nothing about growing any other crops, and have gone into the business from the workshop or from the farm. Going into business in this way, the prospective grower has no preconceived ideas or notions about how the crops should be handled; his whole mind is centered on one thing, and he is not carried away by suggestions coming to him as the result of former experience in producing other crops.

What is stated here in regard to the owner is applicable, of course, to the men whom the owner must secure for his help. Given a bright, quick-witted young man, with no prejudiced views as to the growing of crops, he will in most cases make a better specialist than one who has had considerable training in general gardening work.

Plant Growing as a Specialty.

The growing of bedding and ornamental plants as a specialty is a field which is comparatively limited. The great improvement in transportation facilities has made it practicable to ship plants long distances; hence these plants are now turned out very cheaply and by the million in large establishments remote from the points where they are to be sold. Such being the case, the opportunities for the small specialist are few and growing fewer. If the field is entered at all, it should be considered mainly from the standpoint of getting into touch with some already existing large establishment with a view to obtaining experience and with the ultimate view of pushing the business to such a point that large shipping facilities may be developed.

GREINER AND THE CACTI.

The wider of the accompanying illustrations is from a photograph showing A. G. Greiner, of St. Louis, in one of his houses of cacti. Trade visitors in St. Louis in the past year or two have invariably been attracted to Mr. Greiner's exhibits of his cacti. At the St. Louis World's Fair his exhibit was one of the most attractive, and at the World's Fair flower show he received a medal award. At the S. A. F. convention his table in the trade exhibit was one of the novel features. There are at St. Louis many admirers of the cactus, and a large trade is done in this specialty by several St. Louis florists. Mr. Greiner has one of the largest collections in the country, including many novelties. The second illustration is from a photograph, which he says is "the only Euphorbia natalensis cristata of its kind so far known in the world." He has sought widely for its mate, but thus far has been unsuccessful.

GROWING CROPS UNDER GLASS.

Vegetable Growing.

and that there can be a demand for special crops in large communities only. Since the rapid extension of vegetable growing in the south and the better facilities for the shipment of such crops as lettuce, cucumbers, etc., the field for the growth of vegetables under glass has been considerably restricted. There are still good opportunities here, however, and the larger the city the more chances there are for success. The grower in this case can sell his own crops, or he can sell them through a commission merchant or wholesale dealer in the city or cities to which his locality is tributary.

In this work larger areas of land are required. From one to five acres will answer the purpose, but for a large business ten acres or even as many as twenty acres may be necessary. The nature and character of the soil play an important part, and the grower should be in a situation to control the soil so far as possible; that is, he should not be so placed as to have to purchase his soil, which is an expensive item in itself, as this takes out of his hands to a certain extent the possibility of controlling conditions. In the growth of such crops a quick, early-maturing soil is absolutely essential. By this is meant a soil readily adaptable to cultivation, that contains comparatively little clay, and that holds moisture readily and yet dries out quickly; in other words, a

The chief crops that may be grown are lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes. As incidental crops, mushrooms, beets, dandelions, cauliflowers, etc., may be used. Lettuce and cucumbers, however, constitute nine-tenths of the crops that are grown in this way, and, all things considered, are more profitable than anything else in this field.

In beginning a work of this nature it is essential to consider the fact that when a start is made it will have to be on such a scale as to enable the grower to produce crops not only of good quality, but in sufficient quantity to pay a dealer to handle them. This is especially true if the grower depends on commission merchants or wholesale dealers to market his products. The first essential is to grow good crops; the second is to produce them in such quantities that the demand when once created will not fail for lack of supply. Many beginners make the fatal mistake of starting in such a way that they cannot develop a good business for the reason that the supply of their product is not constant. The commission merchant or the wholesale dealer depends on a constant supply to build up his trade and if he cannot depend on the grower, he, of course, cannot afford to give as high prices as where the quantity to be had is constant.

Lettuce, for example, is grown under glass usually from October until March, three crops being produced in this time. The first crop should be on the market by Thanksgiving day or earlier, and there should be a steady supply through the rest of the season until the middle of March. If the grower, having produced a good product, has found a ready market for it, he will lose it if for any reason his supply stops for a week or ten days or two weeks during the actual season of demand. This will hold true for all other crops.

To start in work of this kind on the basis of five acres would require something like the following as an outlay:

|------------------------------------------------|---------|
| Five acres of land at $250 per acre.....      | $1,250 |
| One greenhouse, 20x100 feet .....              | 1,200   |
| Hotbed, sash and miscellaneous equipment ..... | 550     |
| Total .....                                    | $3,000 |

The intelligent grower, conducting his work in a proper manner, planning well and using good business methods, should be able to secure from this amount of land and glass a gross income of from $2,000 to $3,000 annually, or a net income of from $1,500 to $2,000.

Cut Flower Growing.

Cut flower growing is the most profitable field in the growing of plants under glass. It is most profitable for the reason that there is a greater demand for cut flowers than for vegetables, and while the risks in some cases are greater the profits are correspondingly large. The work in this field may be of two kinds, the growing of mixed crops, or specialization with one crop alone.

By mixed crops is meant the growing of three or more crops of flowers, such as roses, carnations, violets and chrysanthemums. In this field the best openings are to be found near cities with a population of from 10,000 to 50,000. There is always a demand in cities of this size for cut flowers, and this demand is frequently increased if there are any special institutions in or near

A ST. LOUIS STORE.

The accompanying illustrations show the establishment of Fred H. Weber, St. Louis, as it appeared during the chrysanthemum season. Mr. Weber has a very attractive street front, giving an excellent view of the interior of his store. He always carries a liberal stock, which progressive retailers have found to be one of the secrets of success.

THE HOLIDAY BUSINESS.

The reports of Christmas trade agree on one point, that it was the heaviest Christmas on record. This appears to have been the case without exception from Maine to Texas and from Florida to Oregon. There is various report as to the supply. In eastern markets the quantities of material available, especially cut flowers, were just about equal to the requirements and the same holds true of the west, but in the Mississippi valley there was a shortage, most acute at Chicago, possibly because that is where the largest demand centers. In it was observed by some of the leading retailers that the demand for specimen plants and made up baskets did not show an increase; that the best trade was again tending toward cut flowers. Fashion is fickle. That which is commonest is least likely to be popular with the wealthy classes, but the whims which affect the leading New York stores need afford little concern to the average florist.

UNSIGNED QUERIES.

A great many inquiries reach the REVIEW which cannot receive the attention which would be accorded them had the writer not failed to sign his name. Many inquiries relate to such old and frequently discussed subjects that it is impractical to publish answers. Where the writer gives no name or address it is impossible to reply by mail.

Such an inquiry from F. B. W. asks: "How high should Harrisii now be to be in time for Easter?" This inquiry is received on the average of twice a week.

E. S. B., Chicago, writes that he is sending diseased cuttings of geraniums. Had he signed his name and address, we should have written him that the cuttings did not come to hand.

Another query relates to Carnation Victory. Had the writer signed his name we should have taken pleasure in referring him to A. J. Guttman, New York.

MISSISSIPPI.

Land of Horticultural Promise.

As an old reader of the REVIEW I would like to call the attention of the trade to the possibilities of the south and Mississippi in particular, for growing everything to feed and clothe mankind, also to heal him in sickness. Vegetables of all kinds grow of finest quality and to enormous size. Nuts are native. I have tried many varieties of pecan and English walnuts and the sweetest and finest-flavored grow near here.

The forests abound in wild grapes, fine as cranberry for jelly for turkey. In the gardens grow the cultivated grapes, large and luscious, but in these fruits that look like any other we see something indefinable, almost mysterious, in the exquisite flavor, like flavors I have tasted only in the fruits of Sicily.

Cotton is king but the white mulberry grows luxuriantly, awaiting the silk growers. A large variety of medicinal plants, to import which we pay hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly, grow wild, choking the ditches and making lanes of the highways. An experiment, a lone, uncared-for camphor tree was the only green thing in the orchard in the deep of winter last year when a hog got in. The camphor tree was sick a long time (I am sorry I cannot make the same report of the hog) but is now sending up a strong, well-branched shoot and has not been cared for, all of which I think shows the staying qualities of the camphora.

On the hills around Vicksburg a fortune awaits a grower of roses. On the famous French and Italian Riviera I have not seen as superb flowers as in the private gardens there.

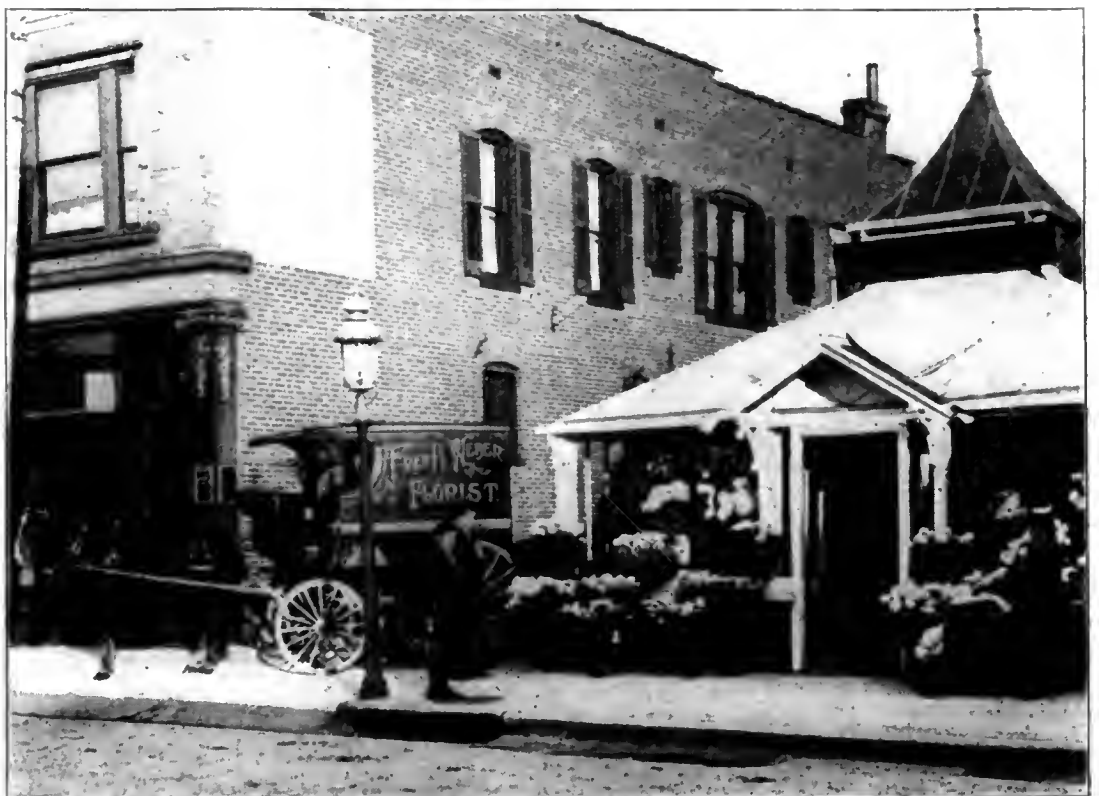

As to schools and society, social life in the towns and cities is in Mississippi about as it is anywhere else. Anyone eastern markets good prices were realized, probably as high as ever before. In cities west of Buffalo record prices were paid because of the shortage of stock and because retailers had taken orders without first assuring themselves of supplies. A dollar apiece has been the standard Christmas price for Beauties in the markets of the middle west, but this year enough were wholesaled at $15 and $18 a dozen to establish a new value and probably next year's advance price lists will show the result. New high record prices for carnations were also made, but this has been an almost annual occurrence since the fancy sorts have been offered. The novelties always command extra figures and it is easy in times of shortage to include a few of the standard varieties at the prices for novelties.

Flowering plants sold exceptionally well and stocks were larger than ever before. Many cities are not yet educated to the point of buying the combination hampers of plants but are prepared to take great quantities of well-grown specimens with some sort of a pot or ribbon embellishment. In New York without introduction will acquire it slowly. In the country, as in other countries, it is more or less according to distance apart, conditions of roads, etc. As to the schools, I am told by more than one, my informants including teachers and parents of both north and south, that the teachers are better paid than in the north and east, are educated and competent and the smaller number of pupils, owing to smaller population, enables them to give the pupils greater individual attention.

As to health, I have seen people who in the middle states have been troubled by malaria, chills and fever, cease having them here and it is a usual thing for pale and sickly women and children to immediately become robust and rosy.

For three or four weeks in the middle of winter we have a cold that bites as hard and in summer heat that is as uncomfortable as anywhere else, but neither last long enough to wear upon the constitution.

Bounded on one side by the great river, on another by a beautiful stretch of salt water, where ride the ships of all nations, to the east the great and beautiful mountains, where vegetation is almost tropical in its luxuriance, is not Mississippi worth considering as to the possibilities for our trade rapidly opening there?
E. B. C.

GLENCOE, ILL.—Edward Jordan, the colored florist, died on Sunday, December 24.

LYONS, KAN.—Mrs. H. B. Smith says the holiday trade was very good this year and more stock might easily have been sold. She says she could always sell more, but for the fact that customers are afraid to order ahead for fear prices will be too high for them.

SHAEFFER FLORAL CO.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the Chas. A. Shaeffer Floral Co.'s new retail store at 805 Walnut street, Kansas City. This was opened only a few weeks ago, and is one of the finest and best appointed cut flower stores in the west. It is finished in quarter sawed Flemish oak, with large French plate mirrors on the south side of the room, with marble counter and wrapping table, while the cashier's desk occupies the north side. A cozy corner is provided for the lady patrons, fitted up with easy chairs and a dainty writing desk. Across the rear of the room extends one of the handsomest cut flower refrigerators in this country. The front is of plate glass and the interior is fitted up with French mirrors and lighted with incandescent lights. This firm did an enormous holiday business, much greater than they expected so soon after their start. L.

ROSE HUGH DICKSON.

The hybrid perpetual Hugh Dickson, raised by Hugh Dickson & Sons, is a variety of much promise. The color is what we want, bright scarlet-crimson, with orange glow, like Horace Vernet at its best. Flowers pointed, deep petals, good form, a trifle small perhaps, but lasting and keeping color. As the blooms are pendant, and it is not free flowering, it cannot be recommended for garden purposes, but as an exhibition rose it has a future. Growth vigorous, foliage handsome. The Irish climate evidently suits it, for the raiser has exhibited grand blooms this year, especially at the N. R. S. autumn show, where seven glorious unsurpassed flowers were staged in the vase class, every flower on stout wood.

erect, brilliant and of perfect form. If it will only come like this in England it is quite worthy of the gold medal N. R. S. awarded it at Glasgow in 1903.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Vegetable Forcing.

AURORA, ILL.—Vegetable forcing is a novelty here and the W. B. Davis & Co. plant attracts much attention. There are two houses 30x200 in cucumbers. Visitors' days are advertised and do much to help local trade.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, January 3.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 80c case; head lettuce, $2 to $3 bbl.; tomatoes, $1.25 to $2.25 case.

BOSTON, January 2.—Cucumbers, $2.50 to $11 box; lettuce, 50c to 90c doz.; radishes, $2.25 box; tomatoes, 35c to 40c lb.; parsley, $2 box; mushrooms, $2 to $2.50 per four-pound package.

NEW YORK, January 2.—Boston cucumbers, $1 to $1.50 doz.; head lettuce, 25c to $1 doz.; radishes, $2 to $3 100 bunches; mushrooms, 10c to 40c lb.; tomatoes, 10c to 30c lb.

THE SEED ORDER.

The avoid disappointment and delay, the seed order should be made ready and placed in the seedsman's hands in good time. It is better for the buyer and better for the seedsman, as it gives him a chance to execute your order without undue hurry and insures against mistakes. Most seedsman in their price without introduction will acquire it slowly. In the country, as in other countries, it is more or less according to distance apart, conditions of roads, etc. As to the schools, I am told by more than one, my informants including teachers and parents of both north and south, that the teachers are better paid than in the north and east, are educated and competent and the smaller number of pupils, owing to smaller population, enables them to give the pupils greater individual attention.

As to health, I have seen people who in the middle states have been troubled by malaria, chills and fever, cease having them here and it is a usual thing for pale and sickly women and children to immediately become robust and rosy.

For three or four weeks in the middle of winter we have a cold that bites as hard and in summer heat that is as uncomfortable as anywhere else, but neither last long enough to wear upon the constitution.

Bounded on one side by the great river, on another by a beautiful stretch of salt water, where ride the ships of all nations, to the east the great and beautiful mountains, where vegetation is almost tropical in its luxuriance, is not Mississippi worth considering as to the possibilities for our trade rapidly opening there? T. B. C.

GLENCOE, ILL.—Edward Jordan, the colored florist, died on Sunday, December 24.

LYONS, KAN. Mrs. H. B. Smith says the holiday trade was very good this year and more stock might easily have been sold. She says she could always sell more, but for the fact that customers are afraid to order ahead for fear prices will be too high for them.

SHAEFFER FLORAL CO.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the Chas. A. Shaeffer Floral Co.'s new retail store at 805 Walnut street, Kansas City. This was opened only a few weeks ago, and is one of the finest and best appointed cut flower stores in the west. It is finished in quarter sawed Flemish oak, with large French plate mirrors on the south side of the room, with marble counter and wrapping table, while the cashier's desk occupies the north side. A cozy corner is provided for the lady patrons, fitted up with easy chairs and a dainty writing desk. Across the rear of the room extends one of the handsomest cut flower refrigerators in this country. The front is of plate glass and the interior is fitted up with French mirrors and lighted with incandescent lights. This firm did an enormous holiday business, much greater than they expected so soon after their start. A.

ROSE HUGH DICKSON.

The hybrid perpetual Hugh Dickson, raised by Hugh Dickson & Sons, is a variety of much promise. The color is what we want, bright scarlet-erimson, with orange glow, like Horace Vernet at its best. Flowers pointed, deep petals, good form, a trifle small perhaps, but lasting and keeping color. As the blooms are pendant, and it is not free flowering, it cannot be recommended for garden purposes, but as an exhibition rose it has a future. Growth vigorous, foliage handsome. The Irish climate evidently suits it, for the raiser has exhibited grand blooms this year, especially at the N. R. S. autumn show, where seven glorious unsurpassed flowers were staged in the vase class, every flower on stout wood, erect, brilliant and of perfect form. If it will only come like this in England it is quite worthy of the gold medal N. R. S. awarded it at Glasgow in 1903.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Vegetable Forcing.

AURORA, ILL.—Vegetable forcing is a novelty here and the W. B. Davis & Co. plant attracts much attention. There are two houses 30x200 in cucumbers. Visitors' days are advertised and do much to help local trade.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, January 3. Cucumbers, $1 to $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 80c case; head lettuce, $2 to $3 bbl.; tomatoes, $1.25 to $2.25 case.

BOSTON, January 2. Cucumbers, $2.50 to $4 box; lettuce, 50c to 90c doz.; radishes, $2.25 box; tomatoes, 35c to 40c doz.; parsley, 8c doz.; in 8 room, $2 to $3.50 per 100 pot plants large.

NEW YORK, December 29. Boston etc. cucumbers, $1 to $1.50 doz.; lettuce, 50c to $1 doz.; radishes, 8c to $2 doz.; mushrooms, 10c to 15c doz.; tomatoes, 35c to 40c doz.

THE SEED ORDER.

The most disappointment and delay in the seed order should be made ready and placed in the seedsmen's hands in good time. It is better for the buyer and better for the seedsmen, as it gives him a chance to execute your order without undue hurry and insures against mistakes. Most seedsmen in their price lists give the advice, "Order early," but this good advice is too often overlooked; consequently the orders come all in a rush and all are wanted immediately, where a little forethought would be of material advantage to all parties concerned.

Though the majority of seed houses use great care in the selection of their seeds and try to have them as reliable as possible, there are so many things to contend with, that a full percentage of germination cannot always be relied on, and it is well to have the seeds in hand long enough before sowing time to give a chance to test them and see just what percentage of the different varieties can be relied on. Then the seeds can be sown thickly or thinly, according to the percentage of germination. It is very disappointing to have to waste time and space on a flat of seeds in which only a half or two-thirds crop comes up.

The best way to test the seeds is to count out fifty or 100 seeds of each variety, sow each in a separate space and give every possible advantage as regards suitable soil, temperature and care. When well up count the number of plants and make a careful note of each variety. Then you will know pretty near what you are doing when sowing time comes and know just what you can reasonably expect from each flat sown.

Regarding varieties, it is always best to stick mainly to the old standard kinds, as they are sure to be in greatest demand, but it is well to try new kinds as they come out, on a limited scale, and after you are satisfied that you have

A good, reliable, early variety of cauliflower is Dwarf Erfurt and the seed is a good deal cheaper than Snowball, but there is usually a call for this latter variety, so that it is necessary to grow more or less of it.

New York Spineless egg plant is a standard variety that one makes no mistake in growing plenty of.

Of the numerous varieties of celery we grow but two, White Plume for early and Golden Dwarf for late.

In tomatoes the variety is bewildering and many of them are worth growing, but if confined to two I would choose Freedom for early and Stone for main crop.

In peppers both Ruby King and Bullnose are old, reliable varieties, that no one can make any mistake in growing.

BEGONIA VARIATIONS.

I have frequently referred to the subject of selections for stock purposes, and the natural variations found among plants now receives more attention than formerly. At the last meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, we had a same may be said of Marie, which is a selection from Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild, and showed, as exhibited, a decided advance. Mont Blanc, a selection from Turnford Hall, also showed more vigor, and flowers of better substance, and they also appeared to have less pink in them; but it is difficult to say from a single specimen if this character is likely to be sustained. Rosea crispata I should hardly consider distinct enough to merit notice, yet even with this, if seen in a batch with the parent, its distinctness might be more apparent. I recommend all who grow these valuable winter-flowering plants to be careful to select the very best only for stock. It has now become quite established as a market plant, and only requires care in keeping to the best and strongest forms to further enhance its value. When I first grew this begonia I hardly expected to see it make such plants as are now grown. It seems capable of increasing in vigor from year to year; this is, probably, owing to its being perfectly abortive. Some plants shown at the Crystal Palace on December 6 and 7 measured fully two feet in height and probably more in diameter.

Begonia Myra, one of the hybrids of the same type as Mrs. J. Heal, shown at the Crystal Palace by H. Cannell & Sons, was specially worthy of note, certainly one of the best of its class; the plants were covered with large blooms of a deep rose pink, and there is a possibility of this making a good market plant.—Horticultural Advertiser.

BEST CANNAS.

Will you please give us a list of the best cannas for commercial purposes?

A. J. S.

We would recommend the following canna lilies as likely to give greatest satisfaction: Betsy Ross, variegated; Buttercup, yellow; Chautauqua, scarlet; Coronet, improved, yellow; Duke of Marlborough, maroon; Duke of York, variegated; Eastern Beauty, salmon; Evolution, yellow shading to pink; George Washington, variegated; Gladiator, variegated; Juanita, chrome yellow; Martha Washington, rose pink; Mont Blanc, white; Niagara, variegated; Pennsylvania, deep scarlet; Philadelphia, crimson; West Grove, coral pink.

RED ANTS.

Please tell me the best remedy for red ants in the palm house and on orchids. They are very destructive to blooms and buds.

R. W.

The safest method to use against these troublesome pests in the palm and orchid houses would be to trap them. This may be accomplished by dipping some pieces of sponge in sweet oil and then laying them on the benches among the plants, where the ants will soon find them. In a short time the sponges will be well filled with the insects, when they may be gathered up and thoroughly scalded with boiling water. By repeating this process from time to time the ants will soon be thinned out. W. H. TAPLIN.

In the New York wholesale cut flower district everybody knows Jimmie Coyle and to know him is to be his friend. For eighteen years Mr. Coyle, although now only 33 years of age, has been identified with the wholesale cut flower industry on Manhattan Island. He began his experiences with the veteran James Hart. For ten years he was on the staff of Thos. Young, Jr., and later was with the New York Cut Flower Co. When Mr. Ghormley embarked in the business Mr. Coyle shortly became his manager. It was a team which built up a splendid business. Since the death of Mr. Ghormley and the taking over of the business by H. E. Froment, Mr. Coyle retains his position, with a practical interest in the business. He is a member of the Masonic Fraternity and the New York Florists' Club, a jovial, light hearted, energetic son of the Emerald Isle with whom the fates always deal gently.

NEW YORK.*The Market.

Christmas week was excellent and so it was with happy faces the "Happy New Year" greetings were given in the floricultural domain. New Year's eve churches, theaters, hotels and streets were crowded beyond all past experiences and for hours pandemonium reigned. It was a glorious welcome and the youngster 1906 was ushered in by a climate that made his pictured garb entirely appropriate. The fact is there has not yet been felt the breath of winter and before we know it Easter will be here. A dozen weeks soon pass, only eleven more as you read this letter and the great festival of Christendom arrives.

Business was good all through the holiday week. Wholesale prices were satisfactory to all except the retailers, and they were so busy they had little to complain of. No one had cause to say anything but good of Christmas. It surprised even the most optimistic. There were not enough plants left after Monday to make any window respectable and the call for cut flowers maintained the best Christmas prices to the very close of the day; in fact, everything really good was taken. The pickled roses, the sleepy carnations and the scentless violets found no legitimate takers at any price and reached the streets, the ash barrels and oblivion, where they belong. Let us hope the lesson may have some good effect on the shortsighted perpetrators of the perennial iniquity.

Prices are gradually approaching normal values. Beauties held at $1 for the best up to Saturday night, and Brides, Maids and Richmonds were firm at splendid prices. Violets dropped to $1 for specials and carnations gradually receded to their regular values, the novelties holding well above the rest, as they deserve to.

Various Notes.

Don't forget the club meeting next Monday evening. Secretary Young will care for any exhibits sent him. The new officers will wax eloquent. The great flower show to beat those of Chicago and Kansas City will be discussed and some familiar faces that have traveled far are looked for and some stories of western floriculture are anticipated. There will be the usual refreshments. Altogether it will be a meeting worth

One of the happiest of the all-nighters was the youthful Johnny Wier, of Brooklyn, looking exactly as I remember him in 1890 and in especially good humor on this occasion.

The Brooklyn florists all acknowledge the best Christmas in their memories. The fact is the village across the bridge is fast becoming civilized and folks over there buy something more than rubber plants and baby carriages. With its million and a half of people it is advancing rapidly. Its 400 feel just as important as the society contingent in New York and buy almost as many flowers, while its wholesale stores and supply houses are quite metropolitan and make it very independent.

All the supply houses were completely sold out. To specify would be to mention all of them. There were no exceptions.

With the advent of Christmas comes the announcement of the new ribbon house of Wertheimer Bros., of 463 Broadway, succeeding that of Lion & Wertheimer. Some fine novelties may safely be anticipated in 1906, and a fine exhibit at Mr. Altick's baliwick in August. Ribbons were used profusely at Christmas, of every size, kind and style. Schloss Bros. and Rodh say the demand from florists was far in advance of other years.

The Outlook.

The outlook is bright for the florists' business in every department. Nurserymen, seedsmen, growers, wholesalers and retailers, never were the signs so propitious, never the conditions so inspiring. Slowly but surely the general prosperity has come as it always does, last to the horticultural world, for it is proverbial that we are the first to feel the decadence of boom times and the last to join in the benefits of the years of plenty. In each of the branches of this great department of the world's progress there has been a year of wonderful prosperity, and the coming year promises to far exceed all the accomplishments of the past.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business in cut flowers has been very good since Christmas. Stock has been none too plentiful, which made it possible for the commission men to hold close to Christmas prices until New Year's day. The new year was ushered in with great demonstration, but trade is not near so brisk as a week ago. Still, some of the up-town florists report quite a trade in decorations and cut flowers. The down-town florists have nothing out of the ordinary to do, except a lot of funeral work, which is keeping them on the jump. The weather has been very favorable to trade in all lines. The month of January is much devoted to social festivities, so quite a few decorations for receptions, weddings and balls have been booked with the west end florists.

Stock the past week cleaned up fast at just a trifle less than Christmas prices on everything except violets, which went down to 75 cents per hundred for the best Californias. Fancy long Beauties were very scarce, shorts quite enough, although mostly bull-headed. Brides, Maids, Richmonds and other varieties were not near enough for the demand. In carnations the supply kept up pretty well, with the demand as great as ever. Fancies are still $8 per hundred for Enchantress and Lawson. Harrisii and callas were much sought after for funeral work. Valley had a big call all week. Romans and narceissi are fine and plentiful. Smilax, asparagus and adiantum are in full supply.

Christmas With Retailers.

George Waldbart's trade was clean and complete and the place the day after looked like a frame house struck by lightning with only the rafters standing. F. C. Weber had his handsome store finely decorated and considered business ahead of last year, blooming plants selling better than ever before.

Kalisch & Sons did a large business with both plants and cut flowers. They had a handsome window, with electrical effects, which attracted a great deal of attention.

Theodore Miller's place was well filled with fine blooming stock. Trade was good in all lines.

C. C. Sanders reports an excellent trade. A lot of splendid poinsettias in pans were seen. These sold better than last year.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers' handsome show house never looked more beautiful than during the holidays. Business was great.

Michel's, where Harry Rieman is in charge, made a fine holiday display.

Miss M. S. Newman had all the business she could attend to. Everything sold.

The Ellison Floral Co. says trade was away ahead of last year. Everything sold clean.

F. H. Weber, John Henzel, F. J. Windt and Meinhardt & Dirckies say they never had a better Christmas trade.

Henry Ostertag was all smiles when asked as to holiday trade. He had much stock, but not near enough for the demand.

Down town Youngs' place was as handsome as any of them. Miss Badaracco, Riessen Floral Co., Fred Foster, St. Louis Palm Co. and Alex. Siegel did a rushing business in cut stock.

Down south Fillmore, Beyer, Schray, Kruse, Windler, Bergersternman, Eggling and Walther did a great plant trade. Cut stock was high, but sold well.

Up north all the florists had a rush, especially Bentzen and Meinhardt, who were kept on the jump all three days.

Various Notes.

L. Cella, of East St. Louis, has returned from a trip south. Miss Jennie Repeto attended to the business while he was away.

Miss Schnell, on the east side, had a rushing trade during Christmas.

Charlie Juengel made a fine decoration the past week at the opening of the new turn hall in South St. Louis.

Pileher & Burrows have received a car of wild smilax from the south, which is in cold storage for the local demand.

Charlie Kuehn has recovered from his rheumatic attack and is again in shape to raise his right arm.

The Florists' Club's first meeting of the year will take place next Thursday afternoon, at 2 p. m. The president's injunction to the members is: "Start the new year right by attending." Two discussions will take place, one led by Carl Beyer, on "Forcing Easter Plants," the other by Otto Koenig, "How to Manage a Flower Show."

The lady florists will have a bowling afternoon at the Hamilton hotel this week Thursday. All the ladies who took part during the St. Louis convention were invited.

The florist bowlers lost three games on December 28 to the Hyde Parks. The boys were clearly out of form from the two weeks' lay-off. Here's how they stand in the forty-two games rolled:

| Player.                | Games. | Total. | Aver. |
|------------------------|--------|--------|-------|

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business the past week has kept up remarkably well, considering that between Christmas and New Year's a lull is generally experienced. Prices also have kept up well, although the majority have found it impossible to get as much for their stock as they did at Christmas time. Brides, Maids and Gates have sold the past week for $2.50 and $3 per dozen, retail, while at Christmas they were sold for $3 and $4. Prices on all varieties have dropped in about the same proportion. On carnations the drop was not as heavy as on roses. Roses are not as good in quality, owing to the greenhouses being pretty well cleaned out for the Christmas trade, and what stock has been brought in has been very weak-stemmed. Some of our leading places look very much as though everything had been cut on which there was any possible chance of sale. While poinsettias did not sell as well as anticipated for cut flowers at Christmas, many have been sold the past week. Poinsettias in pans sold well and commanded good figures, ranging from $2 to $5. The best selling sizes were about twelve or fourteen inches high, three or four being in a pan. In almost every store they have one or two cases of holly left, it being of an inferior grade.

Minneapolis.

Carl Johnson, in charge of the cut flower department of the Powers Mercantile Co., reports a big trade. A large number of bells have been sold, principally the paper ones; in fact, some of the department stores sold more than all the florists put together.

Donaldson's Glass Block also handled immense quantities of stock and we are informed maintained good prices through the entire week. Their cut flower department is a large one, employing six hands, and they were all kept busy. Saturday night their large ice-box was empty, with the exception of a few jars of carnations.

Will & Son are cutting some fine carnations, which sell readily. They have bought 1,500 boxes of glass for new houses next spring.

Rice Bros. are handling considerable stock, receiving the cut from a number of greenhouses in the small towns tributary to Minneapolis.

St. Paul.

Gus Colberg, of the Swanson Floral Co., reports good trade and seems to be thoroughly satisfied with his share of the business.

L. L. May & Co. are kept busy between their city and country trade. They have the reputation of shipping possibly more into the country than almost all the other stores combined and their city trade has also grown considerably. They report an advance of thirty-three and one-third per cent over any previous year.

The Ramaley Floral Co. is also well satisfied and reports selling large numbers of Christmas trees at fancy prices.

August Vogt says trade was never better.

Chas. Vogt reports trade good, but complains of some stock shipped to him, especially in American Beauties. They were tight in the bud and could stand fully a week before they would show any signs of opening.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, was in town. Mr. Clausen, a grower at Albert Lea, Minn., also called.

S. Y. Haines, with L. L. May & Co., is the happy father of a bouncing girl. Sam kept mum, but the boys got wise; since that time he has had a nice box of perfect cigars on his desk.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Those carnation growers who sent in their stock daily from Christmas to New Year's realized a splendid average price, but those who saved up their cut and sent it in Saturday, as many did, were sorely disappointed, for although prices were held up on Friday, much stock was carried over and Saturday saw about the lowest prices of the month, certainly the lowest prices since the holidays hove into sight.

There seems to be misapprehension as to the character of New Year's. As a flower day it doesn't amount to much. Of course, society is active and there are innumerable reception, dinner and dance decorations, but the quantity of stock called for is nothing compared to the resources of this market when the growers try to load it up. Again, the principal shipping was on Friday, while many growers did not come in until Saturday afternoon, when there was nothing but the local demand to depend on. One grower is on record as having sent nothing the whole week until Saturday afternoon, when his shipment was 2,600 carnations. He probably thought Christmas history was going to repeat itself. But it was the other way 'round; stock that had commanded 5 cents, 6 cents and even 8 cents all week was sold for 3 cents or even 2 cents and did not clean up; some of it was even carried to Monday and sold at $1 a hundred.

Roses have been short of the demand right along and Christmas prices were still in force at New Year's, when quality would permit, but a large part of the receipts have been off grade and not wanted, for the demand in holiday week is invariably for good stuff. Colored roses had the call because of the many decorations, but funeral work has also been in demand and white roses have found an easy outlet. Beauties held their position well until after New Year's, but a change has since taken place and prices are cut almost in half. Tuesday saw a brisk business but rose prices were down several notches.

Violets sold well Sunday and Monday because of pleasant weather but supplies were more than ample, low prices being the inevitable result. Callas are abundant and Easter lilies again coming in more freely. Paper Whites are almost a glut; they can be cleaned up only at low prices. Not many Romans are seen but there is plenty of valley. Kennicotts are still receiving chrysanthemums.

Green goods have been and are in good demand. Smilax sells steadily and a big business is done with asparagus. The latter specialty is pretty well cut out with some growers and prices have advanced slightly.

The Year.

The Tribune in its summary of Chicago's industrial progress puts down the total for wholesale cut flowers at $1,850,000, in spite of the teamsters' strike, an increase of about twenty per cent as compared with 1904, which was an off year with many. This is the way some of the wholesalers report it:

Kennicott Bros. Co.—Had a bad January and February but made it up in the summer and ended a little ahead of the average year.

E. C. Amling.—Nice increase over last year; especially good business on green goods.

E. H. Hunt.—Satisfactory increase on cut flowers; nearly doubled the supply business.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.—Have considerable increase in glass and could not supply the demand; already at work on 280,000 feet more glass.

A. L. Randall Co.—Our business increased more than twenty-five per cent. Pleased? Well, hadn't we ought to be?

J. A. Budlong.—It was a good year for us; good crops and good market most of the time.

George Reinberg.—Very much my most successful year.

Bassett & Washburn.—Satisfied, but expect 1906 to show better on our books; our crops were late this fall because of much rebuilding.

E. F. Winterson Co.—The teamsters' strike hit us hard in the spring; had fine fall business, but hadn't got ahead of last year when the clock struck twelve.

Peter Reinberg.—About the same as 1904; haven't the totals yet.

Percy Jones.—My business has increased fully a fourth and all on the Market floor have done better than in 1904.

Bentley-Coatsworth Co.—The strike hurt us in the spring, but otherwise the year was very satisfactory.

Wieter Bros.—A splendid fall crop of roses, especially Beauties, put us well to the good with no new glass, and we're still going.

Various Notes.

The lecture by Miss Sipe, of Washington, at the Art Institute last evening brought out a good crowd. Miss Sipe was as interesting as when she addressed the S. A. F. last August.

The Brant & Noe Floral Co., Forest Glen, recently increased its capital stock and will put up eight 300-foot houses in the spring.

Fleischman had another large decoration at Mandel's on Tuesday.

Weiland & Risch say that Killarney has done so well for them this fall that they will build a new range for it in the spring, probably eight or ten houses 27x200. They are booking many orders for stock.

Lester L. Partridge, of Sharp, Partridge & Co., says that the early orders and inquiries for glass indicate the biggest season of greenhouse building to date. The firm has sold several car-lots and a couple of orders call for two or three cars each, with many buyers just beginning to figure.

One of the week's visitors was J. L. Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo., who placed an order for a car of glass and took estimates on other material for half a dozen houses he will build this season. Another visitor was W. W. Dederick, Ashley, Ind., florist for the Wabash railroad.

W. H. Hilton leaves next week to spend a month or two in Cuba, where he has ten acres in oranges.

J. L. Raske, at the Board of Trade, is making up some enormous sprays for casket pieces, using Beauties, orchids and valley.

Julius W. Niesen, on Forty-seventh street near the "L," Holden's old stand, is doing a very nice business. He carries a good stock and keeps his store always attractive.

BROCKTON, MASS.

All the Brockton stores report a record-breaking Christmas trade. Mrs. Moir, on Centre street, reports much larger sales on flowering plants, azaleas, primulas, Lorraine begonias and cyclamen selling best. There was not much call for berried plants but palms and ferns sold well. She had a big call for evergreens. Carnations were the leaders in cut flowers.

C. A. Read had a splendid trade in flowering plants, Lorraines and azaleas being special favorites, while carnations were in most request in cut flowers. Roses sold very well.

W. W. Hathaway did a great business. Carnations and roses sold best in cut flowers. Violets were in short supply and chrysanthemums scarce. His azaleas were very fine and sold well, also poinsettias, Lorraine begonias, cyclamens, etc. There was little call for berried plants but palms sold well.

J. R. Daly is bringing quantities of very fine Enchantress to the market.

Business since Christmas has remained very good and prospects are bright for a first-class season.

W. N. C.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices kept well up to the Christmas mark for a few days, but are now somewhat lower. New Year's day does not have much effect on the flower markets, as the day is not kept as in some cities; still, there was a very nice demand and prices stiffened, especially on violets and carnations. Roses are not very plentiful and are making better figures than a year ago. Beauties of the best grades bring $50 to $75 per hundred. Liberty and Richmond vary from $10 to $30 per hundred. Extra quality Brides and Maids make $3 per dozen, good select stock going at $12 to $16 per hundred. There is no surplus of any rose at present.

Carnations vary from $3 to $6, whites making the lower price, but even of these there is little left over. Violets average $1, some making $1.25, and poorer samples 75 cents. Lily of the valley sells well at rather higher rates, the best making $5, although sales at $6 have been made. Sweet peas remain from 75 cents to $1 per hundred. A good number of Trumpet Major narcissi are coming in and make $4 to $5 per hundred. Freesias bring $3, callas and Harrisii $12 per hundred. Poinsettias still come in, but are not in much demand, and a few straggling chrysanthemums are to be seen. Green stuff remains about the same. The markets clean up well and very little material has to be carried over.

The Carnation Convention.

Interest in the convention to be held at Horticultural hall on January 24 and 25 is steadily increasing and everything points to its being a grand success.

The Copley square hotel, on Huntington avenue, will be the headquarters of the A. C. S. The hotel management has arranged to set aside a spacious, well-appointed room for the exclusive use of members for committee and other meetings. This hotel is within two minutes' walk from either the Back Bay station on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. R. and the Trinity Place station on the Boston & Albany R. R. It is within five minutes' walk to Horticultural hall and electric cars pass the doors several times a minute. Delegates arriving at the North Union station can take elevated trains there and by changing at Park street can be taken to the hotel doors in a few minutes. Rates at the Copley Square are $1.50 for a single person or $2 if two persons use the room. With bath the rate is $2.50 per day. There are several other first-class hotels in close proximity.

At present a number of Boston's leading hotels are without licenses and very dry, our new district attorney having made things interesting for them of late. New licenses are likely to be issued before the A. C. S. assembles, however.

Preparations for the banquet on January 25 at the Copley Square hotel are well advanced. An attendance of 200 or more is expected. Ladies will be included.

All exhibits for the convention should be addressed to W. P. Rich, 300 Massachusetts avenue, Boston. They will be well cared for on arrival, there being some cool rooms at Horticultural hall in which to place them.

Welch Bros. will be pleased to place any flowers in their ice-boxes for intending exhibitors who may desire to avail themselves of their facilities.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold a small mid-winter exhibition in connection with the meeting of the A. C. S. on January 24 and 25. It will comprise Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, primulas, violets, freesias, carnations and vegetables.

Less than 2,000 flowers were staged when the A. C. S. last met in Boston. Few varieties then staged are now grown, yet the exhibition was considered a marvelous one at that time. What an advance the coming convention will show.

Christmas Aftermath.

Growers, dealers and retailers are of one accord in regard to the late Christmas trade beating all records. Seldom do we find such unanimity of opinion.

W. H. Elliott had 5,000 Liberty for Christmas, a good proportion being "extra specials." He likes Richmond and will grow it more heavily next season.

William Sim, the violet and sweet pea king, had 10,000 sweet peas and 70,000 single violets for Christmas. He had also an extra large lot for New Year's day, which sold well.

Galvin did an unprecedented Christmas trade. A long string of hacks and automobiles were delivering plants and flowers for him all Christmas morning.

Waban Conservatories had what was described by a well-known rose grower as "the finest lot of Beauties probably ever seen in America." Certainly they were of grand quality.

W. E. Doyle disposed of over 3,000 Killarney. This rose is one of Mr. Doyle's favorites.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be carnation night. Exhibits of new and standard varieties will come from many growers. M. A. Patten will speak on the carnations of the past, Mr. Nicholson of the present day sorts and Peter Fisher on what we may expect in the future. The new officers will be installed and there will be, as usual, other interesting features which will draw a large attendance.

Mann Bros. and Paine Bros. are sending very fine yellow trumpet narcissi to the market.

William Nicholson has been suffering from neuralgia and rheumatism, but is able to be around again and full of enthusiasm for the coming convention.

T. J. Benwell, one of A. H. Hews & Co.'s representatives, is now at the Park street market on Tuesday and Saturday and at Music hall market on Wednesday and Friday.

Carbone is showing some very nice Baby Rambler roses.

C. W. Ward has been visiting some of the leading carnation growers. He will exhibit largely at the coming convention.

Doyle is showing some fine Marion Pierce carnations. This variety is a shade deeper than Enchantress and is very promising.

The inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will take place on January 6, at 12 o'clock. The lecture season commences a week later.

William Nicholson has a fine batch of Carnation Aristocrat, which he has been growing for Richard Witterstaetter. It is now producing some very fine flowers and should be seen in fine shape at the convention.

There are general complaints about Fiancee carnation splitting badly in this section. One or two batches recently seen had not a single perfect flower.

The proverbial oldest inhabitant cannot remember so remarkable a season climatically as we have had for the past four months. In that period we have had only twenty-four days on which any rain fell and the amount of sunshine has not been equalled in the same months for many years. On December 28 and 29, maximum shade temperatures of 60 degrees were recorded. The daily press advised us that "trees were budding, blue birds singing and many snakes had been seen." The last statement is generally true on or immediately following any of the holidays.

BUFFALO.

Death of Louis Lang.

The death of Louis Lang, Sr., a former well known florist, occurred at his home, 271 North Division street, December 26. Mr. Lang had been retired from business for about ten years, but had enjoyed good health until a week ago, when he was seized with paralysis, which caused his death. A native of Wurtemberg, Mr. Lang emigrated to this country forty-five years ago and came almost immediately to Buffalo. He had learned the trade of a florist in his mother country and after a few years in the employ of a local firm, he established a place of his own at 250 North Division street, where he conducted a successful business for thirty-five years. He was at one time prominent in the Florists' Club, but had not been active since his retirement ten years ago. He is survived by two sons, Louis, Jr., and John Lang, and two daughters, Mrs. Edward H. Kraus and Bertha Lang.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The market conditions were favorable all through Christmas week. The supply was fair, with sufficient demand to keep prices higher than usual during the last days of the year.

New Year's business was good, especially on fancy stock. There was not enough demand to maintain the high prices on ordinary grades. Tempted by the weather, the street men invested largely in single violets on New Year's day.

There is much social activity this week. In town there are quite a number of handsome dinners and some large entertainments, including the first Assembly ball, which occurs on Friday. Out of town there is considerable activity.

Single daffodils are becoming more plentiful, as is white lilac.

Our Beauty Specialists.

When it became known on the street that "Marty had hit it again" the REVIEW correspondent made efforts to learn something of the great crop of American Beauty roses that Myers & Samtman had harvested for Christmas. Through the courtesy of a member of the firm it was learned that the cut had been larger than ever before at the holidays, which is wonderful, as they have been very successful in past seasons. Besides their own customers they supply the Leo Nielsen Co., of this city, and J. B. Murdoch & Co., of Pittsburg. The firm reports that the demand for fancy Beauties at $15 and $18 a dozen was heavy, lasting right up to Christmas morning. The prices in the medium grades reached a new high water mark. Myers & Samtman firmly believe that the prices paid by the public for flowers at the holidays entitle them to absolutely fresh stock. Their large cut is due to clever management of the plants and not to salting the flowers.

Mr. Fox's Views.

The REVIEW, wishing to give its readers some food for thought regarding the possibilities of Christmas, sent Phil to see some of the most prominent of our city retailers, men of brains and artistic skill who guide the public taste in no small measure. Among these men Charles Fox, genial, enterprising, resourceful, a man who has made his mark in the world of flowers, expressed views worthy of attention. Mr. Fox believes that the greatest possibilities for development in the Christmas business for the general florist lie in the arrangement of small flowering plants with foliage or foliage plants. There will always be buyers for choice cut flowers, but for the buyer who feels that the life of a cut blossom is too brief to be worth many dollars a dozen the basket tastefully filled with poinsettias and ferns presents a delightful avenue of escape. The demand for small poinsettias in 3-inch and 4-inch pots has never, Mr. Fox states, been satisfied. There are other plants that might, with profit, be more extensively grown in small sizes for this purpose.

A Grand Ball.

The ball season commenced the very next day after Christmas, the Benedicts', the Bachelors' and Mrs. Clark's occurring on succeeding nights. Mrs. Clark's is considered the handsomest of the many handsome balls that have taken place in Horticultural hall, the floral artists, J. J. Habermehl's Sons, being highly complimented on their work. The dancing floor was completely surrounded by foliage and flowers. The walls were draped with southern smilax. The tall windows were curtained with the same graceful green brought back by bands of scarlet carnations. In the window seats were Easter lilies and poinsettias tastefully grouped. On the walls in the space between the windows were plaques covered with green plush, studded with electric lights of the same colors, and further enriched by clusters of flowers.

Foliage plants were arranged in festoons on the floor around the dancing floor, the idea being to bring the outer edge of each festoon just far enough into the ball room to shelter from the on-coming dancers a few easy chairs set in the spaces between. A bright-colored specimen azalea marked the outer curve of each festoon. The musicians on the stage were embowered in a garden of palms and ferns, relieved by bright azaleas and poinsettias, the object being to beautify the stage, not to hide the band of musicians. On each end of the stage conversation rooms were arranged by means of curtains with rugs, sofas, chairs, all the elegancies of refined civilization. They were elegancies, for here, as on the dancing floor and elsewhere, the luxurious new chairs with the letter "H" stamped on the back of each were used for the first time. The great chandelier was a blaze of light, softened by graceful foliage. The broad stairways and the balcony were draped with wild smilax and decorated with specimen palms, azaleas and cibotiums. Everywhere green, scarlet and white and no other colors. John P. Habermehl gave every detail of the work his personal attention.

Various Notes.

Same to you and many of them.

J. A. Smith, of the H. F. Michell Co., left for Pittsburg on Tuesday. He will visit many of the principal cities in the state. You will know him at once by his winning way.

Myers & Samtman have the supports for the iron posts for their new Beauty range in place. Work will be pushed as soon as the spring opens.

C. W. Jennings, of Olney, formerly an advocate of ground beds, is now a firm believer in benches. Mr. Jennings' roses are famous up-town. He is growing a limited number of Bon Silene and Sunrise.

John McIntyre has resigned his position with H. H. Battles.

B. Stahl has lately filled an order in the French capital through the medium of a brother florist in Stuttgart, Germany.

The market report last week should have read that good Bridesmaids were scarce, not Brides and Maids. Brides were plentiful and did not sell readily.

M. Rice & Co. were compelled to cable for a new supply of adjustable novelty baskets, owing to their popularity.

Edwin A. Seidewitz, of Baltimore, was a visitor at H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s last week.

The florists keep open house on New Year's day. A bowling tournament was a feature.

H. H. Battles states that the holiday business was larger and more readily handled than ever before.

The customers of William J. Moore are greatly pleased with the quality of the carnations he is distributing.

Robert Crawford, Jr., believes that carnations should never be put in water before shipping to market. Mr. Crawford's opinion as a successful retailer is of value.

At the club meeting Tuesday evening, Robert Kift read a very interesting paper by E. B. Darlington, of Burpee's, descriptive of his California trip. There was a general discussion. PHIL.

DAVENPORT, IA.—E. G. Hill was the guest of J. T. Temple December 21, en route to Texas. They visited most of the local growers.

LANSING, MICH.

State of Business.

Christmas trade in Lansing was all that could be desired. The local florists were busy taking orders several days ahead and most of them were obliged to work all day Sunday and Christmas to get off their deliveries, as many customers put off their orders until the last moment, requiring extra shipments which, in most cases, arrived late. The carnation is the popular flower here and, as usual, was in great demand, the supply being inadequate. Roses and violets also sold well and, as a whole, stock was of good quality. Red, of course, was scarce and could not be had at any price. Poinsettias, although popular elsewhere, do not find a ready sale here, possibly on account of their high price. Blooming plants sold well, although the demand was mostly for cut flowers.

On December 21 the funeral of J. E. St. John made a great demand for flowers. Many beautiful floral pieces were turned out, among them being a casket blanket and a large standing wreath, by the Lansing Floral Co. The blanket was five feet wide and six feet long, made up of Perle and Meteor roses, Roman hyacinths and plumosus. The 700 boys of the Industrial School, of which the deceased was superintendent, contributed toward the standing wreath, which was five and one-half feet high, the upper part being made of white roses and violets with a bow of white ribbon and cluster of Enchantress carnations at one side. The base was composed of callas, Paper White narcissi and ferns.

The days between Christmas and New Year's were also busy ones. The three days' convention of the State Teachers' Association called for considerable decorating at Masonic Temple and the State capitol, where the principal sessions were held. J. A. Bissinger, the pioneer florist of this city, and Gurdon B. Smith deserve much credit for the manner in which the work was handled.

Balls, weddings and annual parties have kept the florists busy for several weeks and, altogether, business has been good.

Various Notes.

J. A. Bissinger remodeled his greenhouse plant the past summer and has just refitted his office, and now has a very neat and up-to-date establishment.

G. B. Smith is also improving his place and his stock of carnation plants looks fine.

Miss Chittenden, the violet grower, is turning out some fine double violets, the bulk of her stock being shipped to the Chicago market.

A. J. Bauerle, of North Lansing, erected two small houses the past summer and is doing nicely. He and Mr. Riley are bringing in some good lettuce to the local market.

The prospects are bright for a busy season. W. R. D.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.

With fine, open weather and liberal local advertising holiday trade was far above former years. The sale of potted plants doubled. Poinsettias, azaleas, Lorraine begonias and cyclamens, well dressed with ribbons, were the leaders. Pans of narcissi sold well. Primulas were popular, as the price suited the most humble purses. In cut flowers Enchantress carnation was easily the leader; $2 per dozen was the price. Other varieties sold at $1.50. Roses were in demand, the best Chatenay, Ivory and Gate, bringing $4 to $5 per dozen. Violets sold out early, singles at $3, double at $4 per hundred.

The florists' windows during the holiday week were the admiration of every shopper. This had more to do than anything else with the increased sales.

DENVER.

Holiday Trade.

The Christmas trade eclipsed all former records and takes rank as the best ever. Prices were good and the stock left over was very small, both in cut flowers and plants. The demand for cut flowers was never greater and everything of suitable quality was sold at prices never better. Larger numbers of flowering plants were offered and in the majority of stores were sold out clean. Occasionally a retailer overbought, but in general it was the most satisfactory Christmas we have had in some years.

The most popular flowering plants were azaleas, poinsettias and Lorraine begonias. The first named were not flowered as well as they might have been. Poinsettias were much used, especially those in low pans, while the single stalk lagged, being used mostly for church decorations. Lorraine begonias were a favorite and were of fine quality. In fact, all plants in bloom disappeared from the shops very quickly. Their charms were enhanced by hampers, ribbons, baskets, pot covers, etc. All kinds of greens sold well, despite the fact of the curbstone brokers. The weather was fine for delivery, not too cold.

In cut flowers there was no great surplus. Some houses say they were long on white carnations, while one shop said it was left with some Enchantress and another with some violets to spare, but taking it altogether, trade was excellent. The greatest call was for red, carnations first, followed by Beauties and Liberties. Fancy red carnations were very scarce and orders were in ahead for all that came in. They brought from $2 to $2.50 per dozen, retail, while Lawson, Enchantress and Prosperity made top prices, the only kinds that were left being white.

American Beauties sold well, although they did not go to a prohibitive price, $18 to $20 being asked at the best shops at retail, and they were handled in large numbers by some of the dealers. Brides and Maids were fairly bought, as well as Chatenay, but Liberty and Richmond were cleaned out early, the retailers getting from $2 to $5 per dozen, and a rare select dozen brought more.

Violets, perhaps, were not quite as much sought after, although they were of good flower. Narcissi sold well at 50 cents per dozen. Christmas novelties also sold very well, but a large number of bells are yet to be seen in the different flower stores. The paper bells handled by all sorts of other stores cut into the trade. Baskets of plants sold slowly. Evergreens, holly wreaths and roping were popular and none was left.

Business between Christmas and New Year's was good, being a season of many balls and dinners, all of which called for the decorator. The most prominent was

NEW ORLEANS.

Christmas business is reported by many florists in New Orleans as having been quite good. Ferns and palms sold well, flowering plants being almost limited to azaleas and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Carnations were not less than $1.25 per dozen, and more for fancies. American Beauties were scarce at any price.

C. W. Eichling disposed of many Gloire de Lorraine at a good price.

E. Valdejo and Abele Bros. report a good demand for Gloire de Lorraine, which seems to be the standby for Christmas presents.

J. H. Menand says it was the best Christmas in several years. He was also busy with decorations. The one at the Christ Church, one of the oldest congregations in New Orleans, was a masterpiece of art. Wild smilax covered the entire end of the church, strung from the dome to the floor. Each side was raised like a curtain. In the center at the top was a large cross formed by thirty-two electric lights. Here and there all over the curtain were scattered a profusion of lights of different colors. The effect was admired by every one.

The program of the convention of the Louisiana State Horticultural Society has been announced. The convention is to be held in New Orleans on January 25 and 26. The object of the society has been the culture of fruit trees, vegetables and general arboriculture. Floriculture has not been entirely disregarded and among the papers which are to be read will be one by C. W. Eichling, on roses, E. Baker on native shrubs and flowers, and C. R. Panter on city nurseries.

M. M. L.

PEORIA, ILL.—The florists of this city have made an arrangement with regard to closing hours. All have agreed to close at 7 p. m. each day but Saturday, when the hour will be 10 p. m. On Sunday they will remain open until 1 p. m.

Everlasting Tile Bench

IT will soon be time to rebuild your Greenhouse Benches and we desire to call your attention to our Everlasting Tile Bench. It is all tile except the sideboards, which are easily removed when emptying or filling the bench and it is strong enough to wheel over. Roses and Carnations grown on it the past season are doing better than on the other benches. Think it over.

MONMOUTH, ILL.

Death of Thomas Hewitt.

Thomas Hewitt, one of the oldest and best known florists in Illinois, died of heart failure December 23. He had been ill for some weeks, but was thought to have been recovering. His first attack was while at the St. Louis convention last year. Mr. Hewitt was born in Tuxford, Nottinghamshire, England, August 31, 1841. In February, 1867, he came to Chicago, and eight years later the family moved to Monmouth, which has ever since been its home. The first five years Mr. Hewitt engaged in gardening and after this branched out as a florist. His establishment has gradually grown until at present it is the largest in its section.

In politics Mr. Hewitt was a republican. In 1887 he was elected school director for the northern district of Monmouth township. On November 6, 1864, Mr. Hewitt married Alice Rimmer, at Sheffield, England. Three children were born. Mrs. Hewitt died in 1870. Mr. Hewitt was again married, to Miss Katie Powell, at Chicago, in 1874 and she is left with five children to mourn his death.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The demand for all kinds of cut flowers has been far beyond the supply since the Christmas rush started and the prospects seem to be about the same for the month of January. The Cleveland

Cut Flower Co. had nice consignments every day, but orders that were booked ahead seemed to use up all that they could get, and late comers were disappointed. The Christmas prices were in force with this firm for New Year's day and they report a fine business; in fact, about twenty per cent greater than that of last year, and they claim it is the result obtained by their advertising in the trade papers, many orders coming to them from florists in other cities, who have orders to fill in northern Ohio.

All of the retail stores have been very busy with decorations and funeral work, and many of them would welcome a lull in the demand, so they could get a chance to rest up.

T. G. Yale of Wellington was in the city last week on a business trip and reports trade as being very good with him this season. Last summer he built two new houses, each 20x100, modern construction, with iron gutters on seven-foot posts, and he is well satisfied with the results as shown so far.

New Year's day is past and everything was cleaned up except violets, which seemed to have a depressed feeling, many being left over, which was a surprise to all.

WICHITA, KAS.

By way of trade notes I might say that the Christmas trade, generally speaking, was good and fairly satisfactory. There was a good sale for cut flowers, roses and carnations being most in demand. Bulbous stock sold slower. Prices were about same as last year. Blooming plants sold fairly well, also palms and ferns. Holly was in good demand and all sold out. The volume of business was a little more than last year.

Prices at wholesale are too high for the quality furnished and the retail florist gets all the blame for robbing people, yet we realize that the demand largely sets the price. As for ourselves, we do not push the cut flower sales but try to provide for the demand as best we can, and then avoid as many cases of heart failure as possible among our customers by making retail prices at a close margin and making as many plant sales as possible.

Now, the above remarks are not necessarily for publication but are given as a sort of unburdening, as it were, for I think that the opinion is general among florists that the high prices at Christmas are more than the most of the stock is worth and the price is usually paid with a mental protest, or opinion that the buyer is being robbed. We are apt to entirely lose sight of the fact that if the demand were not there the prices would at once be lower.

New Year's day brought beautiful weather and good business. The President's reception was the leading social event. The decorations, following the established custom, were furnished by the landscape department, of which Mr. George H. Brown is the head. While tastefully arranged, they were not elaborate. Fine decorations were executed by several of the retail florists in the homes of cabinet officers and other prominent public men.

The florists were busy all day, and in several instances, well into the evening. Many gift boxes were sent out, fine roses and violets being in demand. American Beauties brought from $10 to $15 per dozen, violets $3 per hundred.

Good Resolutions.

Dear Brethren of the Craft, growers, wholesalers, retailers and supply men, let us make some good resolves. By growing a fine quality of stock the grower smooths the path of the wholesaler; he, therefore, must be eternally vigilant with his packing and shipments. The retailer can begin right and clean out those sad, old plants left over from Christmas. May the supply men resolve not to turn the next flower show into an exhibition of painted metal.

A happy New Year to all of you.
SCOTTY.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

We have closed another year, and as one looks it over it would seem that to ask for another one like it would be asking plenty. Of course everyone in the business is hopeful that we will do better this year, and we hope all will. By common consent we may say 1905 was the biggest year the "posy" business has ever seen in this city.

Christmas exceeded all expectation and, owing to the many social events, the retailers have seen no let up since. Most of them are still working day and night, and the help are in that condition that they are hard to handle; so tired that they do not care whether they hold their positions or not; but a couple of easy days will put them all in a good humor again.

Roses have continued scarce since Christmas, and the same can be said of almost everything else. While all kinds of stock have brought good prices, values have not been beyond other years, and, in fact, carnations and violets sold for less money than at Christmas, 1904.

While New Year's is usually just a little better than an ordinary day, this year, although drawn out, it was just a little better than the year before. Several of the stores had orders for big decorations. Randolph & McClements had eight large jobs for New Year's evening, not counting dinner decorations.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams was almost ready to quit Saturday when she had to send the last man about the place out to finish a decoration and the door had hardly closed when the phone brought in another order to be finished that night. However, the next person to come in was one of her best customers who just stopped to congratulate and thank her for the beautiful ballroom decoration she had done for him the night before. I left her very tired but with a satisfied look.

I realized that florists were human and could appreciate a kind word and some evidence of appreciation from their customers after they had exerted themselves to please.

A. W. Smith seemed to be on the jump and one going into his large store and seeing the big force of clerks hustling could scarcely believe Christmas was over.

H. L. Blind & Bros. say the increase in their business over the preceding year was so great that it left the former year out of consideration. This hustling firm is making a bid for the big work which formerly they did not consider.

L. I. Neff says all of his stores were in with the rush and the holiday business was all right.

Next Tuesday night is club night, and the subject for discussion is "Small Flowers," also nomination of officers for the ensuing year.

W. H. Smith, with DeVoe & Co., of Oil City, Pa., is making his annual visit to this city. We are never surprised to meet him on New Year's day.

Mr. Graves, of Richmond, Ind., was in the city one day last week.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., stopped off long enough to call on the trade here with whom he does business. Hoo-Hoo.

STEVIA.

Is stevia a good paying crop to grow, as it is only in the house about four months, with another crop to follow? How many sprays are put in a bunch when cutting for market? R. & S.

Is stevia a good paying crop? That is not so easy, for we have never gone into its profits as we do with roses or carnations. We only know for the retail florist it is wellnigh indispensable. Our best customers admire it and want it. It harmonizes and lightens up any bunch or arrangement of flowers. When bunched for market it is usually put up twenty-five in a bunch but it is not necessary to make it so; better make good bunches, no matter how many it takes; the commission man will get the value out of them. W. S.

BEARDSTOWN, ILL.—Frank Bros. report a good Christmas trade in both cut flowers and plants.

RICHMOND, IND.—J. M. Gift says he never had a better holiday trade; sold out clean on everything and could have used more carnations, holly and bells.

N. PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Lucy Meenan says that holiday trade was good. Cut flowers sold well and there was a great call for decorative plants for gift purposes, especially for the Pierson ferns.

J. M. CLARK, secretary of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, was called east January 2 by a wire announcing the critical illness of his father.

HENRY ECKFORD'S business at Wem, Shropshire, England, whence have come many of our best sweet peas, will be carried on by a son, John S. Eckford.

WM. ELLIOTT & SONS list Southport White Globe onion seed at $3 per pound in their 1906 catalogue, Wardwell's and Davis beans $2 peck, Gradus peas, $3.50 peck.

E. B. DARLINGTON, of Burpee & Co., sent the Florists' Club of Philadelphia an interesting paper on his recent California trip. It was read at the meeting January 2.

A PRESS telegram from La Crosse, Wis., says that Henry A. Salzer, who believed he had not been a loser in Oregon land certificate forgeries, has received word from Oregon that all the certificates in which he had invested are worthless. Mr. Salzer paid $18,080 for the certificates.

BURPEE'S catalogue prices Southport White Globe and Yellow Globe onions at $2.50 per lb., postpaid; Large Red Wethersfield, $1.10 by express in five-lb. lots; Prizetaker, $1.60 per lb. in five-lb. lots. Gradus pea is priced at $2.75 peck, $10 bu.; American Wonder, $1.85 peck, $7 bu. Wardwell's and Davis wax beans are $2.25 peck, $8 bu.

THE seed catalogue for 1906, just issued by Messrs. Sutton & Sons, Reading, England, is of special interest because it marks the centenary of the establishment of the firm. The business, founded in 1806 by the late John Sutton, grandfather and great-grandfather of the present partners, not only still remains the exclusive property of members of the same family, but continues under their direct personal superintendence. Such continuity of management and direction by one family is almost unique.

AILS CRAIG AND EXCELSIOR.

E. J. Deal, general manager for W. W. Johnson & Son, seed growers, Boston, England, writes as follows under date of December 16:

"I was interested in reading the paragraph in the Seed Trade Department of the REVIEW, referring to Ailsa Craig and Excelsior onions in your issue of November 23. I do not think you are correct in stating that most in the seed trade concede these two onions to

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

be identical. I have no doubt that some of the smaller dealers sell one for the other, but the difference between them is certainly as great as many other two varieties which are not considered to be identical. The true Ailsa Craig was first distributed a great many years ago by a firm at Kelsoe, in Scotland, and the next year it was taken up and pushed very extensively by an onion specialist at Banbury. Excelsior came out about the same time, being distributed by Cranstons, of Hereford. In form the Ailsa Craig is not so globular as the Excelsior, and whereas the latter is pure yellow in color, the Ailsa Craig has a slight reddish tinge under the first skin, which frequently shows itself on the outside of the bulb, and on the whole is a darker-colored onion. I shall be very pleased to send a packet of each of these two varieties of the original stocks to any seedsman who would like to make comparisons."

INOCULATION OF LEGUMES.

The method of distributing practically pure cultures of nitrogen-fixing bacteria dried on cotton has not proved entirely satisfactory, owing to varying conditions of air during transit in the mails and to certain matters connected with laboratory technique. While the number of unsuccessful attempts to secure inoculation by users of cotton cultures sent out by the Department of Agriculture is small, it has been recognized that the methods of preparing the organisms and distributing them were open to improvements. Investigations have been under way for some time with a view to improving the methods followed, and as a result the department is now prepared to send out to applicants bacteriologically pure cultures in small tubes hermetically sealed.

The experiments carried on by the Department of Agriculture have demonstrated the fact that by the proper use of practically pure cultures the nodule-forming bacteria are actually carried into the soil. These bacteria are able to form root nodules, and where other conditions are favorable the inoculation thus brought about makes possible the growth of a legume in soils where it had failed previously from lack of bacteria. The original cultures used, however, must be prepared with the utmost care and with a view to preserving or increasing their natural power of nitrogen fixation rather than merely to make them grow under favorable conditions.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Today is January 1 and I wish a happy and prosperous New Year to all. If our business holds out like it has been for the past few weeks it will surely be a prosperous year. Since Christmas stock has been very scarce. No matter what kind of flowers or green came into the wholesale houses, it was snatched up at top prices. As a matter of fact, New Year's prices ruled higher than Christmas, which was due to the general scarcity of stock. There was no pickled stock. The growers were kept cleaned out as fast as the flowers would open. A good proportion of the blooms were cut before they were ready, but this had to be done to come anywhere near filling orders. Violets were the only flowers which came anywhere near equal to the demand. Several thousands were delayed in transit and arrived too late, so that they were almost a total loss.

The report of the retailers for Christmas is that the volume of business was fully up to expectations. Everyone could easily have handled more stock. The business showed a healthy increase over last year, fully in proportion to the growth of our city.

Various Notes.

Saturday, January 13, is the next regular meeting of the Florists' Society. The last meeting was very enthusiastic and a goodly number of the members were present. Many items of importance to the welfare of the society were discussed and it was determined to infuse new energy into it and bring it to the front along new lines. At the coming meeting a large number of the members expect to be present and a lively time is anticipated.

The selection of a park superintendent by our new city government is still in the balance. B. P. Critchell, who has made such a fine showing since he has occupied the office, is still in charge and each day's delay seems to add to his chances of reappointment.

It was a wonderful Christmas, both from the standpoint of the retailer and wholesaler. Flowers were scarce, the supply of colored carnations being totally inadequate. Whites were sufficient to go around. Roses were plentiful until Christmas, when the cut gradually lessened until now the demand exceeds the supply. There were many Paper Whites, Romans and violets, but all sold well, even to poinsettias, although the demand for them would be greater if they did not persist in wilting so.

As usual the A. J. Brown seed store handled several car-loads of holly, some of excellent quality. Several wholesale produce dealers also handled it this year, and all the grocery stores round town each had a crate of holly on tap.

RED BANK, N. J.

At a meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society December 18, it was decided to hold a flower show some time during next summer. The matter was left in the hands of a committee to perfect the arrangements. As the society is weekly adding to its membership, it is expected that the display will exceed any previous effort made in this direction. At this meeting there was a large attendance, four new members being admitted to membership and six propositions were received.

There were several noticeable exhibits, including poinsettias from M. Bauer, gardener for Daniel O'Day; mushrooms from William D. Robertson, gardener for Mrs. Thomas T. Kinney, and tomatoes grown under glass from W. H. Hall, gardener for S. R. Guggenheim.

A. J. Guttman, of New York, was present and exhibited Carnation Victory, which was much admired. It was awarded a certificate of merit.

PACIFIC COAST.

CHRISTMAS ON THE COAST.

After a week's review I am sure it is safe to say that never within the last ten years has there been such a Christmas trade as was enjoyed by the florists of San Francisco and, indeed, the entire Pacific coast, this season. The weather was of the ideal California variety—plenty of sunshine and not a drop of moisture or a semblance of fog to interfere in any way with the good-natured public. Early in the week the trade, which usually begins about three days ahead of Christmas, began, and by the end of the week there was a veritable stampede and the florists were literally overwhelmed with orders. In very few stores were there anywhere near enough clerks to handle the business offered.

The dealers handling green goods, wreaths, berries and other decorative material found that the chance to obtain additional supplies late in the week was very slim and on an average, nine out of ten retailers were sold out by Saturday morning. Flowers were not especially scarce, except fancy roses, and these commanded any price the florist chose to ask. Violets were in ample supply, but the wily Italians, who entirely control that branch of the business, made up the quantity of bunches offered by reducing the number of flowers per bunch. Twenty-five flowers and fifteen leaves was the usual size, and from $1.50 to $2 per dozen bunches the price the stores had to pay. Valley was plentiful enough, but most of the stock offered showed the result of too much forcing. A few late indoor mums were shown, but the bulk of this flower was from the outdoor stock, and although the season is getting late the blooms were fairly up to the mark and proved a great boon to the retailers, who in many cases had to resort to them to fill orders for higher priced stock, when otherwise sold out. A few Paper White narcissi and some Ard Righ daffodils were seen.

From appearances early in the week, there were to be few outdoor poinsettias, but a few days before Christmas a good many hundreds were expressed from Los Angeles and San Diego and these helped much to brighten the show windows. Pot plants sold well, although not quite as freely as did cut flowers. There was a scarcity of primulas, Roman hyacinths and valley in pots, but everybody was well supplied with palms and ferns.

Christmas bells, in spite of the fact that the department stores handled them by thousands, were eagerly bought and no one seemed to have laid in a large enough supply. Red berries and huckleberry were brought in by the ton, but by Saturday night all the retailers were cleaned out.

I have yet to meet a retailer who is not perfectly satisfied with the business done, and that is saying a good deal.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Current Comment.

Christmas business has been, so far as I can gather, a slight improvement over former years. The amount of holly shipped away was not quite so much as usual, but the quality was very good.

Mrs. Farrington, of Fairview Greenhouses, has been showing some remarkably good carnations in her window lately.

G. E. Wilkerson has bought land about three miles out and has ordered glass for a house 200 feet long.

Mrs. M. H. Flewin, of Flewin's Gardens, has leased the Invertavish Nursery for four years.

On December 12 A. Ohlson read a paper before the local horticultural society on the outdoor cultivation of the rose and gave practical illustrations of pruning. The lecture was well attended and Mr. Ohlson's efforts were much appreciated.

A. J. Woodward has just finished four new houses, each 26x300 feet. This gives him a little over three acres under glass. His establishment is now one of the largest, if not the largest, on the Pacific coast. Mr. Woodward has ideas of his own, which are somewhat startling to other florists. All his crops are grown in the ground, just as if they were outside, and watered winter and summer with sprinklers. Added to this, no white help is employed, all work being accomplished by Chinese. Under these conditions, which to most of you will seem totally at variance with the ordinary regulations of a well-conducted establishment, there can be no higher tribute paid to Mr. Woodward than to say he succeeds and that his product commands a good figure in many markets. On some future occasion I will send a report of his place, with a short sketch of how it is managed.

SEATTLE, WASH.

Holiday Trade.

"It was simply wonderful." This expression from the retailers, in speaking of the Christmas trade, seems to sum up the story. The weather was warm and rainy, but this makes no difference to a Seattle crowd, they are so used to it. The flower stores were lined with customers five and six deep and the business was immense. The only complaint I have heard was in one of the leading stores, where the manager was lamenting his inability to secure clerks who could properly explain how to care for the plants they sold.

The call was more for the inexpensive plants, such as primulas, cyclamens, peppers, etc. A few made-up baskets of plants were attempted and sold readily, but the lack of good material to make them with was quite noticeable. For some reason Lorraines do not sell at all. In showing a plant to a customer a few flowers will drop off; that seems to queer them.

In cut stock, poinsettias brought $1 each. The Washington Floral Co. had a lead on these, having about 600 exceptionally well grown plants. Carnations were practically cleaned up on Saturday and no roses were to be had. Carnations sold at from $1.50 per dozen up and roses from $2.50 per dozen up. Violets shipped in from California brought 50 cents and 75 cents per bunch. Holly brought $1 per pound. Mums were plentiful and brought up to $6 per dozen. Western King is the variety that is held best for Christmas, but both white and yellow Jones were to be had in quantity. One of our growers, lately from Australia, has a house of mums planted which he says he will have in bloom for Easter. Well, he has got to show us. A. B.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Holiday Business.

We beg leave to proclaim an unprecedented Christmas trade. Early the preceding week buyers began to make their selections and each day witnessed such an increase that on Saturday, the banner day, it was almost impossible to handle the rush of trade. Sunday and Monday were essentially cut flower days and when closing time came we all had a shop-worn look and longed for the comforts of home.

Never before were we so well supplied with material of all kinds. Stock grown locally was right up to snuff and that shipped in from California was all right, having stood the journey well. Heretofore carelessness on the part of the express company was responsible for much of the stock arriving in such a condition that it never regained consciousness. There was enough to meet every demand, the leading varieties of carnations retailing at $2 per dozen and the best roses at $5 per dozen.

There was a greater variety of flowering plants than usual and their quality was never surpassed here. They were given the customary Christmas dress and there were none left unsold. Some original novelties in baskets arranged with assorted plants made a hit with the best buyers and will undoubtedly be a special feature another year. The store decorations were unique and showed the skill of the artists. The red bells were more popular and sold better than ever. Poinsettias were used in great quantities and the cut bracts are shipped in from as far south as Los Angeles. There was a regular landslide on green goods. Holly was beautifully berried and proved the most profitable in this line. It is excelled nowhere as grown in Oregon. Sixteen-inch wreaths sold as high as $2 each. The street venders had almost a monopoly on mistletoe and the commoner greens.

Since the excitement we have busied ourselves with cleaning house, counting our money and using up the remaining fragments of flowers in some good funeral orders. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Christmas is over and things are commencing to resume their normal appearance again. The weather continues good and stock was never so completely cleaned up before. Carnations and roses are somewhat in short supply. Most of the dealers report little funeral work during the holidays, but since then there has been considerable of it. New Year's business was also good.

Various Notes.

E. J. Petty, the landscape gardener, of Salt Lake City, is in town on a week's visit.

W. H. Wickson, father of E. J. Wickson, of the horticultural department of the State University at Berkeley, died December 23, aged 87 years.

Miss K. O. Sessions, of San Diego, shipped quite a quantity of poinsettias to the local florists for Christmas.

A visit to the greenhouses of Clarke Bros., at Fruitvale, shows great preparations being made for the rooting of young carnation plants. This firm handles cuttings in very large quantities.

The town of Alameda came in well under the head of a prosperous Christmas. H. Gresens, George Rosmarin and J. Becanne, the principal florists, all report record-breaking sales.

H. L. Haelkae, for many years head gardener at the Masonic Home at Docota, will lay out the grounds of the new Claremont hotel at Berkeley.

James Skinner, of Portland, disposed of two car-loads of Christmas trees to the local dealers.

H. Hayashi, of Alameda, has purchased a fifteen-acre piece of land at Elmhurst and will erect a range of glass this spring.

The continued dry weather interferes greatly with the digging and planting of nursery stock. Some of the old time nurserymen predict a dry season.

The Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, was in line with an extra big cut of valley for the holidays. Podesta & Baldocchi, John H. Sievers and Frank Pelicano handle the bulk of their stock.

The Society Hortensia, of Oakland, granted a special diploma to Henry Pramme, of Fruitvale, for a fine exhibit of roses at the last meeting.

T. A. Grady, of Fruitvale, had a good crop of Fiancee and Enchantress for the holidays. Thos. H. Stevenson handles his entire stock.

Both the California Evergreen Co. and G. Rossi & Bros., who supply the bulk of the wild greens and red berries to the local florists, ran short of supplies at the end of the week preceding Christmas. The price of California red berries was increased to $60 per ton, with but very few to be had, although brake ferns and huckleberry held out better. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.—George Betz & Sons report Christmas trade as the best on record, and it is always good.

CARPINTERIA, CAL.—This has been a very dry season, no rain of consequence since last spring. H. Fish has a banana in blossom and fruit which is the subject of a popular souvenir postal card.

HERE is a two-dollar bill, for which please extend our subscription for two years in advance, to the end of 1907. We only wish we could be as sure of getting value received for the other dollars we spend.—W. H. CULP & SON, Wichita, Kan.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. O. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

THE nursery trade never saw collections coming in better than they are this fall.

WHOLESALE nurserymen are making a feature of their literature, in many cases, that stock is grown on new land, "and therefore clean."

THE apple crop of 1905 in the United States is commercially estimated at about 23,500,000 barrels. In 1904 similar estimates put the crop at 45,400,000 barrels.

CHAS. BLACK thinks that the comparative freedom of rot of Elberta peach is due more to the rather dry character of the fruit than to any other characteristic.

THE Cassel Nursery Co., of Cleveland, O., $10,000 capital stock, has been incorporated by M. Cassel, C. L. Tompkins, Lida L. Tompkins, Lucinda A. Cassel and John Reddy.

PROF. A. VAN HOLDERBEKE, formerly horticulturist for the State of Washington and now employed by the Spokane Canal Co., Spokane, as instructor in horticulture and gardening for the benefit of Otis Orchard farmers, has purchased ten acres of Otis Orchard land for the purpose of starting a nursery, from which it is the intention to supply the Otis Orchard fruitgrowers.

ARTICLES of incorporation of the Clearfield Orchard company of Salt Lake, Utah, were filed December 23. The company expects to conduct a nursery, with a capital stock of $25,000, in shares of a par value of $25 each. L. W. Snow is president; George M. Cannon, vice-president; C. L. Whitney, secretary and treasurer; they, with G. W. Palmer and W. R. Calderwood constitute the board of directors.

THE American Forestry Association, James Wilson, president, is seeking to increase its membership. Its purposes are a business-like and conservative use and treatment of the forest resources of this country; the advancement of legislation tending to this end; the diffusion of knowledge regarding the conservation, management, and renewal of forests. Annual dues are $2, for sustaining members, $25; life membership, $100; patron, $1,000.

DEATH OF WILLIAM H. MANN.

To the veterans of the nursery business the name of Capt. Wm. H. Mann is familiar, but to the younger generation he was comparatively unknown, for it is some years since he retired from the nursery business at Normal, Ill., to engage in orange growing in Florida. He died at Gilman, Ill., December 24, aged 80 years.

Captain Mann was a pioneer in the nursery business in central Illinois, establishing a nursery at Normal, in partnership with Cyrus Overman, immediately after his return from the Mexican war, doing a large business for those early days. He obtained his title in the Civil war. He lived at Gilman, Ill., for years, later in Florida, where he was the founder of the town of Mannville. He was one of the organizers of the Illinois State Horticultural Society. Six sons survive, one being congressman from Chicago.

HARTFORD, CONN.

On Friday evening, December 23, the Florists' Club tendered Theodore Wirth a farewell banquet at Hotel Hueblein. As previously reported, Mr. Wirth goes to Minneapolis, where he has been appointed superintendent of parks. President Huss and practically all the club members were present, and among out-of-town guests were Wm. J. Stewart, Boston; Jackson Dawson, Jamaica Plain, and G. X. Amrhyn, New Haven. A. C. Sternberg, an honorary member of the club, acted as chairman, and in exceedingly felicitous terms introduced the various speakers. Among the latter were Superintendent Parker, of Keney park; Wm. J. Stewart, Jackson Dawson, R. N. Clark, G. X. Amrhyn, Robert Scrivener and C. N. Ruedlinger. Unanimous regret was expressed at Mr. Wirth's departure from Hartford and it was the feeling of all that, in his leaving the east the horticultural interests of New England suffered a distinct loss.

At the conclusion of the banquet, which was sumptuous and elaborate in every detail, President Huss presented the guest of the evening with a splendid compass, incased in gold, the joint gift of the Florists' Club and South End Bowling Club, of which latter Mr. Wirth was president. It is almost superfluous to add that everyone present wished Mr. Wirth all prosperity and happiness in his new sphere.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.

Christmas trade was fine, carnations selling for from 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen, roses $2 to $3 per dozen, violets $3 per hundred, with a good call for flowering plants. Cyclamens, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, primulas and azaleas were the best sellers. The temperature was such that plants needed but little covering.

Pratt, the Ashland street florist, has received a sketch and estimate for a new house. He will install a new boiler and heat his plant with one boiler instead of two, as he now does. He reports business as increasing and hopes with his new house to be better able to supply the demand.

The many friends of A. J. Schmutz are pleased to learn that Mrs. Schmutz is rapidly recovering from the severe operation she underwent at the hospital and a complete recovery is hoped for.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.

Mrs. Louise Obermeyer, the wife of Gustav E. Obermeyer, the florist, died Christmas morning at the family home in North Parkersburg. She had been ill for several weeks, but was not thought to be in an alarming condition until Saturday. Her death resulted from stomach trouble, which followed a prolonged attack of rheumatism. The deceased is survived by her husband and two daughters, Violet, aged 12, and Marie, aged 4 years. Her death was under particularly distressing circumstances, as about a year ago two little sons died. The bereaved family has the sympathy of a wide circle of friends.

We don't want to miss a single issue.

The Market.

The past Christmas has been the most successful the growers and retailers ever had. The crops of roses were light; much more so than was expected, and very few specials could be had, with a shortage of all grades. Very few American Beauties are grown in Maryland and nothing much can be said for the ones that did show up. In carnations the supply was equal to the demand, with the exception of red and Lawson, for which the demand was heavy. A few growers held some of their carnations too long and they naturally remained unsold, but could have been used at Christmas prices had they been shipped when in good condition. Otherwise there was very little complaint about salted stock.

The call for single and double violets was heavy, with enough for all orders and a few carried over until Sunday morning, when they were quickly bought up. Harrisii and narcissi were overdone and about the only things that were carried over. Roman hyacinths, sweet peas and stevia sold well, with no advance in price. The market on asparagus and smilax was good, with usual prices.

The retailers all seem well pleased with the business done and the general remark is that everything sold out clean and could have handled more. Red immortelles sold better this year and most stores were cleaned out Saturday. Well berried holly and mistletoe were plentiful and could be had at reasonable prices. Maryland holly could be bought as low as $2 to $4 for single-horse wagon loads and well berried.

Trade continued good all last week and prices were about the same as at Christmas. Saturday, December 30, was the first day that the wholesalers could catch up with orders for carnations and roses. All the past week, flowers were very scarce and never known to be so short in supply after a holiday, many retailers refusing orders for funeral designs, but the bright, sunny weather of the week caused the desired change for the better.

1906 Richmond Plants 1906

The United States Cut Flower Co.

ELMIRA, NEW YORK,

Having a large and fine stock of this new rose, are prepared to accept contracts for delivery, Spring 1906. Correspondence solicited.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Christmas Trade Report.

This Christmas was very satisfactory to every one, both grower and retailer. The week started very dark and gloomy, after two weeks of bright weather, and the outlook for a good cut seemed dubious. On Saturday it cleared and the two bright days brought out thousands of blooms that would not have opened had it remained cloudy. And so, while the cut was perhaps not so heavy as it might have been, yet there was a larger cut than was expected the middle of the week. Prices in most lines ruled a trifle higher than last year. The biggest seller was the carnation, and fancy stock sold first, regardless of prices. Home-grown violets were not in as large supply as usual and many were imported. Poinsettias were used extensively in decorations and sold well in pans. Other pot plants sold heavily, too, especially Lorraines. By Monday noon almost every store in town was closed on account of being sold out.

There was a noticeable absence of old stock and buyers came nearer getting their money's worth than at any other Christmas. Business has kept up fine and everybody is doing a good, steady business. Good stock is in good demand and quality was never better. A. B.

HERE is a money order for $2; please send me two copies of the REVIEW after this.—C. T. GUENTHER, Hamburg, N. Y.

THIS is my first letter in the year 1906 and I will be pleased to send you another dollar in the first letter I write in 1907. The REVIEW is all right and should be read by every florist in America.—CHAS. BROWN, Canton, O.

MY MARYLAND

ANNOUNCEMENT

We, THE H. WEBER & SONS CO. of Oakland, Md., respectfully announce that The E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind., have withdrawn from the contract made with us last spring, whereby they would have jointly with us disseminated our new white carnation, My Maryland.

The variety has been on trial at Richmond (3000 plants), Brooklyn (300 plants), Philadelphia (1000 plants) and Toronto (1000 plants). Reports from the first two named places characterize the variety as being practically worthless, while from Toronto and Philadelphia favorable reports indicate that the variety is bearing out our claims for it.

Our own stock at Oakland is in elegant shape. An extremely wet summer necessitated the holding of stock in a semi-dormant condition after being housed, August 15 to September 1, thus making stock too late for the fall shows. Since December 1st we have been cutting grand blooms, and to prove our claims for the variety, we invite all interested to come to Oakland and look it over.

While it is a source of regret to us that the variety has not proved satisfactory in all places tried, we are satisfied that it will prove our claims for it in at least some places besides our own.

We therefore announce that we will disseminate My Maryland as per our advertisements, but before shipping any stock we give to each and every one the right to cancel all or any portion of their orders.

JESSICA,

we believe, will succeed everywhere. It is even better than last year. As a red and white variegated it has no competitors. Stock ready now.

Prices for both varieties—$2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

KANSAS CITY.

A Splendid Year.

The year 1905 has been a memorable one in many ways. The flower trade has kept pace with all other lines of business in this city and has shown a wonderful increase over any former year. The past year has seen the establishment of a new wholesale house, one of the largest and most complete west of Chicago, and eight new retail establishments. Yet, despite this increase in the number of concerns, the older establishments report nearly double the volume of business transacted in 1904. Probably no other city in the country can show such a remarkable gain in the flower trade. Better prices were realized than ever before and buyers generally made no objection to paying good prices for high grade stuff. The year 1905 is one that will be long remembered in Kansas City by the trade.

There has been no let up in business since Christmas. The demand for good stock has exceeded the supply. New Year's day was another big day, the amount of business done being remarkable. Below we give the comments of some of the leading dealers on the Christmas business:

Arthur Newell.—Our business was the best we ever had; sales 60 per cent greater than last year, and they averaged 30 per cent for the entire week. People wanted good stuff and were willing to pay the price.

Samuel Murray.—The best business we ever did; away ahead of anything we expected. Our plant trade was fine. We disposed of almost our entire stock.

Ed. A. Humfeld.—We did a splendid business, fully double that of last year.

Wm. L. Rock.—Our business shows 25 per cent increase over last year.

A. F. Barbe.—The best business we ever had, and the best prices.

Harnden Seed Co.—We did a good business, much better than we expected to.

Miss M. Dalley.—My business was much better than ever before, 50 per cent increase over last year.

KAY-SEE.

UNADILLA, N. Y.—N. H. Padgett was burned out last February, sustaining a total loss, with no insurance. As he had not the means to continue in business the people of the town and surrounding country raised a subscription sufficient to enable him to build a small greenhouse and workroom. A number of florists have contributed surplus plants to enable him to restock and all such contributions were very welcome.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Christmas trade was a record-breaker. The weather was all that could be desired and reports from the retail stores average an increase of about twenty-five per cent over last year. Prices ruled about the same as last year, except that some very choice stock brought top-notch prices. Azaleas, ferns, poinsettias in pans and cut sold well. The cut flower line was well supplied. Carnations brought good figures, also violets and narcissi. Holly and wild smilax and other evergreens sold better than in former years.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson made a very handsome display at her store for Christmas. The interior of the store was decorated in wild smilax and red Christmas bells, with large Boston ferns and poinsettias.

F. C. Haupt's store was splendidly decorated. The steel ceiling and the holly, wild smilax, Christmas bells, ferns and cut flowers and over 100 electric lights made the store a sight to look at. Fred is the boss decorator.

Nanz & Neuner made a very handsome display in their show window. Some of the finest Begonia Gloire de Lorraine were seen here.

Jacob Schulz came in for his share of the Christmas trade. Blooming plants of every description were to be had here. The new store was beautifully decorated and everybody was getting out orders.

F. Walker & Co. report a big Christmas trade.

Mrs. C. W. Reimers made a fine display in her window of large cut poinsettias, the handsomest ever seen here.

August R. Baumer, the king of the bowlers, as we call him, was smiling all over about the Christmas trade.

H. LICHTFELD.

MANHEIM, ILL.—Robert Hardis, formerly employed by J. C. Ahrens, at Des Plaines, is building several greenhouses here.

ZANESVILLE, O.—John D. Imlay's new store is one of the finest in this section of the state. He had a very auspicious opening just before the holidays.

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers and do not worry about their breaking down."

Have You Forgotten

about that man who we "struggled with" to overcome an unwarranted prejudice about our houses; thought them a "trifle high"—or something to that effect? Do you recall how we took him through our factory, starting with the making of the putty and showing him the particularity, the endless care, thoroughness, and first quality of all the materials that go into our houses? From that little item of putty to those immense piles of millions of feet of Cypress, he said scarcely a word—but he ordered a house. We are getting it out for him now; it will be all ready for erection this Spring with the first note of the robin.

We don't actually know why that man bought our house (he never said) but we infer that the careful attention given to the little things and the ever-present evidences of quality and superiority of the big things, had a good deal to do with it; but it is just as likely it was on account of our many patented features absolutely guaranteeing him a light house, a durable house.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

PRESIDENT'S APPOINTMENTS.

ED. FLORISTS' REVIEW:—I take pleasure in announcing to you that on January 1, I shall appoint on the executive committee of the S. A. F. & O. H. the following gentlemen: Philip J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, and Frank H. Traendly, of New York, for the full term, and H. H. Ritter, of Dayton, O., to fill the unexpired term of H. M. Altick.

I would like to have you hold off until the second week in January before you publish this announcement, their photographs or anything else, * * * as I want all to have it the second week in January and not before. I trust that you will comply with my wishes.

WM. F. KASTING, President-Elect.
Dec. 30, 1905.

PRESIDENT KASTING.

William F. Kasting is one of the youngest men who have ever held the presidency of the Society of American Florists, to which he was elected in Washington last August, the term of office beginning January 1, 1906. He is a leader of the younger element in the society, that portion of the membership which has been accused of finding its principal interest in the sports, but President Kasting declares that it shall be proven in the present year that the young men are as deeply interested in the welfare of the society as are the older heads, and that he will show how the young men can hustle. "Old men for counsel; young men for work." The personal popularity which won for Mr. Kasting the election at Washington will place him free of all necessity for complaint as to the half-heartedness of his support.

Mr. Kasting was born in Germany, at Sachsenhausen, July 27, 1870. The family removed to this country in his youth and lived for a time at St. Louis. For practically all his life he has been engaged in the florists' business. For twenty years he has been in the trade, for eight years in the greenhouse end as a grower, and for twelve years in the wholesale business. It was in 1894 that Mr. Kasting went to work for Daniel B. Long, then in the wholesale cut flower and supply business at Buffalo. It was a modest establishment on Washington street, and in two years the young man, for he was then only 26 years old, had acquired enough experience and had savings enough to buy out the place. The new proprietor being possessed of the faculty of getting there, the business began to grow. Soon larger quarters were needed, and only a year or so ago another move was made, to a building once used as a theater, the entire place being occupied, and his interests have multiplied.

But only a small part of Mr. Kasting's energy has been employed in gaining his business success. Prior to his election to the presidency of the S. A. F. he was successively financial secretary, treasurer and president of the Buffalo Florists' Club; vice-president of the American Carnation Society, and vice-president of the S. A. F. At both the conventions held in Buffalo he was chairman of the ways and means committee, whose duty it was to raise the money and manage the entertainment. Speaking of raising money, were it not still so fresh in mind, his exploit in raising some thousands of dollars for the German hospital at Buffalo would merit special mention; a bazaar was given and Mr. Kasting, as chairman of the ways and means committee, sold tickets over a wider range of territory than was probably ever done for a similar affair.

In the political life of Buffalo, as well as in its business and charitable affairs, Mr. Kasting has taken a leading part.

candidate for the mayoralty, but they say in Buffalo that such is not Mr. Kasting's ambition. He says he is wholly without such a thing, politically, but that must be taken in the same sense, politically, for if you get the confidence of certain politicians in Buffalo they will tell you that they are going to send Billy to congress some day. Mr. Kasting does not believe in embarrassing his friends by refusal when they try to thrust desirable things upon him, and if he wants to go to congress he will probably go out and pick the plum when it is ripe. Among the other evidences of his ability to get what he wants, he has a charming wife, and they have a young hopeful who promises to have all his father's energy and good nature.

PHILIP J. HAUSWIRTH.

It is not at all unlikely that in appointing P. J. Hauswirth on the S. A. F. board of directors, President Kasting has selected the man of all others in business who has the widest personal acquaintance throughout the trade. Mr. Hauswirth is president of the Chicago Florists' Club and bears a most active part in all local horticultural affairs. He has for more years than most of the

It is not at all unlikely that in appointing P. J. Hauswirth on the S. A. Mr. Hauswirth is president of the Chicago Florists' Club and bears a most active part in all local horticultural affairs. He has for more years than most of the members remember been a regular attendant at S. A. F. conventions, and usually in charge of the bowling. He has also traveled widely with several fraternal societies and never fails to call on the florists wherever he may go, so that his store in the Auditorium Annex is pretty sure to be looked in upon by every trade visitor to Chicago.

Mr. Hauswirth is 44 years of age, born in Germany, December 18, 1861. While a boy he came to Chicago with an aunt who, in 1871, married Charles Reisig, who was one of the pioneers in the trade. In the school vacation of 1873, the boy worked in the Reisig greenhouses on West Sixteenth street and may fairly be said to have been identified with the trade since that time. In the autumn of the next year he went into the store as errand boy. He continued with Mr. Reisig almost continuously for eighteen years. They had stores at 88 and 66 Washington street, at 175 Wabash, on State street, and again on Washington street, where the Marshall Field annex now stands, at various times during that period. Joe Curran, who is a few years older than Mr. Hauswirth, was also a protege of Mr. Reisig, and in the store during that time. At the time the Auditorium was completed it was active in the Red Men as he has been in the trade organizations. He is at present chairman of finance in the Great Council of the United States. He is also a large-antlered Elk and participates in most of their frolics.

In 1882 Mr. Hauswirth married Marie C. Collnot. They have two children and two grandchildren. Mrs. Hauswirth spends part of her time in the store and is her husband's constant companion on convention and other trips, so that she is widely known in the trade. She is warm-hearted, endowed with unusually good judgment, and is friend and counsellor for many outside the family circle.

FRANK H. TRAENDLY.

Prior to the Washington convention, the members of the craft in New York City advanced Frank H. Traendly as a candidate for the presidency and warmly urged his claims, to the keen delight of the many who were mutual friends of flower business at Fulton street and Fort Greene place for many years. At the age of 16 he was in the service of Fred Donahue, on Fourteenth street, and later was one of the lieutenants with Thos. Young, Jr., at 11 West Twenty-seventh street. In June, 1893, he formed a partnership with Chas. Schenck, in the wholesale commission business at 38 West Twenty-eighth street, where they still hold the fort and are adding yearly to the large volume of their business.

Mr. Traendly was for the past two years president of the New York Florists' Club, of which he has been a member for more than a dozen years. He is big, jovial and popular, a tremendous worker at whatever engages his interest, and his administrations of club affairs were the most successful in the history of the organization. He is withal a conservative, wise counsellor and will add strength to the society's management.

H. H. RITTER.

H. H. Ritter, who takes the place among the directors made vacant by the selection of H. M. Altick as vice-president, is a very modest man. When appealed to for his portrait he pleaded that he had not had his photograph taken since he was a young man, but he consented to sit and the accompanying illustration therefore shows him as he is, for it was taken less than a week ago. As to the story of his career, Mr. Ritter says that there is none, save a brief narrative of the up-building of a very comfortable business at Dayton. But those who know Mr. Ritter are sure that the whole state of Ohio contains no more genial citizen, the S. A. F. few men more deeply interested in its welfare and none whose counsels will be more practical or thoroughly considered. Mr. Ritter is vice-president of the Florists' Hail Association.

COLD STORAGE VALLEY.

We are having trouble with cold storage valley. In a lot of 2,000 about one-fourth have thrown up good flowering shoots with eight to twelve bells, but without a particle of foliage. Others are coming with foliage and flower and are ready to cut, but about one-half have made no growth at all, while the balance are just beginning to show green. These pips were flatted up and kept in a house at 60 to 65 degrees for a few days, then put in the forcing case with 80 to 90 degrees of heat under the flats, or about 75 degrees of heat in the sand in the flats. These have been treated just as we have before when ninety per cent of the pips made salable valley and were all cut within three or four days. Some flats show one-third or more with flowering shoots, other flats not over one-tenth. We plant one and one-half inches apart each way in flats five inches deep. We have had success with the following treatment: Four or five days in the warm house without bottom heat, ten to twelve days with 75 degrees heat in the sand and four to five days without bottom heat to harden off in a house at 55 to 60 degrees. We are sending you a few pips, all taken from the same flat, and would like some advice and the treatment best to grow valley. W. B.

After carefully reading the above it is difficult to say where the trouble is. If you have pursued the same methods that far south of the center of trade, but Mr. Reisig moved there, occupying a part of the drug store on the Wabash avenue side. This was not at first profitable, and in July, 1892, Mr. Reisig, being well along in years, turned the business over to Mr. Hauswirth, dying within the year. Mr. Hauswirth later moved into a store on the Michigan avenue side of the Auditorium Annex, and has one of the best stands in town and a rapidly growing trade.

For years Mr. Hauswirth has been as these two good friends, Kasting and Traendly. It was certain that one would make way for the other, and when Mr. Traendly refused to permit his name to be presented, Mr. Kasting at once assured him that if elected he would find work for him to do. It was with this in mind that he placed him on the executive committee, known as the board of directors under the new by-laws.

Mr. Traendly was born in Brooklyn in 1867. He took naturally to the florists' business, his father having conducted a you did last year and were successful, then it would be bold for me to say you did wrong, but I will say that there was no need of your putting these cold storage pips into any such heat as 80 to 90 degrees. That is the treatment for the newly imported roots, which you are forcing into growth and flower three or four months before their normal season of flowering. It is entirely a different story with the cold storage stock. You have arrested their natural growth and at any time after the first of last May, directly they were relieved from the arresting cold, they were ready and anxious to grow, so 60 to 65 degrees was warm enough for their roots or pips. You mention flats as being used. That would be of little consequence, but I would rather hear of six inches of sand on an ordinary bench without bottom heat and only protected from draughts or bright sun.

It is possible that these pips had received an injury during their last few weeks in storage. If the pips were not firm, solid and sound it was little use planting them.

Three years ago we received from a New York firm a few hundred valley roots weekly during the summer and fall, every time in prime condition, and there was no failure in bringing them into flower, until the first of December, when our extra quantity for the holidays arrived. They were soft, flabby and useless. A New York florist returning from Brighton Beach, where he had placed his little wad on the wrong pony, was not half so wilted. We thought the trouble was that they had been exposed to a few degrees above freezing and made a start and then been again frozen hard.

We were told in answer to a mild and business-like complaint to go ahead and grow the roots, "they were all right." To this we were real impudent. To think that we had lived nigh on to 60 years and did not know a rotten, useless lily of the valley pip hurt our feelings. I am told that too low a temperature will gradually sap the vitality of the root and embryo flower. They may endure it for several months, but after a time they will collapse. In conclusion, I am afraid your pips were in poor order, and if they were not, you should not have given them anything like such a forcing heat.

THE USEFUL BOXWOOD.

The boxwood has proven not only one of the very best of the greens useful to the cut flower worker, but it has made a hit in many plant arrangements, its dark green foliage contrasting or blending well with many receptacles and associated plants. Another very good use for boxwood is for winter window boxes. A great many of these are now called for in the larger cities and they afford a good profit to the florist who has facilities for handling this class of trade. A florist can supply window boxes of pine painted green and make a good profit at 50 cents per foot. When filling these with boxwood a first-class store can readily get 75 cents per plant, using stock fifteen to eighteen inches high. Such plants wholesale in this country at $25 per hundred, coming from Belgium.

is pretty sure to be looked in upon by every trade visitor to Chicago.

Mr. Hauswirth is 41 years of age, born in Germany, December 18, 1864. While a boy he came to Chicago with an aunt who, in 1871, married Charles Reisig, who was one of the pioneers in the trade. In the school vacation of 1873, the boy worked in the Reisig greenhouses on West Sixteenth street and may fairly be said to have been identified with the trade since that time. In the autumn of the next year he went into the store as errand boy. He continued with Mr. Reisig almost continuously for eighteen years. They had stores at 88 and 66 Washington street, at 175 Wabash, on State street, and again on Washington street, where the Marshall Field annex now stands, at various times during that period. Joe Curran, who is a few years older than Mr. Hauswirth, was also a protege of Mr. Reisig, and in the store during that time. At the time the Auditorium was completed it was active in the Red Men as he has been in the trade organizations. He is at present chairman of finance in the Great Council of the United States. He is also a large antlered Elk and participates in most of their frolics.

In 1882 Mr. Hauswirth married Marie C. Collnot. They have two children and two grandchildren. Mrs. Hauswirth spends part of her time in the store and is her husband's constant companion on convention and other trips, so that she is widely known in the trade. She is warm-hearted, endowed with unusually good judgment, and is friend and counsellor for many outside the family circle.

FRANK H. TRAENDLY.

Prior to the Washington convention, the members of the craft in New York City advanced Frank H. Traendly as a candidate for the presidency and warmly urged his claims, to the keen delight of the many who were mutual friends of flower business at Fulton street and Fort Greene place for many years. At the age of 16 he was in the service of Fred Donahue, on Fourteenth street, and later was one of the lieutenants with Thos. Young, Jr., at 11 West Twenty-seventh street. In June, 1893, he formed a partnership with Chas. Schenck, in the wholesale commission business at 38 West Twenty-eighth street, where they still hold the fort and are adding yearly to the large volume of their business.

Mr. Traendly was for the past two years president of the New York Florists' Club, of which he has been a member for more than a dozen years. He is big, jovial and popular, a tremendous worker at whatever engages his interest, and his administrations of club affairs were the most successful in the history of the organization. He is withal a conservative, wise counsellor and will add strength to the society's management.

H. H. RITTER.

H. H. Ritter, who takes the place among the directors made vacant by the selection of H. M. Altick as vice-president, is a very modest man. When appealed to for his portrait he pleaded that he had not had his photograph taken since he was a young man, but he consented to sit and the accompanying illustration therefore shows him as he is, for it was taken less than a week ago. As to the story of his career, Mr. Ritter says that there is none, save a brief narrative of the up-building of a very comfortable business at Dayton. But those who know Mr. Ritter are sure that the whole state of Ohio contains no more genial citizen, the S. A. F. few men more deeply interested in its welfare and none whose counsels will be more practical or thoroughly considered. Mr. Ritter is vice-president of the Florists' Hail Association.

COLD STORAGE VALLEY.

We are having trouble with cold storage valley. In a lot of 2,000 about one-fourth have thrown up good flowering shoots with eight to twelve bells, but without a particle of foliage. Others are coming with foliage and flower and are ready to cut, but about one half have made no growth at all, while the balance are just beginning to show green. These pips were flatted up and kept in a house at 60 to 65 degrees for a few days, then put in the forcing case with 80 to 90 degrees of heat under the flats, or about 75 degrees of heat in the sand in the flats. These have been treated just as we have before when ninety per cent of the pips made salable valley and were all cut within three or four days. Some flats show one-third or more with flowering shoots, other flats not over one-tenth. We plant one and one-half inches apart each way in flats five inches deep. We have had success with the following treatment: Four or five days in the warm house without bottom heat, ten to twelve days with 75 degrees heat in the sand and four to five days without bottom heat to harden off in a house at 55 to 60 degrees. We are sending you a few pips, all taken from the same flat, and would like some advice and the treatment best to grow valley. W. B.

After carefully reading the above it is difficult to say where the trouble is. If you have pursued the same methods that far south of the center of trade, but Mr. Reisig moved there, occupying a part of the drug store on the Wabash avenue side. This was not at first profitable, and in July, 1892, Mr. Reisig, being well along in years, turned the business over to Mr. Hauswirth, dying within the year. Mr. Hauswirth later moved into a store on the Michigan avenue side of the Auditorium Annex, and has one of the best stands in town and a rapidly growing trade.

For years Mr. Hauswirth has been as these two good friends, Kasting and Traendly. It was certain that one would make way for the other, and when Mr. Traendly refused to permit his name to be presented, Mr. Kasting at once assured him that if elected he would find work for him to do. It was with this in mind that he placed him on the executive committee, known as the board of directors under the new by-laws.

Mr. Traendly was born in Brooklyn in 1867. He took naturally to the florists' business, his father having conducted a you did last year and were successful, then it would be bold for me to say you did wrong, but I will say that there was no need of your putting these cold storage pips into any such heat as 80 to 90 degrees. That is the treatment for the newly imported roots, which you are forcing into growth and flower three or four months before their normal season of flowering. It is entirely a different story with the cold storage stock. You have arrested their natural growth and at any time after the first of last May, directly they were relieved from the arresting cold, they were ready and anxious to grow, so 60 to 65 degrees was warm enough for their roots or pips. You mention flats as being used. That would be of little consequence, but I would rather hear of six inches of sand on an ordinary bench without bottom heat and only protected from draughts or bright sun.

SOFT GROWTH.

We are sending a sample of soil which we are using for our roses. Up to the first of October we had fine rose plants, but the flowers then were somewhat soft. Our houses were kept 55 degrees at night and 65 degrees in the day. As soon as short days came we got a short, weak growth and no bottom growth. They are in raised benches and have four and one-half inches of soil. They have had good treatment and had no feeding up to the time they commenced to get weak. Please tell us what is wrong; we think it is the soil. The soil was three-fourths sod and loam and one-fourth manure, put up in the spring and used in June. W. F. C.

You are very fortunate in having a supply of this quality of soil, as it is as near the ideal rose soil as one could wish. Being naturally rich in itself, it does not require more than one part of manure to five of soil when composting.

The sample mixed with manure seems to have too much of the latter in its composition, which, of course, accounts for the softness of growth during the short days. And where there is softness in growth and foliage we may always look for weakness to follow.

To strengthen the growth and give tone to the foliage, give them a slight top dressing of bone meal, and ruffle it lightly in. After three weeks give them a dusting of air-slaked lime or wood ashes, just enough to color the surface. Pay particular attention to ventilation, both day and night, never missing an opportunity to admit fresh air, even at the expense of a few tons of coal. This question of ventilation is a very important one and ignorance of the laws regarding it, or carelessness in administration, are accountable for many of the poor results after a few weeks of steady firing. RIBES.

IN A POOR HOUSE.

I have two benches of roses, on brick and tile. I planted the stock at the end of May; Beauties, Ivory, Brides, Maids and a few Richmond, in soil prepared in the orthodox manner, with cow manure and bone meal, but rather light. I have to buy all soil and cannot get good, greasy yellow loam. The stock did splendidly all summer; no trace of mildew or insects. Began cutting October 1. The soil being light, I gave a good mulch of half-rotten cow manure early in November. The roots are now pushing up into this, showing good root action. The foliage is very good color, but growth seems much weaker than it ought to be, and I am not getting many roses. I have given a sprinkle of lime, watered in, several times, and nitrate of soda in weak liquid occasionally. I have kept the house at the orthodox temperature. The house is of good height and almost perpendicular on south side. It runs east and west. One end joins a high wall and the other a two-story barn, one keeping off the sun till 10 a. m., and the other after 1 p. m. Now, am I doing my best, or should the stock be giving better results, or am I expecting too much from a house situated as this is, in such a dark corner, and only ten minutes' walk from the center of a city of a quarter of a million inhabitants? G. C.

Owing to the amount of shade this house is subjected to, it is altogether unsuited for rose culture during winter. The best horticultural engineers have been working for years trying to give us a house with a maximum of light and a minimum of shade, and here we have conditions reversed. The almost perpendicular pitch of the south roof is another factor which will militate against success. The brick and tile bench in such a house is also very unsuitable for rose crops. The general treatment of the stock and care of the house is in accordance with accepted cultural methods, and had the house been suitable there is not the least doubt but that results would have been satisfactory.

Under present conditions, I would advise great care in watering for the next two months, and even greater care in feeding; in fact, refrain from all liquid feeding until March, when, with a longer continuance of sunshine and the natural spring growth, they will be in condition to assimilate a stronger diet. RIBES.

AVERAGE PRODUCTION.

I would like for you to tell me how many salable flowers the average carnation plant will produce per season, under ordinary culture, and also how many blooms will a rose plant produce per year for the average grower. W. E. H.

The average cut of carnations depends on the variety under consideration, the suitability of the house employed, the quality of soil, season of planting, and last, but not least, the ability of the man in charge. Had this querist named the varieties he proposes to grow, it would have simplified matters. Such varieties as the Lawsons average higher than most other varieties. Some of the larger growers claim an average for these varieties of thirty-five to forty blooms per plant, and where this average is maintained they will bring handsome returns. Enchantress and Prosperity will average lower in produce, but the higher prices obtained for the blooms compensate for this.

Roses which are planted early, having a longer growing season in which to form a large plant before September, will, by reason of their greater strength, more extended root area and greater number of flower-bearing eyes under the same treatment produce a much better average than those which are planted later. If planted early in June, or late in May, tea roses, such as Maids and Brides, should produce from twenty-five to twenty-seven salable blooms; Golden Gate and Ivory, twenty-three to twenty-five; Beauties, twelve to eighteen, these to be on their own roots. By skillful treatment, good soil, good houses and everything favorable, this average can be exceeded. RIBES.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Bouvardia.

This will be a busy time with your propagating bench, not only with roses and carnations, but many soft-wooded plants, because conditions are now most favorable; viz., heat in the sand and a cool top temperature. If you grow or intend to grow bouvardia, now is the most favorable time to start. This pretty, honeysuckle-like flower will never be of great importance, but we are frequently asked for it; it is a pleasing novelty, and our wealthy patrons do crave things that everybody else has not.

Bouvardias are always propagated from small pieces of the root. Plants that have flowered and lifted from the bench will supply better material than those grown in pots. Don't choose the stout, old, woody roots as thick as a straw, nor the thread-like roots, but something between that looks young and active and full of sap. Cut these into pieces half an inch long and after making the surface of your propagating bed even and smooth, strew on the tiny pieces of root and then sift over enough dry sand to just hide the roots.

If the sand of your bed is about 70 degrees it will do very well. In three or four weeks you will see the little plants starting up through the sand. When an inch above the surface lift out with the piece of root attached, which will have made hair-like roots, and pot into 2-inch pots in a light loam to which has been added some sand and leaf-mold and keep in a temperature of 60 degrees at night. They will soon take hold and continue to grow and that is all that need be said for another two months.

Lilies for Easter.

It may seem a little previous to begin on Easter plants so soon, yet what makes florists thinkers is that they have to think months ahead of events and see the fruits of their efforts in full maturity while their plants are yet in a very embryonic state.

Your Japan lilies intended for Easter should now be in a light house at a night temperature of 55 degrees. It is too early to say anything about how advanced they should be. If five or six inches above the soil you are all right. Longiflorum multiflorum seems to make an earlier, freer growth at starting than longiflorum giganteum, but this may not be so with other growers. Fifty-five degrees is not forcing, it is only growing. Some recent experience has still more convinced me that you may without harm do more real forcing the last four weeks previous to flowering, than you can in three months in midwinter. It seems that up to the time of their showing buds clearly these lilies come along gradually and progress in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees; when buds show well they want an increase of 10 degrees. This is usually not difficult to afford at Easter time, but when it cannot be given in November and December your early Bermudas will just stand still or turn into a leafy growth and put off their flowering period.

Perhaps in the native elime of Lilium longiflorum there is, at about the time of their making buds, a marked rise in temperature. If so, they expect it, and must have it under artificial cultivation. This may be only a theory, but we observed that one lot where the temperature was raised the middle of November flowered finely and are cut and gone, while another lot in similar condition at that date and left in the same night temperature of 60 degrees are now in all stages of development and the majority not yet showing buds.

So don't get alarmed if the lilies are above the soil. Don't force them for the next month. Save your coal until the plants will respond. We force tulips and lily of the valley. Roses and carnations we do not force; we merely transpose the season.

Lilies for Memorial Day.

Don't forget to provide a nice lot of Japan lilies for Memorial day. Nothing sells better on that occasion and you can get about the same price as you can at Easter. You can procure the bulbs now and pot and put in a very cool house. Without the slightest forcing they will come in for the end of May. If you do not wish to buy more, then select a few of the very latest that you intended for Easter and remove to a cool house. Last year we tried to impress this on some younger years and ears, but it was not done, and two or three weeks after Easter there were hundreds of fine lilies going to waste. There was no demand for them, except that they were sold to a butcher who had just opened a shop, which enabled him to present a lily spike with every pound of liverwurst, so they were not entirely wasted.

Verbenas.

About the end of the month sow verbenas and procure the seed from the most reliable source. They are slow in their early stages. By sowing early you will get a cutting off each plant. There are still verbena specialists and a choice variety can, of course, be only perpetuated by cuttings, but fine varieties and perfectly healthy plants are easily raised from seed. Sow in shallow flats of light soil, only just covering the seeds and be sure at that critical time when the seed is germinating not to let the surface of the soil become baked. Then is when the little plants of most of the small seeds perish.

The Euphorbia.

That beautiful plant, Euphorbia jaquinæflora, has been mentioned occasionally this winter. Twenty years ago we thought this almost as important a plant as the now much talked of Euphorbia Poinsettiana, which it does not in the least resemble and needs very different treatment. It propagates like the poinsettia, from either the old, ripened wood or the young, succulent growth. We grew it entirely for its curved, graceful sprays studded at the axil of every leaf with its vermilion-scarlet little blossoms, but we readily believe that a number of plants in 8-inch or 10-inch pans would be very attractive. They can, if you have plenty of stock, be propagated a month or two later, but the wood that has flowered can now be cut up to three or four eyes and will root readily and the young lateral growths from these cuttings can later be propagated. I will endeavor to say more of this pretty plant later, regarding spring and summer care. Like its cousin, the poinsettia, when once rooted and established in pots it wants the lightest aspect and is a tropical plant and wants heat at all times.

Euphorbia Splendens.

Please don't be attracted by the name of another euphorbia which bears the misleading appellation of splendens. If you had walked into an old-fashioned greenhouse, where the boss was fond of plants, in the year 1799, probably the first plant you would notice would be Euphorbia splendens. It is a veritable vegetable porcupine and not so amusing and of no earthly use commercially. I know there are several old ladies of both sexes who like to try their hands at everything and are fascinated and misled by names and catalog descriptions, and the above is for their benefit. I am going to spell catalog the sensible way, and if the compositor introduces three or four useless and superfluous vowels I shan't spell it any more for anybody, so there!

Fuchsias.

I have neglected for many weeks past to mention a seasonable hint about fuchsias. The writer was once credited with being an expert on these old familiar domestic plants, but fuchsias change and old favorites are dropped to pick up with new acquaintances. We treat the fuchsia too much as an evergreen. With our greenhouse correct treatment it should be deciduous. Plants that grew to a good size during the summer should have been resting beneath a bench very much on the dry side since October. They could have been started growing again in a few weeks and you could have had plants in 3-inch pots by this time, but it is not late yet, and if you have any plants still at rest get them up, shake off the old soil, repot and shorten back the unripe tips of the growths, and they will break and give you strong, succulent cuttings, which will make stronger plants than those started earlier. Some wholesale firms send out little fuchsias that have been propagated from the green tips of lateral flowering branches. They are useless, and will be stunted and runts during the remainder of their existence. It is only the cuttings from the ripened wood that are of any use. WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

Buying New Varieties.

If there is one thing that gives the grower more hard thinking than another, it is the question of selecting the new varieties he wants to invest his money in and how heavy he ought to invest in each. The up-to-date grower wants every variety that is an improvement over the varieties he is growing, as he cannot afford to let a chance go by to better his stock. The first question is which varieties shall he buy, and to solve that problem requires not only thought but alertness and shrewdness. If every variety would behave for us as it does for its originator there would be little trouble in choosing. Differences in soil, climate and method of culture have so much effect on varieties that it is hard to say what a variety will do when taken away from home, perhaps only to the other side of the town.

There are few varieties introduced that have not been good on the originator's place, and so, when a variety fails to make good on your place do not judge him harshly, but rather try and find out where you made your mistake. Naturally you want to find out as much about a variety as you can before you buy, and while there are many ways of getting a line on a variety, yet there is no better way than to go and see the variety growing. If you are unable to do this you will have to depend on the reports you can gather from the shows from time to time. This, again, is not altogether satisfactory, because the very point you want most to get at cannot be brought out at any exhibition of cut blooms. True, you can see how the blooms compare with others in quality, in keeping, etc., but you cannot tell whether that bunch of flowers was cut from 100 plants or 5,000 and you don't know how many blooms were discarded when these were selected.

By watching the exhibition reports you will be able to see whether a variety comes in late or early, but you cannot tell whether or not it is a free bloomer; whether it will pay the grower a fair rental for the bench space it takes up. As is well known to those who have attended exhibitions and bought the prize winners, it is not always the varieties that make the finest show that prove to be the most profitable. In fact, the show reports are very misleading in that way. Many a first-class bread-and-butter variety is entirely outclassed by the more showy ones and of course it suffers at the hands of the reporter, when really out of the whole bunch it might be the most profitable to grow. These varieties are usually taken up and pushed the second and third year, after they have forced recognition by sheer persistence, while those fine looking prize winners are reluctantly discarded after a year or two.

Fortunately the varieties with the enormous sales do not always prove unprofitable; frequently one proves worthy of the confidence the growers have placed in it, like, for instance, Enchantress. Surely no grower who bought Enchantress ever regretted it.

How many to buy of each variety is a question each one must answer for himself. It will depend on many conditions. If you are a retail grower you may not grow more than a house or two of carnations and you may want only enough to see what they are like and how they behave with you. If you run across a desirable one you can buy a few hundred the second year. If you are a wholesale grower you should have enough to make a good lot for the next season of any one that proves worthy. Those who make a specialty of rooted cuttings of course want a big lot of any good thing and it pays them to investigate thoroughly before buying and then plunge into whatever looks best. Even these men are tripped up occasionally, after looking a variety over carefully on its home place. We do not buy less than 100 of any variety, because it seems one can size up a variety better when there are that many or more. Often some are lost one way or another.

Does it pay to buy the new varieties? From our own experience I would say, most emphatically, yes. Perhaps we have been more careful in buying than the average, but anyway we have tried to follow the suggestion made above. Every season we buy many varieties, some we know but little of, before we see them here and we always get enough good ones every season to more than pay up for what the poor ones lost us. Then, too, we know how all of them behaved for us in our soil and climate and we are not in danger in the future of investing in a variety that failed with us. This knowledge alone we consider pays for what we invested. We find that in these days of high grade blooms the grower has to keep his stock up to the top notch, and he can do this only by substituting the improved varieties for the older ones, as well as adopting every improved method of culture. Suppose we were still growing Lizzie McGowan, Silver Spray, Grace Wilder, Portia, etc., who would buy our stock?

There are those who think that after a variety has been out a year or two and has done well everywhere it is time enough for them to buy. This is a mistaken idea and really loses money. If your neighbor starts with 100 plants and the variety does well with him he can make 1,000 for the next season. You visit his place and see the variety and if you want to have as many as he has they will cost you $50 or $60 and you don't know how it is going to do for you. He knows its habits and you don't, so he stands a much better chance of growing it well the next season. If he bought five varieties and only got one good one he is still ahead of you in money and in a few years' time he will have the reputation of being progressive and up-to-date and you will be one of the trailers. You will find that those who have bought the new varieties consistently in the past are the ones who are now the most liberal buyers, and those who are disgruntled are the ones who plunged spasmodically and missed it almost regularly.

NO BLOOMS.

Our carnations are Boston Market, Lawson and Flamingo. They were planted in the house the middle of August. They look healthy and strong. The temperature of the house at night is from 50 to 55 degrees; during the day to 60 degrees. When the sun is shining it is sometimes 65 degrees. The ventilators are open part of each day, but the plants do not bloom as freely as they should. We hope you can help us overcome the difficulty.

J. T.

I shall be very thankful if you can tell me what I can do for my carnations, as they do not bloom. The plants are growing and look healthy and good, but they do not throw any buds. I have several kinds, one no better than the other. I have been using bone meal and air-slaked lime, and the temperature has been run up to 52 degrees. They were planted in August.

J. W.

Boston Market and Lawson are, as a rule, very free bloomers and at this time of the year ought to be in full crop. Flamingo is a late bloomer and many growers last season did not get a bloom until toward spring. It is hard to say just what may have caused your plants to behave as you say, since they are growing strong and healthy. Your temperatures are right. All you can do is to promote a sturdy growth and in time they will come with a crop of buds and bloom. I would run a little on the dry side for a week or ten days. That will encourage them to make buds, but you cannot induce them to go right to blooming. If you are willing to sacrifice half of a later crop in order to get a crop sooner, then cut back about half of the shoots that are on the plants. That will cause the rest to grow more rapidly and you will get a crop sooner, though it will be only half as large. Sometimes running a knife through the soil between the rows across the bench will help, as it causes a slight check by cutting the long roots. It is at such times that the grower is tempted to adopt radical measures to get results, but it will pay you to go carefully. As the days get longer and the sun gets stronger, they will come along faster and the crop will come.

Carnation Range at the New Plant of G. Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich.

McKINLEY DAY.

It is time to begin to advertise McKinley day to the public. The date is January 29 and its near approach should be called to the attention of every local newspaper man. Put a neat card in your window announcing the date. There promise to be large supplies of carnations this year and a good business can be done. Raising prices for this occasion will be against the best interests of the trade, so long as the observance of the day is not a thoroughly established custom.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The complete schedule for the fifteenth annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society has been mailed to members. The meeting and exhibition will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston,

January 24 and 25. The exhibits must be staged by 1 p. m. on the opening day. The principal competition will be for the Lawson gold medal, but there are a number of very attractive special premiums. The judges are W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood, Ill.; Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; Eugene Dailedouze, Flatbush, N. Y.

Aside from the routine business of the society the new by-laws will be up for adoption and there will be papers as follows: "Carnations from a Retailer's Point of View," by Thomas F. Galvin, Boston; "Carnation Breeding," by Prof. H. F. Hall, Durham College, N. H.; "Carnations in the Rocky Mountains," by J. A. Valentine, Denver. A paper will also be read by a wholesale man, giving his point of view.

A MICHIGAN PLANT.

The new plant of G. Van Bochove & Bro., Kalamazoo, Mich., is located on South Portage street, within the city limits, on a thirty-acre tract of land that is admirably suited for the business. The greenhouses are connected with a 6-inch pipe to the city water main and by the system installed a steady pressure of sixty pounds is maintained.

Roses and carnations are the only crops grown on the new place, bulbs, mums and other miscellaneous stock being grown at their old plant on Third street. With the addition of this new plant this firm now has about 100,000 feet of glass.

The new houses are 300 feet long and twenty-seven feet wide, with gutters seven feet high, and sloping from the center to each end. There are four benches five feet wide to each house. The photographs reproduced give a very good view of the manner of construction.

The heating plant is contained in a brick boiler room, which is large enough for additional boilers. There is now installed two 125-horse power horizontal tubular boilers, connected to an 8-inch main steam feed pipe with a 6-inch regulating valve, giving perfect control of the steam pressure in the houses. The heating plant and houses are planned so that in future additions nothing need be changed.

Stock is doing very well in these houses and the owners are well satisfied with them. The Richmond rose is well thought of, and plantings of this variety will be increased and Meteor correspondingly diminished. Other roses will be planted in about the usual amounts.

In carnations the following varieties will be dropped: F. Burki, Glacier, Her Majesty, Indianapolis, Fair Maid, Prosperity, Bradt, Armazindy, Harry Fenn, Joost, and possibly Fiancee. The promising new varieties will be given a trial. Plantings of Lady Bountiful, Queen, White Lawson and Enchantress will be increased.

MR. HARTSHORNE'S VIEW.

Considerable free advertising has been given to Carnation Aristocrat by the daily press all over the country. We florists at one time used to figure such stories of $30,000 and $40,000 for a new carnation as absurd and hurtful, and were ashamed of them when questioned by the public regarding their reliability. But of late years we have come to realize that these same stories have advertised and helped our business to a considerable extent, and have hurt no one in the least. Let me state, however, that neither the originator, Mr. Witterstaetter, nor the Chicago Carnation Co. is seeking notoriety by these methods. The price my company has paid for Aristocrat has etc., but you cannot tell whether that bunch of flowers was cut from 100 plants or 5,000 and you don't know how many blooms were discarded when these were selected.

By watching the exhibition reports you will be able to see whether a variety comes in late or early, but you cannot tell whether or not it is a free bloomer; whether it will pay the grower a fair rental for the bench space it takes up. As is well known to those who have attended exhibitions and bought the prize winners, it is not always the varieties that make the finest show that prove to be the most profitable. In fact, the show reports are very misleading in that way. Many a first-class bread-and-butter variety is entirely outclassed by the more showy ones and of course it suffers at the hands of the reporter, when really out of the whole bunch it might be the most profitable to grow. These varieties are usually taken up and pushed the second and third year, after they have forced recognition by sheer persistence, while those fine looking prize winners are reluctantly discarded after a year or two.

Fortunately the varieties with the enormous sales do not always prove unprofitable; frequently one proves worthy of the confidence the growers have placed in it, like, for instance, Enchantress. Surely no grower who bought Enchantress ever regretted it.

How many to buy of each variety is a question each one must answer for himself. It will depend on many conditions. If you are a retail grower you may not grow more than a house or two of carnations and you may want only enough to see what they are like and how they behave with you. If you run across a desirable one you can buy a few hundred the second year. If you are a wholesale grower you should have enough to make a good lot for the next season of any one that proves worthy. Those who make a specialty of rooted cuttings of course want a big lot of any good thing and it pays them to investigate thoroughly before buying and then plunge into whatever looks best. Even these men are tripped up occasionally, after looking a variety over carefully on its home place. We do not buy less than 100 of any variety, because it seems one can size up a variety better when there are that many or more. Often some are lost one way or another.

Does it pay to buy the new varieties? From our own experience I would say, most emphatically, yes. Perhaps we have been more careful in buying than the average, but anyway we have tried to follow the suggestion made above. Every season we buy many varieties, some we know but little of, before we see them here and we always get enough good ones every season to more than pay up for what the poor ones lost us. Then, too, we know how all of them behaved for us in our soil and climate and we are not in danger in the future of investing in a variety that failed with us. This knowledge alone we consider pays for what we invested. We find that in these days of high grade blooms the grower has to keep his stock up to the top notch, and he can do this only by substituting the improved varieties for the older ones, as well as adopting every improved method of culture. Suppose we were still growing Lizzie McGowan, Silver Spray, Grace Wilder, Portia, etc., who would buy our stock?

There are those who think that after a variety has been out a year or two and has done well everywhere it is time enough for them to buy. This is a mistaken idea and really loses money. If your neighbor starts with 100 plants and the variety does well with him he can make 1,000 for the next season. You visit his place and see the variety and if you want to have as many as he has they will cost you $50 or $60 and you don't know how it is going to do for you. He knows its habits and you don't, so he stands a much better chance of growing it well the next season. If he bought five varieties and only got one good one he is still ahead of you in money and in a few years' time he will have the reputation of being progressive and up-to-date and you will be one of the trailers. You will find that those who have bought the new varieties consistently in the past are the ones who are now the most liberal buyers, and those who are disgruntled are the ones who plunged spasmodically and missed it almost regularly.

NO BLOOMS.

Our carnations are Boston Market Lawson and Flamingo. They were planted in the house the middle of August. They look healthy and strong. The temperature of the house at night is from 50 to 55 degrees; during the day to 60 degrees. When the sun is shining it is sometimes 65 degrees. The ventilators are open part of each day but the plants do not bloom as freely as they should. We hope you can help us overcome the difficulty.

J. T.

I shall be very thankful if you can tell me what I can do for my carnations as they do not bloom. The plants are growing and look healthy and good, but they do not throw any buds. I have several kinds, one no better than the other. I have been using bone meal and air slaked lime, and the temperature has been run up to 52 degrees. They were planted in August.

J. W.

Boston Market and Lawson are, as a rule, very free bloomers and at this time of the year ought to be in full crop. Flamingo is a late bloomer and many growers last season did not get a bloom until toward spring. It is hard to say just what may have caused your plants to behave as you say, since they are growing strong and healthy. Your temperatures are right. All you can do is promote a sturdy growth and in time they will come with a crop of buds and bloom. I would run a little on the dry side for a week or ten days. That will encourage them to make buds, but you cannot induce them to go right to blooming. If you are willing to sacrifice half of a later crop in order to get a crop sooner, then cut back about half of the shoots that are on the plants. That will cause the rest to grow more rapidly and you will get a crop sooner, though it will be only half as large. Sometimes running a knife through the soil between the rows across the bench will help, as it causes a slight check by cutting the long roots. It is at such times that the grower is tempted to adopt radical measures to get results, but it will pay you to go carefully. As the days get longer and the sun gets stronger, they will come along faster and the crop will come.

MCKINLEY DAY.

It is time to begin to advertise McKinley day to the public. The date is January 29 and its near approach should be called to the attention of every local newspaper man. Put a neat card in your window announcing the date. There will be large supplies of carnations this year and a good business can be done. Raising prices for this occasion will be against the best interests of the trade, so long as the observance of McKinley day is not a thoroughly established custom.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The complete schedule for the fifteenth annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society has been mailed to members. The meeting and exhibition will be held in Horticultural hall, Boston,

January 21 and 25. The exhibits must be staged by 1 p. m. on the opening day. The principal competition will be for the Lawson gold medal, but there are a number of very attractive special premiums. The judges are W. N. Rudd, Mt. Greenwood, Ill.; Wm. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass.; Eugene Dailladonze, Flatbush, N. Y.

Aside from the routine business of the society the new by-laws will be up for adoption and there will be papers as follows: "Carnations from a Retailer's Point of View," by Thomas F. Galvin, Boston; "Carnation Breeding," by Prof. H. F. Hall, Durham College, N. H.; "Carnations in the Rocky Mountains," by J. A. Valentine, Denver. A paper will also be read by a wholesale man, giving his point of view.

Let me state, however, that neither the originator, Mr. Witterstaetter, nor the Chicago Carnation Co. is seeking notoriety by these methods. The price my company has paid for Aristocrat has not been divulged, nor do we intend it shall be, as that part of it concerns no one but the parties to the contract. It is hardly necessary for me to tell the florists that no such sum was paid for it; at the same time, we both hope and believe that Aristocrat will be worth all and more than $40,000 to the trade.

I personally have watched Aristocrat for the past three or four years and have seen it growing under various conditions and at different times of the year. I was so impressed with it last season, long before the January carnation meeting, that I tried to purchase it, but Mr. Witterstaetter turned a deaf ear to all my proposals, saying he intended to convince himself by a further and thorough trial; that Aristocrat should not leave his place, either by selling the variety outright or by dissemination, until he was sure it was all he thought it to be. As the variety is now five years old, he has been able to grow it in quantity. Our highest hopes, as to its value, in every respect have been realized; hence, the sale (the greatest that ever was). In color it is a trifle lighter than the Lawson and very much brighter, and is expected to displace that grand old variety in the hearts and greenhouses of everyone.

When I first saw the Lawson, and even after my company failed to get possession of it, I predicted that it would be grown after all carnations of that day were out of business. It was hard for me to make many florists believe that, but my judgment, as you know, was not misplaced. I now claim that Aristocrat is just as far superior to present day varieties as Lawson was in its day, and will live longer than any variety I know of, but to be thoroughly appreciated it should be seen growing at Witterstaetter's at Cincinnati, who will make an attempt to show it in good shape at Boston this month, notwithstanding the fact that his trip leaves at noon on the Monday and the flowers will not be judged until Wednesday afternoon. It can also be seen at Mr. Nicholson's, Framingham, Mass., in a small quantity.

EBLE DESIGNS.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs of two of the prize winning designs at the fall exhibition of the New Orleans Horticultural Society. They were made by Chas. Eble, who also won first prize on basket of chrysanthemums, on hand bouquet of chrysanthemums and on group of palms.

The first of these illustrations shows a parasol of chrysanthemums which was one of the unique features of the exhibition. The other illustration is of a basket of American Beauty and Richmond roses with lily of the valley and adiantum.

JOHN SCOTT'S ADDRESS.

At his inauguration as president of the New York Florists' Club, January 8, Mr. Scott spoke as follows:

Permit me again to thank you for the high honor you have done me in electing me as your president for the year 1906. It is an honor at all times to be appreciated, but doubly so when it comes entirely unsolicited. As I intimated to you on election night, my best endeavor will always be put forth for the club's welfare, and I ask the full support of the other officers of the club and the committees that I will appoint, to the end that the present may prove the banner year in the history of our organization. As you all know, the club is in a flourishing condition, standing second to none in the country. My earnest desire is to maintain the present high standard and, if possible, to advance it. I would ask the hearty co-operation of every member. It is only by all taking an interest in our work and the securing of as many members as possible that we can hope for any progress.

I should like also to repeat what several of my worthy predecessors have already urged, namely, that when a subject is up for discussion, every member having an opinion to express thereon should do so. It should always be remembered that it is more beneficial to the members themselves, as well as adding so to the interest of our meetings, to discuss the club's affairs in the proper place and at the proper time.

The legislative committee, one of the most important in the club, has not had much to do, I believe, during the past couple of years, but I know that they will continue to look out for the interests of the club and its members as in the past.

One of the causes largely contributing to the success of our meetings has been the exhibits which have been brought to the club-room. This is a feature that I should like to see continued and more fully developed, and in order to do so I shall appoint a committee, to be known as the exhibition committee, whose duty it shall be to procure exhibits and endeavor to have a good showing every meeting night. It is too much to expect the committee of awards to get the flowers and plants to the meeting and judge them also.

Another thing of importance, and which I think is a big drawing card to the meetings, is a reading of essays and illustrated lectures. For this purpose I will appoint a committee, to be known as the essay committee, whose duty it will be to secure essayists, and to provide at least one illustrated lecture during the year.

Too much credit cannot be given to the committee of awards. Their work has proved of great value to the club and to the exhibitors. In this regard I will mention my own case. The award made by our committee to my fern was one that I prized most highly and I am really unable to say at the present moment just how much benefit I received from it; but it was the comments I heard on this report which made me realize, more than ever, the great importance of the endorsement of the New York Florists' Club, an importance not only local, but national, and even international. The rules adopted March 13, 1905, covering exhibits in the club-room, are very explicit and a copy of the same should be in the hands of every member. Certificates of merit, cultural certificates and cards of honorable mention are awarded to exhibits made before the club, and from a grower's standpoint, I believe, securing one of these honors should be an incentive toward having even more exhibits of flowers, plants and novelties than we have had.

Speaking of flower shows, the experience of the club in the past does not hold out much encouragement to go ahead with another show. However, we have a considerable number of new members since our last exhibition, and perhaps some new suggestions or ideas may be brought forward whereby a show can be held without expense to the club. I would not like to see the club's funds used for this purpose. I do know that every effort was made at the club's recent shows to make them a success in every way, but was futile. I realize the general need of having our products placed before the public by some such means as exhibitions, and would be in favor of holding a small show in a small hall, or other building, where the expense would be light and the exhibition self-supporting. I do not know whether it could be carried out or not on the proposed lines. This is merely a suggestion. This matter I will leave in the hands of the members, who, I feel sure, will not suggest anything definite thereon without full and careful deliberation.

We are all aware of the very great disadvantage under which New York labors in not having a horticultural hall similar to those possessed by such cities as Boston and Philadelphia. Would it not be well worth the while of this club to discuss this matter fully, looking to the ways and means to secure a building of this kind.

The house and entertainment committee has rendered us noble service in the past, and has done much for the development of the social side of the club's meetings. Such a valuable adjunct tending to our pleasure and enjoyment should be continued and encouraged, as I think members coming to the meetings appreciate the social part of the evening. I know that the ladies enjoy themselves here and I hope that we will have many more ladies' nights in the future.

The annual outing of the club held during the past three or four years has spoken for itself. It is the one day in the year when the members can lay aside their duties and cares and have a little recreation. There are many members who do not realize how much interest is taken in this event by the young folks, and is it any wonder that the older people are happy when they see the younger element enjoying themselves? The outing to be held this year I hope to see a big success and trust it will have the full support of all the members.

In closing, I wish to say that my time, as far as possible, during the year will be at the service of the committees and officers, for mutual counsel and suggestions, to further any plan that will benefit the New York Florists' Club. I would say just one more word, and that is, that the members should take advantage of the question box and use it more freely than has hitherto been the case. I shall take pleasure in referring all questions submitted to members whom I may consider qualified to answer the same, and feel sure that their services in this respect will be cheerfully given.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, January 10.—Cucumbers, $1 to $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 30c to 40c case; head lettuce, $2 to $3 bbl.; tomatoes, $1.25 to $2.25 case.

Boston, January 9.—Cucumbers, $3 to $11 box; lettuce, 50c to 75c doz.; radishes, $1.50 box; tomatoes, 40c lb.; parsley, $1.50 to $1.75 box; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per four-pound package.

NEW YORK, January 9.—Boston cucumbers, $1 to $1.50 doz.; head lettuce, 25c to 75c doz.; radishes, $2 to $3 100 bunches; mushrooms, 10c to 40c lb.; tomatoes, 10c to 25c lb.

RADISHES.

Although these are among the earliest of winter crops and give quick returns, it is seldom that the markets are overstocked with them, and well-grown radishes can usually find a ready market at a remunerative price. Though a first-class house is not essential for their cultivation, the brighter the house the better it will be for the crop. Soil is the great essential in the cultivation of radishes, that of a light, sandy nature being the most suitable. In this they make a free, clean growth, whereas in a heavy, stiff soil the growth will be correspondingly stiff and the radishes are apt to come more or less deformed.

Little fertilizing of the soil is needed, as their chief requirement is water, but in the case of very poor soil a little well-rotted barnyard manure will be helpful; this, however, should not be mixed with the surface soil, but should be buried at least two inches under the surface, so that the root and not the bulb will come in contact with it.

A very important matter is the procuring of good, fresh seed. Such seed will come up quickly and strong. My attention was called the other day to a crop of radishes which had come up very slowly and many of the first leaves were crumpled and deformed. At first sight I thought they were attacked by aphids at a very early stage, but on close examination I found them clear of this pest. The soil and temperature conditions were all right, but on examining a sample of the seed used, it was plainly to be seen that here was where the trouble lay. The grower was inclined to blame the seedsman, but said he had had the seed about a year in his possession and during that time it had not been kept under the best of conditions. The only thing to do under the circumstances was to throw the seed away and procure a fresh stock, for it was only a waste of time and space to attempt to grow a profitable crop from this old seed.

When good, fresh seed is procured it should be sown thinly, so that the radishes can all mature without thinning before the first are ready for market. The only insect enemy that troubles radishes is greenfly, which will often develop when the atmosphere is kept too dry. For its eradication I have found nothing better than a light application of hydrocyanic acid gas. One-half ounce of cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of space in the house is sufficient to destroy this soft insect. If the grower is unaccustomed to the use of the gas, smoking with tobacco may be resorted to, but it will take about three smokings to destroy the fly, and even then it will not make as clean a job as the gas would. Still I would not advise the use of gas until the operator has made a careful study of its strength and is fully alive to the dangers that may arise from the careless use of it.

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, January 10. Cucumbers, $1 to $1.75 doz.; leaf lettuce, 30c to 40c case; head lettuce, $2 to $3 bbl.; tomatoes, $1.25 to $2.25 case.

BOSTON, January 9. Cucumbers, $3 to $11 box; lettuce, 50c to 75c doz.; radishes, $1.50 box; tomatoes, 10c lb.; parsley, $1.50 to $1.75 box; mushrooms, $1.50 to $2.50 per four pound package.

RADISHES.

Although these are among the earliest of winter crops and give quick returns, it is seldom that the markets are overstocked with them, and well grown radishes can usually find a ready market at a remunerative price. Though a first class house is not essential for their cultivation, the brighter the house the better it will be for the crop. Soil is the great essential in the cultivation of radishes, that of a light, sandy nature being the most suitable. In this they make a free, clean growth, whereas in a heavy, stiff soil the growth will be correspondingly stiff and the radishes are apt to come more or less deformed.

Little fertilizing of the soil is needed, as their chief requirement is water, but in the case of very poor soil a little well rotted barnyard manure will be helpful; this, however, should not be mixed with the surface soil, but should be buried at least two inches under the surface, so that the root and not the bulb will come in contact with it.

A very important matter is the procuring of good, fresh seed. Such seed will come up quickly and strong. My attention was called the other day to a crop of radishes which had come up very slowly and many of the first leaves were crumpled and deformed. At first sight I thought they were attacked by aphids at a very early stage, but on close examination I found them clear of this pest. The soil and temperature conditions were all right, but on examining a sample of the seed used, it was plainly to be seen that here was where the trouble lay. The grower was inclined to blame the seedsmen, but said he had had the seed about a year in his possession and during that time it had not been kept under the best of conditions. The only thing to do under the circumstances was to throw the seed away and procure a fresh stock, for it was only a waste of time and space to attempt to grow a profitable crop from this old seed.

When good, fresh seed is procured it should be sown thickly, so that the radishes can all mature without thinning before the first are ready for market. The only insect enemy that troubles radishes is greenfly, which will often be found when the atmosphere is kept too dry. For its eradication I have found nothing better than a light application of cyanide or evanile acid gas. One half ounce of cyanide to 1,000 cubic feet of space in the house is sufficient to destroy this soft-bodied pest. If the grower is unacquainted with the use of the gas, smoking with tobacco may be resorted to, but it will take about three smokings to destroy the fly, and even then it will not make as clean a job as the gas would. Still I do not advise the use of gas until the operator has made a careful study of its strength and is fully alive to the dangers that may arise from the careless use of it.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED. —

[Window Gardening in the School-room, by Herman B. Dorner, B. S., published by Purdue University, La Fayette, Ind.]

In the foreword which accompanies this neatly printed, well illustrated and carefully indexed little pamphlet, W. E. Stone, president of Purdue University, says it is "intended to be an aid to teachers in the selection and care of plants in their school-rooms. The author, who is a practical florist, has sought to avoid reference to all but the simplest materials and methods and has addressed himself to those having little knowledge or experience in such matters. Little need be said as to the cultural and æsthetic value of plants and flowers in the school-room. Scarcely anyone would maintain that a reasonable amount of time and attention to such matters by teachers and pupils would be misspent."

The pamphlet is directly in line with the ideas presented at the last S. A. F. convention, at which time a committee was appointed to prepare a plan for a text-book to be placed in the schools of the country. The convention outlined a more pretentious publication than the pamphlet from Purdue, but Mr. Dorner's work makes an excellent beginning. It goes as thoroughly as need be into the subject of selection of window plants, about watering, propagation, fertilizers, etc., with chapters on some of the commoner kinds of window plants. The operations are illustrated by half-tones. It need scarcely be said that the directions are sane and practical. It is to be hoped that means have been provided for placing the pamphlet in the hands of every school-teacher in Indiana and much good would undoubtedly come of it if the distribution could be still more general.

OBITUARY.

Death of Joseph Kift.

The death of Joseph Kift, which occurred at his home in West Chester, Pa., on Thursday morning, January 4, removes from among us one of our pioneer florists, a man widely known and respected. Joseph Kift was born in Boroughbridge, Somersetshire, England, July 23, 1827. When fourteen years of age he went to Edinburgh, Scotland, where he learned to be a florist and gardener. After working there for seven years Mr. Kift started for this country in the fall of 1848. He spent the winter in New York, coming to Philadelphia in the spring of 1849, where he worked as a florist for two years. In 1851 he went to West Chester, where he established a florists' business which he has carried on continuously until the present time. In 1876 Mr. Kift established a store in the fashionable quarter of Philadelphia, 1735 Chestnut street, with his eldest son, Robert, under the firm name of Joseph Kift & Son. For many years the surplus cut flowers of the West Chester greenhouses were retailed in Philadelphia, but gradually with the development of the retail business in West Chester, the two places were run separately, Mr. Kift withdrawing from the Philadelphia firm a few years ago. Some stock still continues to come in daily.

Mr. Kift is said to be the first introducer of the famous Bermuda Easter lily. His second son, Joseph, kept purchasing the stock which he sent out. Mr. Kift grew a general collection of plants and flowers. He took a deep interest in his place, rebuilding three houses last summer in the most approved modern style. Mr. Kift was in his seventy-ninth year. He leaves a widow and four children, two sons and two daughters. Phil.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The unfortunate falling off in carnations is the feature of the cut flower market. Business is better than usual early in the year, but the demand is all for fancy roses, violets, etc. The mild, clear weather last week increased the supply of carnations. While the demand fell off prices declined rapidly, fancy varieties suffering rather more than common sorts.

Freesia is a welcome addition, S. S. Pennock having some very nice sprays. Orchids, chiefly cattleyas, have been selling well. Single daffs are more plentiful. Romans and Paper Whites are very poor stock to handle.

Various Notes.

Charles F. Edgar, of the United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., was a visitor at Berger Bros. on Monday.

P. Joseph Schembs, of Seventeenth and Wallace streets, has opened a branch store in a basement on Fifteenth street, above Chestnut.

Herman Krienburg has resigned his position with J. S. Krell.

Frank Ress, of East Girard avenue, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

J. Franklin Meehan gave a very interesting illustrated lecture on pruning trees before the Germantown Horticultural Society on Monday evening.

G. C. Watson is distributing the choice dahlia roots of the Atco farms for S. S. Pennock.

John McIntyre has taken a position with J. J. Habermehl's Sons in the Bellevue-Stratford.

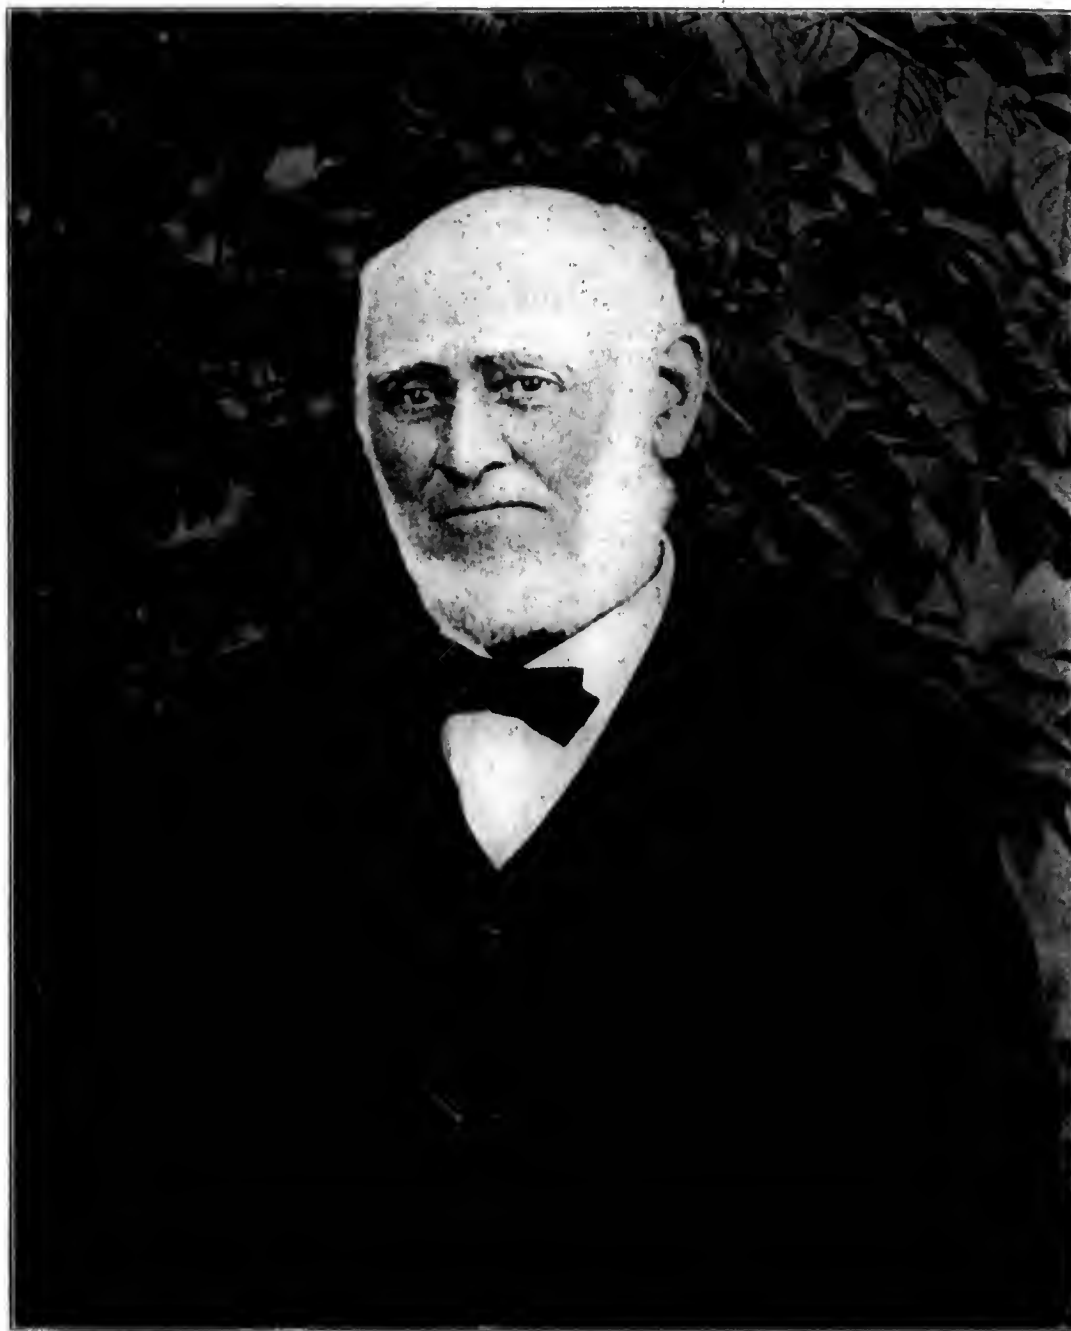

A farmers' institute meeting will be held in the lecture room at Horticultural hall, Broad street, above Spruce street, on Tuesday, January 16, both afternoon and evening. There will be an interesting series of addresses. Better come.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

The past week all the retailers have done a good business, notwithstanding that after the holidays trade in general is not expected to be good. We are now enjoying one of our fine winters, not quite so cold, but lots of snow, and it seems to be a foregone conclusion that every change in the weather brings more business, particularly in funeral work. We in the north are accustomed to cold winters, lots of snow, and when such conditions exist business is good, not only with the florist, but with all lines of trade. Prices have kept up well and it seems that the department stores have taken a brace along those lines. We learn that some of them are getting $5 and $6 a dozen for choice Richmond, while the legitimate florist is selling the same stock at $3 and $4. Killarney is commanding $2 and $3 per dozen, Maids, etc., from $2 to $3. Carnations bring $1 to $2.50 per dozen. Violets are again back to a firm price of 50 cents per bunch of twenty-five. Orchids are sometimes called for, but cannot be supplied. The high price makes it unprofitable to carry a stock of them.

Although bouquet green was held at a premium before Christmas, there is still some of it on hand. From four to a dozen cases of poor holly can be seen in each of the flower stores. Immortelle bells were also left.

Minneapolis.

A visit to the Donaldson greenhouses found James Souden in fine spirits and getting fairly well rested up after the holiday rush. His houses are the picture of neatness and good order. All of his stock looks fine. In all they have about 65,000 feet of glass, in which a general line of stock is grown, principally roses and carnations. Richmond is the only red grown outside of one bench of Beauties. They have three houses in Richmond and the stock is fine, large daily cuts being made, even during the cloudy weather. Brides and Maids are also fine and while some growers are of the opinion that the latter variety is running out, Mr. Souden has faith in it. Chatenay is grown to some extent and is very fine. The new Minneapolis rose, Miss Kate Moulton, is also there and they predict a brilliant future for it. There seems to be some discussion in these parts as to which is the best, the Moulton or the Killarney. A fine house of Enchantress carnations can be seen, and while the cut is light at the present time, within the next few weeks large numbers will be cut. Mr. Souden also has a fine bench of adiantum, grown in the bench, not potted. Thousands of fronds have been cut and still thousands remain. For a range of medium size, the houses are fine and kept up in the best possible shape, much to the credit of their superintendent, Mr. James Souden. This case is the only one known in this section where a department store has its own greenhouses.

An agreement has been made between the cemetery associations whereby they refuse to permit funerals on Sundays, and the general opinion is that this move will hurt the florists to some extent.

St. Paul.

The retailers report good business for the past week; at times some of them have had to hunt for white stock. Sunday morning orders are becoming quite heavy and retailers are, as a rule, kept fairly busy. A call on the Swanson Floral Co. found Gus Colberg resting after a heavy Sunday morning rush. Aug. Vogt, who has a store on St. Anthony Hill, where the elite of our city reside, possibly does more business Sunday morning than on many a good week day.

Henry Puvogel has some good violets and carnations. He has a new carnation house, which he was fortunate enough to get completed before zero weather struck us.

L. L. May & Co. estimate that the mild weather so far has made at least a difference of $1,000 in their coal bill. Eastern supply houses are making inquiry for lycopodium for dyeing purposes. FELIX.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions are less favorable than a week ago and prices have softened materially. The demand has not been equal to the supply and quite a number of flowers have had to be carried over each day. Roses have been in oversupply. The best Beauties average $50 per hundred, a few special Brides and Maids $12, but many of the two latter go at from $3 to $6. Carnations have made $4 for first-class stock, a few making $5. White varieties go slowest at $2. Violets vary from 60 cents to $1, only the very best making the higher figure.

Quite a number of tulips and yellow narcissi are coming, making $3 to $4 per hundred. Sweet peas vary from 50 cents to $1 according to quality, in which there is a wide range. Callas and Harrisii remain about the same and there is no change in other stock. Some very good antirrhinum and mignonette are seen in the market, also a few English primroses, myosotis and stocks.

Carnation Convention.

The reception committee from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will meet all trains on arrival at the north and south terminals and Back Bay and Trinity place railroad stations on Wednesday morning, January 24. Members of this committee will wear a red badge.

Tickets for the Copley Square hotel banquet can be had from J. W. Duncan, John K. M. L. Farquhar, Peter Fisher, David Lumsden, Alexander Montgomery, William Nicholson, Patrick Welch, James Wheeler and Edward Wood.

We hope to see a good delegation of our western friends at the convention. New England may not have as large carnation establishments as some other sections, but in quality of blooms she will be found in the forefront, as well as in seedlings.

Various Notes.

The plant and flower committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has been invited to inspect a house of the new flesh-pink carnation, Marion Pierce, at Topsfield, which attracted much favorable notice at the late chrysanthemum show.

J. J. Fee, of Jamaica Plain; E. Sutermeister, Readville; Mann Bros., Randolph, Paine Bros. and J. Tailby & Son are sending in very good bulbous stock at present, some of the tulips being especially fine for so early in the season.

Carnation night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on January 16 and other attractions in the way of exhibits, music, etc., will undoubtedly draw one of the largest crowds the club has yet seen. No member can afford to miss this meeting and the good things it will afford.

Some good gladioli of the Gandavensis type are being marketed by Lively & Bond.

At a meeting of the directors of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on January 6, five new life members were elected. It was voted to ask the state legislature to set aside $25,000 from the gypsy and brown tail moth appropriations to be awarded to a California gentleman who offers to introduce natural parasites to chase out the pests and who does not ask for one cent of the money unless the parasites do what he claims. If some such parasite can be discovered it will prevent the deforestation of a large part of this and other states which the rapid increase of the pests threaten.

Alexander McKay, of South Framingham, is marketing extra fine Prosperity and Enchantress carnations and is cutting from a batch of 7,000 very fine freesias.

Thomas Stock, of Dorchester, has his usual fine lot of double bouvardia.

F. J. Holmes, of Saugus, is bringing in some extra fine antirrhinums.

William Nicholson has extra fine freesia. Some of R. Fischer's strain have remarkable stems.

Houghton & Clark are showing some good Zygopetalum Mackayi and Dendrobium formosum giganteum.

Pink Patten carnation is showing up extra well at Patten & Co.'s establishment at present.

A. Roper's variegated seedling carnation, Chester Roper, is even more floriferous than last year, which hardly seemed possible. He has some fine seedlings coming on which we hope to see at the A. C. S. meeting.

David Lumsden has retired from the firm of A. Leuthy & Co., in which he has been a partner for some time. Mr. Lumsden is a first-class plantsman and we hope may stay in this section.

A dull thud heard in the markets on the morning of January 3 was occasioned by the fall in carnation prices.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

MELROSE, MASS.—T. H. Kingston has gone out of the florists' business.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.—Joseph S. Silva has taken out a building permit for a greenhouse.

ERIE, PA.—S. Alfred Baur, for some years in business here, is now located at Atlanta, Ga.

LYNCHBURG, VA.—Miss Annie McCaron has opened a very neat flower store at 1017 Main street.

OWENSBORO, KY.—Miss Katherine Nanz has taken charge of the business of her father, the late C. G. Nanz.

AURORA, ILL.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. will add two rose houses 22x100 early in the spring, using concrete foundations and iron posts and gutters.

PONTIAC, MICH.—A. B. Lewis has a lemon tree which serves to attract much attention to his place. It is ten feet high and the lemons are larger than grapefruit.

PAXTON, ILL.—E. B. Morgan & Co., are building a new house 14x130 on the south side of their range and in the spring will add several houses on the north side.

CARTHAGE, ILL.—Samuel Stone died December 27 of typhoid fever, with which Mrs. Stone also was ill at the same time. She is left with seven children and the management of the greenhouse business.

LINDENWOLD, N. J.—S. E. & H. D. Moore have added a boiler house and show room to their plant the past season. They handle nursery stock of all kinds, as well as miscellaneous greenhouse stock.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—At the St. Louis World's Fair flower show C. H. Gebhardt won a gold medal for his employer, H. G. Selfridge, and for himself a silver medal, the diplomas representing which were received January 4, 1906.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Mrs. O. A. Clapp, who went out of business some time ago because of inability to secure water, has obtained connection with the city water supply and now has every prospect of building up a fine business.

ROSEDALE, KAN.—Chas. H. Ackerman has removed here from Kansas City and engaged in market gardening. He has two houses, about 4,000 feet of glass, which will be devoted to vegetables. Next summer additional houses will be built for cut flowers.

CLARINDA, IA.—J. V. Pfander, of this city, and Wm. Pierce, of Nebraska City, Neb., have bought of Claude Welch the property known as the Clarinda Greenhouses, and are now conducting the business. Mr. Pierce owns greenhouses at Nebraska City, which will for a time be managed by his wife, but he hopes to sell out there and remove his family to this city.

INDEPENDENCE, KAN.—W. R. Mattock is building a house 18x60 for carnations.

COATESVILLE, PA.—Jas. Brown, Jr., is building a house 28x104 feet for carnations.

WAVERLY, IA.—Elmer Reeves has been appointed director of the new department of floriculture at the state fair.

EAST TAWAS, MICH.—L. Allison is closing out his florists' business here, intending to seek a new location.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—The F. M. Johnson greenhouses have been sold to D. C. Lorimer, who, associated with O. H. Hall, will conduct them under the name of Lorimer & Hall.

DES MOINES, IA.—Two Greeks, who recently started a flower store here, quarreled January 2 and one attacked the other with a pair of shears, at least so Louis Fischer complained of Tony Marapolos.

SEDALIA, MO.—Gelven & Son report Christmas trade, both local and shipping, as up to the average. The supply of carnations was away ahead of any previous year but the rose crop was about a week late.

HELENA, MONT.—Chas. Otto Horn, of the Grandon Greenhouses, reports the holiday business as excellent, prices if anything a little lower than in 1904. There has been a large increase in the sale of blooming plants and bulbous stock in pans.

MARION, IA.—George Hutton says that he has educated his people to expect good Enchantress, Lawson, Estelle and such carnations at moderate prices and that when prices are as high as they were at the holidays it almost wholly shuts off the trade.

NAPOLEON, O.—R. W. Hartman says that his business in 1905 was about one-third larger than in 1904. He has about 10,000 feet of glass and grows carnations and general stock. He has just rebuilt one house, 14x100, and from the way the demand is increasing expects 1906 to show still better results.

TITUSVILLE, PA.—Christmas trade was very good. Quality of stock was good and good prices prevailed, but supply was short in holly, carnations and roses. In potted plants, palms, ferns, poinsettias and primroses sold well. W. B. Bay says the new year is coming in with a number of weddings and good stock is still short of the demand. The weather is excellent.

EAST MAUCH CHUNK, PA.—Robert B. Williams is getting on his feet again, both literally and financially. A year ago he fell through the floor of his greenhouse and sustained injuries which laid him up for several months. While he was unable to attend to business his boy neglected the fires one night and the place froze up. He is a hard worker and since getting about again slowly has been restocking as fast as a lack of capital would permit.

Because of the new wage scale which the Printers' Union has enforced upon those employers not willing to suffer interruption of their business, especially because of that part of the scale which makes overtime practically prohibitive, it is of first importance that the Review obtain its advertising "copy" earlier.

It is therefore earnestly requested that all advertisers mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday morning, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

LIBERTY, MO.—Paul Stark says his holiday trade was good, especially plant sales.

BOWLING GREEN, KY.—R. L. Brashear opened a down-town store for the holidays and did a very satisfactory business.

ATLANTIC, IA.—Chas. Olson says that holiday trade was all he could take care of and prices were better than in 1904. Plants sold well and so did holly and greens. The weather was fine.

ITHACA, MICH.—F. W. Brooke says the holiday trade was good, with better prices than a year ago. Carnations were in great demand and scarce. Primroses, narcissi and hyacinths sold very well. The business in this vicinity is growing very nicely.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Toward the end of last week things became pretty slow all along the line, but this week business started in briskly and there is every indication of a considerable period of prosperity. The cold weather has served to reduce production and is an aid in maintaining prices. Shipping trade is quite active this week and local business fair.

The rose cuts, while not increasing rapidly, are very much improved in quality. Those who need fancy stock can be accommodated. Beauty cuts are just about equal to the demand. There are carnations for all requirements. Prices have stiffened a little this week, but appear very reasonable in comparison with what they were most of the past three weeks. A very large part of the receipts grade as strictly fancy.

Violets are coming in heavily and the demand is slow. Quality is good and prices are low, so that an increase in the demand is pretty sure to be felt before long. Easter lilies are coming in more heavily. There are plenty of callas. Many tulips are now seen, red, yellow and white, but they do not sell very fast. Mignonette is abundant, also stevia. A few sweet peas are seen. The market for green goods continues active.

Retailers Organize.

On Monday evening there was a meeting of the retail florists at the Heyworth building, called to order by A. Lange, with forty present, a number of the leading houses being represented by employees. Temporary officers were chosen as follows: Chairman, George Walther; secretary, Henry Klunder; treasurer, Charles Fisk. On motion of Ed Enders it was voted to proceed to the organization of the Chicago Retail Florists' Association. A committee was elected to prepare by-laws and plan of organization and to constitute the first board of directors. The names selected were those of E. Wienhoeber, C. A. Samuelson, Wm. Kidwell, George Asmus, A. Lange, C. H. Fisk and W. J. Smyth. Kidwell, Lange and Fisk were present, the others represented by employees.

A member raised the point as to whether the organization should be a secret one. He advocated secrecy. This precipitated a general debate as to the purposes of the association. Many deplored the phraseology of the call, which was to the effect that the object was the discussion of the "red violet" business among the wholesalers. It was declared to be the purpose to establish a permanent organization for the good of the whole trade. Emphasis was laid upon the fact that no strife of any kind is contemplated and that all efforts in the direction of instituting reforms would be along the line of friendly co-operation. Those who took this view urged that the greatest possible publicity be given the objects and activities of the organization, and their arguments prevailed.

Dues were fixed at $3 per year. Everybody laid down a dollar and the meeting adjourned until next Monday at the same place.

There is a large field for such an organization and much good may be expected if the conservatism of the first meeting is continued.

Club Doings.

The Florists' Club will meet this evening. The program committee will announce "doings" at Wieselman's, Clark and Devon avenue, January 18, at 7:30 p. m. This will be such an affair as the successful outside meetings held last year. There will be music and refreshments in addition to oratory.

Horticultural Society.

The Horticultural Society held its annual meeting Monday afternoon. Officers were elected as follows: President, E. G. Uihlein; vice-presidents, H. G. Selfridge, Ernst Wienhoeber, W. A. Peterson; secretary and treasurer, W. N. Rudd; executive committee, J. C. Vaughan, Edgar Sanders, N. P. Miller, R. H. Warder, Geo. Asmus, E. A. Kanst, P. J. Hauswirth, Leonard Kill.

E. A. Kanst positively declined reelection as assistant secretary. He was given a special vote of thanks for his five years' faithful and efficient work.

The executive committee was authorized to hold a show next fall. The show for 1904 made a loss of $22 and for 1905 a profit of $4,794.88. The receipts for the year were $15,352.92, much the largest on record and there is $5,800 in the treasury.

The annual meeting of the Flower Growers Co. was held January 3. Officers were re-elected as follows: President, Emil Buettner; treasurer, F. R. Hills; secretary, Alex Henderson; financial secretary and manager, Percy Jones. In addition a vote of thanks was given for past services. The corporation is stated to be in excellent financial shape.

C. Frauenfelder is the proprietor of the Republic Floral Co., which recently opened a stand in the new Republic building.

F. R. Hills, at Maywood, is building three houses to be planted to Richmond early in the spring.

Chas. Stewart has been appointed junior steward of Columbia Lodge A. F. & A. M., just after having taken his third degree.

Mrs. A. Lange returned Monday from a visit with her parents at Omaha. She is the daughter of Mr. Swoboda, of Hess & Swoboda.

C. L. Washburn had a small tumor removed from the lower lid of his left eye on Monday.

Gus Allers, of Wietor Bros., is doing what he can for his country. The son born last week is their fourth boy and there are two girls.

A. C. Kohlbrand, of E. C. Amling's, has been on the sick list this week.

When one of the customers of Kenicott Bros. Co. opened a case of wild smilax on Monday he received the surprise of his life, for a possum took the earliest chance of escape. It has been stated that a good many of the early shipments of wild smilax were more or less in the nature of prize packages, but it is asserted that the stock now coming in is of very superior quality.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, is on the sick list.

Leonard Kill, of Peter Reinberg's, calls attention to the fine cut of Chateaux now on and Mr. Spencer hopes the Beauties will not be overlooked.

Richard Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, was at Joliet last week on Aristocrat matters, and spent Saturday in town. He had a bulge in one pocket, but denied that it was Mr. Hartshorne's roll of $35,000, only an extra handkerchief he brought along because he had a cold.

The James H. Rice Co. has the order for 4,800 boxes of glass for the Poehlmann Bros. Co. addition for 1906.

M. J. Weppner started Monday on a three months' trip south and west for the George Wittbold Co.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. has the glass and pipe on hand for an addition to their plant at New Castle. They think very highly of both Killarney and Richmond roses.

N. Weiler, of the Superior Boiler Works, who has been out of health for months, will be operated upon in a hospital this week.

George Reinberg reports a steadily increasing call for unrooted carnation cuttings.

Last Thursday evening 100 railroad men had a banquet at the Auditorium, for which a big dining car was built in the hall. Hauswirth put in an elaborate decoration.

The Elks have a celebration at the opening of a new home tonight. Ben Ruble, of Fleischman's, and P. J. Hauswirth are on the decorating committee.

Fred Weber, Jr., of St. Louis, was a visitor last week; also John Steidle, Central, Mo.; E. E. Shedd, Valparaiso, Ind.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The cut flower business has been about all that was expected for the past week; while some complain that it was rather slow others were quite busy, among them Randolph & McClements, who had a big week and wound it up Saturday night with an elaborate decoration for the Carnegie Steel Co., at the Duquesne Club.

Roses are still short and high-priced but there was quite a drop in carnations, which became very plentiful and where one wanted them in thousand lots they could be bought down. With the snow and predicted zero weather no doubt they will brace up this week. Sprenger continues scarce in this market, but all other greens are in abundance.

looking pleasant. It's a boy and he came Christmas.

A. W. Smith made up a set of bouquets for the Sellers wedding one day last week which, to say the least, were unusual. The bride's bouquet was of white roses made solid, without other foliage than a border of ferns, tied with wide, double-faced white satin ribbon. The maid of honor had solid mignonette edged with Paper White narcissi. The four bridesmaids' bouquets were made solid, the center of mignonette surrounded by a ring of Chatenay, forget-me-nots, yellow daisies, Paper White narcissi edged with stevia, all tied with long ribbon and a single flower on the ends of the ribbon. The effect was very much out of the ordinary but very pretty. One would call it colonial style, but the society editor for the daily papers called them Dresden bouquets.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening and the nomination of officers for the ensuing year was taken up. President Langhans refusing to accept a second term, John Jones, of Schenley park, received the nomination. All other old officers were renominated, and there being no opposition all will be re-elected at the next meeting. The subject for discussion was small flowers. The exhibits were then taken up. The Pittsburg Florists' Exchange showed Beauties, Queen of Edgely, baby primroses, carnations, forget-me-nots, roses, daisies and tulips. Mr. Price, gardener for J. B. Laughlin, exhibited some specially well done primulas, tulips, valley and blue coleus. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. had white snapdragon, Bon Silene and Cusin roses, baby primroses, bouvardia, single violets, tulips, white, red and yellow; Romans, Paper Whites, valley, white and pink sweet peas, Adiantum hybridum, mignonette, and red, white and pink seedling carnations from the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., which were favorably commented upon. President Langhans, who is a very modest fellow, told of the various uses of these novelties, and all in all it was a very interesting talk. Harry Bunyard was there, with his little spiel, which all enjoyed.

Monday January 29, will be McKinley day, and as it has been the custom for every one to honor the day by wearing a carnation we should all begin to call attention to it and not allow this beautiful custom to be dropped.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Good white and pink roses are bringing from $12 to $15 and while not over-plentiful, still there seem to be enough to go around. Red roses are very scarce. Carnations are selling readily at from $3 to $5. Now that bulbous stock is putting in its appearance it is hoped roses and carnations will come down a peg or two. Violets are not much in demand. Business has been very good the past few weeks. A large reception New Year's afternoon kept several of the florists especially busy.

1905 in Detroit.

The year 1905 will long be remembered by many Detroit florists, by some with a smile and others a sigh, but speaking from a business standpoint, it has been a banner year. With the exception of a little lull this fall, business was very good with everyone. As in most cities, carnations have been very scarce this fall, therefore commanding a good price, and having no street fakirs to cut prices, people seem to have got out of the habit of looking for cheap stuff. Through the scarcity of carnations, roses also brought a good price all along. Violets did not sell as well as in former years. Palms and other plants seem to be coming in vogue again. This probably is also due to the high price on cut flowers.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting was held Wednesday, January 3. The attendance was better than might have been expected on a very wet night. The main subject of the evening was an interesting paper by H. T. Dodson, on "Hot Water under Pressure." This was followed by a very interesting discussion. Both Mr. Dodson and C. M. Larsen, who make steam and hot water heating their business, gladly answered questions. In answer to a question, the care of cut poinsettias was again thoroughly gone over with the following results: As soon as cut place the end of the stem in four or five inches of very hot water for about ten minutes; then place in cool water the same as any other flower. Great care must then be exercised in handling the flowers, as every leaf that is broken gives the milk a chance to escape, thereby causing the bracts to wither. Out-of-town growers should bear this in mind in packing for shipment.

George Browne exhibited two seedling carnations, Lawson pink and white in color. Both are from a cross between Prosperity and Enchantress. They received very favorable comment from all.

Although it is still undecided who deserves first prize for the cement bench exhibits, Pres. Dilger was afraid the box of cigars donated by B. Schroeter would spoil, so it was burned up by the members. Through Secretary Sullivan's long absence and the rush of the last month, the publication of the Club Rambler was neglected, but from now on it will be published on the Thursday preceding the meeting: J. F. Sullivan, editor-in-chief; Hugo Schroeter, associate editor; Albert Bomb, business manager; Walter Taepke, treasurer.

E. A. Feters was unanimously elected a member.

The subject for the next meeting will be the Christmas and holiday trade.

Various Notes.

plimented on a fine lot of Vanda caerulea.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustave H. Taepke recently celebrated their silver wedding. The whole house was one mass of green and flowers and the well known hospitality of the Taepkes was in evidence on all sides.

E. A. Scribner is about the busiest man in Detroit. Besides looking after funeral and party orders, he is interested in autos, cement benches, heating systems, sprays and the Lord knows what not, and still he is always wearing a smile.

Albert Bomb made good use of a fine new rubber-tired wagon this Christmas. He is another busy man. H. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The past week not much was going on and trade was generally considered dull, which is expected right after the holidays. One of the most noticeable features of the market since the holidays is the big increase in receipts of almost all flowers, and especially carnations and violets. Stock of fine quality can now be had at a moderate price. The fine weather accounts for the conditions that prevail at present.

In roses we find a fine quality of teas, also long and short Beauties, greatly reduced in price from what they were a week ago. Carnations are still more plentiful and fancy stock can be bought as low as $4 per hundred. Extra select in Enchantress, Prosperity and Lawson are down to $5. California violets of extra fine quality are down to 50 cents per hundred and cheaper in large lots. Bulbous stock is plentiful, except lilies. Valley is in demand for weddings. Everything in green is to be had.

Various Notes.

J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, spent a day in the city last week.

John Steidle, in company with Fred Weber, Jr., left for Chicago Thursday night to spend a few days in that city on business. Mr. Steidle will build four new houses this spring for carnations.

Julius Schray, of Wm. Schray & Sons, was married last Thursday night, to Miss Louisa Schmidt. Only members of the families were present. Mr. Schray is well known among the trade, who are with me in extending congratulations.

It has been rumored that a new flower store will be opened shortly at King's highway and Delmar avenue, by Andy Hoffmann, now with George Waldbart.

J. F. Ammann will soon open a retail flower store in Edwardsville, Ill.

Henry Aue is cutting some fine strings of the new myrtle smilax, which is well liked by the local trade.

C. A. Kuehn has among his large consignments each morning a fine lot of mignonette, which sells well.

Bowling.

The lady florists' bowling afternoon at the Hamilton hotel was a big success. Ten ladies responded to the call and bowled three games, after which they sat down to a fine lunch. It was a most enjoyable time and may be repeated in the near future. The following are the scores made in the three games:

Mrs. Theo Miller was high, 391, winning a pair of gloves; Miss Bertha Meinhardt, 331, a pair of gloves; Linnie Meinhardt, 258, silk scarf; Tillie Meinhardt, 248, box of handkerchiefs; Mrs. J. J. Beneke, 204, handkerchiefs; Miss Schnell, 198, bottle of perfume; Mrs. John Koenig, lowest score, 96, a box of toy tenpins.

The other ladies taking part were Mrs. F. C. Weber, 182; Mrs. Otto Koenig, 191, and Mrs. John Steidle, 127.

The florists' league team again lost their match with the Unions last Thursday. Capt. Beyer was again out of the game. R. Meinhardt was again high man, with 500; Beneke, 496; Ellison, 478; Lohrenz, 460, and Kuehn 426, the team only having six men. Wm. Adels was signed to help out tonight. Monday the boys will roll the Fern Glens and are in hopes of winning at least two of the games.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business the past week has been good, prices remaining the same as quoted last week, with a demand slightly in excess of the supply, and each day found the wholesalers cleaned up on stock. Isaac Kennedy, of West Park, is sending the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. some of the finest white roses ever seen in this city, and all who have seen this new rose of his growing, say he has a winner.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will have a smoker and general good time on next Monday evening, January 8, and everyone is expected to be on hand.

F. L. Evans is again at her desk in the office of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., after an absence of two and a half months, having fully recovered from her sickness, and her many friends are glad to welcome her back.

RACINE, WIS.—R. J. Mohr had as a guest over the holidays his sister, Miss Olga Mohr, of Omaha.

WAUKEGAN, ILL.—Theo. Meyer, who now has 15,000 feet of glass, will shortly erect another plant house, 16x150.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market followed the usual course, last week, of every New Year's market since the flood. I do not refer to the flood of violets which flowed in steadily all the week, until, at times, the best went begging at 50 cents a hundred. Imagine the importunity of the street merchants at every corner with the "left overs" of each day and the aroma these enterprising gentlemen dispensed at "25 cents a bunch, meester, nisa fresh!" Those sweet flowers that make the very air up on the Hudson violetty, how they do lose their distinctiveness on the way down, and when a few hours old, as Raymond Hitchcock sings it, "Isn't it funny what a difference a few hours make!"

A good deal of everything that wasn't first-class went into the discard last week. Of course, the aces, kings and queens were drawn as fast as there was a show down, but that is no new story. The best always is short in the New York market. I mean the long stuff.

Club Meeting.

A splendid meeting of the Florists' Club began the new year Monday night. Ex-President Traendly introduced the new president in an eloquent tribute to his popularity and took occasion to express his own appreciation of the kind co-operation of his fellow members during the two years of his official life. Mr. Scott's address was a practical statement of sincere intentions and plans for the club's welfare.

and is given in full in this issue of the REVIEW.

The exhibits of the evening were vases of Robert Craig and Victory, Senator Crane and the bright crimson seedling No. 11, the last two mentioned being exhibited by Robt C. Pye, of Nyack, N. Y. Senator Crane is a brilliant pink of immense size and delightful fragrance, measuring three and one-half to four inches in diameter and received the club's certificate of merit. Mr. Pye will not place this variety on the market before 1908. Its parentage is Lawson and Bradt. The exhibit was much admired.

Resolutions on the death of Mrs. C. H. Allen were read. Six new members were elected and eight proposed: Messrs. McManus, Lechner, Moltz, Grant, Cornett, Forrester, Salto and A. J. Scott, a good beginning.

The election of new trustees resulted as follows: Nugent, 35; Miller, 19; Butterfield, 17; Kessler, 16; Langjahr, 2. Messrs. Nugent and Miller were declared elected.

The president announced his committees as follows: Legislative, John N. May, P. O'Mara and C. H. Allen; essays, Wallace, O'Mara and Traendly; awards, Totty, Duekham, Plumb, Roehrs, Donaldson, A. J. Manda, James Scott; outing, Wheeler, Shaw, Hoffmeyer, Fenrich, Pepper, Weber, Schultz; executive, Birnie, Lenker, Jos. Manda, Hurrell, Dupuy, Butterfield; house and entertainment, Nugent, Koehne, Schultz; dinner, Haffner, Sheridan, Weathered.

The provisions of the house committee exceeded in variety any of Nugent's efforts in 1905. Two large turkeys from his country hatchery vanished, and only "the baseless fabric of a vision" remained.

After the recess, the subject of the flower show proved of absorbing interest. Messrs. O'Mara, Guttman, Ward, Nugent, Wheeler, Pepper, Scott and Wallace participated in the discussion. Mr. O'Mara gave an exhaustive resume of the exhibitions of the club since its formation. There was not sufficient encouragement in the general results to warrant much enthusiasm and another venture was looked upon as suicidal to the club's finances. The matter was referred to the board of trustees with instructions to make a further report at the carnation night of the club in February. The trustees were also authorized to consider the advisability of a show similar to the one made some years ago in the Newsboys' home.

The treasurer's report shows a balance of $1,643 in the treasury. The secretary reported the addition of thirty new members for the year and an average attendance of sixty-two. The entire expenses of the house committee, under Nugent's economic management, totaled only $333. Votes of thanks were unanimously given all the old committees and the retiring trustees and officers. The resignation of Prof. W. G. Johnson was accepted with regret. The dinner committee was authorized to arrange for the club's annual dinner.

Various Notes.

President Scott's dinner to the club's officials, retiring officers and trustees on Saturday evening at the Vendome was a delightful affair and the ideas advanced by all in behalf of a continuance of the club's prosperity cannot but bear abundant fruit. The menu was the best the house affords and the evening a most harmonious and interesting one throughout.

A course of free lectures, and popular ones, on agriculture and horticulture begins on Wednesday of this week at the American Institute in the Berkeley Lyceum. It will be continued during the winter on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. The first lecture, on "The Soil," will be given by George T. Powell, president of the Agricultural Experts' Association.

Notwithstanding the remarkable mildness of the weather, la grippe, that arch enemy of the florist, has been abroad and has laid unholy hands on some of the elect. George Saltford was one of its victims last week, and John Birnie, against whom the bleak winds of auld Scotia blew in vain, had to lower his colors to the foe on Saturday.

On Monday the earth was clad in its first white garment of the year. Just enough of "the beautiful" fell to remind us we are not out of the woods yet and that spring, like the prodigal son, is still "afar off."

The next event of general importance in the east is the carnation convention in Boston. Everybody seems to be planning for the trip, not the carnation experts only, and we have a few of them, but the wholesalers and the growers from all around us. It looks as though President Fisher's estimate of "the greatest ever" will come true.

Arthur Merritt has located in the old Hammond headquarters on West Thirtieth street, close to the pioneers, Hart and Perkins, and his gilded leucothæ wreaths make an attractive window. Mr. Merritt's patent on these simple, durable, beautiful wreaths is secured. They will outlast the immortelles, are useful in all kinds of floral designs and a large demand for them has developed from out of town, while all the bon-ton stores use them here in their decorations.

In our references to Mr. Coyle last week we omitted to mention a seven years' engagement with Charles Milang, the originator of the wholesale plant convenience in this city.

Charles Totty, of Madison, the Richmond king in the east, was in the city Saturday. His wholesaler, Mr. Fenchrich, was a victim of la grippe several days last week and was still under the doctor's care on Sunday. These are strenuous days for the men worn out by the holiday rush and behind hand on sleep and rest. One needs a large reserve reservoir to maintain the pace of this rapid village.

On January 7 C. W. Ward entertained a party of eight leading carnation growers at Cottage Gardens. Among them were Robert Craig, Mr. Pierson, M. A. Patten and Peter Fisher. A visit was paid to some of the neighboring establishments.

The Dutchess County Violet Co. has removed its headquarters to 115 West Thirtieth street. C. A. Plumb is in charge.

John Baumann, for twenty years in the florists' business, died at Middle Village, L. I., the first of the year after a long illness. He was highly esteemed and a prominent member of one of the oldest German singing societies, the Schwabische Sangerbund.

In his eighty-seventh year, on January 4, Samuel B. Parsons, Sr., died at his Flushing home, of paralysis after a lingering illness. He was universally esteemed and beloved by all who knew him. He was one of America's pioneers in the nursery business and one of the best known and most thoroughly efficient. His son, S. B. Parsons, Jr., is superintendent of the New York city parks.

Bridget Scanlon, the wife of James Mallon, one of the best known florists of Brooklyn, died January 4 at her home, 306 State street, of a complication of diseases, after an illness of four months. Mrs. Mallon was born in County Clare, Ireland, about seventy years ago, and had lived in Brooklyn for fifty-seven years. Her husband survives her with four children, all well known in Brooklyn.

Lion & Co., the new ribbon house, has located at 114 to 116 Spring street, in fine offices on the first floor, in this, one of the busiest wholesale sections of the big city. Mr. Lion was a member of the old firm of Lion & Wertheimer, now Wertheimer Bros. Lion & Co. will make a specialty of florists' ribbons.

The big ball of the wholesalers' employees takes place Saturday evening, as already announced. It is an assured success, many hundreds of tickets having been sold and everybody is going. The boys have gone to great expense and shown much harmonious enterprise in pushing the event to a satisfactory consummation. It will be a gala night and deserves the patronage of every florist in the city.

Bowling.

The bowling club has not recovered from the all-night holiday effort of most of its members and the attendance was limited. Next Tuesday practice begins in earnest and all intending to belong are urged to be present at the election of the year's officers, captain, etc. The active membership will total over twenty. The scores made last week Tuesday were:

| Player.      | 1st | 2d  | 3d  |
|--------------|-----|-----|-----|
| Kessler..... | 140 | 151 | 164 |
| Holt.....    | 148 | 155 | 153 |
| Shaw.....    | 134 | 145 | 115 |
| Bartow.....  | 122 | 134 | 134 |
| Guttman..... | 127 | 110 | 174 |
| Moltz.....   | 90  | 113 | 126 |

Captain Lang was present but unable to bowl after the strenuous Christmas. The alleys are the best the club has ever secured.

FOR SALE A Greenhouse Property

in a growing Western city, 150 miles from Chicago. 5 acres of land and 9 houses in suburbs on street-car line and 2 show houses and office in city. Grow cut flowers and general stock. One of the finest prospects in the country; only greenhouses in the city, draws trade from 30,000 population. Grew up from small place and now cannot grow enough to supply the trade. Present owner, who is not a practical florist, is contemplating leaving the city, otherwise would not consider selling. It is a high-grade opening for a high-grade man. Plenty of ground on which to expand as the business demands and previous records show enormous possibilities. Not a worn out place which can't be made to pay but a proposition which has made money from the start and which would not now be offered for sale except that owner contemplates moving from that locality. All stocked and doing business. Will take $6,000 cash to swing the deal. Balance on time.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Mr. Peycke, of Peycke Bros., Kansas City, Mo.

HUGH M. TAYLOR, melon seed grower, Lloyd, Fla., is spending the winter at Silver City, N. M.

THE seed traveler seeking to book orders now for delivery after harvest 1906 is reported on hand at almost any town shown on the map.

CONSIDERABLE activity has developed in the onion set market since January 1. A sharp advance in price is reported at Louisville, where, during the preceding month, a marked bearish feeling prevailed.

Good weather generally throughout the country is causing peremptory demands that shipment of booked orders be made. The wholesalers are hoping that a storm may arrive somewhere to assist them in catching up.

THERE is a delay in foreign shipments of import seeds which makes the seedsman's row harder to hoe than is usual. It is admitted, however, that the foreign brother may also have good reasons for the delay in pushing things forward.

THE virtue of the seed trade disclaimer is to have another test; this time in the case of W. W. Barnard Co., of Chicago, versus a customer who claims he received a wrong kind of seed from that firm. The hearing of the case is booked for an early date.

ONION seed prices have become steady after a good swing both ways. The Globe varieties will easily bring the highest price named for them in any of the catalogues, while the flat sorts would stand a considerable advance over catalogue rates and no harm come from it.

NORTHWEST of Chicago is a great market gardening section in which the consumption of seeds is as heavy as in any single neighborhood in the country. It remained for Knud Gundestrup, then an employee in a Chicago seed store, to see the possibilities for a seed house in this district. With Peter S. Peterson he established a store at 4273 Milwaukee avenue and has been steadily building up a business in market gardeners' specialties.

THE president of the Dutch Bulb Growers' Association, at a recent meeting, stated that during July, August and September, 1905, the export of bulbs from Holland amounted to 8,754,600 kilograms, twenty-one per cent more than the corresponding months in 1904, and 100 per cent more than in 1897. The increased demands since 1897 were as follows: America, 24.6 per cent; Denmark, Norway and Sweden, 24.5 per cent; Germany, 18.5 per cent; Russia, 13.5 per cent; Great Britain and Ireland, 12.9 per cent; Belgium and France, 6 per cent.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

NEW SWEET PEAS

EVELYN BYATT A GORGEOUS NOVELTY

The most gorgeous colored Sweet Pea yet introduced. It may be termed a self Gorgeous, having a rich orange salmon standard, and falls or wings still a trifle deeper color, giving a rich, fiery orange or deep sunset color to the whole flower, very striking and unique. It has caused quite a sensation wherever shown during the past year.

PHYLLIS UNWIN A GIANT NOVELTY

Color a deep rosy carmine self, the same form as GLADYS UNWIN, with the prettily waved and bold standard of that variety, but a little larger, producing 3 to 4 flowers on a stem. It is quite sunproof and perfectly fixed. The stems are long and stout, and it may be described as A GIANT IN EVERY WAY.

Each of above novelties, $14.50 per 100 packets;

GLADYS UNWIN LAST YEAR'S NOVELTY

This finest of all Pink Sweet Peas we introduced last season. It is a striking and sterling improvement, quite fixed and distinct, and a great acquisition for Cut Blooms.

GLADYS UNWIN has a very large and bold flower, not hooded, but with a very striking upright crinkled or wavy standard, and broad wings. Color, a pale rosy pink. A striking feature is that about 75 per cent of the long flower stems are with four blooms, which is a most unusual thing in Sweet Peas. It was first raised four years ago, viz., in 1901, and has kept perfectly true and fixed in character each year since and we have no hesitation in saying it is a bona-fide departure in pinks. For market growers especially it cannot be surpassed, and is just the lovely pink color which is so much in demand. $4.50 per pound.

THE Templin Co., Calla, O., has Southport White Globe onion seed priced at $1.25 per pound postpaid in its 1906 catalogue.

THE M. G. Madson Seed Co., Manitowish, Wis., is sending the trade a striking calendar, a reproduction of a painting by Asti.

THE Thorburn catalogue for 1906 is the 105th successive annual issue. It does not look much like the first of its line, several of which are shown in it by photographic reproduction. Few of the general catalogues use as heavy paper as Thorburn's and most of the illustrations are half-tones. The book of 148 pages weighs slightly over ten ounces.

CHAS. P. GUELF, of the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., who has been making headquarters at Chicago for the past two months, is working homeward through Ohio and New York.

THE Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., say that they believe that their new warehouse is the first building erected in their big agricultural state, and probably in the south, especially planned and equipped for the seed business.

THE seed advertising in general publications was begun earlier than usual this season and promises to be exceptionally heavy. The effort is each year for early orders. All the leading houses have about all the business they can handle in the height of the season, and the possibilities of increase lie largely in their ability to get and execute orders before the rush begins.

A. T. BODDINGTON Co., New York, has been appointed American agent for the special strains of flower seeds packeted by Sutton & Sons, Reading, England.

THE Templin Co., of Calla, O., states that the total edition of its catalogues reaches 460,000 per year. The present business is reported double that of 1902.

CALIFORNIA REJECTED.

The executive committee of the American Seed Trade Association met at Dooner's hotel, Philadelphia, on Wednesday, January 10. Those present were President W. H. Grenell, Secretary C. E. Kendel, S. F. Willard, F. W. Bolgiano, W. Atlee Burpee, Burnett Landreth, Howard M. Earle, C. H. McKubbin, Messrs. Johnson and Breck. It was decided to hold the convention next June at Toledo, O., instead of in California, much opposition to so long a trip having developed since the meeting at which the invitation was extended. A program was outlined and routine matters disposed of.

CELERY SEEDING PREMATURELY.

Some of our customers have complained of their celery going to seed prematurely. They do not say whether it is the Self Blanching or the Giant Pascal. We have been purchasing only the best grade of French grown seed that we could get. We are trying to find out whether it is the fault of the seed or the manner of growing that is at fault. Some of the market gardeners, when they find a celery seed that suits them in the spring, buy of that same stock for the next season, in preference in taking chances on the next crop of seed suiting them as well. We would like to know whether you would consider that the seed two or three years old is more likely to go to seed than that which is strictly fresh. We are desirous of handling as good a grade of seed as possible. We would also like to know whether you consider American grown or imported seed the best, and who is the most reliable grower of celery seed. We are well pleased with the REVIEW, and get much of value from its Seed Trade Department. H. S. C.

In the absence of definite information as to the conditions under which the celery crops referred to by our correspondent were grown, we can only reply to the queries in a general way.

If the natural growth of celery becomes retarded by adverse weather conditions, a tendency to run to seed is shown by the plant as soon as a renewed growth begins. A fairly rapid and continued growth is essential to the well being of a celery crop; hence a retarded or checked growth throws it off and causes trouble. The hollow stalk which often spoils celery is a more common source of annoyance to the growers at Chicago than the premature tendency to seed, and the best celery growers are of the opinion that both these annoyances are caused by the same conditions. The REVIEW has consulted several of the most experienced growers of celery in this district and has been unable to get from any of them a positive statement that he is prepared to name a sure reason for these drawbacks in celery growing. Some have advanced the theory that too large a plant when set out at an unfavorable time might be a cause of premature running to seed; the majority of them, however, hold to the opinion that a dry spell after the plants get a good start, causing a check in growth, and a spell of wet weather following, causing a renewal in growth, is the main cause. The plants in the interval having got beyond the stage of producing the desired stalk, assume the natural tendency of the species to push on to the second or seeding stage. Beets have been known to run to seed under similar weather conditions before the bulb had formed a growth larger than a small radish. The seed was blamed for the trouble, but a second planting of seed out of the same bag behaved properly, thereby demonstrating that the seed had nothing to do with it.

A crop of celery grown under irrigation, it is thought by some of the most experienced growers, would run increased chances of going to seed prematurely than a crop grown under ordinary circumstances without irrigation. There is some sound sense in this, inasmuch as too much water being allowed to flow in after a carelessness had given too little, the check to the growth which undoubtedly causes the damage would result. Experienced growers of celery do not blame the seed when their crop goes to seed prematurely, or when, as is more common, it produces a hollow-stalked crop. It has been proved many times over that the seed which made a good crop this year may make a failure next year, and vice versa.

As regards our correspondent's inquiry if seed two or more years old would be more likely to go to seed prematurely than new seed, we can safely say no; the age of the seed will make no difference provided it is not too old to germinate properly. In regard to the inquiry as to foreign or home grown seed, we may say that there is no proof that French or any other foreign grown seed is better than the home grown. It all depends upon how the seed was matured and the purity of the stock it was grown from. The best American celery growers prefer American grown seed to that grown in any other country. This applies to the Self Blanching sorts as well as to the others.

A grower who knows his business, if he can secure seed properly matured and of a good selection grown by his next neighbor, will not hesitate to pay a good price for it, and he will have no fear but what it will be just as safe as anything he could get from abroad.

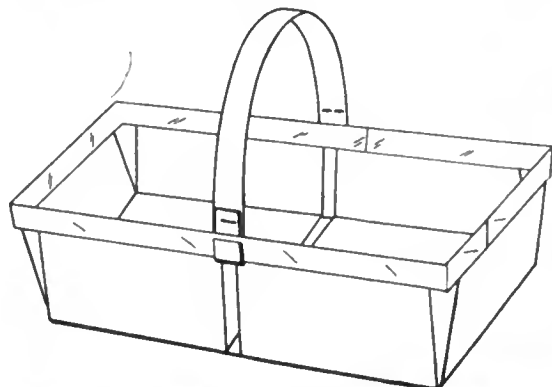

[If there are other seedsmen who would like to have trade inquiries answered in this department, we shall be glad to have them submitted.—Ed.]

ORANGE, N. J.

Installation exercises were held on January 5 by the New Jersey Floricultural Society, with Joseph A. Manda as master of ceremonies. In the discussion of the society's policy, for the ensuing year, it was decided to continue the monthly competitive displays, the details being left to the executive committee. Six silver cups were presented to the victors of last year's shows. Flowers, Peter Duff and William Read; orchids, A. W. Bodwell and Edwin Thomas; plants, D. Kinds-grab; vegetables, John Garvin. A special loving cup was presented to the retiring secretary, W. J. Bennett, to commemorate his recent marriage and as a token of esteem. Three new members were elected and reports of secretary and treasurer showed a prosperous condition.
February 2 was set for the installation feast. Orchids were exhibited by Julius Roehrs, a vase of seedling carnations by George von Qualen, and sweet peas and violet by Max Schneider. A. W. Bodwell, J. B. Davis and Joseph A. Manda were named as the essay and George Smith, Malcolm MacRorie and H. Hilbig as auditing committee. A demonstration of Graefe's patent flower stand was made by Jos. A. Manda and was certified. J. B. D.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held January 6, President L. Carlquist in the chair. The essay and entertainment committee have arranged a program for every meeting until May. The annual report is ready and will be printed before our next meeting. Anyone desiring a copy will please apply to the secretary, who will be pleased to forward it. The society has accepted a silver cup offered by F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., to be competed for at our next chrysanthemum show from their list of novelties for 1906. Grenville Winthrop presented to the society two cases of the gypsy and brown tail moth, with eggs, cocoons, caterpillars, with male and female moths. The annual ball will be held February 6.

After adjournment members retired to play cards and checkers and the winners received suitable prizes. G. F.

The Market.

The bottom has dropped out of the business since the holidays. Of course we look for something of a letup, but this is a little more than we bargained for. The store men report no demand, so we all have to suffer. Shipping trade is very quiet.

The best feature is that the supply is not very heavy and there is no prospect of a glut, especially with the weather we are having. Roses are showing the effect of too much forcing for the holiday rush, also of the bad weather. They are weak-stemmed and off color. Beauties are in heavier supply and move slowly at reduced prices. Carnations are coming in large quantities but the price has not dropped very much as yet. Violets have, perhaps, been hit the hardest. There has been an oversupply of them ever since New Year's, and the price has been dropping until you can buy about all you want at 50 cents per hundred. Asparagus and smilax are scarce. Harrisii lilies are coming in good quantities and sell first-class.

Various Notes.

Saturday night will be the regular meeting night of the Florists' Society, which will be called to order promptly at 7:30. Our last meeting was well attended and the members were very enthusiastic. We are going to get together and give our society a push forward along new lines and see what can be done to advance business interests in this city. A large attendance is expected, and it will be well worth the while of all the members to make special efforts to be present.

A visit to R. Witterstaetter's plant just after the holiday shows his stock to be in fine shape. He reported a great cut for the holidays and was well pleased with the business, which was better than last year by a goodly amount. Aristocrat being sold, Afterglow is now at the head of the list. It is a fine flower, of a beautiful shade of pink, somewhat lighter than Aristocrat. Mr. Witterstaetter also has a white variety which is a dandy. In his seedling house he has some 700 varieties from last year's seeds. Among the lot are many which look good enough for another trial. Especially are the reds and scarlets fine. Altogether Mr. Witterstaetter's chances for even better things than he has accomplished in the past are very bright. C. J. OHMER.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Business is Good.

Business in this section has been the best in the history of the trade in this vicinity. A custom profitable to the craft here is the decorating of graves at the Christmas season, and there was an immense business done in that line. All kinds of stock sold well. In Sherman, H. O. Hannah & Son were fortunate enough to have quite a quantity of mums on hand, which readily brought $3.50 per dozen. The trade in plant stuff was lively, potted Romans and narcissi bringing better prices than the cut blooms. Geraniums, especially Bruanti, brought from 40 cents to 60 cents each in 5-inch pots.

Various Notes.

A visit to the plant of J. W. Goree, of Whitewright, was a revelation. Mr. Goree has only a small place, but has done something that has puzzled many older heads in the business here. I refer to the successful growing of roses. For years nearly all the florists in this section have been unsuccessful in growing roses; a large amount of time and money have been given to that end; expert northern growers have tried, only to fail. Mr. Goree has solved the riddle, and is growing some of the finest stiff-stemmed, perfectly formed roses that will grade as specials in any market in this country. Mr. Goree has the disadvantage of being in a small town, where there is very little call for such stock. His greenhouse is literally packed with the fairest specimen plants of begonias, Boston ferns, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengerii. Being a carpenter, he from the love of flowers dropped into the business, beginning what we hope will prove a very profitable business.

Mr. Majors, with the Munson greenhouse, of Denison, reports holiday business as very satisfactory. Carnations were his leading flowers, but his bulbous stock sold very well. Mr. Majors has some fine stock coming on and his greenhouses show careful attention.

J. S. Kerr, of Sherman, had the monopoly on Christmas trees this year, and his report is that this branch of the business has been better this year than ever before. Advance orders for nursery stock are flattering for an increased business the coming year. NARCISSUS.

DECATUR, ILL.—M. Z. Kellogg, successor to the Decatur Horticultural Co., says business was good in 1905 and prospects are excellent. All good stock is now selling well.

OSHKOSH, WIS.—Fugleberg & Flister built three houses 18x50 and one 12x25 the past season and have them all well stocked with roses and carnations, although they were a little late in planting. They report good crops and good demand this fall.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—W. E. King on January 1 sold a half interest in his business to C. F. Spittler, the firm to be known as W. E. King & Co. Mr. King has also leased to A. Mitting, of Loomis, four acres of land here to be devoted to carnation growing.

SEATTLE, WASH.—D. H. Heskett and family, who recently sold out their greenhouse establishment at Marshall, Mo., have removed to Seattle, where it is their intention to again engage in the business. The move was made in the hope of benefiting Mrs. Heskett's health. Omar Heskett, the younger son, was wise enough to bring with him as a bride one of Marshall's prettiest girls. Frank Heskett, of Kansas City, has also moved here.

PUBLIC TREE-PLANTING.

The planting of trees to beautify our streets is now a matter under consideration by municipal corporations and individuals in many parts of California, and the ideas suggested are many and at wide variance in most instances. Whether to plant evergreens or deciduous trees, palms or grass plats is a serious consideration when miles of streets are to be beautified, and a few ideas might be in order on the subject.

Our southern country has planted palms to a great extent, and for a strictly California idea this appeals greatly to our many eastern visitors. Palms do equally well both in southern and central California, and are very effective, when large enough, to lend assistance to our semi-tropical aspect. In our southern country the native fan palm, Washingtonia robusta, has found great favor, but in our more central situations the Japanese fan palm, Chamaerops excelsa, has proven even more valuable, as it is more suitable for a sidewalk tree, owing to the fact that it does not spread to such an extent as to impede the passage of pedestrians. The hardy date palm, Phoenix Canariensis, has also been used quite extensively, but it is far reaching and until it gets large enough to make a trunk, which does not occur for quite a number of years, it encroaches both on the street and on the footpath.

In deciduous trees the Texas umbrella does well in our warm interior valleys, but toward the coast the cool winds do not suit its growth and farther north it is rarely planted. The eastern white elm, Ulmus campestris, has been planted largely for an avenue tree and gives considerable satisfaction. It stands trimming well and does not sucker as much as the common cork bark elm, Ulmus Americana, which for the past few years has been sparingly planted.

Where a very effective tree is desired to grace an avenue the white maple, Acer dasycarpum, has been planted largely and this, together with the Oregon maple, Acer macrophyllum, seems to give the greatest satisfaction. Both the American and European lindens have found much favor here, although they are of slow growth. Poplars do not seem to meet popular favor and are not much in evidence in the plantings of the recent years. Birches are not suitable for sidewalk trees, owing to the fact that when their lower branches are trimmed off they lose their graceful appearance.

Dracaenas have been planted more extensively a few years ago than they are at present, and the fact that they lose their beauty in a few seasons after planting has tended much toward discontinuing their usage. In California they begin to flower at about their tenth year, and gradually afterwards they commence to lose their healthy appearance and rapidly become an eyesore. Eucalyptus are practically retired as sidewalk trees, owing to their irregular and abnormal growths.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues dry and frosty, with plenty of sunshine. Business since Christmas has been good, the only trouble being scarcity of flowers. Carnations, especially the white varieties, are coming in very small lots. Roses are few and far between and Beauties and fancy Brides and Maids are in big demand. Narcissi and daffodils, on account of the frosty weather, do not bloom much and there is nothing else outdoors at present except violets. There are plenty of these to go around. Mums are holding out well, but they will soon be a thing of the past. Maidenhair fern and asparagus show the effects of the recent Christmas week and short stock is the rule with greens of all kinds.

Various Notes.

Benjamin Block, who recently reopened the store formerly owned by A. Ponzal, on Polk street, died on December 30, and was buried on the following Tuesday. Mr. Block was 27 years of age and was well known here.

The city of Oakland has appropriated $2,000 to purchase ground on which to erect propagating houses for the growing of young plants for the city parks. Malcom Lamond has charge of this branch of the work.

G. Symacopulos has removed his floral establishment from Sixteenth and Broadway, Oakland, to Broadway, near Fourteenth street, a much better location.

Thos. B. Moralee, well known in Alameda, where he was employed as a landscape gardener for many years, was found drowned in the estuary on January 1. Mr. Moralee was 65 years of age and a native of France.

James Skinner has returned to Portland, after spending two weeks in town.

F. Ludemann reports heavy sales of hardy nursery stock. His stock of roses is very complete for the present season and the demand is very large.

R. D. Lewis is on a trip to Mexico, with the intention of staying several months in that country.

The dry season has played havoc with the growers of fruit trees in this locality. It is too dry to dig and too dry for the planters to plant.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

THE owners of Fellows' addition to St. Charles, Ill., are in the market for nursery stock for street planting.

JOHN C. WILSIE, for many years prior to 1895 engaged in the nursery business at Elgin, Ill., died at Chicago, January 2.

THE St. John Nursery Co., Fairmont, Minn., has been incorporated with $40,000 authorized capital stock. B. E. St. John is president.

J. WOODWARD MANNING, of Reading, Mass., will address the Worcester County Horticultural Society on "Ornamental Trees and Shrubs" on January 25.

COLORADO grown Rome Beauty apples packed in bushel boxes command the highest price in the Chicago market, $2.75 per box, and retail at 50 cents to 60 cents a dozen in the fruit stores.

OTTO KATZENSTEIN & Co., Atlanta, Ga., have been visited by fire, which destroyed their offices and did considerable damage to their stock of tree and shrub seeds. The loss was covered by insurance.

THE Grand View Nursery Co. started suit at Des Moines, Ia., against John F. Johnson to enforce collection on an order for nursery stock. Johnson set up in his answer that his signature on the order is a forgery, for which the agent, one Ranstead, has been held to the Lucas county grand jury under $1,000 bail.

THE Western Fruit Jobbers' Association, in session at Des Moines last week, believes that it should receive the support of nurserymen, as well as fruit growers, in its fight against the private car lines. The argument is that if the high charges were removed the increased prosperity of the grower would be felt by the nursery interests.

THE New York State Fruit Growers' Association held its annual convention at Lockport, January 3 and 4. Most of the nurserymen of western New York were in attendance. Features of the meeting were addresses by L. A. Goodman and J. H. Hale, president and ex-president of the American Pomological Society. T. B. Wilson, of Hills Corners, was re-elected president. The secretary is E. C. Gillett, of Penn Yan.

J. A. YAGER, of the Plumfield Nurseries, Fremont, Neb., has sold his interest to E. S. Welch, of Shenandoah, Ia. Mr. Welch is a brother of G. L. Welch, who has been a partner of Mr. Yager for three years. G. L. Welch will remain in charge of the business. Mr. Yager established the Plumfield Nurseries in 1894 and has laid the foundation for a large and successful enterprise. He retires from it in order to give his other interests closer attention.

FORM OKLAHOMA ASSOCIATION.

At a special meeting of the Southwestern Nurserymen's Association, and others, at Oklahoma City, the name of the organization was changed to the Oklahoma Nurserymen's Association, and plans were made for a large meeting at Guthrie January 15. President J. W. Preston, of Kingfisher, on motion appointed a committee to prepare a recommendation to the territorial board of agriculture, covering the working rules in regard to the new inspection law. A program was outlined for the Guthrie meeting, practical topics being assigned to J. W. Tetirick, of Blackwell; J. A. Lopeman, of Enid; G. S. Holman, of Duncan; W. G. Dugan, of Cleveland; J. W. Furrow, of Guthrie; Jas. Parker, of Tecumseh; J. P. Taylor, of Shawnee; J. D. Pierce, of Oklahoma City; W. E. Broome, of McLoud, and C. E. Garee, of Noble.

GREELEY, COLO.—W. H. Searing is one of the many growers who have dark pink sports of Enchantress.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—I. G. Stahl will devote the coming summer to market gardening and in the fall will plant his houses with vegetables.

CHEYENNE, WYO.—C. F. Swayger, gardener for the Union Pacific Railway, has gone east to inspect the greenhouse plants of other railroads. The Union Pacific is contemplating the erection of a range of glass.

SWEET PEAS AND ASTERS.

We have a house planted with sweet peas. The seed was sown last September. They have not done very well. We will hold on to them until Easter and after that we want to put in a crop of asters and would like to know what kind would be the best and if they will be out of the way in time to sow mignonette in the same house. The house has solid beds and we think it will be all right for the mignonette, but would like to get something from the house this summer before sowing the mignonette seed. A. & S.

Possibly you did not sow the right sort of sweet peas to produce winter flowers. If you sowed the old type of peas, such as Emily Henderson or Blanche Ferry and you have up to date cut no flowers, it is not likely you will get anything like a paying crop until early May and the Easter harvest will be over. Zvolanek's strain of sweet peas are the only ones we could ever get into flower in the dark midwinter months. We sowed at the end of August and have been picking nice flowers for a month past. When we grew the old varieties and got no flowers till the end of April we cut such a fine lot during May and June that we considered it paid. They had not taken up valuable bench room and the flowers sold well and in quantity. There are few sweet peas picked outdoors in our locality before July 1 and the indoor-grown flowers are in brisk demand.

I should advise you to take care of the peas and leave them in and not bother with the asters. By the time the asters were done would be late for mignonette. The latter should be sown from the middle to the end of July. The solid bed will suit your mignonette. Five or six inches of soil on a raised bench will grow mignonette, but it will not be equal in strength or stoutness of spikes to that grown on a solid bench. W. S.

ARISTOCRAT ANNOUNCEMENT

WE herewith confirm the reports, so far as our purchasing the above carnation is concerned. We intend to disseminate same January 1, 1907. We do not think it necessary at this time to commence boasting of its good qualities and commercial value that have been proven and will be proven again to your satisfaction.

We are now soliciting orders for January delivery and while we do not make a specialty of booking orders subject to cancellation, we believe that to cancel is everyone's right, if a variety does not live up to its reputation and we respect it if done right and honorably. Orders are already coming in heavily and we strongly advise your placing yours immediately as January bookings will soon be closed.

Aristocrat is O. K. and you will not be able to help yourself from buying it later, so place order now as we shall not overbook ourselves on it, as we must make good and that is one of our reasons for securing it.

Color—brighter than Lawson, a little brighter shade. Calyx does not burst. Habit of growth, taller than Enchantress, more wiry and more free. Produces cuttings freely which root easily. Has no disease of any description. Size, as large as Enchantress but form more perfect than any other carnation.

ROOTED CUTTINGS, $12 per 100; $100 per 1000; 5,000, $450; 10,000 $800.

State of Trade.

The season of official entertaining opening, as it did, with the New Year's receptions, is keeping the decorators busy and a large amount of fine stock is being disposed of. A notable feature is the great demand for Killarney roses for dinner decorations. Richmond and Liberty are also in demand. In the selection of flowers for the centerpiece of a dinner decoration, within the week one leading decorator has used Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, another poinsettias, and still another cut azaleas. Lilaes, lilies of the valley and the fancy carnations, cacti and all have their devotees. For green, Adiantum Farleyense is very popular. Cut stock of this fern is now being shipped here from Philadelphia, arriving in excellent condition. There is considerable demand for orchids and American Beauty roses, the former for bouquets, the latter for vase work. Violets, mignonette and Paper White narcissi are in good supply and of excellent quality.

The following are the prevailing retail prices for first quality of leading stocks: Orchids, cattleyas, $1 and $1.25 per flower; cypripediums, $3 and $4 per dozen. Roses, American Beauty, $15 per dozen; Killarney, $4; Richmond and Liberty, $3 to $5; Bride and Maid, $2.50 to $3.50. Carnations, Enchantress, Prosperity and Lady Bountiful, $1.50 and $2 per dozen; Lawson, Governor Roosevelt and Red Sport, $1 to $1.50. Violets, $3 per hundred. Mignonette, $1.50 per dozen.

The Retailers.

The decorations at the first cabinet dinner of the season, given by Secretary of State and Mrs. Root, at which President and Mrs. Roosevelt were present, was by J. H. Small & Sons. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine with adiantum was freely used.

George H. Cooke recently executed a very handsome dinner decoration in which Otaheite oranges was the leading feature.

Representative Allen, of Maine, has introduced a bill in the House which, if it becomes law, will affect the florists. The measure provides that all places of business, except news stands, drug stores and undertakers' shops shall be closed on Sunday.

ABUNDANCE

The freest blooming of any carnation. A carnation that pays for every inch of bench room it takes up. For those who want quantity rather than extra size it is just the thing. It can be brought into bloom as early as you please and continue all winter improving in size, quality of flower and length and strength of stem.

Read accompanying letter from a well known firm:
Western Springs, Ill., Nov. 15, 1905.

Mr. Rudolph Fischer, Great Neck, L. I., N. Y.

Dear Sir:—We acknowledge receipt of the carnation plant you sent us, also the 50 cut blooms of your White variety. We received them a week ago yesterday and must say they are perfectly fresh at this writing, besides being good size and stiff stem. We like the appearance of it very much and would like you to send us a description with the price that you are going to offer rooted cuttings at this season, also your best price to us per thousand.

Very truly yours,

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE. Per J. S. Wilson.

Price per rooted cuttings, $1.75 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000, 500 at 1000 rate; 50 at 100 rate. Unrooted cuttings same price, with 25 extra with each 100.

New Geranium ORA D. HILL

We claim for this that it is better than any other geranium on the market. It is semi-double, cerise red, a very free bloomer and grower; easiest to propagate of any geranium grown; extra good bedder and house plant; good, strong, 2½-inch stock, $2.00 per dozen, $15.00 per 100. Can ship all orders the day of receipt.

Richmond Plants

The United States Cut Flower Co.

ELMIRA, NEW YORK,

Having a large and fine stock of this new rose, are prepared to accept contracts for delivery, Spring 1906. Correspondence solicited.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business for the new year has started out with a rush. Society decorations and an unusual amount of funeral work have given the trade a very busy week. Prices have dropped since the holidays, but good stock is still bringing very good prices. The supply is more plentiful but none too heavy. Carnations are quoted at $3 to $4 and the best grade of roses bring $7 to $8 per hundred wholesale. The prospects for the coming year are very flattering.

Various Notes.

Miss R. A. Shiras has bought Chas. A. Shaeffer's interest in the Kansas City Floral Co. and is now sole owner. Miss Shiras has a splendid trade and is experienced in the business.

Arthur Newell had a large out-of-town funeral order that kept him busy all day Saturday.

Peterson & Co. have a very attractive store at 4 W. Ninth street. They have been in business about three months and have worked up a fine business.

The Alpha Floral Co. is enlarging its store to accommodate the rapidly growing trade.

Earnest Grossoff, for four years at the National Soldiers' Home at Leavenworth, has taken a position with the Shaeffer Floral Co.

W. L. Hueke, of Belleville, Ill., was a visitor last week. Kay-See.

THE REVIEW surely gets there as an advertising medium; when I sent you an advertisement of Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemum stock plants, the orders began coming even before the paper reached me.—W. J. OLDS, Union City, Pa.

MY MARYLAND

ANNOUNCEMENT

We, THE H. WEBER & SONS CO. of Oakland, Md., respectfully announce that The E. G. Hill Co. of Richmond, Ind., have withdrawn from the contract made with us last spring, whereby they would have jointly with us disseminated our new white carnation, My Maryland.

The variety has been on trial at Richmond (3000 plants), Brooklyn (300 plants), Philadelphia (1000 plants) and Toronto (1000 plants). Reports from the first two named places characterize the variety as being practically worthless, while from Toronto and Philadelphia favorable reports indicate that the variety is bearing out our claims for it.

Our own stock at Oakland is in elegant shape. An extremely wet summer necessitated the holding of stock in a semi-dormant condition after being housed, August 15 to September 1, thus making stock too late for the fall shows. Since December 1st we have been cutting grand blooms, and to prove our claims for the variety, we invite all interested to come to Oakland and look it over.

While it is a source of regret to us that the variety has not proved satisfactory in all places tried, we are satisfied that it will prove our claims for it in at least some places besides our own.

We therefore announce that we will disseminate My Maryland as per our advertisements, but before shipping any stock we give to each and every one the right to cancel all or any portion of their orders.

JESSICA,

we believe, will succeed everywhere. It is even better than last year. As a red and white variegated it has no competitors. Stock ready now.

Prices for both varieties—$2.50 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The annual meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on December 28. The chief business was the election of officers. Jos. Mooney, Hastings, N. Y., was elected president; E. W. Neubrand, Tarrytown, secretary; J. T. Laurie, Tarrytown, treasurer, and Jas. Ballantyne, Tarrytown, corresponding secretary. The secretary's report showed that the society had 145 active members in good standing, forty-two honorary and five life members. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance in the society's favor. Eleven new members were elected at this meeting and four names proposed.

The monthly prize donated by D. McFarlane for eighteen carnation blooms was won by Abel Weeks. J. Featherstone, gardener to Samuel Untermyer, showed a beautiful hanging basket of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which was declared by the members to be the best plant of this popular begonia ever shown in this section.

At the meeting of the executive committee, held on January 2, the date of the annual dinner was fixed for January 17, to take place at the Florence hotel. Tickets may be had from E. W. Neubrand, secretary.

CHRISTMAS PEPPERS.

Will you please tell me how to store the Christmas peppers after they have finished their season? K. C.

We never heard of peppers of any kind being stored and they would be very undesirable plants if you could. Pick off a few fruits from the plants having the best habit and most prolific crop of fruit and sow the seeds in April. In raising these cheap berried plants, the object is to obtain a moderate size plant well berried. A large, sprawling plant but well fruited would be the reverse of attractive, and, therefore, I don't at all agree with the gentleman who says he propagates by cuttings. I should think in a warm climate these plants would continue to grow late into fall and make unwieldy plants. Therefore sow late and as soon as the plants are well set with fruit lift and pot them.

TAUNTON, MASS.

Holiday trade easily broke all records. Plants in bloom had the best call. Azaleas, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, poinsettias, primroses and cyclamens sold out clean and many more could have been disposed of.

In cut flowers, carnations were the leaders, but there were not enough to go around. People refused to pay over 75 cents per dozen for ordinary blooms and $1 for fancies. Violets were in strong demand at $2 per hundred. Roses made $1.50 to $3 per dozen, but did not sell so well as other flowers. Some fine poinsettias made $6 to $8 per dozen. Weather for delivering plants was perfect, being above freezing about all the week before Christmas.

Taunton Greenhouses sold over 3,000 carnations, 1,000 roses and 3,500 violets, besides other flowers, for Christmas.

A Main street florist advertised carnations at 35 cents a dozen three days before Christmas. This had no effect on the sale of really good quality flowers. Such cut prices most hurt the persons making them. They cannot be too strongly condemned.

Business since the holidays remains good. Funeral work uses a good many flowers, as well as balls and receptions.

N. ZWEIFEL, No. Milwaukee, Wis., writes:—"I have 4 houses, each 28x200 feet, with a total of 27,000 sq. ft. of glass. I can get all the pipes warm in thirty minutes with one of your No. 13 Boilers, and it is easy firing."

GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, writes:—"I bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; would take care of 2,000 more. I have had a cast-iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 26, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers and do not worry about their breaking down."

Cypress Greenhouse Material

Rebuilding greenhouses continually is not only expensive but tiresome.

Use cypress, the right kind of cypress---cypress that is open air dried.

We use the greatest care in selecting the cypress for our greenhouse material, and can supply you with the right kind.

Write and let us tell you about it further.

All the Responsibility Ours

IF WE SAY YOUR HOUSE WILL BE READY ON TIME THIS SPRING, IT WILL BE READY

Every day of the year our factory is turning out one complete house, ranging from $500 to $100,000. This statement says two things: We build the right kind of houses; we have the right sort of factory to turn out the right kind of house. Now suppose we should go into length on the merits of all the patented things that go into our houses, it would only bring us right up against the question: "Who buys your houses?" What success have these buyers? All kinds of patented things might go into them but what flowers come out, that's the hinging point! That's just the point we have to talk the least on, because the other fellow—the grower—does that for us.

If you want advice on success, you go to successful men.
They are the men you better ask about this greenhouse matter.

CARNATION OF THE FUTURE.

[A paper by Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., president of the American Carnation Society, read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, January 16, 1906.]

"The Carnation of the Future" is the subject assigned to me tonight. We think of the past, with its attainments or failures. We live in the present, and see it recede to the past like a scene in a kaleidoscope. The future is mythical and hazy. No man knows what it has in store for us; we can only guess, in a measure. Looking backward for a moment and judging from what has been and is being accomplished, we may form a pardonable estimate of what will, or may be, toward the development of the "Carnation of the Future."

To make any true progress we must always have an ideal to work up to, but the ideal carnation is always just a little in advance of us. We think to grasp it and find something imperfect instead, and as we look again, day-dreaming, we again see our ideal ever ahead, in all its beautiful and varied shades of color, perfection of form and luxurious growth. This is well, for were perfection attainable here progress would cease. Imagine if you can a type of carnations, in beautiful and varied shades of popular colors, so far in excess of the best of today in point of size as to rival the American Beauty rose, and sold at prices unheard of; this is within the range of possibility, we are steadily but surely coming up to this standard.

In the near future, varieties of carnations specially adapted for the purpose will be grown in pans and meet with a ready sale and increasing demand. Dwarf, compact growing, free flowering varieties will be the type, in varied shades of color. Think how well-grown specimens of a scarlet, for instance, would sell at Christmas.

After another season of experience and close observation, I am more than ever convinced that the best carnations of the future will be grown indoors exclusively, much in the same manner as roses are handled today. By this method of culture you will obtain a steady supply of blooms, superior in every way to field-grown plants. But the houses in which the plants are grown should run north and south and not east and west, as during the hot summer months there is a decided advantage in a north and south as a growing house during summer—and with this thorough root action the difference in number of blooms obtained will scarcely be perceptible, with a decided advantage in quality in favor of the north and south house during hot spring days.

Benches will be best for this method and those with tile bottoms preferable, as they will be beneficial in retaining moisture and keeping the roots cool. Not less than five inches of soil should be used, as shallow benches require too much watering during hot days, which tends to sour the soil.

A large, wide, span-roofed structure with continuous ventilation on each side of the ridge, and at the sides, will be the type of greenhouse best suited for this purpose. The dissemination of the carnation of the future will be along different lines from that of the past or present. A strict record of its merits and faults will be kept in tabulated form, at least two years prior to distribution, stating how many blooms it will produce per square foot of bench space, how many plants to the square foot, date when cutting of blooms commenced, when plants were thrown out, and number of salable or split blooms picked from a given bench space each day. These records will be kept for inspection at any time. A synopsis of this report will be added along with the advertisement of the cuttings, and placed on the exhibition tables when new varieties are shown, and the confidence of the trade will be restored.

Then, as our successors in business look up the records of our past and present methods they will draw the cloak of charity over the past. But the blush of shame will tint the cheeks of some, as they reflect on the shady methods, it may be, of a parent who has passed beyond.

SELLING DOLLAR CARNATIONS

In a Thirty-cent Town.

In response to the inquiry by F. A. F. in the issue of January 4, the writer having accomplished the very feat of selling dollar carnations in a thirty-cent town is prompted to give his views and relate a few experiences.

There always exist in every town certain conditions which create an atmosphere of which the inhabitants partake, the tradesmen, including the florists, being no exception. In a thirty-cent town, so-called, the fact is the people never saw up-to-date, well-grown carnations, or, if they did, the superior qualities of such were not put before them in a way to leave a lasting impression. This was the state of affairs in the city where my operations began; a city noted for its wealth, beautiful homes and celebrated men, also widely known as paying the highest price for meat of any city in the Union.

Several years ago, while enroute from Kansas City to Chicago, the late P. D. Armour told the writer that this city demanded the choicest cuts of beef and consequently had it furnished them at corresponding prices. Here was the atmosphere, or perhaps taste, which must be gratified, and why should not well-grown carnations come in for a share in gracing the table and lending their aid in the enjoyment of a tempting steak or prime roast at 38 cents per pound?

It would, perhaps, have been much easier or taken less time to bring about the desired result if the co-operation of old established growers and retailers could have been secured, but this being impossible, the only course was to go it alone.

Now F. A. F. must make up his mind to several things; viz., that to sell dollar carnations in any town, requires him to have them to offer; that although they may be worth that price there will be those who disagree with him and will so express themselves; that in view of this notwithstanding, he must not hold in earnest what Emerson says in satire, "Difference from me is the measure of absurdity"; that to gain the confidence of flower buyers and create the lasting impression before alluded to, it is absolutely necessary that his product can always be depended upon to possess more than ordinary lasting qualities. Once let your flowers become a subject of general conversation at a luncheon or similar occasion—and they will be sure to be above the average—then it may be said that you have just begun to make yourself felt.

The host is pleased with the success of his decoration; the guests make mental note of your name and address and will lose no time in visiting your place.

Here is a chance to produce a lasting impression. A look through the houses should prove beyond doubt that you have the goods and by your manner and conversation it will be judged whether or not you are capable and trustworthy.

It goes without saying that a spirit of tidiness should pervade the whole establishment, for nothing appeals to flower buyers more than an air of neatness.

Keep a few choice blooms of each variety on hand at all times that newcomers may be given at least one. These need not be long stemmed but must be freshly cut and in water several hours before used.

One of these visitors may wish to leave an order for future delivery to her home or that of a friend: Promise to do no more than you are sure you can accomplish but when you fill the order, endeavor to do a little better than you promised. This is one example only, of how the start is made in the forging of the links in an endless chain.

Similar opportunities will present themselves whereby the links increase in number, the chain grows longer, the circle nears completion, until at last you find yourself encompassed on all sides by eager buyers, mostly and preferably members of the fair sex.

Now this is no dream but the result of a strenuous life covering a period of perhaps two years or more during which there has come about a gradual change of conditions and in reality, while you succeed in selling dollar carnations, the people no longer breathe a thirty-cent atmosphere.

Just a word in conclusion as to results in the city before mentioned: Instead of carnations being sold at the uniform price of 25 cents per dozen, they now range from 50 cents to $2.50. While the start was made alone other growers contracted the fever as the demand for first-class goods increased. Ladies who formerly hesitated to order flowers by telephone, even for use at their own homes, now go so far as to keep on hand at the florist's, a stock of their visiting cards to be enclosed with telephonic orders for flowers they wish sent to friends. ## McKINLEY MEMORIAL.

The committee on McKinley Memorial for the American Carnation Society and S. A. F. & O. H. calls the attention of all florists in the United States to the nearness of the anniversary of our late president's birthday, January 29, 1906, McKinley day, when millions of our citizens will wear carnations as a silent tribute to his memory. The committee has prepared a suitable display placard with a splendid likeness of President McKinley, announcing this anniversary, and showing the action of the florists in the building of the national McKinley Memorial at Canton, Ohio, the late president's home. This display card cannot fail to remind many people of this custom, who otherwise might overlook the date. Upon receipt of any contribution of $1 or more to this fund, or a pledge to contribute ten per cent or upward of the carnation sales on January 29, 1906, the committee will mail to the contributor this display placard.

H. M. ALTICK, Chairman.

IN A COOL HOUSE.

Would you kindly tell us what varieties of carnations would grow in a lettuce house with Grand Rapids lettuce? The temperature ranges from 46 to 50 degrees. We would like to know of several varieties. H. & F.

What you will have to look for mostly are varieties that will not burst in a low temperature. No variety will grow and bloom very rapidly in a temperature much below 50 degrees, though some of course will do better than others. The following varieties will do as well as any: Vesper, Lady Bountiful, Moonlight, The Queen for white; Enchantress, light pink; Mrs. Nelson, pink; Crane, red; Harlowarden, crimson; Mrs. Patten, variegated. A. F. J. BAUR.

DOING WELL.

Under date of January 6 J. H. Dunlop, Toronto, Ont., writes as follows: "My Maryland, on trial here, is proving itself a free bloomer and makes a fine flower; the only trouble with it that has developed here is a slight inclination to stem-rot. Jessica is magnificent, pure white ground with red stripe; very striking; strong grower; good stem; it is the best of the fancies." These are the novelties of H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md.

BACTERIA.

I enclose some Flora Hill carnation leaves. They are grown on a west side bench with about thirty inches of head room, planted up in August. They seemed to start off all right. I have fed them liquid twice, with a top-dressing of sheep manure about December 7. Can you tell the trouble with them? Night temperature 50 to 55 degrees.

Your carnations are affected with bacteria and you are pursuing just the wrong course to get rid of it. Flora Hill is especially subject to this disease and invariably shows traces of it during the winter months. By handling it just right it can be kept in check, so that it will not do much damage. They want to be watered rather sparingly and no feeding should be done between October and March, neither mulch nor liquid. If the soil is good to start with and a light mulch applied about September 1, they will thrive until the sun is stronger and the days are longer, toward spring, when they will want a little more food to make the spring crop. So, I would advise you to take off that sheep manure and sprinkle on the soil some air-slaked lime, about a scant 3-inch potful to a row across a 5-foot bench, and water it in well. After that keep them a little on the dry side. Keep the temperature as near 52 degrees as you can and give all the air you can. A. F. J. BAUR.

CARNATION MEASURES.

Last season Kroeschell Bros. Co., 51 Erie street, Chicago, sent out to the trade a very neat device for measuring the size of carnation blooms. It consists of a circular cardboard with an opening to admit the calyx of the flower, its size being indicated by circles a half-inch apart on the card. It is a very handy device and the distributors write us that they have a number still on hand and will gladly send one to anyone who sends a two-cent stamp to pay the postage.

CARNATION CANDACE.

The writer of this made three trips to Indianapolis last winter to personally inspect and note the behavior of the above carnation; also visited the introducers twice this winter, in November and January, to see what progress it was making, and the more I see of this new flower the more firmly I am convinced that it is a winner. It has many points that recommend it to the average florist. It is an easy grower, a free, continuous bloomer, bright, cheerful and clear pink, a trifle lighter and brighter than Lawson; has good, long stems and the shape of the bloom is ideal. It will readily be classed as a fancy as it has splendid size, shape and color. It is a rare occurrence to find a split calyx among them. The stem is stiffer than Flora Hill but not quite so strong as Lawson or Enchantress, although with the writer, who has fifteen plants for trial, the stem is stiff and wiry. The best evidence of the merits of this new carnation is that nearly every florist who sees this variety growing leaves an order and I am informed that nearly every carnation grower in and around Indianapolis has placed an order. If this new variety does as well throughout the country as it does in Indiana I am satisfied the results will be most gratifying to the grower. I have no personal interest in this new flower whatever, but pen these few notes for the benefit of the trade.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Carnations Registered.

George Anderson, Hyde Park, Mass., registers Red Warrior, a bright scarlet, very free bloomer, strong grower, average stem at this time eighteen inches, blooms three to three and one-half inches; a cross between Mrs. Lawson and Mrs. Bradt.

The Boston Convention.

The paper on "Carnations from a Wholesaler's Point of View" will be given us by A. J. Guttman, New York.

The New England Passenger Association has granted the rate of a fare and one-third for the meeting over all of their lines excepting the Eastern Steamship Company.

Your secretary has made application at the same time to the Trunk Line Association and the Central Passenger Association for the same rate and it will no doubt be granted. Parties coming to the convention should give themselves plenty of time to buy their tickets and get the usual certificate from the ticket agent at their home office, entitling them to the reduced fare.

There will be more flowers staged in Boston, January 24, than have ever been staged at one time and place in the world and every carnation man who can should attend this meeting.

ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

POTTING YOUNG STOCK.

Where the cuttings in the bench show rootlets one-half inch in length they should be potted without further delay. Procrastination at this stage will lead to a lot of trouble which will require months to overcome. As the sand contains, or should contain, no nutritive properties, any wood the young plants may make, while in the sand must necessarily be of a weak nature and low in vitality. The roots become attenuated, unmanageable and because of their length and brittleness are liable to be broken and so lost to the plant just when it requires their services to give it a good start in life.

Soil suitable for a first potting should contain very little manure or other fertilizer, as this is liable to sicken the tender roots before they have become accustomed to actual feeding. Compost left over from last season's planting and which has been carefully looked after and kept clear of weeds during summer and fall is about the ideal article. This should be passed through a half-inch screen to fit it for the requirements of the newly made roots.

For a first potting 2-inch standard pots are large enough and fit the purpose better than larger sizes. Having the pots of a uniform size, shape and color simplifies the act of watering, as each pot contains an equal quantity of soil and will be more likely to retain the moisture for an equal length of time than if they are a mixed lot. The nearer we approach to uniformity of moisture, so much better are our chances of success.

To give the young plants a fair start a good deal of intelligent care is necessary at potting time, both in selecting the best, rejecting weak and poorly rooted stock and in the method of potting. The roots in each pot should be placed about one-third down from the rim and the soil packed firmly and evenly around the roots, leaving ample room for watering.

Water as soon after potting as possible and be sure that the whole ball is equally moist. Do not allow the plants to stand around in the potting shed, where there is always more or less draught, longer than necessary.

Select a bench where the plants will have plenty of ventilation and a full exposure to the sun and place the pots on ashes or some other suitable material to maintain a good drainage. The temperature of the house should be 56 degrees at night, with a day temperature varying from 60 to 80 degrees, according to intensity of sunshine. Shade for a few days after potting if the weather is bright. In four or five days root action will have commenced, when shading should be entirely abandoned.

During bright weather the young stock should be carefully tended as regards watering, syringing and ventilation, as on the care and skill bestowed on them at this period depends a good deal of the hardiness, healthfulness and constitution of the future plant. RIBES.

KILLARNEY ROSE.

It is quite a number of years since Killarney was first introduced, but it is only this season coming into its own. It was offered in a limited way in the New York market last season and was a most acceptable novelty. Two firms in the west took it up and both are excellently pleased. Weiland & Risch, Chicago, say that it is without exception the most profitable rose they have ever grown, because of its productiveness more than because of the fact that it commands a novelty's premium. They are growing both grafted and own-root plants this season, but their stock for next year will all be on its own roots, as they find that the own-root stock makes a larger proportion of ground breaks, which give long-stemmed fancy flowers. The length of the bud is something remarkable. They have cut many flowers which when opened make a spread of five inches in diameter. Weiland & Risch like the variety so well that they are building a large new range of glass at Evanston to be devoted to Killarney next season.

DUTY ON ROSE CUTTINGS.

In two recent cases collectors of customs have assessed duty on rooted rose cuttings at 2½ cents each, but in both cases the Board of General Appraisers has, on appeal, sustained the protest and assessed duty at twenty-five per cent ad valorem, following the precedent established by G. A. 5645, which was a protest raised by the South Park Floral Co., of New Castle, Ind., at duty assessed at 2½ cents each on a shipment of cuttings from Canada.

The latest protests were by the Cleveland Landscape Co. and the American Express Co. The assessment was made under the provision for "rose plants, budded, grafted or grown on their own roots." The importers claimed that the cuttings should have been assessed at twenty-five per cent ad valorem under the last subdivision of the same paragraph. The decision states, in sustaining the protest of the importers, that the board is following its decision in the case of the American Express Co., G. A. 5645. It says:

"In the case cited the board held that cuttings of this character were not rose plants within the meaning of the paragraph, but were dutiable at the rate claimed as 'cuttings of plants, commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock;' construing the language of the last part of paragraph 252 as though the expression 'stocks, cuttings and seedlings,' by which it is introduced, qualified all the following matter."

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Azaleas.

We notice that azaleas that are in any temperature over 40 degrees have started making a growth from the base of the buds and that means that they should be stood over, given more space, and this growth rubbed off. If they are allowed to run on and make strong growth the flower bud will perish and at Easter instead of flower you will only have a green bush. Rub off this leaf growth and keep your plants very cool.

Roses in Pots.

It is time now to bring in all kinds of roses intended for Easter. We have hybrid perpetuals that were potted in November and have since been covered with three or four inches of soil. The canes are as fresh as when dug and the eyes full and plump. There is no particular hurry about pruning these for a few days, but it should be done before the eyes break. There is no arbitrary rule for pruning, for each plant will vary. If you cut the canes so that a foot in height is left you would have an unsightly plant, even if it did flower well, and if you cut down too low the eyes that started may be blind. As near as you can lay down any rule would be to leave, say, three good eyes on fairly strong stems and on extra strong stems you can leave four eyes.

Ramblers that were grown in pots last summer will want no pruning of any kind and will be sure to break from bottom to top. The only drawback to this style of growing these attractive plants is that by flowering time the soil is exhausted and they are not as vigorous in either flower or foliage as those lifted in the fall. This can be helped very considerably by taking off an inch or a little more of the surface and filling up the space with cow manure that is not at all decayed. To speak plainly, let it be fresh, but do not do this now. Wait a couple of weeks, when they will be breaking into growth and young working roots will have started; then they will appreciate the stimulant. For the first two or three weeks in the greenhouse you do not want to give these dormant plants over 45 degrees at night.

Ramblers Lifted in Fall.

After trying for years and regularly failing to lift any of the Ramblers from the field in November and force the following spring, we seem at last to have struck it. You could reasonably say "hold on, you are not out of the woods yet," but we can see the light through the vista of green and feel certain that at last we have found the correct method of producing as fine plants of this kind as the very successful W. K. Harris and Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, and I am egotist enough to think that possibly there may be a point for them to ponder over. It is not a seasonable hint, but I may not be here next November, so with the editor's sanction I will briefly relate the modus operandi (it's seldom I indulge in Arabic).

The Rambler roses were lifted about November 10 and potted into 7-inch pots. Size of pots or quality of soil has nothing to do with the method. Those are questions which would only affect degree of quality. Directly they were potted and watered they were laid down and covered with four inches of soil. On January 7 they were brought into a house and again laid on their sides and covered with a few inches of damp straw. This was done to exclude light and heat. At this date, fourteen days from bringing them in, they are breaking from the tip of the growth to the pot and are bound to be a great success.

Now there are just two sections of this performance contributing to success; viz., first the covering them with soil when first potted and lastly covering them with wet straw for the first two weeks in the greenhouse, because if fully exposed to the light and heat, and we had happened to have a mild, bright day with which we have frequently been blessed of late, it might have shriveled up the wood of the rootless plants. I say rootless because from time of lifting until they break out in leaf there are no active feeding roots.

If these Ramblers turn out as we confidently expect they will, there will be no more summer pot growing for us. All you do not want to forget is to plant out a few hundred one-year-old plants in the field every April or May, so that you have a strong plant for lifting in the fall.

We have often alluded to the excellence of American Beauty as a pot plant. There is none to equal it in our experience. Contrary to previous practice this fall, when lifting from the bench, they were put outside and covered with earth and it seems to have worked well. They want starting now and pruning about as the hybrid perpetuals, leaving three or four good eyes to a stem.

Hydrangeas.

Some skillful growers cultivate hydran-
